THE NUT-SHELL

A Monthly Journal of General Information for the Masses.

PUBLISHED BY

Lewis & Patterson.

SUBSCRIPTION—Ten Dollars a year; to friends and customers of the publisher—Free.

This miniature journal is printed from the smallest type ever manufactured, being cut and imported from Europe especially for this publication. It is a marvel of mechanical skill, and a fair index of the rapid advancement of the typographical art. This, and future numbers, should be carefully preserved as they will prove not only a curiosity, but will furnish for reference a large amount of valuable information not to be obtained elsewhere.

HEALTH AND HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Porcelain kettles and wooden spoons are best to use in preserving.

To drive away water bugs scatter burnt and sugar mixed about their haunts.

Cheap goods are very often literally cheap in every sense except in economy to the purchaser.

A handful of pokeberry root put into a pint of sweet milk is said to be a sure cure for erysipelas.

A tablespoonful of soda added to the water in which ironware is washed will facilitate the cleaning.

Always warm the plates and dishes on which you serve roasts and steaks. In fact, any hot meat or vegetables.

The white crust that you can reduce to dust is what I clean my spoons and polish my tinware with.

Dishes browned by use may be cleaned by letting them remain half or three-quarters of an hour in boiling water.

As the table is the place where most waste occurs, guard it well and pay strict attention to the second serving of food.

Olive oil saturated with camphor makes an excellent application for inflammatory swellings, also for rheumatic joints.

The introduction of fresh and limpid cream from separators into towns and such markets has created a growing demand for the article.

To test jelly, drop a little into cold water, or on to a cold plate, stirring it for a few seconds. The best jelly should not be boiled over five minutes.

Jewelry can be made to look like new by washing with ammonia and water or alcohol, then rub dry, and polishing with prepared chalk applied with flannel or chamois skin.

LEADING THE CALF TO WATER.

"WHICH would you rather do," said my wife, "lead the calf to water or milk the cow?" With the alacrity of a man who sees a chance to drive a good bargain, I responded by starting for the calf shed, and began to untie the animal. Then for the first time I began to have misgivings. Accustomed to look for signs of cyclones among the clouds, I crept the calf with an eye to discovering his bad points. He had a very mild eye, but an undefinable twist in his tail that looked ominous.

There was a party of young people tried to whistle a strain of "Home, Sweet Home." Incidents of a lifetime might pass through the mind of a such foolishness. I couldn't form more than half a thought before I'd be jerked beyond it. I tied a can to a dog's tail once, and a sympathetic feeling for the can fitted across my brain as we sped along. The path we made was no wider than that of an ordinary cyclone, and resembled the track of a rope a length in the rear of the calf. I never was proud, and knew my place in this instance.

My journey was now almost ended. I had had a stormy passage, and not a sight of a heaven cheered my soul. We were fast approaching a clothes line that hung in graceful festoons from "pole to pole," adjusted at a proper distance from the ground. The calf, with systematic cunningness, first dragged me through a half-dried slug, and then made straight for the line, which he cleared at one bound, leaving me hanging by the chin. When I was fully dry some friends came and carried me back home. At last accounts the calf was still going. I am now on my third bottle of arnica, and pass my time on a stretcher swung from the rafters, with my toes barely touching the floor. I have lost all my relish for real pie.

But the Jersey would not be ignored. Hooting, his tail like a flag-staff on the stern of an ocean steamship, he led the convention. I merely said, "Me too," and followed in his wake. Foreseeing an approaching crisis I had marked out the path I should choose if worst came to worst. But I found I was not in tow of that kind of a steamer, neither was I the pilot on that excursion, and the calf seemed to have shipped his rudder before we left the harbor. Without looking I became conscious that croquet no longer possessed attractions for the players—the grand calf reverse wait! ceased all other displays. I had lost my temper and several buttons trying to keep at the head of the procession, when suddenly the calf stopped short. I went on the length of the rope, when I stopped too, my neck cracking like a whipcord. The calf had evidently halted to start, so began to pull him alone. I pulled great rolls of skin up around his ears, while he bowed his spine like a cat in a back fence duet; when he became facetious, I wagged his head from side to side, and ran out his tongue at me. The rope was cracking with the strain when he belted for me to get on the way; I wasn't braced in the right direction, and when he started laid down on my back to rest. The calf, under the impression that I wasn't coming, jumped on to me to wake me up. I started for the croquet grounds. His impressions were not correct. The rope was now firmly wrapped around my wrist and I went afoot as much attention to me as I did to him. He scooped the first two arches at one shot, while I was pulling up the stake; and then I caromed against the "backer," and when he made the turning stake I scraped up the remaining wickets with my legs. This made us both "rovers," and it became a pleasant game, with the Jersey a Jersey's length in the lead.

