CHAPTER XIV.
 Ernscliffe retired to his sleeping chamber that night with happy visions of the future crowding upon his brain. The evening had been the most delightful within his memory, and he resolved to be awake for an hour, and map out his plans for the coming week—plans which were to mark a vigorous course of action, for his sweet love's sake.
 Instead of this he dropped to sleep at once, even forgetting to draw down the blind or close the window.
 The air was so soft and warm that he had not experienced any inconvenience by neglecting the latter, and the moonlight was too beautiful to be shut out all at once.
 When he awoke there was no moonlight, and the air that rushed through the open window appeared to be almost as if it played over his face.
 He half turned over, and as his senses became more alert he noticed a red glow against the sky.
 He sprang out of bed with a bound, positive that there was a fire not far away. He listened intently, and heard the crackling of burning wood, while in his nostrils was the unpleasant odor of smoke from vegetation that was but half decayed.
 Within two minutes, he was out of his room and listening intently in the passage. There was not a sound to indicate that a single person was aware of the fire except himself.
 He turned and fetched the candle, and he had left burning on his dressing-room table, and walked downstairs and out into the night.
 The air seemed full of the pungent odor of burning wood, and Ernscliffe ran quickly in the direction of the flames, which now and again shot upward, though it was evident that they were gradually losing force.
 Everywhere around the darkness was profound, and only a faint rim of the moon was to be seen deep down in the horizon. In solemn tones the clocks boomed the hour of two, and Ernscliffe found himself in the park, hurrying toward the bright glow in the heavens.
 He was near to the scene of the fire now, for the air was dense with smoke. His throat ached and his eyes smarted.
 But for the red cloud that seemed to hover before him his progress would have been difficult. Then he felt a great heat upon his face, and passed, horrified, within a hundred feet of a great mass of smoldering stuff that had but a few hours before been Zeba's cottage.
 Not a single board of the little home that she had valued so highly remained ed, and the fire had made a huge clearing in every direction.

 Ernscliffe deliberated for a few minutes upon the best course to pursue. What had become of the Indian woman? Had she fired the cottage in her insane rage, to prevent it from being molested and gone?
 He turned toward the house again, and had proceeded but a few paces when he was conscious of a sudden rush of air, a blow on the head which staggered him, and a confusion of sounds in the ears.
 He struck out blindly and stretched at something. It was a man, for he heard a savage oath, and was conscious of being attacked from behind. A shower of blows fell upon his head, and all became blank.
 When Ernscliffe recovered consciousness he was in bed. The sun was shining merrily into his room, and for a few moments he wondered if he had a bad dream, for the events of the night before were far from clear in his mind.
 He passed one hand to his aching head, and discovered that it was swathed in bandages. So it was no dream, and, luckily, there was not much the matter with him. He felt sure of that, and was thankful for it.
 He looked at the timepiece on the mantle, and saw with a pang of dismay that it was eleven o'clock.
 At that moment the door opened, and Dr. Denver came in, followed by a servant.
 "Ah! I expected to find you recovered by this time, Mr. Ernscliffe. My name is Denver, and I am Sir John Sterne's family doctor."
 "Yes," responded the artist, "and there is very little the matter with me, thank Heaven. My head aches, that is all."
 "Nevertheless, I cannot permit you to go downstairs to-day," Dr. Denver said. "You will perhaps be surprised to learn that you received a scalp wound requiring a dozen stitches. I am here to dress it again, and then you shall have some breakfast. The cause of your long insensibility was a strong opiate, and you have slept remarkably well."
 Ernscliffe submitted with a bad grace to the doctor's orders, but after his head had been dressed he was permitted to leave his bedroom, in preference for the sitting-room adjoining.
 "Now, Dr. Denver," he said, "before you leave me I want you to answer me one or two questions. Where was I found, and by whom?"
 "In the park, and by Stretton, the gamekeeper, very soon after you had met your accident."
 "Accident!" echoed Ernscliffe. "I met with no accident, sir, but was attacked in the dark by at least two men. And what of Zeba?"
 "She perished in the fire," replied the doctor. "I do not think that there is a doubt of it. I wonder that it has not occurred before."

 "Poor creature!" Ernscliffe muttered; then added: "I woke about two o'clock and saw the glare of fire against the sky. I stole quietly out, and was horrified to find that nothing was left of the Indian nurse's cottage but a heap of smoldering fire. I had half resolved to arouse the men-servants, when I was savagely attacked before and behind. I only remembered being beaten to the earth, and everything becoming a blank."
 "You place a new light upon the matter," the doctor observed. "I was under the impression that you had been injured by a falling tree. The question of an attack being made upon you never once presented itself to my mind. If the cottage was deliberately fired, there is much more in this than appears on the surface, for the reactor was broken into last night and several valuable papers stolen. You say that two men assaulted you? It is quite possible that the same men are guilty of Zeba's death, and of the burglary at the rectory. Mr. Vallance, who is, in a measure, Sir John Sterne's confidant, has a theory which he hesitates to put into words at present. The matter is already in the hands of the police, and your part in the adventure will be interesting to them."
 "And Miss Sterne?" asked Ernscliffe, hesitatingly.
 "Naturally, she is very much upset. The nurse's death is so horrible. It is my belief that she was first murdered, and then the cottage fired to hide the crime. The first object was doubtless robbery alone—not the mere theft of her money, but the theft of documents and surrounded by little-known forms of marine plant life, a squad of divers has been busy engaged for four years recovering the £7,000,000 worth of bullion that went down with the great liner Laurentic.
 The story of their achievements, when fully told, will read like an Arabian Nights romance. The divers, highly skilled members of the Navy, have in the aggregate spent months under the waves blasting away many obstructions and sending to the surface box after box of gold. No treasure hunt has even been more successful."
 Training the Beginner.
 Some little-known facts about divers and their methods were given to the T-B. man by the head of the firm of Siebe, Gorman, and Co., the best-known submarine engineers in the world.
 Before a man can become a diver he must be passed as medically fit in every way, while frequent examinations by a doctor are carried out during training. To begin with, the novice, in complete diving kit, is submerged in from ten to twenty feet of water.
 His first jobs consist of locating lost articles and sifting them in the approved fashion, so that they can be sent safely to the surface. Clearing propellers of fouling material, recovering cables, and removing rust from ships' bottoms are other jobs that fall to the lot of the beginner, who cannot qualify as a "full-fledged" diver until he has worked at a depth of 120ft.
 A diver first removes his own clothing and put on an assortment of underclothing, including woollen vests, pants, stockings, and a thick jersey with a woollen cap. The shoulder pad is then put on, after which the diver has literally to be forced into his deep-sea armour. The weight of the complete outfit, including boots that weigh 15lb. each, and 80lb. of lead to shield the shoulders, is 175lb.
 The art of diving, apart from that associated with swimming tests, has been known well over 2,000 years. Divers were employed during the defence of Syracuse (215-213 B.C.) to remove barriers which had been sunk in the harbor. It is recorded that Alexander the Great was lowered in-

MRS. LINDQUIST TELLS WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Kansas City, Mo.—"I was left in a very serious condition after childbirth and no one thought I could ever be any better. Then came the 'Change of Life' and I was not prepared for what I had to suffer. I had to go to bed at times to be perfectly quiet, as I could not even stoop down to pick anything from the floor. I did not suffer any pain, but I was decidedly nervous and could not sleep. For nearly two years I was this way, and the doctor was frank enough to tell me that he could do no more for me. Shortly after this I happened to see in a newspaper an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a few days the medicine was in the house and I had begun its use and I look regularly until I was well. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to others when I have the opportunity."—Mrs. MAY LANGRISH, 324 Independence Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

The World's Loneliest Job

DRAMAS OF THE DIVER'S LIFE.
 One hundred and twenty feet beneath the waves that swirl off the Donegal Coast, among rocks covered with the slime of the ocean depths, and surrounded by little-known forms of marine plant life, a squad of divers has been busy engaged for four years recovering the £7,000,000 worth of bullion that went down with the great liner Laurentic.
 The story of their achievements, when fully told, will read like an Arabian Nights romance. to the sea in a machine specially designed to keep out the water and admit light. Diving by means of air tubes was also practised at this period.
 One of the forerunners of the modern diving dress was that invented by a German marine engineer, whose device, a cylindrical arrangement with air pipes attached, was in use up to a hundred years ago, when Augustus Siebe produced a form of diving dress, not unlike that worn now, although it possessed many crudities that were not eliminated until many years later.
 Attacked by an Octopus.
 The greatest depth at which a diver has worked with success is 182ft., the hero of this exploit being a Spanish diver, who recovered £1,200 in silver from a wreck off Finisterre. It has been proved, however, that it is possible for a diver in certain circumstances to work at the depth of 210ft.

 A remarkable feat in the history of modern diving is that although divers all over the world wear suits of British design and make, no accident has as yet occurred as a result of faulty workmanship or defects in the material used.
 In the case of the Laurentic, attacks by giant dogfish have had to be guarded against, while on one occasion a large octopus appeared on the scene, threatening a diver with its unpleasant embraces.

CANADIAN TRADE.
OTTAWA, Oct. 19. Canadian trade expansion during the fiscal year 1923 was very satisfactory and indicated a revival in commerce and industry according to the annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce. Though the volume was much in excess of that for the years 1922 and 1921, the value in money was millions of dollars less than for these years owing to the deflation of prices. In comparison with the normal pre-war year 1914 the 1923 interchange of merchandise has increased about seventy per cent, in comparison with 1922 approximately two hundred and forty per cent. As an example of deflation of prices, while the exportation of wheat in bushels showed an increase of sixty-six per cent over 1921, the valuation in dollars showed a decrease of nineteen per cent.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GURSE.

ENVY.
Time was that a King of the olden days. Disturbed by his fretful clan. Sent ministers forth, both south and north, In search of a happy man.

"Go find me a man with his heart content. Who maketh no wish for more; Let the search be had till you find one glad. One glad with his present store."

"You have wealth," said they to a woodman tanned. "And so have your children three; You are blessed, for that gift is best. 'I would I were rich," said he.

"You have gold," they said, to a man of wealth. "You can buy what is ever sold." "Yes," said he, "but I'd happier be. With the strength of the woodman bold."

Then they found a man with a well-filled purse. And sturdy and strong was he. But he said with a sigh: "No child have I. But the woodsman there has three."

They searched them high and they searched them low. And back to the King they went. And they said: "No man in this royal clan sits down by his fire content."

"The woodsman stirs for the rich man's gold. And the rich man vows that he would give his wealth for the woodman's health. Or even his children three."

"None lordeth himself by the good Lord blessed. But counteth his neighbour glad. And is sure that he would happier be if the neighbour's joy he had."

"Oh, tell me, then," said the sorrowing king. "You have travelled the world around. Did you pass no door of rich or poor where envy was not found?"

There is none who knoweth life's joys complete. For so do God's blessings fall That all are blest as He deemeth best. But none may have them all.

"Rich Men's Wives"
Beautiful Picture
"THE RAGGED EDGE" WILL BE SHOWN SOON.

"Rich Men's Wives," the new Preferred Picture, made under the direction of Gansler, now playing at the Nickel Theatre, is a study in marital contentment, in so far as the average wife is concerned. To the woman who married a man of wealth it will prove to be a reflection of her own daily existence.

To theatre-goers in general, "Rich Men's Wives" will provide enjoyable entertainment that is out of the ordinary run of things and will reveal some of the best acting the screen has known, contributed by such favorites as House Peters, Claire Windsor, Baby Richard Headrick, Gaston Glass, Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Stedman, Mildred June, Charles Cary, William Austin, Martha Mattox, Carol Holloway and others.

