When Jabez Caddick returned, Sir Charles looked at him with wild, bloodshot eyes, and said:

"I accept—I am forced to accept. You spoke truly when you said that I was making but a small sacrifice. I am a marked man. I am an alien and an outcast. I have known pleasure and the society of my fellows where my history and the odium attached to my name had not reached. I wonder now that you are content to—"

"Say no more, Sir Charles Hastings," the lawyer interrupted. "Be patient that I am content—more than content. My only child, in whom I have for years centered all my pride, will be snatched from the brink of ruin and shame. I have worked for her—told for her! I feel that the disgrace would have killed me. Instead of Lucy gaining the contempt of her kind, and the exultance of my enemies, she will be a lady of title, purchased at a price."

"You will understand one thing," broke in Sir Charles. "Your daughter and I part at the doors of the church. I never wish to see her or speak to her. If she lives at Emden Hall, I go abroad. You will respect my feelings in this."

"You need never fear that she will force herself upon you. She will obey me in all things, now that it is almost too late!" he replied, bitterly.

"And when—when shall this marriage take place?" questioned the young man.

"Immediately; I want it announced in the newspapers else this liaison may get wind and be credited."

"Will to-morrow suit?" demanded Sir Charles, with an odd laugh. "I do not see that there should be any loss of time, since it has to take place. It would please me to take my mother's freedom back home with me. I will stay in town all night, if you will make arrangements for the wedding."

The wedding! What a mockery! One minute was the lawyer in doubt; then he said, firmly:

"It shall be done, Sir Charles, it shall be done! Let me see you here at twelve to-morrow. My daughter shall be ready to meet you, and with her, I hand you a full receipt for all claims against your mother—the dowager Lady Hastings!"

There seemed to be something almost sardonic in these words, and Sir Charles went away with a strange tingle of sounds in his ears.

He never knew how he spent the remainder of that fatal day. He walked continually until night set in, without becoming weary. Then he turned into a hotel, mechanically. He could not eat or drink; he only wanted to rest, and the promise to return to Steele & Trauter never occurred to him.

He was at the office of Jabez Caddick promptly to time next day—pale, haggard, wild-eyed, and the lawyer thrust into his hands the documents that made his mother a free woman, saying simply:

"Come."

He followed, and, after crossing several streets, he found himself in the office of a registrar. There were several people there—women and men. Everything that passed he seemed to hear and see as in a dream. He heard the marriage service being droned—he felt the slight figure of a woman by his side; but he never even glanced at her. He made some responses, and signed something; then he turned to go away. He knew that he was a married man, and that he had only caught a glimpse of his wife's eyes—black and scintillating—as she furtively glanced at him. He did not care. His mother was saved, the estates were unencumbered, and he had paid the price! But he would never touch one shilling of Jabez Caddick's money.

He returned home alone, and from that day there was a settled melancholy upon his face, and in his manner. He saw the announcement of his wedding in the daily papers, but his wife did not trouble him. He set steadily to work to put his property in order, and at the end of five years he was surrounded by growing prosperity, and his neighbors were anxious to forget the past. He was always kind toward his mother, always considerate, but she never seemed the same to him after his strange marriage. As time rolled on it became almost like a dream, and he often found himself wondering if it were indeed a reality. He met a few of his old college chums, and occasionally had visitors at the Hall, but no one ever mentioned his wife. If they had ever heard of his wedding, they seemed to have forgotten it. He did not care himself; he treated it almost as a joke until he saw and loved Lady Gladys Howard—until, in a moment of madness, he had confessed that love, and asked her to be his sweet wife!

So, after five years, it came that Sir Charles Hastings was walking the same streets in Birmingham again, and thinking, with bitterness, of that one terrible act in his life, and wondering why he had never heard one word of the woman he had married. He had expected that she would use his name—that she might even insist upon living at Emden Hall. It was her right, and Jabez Caddick had understood that the baronet would not oppose such a course. This was one of the agreements that were tacitly understood. If she had insisted upon assuming these rights, Sir Charles would have left the Hall. He would have positively refused to remain under the same roof with her. At best she was only some shameless creature, the daughter of a self-confessed trickster and moneylender. It only surprised him that she had not claimed her rights. Without these, what advantage did she or Jabez Caddick enjoy?

It was his intention now to question the legality of the marriage. He would lay the whole case before Steele & Trauter, and have their opinion. At the worst, there might be solid grounds for a divorce. Would Lady Gladys Howard care to marry a divorcee? He shuddered at the very thought. The story of his mother's sin would be upon everybody's tongue; the story of his own contemptible crime—the crime of winning the love of the fairest lady in the land—of woefully deceiving her, and then—oh, Heaven! how all the past would be raked over again! No; he could not bear it. He would not have his misery dragged through the law courts! There was only one chance in the world for him, and that one chance was the death of Lucy Caddick, the woman whom he had married five years ago. It was a wicked thing to find hope in the death of a fellow creature, but Sir Charles Hastings felt that he had been imposed upon, that he had been forced into this horrible marriage at the point of the sword, and he could not discover one jot of pity or consideration for his wife. He confessed to himself that he hoped that she was dead, that her sinful, useless life was ended. This thought gave him relief, and the hope grew. Possibly this explained why she had never troubled him!

He paused irresolutely before the office of Steele & Trauter, and it occurred to him that there might be no real need for him to consult them; if his wife were dead, there would be an end to the whole miserable matter.

He continued his way toward Colehill street. He would call on Jabez Caddick, for the first time in five years, and learn the exact truth. He had heard from his father-in-law but once in all that time—shortly after the marriage in the registrar's office—and the letter had been returned unopened. He was curious to see how the old lawyer would receive him.

When he walked into the dark passage, he could almost fancy that he was on the same errand as before, that not an hour had elapsed since his first fateful visit, that the marriage was a dream, that his love was but a chimera of the brain.

As he stood, with a trembling heart, the door opened and a boy rushed out with a bundle of papers. Was it the same boy? He walked into the office and the old hawk stepped forward just as he had done five years before.

He did not look one day older, and appeared to be wearing the same rusty black suit and unwashed linen.

"Good morning, sir," he said. "Is Mr. Caddick within?" asked Sir Charles.