I still tried to appear unconcerned, and when I plopped down with my nose that would have driven me to sixteen inch breaking plow, I actually tried to whistle a strain of "Home, Sweet Home." Incidents of a lifetime might pass through the mind of a such foolishness. I couldn't form more than half a thought before I'd be jerked beyond it. I tied a can to a dog's tail once, and a sympathetic feeling for the can fitted across my brain as we sped along. CHAPTER ON BALD HEADS.

A bald-headed man is refined, and he always shows his skill-sure. It has never been decided what causes bald heads, but most people think it is due to a rough head.

A good novel for bald heads to read,—"The Lost Hair."

What does a bald-headed man say to his comb? We need to part no more.

Motto for a bald head—Bare and forbare.

However high a position the bald-headed man holds he will never comb down in the world.

The bald-headed man never dyes.

Advice to bald-heads—Join the Indians, who are the only successful hair-raisers.

What does every bald-headed man put on his head? His hat.

You never saw a bald-headed man with a low forehead.

Shakespeare says—"There is a divinity that shapes our ends."

Bald men are the coolest-headed men in the world.

HOW TO GET A START IN LIFE.

As a general thing, the great majority of the working classes are in moderate circumstances, and as a rule "live from hand to mouth," and are more wasteful and extravagant than those who have accumulated through denial in their industrial pursuits. They are strangers to the first principles of denials which leads to success, and are always "hard up," and complain bitterly because they are not able to get what is termed "a start in life." Because they are not able to invest or buy by dollars they refuse to do so in cents, and trudge along in the same old beaten track, instead of making an effort to better their condition. They refuse to study the first principle of business success, and save nothing and therefore have nothing, and cannot borrow money at the legal rate of interest to make the desired start in business life. They keep their "nose to the grindstone," and are at the mercy of the shaver and pawn-broker.

They will buy their furniture and goods on the instalment plan, and pay if they had saved up had the dollars to have paid ready cash and save 50 per cent. The working classes—the bone and sinew of the land—to a great extent have no one but themselves to blame for the immense amount of money locked up in corporations and investments in bonds, mortgages, etc. The great majority of the wealthiest manufacturers and corporate monopolies are owned by those who were once poor and in modest circumstances but who learned the lesson of accumulation through denial in order to get a start in life.

OLD WISER'S TRIUMPH.

The celebrated German artist, Martin Osau, while on a visit to this country, named one day to attend Dr. Robin's church, in company with a friend and countryman, who was a member of the choir. The character of the visitor, says the New York Leader, became known to the singers, and they were eager to hear the German play. The chorister whispered to the old organist, Winder, that he must let Osau play the congregation while the organist was simply a voluntary while the organist was in the habit of performing while the congregation were retiring at the close of the services. The old organist turned up his nose in disdain and disapproved, but the pressure became so hard that he at length gave in, and the German god-naturally consented to give a taste of his quality.

The closing anthem had come to a conclusion, the benediction was pronounced, and Winder reluctantly arose from his seat and allowed Osau to take his place. The people had risen in his place below, and were making for the aisles on their way out. But hark! What a sound was that! A new voice had burst from the organ. A harmony unknown before was in the throbbing air.

The throng stopped where they stood, and listened. Even the pulpit stairs, stood as one spell-bound. Old Winder saw the situation. The congregation had been seemingly petrified, and their powers of locomotion suspended.