Gansler displayed all his well known technical skill—in directing "Rich Men's Wives." Many of his scenes are marvels in screen reproduction, especially those that represent the actions of the swapper society set around whom the Frank Dacey-Agnes, Christine Johnston story is written.

"The Ragged Edge," based on the popular novel by Harold McGrath, will be the attraction at this Theatre soon. It's one of Goldwyn's outstanding achievements of the present year.

INTERESTING PROPECT FROM OFFICIAL SOURCE.

At the National Chamber of Trade Conference, at Manchester, a motion was proposed calling for the removal of all restrictions on half-penny postal packets.—Mr. F. J. Brakemore, a member of the Postmaster-General's Council, told the Chamber that, if commercial men were only willing to accept these temporary restrictions, they were almost sure, within the next nine or twelve months, to get a return to penny postage.—The motion was defeated by a large majority.

That Football Knee

INJURY TO PLAYERS WHICH IS DIFFICULT TO CURE.
By A MERRICAL MAN.
Every form of athletic pursuit has its special form of accident. Lawn tennis players contract "tennis elbow," horsemen get "riders' strain," while cricketers are liable to wrist strain; but at this time of year, when the stresses of "Cup ties" are at hand, the danger that gives most anxiety to partisans of sport is "football knee."

The dashing centre-forward, a trusty player invaluable to his side, makes a sharp turn in order to pass an opponent or shoots out his foot to trap a ball; he falls to the ground in evident pain; the trainer rushes on to the ground, and after a short consultation the player is carried off the ground.

Outward Twist.
This is the beginning of the trouble. It does not seem at the time that it is likely to be serious, or that the player will be out of the team for any long period. Yet the knee refuses to get right, and the unfortunate player is likely to spend many weeks hobbling about with the help of a stick. For "football knee" is a most difficult injury to cure.

The pain, at the time of the accident, is very severe, and when the patient is examined, it is found that his knee is fixed in a half-bent position. In some cases the cartilage can, by manipulation, be made to slip back into position, and the leg is freed.

Synovitis.
But even when things can be righted in this manner the patient is far from cured, as the injury the joint has sustained will cause it to fill with water. On awakening next morning the player will find that his knee-cap has disappeared in a white swelling.

This state, which is known as synovitis, can be cured by rest, and after a fortnight in bed all the fluid round the knee joint should have vanished. But the worst danger is in the fact that lying between the two bones, is the detached cartilage, ready at any moment to slip out of position again and set up another attack of synovitis.

Broadly speaking, an attack of "football knee" means that a player will be out of his side for about three months. This period will be much Canadian Olympic Squad Will Sail From St. John For Paris Early in the Winter.

TORONTO, October 14.—According to an official announcement, the Canadian Olympic hockey team will sail from St. John, N.B., on January 11th, 1924. W. A. Hewitt, Canadian Olympic hockey representative, will have charge of the team from now on, and while the team is Canadian, Peter G. Campbell will be associated with them in an advisory capacity.

The official announcement was made at a combined meeting of the representatives of the Olympic Committee, the O. H. A. sub-command the players of the Granite Hockey Club, senior O. H. A. champions and Allan Cup holders.

WONT TURN PRO.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—That he has no intention of turning professional, and that he will retire after taking part in the Olympic games hockey series, was the statement made yesterday by Harry Watson. The Granite left wing player stated that he was offered a contract four months ago by the St. Patrick's Club of the National Hockey League, but that he never had any intention of accepting it.

MOUNT ALLISON WON FROM MONCTON TEAM.

MONCTON, N.B., Oct. 15.—Mount Allison defeated Moncton senior rugby team at Sackville on Saturday by a score of 6-0. The game was marred by eight free kicks granted to the college team and was played while a heavy gale was blowing. The college half line work was loose and the men persistently fumbled the ball. The locals showed their lack of condition at half time when they were winded badly. Flood, the garnet and gold full back, was the star of the game and is easily the mainstay of his team.

MISS WETHERED HOLDS BRITISH GOLF TITLE.

GANTON, Yorkshire, Eng., Oct. 12.—Miss Joyce Wethered retained the title of English women's golf champion in the tournament closing here to-day. Miss Wethered defeated Mrs. Lodge, of Burnhill, in the final round, 8 up and 7 to play.

WILLS KNOCKED OUT HOMER.

New York, Oct. 12.—(United Press)—With a hard right-hand to the body after twenty-six seconds of the second round, Harry Wills, colored heavy-weight, knocked out Homer Smith, Kalamazoo heavyweight, here last night. Smith was floored six times, and made such a poor showing that the small crowd wondered how he had been able to go ten rounds with Luis Angel Firpo. Wills weighed 211 pounds, and Smith weighed 190 pounds.

PICTON ACADEMY WON LEAGUE GAME.

New Glasgow Players Were Defeated by the Picton County Boys By a 6-5 Score.
New Glasgow, N.S., Oct. 14.—Picton Academy Rugby team beat out the New Glasgow High School boys in a 6 to 5 battle played on the N. G. A. A. field Saturday afternoon before a crowd of five hundred spectators. The visitors made a good showing, particularly Gordon Fraser, whose long punting and great tackling prevented the local boys from running up a large total.

Fraser scored the first points of the game when he dropped the puck over the bar in the opening session on a free kick. Fraser went over the line for the first touch for safety three times. Half not converted and the visitors lead by a 6 to nothing score at the conclusion of the first period.

The New Glasgow boys outplayed their opponents in the second session and forced the visitors to touch for safety three times. Half way through the period, Williams went over the line and Nicholson converted making the score 6 to 5 in the Academy's favor. Mr. Clarke refereed. The players:

Picton Academy.—Fraser, full back; McLeod, McLellan, McPherson and Hill, halves; Griffin, McInnes and Talbot, quarters; McElna Hamilton, Beaton, Cameron, McCurdy, Delaney and Falconer, forwards.

EDMONTON HOCKEY CLUB TO PLAY IN OTTAWA, DEC. 14.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—The professional hockey season in Ottawa will open on the night of Saturday, December 1, with the first of a series of two games between the Edmonton and Ottawa teams, world series finalists of last winter. The second and final match will take place here on the night of Monday, December 3.

NEW ZEALAND HUGGY TEAM WILL VISIT ENGLAND NEXT YEAR.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 20.—The United Kingdom will next year entertain another rugby football team from New Zealand, the Antipodean Dominion having come to an agreement with the Rugby Union, the body which controls the amateur fifteen-men game in the Old Country. Twenty-nine players will travel from New Zealand and the team will play in all twenty-five matches against teams of the British Isles. The tour will end not later than Dec. 31, 1924. Tours of the United Kingdom by teams representing the Dominions began in 1901-2 when a Canadian fifteen made the trip and met with some measure of success. Canada thus initiated a form of Empire sport which has since been imitated by New Zealand, South Africa and Australia. The New Zealanders followed the Canadians in the season of 1905, their tour meeting with unprecedented success. In all their games the "All Blacks" were defeated only once, by Wales.

During the 1906 football year, the Antipodeans were followed by a South African fifteen, the "Springboks," and they duplicated the efforts of the "All Blacks." A remarkable commentary on imperial relationship was found at that time in the fact that the Springbok team contained several players who, only five years before, had been in arms against the British during the Boer War, while one of their most brilliant men was a nephew of General Foubert. An Australian team came next but since the Australians were professionals, their games were confined to the Northern Union, who have since returned the visit. Shortly after the first Australasian tour, the Northern Union teams changed their form of play to that of the Australians, discarding the fifteen-men game and adopted the thirteen-man system of play.

BECKETT'S MISERABLE DISPLAY AT OLYMPIA.

Big "Fight" Lasts Only 15 Seconds.
British boxing has suffered many rebuffs of late years, but the hardest blow of all came when at Olympia Joe Beckett was for the second time beaten in one round by George Carpenter, of France. It was as well that Beckett had informed us beforehand that the fight with Carpenter would be his last, for the Frenchman proved conclusively that we have not yet unearthed a worthy heavy-weight champion. Four years ago at Holborn Stadium Carpenter did the trick in 74 seconds, and at Olympia the total time occupied by the "great fight" was 15 seconds—including the counts. Carpenter was altogether too speedy and quick thinking for the phlegmatic British champion. Beckett walked from his corner and in tentative fashion poked out a left which Carpenter had no difficulty in evading. Carpenter manoeuvred around his man in sprightly fashion, the while Beckett seemed glued to the floor like a man in a dream. He was quite off his guard, and Carpenter, quick as a flash, jumped in with a terrific right, which carried the full weight of his body. How Beckett, warned by his previous experience, came to stand and receive the blow only he could explain. But certain it is that he was hit with great force, and although he regained his feet after six seconds, it was obvious that the blow had done its work. The referee came between the men; but Carpenter followed up his advantage in relentless fashion. Dodging around the referee Carpenter shot home two more punches that caused Beckett to hang over the lower rope, half out of the ring. Only four seconds of the count had elapsed when Beckett's brother George, who was acting as one of his seconds, threw in a towel, which landed at Beckett's feet. This act was perhaps the most astonishing feature of the "fight." The whole period that had elapsed from the going that set the men going until

The Time the Towel Came in was 15 seconds, or when time Beckett had spent at least ten seconds on the boards. Words fail to express the disappointment of the spectators as they saw the ignominious figure cut by Britain's champion. 'Twas a sad, sad day indeed for British boxing—the worst blow the sport has received in this country, which, after all, is the home of the sport. Spectators were stupefied, not to say disgusted, and after they had recovered from the shock and given cheers for Carpenter there was a liberal booing for Beckett. It was a very crestfallen Beckett that we saw in the dressing-room afterwards. All he could say at first was, "I'm sorry." Later on he remarked to our representative: "But he is fast with that right hand—it is a terror. I was just shaping up nicely, as I thought, for a fight, when over it came, and that's all there was in it. It was a case of a racehorse and a carthorse, and I am the carthorse. I am sorry." It will be recalled that a few days prior to the contest Beckett had declared that win, loss or draw, this would be his last appearance in the ring. Beckett had frequently complained that for some reason or other the British public had not taken him at his own valuation. He, however, was accorded a magnificent ovation on entering the arena. Carpenter's reception, although an excellent one, paled into insignificance in comparison. A few seconds later and a complete transformation came. Beckett was roanly "hoed" and Carpenter, idolised. M. Descamps hugged the Frenchman in a whole-hearted kiss that was motherly in its affection. It remains to add that within a few minutes Carpenter had been to his dressing-room, changed into his ordinary attire and was back at the Press table close up to the ring to calmly smoke a cigarette and give advice and encouragement to his confere, Paul Fritsch, who met Seaman Hall. The latter lost on points after 10 rounds.

BECKETT RECEIVES HIS PURSE.
Why the prize money was withheld. Major Arnold Wilson, promoter of the Beckett-Carpenter match, made the following statement in view of the hitch in the handing over of Beckett's purse:—There has been no mystery at all about Beckett's purse. The amount was deposited at his "Sporting Life" office two weeks ago. I asked the editor of that paper to suspend payment meanwhile for the following reasons: I considered there was no need of justification for the throwing in of the towel at the count of four during the second round. Beckett went down and I thought was justified in the interests of sport and the public that such a regular incident should be investigated. It has now been fully looked into and the verdict is that no impropriety was committed. The principal could not be held responsible. I consider that the test was a complete one, but short. I am also convinced that he was completely knocked out and that he would not have been able to take anything from the ring due to Carpenter for his country victory, and do not wish to see him in the ring again. Now that investigations have been completed Beckett has received his purse of $4,500. Carpenter has already been paid."