"Mr. Caddick?" "The hawk glanced at him quickly, and a smile wreathed his thin lips. He had not recognized Sir Charles Hastings at first. He did so now.

"Is Mr. Caddick within?" repeated his baronet.

"I beg pardon, Sir Charles," replied the hawk. "I did not know you at first, Mr. Caddick is not here—he has—"

"Left? Gone away?" "Yes. Will you step into my private office? The business is mine now. I still practice in the old name. I hope I can be of some service to you. I am Ebenezer Lupus; I was Mr. Caddick's managing clerk for thirty years."

Fads and Fashions.

Many suits and frocks of wool rep have the lower part of the sleeve and the vest made of flowered organdie or Paisley silk. A delightful white organdie dress has three narrow Val lace trills in pale jade hue, and each trill is headed by a fold of jade organdie. French frocks of vogue show hand drawn-work in horizontal and vertical rows. Sometimes there is a tiny Val lace ruffle between each row. Although the straight-frock is still a vogue, many of the newer ones show slightly flared waists which meet the skirts at a low waistline. Organdie and gingham are used in combination for many smart frocks. The waist is usually of the organdie, the skirt, belt, cuffs, and collar being of the gingham.

Quiet Restored in Dublin

National Forces Have Situation in Hand—
Inter-University Conference—British Admiral Strikes Imperial Note.

FREE STATE FORCES IN CONTROL

DUBLIN, July 7. The activities of the Free State forces in the Provinces as indicated by latest official reports, are meeting with complete success, large numbers of the insurgents continuing to be captured. In Dublin itself, life is rapidly becoming normal.

TOOK 700 PRISONERS.

DUBLIN, July 7. Approximately seven hundred irregulars were taken prisoners by the National Army during the struggle in Dublin which was brought to a virtual close by the surrender of the remnant of Republicans in Sackville Street area on Wednesday, as nearly as can be ascertained from reliable quarters.

DISCUSSING UNIVERSITY FEDERATION.

HALIFAX, July 7. Representatives of the Universities of Acadia, Dalhousie, King's and Mt. Allison, and unofficial representatives of St. Francis Xavier, at a preliminary meeting here to-day, appointed two committees to consider the various details involved in a scheme of Federation, that would be acceptable to each of the units involved, as a basis for consideration by each, and unanimously adopted the following resolution: "That we consider that some form of confederation of existing institutions of learning in these provinces is necessary for the proper progress of our people, and we undertake to do all in our power to bring this about. Other decisions reached were to invite the University of New Brunswick and Pine Hill College to appoint representatives of the committee that will discuss the draft scheme, to invite the Government of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland to appoint delegates to the Conference, and to meet again in Halifax on August 24th.

THE EMPIRE FOR ALL, AND ALL FOR THE EMPIRE.

MONTREAL, July 7. Admiral Sir William Pakenham, commanding the British North Atlantic squadron, speaking at a special luncheon in his honor by the Montreal Board of Trade said, peace and war could not be separated. "The continuance of peace inevitably leads to war, just as a state of war inevitably leads to peace," he said. The last war taught us the Empire could not be carried along on parochial lines, and that the text in the future must be the Empire for all, and all for the Empire.

NAVIGATED BY ELECTRICAL SIGNALS.

LONDON, July 7. The Royal Mail liner Orbita, was to-day successfully navigated through the narrow channel to Portsmouth Harbor by electrical signals from the Admiralty's submarine cable, laid 20 miles out to sea with the project of lessening the fog-peril near the harbor.

(The late Sir William Nelson was born in 1851, the second son of James Nelson, of Coolisnagh, Co. Kildare. He was educated at St. Edward's College, Liverpool. He founded the well known Nelson steamship line, and was, for his services, created a baronet in 1912. He was married and had three sons and five daughters who survive him.)

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN FEWER.

"I never should have married," I heard a woman say the other day. Her friends looked astonished at what sounded like a statement of matrimonial infelicity, for she has always seemed to be happily mated.

"I don't mean," she went on to explain, "that I am dissatisfied with my husband. I would rather have married him than any man I ever met, but I don't think I should have married anyone. I am not the type that ought to marry. I am not domestic. All that kind of work comes hard to me. I would have been much more successful at office work and I like that kind of work better. And then I am very strong for personal freedom. It is hard for me to compromise and give in. I don't think I have a good temperament for a wife. I think I would have been happier and more efficient if I had made up my mind not to marry."

Clever of Her. She paused and thought a minute and then added, "Only if I hadn't married I shouldn't have known anything about the difficulties that come with married life and very likely I should have thought that being married was the only way to be happy. So I'll say that if I could have known all I know about married life and yet not have married I would have been happier."

An interesting point of view. Is it not? Clever of her to realize that she might have exaggerated the advantages of a state she had not experienced. Most people don't realize that when they are regretting things.

But I think she stopped just one step short of the full truth. What about the converse of the statement that she makes? "If I could have known all I know about married life and yet not have been married I would have been happier." Suppose she knew now all she would have known if she had not married, about the life of a middle-aged business woman, might she not alter her opinion about which is the happier course?

The Disadvantages of Marriage. She knows all about the disappointments, the readjustments, the expectations of married life, the irksomeness of doing what someone else wants to do when you want to do what you want to do.

But she knows nothing about the loneliness of unmarried life for a woman past her first youth, the terrible sense of loneliness when the family breaks up, the fear of losing her job, the left-out feeling that sometimes inundates the unmarried woman and makes her feel "all thy waters have passed over me."

We never see the disadvantages of any course we do not take. Disadvantages are things you have to learn by experience. Advantages you can see from a distance.

Husbands or Shoes. And this applies to every kind of a choice—whether it's a husband or a gown, or a house, or a place to spend the summer, or a career, or a pair of shoes.

So the next time you are smitten with the "it might have been" fever treat yourself by suggesting that thought. If you had taken the other course you would doubtless be regretting this one. I don't mean that we never make mistakes, but that all the advantages seldom lie as completely with one choice as we are apt to think.

RECEPTION TO DR. STANLEY MARTIN.

