A Brief for "Beaver" Flour

"Beaver" Flour

1. It makes bread made from BEAVER FLOUR and less yeast, and you will be better nourished, at the same time reducing the cost of living.
2. No special pastry flour is needed, for BEAVER FLOUR makes the best pies, cakes, biscuits and rolls.
3. It contains the valuable gluten and proteid constituents of Manitoba No. 1 Hard Wheat, but makes finer, whiter bread than if made from that alone.
4. It owes its delicacy and lightness to the carbohydrate constituents of Ontario Wheat in just the right proportions, but is more nourishing than if made from that alone.
5. It readily takes up water, and makes larger loaves and more of them.
6. It tickles the palate of the whole family, and does them good.
7. A few good reasons are as good as a thousand, so we will now, Your Honor, rest our case.

Be sure to note that the decision is for BEAVER FLOUR,— with the costs assessed to those who do not use it.

CHAPTER XXIII.
AN ETERNAL FAREWELL.
BEFORE he could restrain her she had passed her lips passionately upon his hand and was gone.

At the door of the inn she met Charlie Quintard.
'I was just going to look for you, Virginia,' he said gently. 'Luncheon is ready, and you know we start immediately after for Liverpool.'

'I shall be ready,' she answered quietly. 'But I shall go no further than London at present, Charlie.'

He started over so slightly.
'Why?' he asked.

'I have just been speaking of the trouble into which poor France is thrown. You know what we owe her as a nation, I am going to do what I can to pay the debt. I shall offer myself as a nurse.'

'Virginia!'
She raised her head wearily.
'Don't try to discourage me, I beg of you. It would be useless, but I do not feel equal to a struggle.'

He was silent for a moment, gazing at her in a dumb, curious way; then:
'I shall follow you,' he said doggedly.

'You?'
'Yes. Not for the love of France, but for the love of you. You do not forbid it?'

She held out her hand, and pressed his in silence.

'I wish I deserved it!' she muttered brokenly, as she passed him and went hastily, up the stairs.

'Poor little girl!' he whispered huskily, his vision not quite clear as he looked after her. 'How she suffers! If there were only something that I might do to help her!'

CHAPTER XXIV.
BEBE KNOWS AT LAST.

THE Place de l'Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile is the center of two avenues which stretch out from it like the spokes of a wheel. In one of them a dainty little residence was situated with a charming rose garden at the back, a place that attracted attention in the beautiful Paris, not because of its magnificence, but for the quiet yet tasteful elegance of its surroundings.

Not alone was the architecture, backed as it was by roses, attractive, but there was something about the drapery of the superb lace at the windows that caught the eyes of woman and held them.

'A successful artist lives there,' they told themselves and each other as they drove by in their handsome equipages. 'Who is he?'

If You are Not at Your Best

Restore Your Full Vigor

But no one was able to answer the question.

For some time the neighbors saw no sign of life about the place save an occasional servant, and at a certain hour each day the carriages of a physician drove up. Then his visits grew less frequent and finally ceased.

It was not long afterward until their patient watching was rewarded by seeing a pale, but exceedingly lovely girl emerge from the house upon the arm of a handsome curious man, who seemed to guard her footsteps as she would have done those of a tottering child.

He followed her into a carriage; then, without haste, they were driven away, while the neighbors made strenuous efforts to discover their identity.

'Pierre,' exclaimed Etienne Millet, to his valet, without glancing up from the drawing he was making for Figaro, 'have you discovered who the "people across the way" are?'

'Yes, monsieur. They are Americans. Their names are Loyd-Mostyn.'

'But who is the young lady who has been ill? The one who is so much in the garden?'

'She is Monsieur Loyd-Mostyn's wife.'

'His wife! That child! You must be mistaken!'

Etienne Millet was not looking at his drawing now, but at his valet, a curious light in his handsome, dark eyes.

'No, monsieur,' returned the servant, firmly but respectfully. 'Philippe, Madam Loyd-Mostyn's maid, told me all about it. Madam is very unfortunate. She is not only blind but insane.'

'What?'

'It is quite true, monsieur. Madam has been blind since she was an infant, I believe, and lost her mind some months after her marriage. She fancies her husband is her father, and continually speaks to him as "papa," after the American fashion. He is very devoted. Philippe tells me, and now that she has recovered from her illness he will summon the best medical aid in France to restore her mind, if possible.'

Etienne Millet turned away. There seemed to be no questions further he wished to ask, but in dreamy silence he turned his great eyes in the direction of the rose gardens.

For some time he remained so; then, with a compression of his finely chiseled lips that meant determination, he turned to his drawing.

But at last in disgust, he threw down his pencil and sprang from his chair.
'Order my trap at once,' he exclaimed. "I am going out."

Paris at this time was in a most deplorable condition for the first time since the occupation by the Germans of the heights on the left side of the river, and the capture of the unfinished remnant of Châtillon.

The French guards were warlike in spirit, but it seemed not for the purpose of repulsing the Prussians so much as of exciting disorder, a purpose which they were accomplishing only too well.

Lifford Loyd-Mostyn, however, had thought little of the condition of Paris when he took up his abode here. It seemed to him that the besieged city offered the safest retreat, and he remained there, caring nothing for the city so long as he succeeded in his undertaking. In the drives which he had taken for the benefit of his own health, he had been careful to avoid the Bois de Boulogne and Champs Elysees, the haunts of Americans, choosing instead the Boulevard du Palais in the Cite, crossing by the Pont Neuf.