New Fox Special is Stirring Photoplay

William Fox has disproved the theory that "there's nothing new under the sun." In "My Friend the Devil," the Fox special production which opens a three days' engagement at the Majestic Theatre Monday, he brings forth upon the screen a new type of entertainment that won unanimous approval at its initial presentation here. It contains every element necessary for real entertainment—a novel plot, a powerful theme, unexcelled dramatic sequences, superlative portrayal, romance, thrills and a motive that will win the praise of every woman and child.

The photoplay is an adaptation from Georges Ohnet's famous novel, "Dr. Rameau," and to Harry Millarde must go the credit for another pictorial "Over the Hill" which is one of the triumphs of motion picture history. The entire picture of "My Friend the Devil" has been correctly mounted and the types and costumes seem to step right from the pages of Ohnet's novel. Throughout the picture dramatic sequences follow one another in rapid-fire order, building up to stirring climax.

The story deals with a man whose faith in God had been washed away when his mother is killed by lightning while he was little more than a child. He has called upon God to strike his brutal stepfather who was mistreating his loving mother.

How, after many years, his faith is restored provides a theme that grips the interest through every inch of the picture.

To Charles Richman as Dr. George Dryden must go the honor of contributing to screen literature one of the finest, most powerful dramatic portrayals in the history of motion pictures.

Peggy Shaw, as Dr. Dryden's daughter, also gives a remarkable depiction of a difficult part. Others in the cast whose exceptional work deserve mention are: Bonnie Grauer, William Tooker, Adolph Milar, Myrtle Stewart, Barbara Castleton, Mabel Wright, Alice May and Robert Frazer. The scenario was written by Paul H. Sigans.

Mount Cashel Silver Jubilee

There stands today in Bannerman Park a monument erected to the memory of an heroic Newfoundland Priest, who sacrificed his life for the orphans of his native land. The orphanage which he founded was destined to be short-lived and whilst depicting the closing of its doors, the intrepid Bishop Howley determined to invite the Irish Christian Brothers to open an Industrial School on the site of the Old Howley homestead at Mount Cashel. The Government of the day could only afford an inadequate subsidy, and the people of Newfoundland had to grapple with the enterprise from their own resources. Mount Cashel Orphanage has thus gone on for a quarter of a century, and Wednesday next, the 24th October, will mark its Silver Jubilee. How nobly and unselfishly the people of all creeds and classes have stood by Mount Cashel in all its vicissitudes, a retrospect of the past twenty-five years can tell.

The late Bro. Slattery was chosen as first superior of the Institution, and to him fell the lot of "blazing the trail." When one contrasts today the little frame cottage of twenty-five years ago with the large pile of concrete buildings in Mount Cashel, the advance the Institution has made can be easily measured. One of the outstanding items in the annals of Mount Cashel is the unchanging sympathetic attitude of the citizens towards the cause, and the Christian Brothers have from time to time borne testimony to the truly wonderful way in which the Newfoundland people rally to a charitable cause. What more concrete proof of this can be needed than to consider what the people of St. John's have made of Mount Cashel Garden Party—one of the outstanding events of the year. The entertainments held in the city theatres in aid of Mount Cashel, always command bumper houses, and lotteries, card parties and such like, are invariably well patronized.

But to review the work done at Mount Cashel; be it said that when Bro. Slattery made the necessary repairs and reclaimed from the forest some of the land in immediate vicinity and erected, with the aid of some good benefactors a dormitory and a stable, and initiated the Garden Party, he shortly after left our shores and passed to his eternal reward. The work of building up the Institution was then taken up by Bro. Ennis who to-day makes another appeal to the people to mark in a practical way this day of jubilee and free the Orphanage from all debt. The "concrete" epoch, if it may be so termed, was begun by Bro. Ennis and those sturdy buildings on the scene to-day are the work of his hands. After this period the management of Mount Cashel was taken over by Bro. Cashman, at present stationed in the Western States of America, and he was succeeded by Bro. Conway, who is still attached to the Institution. Both these superiors did splendid work during their terms of office.

Bro. Ennis again succeeded to the management and is at present engaged erecting a large building which will accommodate all the brothers and chaplains, the Rev. Fr. Savin, who in the short space he has been at Mount Cashel has accomplished great good in the spiritual line. Last Sunday at Mount Cashel the committee in charge of the Jubilee Lottery met to outline a programme for this festive occasion. It has been arranged that the Catholic Societies will each in turn hold card tournaments, the prizes as each will be books of tickets. A tag day is also to be held under the management of the lady friends of the Institution. Promenade Band Concerts will be held on Monday and Wednesday nights at the Prince's Rink at which the boys will sing and dance and the band will render the season's hits. On Wednesday evening at the rink, the concert will assume greater proportions than before, as there will be three bands in attendance, the C. L. B. and C. C. C. Bands having kindly consented to give their valuable services. In addition to the customary dance numbers each band will render concert music so that an altogether unique entertainment is in store for patrons.

The allusion to the boys reminds us of the education of the orphans of this country are receiving. As a very prominent member of the Committee remarked at the meeting on Sunday: they are enjoying educational facilities equal to those at the disposal of the children of the wealthy classes. So that it can be truly said that the aspirations of those who conceived the idea of establishing this orphanage are fully realized to-day, for instead of pauperizing and demoralizing the orphan by indiscriminate relief, they are educated and trained to be self-reliant and self-supporting, able to take their place with their fellow-man either at home or abroad, and to fight life's battle honestly, virtuously, and industriously to the end. Let the big-hearted people of Newfoundland once more rally to the orphans' call and with a united effort liquidate the small debt on the institution, which is quietly but effectively doing such good in their midst and of which they are so justly proud.

St. Andrew's Church CLOSING SERVICE (I.C.M.S.)

The closing service of the series which has been conducted at the Kirk in connection with the Rev. Dr. Hanson's visit, was held last night, and a large congregation attended, and the entire service was a fitting finale to all the good things of the week. The Pastor, Rev. R. J. Power, who has conducted the entire series of services, also conducted last night's service; and he was assisted by the Rev. B. T. Holden, the esteemed Pastor of the Congregational Church. Mr. Holden read as the lesson for the evening the first chapter of Genesis, and his rendition of this chapter was in itself a sermon, and such a sermon as a lot of us seem to forget, and to be casting aside. Before Dr. Hanson spoke, the Pastor, Mr. Power, made special reference to the week, and the great good which he believed had been accomplished; and he paid a high tribute to the learned gentleman who had honoured St. John's with his presence, and had given to the Presbyterian Church, and to all who attend, such words of wisdom and helpfulness. Mr. Power desired to thank the city ministers for their hearty co-operation during the week, and also the choir, and special singers who had contributed their quota to this good work. He very sincerely thanked the great for the abundant space they had given to the reports of the meetings, by which means many people had been enabled to keep in touch with the services. He also thanked the writer for his work. We thank Mr. Power for his words, and assure him on behalf of the press of St. John's, that as far as all measures of moral reform go, and all things pertaining to the cause of common Christianity are concerned, the press is always ready to do its part.

The Presbyterian people are to be congratulated upon having invited Dr. Hanson to visit Newfoundland; and no doubt much of the credit is due to the Pastor himself, Rev. R. J. Power, who worked so energetically in his preparation for the good man's visit. The reward and results may not be known now, but the fruits of such a week of services, and such untold addresses, as have been held and given, cannot be in vain, and somewhere in the years to come the harvest will be gathered.

Much more could be written about the services than has been published, but we have only endeavoured to convey to the public an outline of what was said and done. That Dr. Hanson's visit has done much good, there can be no doubt whatever, and his name will be often spoken of in years to come. He has seen Newfoundland at its best, and has had ideal weather, and he will no doubt carry back to the country, its people, and advancement, than he hitherto had. We feel assured the Rev. Doctor has enjoyed his visit, and that in Newfoundland will have a new exponent, and that occasionally he will say a word on our behalf. All the addresses which the Doctor gave were based upon the fundamental facts of Scripture and Church history, such as pertain to Christianity in the world over. There was no narrowness, nor anything whatever bordering on sectarianism. All his words bore a wide meaning, and were such as all men everywhere could say amen to. The good Doctor did not waste any time in reference to himself; nor to the churches nor creeds. He came with a message for the people, irrespective of their creeds, and delivered his message as one who believes fully in what he is saying; hence, his convictions accompanied his utterances. In reference to Dr. Hanson's ability as a speaker, we think that he possesses even greater power than he exercises.

We now find that our time and space are gone, and the midnight hour is upon us. Therefore, in justice to the speaker, and to the address of last night, and in justice to the writer, he craves the forbearance of his readers for a day or two, when he hopes to have prepared a report which will convey at least the spirit and conviction of last night's address. To publish any hurried comments would be a mistake.

Does Your Roof Leak?

If your roof leaks and you know where the water comes in, you can probably make it watertight with Plastic LASTY-GUM. A 5 lb. pail of Plastic LASTY-GUM costs only $1.50. Your carpenter will tell you that Plastic LASTY-GUM won't crack like cement and won't run like tar. Plastic LASTY-GUM is put on with a trowel and is guaranteed to stop leaks.

If your roof needs coating, we recommend LIQUID ELASTIGUM, which is put on with a brush. Liquid Elastigum will put a new surface on your roof and keep it in good condition. A gallon can costs $1.50, a five gallon can costs $6.00. This is the best coating for rubber roofing.

If your roof needs a new covering, we can sell you Campbell's Patent Roofing complete with fittings for $2.89 per full size roll. A roll weighs about 55 lbs., contains 108 square feet of roofing and will cover 100 square feet of roof surface. Regular price is $4.50.

In June this year we purchased 3000 rolls of Campbell's Patent Roofing from the manufacturers, who were selling their stock at auction. When our present supply is sold, new shipments will sell at $4.50 per roll. Now is the time to get a new roof covering at a bargain price.

Roofs covered with Campbell's Patent Roofing pay less for Fire Insurance than roofs covered with ordinary tarred felt. At our present low price of $2.89 per roll with fittings FREE, Campbell's Patent Roofing is cheaper than felt. Don't delay ordering, we are selling hundreds of rolls each month.

The Sunday Atmosphere.

(Montreal Star.)

A characteristic feature of the writers of the Bible is their calm unconsciousness of any other needs than those which it supplies. The evangelists do not seem to have any idea that one might legitimately have other interests than those distinctively called religious.

Now to keep up the tension of Sunday all through the week may be possible to saints and heroes, but it is not possible to ordinary men. Besides, God is the God of Monday as well as of Sunday. The business of the world is His business. Human freedom always has its limits. The human will directs forces, but the direction is limited by law. Over-ruling all the purposes of men is the purpose of God, a fact declared in the Bible times without number and recognized in all departments of human activity. Agriculture, manufacturing, industry of all kinds, governments, social institutions, family and individual life, have a divine as well as a human element. The nursery, the playground, the school, the college, the study, the field, the lecture hall, the chamber of legislation, the farm, the mill, the shop, the factory, the hospital, the asylum, the refuges for the poor, have all their Shekinah as well as the Church and the place of private prayer.

This high atmosphere has its explanation. It is perhaps due to the tension of the climber, who for a time forgets all else than the lofty heights he must reach, but who, when he returns to lower earth carries back with him henceforth never leaves him. He mounts on wings as the eagle, runs without being weary, walks without fainting that we may never forget the vision in the work of the common day. The high atmosphere is retained throughout to reveal the eternal in the temporal and that the light of the vision may shine into and on all the ways of men.