A congressional reception will be given Dr. Stanley Martin of Korea in the Presbyterian Hall on Monday night next, July 10th, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Martin is one of our own young men—a man of whom any city might justly be proud. For services rendered in connection with the Korean atrocities, the Governor-General of Korea honored Dr. Martin by presenting him with a gold medal, on behalf of the Government. On the eve of his recent departure from Korea, Dr. Martin was made the recipient of four highly complimentary addresses, one from the government officials, another from the business men, a third from the young men, and a fourth from the Church with which he was connected.

Prominent Native Clergyman

COMING BY S.S. DIGBY.

Among the passengers on S.S. Digby due Monday morning, is the Rev. J. E. Thompson, B.D., of Tintab, Minnesota. Mr. Thompson is returning to his native land on a short visit after an absence of twenty-five years. For fourteen years he labored as a missionary of the American Board in Tientsin, China, and on the death of his wife, which occurred some years ago, he returned with his children to America, where he assumed the pastorate of a Congregational Church. Many will remember the addresses given by Mr. and Mrs. Thompson during their furlough in St. John's a quarter of a century ago. He is accompanied by his two daughters, one of whom was born here, while the other claims China as her birthplace. During their stay in the city, they will be the guests of his sister, Mrs. A. A. Parsons, Forest Road.

Our Dumb Animals.

Report of Chief Agent S.P.A.—For Week Ending July 5th.

Destroyed a very valuable horse owned by Mr. Andrews at his request. The animal was suffering from colic caused by wind-sucking, and owner found it could not be cured. Sent in a horse which was very lame, working on Duckworth Street, and got another horse in the same employ to draw its load. Destroyed aged dog on Cooks-town Road which had been run over by a horse and cart on Spencer St. At the request of Mr. Crowley and Mr. Baubens Korwood shot a dog which had been a great annoyance in the vicinity of the St. Clare Home. Had a message from Mr. G. Simmons to shoot a St. Bernard dog owned by him, which had bitten his boy. Shot two aged dogs belonging respectively to Mr. Oke and Mr. John Fenelon. Both these gentlemen contributed to the S.P.A. Fund, their annual subscription. Shot a setter owned by Mr. Keats of the Rowwalk range. The dog had been fired at and wounded by a resident who blamed it for killing her hens. Reported the same to the Secretary for investigation and opinion re prosecuting. Would like to suggest to any person who may have occasion to shoot a dog, that it would be more humane to report the matter to the S.P.A. Got report of two horses that are employed on Sanitarium grounds, Topsail Road, and suffering from galls. Examined them, and ordered one to be taken off the work. This horse has been already ordered off the street twice; gave instructions to the owner as to the care of the other animal which had only a minor sore, and warned the owner, that if a recurrence, he will be prosecuted.

Dorothy Gish Picks in the Laughs.

SPLENDID SHOW SEEN AT THE NICKEL.

Charming Dorothy Gish, popular Paramount star, proved herself a highly talented comedienne as the heroine in "The Ghost in the Garret" her latest starring vehicle which was presented at the Nickel Theatre yesterday. The general verdict was that this is unquestionably the best comedy in which this popular star has been seen during the current season.

The action hinges upon the theft or manipulation of a pearl necklace, of the theft of which the heroine is accused. Her sweetheart shoulders the crime to save her, and to save him she follows the thieves into a haunted house, carrying her bulldog with her. What transpires in this spooky place, provides much relishable comedy, mingled with thrills. The production is a capital one and the support, headed by William E. Park, was all that could be demanded. Robert W. Chamber's great story, "The Dark Star," featuring Marion Davies has arrived and will be seen at this Theatre on Monday. To see this picture is to ask for more.

In the Realms of Sport.

TO-DAY'S CRICKET.

Once more the picturesque flannel clad players will enliven the green sward of St. George's Field for this afternoon at 2.30 the revival of the grand old game of cricket will take place, when the Pelicans will play the champion Shamrocks. Many of the popular idols of the past are in the lineup. The Shamrocks will play Jerry Savage, Ned Purlock, Tommy Ryan, Mike Finn, Naddy Power, Jim Foley, Jack Canning, Nix Vialcome, Sid Morris, Francis Edgem, and Ned Kerrigan; while for the Pelicans are Harry, Alec and Duke Winter, Jack Paterson, Eric Jerrett, Ron and Albert Martin, Billy Clouston, Errol Mann, H. Ellis and H. C. Hayward. A large gathering of spectators is expected to be present.

LAST NIGHTS GAME.

The final whistle last night found the Cadets and Stars with honours easy by a score of 1 to 1, both scores on penalties, but as a result it is likely, so Cadet supporters aver, that the old S.S. "George Hunt" will be scrapped as a result of the League pow-wow to-night. Up on St. George's Field it was such a night as our good old grandmothers were wont to tell "Heaven help the poor souls at sea" for a regular spanking W.N.W. breeze was blowing, with scudding clouds, and all that sort of thing. The Stars, winning the toss, elected to defend the eastern goal with the wind against them. It looked absolutely impossible they actually attempted to stem the rush of the Cadet hordes, and it was not until 25 minutes had passed that their signboard, "Reddy Shall Not Pass" was about to be the winds of heaven by Nolan's handling the ball inside the penalty line and Bill Callahan's sending one to the hot ones which even Billy Collins couldn't save. This perked up the Cadet lads whose supporters had begun to regard the contest as hopelessly, and were shivering in fear and trepidation of what would happen if the Stars crossed over with nothing but a draw. All through the Cadets forwards had banged the ball here and everywhere in the vicinity of the goal, and the Pelicans were in fact that the posts are shaky as the result of their hitting them so frequently. At half time the Stars were in front, and their onslaught brought reminiscent tears to the eyes of their supporters as they thought of the days gone by when they actually won when in spite of their terrific bombardment they could not get the piskie through. However, just 20 minutes after resuming play, Maddy handled the ball and Referee Hunt awarded a penalty. Then zing! bam! wow! up she went. It was the draw at this period, as the Cadets claimed it occurred outside of the penalty area, but evidently some of their supporters were confusing Maddy with Maddygan, thinking it was the former it was given against. Then the grand stand and side lines took a head and the pace conference was put in the shade. Of course every argument a Cadet supporter essayed was immediately rebutted by a Star ad- verser. However, when things had quieted down, Almod was given the kick, and scored amid loud cheers and jeers combined. Shot remaining distance champion Jack Bell leaves by the Irish by next week. It was Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan who sponsored the movement and secured the necessary funds. Bell will have to face a full marathon distance of 26 miles which will be something new to him, though in view of his strong finishes at 10 miles his supporters as well as he himself feel that he can do the full distance. His record for the 5 mile is 23.12 and for the 10 mile 56.33—only 9 seconds slower for twice the distance. He is in good form having been in strict training all the winter and spring. Although almost an imperative necessity it is regretted that it is not possible to have a manager sent with him, but we understand that Mr. Dobbey has undertaken to see that Newfoundland's representative is well looked after on the other side.