"Pooh!" he shouted, "that's what comes of meddling! You can't play 'em out. Let me show ye how it's done."

And with an unceremonious push he ousted Osau from his seat, seated himself before the keys and struck into one of his dogmatical voluntaries. Very quickly the people below dropped their heads and moved onward, and when the church was empty old Winder arose from the organ in triumph.

FACTS ABOUT THE PLANET EARTH

Mean annual temperature: Poles, 30 degrees; polar regions, 36 degrees; torrid zone 75 degrees; equator, 82 degrees; globe, 50 degrees. Mean annual rain fall, 36 inches. Specific gravity, 5.46, to 5,600. Weight, 6,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons.

HOME DECORATION.

No one who enters many of the homes of the country can fail to notice what a marked progress has been made in beautifying them. Almost every young woman, and many of the older ones, are now capable of doing a large variety of things that go to make up home decoration, and those are found in the household in great profusion. A few cents of dollars will go to a surprising length in the purchase of materials for this work of aestheticism, and these in the deft fingers of wife and daughter become choice attractions in beautifying the home. The decoration of the home is not only an effect of the growing taste and appreciation of the time, but is also a cause of improving these. Whoever lives amid beautiful surroundings partakes of the influence that emanates from them, and his or her life must be an aided considerably by them. They give a tone to life, just as a painting gets tone from its coloring. The mothers and daughters of a land, by means of their home decoration and beautifying, are giving a new coloring to life that makes it more precious than ever before.

LAUGHTER.

There ought to be societies formed for the encouragement of laughter. A real laugh is not common, for it must be remembered that a snicker is not a laugh. Foreigners travelling in this country have more than once remarked upon the singular gravity of Americans as a race.

The Puritans were inclined to frown upon laughter as frivolous, and therefore wicked. Life was a very grave affair to them, and an almost constant struggle for existence, and they had no time to make merry. The first two centuries of our national life were busy years. Privations were many and the Indians almost constantly on the warpath, it is no wonder our forefathers rarely enjoyed a hearty laugh. Then came the Revolution, which was certainly no laughing matter.

Perhaps all these wars, troubles and privations may have fixed gravity on our national heart. Then it may be that the idea was widely entertained that it was unedified to laugh. We know that the eyes of the world were upon us, and that it would never do to act like children. Philosophers and cynics sneer at laughter. Goldsmith (who was always laughing) tells us of "the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind," and the scornful Byron says, "And if I laugh at any mortal thing, 'tis that I may not weep."

Many people are afraid to laugh, because they think it is common; so they repress their merriment with a smile.

They do wrong. Nature evidently intended us to laugh, or children would not know how. Laughter is healthful, and provocative of good morals as well as good health.

Hamlet says that "one may smile and smile, and be a villain," and so one might; but no one could laugh and laugh and be a villain.

To snicker, grin, guffaw or smile is not to laugh. A good, whole-souled, hearty laugh is a panacea for many ills, and worth a doctor's prescription.

OUR SCHOOL-GIRLS.

The average school-girl rises only in time to eat a hurried breakfast, and to reach school at nine, says the Christian Register. The girls under twelve, who are not the ones that break down, are not too dignified to romp at recess, and in that way they fill their lungs with fresh air every day. Those about twelve or thirteen rarely have a breath of outside air from nine to two in the afternoon. They get their lunches curled up in heaps in comfortable corners, if they can find them. They take little exercise, except in a few schools, where they dance a few minutes, and a solitary lunch of cold or "warmed over" food on reaching home is followed usually by an hour or two of study, instead of by a brisk walk or other exercise. There is more study after supper, ambitious girls studying late in the evening. If there is any well-established physiological fact it is that girls in the above state need an abundance of sleep before midnight, if possible. The teachers must give a certain amount of home work to their pupils, in order to keep them up to the grade, more is the pity, but, since that is a necessity, the fathers and mothers at home should make everything else bend to that and health. There is no one thing that is so necessary and that might be so easily secured, if firmness were exercised, as a long night of sleep for the fast-growing brain and the girlish frames that are rapidly assuming the proportions of maturity.