To retain this atmosphere in the work of the common day is not easy. It is indeed a matter of extreme difficulty. There are harsh facts in the lot of man on earth, the concrete expression of which is poverty and misery—some would add the necessity of labor, hard tasks, difficult duties to the catalogue. In the twilight, after a hard day's toil, we try to console one another by speaking of the dignity of labor. It is an effort after atmosphere. As a matter of fact, dignity is the one thing that labor has not. It always forces a man into strained postures, perspiration, disorder of dress and manner. Moreover, if a man was without pocket his dignity and go to work to get one. We labor because we do not know how else to meet the demands that are made upon us. These demands are importunate and inescapable. The phrase has its origin in the feudal days when all industrial forms of livelihood were considered servile in comparison with the functions of the fighting class. It was the watchword of industrialism in its struggle to assert itself against militancy.

As a matter of fact, it is a matter of little importance whether labor is dignified or not. Nothing startling would happen if it were shown to be lacking in dignity. The fact is that it is necessary, essential, useful. The hod-carrier and the statesman perform their functions in existing society, equally honorable if performed with equal fidelity. The atmosphere must be sought in the attitude. Labor in itself has no moral quality at all. Every function in social work which is useful to society is just as meritorious in every way as any other; each being suitable and an object of choice to the person who performs it. The moral quality depends on the way in which the work is performed.

Walt Whitman shows in one of his songs how the high atmosphere may be achieved:

"Come, I will make the continent indissoluble; I will make the most splendid race the sun ever yet shone upon; I will make divine magnetic lands, With the love of comrades, With the live-long love of comrades."

"I will plant companionship thick as trees along all the rivers of America, and along the shores of the great lakes, and all over the prairies; I will make inseparable cities, with their arms about each other's necks; By the love of comrades, By the mainly love of comrades."

The social estimate and the personal worth which should be ascribed to social functions depends on the way in which the man performs his duty. The educational value of different social functions is equal and the degree of human perfection which can be got out of them is equal. It develops a man in all moral excellence, and in other ways to be a good and faithful hod-carrier as to be a good and faithful statesman. Faithfulness introduces and perpetuates the atmosphere of Sunday in the work of the week.

THE PERSONAL ELEMENT.

It appears that many would-be correspondents are under the impression that the proper place to voice a personal grievance against a public servant is through the columns of the press. Concealed under a non-descript title they proceed to take to task the official who has incurred their wrath in terms that are not of the choicest, not free from bias, and not by any means based on fact.

Persons employed in an official capacity are rightly open to criticism when it is deserved, but in the attacks referred to, it has invariably been the case that while serving the public generally with the greatest satisfaction, the object of criticism has for some unknown reason incurred the odium of a certain individual. Appearing in the press, such attacks may hurt the official who, because of his position is not supposed to enter into a newspaper controversy, but beyond that they accomplish nothing. We have no space available in the Telegram for such communications.

At St. Thomas's

To-morrow will be observed as Children's Day, at St. Thomas's. At 8 a.m. there will be Holy Communion for Sunday School teachers and workers. At 11 a.m. the Rector will preach on the subject, "Children and the Church." Will all parents bring their children to church in the morning? There is no fiercer sight than that of seeing a family at the public worship of God. At 3 p.m. the four Church Sunday Schools of the city will meet in the Cathedral for the Annual Missionary Service. St. Thomas's Sunday School will meet at 2.45 and proceed in a body to the Cathedral at the evening service Rev. G. O. Lightbourn will preach on "Christ and the Children." The congregation are asked to unite in making Children's Day a real blessing to the little ones.

The Causes of the Curtailment of the Output of Bell Isle

In an interview which we had with Mr. Gillis who is here in the interests of the British Empire Steel Corporation, we learnt that so far as can be ascertained at present there is little hope of a resumption of activities on a normal scale in the mines at Belle Isle. He discussed the question yesterday with the Executive. In dealing with the causes which had led to the reduction of workmen, he gave the following reasons:—

Our curtailment at Belle Isle was the only course we could follow in view of market conditions. In 1922 we shipped 750,000 tons to Germany and this year our shipments to that country will not reach the 500,000 mark. We tried to make up this deficit by placing ore in the United States and Great Britain, but succeeded only in getting what might be called a foot-hold in the markets of these countries. The aggregate tonnage shipped to those places would not provide more than a month's employment at our Belle Isle Mines. Although these shipments may lead to future business their effect on our mining operations this year was but slight. It is a matter worthy of note, however, that we were able to place even a small tonnage in these markets where we must compete with the mining operations of Europe, who have the advantage of mining in countries where depreciated currency gives them a great advantage over us in production costs. It is only by the greatest economy in operating and taking advantage of our large shipping connections that enabled us to mine and transport these tonnages at a cost not excessive to the consumers. Our London office has been tireless in its efforts to secure a market in Europe, and Montreal has kept in close touch with American requirements but, as our ore is now only being introduced, the tendency of the furnace-men is to stand by the established grades. Germany was our best customer, but conditions in the occupied territory, where the greater part of our ore was formerly placed, are so disturbed that we would not be justified in mining on a large scale to supply our customers there, who no longer control their plants. If the French remain in control the natural thing to expect is that French ore will replace Wabana in all that district. Under these conditions, and having large stockpiles at Wabana, we could not continue mining on a large scale to add to stock that may not be converted into cash for a long time. We recognize certain obligations to our workmen who established homes at Belle Isle and looked solely to the mines for a living. To minimize the effect on our men we decided to keep two mines operating and these with our haulage system working will take care of about 1,100 men until the end of the shipping season. Even this small programme was only possible by taking to Sydney more tonnage than our requirements warranted and we are crowding every available inch of space in our stockyards there to take care of the shipments now being made. A large portion of the ore now being taken to Sydney will be still on hand next season.

The shipments to Japan featured in the Sydney dispatches and the local papers are of no magnitude. It was featured at Sydney probably because it indicated the aggressive selling plan of the Company in reaching out and securing new markets for its product. It is an encouraging sign, but when it is remembered two thousand tons of steel can be made from a single day's turnout at Belle Isle, it would require many such partial cargoes to Japan to keep our mines at Belle Isle in operation. The cargoes shipped overseas in the S.S. "Cymric Queen" and S.S. "Wabana," which loaded recently at Belle Isle, seem to contradict our statement that our foreign business was practically ended. These cargoes were sent over on charter boats that otherwise would have crossed to Europe in ballast. By taking advantage of the cheap freight rates obtained this way we were able to dispose of this small tonnage.

Good Fishing at Twillingate

According to a report to the Board of Trade from sub-collector Peyton, Twillingate, quite a lot of fish is to be caught when batt (squid) is procurable. Men who are fishing do very well, getting from one to three and a half barrels per day. The total catch for Twillingate, including that taken by boats, is estimated at 9000 quintals.

Sail Sails

S.S. Silvia sailed shortly after noon to-day, taking about 75 first and 45 second cabin passengers. The ship took about 5000 lbs. freight, mostly fish, oil and partridge berries. About 600 barrels of partridge berries are also being shipped by Sable I.

Police Court

A laborer charged with being drunk and breaking a pane of glass in a small store on Mundy Pond Road, was sent down on remand for 5 days. As the proprietor was too ill as a result of the disturbance at her store to appear in court, two other men who were at the "taproom" will in all probability have to appear in court to answer for her conduct.

A farmer of Kilbride charged with being drunk was allowed to go as it was his first offence. A youth who comes from respectable parents charged with four separate larcenies was given six months hard labor in the penitentiary. According to the court record the young man is an incorrigible. On several occasions since 1921 he has been arrested on charges of larceny. The present charges are: (1) The larceny of silver chains, 1221 lbs. and two rings; (2) Thirty dollars cash; (3) Lady's silk hose and a watch; (4) Twenty-eight dollars cash and goods to the value of $15. Only one ring and $7 in cash was recovered.

Some 13 business men charged with failing to make returns of their incomes were fined $5 each. His honor commenting on the negligence of the parties said he did not anticipate that there would be further proceedings yet these who are inclined to evade the law might find it worth their while to obey, and not trifle with the workings of the Assessors' Department. The inference from his remarks is that the $5 fine heretofore imposed would be increased.

"DUMPED GOODS" specially Boots and Shoes, Are Dear at Any Price.

A WHOLE LOT of people appear to be puzzled by the use of the term DUMPING, which is a practice against which the Shoe and Leather Manufacturers of Newfoundland are protesting.

Applied to the Boot and Shoe Trade, the word Dumping covers the importation of goods that have become damaged in manufacture, that are out of style, that are culls discarded by large jobbing houses, that are culls from large retail houses, that are especially made from factory cleanings or waste.

In the fish trade such products would be termed "Cullage." Lumbermen would refer to it as "Refuse."

But the practice of Dumping doesn't merely concern goods of faulty manufacture or goods that have become back numbers as far as style is concerned. Some manufacturers make a practice of putting up trashy stuff that the home market absolutely refuses to touch, quote it at ridiculously small prices and have it dumped into other markets where the purchasers are supposed to be content to buy and to wear any old thing handed to them over the counters. In proof of our assertion we quote a couple of paragraphs from a circular recently received by the Newfoundland Trade from an American manufacturer.

"IN ADDITION to our regular products," says this circular, "which we make and sell to the wholesale trade on regular terms, less regular trade discount, we make each month several lots of so-called FACTORY FILLERS. THESE FACTORY FILLERS are made . . . to level and keep up even production in our factory.

"These FACTORY FILLERS we keep separate and apart from our regular product. These are figured different from our regular product, with less overhead figured into the cost, and in this way figured and listed so that we move these lots quickly."

The significance of the practice described in the quoted circular is obvious. Cheap goods are produced to sell cheaply and frequently because they won't last long. They are manufactured to fill in the spare time of foreign workmen and to keep foreign machinery running all the time. They are turned out to utilize waste material, which is discarded as utterly unfit for use in good, dependable, first class boots and shoes.

Do Newfoundlanders want this "Cullage"? Are Newfoundlanders prepared to buy and to wear these "Refuse" Boots and Shoes to oblige foreign manufacturers and workmen and to make it easy for short-sighted local retailers to make quick turnovers and big and rapid profits?

Are Newfoundlanders content to discriminate against first-class and dependable local products; against local workmen and against local manufacturers and in favor of cheap foreign manufacturers and their employees just to oblige folk who have no stake in the country and others who do operate locally but who play the foreigners' game to suit their own pockets?

Remember DUMPED GOODS are dear at any price. Purchase of these goods means purchase of articles that will not give value in use, no matter how small the price paid for them.

Purchase of DUMPED GOODS of the sort described tends to kill local manufacturers.

Purchase of such goods tends to put local workmen out of employment.

That is too big a price to pay for such trashy stuff. DUMPED GOODS ARE DEAR AT ANY PRICE. SHOE AND LEATHER ASSOCIATION (OF NEWFOUNDLAND).

WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW.

Not a dull moment from start to finish, and a thrill, no, a series of thrills in each act. This was the verdict of the packed house which witnessed "What Every Girl Should Know" at the Casino last night, and the applause of the audience throughout the performance was ample testimony of the extent to which it was enjoyed.

The preliminary to the story is told in the prologue where in a scene depicting the garden of Putro Masotta, an Italian peasant, a rich American, Tom Kerrigan, is denounced by his friend Jerry Sullivan, for having deceived the peasant's daughter Zerlina. Jerry, her lover Tony Baroni swears vengeance to all intents and purposes a dissolute scamp, is possessed of sterling qualities and proves his worth as the story is told.

The first act shows Kerrigan as an official in the New York police force, and hand in glove with the agents of the white slave trade, of which Baroni under an assumed name is one of the leaders. They are determined to get Mag Burton, an Irish girl, into their clutches, but despite their persecution of both Mag and her brother Steve, she resists all their efforts. Filled in their game, they fix their attention upon a young Italian immigrant, Charlotta, who finds herself stranded in New York but she declines the inducements offered by Big Ann, the keeper of a house of ill repute, and chooses to live in poverty with Mag.

