earth, and had a world of novel and thrilling experiences to tell. To Shirley, lonely soul, shut up there apart in Linwood, communing only with her own thoughts, he seemed like a visitant from another world.

Even Mrs. Carstone was roused from her silken net. In short, he was as blindly and as hopelessly gone as ever a tall, honest, soft hearted young fellow was in a first love, since the world began.

"Because if it's young Martin."

Even Mrs, Carstone was roused from her wonted ladvlike invalidism by the presence of Mr. Edgerly. At the end of a week he left them. He, on his part, was as pleased with for him. He declared that here was the best part of his visit to the United States.

With assurances on both sides of friendly remembrances, he went away. Mrs. Carstone spoke of him ever after as "that delightful English gentleman." Brownie called him "that darling old Britisher," and wished the young men were as lovely as the old ones!

"By the blessed broomstick, no!"

He was getting a little vexed. Brownie watched the knitting brows and exulted. He meditated a moment. "But I insist on knowing."

This air succeeded to a charm. It is to be recommended to young men and maidens seeking to make an impression.

At an autumn picmo in the woods he seemed more than usually indifferent. He from me in earnest."

Three years after Mr. Edgerly's visit she in the midst of the blazing gold and crimson and Brownie waited for the Linwood train one day at Chesterton. While they waited they lunched. At a table near by were a lady and gentleman, also having luncheon.

The sisters went to the fair south, to a land of magnolias and mocking birds, of roses and oleanders, "a land where it is always after moon."

They made same pleasant acquaintances. One was an elderly English gentleman who was making a tour of America. He had a fine, high bred manner, and at the same time frank and simple ways that reminded Shirleys one is a little with they are very pretty, these women in the him at once, and he to them.

Now, do you wonder that I say any young man who will may do the same thing. The simple truth is he won't. He wants everything and at once, and he gets it. There is nothing truer than the old saying that you can't have your cake and eat it too. If you want money, you've got to keep it instead of spending it. I know some men pretend to scorn economy, but they are the ones who are always scolding and omplaining about the shabby way in which fortune treats them. The fault is all their own; they turn a cold shoulder on fortune, when she would smile on them if they would encourage her. Secret! There's no secret to it. It all lies just here. The consensus of public opinion in thes Western Counties is greatly in favor of this railway. Both the local journals in this County, the Shelburne paper and the fournals published in Queens, and also the Yarmouth papers, so far as they have spoken by themselves or correspondents; Thomas Robinson, ex M. P. for Shelburne, and other gentlemen who have given their epinion on the subject generally concur in the belief that this proposed line ought to receive legislative support in preference to the Midland or any other scheme that has been projected as a rival. And now a gentleman, removed from all personal or directly interested in the scheme, comes forward, and after a complete survey Nova Scotia railways, as a system, declares in its favor as a necessary link in that system. Again we repeat with renewed emphasis that if Shelburne rejects the Annapolis and Atlantic railway, its immediate prospects of having any line whatever vanshes to a point in the sad perspective. Will the people of that County stand longer in their own light-longer fail to see their best interests in this matter? We earnest-these lines, and has moreover been the longest delayed. No new route is here sought to be mapped out, but steam conveyance is desired along an old and natural line of travel. While the most easily accessible and important series of settle-ments in the county would thereby be connected by the shortest route with the existing system of railways. The increasing activity in the mining circles of Caledonic only gives greater urgency to the construc-tion of such a road as its necessity has long been felt in Annapolis and throughout Queens. Connection with the Annapolis and Atlantic railway would likewise appear to be the most immediately feasible for Skelburne. Such a line if properly chosen might perchance best harmonize with the