It was in that direction that he gave his order to the driver on the morning that Bebe accompanied him for the first time, and as they drove slowly he told her of the places they were passing, of the romantic histories connected with each, and she listened with a pleased smile.

He told her amusing stories and pathetic ones, until at last he saw a slight frown gathering between her dainty brows.

'Are you tired, darling?' he asked, with great gentleness, leaning toward her and taking her hand.

'Not at all,' she answered.

'Then what is it?'

'How is it that you know so much of Paris when you were never here before? Oh, papa, there is so much that puzzles me that sometimes my brain seems on fire!'

'You must not allow such things to distress you, Bebe,' he returned tenderly. 'Explanations are so simple—even when things seem most extraordinary. I have read what I have told you.'

'Oh!'

'Why is it that you do not trust me, Bebe?'

'I do! Indeed I do! You think that I do not because—because—I cannot tell you why! There is something gone! It makes my head ache so when I try to think it all out. I wish you would help me! When I was a little girl you used always to take me upon your knee and kiss me while you explained things that were hard. But you don't any more. Why don't you?'

The blind eyes were fixed upon him wistfully, but they could not see the pained color that flashed into his face.

'Would you love me better if I did?' he asked, his tone low and filled with embarrassment.

A slight shudder passed over her, and she leaned further back among the cushions of the carriage.

'No!' she answered quickly, almost hysterically. 'I should hate you, I think. You are very good to me, but everything is changed. Everything! I was so happy then; but now—now I am so miserable that I wish I could die!'

'There! I have pained you again. The agony in your voice was almost a stab. I am always wounding you of late, but I don't intend to. I don't seem able to help it. Poor papa! Will you forgive me?'

'You know that I would forgive you anything. But tell me, Bebe, when is it all to end? When are you to be my own little girl?'

His eyes were filled with a dog-like devotion, his lips trembled, yet there was a suppressed yearning underlying it.

She heard it, and the tiny hands were clasped in the girl's lap with a peculiar force, while the face grew a shade paler.

'Sometimes you—frighten me!' she whispered. 'It is that, I think, which makes me feel that life is changed. It is that which weighs upon my mind and heart. I want you until you come, and then my soul rebels. You are so good to me, and yet the touch of your hand is torture. I am wrong to say this to you—Oh, papa, what is it? Tell me, if you can, I am so miserable, I know that I am making you unhappy, but I can't help it, indeed, I can't!'

There was a wild sob in the voice. Loyd-Mostyn's face blanched while he leaned toward her to comfort her.

To be continued.

The Evening Chit-Chat
By RUTH CAMERON

What does make the young girls of to-day wrinkle up their foreheads so?

Is it a twentieth century germ?

If you haven't noticed how prevalent that trick is among young women in their twenties and even younger girls, just take especial notice of the girls you meet for the next day or two, or maybe the young lady who looks out of your mirror at you, and I think you will.

"Wrinkles," says the epigram-maker, "are the fret-work of the disposition." That is usually pretty true, but I think those horizontal forehead wrinkles, which such an astonishing number of the younger generation are acquiring, are an exception. For they seem to be more a result of a nervous trick of lifting the eyebrows when talking or smiling or looking upwards, than of worry.

It seems to me that the forehead is a part of the face which should express repose, and yet I constantly see girls who can hardly speak or smile without sending their eyebrows racing up to their pompadours, and transforming what should be a smooth, pretty expanse of forehead, into an imitation of a ploughed field.

But, unpleasant as the trick itself is, of course the immediate effect isn't a patch on the results—three or four permanent wrinkles. At first they are almost imperceptible, but they gradually grow deeper, until they permanently mar a part of the face, which

If it is smooth and of a pretty shape, may be one of a woman's most distinctive though least obtrusive charms.

Quite the most charming thing about this strangely prevalent habit is its victims' entire unconsciousness of it.

Just as like as not, you, dear lady, who are reading this and saying that you think I am very much overstating the case and that you don't know anyone who has the habit, are a victim yourself.

When you go to bed to-night, suppose you take your hand glass and carefully scrutinize your forehead, and if you find any signs of wrinkles ask some friend to watch and see if you are etching them in this way.

A masseuse, who says that nearly half her patients are getting for themselves an absurdly early crop of wrinkles in this manner, gives them three rules to overcome the habit and undo any harm already done.

Maybe they appeal to you if that hand-mirror jury finds you guilty.

When you are smiling or talking or laughing, occasionally pass your hand over your forehead to see if it is smooth.

Ask some friend who is with you much, to reprove you every time she sees you wrinkle your forehead.

If you have any wrinkle lines already formed, get a reliable skin food—be sure that it is one warranted not to grow hair—and massage the forehead every night or two. The proper way to do this is to place the finger tips together on your forehead, just above where the eyebrows meet, and slowly and very firmly draw the hands outward across the forehead.

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle.

While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you want a book that tells all about women's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps.

Household Notes.

Buttermilk is the best possible thing to clean linoleum and oilcloth.

For a bee sting, simply drop chloroform on the stung place and it will entirely kill the poison.

Keep in your work-basket several large-size safety pins, and use them to string loose buttons, hooks, eyes, etc.

To sweep carpets and floors without raising dust, sprinkle moist tea leaves on them and then sweep with a light brush or broom. A heavy broom wears the carpets.