THE ANCIENT EXCURSE.

(Cadets declare they are the victims of rotten refereeing.)

When the mighty Julius Caesar got that wallop on the beizer he was quoted in the Roman Daily News:—

"I was jolled as sure as shooting, would never get that booting."

PROTEST WITHDRAWN.

Secretary Harris informs us this morning that Capt. Quirk has withdrawn the protest in connection with their game with the Saints. The man claimed as ineligible was Elton who has been in the country less than six months, but who it has been proved is a bona fide resident. The spirit of the rule is really to prevent visitors from competing and was never intended to apply to anyone who had really settled his stakes in the country.

BELL FOR IRELAND.

As a result of the visit of Seumas Dobbey representing the Committee of the Irish Olympic, our local long distance champion Jack Bell leaves by the Irish by next week. It was Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan who sponsored the movement and secured the necessary funds. Bell will have to face a full marathon distance of 26 miles which will be something new to him, though in view of his strong finishes at 10 miles his supporters as well as he himself feel that he can do the full distance. His record for the 5 mile is 23.12 and for the 10 mile 56.33—only 9 seconds slower for twice the distance. He is in good form having been in strict training all the winter and spring. Although almost an imperative necessity it is regretted that it is not possible to have a manager sent with him, but we understand that Mr. Dobbey has undertaken to see that Newfoundland's representative is well looked after on the other side.

Vessel Towed to Port.

SANK MARINE DOCK CRADLE.

Towed by S.S. John Green, the Lunenburg schooner Shepherd King, Capt. Himmelman, arrived in port from Harbor Grace this morning. The vessel had been on the marine dock for repairs, and fell down, smashing the cradle. The John Green, with diver Taylor and Capt. Abram Keen left for the scene and yesterday accomplished the work of clearing the vessel. The job was difficult and Capt. Keen, who supervised, deserves great credit for its successful outcome. The Shepherd King has twenty-five feet of her keel twisted and her garboard plank started. The latter was patched by Diver Taylor. When the vessel, which is of the knockabout type, and difficult to block up, fell over she broke the cradle of the dock which sank. The diver has been retained by the Dock Co. to ascertain the extent of the damage, and the possibility of salvaging the vessel. The Shepherd King had 400 tons of fish and 200 hds. salt on board at the time of the accident. She will go on dry dock here next week for repairs. Mr. Peter Cashin is her agent.

Forty-Three Years in the Public Service--The Evening Telegram

TRINITY.

Flags—With my inborn fondness for and interest in flags, not only as bits of colour that so often relieve the drab surroundings, but also because of the silent reminders of history that they constitute, or the national lessons that they teach by the presence and blending of colours—I have always owned and used a set of British flags, and as many of the flags of other nations, as my purse would enable me. I have always maintained that the American flag is the prettiest flag in the world, especially when made of silk. The horizontal stripes of this flag when undulating in a gentle breeze, is most pleasing to the eye, and this, together with the national teaching embodied in the number of the stars and stripes of the flag, places it in the front rank of national flags. The white ensign, however, of the British Navy, is, in my opinion, and without prejudice, a combination of dignity and prettiness, and this, together with the correct historical blending and placing of the crosses that make up the Union Jack in its upper corner, places it in a class by itself, as facile princeps.

This flag, like the red and blue Ensigns are sea flags, and as such are not intended for land use. The one flag that is distinctly the flag of Empire, and that which should be used on the land, by every British subject, is the Union Jack without any addition to it. When I refer to the Union Jack, I mean one correctly made; correct in colours; correct in proportions; correct in the corresponding widths of the three crosses; and correct in the placing of those crosses as silent teachers and reminders of correct British history. One has but to look at a Union Jack (as made by the official flag makers of England) with a knowledge of British history and diplomacy, to realize the beauty of the combination of the crosses, and the superior intelligence that planned their proportions and respective positions.

There should be a correctly made Union Jack in full view of the children in every school in the country, and the teacher, with a detailed, definite knowledge of its colours, proportions, and combination of crosses should conduct a flag-drill once a week; till every child in the school knows all that a British subject should know about it, and eventually be in a position to conduct the drill, and to be able to intelligently criticize a defectively made flag. With all this teaching, however, that teachers may have had in this respect, and with all the definite knowledge that they once may have possessed, I have reasons to know that a fair percentage of them, could not to-day give an instruction on the Union Jack that would embody all its meaning.

I was present at a country school in Canada when the teacher undertook to give the children a talk on the Union Jack. She said "children, the Union Jack is a wonderful flag; and it is made up of three crosses—a red cross, a white cross, and a blue cross." I had too much regard for the teacher's feelings to point out the absurdity of her statement; and yet it was not much more absurd than other statements that I have heard teachers make when talking about the same subject. Consequently, fifty per cent. of the children know little or nothing about the flag; and many, otherwise intelligent men and women, smilingly admit "I really don't know where a Union Jack is upside down or not, though I believe there is a difference."

This should not be, nor is there any reason why it should be, if British subjects took that loyal, intelligent interest in the flag, that becomes their duty. And yet, the neglected, or defective teaching that accounts for this lack of knowledge, especially among the children, is encouraged and intensified by the sale of imperfectly made Union Jacks by the leading importers of flags in Newfoundland. For instance, I have been anxious to see a flag in constant use on the motor-ferryboat between Trinity and Trinity East; and within the past month I obtained permission to do so. The only flag that could be lawfully used on such a boat is the red ensign. The flag, of necessity had to be limited to a size not usually made of bunting, so I was compelled

I ordered a stamped cotton flag for the purpose.
I ordered it from one of the leading flag importers in St. John's. In due time it came, but the Union Jack in the corner of it was printed upside down, and I returned it with this explanation. I ordered again from two other leading firms that import and supply flags, but with the same result—the same imperfectly made flag—the same embodiment of incorrect British history. Again I returned them and to date I am unable to find a flag the size I require, properly made. Surely this should not be. Surely this need not be. Surely the order in Japan or Germany (or wherever such flags are made) to see that those who make them understand how to do so, and to reject all that are imperfectly made. Surely the fear of Empire (of whatever material it is made), is worthy of this care and attention, especially as those cotton flags, because of their cheapness, are those most largely used by the children, and most often used on festive occasions to represent the greatest Empire of the world.