The attempts to incriminate Steve, his struggle against temptation, and the saving of the situation by the "bad Irishman" are vividly told in Act II. In the final act which shows the interior of Big Ann's house where Charlotta, after having been dragged, was conveyed by Tony Baroni to become the victim of the unscrupulous Kerrigan, a stirring climax is described which to be fully appreciated must be witnessed. Jerry at the finish is well to the front, and he has a close second in Johnny Sharp, a cub reporter, who is largely responsible for the downfall of the "crooks."

The interest of the audience was well sustained by the musical spe-

Rt. Rev. Dr. Mullock on the Resources of Nfld.

(H. F. SHOOTER.)

A great mine of wealth which we possess, and which is only partially worked or turned to account, is the herring fishery. In no part of the world is the herring finer, or, I believe, so abundant, and all it requires is to be properly cured. The Dutch became a great nation, it is said, principally by the herring fishery, and Amsterdam, they say, is built on a foundation of herring bones. Even at present, the Dutch herrings, though caught on the same ground as the English and Scotch, bear a higher price than any other in the world, and are eaten raw as a relish in Holland and Germany. The first barrel of raw herring that is taken is forwarded to the King and Queen at the Hague. It is carried in procession with banners and military music—the day is one of popular rejoicings, and a few of the new herrings are sent as presents to the nobles of the land. I understand the Dutch bleed each herring, use the best quality of salt, and take the greatest care in its manipulation.

"One great step in the preservation of the herring of the western shore," states the Bishop, "has been the passing of Mr. Benning's Bill. I have been informed on good authority, that the waste of herring for supplying bait to the French was a few years ago 20,000 barrels, for which there was no sale, were cast back into the sea. No fishery then, it is thought, requires the watchful care of a government more than this, and it properly preserved the watchful care of a government more than this, and if properly preserved and managed, it will be nearly as great a source of wealth as the codfishery, and more secure than the seal fishery."

Referring to a agricultural capabilities of our country, Mr. Mullock says: "The means of raising sheep on our wild pastures, millions of sheep. On the southern and western shore, indeed everywhere in the island, I have seen the finest sheep walk, and what is better, the droppings of the sheep in this country induce a most luxuriant crop of white clover, and prevent the spread of bog plant. If sheep were encouraged, we should have fresh meat in abundance, and their fleeces would furnish warm clothing in the winter for our people of a better quality than the stuff they now buy 'half waddy and devil's dust,' and which impoverishes them to procure it. Domestic manufactures would be encouraged, the people would become industrious and comfortable, and every housewife in our out-harbour would realize, in some sort, that sublime description of a valiant woman by Solomon, Prov. XXXI. 'She hath put out her hands to strong things, and her fingers have taken hold of the spindle; she has sought wool and flax, and hath wrought by the counsel of her hands; she shall not fear for her house in the cold of snow, for all her domestics are clothed with double garments; she hath looked well to the paths of her house, and hath not eaten her bread idly; her children rose up and called her blessed; her husband had praised her."

But, unfortunately, this great blessing of sheep pasture is marred by one sin, and idleness and poverty are too often the accompaniments of the poor man's fire-side in the long winter—as long as a vicious herd of dogs are allowed to be kept in the country, so long will poverty be the winter portion of the poor. There is a law offering £5 for the destruction of a wolf, and I have never heard of £5 worth of mutton being destroyed by wolves since the days of Cabot. In 1858 there were 22 much dogs, value £98. In 1862 there were 15 dogs, all destroyed in Bonaville in that year by dogs. One horse would do the work of 100 dogs, and be always useful, and the man who could not keep a horse, could hire his neighbor's for a few days at an expense less than what he even wastes in boots and clothes."

Goats form a very important item in the agricultural riches of other countries; with a large space of this barren land in Newfoundland, they generally forage for themselves for a great part of the year; their milk is most wholesome, and goat's cheese is not a bad addition to a poor man's meal. Kid's flesh is a delicacy, and in Rome capretto, or kid, is one of the cheapest, most abundant, and most delicious meats while it is in season. It is a shame that, even in St. John's, we have little chance of a turkey till the Halifax steamer comes in, and the goose, the most nutritious, the most useful, and the most easily kept of all fowl in a northern country like this, is just as scarce. All garden vegetables, cabbages, carrots, turnips, lettuce, etc., are brought to the highest perfection, and the climate appears especially adapted to impart succulence to them. We are obliged to import large quantities of hay from the Dominion where labor is so high and land so dear, while millions of acres are lying waste amongst us. Cereal crops demand special notice—wheat will ripen very well especially if the proper variety of seed adapted to a northern country be procured. Dr. Mullock states that he had never seen finer barley than the growth of Newfoundland, and all persons who had bought, as the Bishop had done, Newfoundland oats, at nearly double the price of the husky grain imported here, will find that he has gained by his purchase.

The following prophetic words were used by Bishop Mullock sixty-three years ago:—"I regret that I cannot take you into the interior—to the Big Pond, seventy miles long, the future seat of a great population; to India Pond, and the other great lakes and rivers which beautify the country."

"I know many persons imagine that the interior will never be inhabited, but they have not studied the subject. I would like to dwell upon these remarks of the great prelate and patriot, but my communication is already too lengthy, and besides, 'I'm not so young as I used to be,' and I have other-work to hurry on with. There is one subject that has been

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

You will undoubtedly find this remedy very useful in all cases of coughs, colds, and whooping cough.

You'll never know how quickly bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 8½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for such preparations. It gives you more relief, is more effective, and it keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes of the throat. a moot question for many years, and that is—who was "Father of the Mighty Thought" of having our railway started in Newfoundland, commencing from St. John's to Harbor Grace. Our venerable old friend, the late Dr. Darius, member for St. John's East, always believed that he was others gave the honor to our Great Liberal Chieftain, the late Sir William V. Whiteway, others to some other politician, but here comes the truth, which smashes all contention, and places the honor once and for all to the credit of the illustrious prelate and patriot—the Rt. Rev. Dr. John T. Mullock, Bishop of St. John's, whose great efforts in the advancement of our country are chiselled in marble in our history. On the 1st February, twenty years before the railway was started, the Bishop and (in speaking of his trip round Conception Bay):—"We return to Trepail or Portland Cove, where a railway to St. John's ought to convey us, and I hope that in a few years a Railway and a line of good steamers will connect the Conception Bay and St. John's trading communities, and be most highly advantageous to both."

It is now up to the whole of us to assist in the uplifting and advancement of dear old Newfoundland. We can all assist men, women, and children. The man who brings a single stone in the building of an edifice, contributes to its erection. Then let us all be actuated by the spirit of true patriotism which ever was the object of the illustrious prelate, who with voice and pen so strenuously, fearlessly and with torrential energy, advocated the cause of his adopted and our Native Land. Next to religion, patriotism is the noblest sentiment planted in the human breast. Even in nations sunk in barbarism this redeeming trait is to be found. Ancient Rome attained the meridian of her glory through the patriotism of her sons, and Greece, which in turn with Rome, attained the proud title of "Mistress of the Seas," climbed to that enviable distinction by that inborn love of country which was the birth-right of her people. If we come down the corridors of ages, we find it the culminating agency—the fulcrum upon which rested the lever that raised the earth into prominence and gave to the world its refinement and civilization. And we can never mention the word patriotism in Newfoundland without calling to mind the noble deeds, the fearless advocacy, and the undying love for the land of his adoption and our people displayed by the illustrious prelate—Rt. Rev. John T. Mullock, Bishop of St. John's.

No Work, No Dole

Ratepayers of Coventry are in a happy mood. Some years ago a scheme was put into operation to test the genuineness of applicants for unemployment out-relief. As a result the Board of Guardians' expenditures in "dole" has fallen from £307 to £133. Able-bodied men seeking relief are required to put in a certain number of hours on work of public utility, under an arrangement with the corporation. The elimination of a number of work-shy applicants and a reduction in the poor rate is the outcome.

When Your Dogs Are Ill

A very rough-and-ready way of finding out what is the matter with a sick dog is to give him some plain good food. Will he eat it? If there is not much the matter with him, says Lord Lambourne, Chairman for the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

for sale, and the whole stock in trade was bought by Mr. Coke in 1870. The business venture proved to be a good financial undertaking, and during the next three years Mr. Coke made enough money to repay his father's loan, and to establish his own independence.

In a letter received by him from his father in May, 1874, he was informed of the failing health of his mother, coupled with the request that he would come home at his earliest convenience. Mr. Coke has anticipated this a year before, and he had prepared for it by training one of his reliable countrymen, Dennis Ryan, to be his understudy in the business. On June 20th, 1874, Mr. Coke left Trinity for Waterford in the brig Lester, and arrived at the old home in Kildare during the last week in July. When his mother knew that her boy had come home to remain as long as she wished him to stay, she took a new lease of life. It was a beautiful sight to see the dear old white hair mother, leaning on the arm of her stalwart son, and with a smile that was the outward sign of inward happiness, as they took their daily stroll on the road just outside the gate of the old home. To his father it was a scene of infinite delight as he watched them from an upstairs window. At the same time the people of the town, in every rank of life, arranged to be passing along that road when mother and son were taking their daily exercise. Just for the privilege of lifting a hat, or making a courtesy, in return for a smile (from Nora Coke) that was in itself a benediction.

Mr. Coke and his father knew that this delightful return of active life could not last very long, and they were prepared for the change which they knew must come at an early date. With the closing days of September that change came, and it was evident that the closing of her earthly life and that of the month would not be far apart. On October 2nd, fortified with the grace that Holy Church imparts, and surrounded by her husband and her children, her soul passed from earth to the Paradise of God. On October 6th, her body was laid to rest in the family lot where the bodies of two of her children already lay.

By the vessel that had left Trinity on November 4th, Mr. Coke received the information that it contained an entry in the Burial Register of St. Paul's:—

"Nov. 2nd, 1785—Interred in the old Churchyard, Trinity, Dennis Ryan, agent to Dennis Coke, Esq., aged 43 years."

This necessitated the immediate return of Mr. Coke to Trinity to wind up the business. This having been done he bade good-bye to his many friends in Trinity, and went back to Kildare, to his father and to the old home.

"The Sweet Remembrance of the Just, Will flourish when they sleep in dust" It is surprising how rapidly many of the old names are dying out in Trinity. It will be a long time, however, before some of them will be forgotten; and though there may be no one in the place who bears the honored name and reminds us of it by his or her presence; yet, when by chance it is mentioned in our hearing, it sounds familiar, and brings back to our memory some association—hallowed or otherwise. This is not confined to names of persons who were known to us personally, for there are some that have become familiar to us because of what grand father or grandmother, father or mother, told us about them. I was definitely reminded of this a few days ago, as I looked through the old church registers, and dwelt for a moment on every name therein recorded. Some of them had died out in Trinity long before I was born; yet owing to some event or some story that enshrined the name, and which was told to me either by my grandfather, or my father, or by both, the names were familiar, and I found it hard to realize that those names had had no living representation in Trinity for eighty or a hundred years. Who, for instance in this day and generation is not more than ordinarily familiar with such names as Garland, Slado, Kelson, Clinch, Bullock, Newell, Pillgrem, Sabin and Peter Street—so familiar that, without a moment's thought, he might take it for granted that he knew them personally, whilst, as a matter of fact, such names have had no living representative in Trinity for sixty, seventy, or a hundred years. The following names, selected from among hundreds of others in the old church registers, from 1753 to 1800, are the only names that are altogether strange to me and entirely separated from any association, viz: Tiller, Gunn, Harding, Keel, Fitzherbert, Penock, Ketch, Moulton, Whitten, Coldweather, Emray, Quahn, Lawless, Wolfrey, Cranvil, Lamstead, Ginger, Hunnysart. And yet, I am sure that there are people in Trinity to-day, who upon looking over this list will find that some are by no means strange to them—and because of reasons that I have already given.