Apply as quickly as possible a piece of ice—holding it on the injured part for several moments and no blister will appear.

When making baked custard, if the milk is warmed before adding the eggs no water will settle in the bottom of the baking dish.

Eyeglasses may be made bright and clear by spraying them with alcohol from an atomizer and then rubbing with soft tissue paper.

A brass-headed tack, driven into each of the lower corners of picture frames prevent pictures from leaving marks on the wall.

To clean white kid boot linings the best method of cleaning white kid and white sheepskin linings of boots is to sponge with benzine.

A solution of one teaspoonful of peroxide into a teacup of water makes a sanitary wash to use in the mouth every morning and evening.

When sweeping Turkey, Axminster or any thick piled carpet, always brush the way of the pile, and it will look fresh and bright for years.

If you are distressed to find that some careless person has scratched the new white paint with a match try rubbing the darkened surface with a piece of cut lemon.

You can remove grease spots from wallpaper with blotting paper and a hot flatiron. Put the blotting paper over the stain and press it with the hot iron.

It is a good plan to wipe out all greasy utensils with a piece of soft paper, before washing. This simplifies the washing process. Destroy the paper immediately.

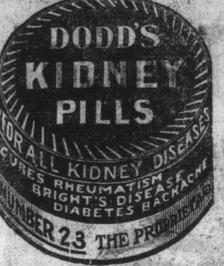

To remove marks and scratches on dull finished furniture steam it under wet newspapers and a hot flatiron. This must be done only if the furniture has a dull finish.

Don't dampen silk when pressing; a moderately hot iron with cloth or paper, between the garment and the iron, when the pressing is done on the right side, should be used.

A method by which rooms may be made mouseproof is to have the walls while still in the rough lined with fine-meshed wire mosquito netting, after which the lumber is put on.

When putting away the summer suits of boys and men, be sure that there are no matches left in the pockets. Fires in attics often start from mice nibbling matches in clothes.

Four Thousand Pounds For a Sovereign.

Recent Art Romances that Outstrip Fiction.

The Neuhourg grocer who has been fortunate enough to pick up at an auction-sale for 24s. a Raphael, the value of which is at least 4,000 times the price he paid for it, has had many recent predecessors in similar, lucky experiences, the stories of which quite outstrip romance.

A Gainsborough Find.

A short time ago a second-hand dealer purchased a deplorably dirty canvas from a poor widow for a few shillings—a sum which brought tears of gratitude and joy to the woman's eyes. After carefully cleaning the picture the dealer was delighted, although not altogether surprised, to discover that he was the possessor of an undoubted Gainsborough, for which he offered an eager purchaser for £3,500.

A few weeks earlier a carpenter presented himself at the shop of a picture-dealer in the Rue St. Lazare, Paris, offering for sale a large add dirty canvas for the modest sum of 20fr. "I don't suppose the picture is worth anything," he said, "but the frame ought to be worth the money." The dealer, who was in want of a name of similar size, paid the 20fr., and, removing the canvas, he cast it aside in a corner of his shop.

Some weeks later an artist-customer chanced to notice the discarded canvas, and, after examining it, exclaimed, "Hallo! You've got a treasure here. It's a variant of one of Raphael's works, the Vatican 'Adam and Eve.'" The news of the discovery spread, and within a few days the dealer had sold his 20-franc picture for 10,000fr.

Genuine Turner for 25s.

Another Raphael, "La Belle Jardiniere," was quite recently discovered at a second-hand shop in Paris, and purchased for 44fr., probably less than a two-thousandth part of its real value; a Rubens, valued at £7,000, was picked up for a £5 note at an auction sale in Carnarvonshire; and 25s. was the price paid at an old curiosity shop in Barmouth for a sea piece, painted in oils on an oak panel, which when cleaned proved to be a genuine Turner, worth at least £700.

More remarkable still was the good fortune of a picture-lover who strolled one day into a shop on the Paris boulevards, and noticing among a lot of lumber a study in red chalk purchased for half a franc. On examining his purchase more carefully he found to his delight that he was the possessor of Raphael's original design for his famous picture, "La Disputa del Sacramento," now in the Vatican, the value of which is little short of £1,000.

Pawnbroking Romance.

A romantic story was told a short time ago of a widow who took an old picture to a second-hand dealer, begging him to buy it as she wanted a few shillings to pay the expenses of visiting some friends. The dealer examined the proffered canvas, which was covered with generations of dirt, and reluctantly offered 30s. for it. When the canvas was cleaned it proved to be a very fine example of Gainsborough's, worth at least £5,000.

A pawnbroker advanced £15 on seven old pictures to a needy client, lending the money, as he said, "mainly on the value of the frames, one of which contained quite £3 worth of gold." When the agreement expired the unredeemed canvases were consigned to the lumber room and practically forgotten, until one day an antique-dealer chanced to see them, and on his advice they were submitted to experts, who pronounced them valuable old masters, they included a Rubens and a Gainsborough, worth several thousand pounds.—Tit-Bits.

Is There a Revolution At Athens?

The report of a revolution at Athens needs call for no surprise. It may be a fact. It may not be. It is merely a report, which is apparently neither authoritatively affirmed nor denied. It is the latter circumstance which give some support to the report. Press inquiries sent to Athens have failed to elicit replies. It would appear that wires have been cut or that a right censorship prevails. This fact added to the uncertainty about the stability of the Government of Greece which has prevailed for some time gives colour to the report, though it may be that very fact which has given it birth and circulation. It may be remembered that for some time there were reports that King George would abdicate. Moreover the suspicion that he might be deposed has also gained currency.