Holy Baptism—A baptism is always deeply and seriously interesting because of its divine origin, and the spiritual benefits that God has associated with it. The administration of that Sacrament at Evensong in St. Paul's Church, on Sunday last, was attended by the Rev. Canon Pittman, Mr. William Jenkins and Mrs. Pittman were those of our oldest citizens, and the child was named William Kelson. The mention of this name in a Trinity congregation, could not fail to call up many interesting memories of the distant past, when one who bore that name was associated with Robert Slade in the historic business of Slade and Kelson a hundred years ago. The William Kelson, however, after whom this child is named was not that William Kelson, but the father of Mrs. Pittman, who was drowned on his way from Catalina to Trinity in 1835.

The body of Mrs. Louisa Woolridge, widow of John Woolridge, was laid to rest on Sunday afternoon in St. Paul's Cemetery. Mrs. Woolridge was a well known and respected member of the community, and a large number of people paid their last respects, and took part in the funeral service. She was 74 years old. May she rest in peace.

Mr. Hutchings, representing McMurdo & Co., registered at Garland Hotel last week and called on his customers. Glad to see him, though business is dull.

Mrs. Ethel Lockyer's house looks well after a thorough repairing by the carpenters, and in its new dress of grey paint with white facings.

Mrs. Hiscock (Postmistress) is having extensive repairs and painting done to her house, such as will improve the fabric, as well as add to the good appearance of the town.

Those who have got into the habit of coating their fences and outhouses with lime, have done, and are doing the same this year. It may seem a small thing to do and to refer to, but it means much to the clean appearance, and healthfulness of the town. Keep at it, and we will back you up.

Nurse Tibbs and her sister Miss Ruth, came by Monday's express, to spend their annual holiday by breathing native air at Trinity. They are both doing themselves and Trinity credit in their respective callings, and we extend best wishes for a pleasant holiday.

Rev. C. M. Stickings, and Messrs. Somerton and White, who attended all the meetings of the Synod, have returned and report an interesting, pleasant, and helpful session.

Rev. W. J. Morris has been elected President of the Methodist Conference recently in session at Grand Bank. Mr. Morris is one of the Trinity boys who has made good, and we are proud of him. With a pardonable pride we call attention to the fact that the Synod of the Church of England just held at St. John's, and the Conference of the Methodist Church just held at Grand Bank, have each been presided over by a Trinity man.

In a letter from Mr. Chas. W. Morris (son of the late Capt. Jacob Morris) from Chicago, we are glad to hear that he intends to visit Newfoundland and Trinity this month. We were boys together at Mr. Collis's school fifty years ago, and the pleasure of meeting again will be mutual.

Miss Kate and Miss Etta May Fowlow, of St. John's, came by Monday's express to spend their summer vacation with father, mother and friends at Trinity. We wish them all the pleasure that Trinity (with fine weather) offers visitors at this time of year.

Mr. Fred Morris is shipping a large number of fine salmon to the cold storage plant in St. John's. Salmon are plentiful, and the fishermen maintain that plenty of salmon always means scarcity of codfish.

Capt. Barbour is attending to the good appearance of his fine property. A course of concord grey paint with white facings, would make it delightfully fresh-looking in its ideal situation.

Mrs. William White, her sister Miss Taylor, Miss Mollie White and Miss Marie Erikson came by Wednesday morning's express from St. John's; and all glad to be in Trinity again; and we are glad, too.

Miss Richarda, of Herring Neck, who has been teaching at Old Bonaventure, returned to her home by the Prospero.

Little Joan Lockyer died this morning.

Commemoration Sunday.
This Sunday, since its appointment to keep in mind, and to learn the lessons from the honoured dead of Beaumont Hamel, has been deeply interesting to the congregation of St. Paul's, Trinity. At the eleven o'clock celebration of Holy Communion their names were borne upon our hearts before God and associated with our prayers for those who have departed this life in God's faith and fear. Again at Festal Evensong, in spite of so many people being away, the church was filled with a congregation in fullest sympathy with the special object of the service. A subdued, solemn dignity pervaded the whole service. The special hymns were sung as in the presence of the blessed dead of whom they reminded us. The special lessons were pregnant with reminders of the condition of the holy dead, and the lessons to be learnt by us from their noble deeds.

The sermon, from the text: "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city," was an effort to draw from the actions of those who fought during the war with Germany, the lessons to be learnt by us in our spiritual warfare, and in the moral battles that we have to fight in daily life. The preacher reminded the congregation that the battles of peace are greater than the battles of war; and that they call for bravery and patience, such as cannot be surpassed in any camp, or on any earthly battle field. The singing of that beautiful hymn, "The Supreme Sacrifice," a verse of God Save the King, and the Benediction, brought to a close a service fraught with sad memories, happy thoughts, and important lessons.

"Yet in Sacrament and prayer, Each with other hath a share; Hath a share in tear and sigh Watch, and Fast, and Litaney."

Answers to Correspondents.

A.L. Greenspod.—Thank you for your kind and appreciative letter. I am glad to hear that you and yours derive so much pleasure from my week-end notes. I write largely for Trinitarians at home and abroad; but neither I nor they begrudge a share of interest to others who may find something interesting in those notes. I will write particulars re that you ask for.

M.R.S.—I don't remember just how many years ago it is since the oil vats were removed at Brookings. They were a necessary part of the seal-fishing industry in the days, when all the fat brought in by the fleet of brigs and topsail schooners was rendered into oil by the sun. I can visualize them, and smell them still without much effort, and they disappeared, unaccompanied by many regrets.