LOCAL ITEMS.

We are all glad to see Capt. N. Day again in charge of the Malakoff. He has been under expert treatment for some months, with "Insulin," the latest specific for Diabetes. He gratefully admits that the treatment has done him much good; but when we asked him if he regarded the cure as complete and permanent, he shook his wise old head and said "I am afraid it is not, Sir; but at the same time, I am deeply grateful for what it has done for me."

Mr. Gill Christian and Mr. G. Snow registered at the Garland and spent the week end at Trinity. They called upon their customers and then passed on. We were glad to see them.

Mrs. Law, of the Rectory, Trinity East, was a passenger by S.S. Prospero to St. John's this week, and is the guest of Rev. Canon and Mrs. Jeeves.

There are eighty-seven persons (mostly widows) between Trinity and Ireland's Eye, who receive financial assistance from the Government, and are paid quarterly. There are more than that on the list between Trinity East and English Harbor.

Mr. Eriksen and Mrs. Gent returned to Trinity by the Prospero on Wednesday. Glad to have them back again.

A beautiful Goffering, or Crimping, machine, that our grandmothers gotfered, or crimped their caps with, has been discovered in Trinity. Our oldest person in Trinity—Mrs. Pittman—as well as our younger women, are very much interested in it, as a relic of the long-ago. It will be fully described next week; but really it has to be seen to be fully appreciated not only in workmanship, but also in the work that it turns out.

Called to rest on Monday, October 15th, Joseph Morris, aged 83 years. His body was laid to rest in the C. of E. Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. E. P. Hiscock, and Rev. Canon Lockyer. Mr. Morris was a member of the Masonic Order, the Trinity Benefit Club, the Grand Association, and the Society of United Fishermen. (Fifty years ago, when Harmony Division, Sons of Temperance, was working in Trinity, he was one of its most zealous and active members). Each of those organizations (except the defunct Harmony Division) was officially represented in the funeral procession. Mr. Morris was one of our oldest citizens; and during the years of his active life, he was always prominent and useful in Church and State. His widow and two children (Mr. Fred Morris and Mrs. (Rev.) Tulk), survive him. Rev. Andrew and Mrs. Tulk were present at the funeral. We offer to the family the assurance of our highest respect, and our deepest sympathy. For him we pray:— Grant him Lord Eternal rest; May light perpetual shine upon him.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.
E.L.D.—Will reply by letter.
W.B.—I am sorry that I cannot give you any more information about Francis Squibb, that you got from his tomb-stone when you saw it in the old churchyard. In the old burial register there is the following entry: "August 21st 1787—Interred, Mr. Francis Squibb." And on his tomb-stone, which (as you saw) is a large slab laid on the grave, is the following: "Here lies the body of Francis Squibb, who died August 21st 1787, aged 57 years." Reader reflect as you pass by. As you are now so once was I. As I am now so you will be. Prepare for death and follow me." This is one of the most common of Epitaphs, and may be found in all the old churchyards. Some irreverent wag once wrote under this verse on a stone: "To follow you I'm not intent, Until I know which way you went." This was very thoughtful of him. Oct. 20th, 1923. W. J. L.

MEMORANDA.
Captain Henry W. Andrews.
1835—Married, Henry William Andrews, and Sarah Grant.
1836—Baptized, Mary Ann; 1839; Sarah; 1845, Harriet Ann, 1848, Arthur.
The baptism of another child is recorded, but the name of the child was unfortunately omitted. Capt. Andrews is still remembered by the older people in Trinity as "Billy Lindey."

This sobriquet, I believe, emanated from himself. It was used in a good natured way, of one who in his day and generation, was one of the most popular of sailing captains.

1788—Interred, Lot Braks; servant of Mr. Foster.
1749—Interred, Melchizedek Dibbin.
1810—Baptized, a son to George and Elizabeth Welchman, named Shadrack.

Those are the only occasions that I have seen the names of Lot, Melchizedek, and Shadrack, used outside the Old Testament days.

1815—Interred, William Justican. In this, and other entries in the old register, we are reminded of a surname that has been changed. The descendants of William and Eliza Justican in Trinity to-day are known to themselves and others as Jestican.

1788—Interred, John Pilsnerd, servant of Mr. Samuel White, a merchant in Foote. The water-front, just inside the Narrows, (1810) Samuel White carried on a business in Trinity and made a large fortune, is still known as "Sam. White's Cove."

1808—Married, William Warr of Stermister, Newton, Dorset, England; and Sarah, daughter of Samuel and Christiana Savory, of Old Perlickan.

The children were: Christiana, Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth. Christiana died when three years of age; Mary married Joseph Pittman; Margaret married Capt. Cunn; Elizabeth married James Hill.

1818—Interred, Matthew Kimber of English Harbor. Here we have another surname (Kimber) that was afterwards used as a Christian name, in the person of Kimber Bugden, of English Harbor.

A MARRIAGE.
We clip the following from "The American Press," of Sept. 26th, published in Lake Charles, Louisiana, U.S.A.:—"The marriage of Mrs. Flora Bell Hummell and Mr. Kelson W. Pittman took place on Friday, at the Baptist parsonage in Gosport. Rev. J. N. May performed the ceremony, in the presence of a few friends. Mr. and Mrs. Pittman will make their home in Pittsburg, Tenn."

LINEAGE OF A TRINITY NAME, STILL REPRESENTED.
1800—Married, Capt. James Breddy, of Townsland, Poole, England, and Mary Rowe of Trinity.
1807—Baptized, a son to Captain James and Mary Breddy, named Benjamin.
1831—Married, Benjamin Breddy and Mary Smith.
1836—Baptized, a son to Benjamin and Mary Breddy, named James.
1870—Married, James Breddy and Eliza Russell.
Baptized their children—William, Frederick J.H., Elizabeth, Frank.
Benjamin Breddy was captain of the sloop Fanny, when she was lost with all hands, near Hart's Harbor, on Dec. 3rd 1835. William Kelson, Jr., the owner of the sloop (and our Mrs. Pittman's father) was on board. His body was the only one recovered, and it was buried at Hart's Harbor.

THE CRIMES AND ACCIDENTS OF A CITY.

The crimes and accidents of nine months of this year is simply appalling. The Coroner dealt with 1,194 cases. There were six murders, forty drownings, twenty-nine suicides, fifty-eight auto accidents, and three hundred and seventy other accidents. September and July each furnished thirteen automobile accidents, while May had ten.

The deaths from drugs total ten for the nine months, seven of which were due to drugs furnished by other persons, and in which verdicts of manslaughter were returned.

The outstanding totals are 1184 cases inquired into for the period. The total of general accidents is 379, that of natural deaths 670. The totals for each month vary from between 111 to 149 inquests.

Saturday and Sunday always bring a heavy death toll from auto accidents. When one reads such headlines as: "Ten killed and fifteen injured in week-end toll; "Baby killed when auto strikes pole;" "Five hurt as cars collide;" "Five persons hurt by automobile;" "Two killed in auto crash;" "Two killed, one hurt, when truck hit pole;" "Motor crashes over rail bridge;" it certainly makes you shudder, and think of how uncertain life is, especially to those joy-riders, who seem to have no forethought for safety first, but throwing caution to the winds, plunge headlong to destruction. And the saddest part is, that others who are aware of such acidents, still follow in the footsteps of the reckless and thoughtless ones.

THE FARMER AN EASY VICTIM.

Farmers in the Province of Quebec seem to fall an easy prey to the wiles and trickery of "confidence sharks." The latest one is a farmer from Lanoraie, a short distance from the city. He says he was drugged with a doped cigar and robbed of $4,000. The farmer, whose name was Bonin, told the provincial police that two city men had been negotiating with him for the sale of his farm. They claimed to represent a rich relative in Montreal. The purchase price was fixed at $5,500, Bonin says, and the two men went with him to Berthierville to see the place. Before any contract was signed one of the purchasers warned the farmer that he could not produce $4,000 at once. If Bonin could do so he would win $1,500. The farmer says he borrowed $2,500 from a brother and made the sum up to $4,000 with some cash of his own. When the money was produced the two city men paid over the winnings, and Bonin put $5,500 into one of his pockets.

It was after this that things began to go wrong, he told the police. He smoked a cigar one of the losers in the little bet offered him, and after that seemed to lose consciousness. He came to himself twenty-four hours later, when he woke up in a hotel in the northeast end of the city. Most of his money was gone but the considerable confidence men left a few dollars in his pocket for incidental expenses. No trace has been found of the two confidence men.

TUBERCULOSIS A MENACE TO THE PROVINCE.

Tuberculosis is making great inroads throughout the Province. The large number of deaths each year tell in no uncertain way that the disease is on the increase while little or nothing is being done by the proper authorities to stem the tide of its onward progress. Miss Winifred Learmonth, Secretary of the Family Welfare Association, speaking to a Daily Star reporter said:

"The great difficulty at the moment is that there is nowhere to send tubercular patients where they may be built up and cured by means of fresh air, good food and sanitary care. Owing to the efforts of the Family Welfare Committee, as part of the Federated Charities, a movement was recently set on foot to re-open the sanatorium at St. Agathe, and it is hoped that this may be accomplished by the New Year.

"Meanwhile there is nowhere for patients to go except to the Grace Dart Home, where cases in the advanced stages are sent. During the past three years the Jewish Home, Mount Sinai Sanatorium, has come to the rescue of the Family Welfare on three different occasions by accepting cases in the early stages of the disease.

"As the matter stands at present, the situation is too tragic to be imagined," said Miss Learmonth.

"During the past year the Association has assisted ninety-four families where serious cases of tuberculosis have threatened to carry off one member. Of these, in twenty-seven cases it is the breadwinner who has been stricken down, leaving the children demoralized and exposed to the disease. In one instance the disease swept through the whole family, the five children taking it one after another. In another instance the mother's lungs were badly affected, but she carried on until she could work no longer. Her husband had been dead for some years so her brother took her to live with him and care for her. He was earning only a small wage and was in no way able to undertake the responsibility of a sick woman in the tiny house. He put his children in a dark room to sleep and gave their bedroom to his sister, but the inevitable took place. The children, lacking proper air, soon contracted the disease, and the family are now fighting three cases instead of one.

"We cannot begin to cope with the situation," Miss Learmonth concluded. "Tuberculosis is everywhere. The trained social worker can spot people suffering from it walking on the streets, people with whom we have never been in contact. As it is we cannot begin to give proper care to the scores of T.B. cases that come to us as we haven't the funds. It is all a question of money. Tubercular patients must live in the fresh air, be well nourished and isolated. Our budget permits us to do this in a certain number of cases, but it breaks our hearts not to be able to go on and give all the assistance that we know to be vitally necessary to the rest. Everything depends on the coming campaign of the Financial Federation. If we have the money we can do so much more."

Tuberculosis is the root of the trouble in very many of the cases of children who come before the Child Welfare Bureau for assistance, says Miss Gwendolen Lanz, Secretary of the Bureau. "Tuberculosis is indeed more terrible than war, as all social workers know only too well."

"Tuberculosis figures largely in the family history of the children brought to the Receiving Home of the Bureau the father, mother or both, and possibly the child as well, having contracted it. The aim of the Bureau is to fight the tendency in the children of tubercular parents, and great pains are taken to detect the germ in the medical entrance examination. Those children with weak lungs are sent to a foster home in the country where they are given the care and nourishment required.