A CONSIDERATE MAN

The most considerate people in the United States live in Ozark, Ark. One ain't busy then I'll tell you what I want. Good mornin'.

Janson rode away, and about an hour afterwards he again rode up to the fence.

"Still busy, Miz Greg?"

"Yes, fur I ain't got the yard done yet, an' I wanted to kinish it befo' the preacher comes."

"When do you look for him?"

"Most any mornin' now."

"Well, then, I reckon I'll have to wait a while longer, for I don't want you to be enlarrassed on my account."

"How long would it take you to attend to the business you have got on hand, Mr. Sutton?"

"Oh, not long, but we can put it off have had a large and lucrative practice in my profession, but this year the elements are against me. I know there is no snow on the prairie, but it is going to rain this afternoon and rain hard. Now, I'll come back and shovel the rain off your sidewalk for a quarter, if you will give me ten cents advance money. Is it a go?" "Yes, it's a go," she said, as she slammed the door in his face. "And they say that genius and tact win every time," he sighed, as he shuffled down the stoop.

AS PER SCHEDULE.

Mr. Nibbs—Oh, Miss Snoozer! I love you devotedly, truly, instantly! On my knees I beseech you, will you be mine?

Miss Snoozer—I have heard your application. Here is "Form No. 1," which I wish you would consider, and fill out the answers to the questions, and file the same with me to-morrow.

1. Did your mother ever have any bad luck in baking a pie?
2. Was the last young lady who refused you entirely without fault?
3. How many lodges a week do you attend?
4. Do you think that women's rights go any distance beyond marriage rights?
5. After a man and woman are made one, which is the one?
6. How long, do you think, does a woman wait in her good looks?
7. What should be the difference between a man waiting for a meal and a meal waiting for a man?
8. What is the relative difference between a wife's relations and a husband's?
9. Define the point between liberality and stinginess?
10. At what age does short-sightedness strike in your family?

EMERSON ON "CHARACTER."

Character is nature in its highest form. It is of no use to ape it, or to contend with it. This masterpiece is best where no hands but Nature's have been laid on it.

Nature never rhymes her children, nor makes two men alike.

None will ever solve the problem of his character according to our prejudice but only in his own unprecedented way.

We have seen many counterfeits, but we are born believers in great men.

I know nothing more of Hinduism than I offer so satisfying as the profound good understanding which can subsist, after much exchange of good offices, between two virtuous men, each of whom is sure of himself and sure of his friend.

The people know that they need in their representative much more than talent; namely, the power to make his talents trusted.

How often has a true master realized all the tales of magic!

The will of the pure runs down from men into other natures, as water runs down from a higher to a lower vessel.

FRENCH PECOCITY.

We have been shown a private announcement of birth which runs as follows: "M. Andre de S—, aged eight days, has the honor to inform you of his birth which took place at the beginning of last week. He is quite well, and so is his mother."

LEWIS & PATTERSON.

of the politest and most considerate of those people is Janson H. Sutton, a man of limited means financially, but rich in courtesy. One day Janson, a bachelor, by the way, rode up to the fence surrounding the house of Mrs. Greg, a widow, and seeing her sweeping the yard, thus addressed her: "Oh, Mrs. Greg, have you time to come here a minute! I want to see you on a little matter of business."

"I am in a putty big hurry to get this yard done, but if your business ain't so mighty important, why I'd like for you to put it off awhile."

easy enough. I jest wanted to ask you to marry me, but I'll wait till you git the time. Good mo'nin', Miz Greg."

—Arkansas Traveler.

WHERE GENIUS DIDN'T WORK.

He was just a plain tramp, unadorned with soap, and he carried over his shoulder a wooden snow-shovel several sizes too big for him. He pulled the bell in a business-like way, and when she opened the door he said, "Are you a Christian?" "Yes," (in surprise). "And do you believe that honest, earnest endeavor should be rewarded?" "—Yes." —Heretofore

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Education is an ornament in prosperity and a refuge in adversity.

Those who follow after others in slinging are in danger of following them in suffering.

Happiness lies concealed in our duties which, when fulfilled, give it forth as the opening rose gives forth fragrance.