I will consider it a favor if you will allow me to add my testimonial to the many hundreds you no doubt have in praise of the great results effected by the D.D.D. Prescription. I was a sufferer for two years with eczema on the legs and ankles. I tried three or four different doctors and none of them did me any good. I got tired of trying their remedies. I then went to a skin specialist but he was no better than they. I was reading the Sunday paper and happened to see your ad. I am very glad that I did. I secured a trial bottle of D.D.D. and it did me so much good that I sent for a dollar bottle, also a cake of soap. That is all I used, and I am perfectly well. I have advised several others to use it and the results have been the same. You are at liberty to use my name for I consider D.D.D. the best remedy in use.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE RETURN.
You can pack it all under the roof, the laughter and song and the praise And all that the world has to give to brighten the toil burdened days; You can travel for gold and for fame, for months and for years you may roam, But vain is the joy you shall win unless you can bring it back home.

The beauty of life doesn't lie in the distance or over the sea, The goals which men seek may be far, but the road and familiar trees, The street where the loved ones await and the soft lights of welcome that burn, Are all that make victory sweet, and to these must the toiler return.

The glitter of gold has no charm except for the miserly few, The lure of it lives in the joys it can give and the deeds it can do; Nor for itself would men live alone in a wind-beaten shack, Then battle the mountain for gold for the pleasure of bringing it back.

It all must come home at the end, the glory, the wealth and the fame, We must bring it back home at night, the sting of the failure and shame; And when the long struggle is through and we turn with the prize in our pack, The thing which makes victory sweet is the pleasure of bringing it back.

Concert at Belvedere.

FINALE TO GARDEN PARTY.
A very enjoyable impromptu concert took place in the new play Hall at Belvedere last night as a fitting finish to the Garden Party of Wednesday last. Mrs. J. Harris presided. The first item was a pleasing piano solo by Miss Sheila Conroy. Miss Thorneburn then recited, and Master Martin, son of M. E. Martin, fairly brought down the house with his "Irishmen All." Miss Barbara Gibbs sang a very pleasing solo and a special class of orphans rendered "The Flag of Newfoundland," with drill, faultlessly. Miss Mary Harris scored twice, as well as Miss Ida Howlett and Miss Miss Halley, gave a dancing exhibition that delighted everyone present. Mr. Robert Walsh gave an Irish recitation and the National Anthem closed a very enjoyable evening.

JACK BELL OFF BY DIGBY.
Through the efforts of Rev. Father O'Callaghan, Newfoundland will have one representative in the Irish Olympic which opens at Dublin on August 5th. A Committee was formed to make necessary arrangements, and having secured the requisite finances, Mr. J. Bell, our local long distance runner, is being sent off by the S.S. Digby, which leaves here on Tuesday next. Bell made a big showing at the Halifax sports last year when he took second place in the 10 mile road race. At the Irish Olympic the course will be 26 miles. The Marathon is the big event of the meet and competitors from all over the globe will be taking part. That Bell will hold his own goes without saying and his numerous friends wish him a jolly and successful trip while all Newfoundland will be looking forward to the race with increased interest.

CRIME AND CRIMINALS.

Their Punishment and Reformation

By OBSERVATOR.

SOME FAMOUS FEMALE OFFENDERS.

By their nature, of course, women are less physically powerful than men, and seldom get rid of their victims by force. In this connection an eminent American authority on criminology observes:—"Very slowly and with circumspect eyes, are women, and when they take to homicide, it is usually by way of poison. As a matter of fact, poisoning is a crime peculiarly attractive to the female offenders." It is worthy of note here that our criminal records for the past century or more contain only two cases of homicide in which women were implicated. The first to whom I refer was that of Catherine Snow, who suffered the extreme penalty on the 21st day of July, 1824. She, with Tobias Manderville and Arthur Spring, her accomplices, had been convicted and sentenced to death in the preceding January, and the two were executed. But her sentence was not then carried out, owing to the state of her health. She was, later on, hanged from the window of the Old Court House where the building now occupied by the Departments of Justice and Public Works stands.

JUDGE BOULTON AND THE JURY.

Judge Boulton was Chief Justice at the time. His name was Henry John, and he came here from Canada. By the way, a good story is told of his inospitality by a friend of the late Bishop Strachan, the fine old Anglican prelate of Toronto. Judge Boulton, in a hot argument with a young lawyer, committed the unpardonable crime of stopping the bottles at the Bishop's table. The latter, it is said, stood it for a few minutes; then he called out in his broad Scotch:—"Henry John, pass the bottles; ye're nae in yer own house noo, mon." However, the following are the names of the jury who convicted the woman Snow:—Thomas Buckingham, John Lang, Thomas Edstrom, George Lewis, Patrick Byrne, William Buckley, Jas. Tubrid, Patrick Maher, Richard Treigan, Robert Rudford, Valentine Merchant and Arthur Stewart—all then prominent citizens of St. John's.

THE OTHER CASE MENTIONED.

The other case was that of Johanna Hamilton. She and Patrick Geehan were sentenced to be hanged on the 1st July, 1872, for the murder of Geehan's wife and vice's brother (Garret Sears) at Harbor Grace on Nov. 21st, of the previous year. The execution of Geehan took place in accordance with the decision of the Court; but, for obvious reasons, Hamilton's execution was deferred and her sentence subsequently commuted to imprisonment for life. She finally obtained her release and left for the United States, where, it is said, she still resides.

REMOVING HUSBANDS AND CHILDREN.

As I have already said, in England and elsewhere, poisoning used to be a "peculiarly attractive method" of committing homicide. Rebecca Smith confessed on a scaffold, when about to suffer for poisoning her baby, one month old, that she had already poisoned 7 other children; Cresham, imitating the harridans who invented and sold Aqua Tofana, confessed that she had for years carried on a large business in removing husbands, both her own and others. Catherine Wilson was a wholesale poisoner whose foul practices were in all cases inspired by greed. Fanny Oliver used prussic acid to get rid of a husband who was insured in a burial Society; and Madame Lafarge, whose case, being enveloped in much mawkish sentimentality, attracted world-wide attention at the time, did her husband to death with arsenic, the true "bunglers" or "bunglers'" weapon, and its symptoms and the traces it leaves are so easily detected.

THE GREATEST POISONER OF ALL.