King George is the second King who has reigned over Greece since the Greeks won their independence from the subjugation of the Turks which had lasted close on four hundred years. That emancipation was due largely to the intervention of England, France and Turkey whose fleet annihilated the combined fleet of Turkey and Egypt at Navarino in 1827 and which eventually led to the London protocol of 1830 wherein Greece was declared an independent Kingdom. A republic was tried first, but it proved unsuccessful, the Powers stepped in and a monarchy was established. Otto, second son of Louis I. of Bavaria, was made King, a loan of $12,000,000 was guaranteed by the Powers, and Athens became the capital in 1835. Within eight years trouble arose, a constitution was demanded, at first refused, but a bloodless revolution in 1843 brought the King to yield. For nearly 20 years longer King Otto managed to keep on the Throne. He was between the devil and the deep sea. His subjects wanted to attack Turkey whenever Russia did, and England and France used force to stop them occupying the country in 1854. In 1862 a revolt took place, King Otto was deposed and forced to leave the country. A new choice was made and Prince George, second son of the King of Denmark, brother of Queen Mother Alexandra of England and of the Dowager Empress of Russia.

FUNERAL YESTERDAY.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Doran took place at Outer Cove yesterday and was largely attended. Rev. Fr. Clarke officiated at the Church and grave and delivered a short panegyric on the life of the deceased.

CAUGHT THIRTEEN RATS.—There were 13 rats caught in a cage at Hon. R. K. Bishop's outhouse near his residence, LeMarchant Road last night. Mr. Bishop's man brought them down Water Street in a cage this forenoon. They attracted quite a following of small boys.

Saw Two Schooners.

Some of the men from North Harbor say that a vessel from Hermitage Bay, which arrived to-day, reports that at 4 p.m. Sunday she ran down near a schooner of about 50 tons hove to off Cape Pine, and a smaller schooner, believed to be the Golden Arrow, near her. Shortly after it became stormy and thick fog set in and both were lost sight of. It was not known what vessel the larger one was. Rd. Goff, of Salmonier, reports that the Golden Arrow lost her cargo of Cape English. The Nancy Can lay to the leeward of the vessel and she drove across and went on the rocks. Mr. Flemming arrived here by to-day's train from Salmonier and lost 100 qtls. fish and four cases of oil, representing $700. The loss to him is ruinous, as he has no insurance. Two cases of oil owned by Fleming and R. Callahan were picked up near Cape Dog, and a cap belonging to Alphonso Scump, who, as well as his brother, was a splendid swimmer. English says that Singleton, the skipper, avers that he swam three quarters of a mile and that when the vessel went down he at first clinging to an anchor buoy and later secured two oars which enabled him to swim ashore. A dory in two pieces was picked up near where he landed. He saw the five drowned men when the vessel struck launch and get into their dory, which must have been swamped later and drifted ashore. He saw Cape English while the vessel was running in the Bay and missing North Harbor Point she went to her doom.

HORSE BIT HIS HAND.—Cabman Howlett's horse bit his hand at the Post Office cab stand yesterday. He came to Mr. M. Wadden's drug store and had the wound dressed.

PRICE OF FLOUR.—The price of flour is falling again about 20 cents for consignments to arrive. Buffalo and Five Stars to arrive C. I. F. will be $6.00. Five Roses and Verbona will be $6.20 C. I. F.

A WONDERFUL VIOLINIST.—Signor Scapiro, a wonderful violinist, will play at the Narelle Concert to-night. His playing will be a revelation. Nothing like it has ever been heard in St. John's before.—ad. 11

DANCE LAST NIGHT.—Miss Dugan gave a dance and tea at her father's residence, New Gower Street, last night, in aid of the St. Patrick Church fund. There were about 50 people present and the affair was kept up till three o'clock this morning.

DANCE AT SMITHVILLE.—A Cauld Canon dance was given by Mrs. Buckley at Smithville last night. About 50 people were present and an enjoyable time was spent. Mr. Power's band furnished the music, songs were also sung by Mr. Peter Power. The dance closed down at 4 a.m.

TRAIN KILLS DOG.—A fine setter dog, owned by Capt. Kean, of the Western Fire Station, wandered onto the trestle bridge yesterday just before the Bruce express came in. When the express came along it struck the dog cutting off its hind legs and tail, and it had to be drowned to put it out of pain.

Three Men Missing.

We understand from people who arrived here by last night's train from Harbor Main that three young men—John and Joseph Skeans, of Collier's, and Thomas Meaney, of Avondale, are missing from Bell Island, and the belief is that they left for Sydney in the Regulus Sunday and shared the fate of the unfortunate crew. The men could not be found on Bell Island, which was thoroughly searched. They were seen on the island after the s.s. Gladstone left with 36 men for Sydney, but after the Regulus went they could not be seen. Their parents are in a great state of suspense about them.

Had Sail Burned.

Last evening sparks coming from the forecabin stove of the schr. British Empire, lying at Bowring Bros. wharf, caught the foresail, which in the high wind blowing blazed up. The men ran for buckets, and drenched the blazing canvas, two clothes of which were destroyed. The sail was sent to Morrie's sail loft to-day for repairs. Had it occurred at night and the men away a disastrous blaze would have been the result.