Miss Lanz told of a little girl who came to the Bureau three years ago with badly infected lungs. She was running a daily temperature of 102 degrees and required special care. She was placed with a trained nurse in the country who has now brought her completely round. "She was 5 years old and very ill when she came to us. Now she is 8 and well enough to go to school and live like other children. We can do a great deal when we get the cases in the early stages, provided we have sufficient funds and support from the public."

The Star in an editorial under the caption of "The Crime against Quebec," says:

"The scourge of tuberculosis has been decimating tens of thousands of Quebec families for five generations, while successive Governments—Conservative and Liberal—have looked on in criminal apathy."

Tuberculosis is a contagious and not a hereditary disease. It is responsive to treatment. It can be controlled and practically stamped out by isolation, and yet the work of combating the disease has been less than a pretence. A few worthy citizens have made ineffectual efforts to check the disease, but the Government remained callous.

The people of the Province of Quebec are splendid citizens. The French Canadians are industrious and frugal. Largely due to the teachings of their church they are amongst the most moral people of the world. The Government of the Province of Quebec should be proud to save the tens of thousands of their compatriots who are doomed by tuberculosis.

The deeply rooted and generally well laid, having received assistance from the city. The English part is under consideration, and a meeting, to which "Your Correspondent" has been invited, will be held at the Grey Nunnery, to appoint a Board of Governors, and to purchase a suitable place, and the first of a chain of houses, will be opened in a short time. Two delegates are to visit the famous Magr. H. Baker's Home, called St. John's Protectors, at Buffalo, N.Y., to study the workings of the different institutions under Magr. Baker's care. Twenty-six Brothers and the same number of Sisters, together with some fifty lay help, and three other clergy-popular fear of drafts was exploded by Dr. E. J. Mulally addressing the School of Sociology in the first of ten lectures to be given under the auspices of Loyola College and the Knights of Columbus. In speaking of the great menace of tuberculosis, the lecturer warned his audience to beware of badly ventilated rooms and urged people to become accustomed to plenty of fresh air. Drafts, far from being harmful or dangerous, were often healthful he emphasized.

One of the greatest dangers, and a factor that entered largely into the spread of tuberculosis, was the infection of premises by consumptive patients. Therefore, a tenant should refuse to take a house, he stated, unless it has been thoroughly disinfected.

Ten per cent. of the world's deaths were caused by this dread malady, and the cost of the disease in the United States in 1908 was $330,000,000, while the city of Chicago alone contributed $28,635,000 of this sum.

Well aired rooms, with plenty of light and not too much heat were in aid to combat the spread of tuberculosis. Truly, can these unfortunates, left alone with the dread disease, say: "I shall not doubt, although my soul is tortured."

With care of Earth that harry me all day; I shall not doubt, the health has hastened from me, And every step is on a stony way. Let some what will, if Thou with strength and briens, Strength of the soul enduring to the end— I shall not ask aught earthly to defend me. Whatever pangs my suffering body rend.

HOW A YOUTH WAS ENTRAPPED.

The youths of the City are exposed to many dangers, the latest being a system of kidnapping with some evil intent. A few days ago, a schoolboy of 15 years, attending a school on Demontigny Street, was accosted by two men in an automobile who asked to be directed the way to Victoria Bridge. The boy told them the way, but the men played ignorant, and asked the boy to jump in the automobile in order to make sure of the way. After going some distance, one of the men said that he had forgotten his suit case and that he'd be obliged to go back and get it. The boy pleaded with the men to be allowed to get out, as he had to get back to school for the afternoon. The men told him that he had lots of time, and not to worry. They then asked him to smoke a cigar, but the youth said he did not smoke. The next move succeeded. A box of chocolates was handed him, and after eating a couple of them he became "doped." The men drove to Treteville, and left him in a field, still being under the effects of the dope contained in the chocolates. When the boy woke shortly after he was mystified for some time and, realizing where he was, he had to walk some seven or eight miles to the West End of the City, as he had not a cent in his pocket. He was suffering from a violent headache and a very sore chest, the effects of some wrongdoing by men, who in order to satisfy their brutal passions, scruple not, even to inflict bodily harm.

A HOME FOR NEGLECTED BOYS. Don Bosco's work, that is a home for neglected boys, is to be established here. A Franciscan Father will have charge of the French children and the Rev. Sister Donlin of the Grey Nunnery will be the guiding figure for the English speaking boys. His Grace Archbishop Gauthier has very warmly commended the work and has given his approbation to both organizations to go ahead with the work. The Franciscan Father has his plans

Crime and Punishment

Minneapolis Journal: Capital punishment may or may not be just. A really intelligent and imaginative man would fear death less than long imprisonment at hard labor. It is demanded, however, is certainty of punishment, and a degree of punishment commensurate with felony. All the experience of mankind in all lands and times goes to prove that adequate punishment does prevent crime, and that crime flourishes in proportion to the delay and uncertainty of punishment.

Crazes in Crops

Up to within fifteen years ago sugar beet, which this season has been harvested in East Anglia on a large scale, was scarcely known in this country. The extent to which it is cultivated today is an indication that there are fashions in agriculture, just as there are in clothes and other necessities. The year that saw the sugar beet come in as a commercial undertaking marked the decline of a crop which at one time played a great part in the textile industries of the North. This crop was teesles, and it has now disappeared entirely, having been superseded by metal carding appliances, which have taken its place in the dressing of woollen goods.

Another crop that is no longer harvested here is the saffron crocus, which a century ago was cultivated in many districts. It was used for medicinal and domestic purposes. The place name, Saffron Walden, is about the only reminder left to us of the days when the saffron crop made a blaze of colour in the countryside. Flax used to be grown here extensively, but for some years, until the war, it was seldom seen. Now it is again taking its place as a feature of the English harvest.

Tobacco is also slowly establishing itself as a British crop. Several acres

Compulsory Voting Advocated in France

A movement for a compulsory voting law, such as has been discussed at various times in the United States and Canada has been started in France. Its proponents hope to shove it through the fall and winter session of the Parliament in order to have it in operation for the Parliamentary elections of the spring of next year.

For, according to the wisecrack, the "absenteeism" now being widely practised in France is becoming a real national danger. The eligible voters—"electeurs"—are it appears living up to the letter of the real but unofficial national motto, which, liberally translated, is, "I should give a damn"; more politely, "I should fret." In the majority of recent by-elections a second turn at balloting has been necessary in order to give an absolute majority to any one list of candidates. In many cases these elections turned out far less than half the number of registered voters for the first poll—and that in spite of the stipulations of the 1919 electoral law, which sent the present Chamber up to Paris.

The lead has been taken by Deputy Joseph Barthelemy, of the Department of Gers, who already has put in his bill. But although he has been promised a full discussion of it after the present vacation, he has not much hope that it will go through. The normal desire of a deputy in office is to be re-elected; the same holds good for a congressman, it may be added; and M. Barthelemy's colleagues are considered pretty apt to stick to the present system—the one that returned them to the Palais Bourbon.

Meanwhile the "gentleman from Gers" is pursuing an active campaign. He flatly takes issue with all the fathers of the Revolution, who held the franchise to be a right, of which the citizen voter could avail himself or not as he saw fit. This briefly is his line of argument:

"If there are, in fact, rights whose exercise is discretionary—the right to marry or the right to make a will—there are others, the exercise of which is obligatory. The democratic principle stipulates that the reasoning being should only be governed by himself and his proper reasoning. Therefore the suffrage, as universal as it is practically possible, is the positive solution which approaches nearest to the ideal. The laws, if they have been said, are made in the interest of those who make the law-makers. In order that the laws shall be made in the interest of all, then all must make the law-makers.

"If the citizen has the right to vote he holds it not in his own exclusive personal interest. The collective, social interest is also engaged. In those conditions the only question of principle worthy of being discussed is 'Is it opportune to constrain the voters to approach the electoral urns?'"

"Whether the franchise is a right or a function, the exercise of it is unanimously considered a civic duty. To be sure, a private duty remains discretionary. We cannot imitate Saxon legislation which pretends to impose virtue by force, just as one injects vaccine. But here we are concerned not with a private duty, but with a social duty, the performance of which binds society at large. Society, in its turn, has the right and the duty to defend itself."

M. Barthelemy, as the foregoing extracts indicate, is a law professor in private life and a convinced democrat in public life.

Notre Dame Bay Herring Oil Co.

A NEW INDUSTRY FOR THE NORTH.

We learn from an interview with the Manager, Capt. C. W. Olsen of the above Company, who arrived yesterday by express from Tizard's Harbour, Notre Dame Bay, that he has obtained a suitable site on which to erect the Herring Oil Factory in Bridge's Cove, Friday's Bay, two miles from Tizard's Harbour. The site which has water power in the vicinity and is also close to the public road and telegraph lines, has been obtained from the Government, and will be re-named Newport. It is the intention of the Company to have as much of the work done as possible this year in order that operations may be started by May 1st, 1924. Capt. Olsen was pleased to say that the people of Notre Dame Bay have given him every encouragement, and will give the company every assistance possible in their venture. Already a considerable number of people are interested as shareholders and we also learn from Capt. Olsen that one-third of the necessary capital has been secured in London. This together with the capital already subscribed makes the outlook of the company most promising.

ONTREAL

About Things in General

And Public Men in Particular.

By SCRUTATOR.

"I will just here remark that, amongst civilized nations, there's none that displays more exemplary patience under all sorts of boring, at all sorts of hours, from all sorts of desperate persons, than ours. Not to speak of our leaders, our queer legislature, and other such trials for a sensitive nature."

WHEN SIR EDWARD DALTON SHEA WAS PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL.

At the time to which I now refer Sir Edward Dalton Shea, father of the present Acting Premier, was President of the Legislative Council. He was then well on for ninety years of age. I liked the old gentleman much more than I expected to do before I became intimately acquainted with him. Autumn "glids ere it withers," and it is sometimes the same with old age. They had in the Council just then a keen Mephistophelic sort of person who believed in nothing—who, like Pistol, had used the world as his oyster and extracted pearls out of it sufficient to make his life flow easily. He had been successful in business; he had done, and would continue to do, effectively and well whatever he undertook; but his theory of existence was that in such a world as this the only wisdom was to get as much enjoyment out of it as could be had. All else was illusion. He was excellent company, intellectually one of the best they had in the Upper House—not more clever in some respects, though, than most of his fellow-members; but a belief in something—some object outside oneself, for which one can care and exert oneself—brings a grace into the character which is not to be had without it. Simplicity is more attractive than brilliancy, and my friend had a humor of his own which was often diverting. He was a prominent lawyer and could tell many interesting stories about the bench and bar as well as about his experiences generally in professional and social life.

THE RAGE FOR CITY LIFE AND WEALTH.

It is not possible that the fierceness of the rage for city life, and wealth to enjoy it, will one day abate, and the people begin to look about them for the sweetness and serenity which human nature longs for in its highest moments, and which are best found under a pure sky, amid the quietness of nature? When the fisherman and farmer in the villages along our coast begin to study more how to improve and make comfortable village life, when goods, daily made, the telephone, the manual training school, shall have carried into our outports and extern settlements the blessings of the new civilization, it may be that the incentive to live in the city or to emigrate will be largely removed. If the dwellers in our smaller towns and settlements want to counteract the existing tendencies, they must be alert to seize and appropriate the agencies which are now transforming modern life. The tendency of the people in the later stages of civilization to gather into towns is an old story. Horace had seen in Rome what we are now witnessing in Newfoundland—the fields deserted, the people crowding into the city or leaving the country altogether. He noted the growing degeneracy. He foretold the inevitable consequences.