However, the typical female poisoner, was Anna Twaniger or Anna Schoulen, known as the German Brinvillers, whose crimes were committed about the commencement of the present century. Twaniger was of small stature, thin, deformed, her sallow, mesagre face deeply furrowed by passion as well as by age. Mock sensibility and weak moral sense and an undoubted taste for dissipation, led her into evil courses at an early age, and left her at fifty reduced to the greatest poverty, friendless, and at her wife's end to live.

THE POWER TO GRATIFY EVERY INCLINATION.

Her attachment to poison was based upon the proud consciousness that it gave her the power to break through every restraint, to attain every object, to gratify every inclination. She could deal out death or sickness as she pleased, torture all who offended her, or stood in her way. As time went on she became an expert toxicologist, mixing and giving poison was her constant occupation. When sentenced to Capital punishment she told the Judge that her death was fortunate for mankind, as it would have been impossible for her to discontinue her trade of poisoning. There can be no question that Twaniger fully fills up the type of "born" criminal. Of female criminals it may be remarked, as it was once said of the British Infantry by their French antagonists:—"They are the best in the world, but, thank God, there are very few of them!" The female criminal may not exactly deserve to be called "the best," but she is certainly entitled to the foremost place in the gallery of crime.

A FEW MORE REMARKABLE INSTANCES.

Here are a few more remarkable instances of revolting female criminality.

In England, Hannah Dobbs, strangled a lodger and dragged her body downstairs to bury it among the ashes in a disused cellar. Dribana, the French cook, who murdered Madame Riel in Park Lane, did much the same. Female cruelty of a still more revolting kind was displayed by Mrs. Brownrigg and the two Melcayards; the first of whom flayed her parish apprentice to death, having first starved and shamefully illused them. The latter were milliners who tortured their employees under the most disgusting circumstances, killing them with refined cruelty and afterwards chopping their bodies to pieces. But the crimes just referred to were, for the most part, committed in days gone by. We seldom hear of such revolting deeds in "our more enlightened times," not any rate, on this side of the Atlantic.

ARE WE IMPROVING OR OTHERWISE?

Now, the questions arise: Are we improving or otherwise. Have we more crime or less crime in proportion to our population? As the result of all our education, Church extension movements, miscellaneous Salvation Armying, and the like, have we been able to make any appreciable diminution in the number of crimes committed? I ask these questions, much as a passenger on board a vessel which has sprung a leak runs to the officer who takes soundings from time to time to ascertain whether the pumps are gaining on the water or the water on the pumps. The answer of the Judicial statistics is, that slowly and steadily, the pumps are gaining on the water, but there has been nothing like the diminution of crime which superficial observers have been led to infer from external appearances.

A SERIOUS OBSTACLE TO PROPER PUNISHMENT.

That the administration of justice, as it relates to trials for crime, needs marked amendment is certainly manifest. The Court, before sentence of those convicted, should be required to investigate, if possible, the history, antecedents, and surroundings of the accused. Then the sentence should be adapted to the ascertained character of the guilty.

THE GROWING HUMANITARIANISM.

The growing humanitarianism, or, as some are pleased to call it, benevolence, is too often a runaway sympathy. No more serious obstacle to the proper punishment of criminals exists than excessive sympathy, that exhausts itself on the guilty, and never considers the suffering, injury affliction, and devastation the criminal has inflicted in the act for which he is tried and convicted. He is the sole object for pity. He who effusively pities or manifests this sympathy is rarely other than a thoughtless or an unconscious apologist of crime.

PRISON DISCIPLINE AND REFORMATORY INFLUENCE.

The discipline of the prison in recent years has been such as to make the reformatory influences as potent as possible, and to so habituate the convicts to a life of industry and regularity that they may yet be of some service to themselves and the country in general. I do not believe in the ultra reformatory ideas of those people who are manifestly incompetent to discuss such matters, by means of lack of contact and practical association with prison management; nor that morbid philanthropy which prescribes for the life-long hardened criminal a long-feiled neighbor-as-yourself doctrine, that would treat the convict with flowers, ice-cream, music and light literature as a means of reformation.

HOW TO PRODUCE THE BEST RESULTS.

From long experience in handling prisoners I am in a position to know that right, exacting, and impartial discipline, good plain food, and regular hours of labor at some industry that keeps the convict mentally and physically active, is the reformatory method which will produce the best results in institutions of this kind. If the convict, on his reception into prison, is subject to a careful and searching examination; his antecedents and life's history ascertained, the neglect of his conduct in youth, his disposition and depraved instincts ascertained, then the reformatory means, as suggested, by experience alone, can be applied. The success depends upon a thoughtful and careful application of the remedy which experience has suggested as best suited to the needs of each individual case.

ONE OF THE WORST PRESENT-DAY CRIMINALS.

One of the most notorious criminals of the present day is Horatio Bottomley, the editor of John Bull, who has just been sentenced to seven years' penal servitude for premeditated fraud. "His case," says the Graphic, "suggests some of those familiar clichés. 'The mills of God grind slowly.' 'Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel'—which he has been throwing off with Falstaffian gusto for too many years. On looking back on his career since the Hamard affair in 1883, one is amazed at the glibness of the public, and at his own immunity. One is also shocked to think of the truculent attacks he made on decent men with whom he disagreed, and of the enormous waste of the judges' time and of the taxpayers' money in trying to bring him to book."

A MONARCH OF HUMBUGS. The talented editor of the Observer.

Mr. J. L. Garvin, in commenting in Bottomley's case, says:—"Notoriety may love the historic permanence of fame, and Mr. Bottomley will always be regarded as a monarch of humbugs. In colossal charlatanism we question whether he ever had his equal in real life. For parallels we have to turn to literature, where, however, no single character expressed him. He combined the hard soul of Tartuffe with some of the human fascination of Falstaff. He could squeeze his victim dry and lift champagne over a mass of human misery. He could exploit the very trenches and invoke both God and the Bible for the desecration of both life and death. He could be a cruel bully towards man and woman. Yet at other times his humor and indulgence, the most pathetic of all his gifts, softened public judgment, and his composure had a classic stability."

"HIS PEN SWAYED THE VULGAR."