No Kidney-Backache After a Few Doses.

Usually sufferers from backache, bladder trouble or out-of-order kidneys are relieved after several doses of Pape's Diuretic.

The time to cure kidney trouble is while it is only a trouble—before it settles into Dropsy, Gravel, Diabetes or Bright's Disease.

The moment you suspect any kidney or urinary derangement or feel a constant dull backache, or notice that the urine is thick, cloudy, offensive or full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scaldis, you should begin taking Pape's Diuretic as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

Pape's Diuretic acts directly upon the kidneys, bladder and urinary system; cleanses, heals, vitalizes and regulates these organs, ducts and glands and completes the cure within a few days.

Misery in the back, sides or loins, sick headache, inflamed or puffy eyelids, nervousness, rheumatism and darting pains, heart palpitations, prostatic trouble, bilious stomach, dizziness, sleeplessness, listless, worn-out feeling and other symptoms caused by inactive, sluggish kidneys, simply vanish. Uncontrollable urination (especially at night), smarting, discoloured water and all bladder misery ends.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will vouch for the responsibility of Pape, Thompson & Pape of Cincinnati, who prepare Pape's Diuretic—50 cent treatment—sold by every druggist in the world.

Here and There.

YACHT FIVE BACK.—The yacht Fife arrived here from Catalina this morning, bringing W. D. Reid, who had been down inspecting the railway work.

CHASING WHALES.—The Conception Bay whalers are having lively work chasing whales right up in the bay the past week. When the train was coming along by Holywood Beach this morning one of the whalers was seen chasing a large fish, off Kelligrews.

Mr. Jerrett is to-day still anxious about the schr. Bright Rose, referred to elsewhere. At 6 this morning Cape St. Francis saw a schooner with two jibs passing off that place, which came down the Bay, and it is thought that is the vessel.

BRUCE PASSENGERS.—The Bruce arrived at Port aux Basques at 8.15 a.m. to-day bringing A. R. Dugmore, H. P. Duchemin, C. B. Traves, J. R. Parsons, Rev. Geo. Bond, Rev. T. Marshall, Rev. F. C. These packages are splendidly work- ed and are a testimony to the mechanical ability of Mr. Samuelson.

Still Missing.

Mr. M. T. Flynn's schooner, Beattie Allen, to which the Telegram made exclusive reference yesterday, is still missing. She left Marytown last Thursday for Flat Island and has not been heard from since. Flat Island is the home of the skipper, J. Masters who had a load of fish for St. John's. There is no telegraph connection at Flat Island and Mr. Flynn, who is at present in town, believes that she might be there yet. There is great anxiety felt about her safety as she had no cause for delay at Flat Island. The crew is six fine men.

J. P. Morgan's Disgraceful Exit From a Church Convention

At the Episcopal Convention at Cincinnati recently the House of Bishops endorsed the recommendations made by the clergy in the House of Deputies by passing a resolution favouring the appointment of a committee to investigate and prepare a ritual for the administration of unction to those who are ill. The debates on this subject have aroused deep interest among Churchmen of all orders. The opinions expressed by the speakers at the convention have been most widely divergent in character, ranging from fervent belief in present-day miracles to outspoken scepticism as to the power of anything but medical treatment to cure illness. While the clergy inspired by the "Emmanuel movement" which had its origin in the Episcopal Church of the parish of Emmanuel, Boston, generally urged the administration of unction to invalids for healing purposes rather than for spiritual needs, the laity through their delegates to the convention, have declared themselves emphatically opposed to a set church ritual for healing by prayer. Mr. J. P. Morgan, who is one of the most active delegates among the laity, is reported to have ostentatiously left the House of Deputies when the discussion on the subject was renewed. According to the New York Tribune, the great financier, before he left, expressed himself to a friend as "disgraced" at the action of the convention in devoting its time to the discussion of miracles. "I have heard more absurd statements from that platform," he is quoted as saying, "than I ever heard before. I am going out to attend to business matters, because I think they are at least worth attending to." The Galatia sailed this morning for Quoroo with 3,400 qts. of fish shipped by James Baird, Ltd.

The Golden Arrow Tragedy

From men who arrived here yesterday from Branch, in St. Mary's Bay, we learn that Peter and Alphonsus Stamp who were lost in the wreck of the Golden Arrow were passengers on the little schooner and that both were single, being quite young chaps. The members of the crew drowned were:—George King, married, with a wife and 6 children; Thomas King and Edward Moriarty were also single men. Over three-fourths of the fish cargo of 500 qts. on board was owned by the Messrs. Stamp. The Stamps did well the past summer and operated 5 traps at Capt. St. Mary's. The Golden Arrow has passed through several hands since built, and was first owned, our informants say, by Michael Linnehan, afterwards by Matthew McEvoy, and later by Skipper Singleton who had such a narrow escape from death. The Nancy Kane shoal where the vessel struck is composed of 5 rocks about 1/4 of a mile from the shore between Branch and North Harbor and is an extremely dangerous place. In making in there to go to Branch, North Harbor and contiguous places in foggy or dark weather the fishermen run great risks and the wonder is that more accidents do not occur there. A fog alarm or light is badly wanted at Colinet Point if a repetition of the accident to the Golden Arrow is to be averted. The loss of the five unfortunate men has caused much sorrow all over St. Mary's Bay. We understand that arrangements have been made to send Lardner's wrecking tug Amphitrite to the scene of the wreck to search for the bodies of the drowned. Like the ill-fated crew of the Regulus the poor fellows on the Golden Arrow were lost almost at their own doors, and this intensifies the sorrow of the friends who mourn them.