"They did not spring from sties like these,
The noble youth who dyed the seas
With Carthaginian gore;
Who great Antichus overcame,
And Hannibal of yore;
But they of rustic warriors might

The mainly offspring learned to smite
The soil with Sabine spade,
And faggots they had to cut to bear
Home from the forest whenso'er
An austere mother bade."

THE MOTHER COUNTRY AND THE DOMINIONS.

Judging from the tone of the English press of late, there seems to be a deplorable lack of interest manifested by the Mother Country in the affairs of her offsprings beyond the seas, especially in those who inhabit the smaller colonies. This, all true and loyal colonists very much regret. It is a matter of serious import to Newfoundland, for instance, that the public mind in England should continue to understand somewhat of Newfoundland feeling and Newfoundland interests. The great Empire built up by our fathers can only be held together by mutual confidence, by kindly feeling, by national pride, and by common interest. Misunderstandings must be avoided. Newfoundland in the past has suffered great and irreparable injury by the want of knowledge among English statesmen and people of the condition of affairs in this island. Other dominions have had similar experiences. And as the colonies have been hitherto dealt with—made use of in the interest of the Mother Country as long as they would submit; and then called, valueless, and advised to take themselves away—they are in no mood for a union which may bring them again under the authority of Downing Street. But affronts have not estranged them. They have been in no haste to meet the offer of independence. They claim still their share in the inheritance of the nation from which they have sprung. British we are and British we wish to remain, and impossible as it is to weld together two pieces of steel while below the welding temperature, let the desire for a union of equality rise in England and rise in the colonies to sufficient heat, the impossibility will become a possibility, and of political possibilities the easiest. Up to the present the attachment of the colonies to the Parent State has been proof against the hints and exhortations from certain quarters to take themselves away. If the Imperial authorities value the attachment of the dominions, they will continue to furnish them with the fittest men they can provide as proconsuls. There will be no difficulty when the situation of governor of a colony is recognized as of the importance which really attaches to it.

POLITICS AND OUR OLD DIPLOMATS.

I still remember how pleasant it used to be to talk political matters over with such old diplomats as Sir Frederick Carter and Sir William Whiteway, who, like Ulysses, "had been in many cities and knew the thoughts of many men." These experienced old stagers could see further and wider than ordinary parliamentary politicians, for it is the very nature of "party" that party leaders should never see things as they really are, but only as they affect for the moment the interests of one section of the community. They are as men who, having two eyes given them by nature, deliberately extinguish one. There is the point of view from the "right" and the point of view from the "left," and from each, from the nature and necessity of the case, only half the truth can be seen. A wise man keeps both his eyes, belongs to no party, and can see things as they are. There were others with whom it was still more pleasurable to talk on things in general; and prominent among the latter were the late Governor Davidson and his amiable and richly-endowed consort. They were immensely popular during their reign in Newfoundland. Lady Davidson was greatly admired and respected in the colony on account of her stately manners and genial disposition towards rich and poor alike. True, she possessed a certain degree of reserve, but those who could see through it into the nature which lay below, would delight in being admitted into intimacy with her. But vice-queens (and the Governor is a quasi-sovereign) cannot have intimacies in the general acceptance of the term. They are expected to be universally gracious—and universal graciousness is perhaps only possible to the supremely great and fortunate. To her guests at Government House Lady Davidson was a charming hostess.

"Wisely and well has Providence assigned
To each his part—some forward, some behind;
And they, too, serve who temper and restrain
The overwarm heart that sets on fire the brain.
Spare timid doubters; set like flint your face
Against the self-sold knaves of gain an dplace:
Pity the weak; but with unsparring hand
Cast out the 'graters' who infest the land.—
From bar, press, pulpit, cast them everywhere.
By dint of fasting, if you fall by prayer.
And in their place bring men of antique mould.
Like the grave fathers of your Age of Gold.
Statesmen like those who sought the primal fount
Of righteous law, the Sermon on the Mount."

THE USEFUL-AUNT.

VAL MARCH.

As I take my daily ramble countless women are in sight; I behold them loaf and gambol, in their gorgeous robes bedight; countless dames are gallivanting on their errands fierce and vain, but my aunt is busy planting rhubarb bushes in the rain. Idle women, idly blowing foam for which their husbands are getting dizzy female shop ward going, with a piece of yarn to match; silly women bearing poodles worthless as a tinker's whoop; but my aunt is making noodles for a bowl of wholesome soup. Oh, I watch the women, drilling to some social jam-boree, and I see them make a killing at a Pink or Yellow Tea; and I turn with admiration to my aunt, who's making pies, and she says, with animation, "Industry is always wise." I behold the women yawning in the boudoir and the den, hilly-chesting and doggoning, bored to death and back again; they are doing nothing useful, they accomplish nothing sane; but my aunt is planting juicy rhubarb bushes in the rain. Oh, my aunt is never weeping, never weary of the grind, and her household cares are keeping rust and mildew from her mind. She is blithe and glad and chipper, she is healthy, keen and spry, and she soaks me with the dipper when I swipe a chunk of pie.

Seven Kiddies Are Crushed to Death

Express Train Demolishes Crowded School Bus—Several Injured. Atwater, Ohio, Oct. 11.—(United Press)—Seven children were killed and three badly hurt and several less seriously injured here to-day when a horse-drawn bus containing 18 school children was demolished by the "Cleveland" the fastest train on the Pennsylvania railroad between New York and Cleveland. The accident occurred at Lambert's Crossing, a short distance from here. The engineer of the train saw the vehicle too late to jam on the brakes, and a second later there was a terrific crash. The locomotive plowed through the wreckage scattering it along the right of way for several hundred feet. As soon as the train came to a stop members of the train crew and passengers picked up the little victims, placing their mangled and battered bodies at the track-side, others rushed to the nearest farmhouse to send in telephone calls for help. The bus was used by the county to convey children to and from schools. A few minutes after the crash the dead, dying and injured were placed on the train and rushed in to Ravensna, where doctors and nurses were waiting at the station. The little children who survived the accident were so dazed that their stories were incoherent. The different versions of the accident revealed a second of terror, a second when the front wheels of the bus were on the rails and the children heard the roar of the on-coming train. There was no time to escape. Be-

The entire countryside turned out to help the train crew and passengers take care of the survivors. An attempt to prevent such tragedies was made by the last Ohio legislature which passed the Hazard Law requiring school bus drivers to bring their machines to a halt before crossing railroad or interurban tracks. After attentively reading Canadian newspapers for a very long time I have about come to the conclusion that we are a nation of kickers; that Ontario has a greater proportion than her population would suggest and that Toronto is easily the foremost kicker city of the country. That is to say, it must be so if we are to be guided by the printed word as it appears in the Toronto newspapers. Ever since the city of Toronto took over the operation of its street cars there has appeared one long continuous stream of kicks in the daily papers. One writes that the service is too slow, another that it is so fast it does not give the complainant time to board. Others write that there is no ventilation; still others that there is too much ventilation. Others again say that the cars are overcrowded, though there is room, and lots of it, except in rush hours, and no system yet invented has ever been able to cope with that problem.

Who ever heard a word of praise expressed in a letter to the press in respect to a city official, but let something slip a cog in a city's complicated civic machinery, and oh, watch the letters. It is the same when a train is late. The people somehow forget all about the trains that day after day pull in on time, but when one for some unavoidable reason is delayed listen to the howl.

It is the same way in a newspaper office. Everybody expects a newspaper to come off the press letter perfect. Spell a word incorrectly or have a printer do it for you, or set a location wrong, such for instance as a small and unfamiliar town in the wrong place, and there are ructions, the readers forgetting all about the many, many times they have read errorless articles in the same publication, whatever it may happen to be. And by the same token it has always been a marvel to me, and that after spending a considerable lifetime in the business, how papers, and particularly daily papers of large size, ever get to press with as few errors as do cheap in. Pages go to press not on the hour but on the minute, yes, almost on the second. It is like operating a fast express. If the paper starts late it is almost impossible to make up time. And a late paper misses trains and misses sales, and the circulation manager throws a fit. So it is up to the staff, mechanical and editorial, to get it away on the minute. Late copy is sometimes placed in the forms runread by the proof readers, taking a chance that the linotype operators have set it correctly. At other times it is read, but not revised, and in consequence a bungle may appear, where a correction has been made and another error introduced in the same line. Then there is the jumbled line, that is to say a line in the wrong place. If one ever saw those make-up men, working full speed, throwing that matter into the forms, it would seem that little or none of it could ever arrive safely at its proper destination, and still it does, as a rule. Take the question of accuracy. We have been known to kill the wrong man; that is to say use the word "late" on somebody's portrait who is alive and kicking. When we do this we are found out, but when the doctor kills a man, no one knows about it. That is the difference between an operating table and a newspaper office. Our mistakes are made in the sunlight of human affairs, the doctor's in the twilight of other fumes.

We have exterminated the wild pigeon, which is a pity, as it was an asset. But we have not exterminated the crow, which is not only a liability, but an out-and-out nuisance. Crows steal the eggs of useful birds, they also eat the young, and will when occasion favors pick up young chicks and fly away with them. To the farmer they are expensive, while their eternal caw, caw, is nerve racking. Why then do we not do the obvious, exterminate them? If one is fond of shooting with either a rifle or a shot gun what better sport could be had than hunting these black pirates? And as they are far from being fools, as is the bird we call the partridge, one has the opportunity of matching his wit against theirs. A small calibre rifle of good make, shooting say a 22 long rifle cartridge is the best tool for the business. They make little noise, carry well, and will not scare a flock of crows even with repeated shots provided the hunter is well hidden. Or if a hide is impossible remain quiet, for remember the crow has sharp eyes, and sees under normal conditions far better than the human family. With the expenditure of considerable gun powder and lead we should be able to get the crow family down to the point where they would be a curiosity, at the same time rendering a service to the farming community that would be almost beyond price.

ONLY THE AFTERMATH.

"Well, I ran up against the cross-set saleswoman I ever saw," fulminated Molly, the little stenographer lady, "she snapped me up the minute I spoke to her. I spoke as pleasant as could be and I was so surprised when she snapped back something about their not having any stockings the color I wanted, that color was entirely out of style. And then when I wanted to see what they did have, she tried to show me as little as possible. I finally found something that did very well, but I had to fight to get it. It really wasn't anything I said to her because she was that way from the very beginning. It just makes me

Name the Selfish Shopper!

"And I think anyone who has any idea what saleswomen sometimes have to put up with ought to be willing to take that factor into account and to keep some of their blame for the selfish and unreasonable women who abuse their power over those who serve them.

A Sympathetic Thought.

The lady who always knows somehow smiled a little at Molly's indignation. "It was a shame," she said. "But Molly dear, here's one thing I sometimes think of when a saleswoman is cross without any apparent reason. We haven't any idea what they have just been going through. You weren't unreasonable or impatient, I know, but she may have had some perfectly hateful woman to deal with. You just got the aftermath."

"Don't like the aftermath," grumbled Molly. But it was evident from her yielding tone that she was sport enough to understand.

after looking at a few protested: "You know, Mother, we have got to see those fur coats first, we ought not to bother her to show any more until we see them."

"Don't worry about her," said the mother, with evident willingness that the girl should hear, "she needs the exercise."

An Ill Deserved Insult.

And another saleswoman, a friend of mine, who was having a hard fight to keep things going with three children and an invalid husband, standing on her feet all day and working at home half the night, told me this story. A woman and her husband came in to look at dresses. The man was not satisfied with what they saw and finally said: "Why don't you get something like what the saleslady has on?" The woman looked her over and said in a perfectly audible tone: "Oh, I probably couldn't afford that. You know those people have a way of getting more money for their clothes than other people can afford."

Would it seem surprising if the next customer found both of those saleswomen somewhat ruffled and irritable?