"He had in speaking the irrational powers—a wonderful calm of voice and easy weight of gesture. These rare accompaniments of incredible platitude could make purple, men full of dinner, rock with enthusiasm or become moistened with pathos. In writing, his pen like no other swayed the vulgar by sentimental commonplace. He made John Bull the oracle of the trenches, and the friend of a million homes. The Sunday Pictorial promised from week to week "another powerful article from Mr. Bottomley." He was the biggest man that ever dared to be his own lawyer. When his vogue was at its height towards the end of 1916, even serious men asked whether he might not become the dictator of Britain if the war went worse. In the end, like all Napoleons, he did for himself by the sheer madness of foolishness in rapacious adventure. The droll and grim, the debasing and fantastic story has come to an end more sorrowful and chastening than death."

WHAT IS CALLED INHERENT DEPRAVITY.

Let me say here that there is a class of convicts of the Bottomley type in almost every community that must attract the earnest consideration of society. The inherited cause of crime, or what is called "inherent depravity," for want of a thoroughly critical analysis, produces results that seriously imperil society. Reconvictions of adult violators of the law seem to have no influence to prevent them from committing crime over and over again without even a semblance of regret. They are without moral force to restrain themselves; they are unable to resist. Crime is a vocation they follow without considering the consequences. They seem to be insensible to imprisonment. It presents no deterrent influence. When they come back to the Penitentiary, it is looked upon by them as a matter of course. They regard it as an incident of their persistent adherence to their business in life.

And MESSRS. BAIRD & CO., P. O. Box 157, St. John's, Newfoundland, are the resident wholesale agents.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM TO SOLVE.
 How to treat these individuals is a difficult problem to solve. Harshness in their discipline is objected to by the philanthropist. If a severe although most reasonable application of punishment should be adopted, then cruelty is charged. The excessive humanitarianism accept the charge as positive proof. Sympathy is aroused without any information on the subject, this vague and reiterated assertion is made, till the question arises, whether the convict is to be subjected to a justly merited discipline, or whether such a method is to be rejected. To relax the merited treatment is a premium on reconvictions of these persons, for they feel that they will not be required to obey the regulations of the discipline; rather, that they will secure the kind consideration that is given to the most deserving prisoners. And so this prisoner comes again and again for crimes perpetrated against innocent people and the safety of society.

IMPRISONMENT ONLY WHEN ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY.

Whenever and wherever possible I would suggest that a fine or suspended sentence be substituted for imprisonment. To send men to prison is ordinarily to make criminals of those who come for the first term. The infamy incurred by coming to prison, the awful sense of evil which is prevalent in the prison of which the convicted man becomes a part, the banishment from society, which in a certain painful sense is to be perpetual—all go to destroy one's sense of susceptibility and to create despair.

CRIMINALS NOT CRIMINALS AT HEART.

We still have another class in the Penitentiary, who are not wilful criminals, who have committed crime in an unguarded moment, some in the heat of passion, others by taking funds that did not belong to them. They fully expected to pay the amount without the matter being found out; but circumstances unforeseen prevented them from carrying out their original intentions. This class of criminals are not criminals at heart; they confess the wrong done, and are patiently serving out their sentences, anxiously looking forward to the day of release, when they can have an opportunity to prove to the people by good works that they are not criminals by nature, but victims of circumstances. For this class of criminals no special influences are necessary to induce them to reform; their reformation had commenced long before entering the prison.

A HINT TO THE GENIAL JUDGE MORRIS.

As a hint or suggestion—call it what you will—to the genial Judge Morris, of our Central District Court, let me mention here that a magistrate in one of the suburban sections of New York recently rendered a decision in the case of nine young men of the neighborhood who, after many complaints had been lodged against them, were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. It was explained that they had stood on the street corners, disturbing the passers-by and insulting young women. Their ages varied from sixteen to twenty-six. After hearing the officers' statement, the magistrate instructed the probation officer of the court to see that, during the coming six months, each of these young men went to church every Sunday morning; that they should read good useful books from the public library, and that they should remain at home evenings except when permitted to go out by the probation officer, and then only on a strict time schedule. This arrangement was fully explained to the accused, with the additional information that any dereliction on their part would result in arrest and punishment. If obedient to the order of the Court, at the end of the six months' probation they would be brought again before the magistrate and discharged. They were meanwhile on good behavior.

A VERY GOOD EXAMPLE.

It is hardly necessary to add that this worthy magistrate has set a good example—I had almost said taken the Solomonic model in dealing with these young offenders. He has given them a chance to make good, and to avoid the stain of incarceration. Their offense is one altogether too common, not only in the crowded city, but in outport towns and settlements. It would be an excellent thing

Fashions and Fads.

Collars and sleeve sections of ecru embroidered batiste are used on frocks of navy blue twill. The newest blouses of crepe de Chine feature full long peasant sleeves and scarf girdles.

Hand-embroidered blocks of black and colored silk are charming on a dress of white linen.

A plaited giraffe of narrow black velvet ribbon is used on a dress of primrose-colored georgette. White linen blouses are strikingly embroidered in red, green and blue.

With metal thread outlines. Quite a few evening gowns have adopted the low U-shape front line instead of the bateau contour.

A little French sweater has a "skirt" of black and white blocks, and a stand-up collar of the blocks. The most fashionable materials include the challis patterns and calico print designs on crepe de chine. A dress of French voile has bands of square mesh net in which bold patterns have been applied. Bodies, panels, girdles, and insets show a tendency to adopt the lattice work of beads as adornment.

THE EINSTEIN STUFF.

The Einstein theory's doubtless grand, but it's too hard to understand. To make it worth my while; my dome of thought is gray and old, and it might crack if asked to hold a burden of that style. When soulful people come to me to talk of relativity I tell them to vamoose; I have the courage to admit that Einstein hasn't made a hit compared with Mother Goose. I have the courage to declare that I've no golden hours to spare for theories punk or grand, which make me sit up in my bed and wear a poultice on my head, if I would understand. I read my treasured Mother Goose, which jars no mental rivets loose, with its sustaining rhyme; I read of cats abducting spoons and milk cows jumping over moons, and have the blamemat time. And what I learn from Mother Goose, I find is of the greatest use, it helps me day by day; but if I mastered Einstein's bunk it wouldn't bring me in a plank, or help provide the hay. It would enable me, perhaps, to look with pity on the chaps who pass up all such lore; who store their minds from almanacs, and all day long get down to tacks and do the useful chore.