Rev. Prof. S. A. Mercer, Ph D.

The Rev. Samuel Alfred Brown Mercer has accepted his election as Professor of Old Testament at the Western Theological Seminary. He was ordained by Bishop Nicholson in 1904. He was trained as a teacher in the Central Training School of the Church of England in St. John's Newfoundland, graduated with a B.D. from Nashotah in 1904, spent some years in the University of Wisconsin and Harvard, specializing in Semitics (and was President of the Semitic Conference at Harvard, being familiar with Assyrian, Hebrew, Arabic, Syriac, Aramaic and Ethiopic), holds a D.A. with honors from Harvard, has spent some two years studying in the University of Heidelberg, having just received his degree of Ph.D. from that institution, and studied with Prof. Fritz Hommel at Munich.

To-Night's Concert.

Miss Marie Narelle and Co. arrived in the city yesterday afternoon. Miss Narelle is undoubtedly one of the most accomplished and finished artists of the day and her beautiful soprano voice has won international reputation, having a full and sympathetic quality which leaves an impression memory likes to treasure, whether she is singing a heavy aria to the hardened critics or a simple folk song to the masses the verdict is the same. Mr. Michel Sciapero, the violinist of the Company, is a master of his art, having a reputation in Europe second to none. He has had the distinguished honour of appearing before the Emperor of Germany, and without a doubt will be one of the finest exponents of the violin ever heard in this city. Miss Genevieve Moroney is the accompanist and will also render a couple of solos. Miss Moroney is well known in the United States from coast to coast, and is one of the finest and most accomplished pianists of today.—adv't.

Audience With Pope.

Special to the Evening Telegram. ROME, Oct. 17.

Pope Pius gave audience to-day to Cardinal Vanutelli, who recently returned from his mission as papal legate at the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal. Cardinal Vanutelli described the Congress as a notable success and dwelt with enthusiasm upon the impressions received on his subsequent visit to New York City, where he was present at the consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral. In other cities of Canada and the United States he admired the astonishing growth of those countries, which he said foretold a magnificent future. He added that the Catholic Church at the present time occupied a prominent position in American life, Roman Catholics being as one, staunch, patriotic citizens and zealous churchmen, and so constituting a strong guarantee of order, and an efficacious barrier against subversive elements. The Pontiff expressed himself as much pleased with the recital of the legate's visit, which he said he followed with interest. Cardinal Vanutelli admits that he saw John Redmond at Buffalo, but denies that he expressed an opinion regarding Home Rule for Ireland.

Another Schooner Reported Missing.

There was some anxiety expressed last evening as to the safety of the schooner Bright Rose which left Brigus for here early Wednesday morning. She left there shortly after 2 o'clock that morning laden with fish and oil, and unless she harbored in some port like Island Cove or Bishop's Cove she must have had a hard time of it. The craft is owned by Mr. Jerrett, who yesterday wired Carbonear and Harbour Grace asking about her but had replies stating that she was at neither place. It is thought that the schooner could not get around Cape St. Francis and ran back up the Bay and ran into some place where there was no telegraph station. Three schooners were seen from Cape St. Francis coming down the Bay Wednesday evening but they were noticed to put back, and it is thought this schooner might have been one of them. The following comprise the crew:—J. Fomeroy, master; George Hickman, Thomas McCue, George Muford and W. Sparks.

Riddled With Bullets.

Special Evening Telegram.

FORT MYERS, Fla., Oct. 27.

E. J. Watson, a well known farmer, and Leo Cox, an escaped convict under life sentence for murder, were riddled with bullets last night by a posse which went to Chatham Bend Sunday to capture the slayer of Miss Ellen Smith, A. Walter and Dutchey Reynolds. The three were killed ten days ago and Watson reported the killing of the three persons at Fort Myers last Saturday. He claimed that he had captured Cox and produced the latter's coat and gun as evidence. He was asked to produce the man, and to find him a posse accompanied Watson to Chatham Bend. Arriving there Watson found Cox and made a desperate resistance before both were riddled with bullets. The triple murder was committed by Cox and a negro now in jail here. The negro confessed, describing how the bodies had been cut open and weighted so that when thrown into the water they would sink. He declared the murder was done at the instance of Watson who owed the three victims money. Miss Smith, the victim, was a unique character, being of masculine proportions and living by herself on the edge of the Everglades. She hunted and trapped and was called Big Squaw by the Indians.

Graham White Protests.

Special Evening Telegram.

BELMONT PARK, N.Y., Oct. 27.

When the starting gun was fired for the Elimination Race for the Gordon Bennett Cup contest for the big International Prize of the International meet here, none of the aviators cared to go aloft as the wind was too strong. The Aviation Committee to-day issued a bulletin stating that it had revoked its former ruling regarding the Liberty Statue flight, which provided that aviators must qualify by an hour's flight at this meet for this event. The new ruling allowed any aviator to make the flight. Claude Graham White made a formal protest to the Aviation Committee. He had risked his machine and thought it unfair that those who had not qualified should be allowed to go in the contest.

Contempt of Court.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Oct. 27.