Life to be worthy of a rational being must always be in progression; we must always propose to do more or better than in time past.

There are two sorts of content. One is concerned with exertion the other with habits of indolence. The first is a virtue; the other a vice.

The next best thing to being happy oneself is to be able to make others so. Perhaps that may be the sort of happiness they have in the next world.

There is no true happiness outside of love and self-sacrifice, or rather outside of love, for it includes the other. That is gold, and all the rest is gilt.

The very consciousness of trying for real excellence in anything is a great support. It takes the sting from failure and doubles the joy of success.

Cold words freeze people, hot words scorch them, bitter words make them bitter, wrathful words make them wrathful. Kind words produce their own image on men's souls, and a beautiful living is.

Bacon tells us that the virtue prosperity is temperance and the virtue of adversity is fortitude; but it depends upon ourselves whether we gather these and other precious fruits from either of those plants.

Conscience is like a sundial. If you let truth shine upon it it will point you right; but you may cover it over so that no truth can fall upon it, and then it will lead you astray if you follow its guidance.

Some say that the age of chivalry is past. The age of chivalry is never past as long as there is a wrong left unredressed on earth, and no man or woman left to say, "I will redress that wrong, or spend my life in the attempt."

For the earnest man or woman there is no end to effort. One aim reached and its difficulties surmounted, another will quickly present itself to the aspiring spirit, and before that is reached other difficulties must again be met.

Faithful prayer always implies correlative exertion; and no man can ask honestly and hopefully to be delivered from temptation, unless he has himself honestly and firmly determined to do the best he can to keep out of it.

GOOD RULES TO GO BY.

- Never obtrude any advice unasked.
- Aim at cheerfulness without levity.
- Never dispute if you can fairly avoid it.
- Never show levity when people are engaged in worship.
- Never judge a woman's character by external appearance.
- Say as little as possible of yourself and those who are near you.
- Never affect to be witty, or jest so as to wound the feelings of another.
- Never court the favor of the rich by flattering either their vanities or vices.
- Never dispute with a man more than 70 years of age, nor a woman, nor an enthusiast.
- Never ridicule sacred things, or what others may esteem to be such, however absurd they appear to be.

Never think the worse of another on account of his differing with you in politics or religious opinions.

Always take the part of an absent person who is censured in company, so far as truth and propriety will allow. Never resent a supposed injury till you know the views and motives of the author of it, nor seek any occasion to retaliate.

HOW TO SHARPEN A KNIFE.

It is a fact well known by dealers in cutlery, that not one man in fifty knows how to sharpen a pocket knife. A razor must be laid flat on the hone being hollow-ground, and requiring fine edge. The pocket knife, however, requires a stiff edge, and the moment it is laid flat on a stone so as to touch the polished side, its edge is ruined. The blade must be held at an angle of 20 or 25 degrees, and have an edge similar to a chisel. This is called the "annual," and is marked on all "w" knives by a fine white line, which does not remove or touch the polished surface.

CAN YOU AFFORD IT?

When tempted to go out with the boys for a lark,

Think! Can you afford it? The most of their money is spent after dark.

Think! Can you afford it? You may sit round the tables where cards are dealt out.

Or paint the town red on a rollicking bout.

In the end you're both money and character out.

Think! Can you afford it?

Oh! Can you afford it? Think! Can you afford it?

If you save every dime they'll be dollars in time.

Think! Can you afford it? You'd like to be dashing and sporting new clothes.

Think! Can you afford it? How they're to be paid for nobody knows.

Think! Can you afford it? It's all very well to keep clean and clean.

And when with the boys not appear very nervous.

But your bank account's much better fat than it's lean.

Think! Can you afford it?

Chorus: A wife is a good thing to have in a house.

Think! Can you afford it? She'll keep you's' home and stop many carouse.

Think! Can you afford it? She's a luxury, sure, and if you would try

To keep her you'll find, perhaps with a sigh,

That women, like the hats they wear now, come high.

Think! Can you afford it?

MY NATIVE LAND.