The High Court to-day fined the Evening News $1,000 for Contempt of Court in allowing to be published the story of a conference between Richard Blair, the prosecuting counsel, and the quarter-master of the steamer Montrose, during which the ship's officer revealed a plan which he and Dr. Hawley Crippen had made to bring about the latter's escape from the vessel when he was being pursued by the authorities. The Court's publication of the story was calculated to prejudice the case of Crippen when the latter was brought to trial for the murder of his wife.

Backache Suffering

A wonderful medicine is this man's description of DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Mr. Fred. Gummer, Lillies, Ont., writes: "I can honestly say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a wonderful medicine. For six weeks last fall I could scarcely walk, around for pains in the back and legs, and was almost completely unfit for work. Through medicines I got no better. I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and bought five boxes. After I had used three boxes, I was greatly improved and by the time I had them all taken felt as well as ever did. I would advise anyone suffering from kidney disease to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. "We have also used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for bad colds and sore throat and would not be without these medicines for anything."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers. Edmond, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for a free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipe Book.

Not Represented.

Our friends in the Maritime Provinces are much disgusted that St. John's, Nfld., did not send men to compete in the Herald and Mail Road Race next Monday. The sportsmen in particular looked forward to having a contingent of "Billy gales" who would no doubt put a little higher color in the noses of the Nova Scotians when our boys would enter the competition. Next year it is to be hoped that our local sports will respond to the call of the "cannucks" and give them all they want.

CRIPPEN TRIAL.

Closing Scenes Most Pitiabile in the Annals of the New Bailey.

London, Oct. 24.—The closing day of the Crippen murder trial at New Bailey was remarkable for thrilling scenes and tense moments, when spectators, jury, counsel, and even the staid judges on the bench watched in breathless anticipation the game of wits between the prisoner in the dock and Crown Prosecutor Muir. Crippen was practically beaten down by the fusillade of direct questions hurled at him by the opposing lawyer, questions to which he could give no satisfactory answer.

Under the merciless cross-examination Crippen changed from a self-complacent and dapper prisoner into an object of abject pity.

Court attaches declared that he had placed the noose about his own neck, and the spectacle presented was one of the most pitiable in the annals of the famous old tribunal of justice.

Crippen admitted that he knew of no person who had seen or heard from his wife since February 1, nor did he know anyone who had seen her leave his residence at 39 Hilldrop Crescent alive. He admitted that his testimony concerning her leaving him to join another man in America was mere assumption.

It was the most terrible cross-examination within the memory of the barristers who looked on. At times Counsel Alfred Tobin intervened to try to save his client from the avalanche of questions which rained upon him. The questions came like the snapping of whips—hurting and tumbling upon each other's heels, until the amazement of those in the court room gave way to sympathy for the accused.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

The leading features of the cross-examination of Crippen at the hands of Crown Counsel Muir follow:

On the 1st of February you were left alone in the house with your wife?

Yes.

Was she alive and well?

Yes.

Do you know any person who has seen her alive since?

I do not.

Or who can prove she left the house?

I have told you all the facts.

The night of the dinner party to the Martinettis Crippen retired to his room, and his wife to her room between two and three o'clock in the morning after the quarrel. On rising he prepared his own breakfast, as he usually did, his wife being a late riser. He got home at seven o'clock that evening, found his wife had gone from the house, and presumed that she had carried out her threat of going off to America.

"And did you make no inquiries about her leaving, either of cabmen, steamship agents, or tradesmen?" demanded Mr. Muir.

"I did not," replied Crippen frankly. "No inquiries, either of tradesmen who called at the house, or of anybody else, at any time."

"No, I made no inquiries about anybody at any time, either then or since my arrest. It didn't occur to me."

Answering the Lord Chief Justice, Crippen said he did not know whether his wife had taken a box with her.

By Mr. Muir—"I made my wife no regular allowance, but I always gave her what she asked, say anything up to four pounds. During our quarrel that night I asked her if she wanted any money, and she said she didn't."

"Why were you in such a hurry to pawn your wife's jewellery?" suddenly queried Mr. Muir.

Crippen smilingly answered, "I had to pay cash for an advertising scheme."

"How long had that scheme been in your mind?"

"About two months."

"Didn't you tell Inspector Dew in July that you had never pawned anything of your wife's? Had you forgotten?"

"No, I didn't consider it her property, as I provided it. She had some rings and a watch which were her own, but before our marriage I gave her thirty-four pounds to buy furs with. My commission in January, 1910, paid me nearly as well as the work I was previously doing."

"But didn't you tell Inspector Dew that the commission didn't pay?" persisted Mr. Muir.

"Yes, and what I meant was that they didn't pay me for the trouble they gave me," answered Crippen easily.

"Well, where do you suppose your wife got the money from to pay for her voyage to America?"

"She always had plenty of money," "She threatened to leave several times."

"Yes."

"Did you always ask whether she had money on those occasions?"

"No, as she didn't carry it out to such an extent."

"Did you lead Inspector Dew to believe that you had accounted for the whole of your wife's jewellery?"

"Yes."

"You said nothing to Inspector Dew about the three pieces you had pawned after the quarrel."

Lord Alverstone—"That is a matter for comment."

Dr. Crippen—"The complaint my wife made that night at the dinner party was, I considered, most unreasonable."

"Do you think that it was sufficient to cause your wife to leave you?"