I love the land of Canada—
The dear land of my birth,
I deem my native county
The fairest place on earth.
I love her lakes and rivers,
Her forests, grand and high,
And every charm that brightens
The landscape to the eye.

I love the slender tamarac,
The tall and stately pine,
The bonnie birch and king's oak,
With clinging ivy vines,
So beautiful, so glorious,
In their autumn splendor dress'd,
I love them all, oh! I love
The maple tree the best.

Old England has her royal rose,
The thistle Scotland's pride,
While France has her cockatooten
For Erin's Scotland's bird,
But I will keep my maple leaf—
And they may keep the rest—
Our country's precious emblem,
The dearest and the best.

We'll take the red and quiescent rose,
The shamrock's green leaf,
And twine them in a wreath,
We'll take those well-loved em-
No fairer can be seen, O' hienas,
And wear them in a garland
For our dear and gentle Queen.

Oh! lovely land of Canada,
May joy and peace be thine,
May the sun of bright prosperity
O'er thy Dominion shine;
May thy sons be brave and noble,
Thy daughters true and kind,
And the love of Queen and country
Our hearts in friendship bind.
—Marie Joussey.

AN IDEAL HUSBAND.

At a gathering of young ladies one evening last week one of them proposed that the party draw up a circle, and each give her opinion as to the qualifications of an ideal husband. It was immediately agreed to, says the Milwaukee Wisconsin, and oh! the diversity of prerogatives would cause a man to fear and tremble as to his acceptableness even were he an angel sent down. One wanted a rich man, one a famous one, another a handsome one, some wanted a title, and most of them wanted all these things combined.

At last it came the turn of a sweet, sunny little creature in pink and white. For a moment her face grew radiant, and then her color fell: "He must be moral, well-bred and have some fixed and honorable method of making a living."

"What! not one word about his being titled, rich or handsome!"

"But," she continued, "the man I marry must be my other self. He must be sympathetic with me in my tastes and pursuits. When he comes I shall know him, and all the love I have to give shall be his, and I shall expect love in return for love. Of course, if he is young and rich and handsome so much the better, but I should not love him less were he none of these things."

"True womanly sentiments! Would that they could find an echo in every woman's heart. The number of unhappy marriages would be lessened, and divorce unknown. Many, fastidious by outward glamour, rush headlong into matrimony, and too late find that the tastes and inclinations of husband and wife differ as widely as night and day. For instance, one is literary and fond of retirement, the other despises literature and is inclined to society; each will naturally seek the society and conversation of those whose tastes and opinions coincide with his own. The consequence is an estrangement of husband and wife in things that the world calls trivial, but which, in reality, do destroy one's happiness, and each would find it better to sacrifice all the other's charms for the one charm not there, namely, a responsive heart in all things."

WHAT A WOMAN CAN DO.

She can come to a conclusion without the slightest trouble of reasoning on it and no sane man can do that.

Six of them can talk at once and get along first rate, and no two men can do that.

She can safely stick 50 pins in her dress, while he is getting one under his thumb nail.

She is cool as a cucumber in half a dozen tight dresses and skirts, while a man will fret and fume and growl in one loose shirt.

She can talk as sweet as peaches and cream to the woman she hates, while two men would be punching each other's head before they had exchanged ten words.

She can say "no" in such a low voice that it means "yes."

She can dance all night in a pair of shoes two sizes too small for her, and enjoy every minute of the time.

She can appreciate a kiss from her husband 75 years after the marriage ceremony is performed.

She can talk to church and afterward tell you what every woman in the congregation had on, and in some rare instances can give you some faint idea of what the text was.

She can walk half the night with a colicky baby in her arms without once expressing the desire of murdering the infant.

She can—but what's the use? A woman can do anything or everything, and do it well.

She can do more in a minute than a man can do in an hour, and do it better.

She can drive a man crazy for 24 hours and then bring him back to paradise in two seconds by her tickling him under the chin, and there does not live that mortal son of Adam's race that can do it.

KNEW WHAT HE WANTED.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" asked Mrs. Curuso, when her husband was suffering from seasickness. "What do you want?" "I want the earth," gasped Curuso, as he again leaned over the rail.