"I think her decision had evidently been pending for a long time."

"Had she any other cause for leaving?"

"No other that I know of."

"And when she left, you set about thinking how to cover up the scandal?"

"Yes."

"It involved you in a great deal of trouble?"

"That has already been acknowledged."

Letter Written to Miss Le Neve.

At this juncture Mr. Muir handed Crippen a letter written on the 20th March from Hilldrop Crescent, in which he suggested that Miss Le Neve should leave Hilldrop Crescent.

Crippen perused the letter calmly, and handing it back, replied: "I am not sure whether she was living there at the time, but she had been off and on. She came to live with me shortly before Easter."

Lord Alverstone—"We had better fix the dates now."

Crippen—"The first time she came to live with me was on the 2nd of February. From that on she was with me two or three nights, perhaps more, a week. I would not like to say when she came to stay with me permanently."

Mr. Muir—"Mrs. Jackson fixed

March 12 as the date when Miss Le Neve ceased living at her house."

Crippen—"I won't dispute the date."

"On the night of February 2nd, did Miss Le Neve sleep at Hilldrop Crescent?"

"She did."

Lord Alverstone—"You must press him on that for a reason."

Mr. Muir—"Are you sure of that?"

"Crippen—Yes."

Mr. Muir read a letter addressed to the Martinettis on March 20, when Miss Le Neve was with him, in which Crippen said that the fact that his wife was dangerously ill with pleuro-pneumonia was the reason why he had not been to see them.

Mr. Muir—"At the time you wrote that letter, had you arranged to go to Dieppe with Miss Le Neve for Easter?"

"Yes, I had, I believe," replied Crippen.

"Did you want to wipe your wife off the slate before you left?"

"There is no question of the kind. I have already explained my statement. It was necessary to say something in order to stop all inquiries."

"Did you want to announce your wife's death before starting on your holiday with Miss Le Neve?"

"I do not think it follows as a logical sequence."

"Did you think of the pain you caused your wife's friends by the announcement of her death?"

"Oh, no, I didn't consider them at all."

Played Part of Bereft Husband.

Questioned regarding his return from Dieppe, and wearing mourning, Crippen replied that he could not say whether he wore mourning clothes at the time, but that he did afterwards.

Lord Alverstone—"Very soon after your return from Dieppe, Mr. Crippen, you had to play the part of a bereaved husband?"

"Yes."

"Did you do it well?"

"I could not tell you," replied Crippen, smilingly.

"When your wife's friends condoled with you on the loss of your wife, did you play the part well?" persisted Lord Alverstone.

"That's a question you should ask them," retorted Crippen.

Mr. Muir—"In a letter you wrote to Dr. Burroughs, you said you were nearly out of your mind owing to poor Belle's health. That was sheer hypocrisy?"

Crippen—"It is already admitted."

"Sheer hypocrisy," repeated counsel.

"It is already admitted," reiterated Crippen, calmly.

Mr. Muir quoted further from Crippen's letter in which he said he had received a cable announcing his wife's death, and adding that it had been "a most awful shock."

Crippen, who appeared to be highly amused, amiably replied: "I don't see why you should keep on questioning me as to this. I am willing to admit, as I have told you, that they were in my mind."

Lord Alverstone interposed rather sternly—"That may be so, Mr. Crippen, but this is a very serious part of the case, and you must really answer the questions, lie or not lie."

Mr. Muir—"The awful shock was purely imaginary?"

"It was entirely so."

"How did you know your wife might not write to you?"

"I did not think she would write to anybody."

Covering Up the Scandal.

"Because she was told to cover up the scandal?"

"I only inferred she would not write."

"Do you ask the jury to believe that, not knowing your wife might write to the Martinettis, or to Burroughs, you told them she was dead?"

"Where do you think she was?"

"In Chicago with Bruce Miller."

Mr. Muir called attention to letters Crippen wrote to relatives in America speaking of his wife's death. He asked how, if his wife had gone to America, he did not know she would call on her relatives?

"I had had gone with another man I did not think she would face her relatives."

Mr. Muir—"These were a very elaborate series of misrepresentations to a number of persons. For whose sake were you going through this elaborate process?"

"For the sake of both of us."

"I did not wish friends to think that I had treated her badly, and that as a result she had left me."

"What were you trying to save yourself from by telling lies?"

"Scandal amongst my acquaintances."

"What scandal? Separation from your wife when you were living in open adultery with Miss Le Neve?"

"It was not so open as you seem to imagine."

"You say you had treated your wife well, and had given her money and jewels, and that then she left you with ingratitude and left you. Why should you seek to cover up the scandal?"

When Sleep Fails You

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD will bring back normal and vitality by building up the nerves.

Mr. Jas. Wesley Weaver, a veteran of the Penian Raid, Port Dalhousie, Ont., writes: "For years I was afflicted with nervousness and dreary insomnia, so that I never knew for three years what a full hour's sleep was, never more than dozing for a few minutes at a time. Heart pain and headaches almost drove me wild. I had spells of weakness and cramps in stomach and limbs."

"Though I tried several doctors, I was money uselessly spent. Finally Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was brought to me and eight boxes cured me. I am simply wonderful what benefit has been obtained from this treatment. Sleeplessness and headaches are warnings of approaching nervous collapse. You can positively remove these symptoms and prevent prostration or paralysis by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers. Ed. Bennett, Bates & Co., Toronto.
