TIMONY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST RESPECTING JESUS TRIMONY OF FORM THE RAPPINT RESPECTIVE THE JOIN 1, 19-34. John was sent forth from God not to establish a new religion, but simply to testify that Jesus was the Great Lescher, prominent in dignity and exallence, and that he existed before his appearance $M_{\rm est} = 100, 1, 7, 15$. side, towards Leesburg, reported they had pro-ceeded to within one and a haif miles of Lees-burg, where they came upon a camp of rebels comprising only about thirty tents. On Sunday night Colonel Devens, with five companies of the Fifteenth Massachusetts regiment, was sent over, with instructions to reach the reported eamp by daylight, and take the party fund there, and return across the river. Sub-equent-ly Colonel Lee, with four or five companies of the twentieth Massachusetts regiment, was sent in one of any difficulty. On Monday morning a report was received from Colonel Devens that he had advanced a within a mule and a half of Leesburg without finding any trace of rebels. This was son fol-lowed by a report that Colonel Devens attacked with a superior force, and was falling back in good order, skirmishing towards the river. Knowing from previous information that there should be in that vacinty from five to six Lioousand rebels, who had accupied the position since July last, General Stane deemed it neces-sary to send forward a sufficient force to over-whelm them if they should still be there. Col-Baker had recently been attached to General Stone's division. He had been under his com-mand only two or three days, but he was eager mand only two or three days, bu he was eager to head the enterprise on foot. His request was granted. General Stone gave him 7,500 of his choicest troops, and gave, also, strict instructions that after securing and protecting his crossing, he should be particular in sending out sconing parties in his front, and look carefolly to the pro-tection of his flanks, and "not to engage the enemy unless sure that he could maintain the positios."

Does not such a state describe that which is in Scripture by the name of eterna death?

One word on the reasonableness of su end. The Apostle says in Gal. 6. 7. "For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." And does not every one expect this ' This is just as true in morals as it is in physics. Just as conclusive in the spiritual as in the natural world. Men generally expect the reproduction of the natural seed, but marvellously deny the reproduction of the spiritual seed when they are ewarned that its fruit will be bitter and deathly. If we sow wheat, we do not expect to reap barley or oats or any other grain. If we should reap grain different from that we sowed, we would never cease to marvel. But just as inconsistently do some men reason in regard to God's mercy and justice in the eternal punishment of the wicked. They have wilfully sown sinfulness all thro' this life, and yet at the great harvest at the end of the world, they expect to reap righteousness ! Man can not create himself, but he can destroy hunself-therefore, God must sow the seed of regeneration, and enable man according to the Scripture "to sow to the Spirit." But man sows for himself the seed of impenitence, and of himself. "he soweth to the flesh." And what he sows, he reaps. What is reaped in the future will be identical with what is sown in the present. As certain as the natural husbandman shall reap in the harvest the fruits of his labors. so shall the impenitent and unbelieving reap in an immortal harvest, the things sown in this mortal life. Every resistance of convictions, neglect of opportunities, refusal of gospel invitations, proclastinations, Sabbath privileges slighted, all these shall literally work out for him "a far more exceeding and eternal weight" of despair !! Oh ! what more terrific image of a lost man, than by supposing him to be everlastingly preved upon in eternity by the master paswhich here held him in bondage.

How many have exhausted their imagination in contriving some ideal description of Hell-They have turned and twisted the strong figurative language of the Bible describing the end of the wicked into all sorts of shapes. Some make it a mere temporary punishment for evil deedsjust as a man is confined for a number of years in the penitentiary on earth, and then set at liberty at last-so say they God will let the wicked free and receive them into Heaven, after their term of purishment is over; others again agree that all the wicked are annihilated-and others that ther) is no such place or state as Hell. But the Bible verturns all these conjectures and declares positively that "the wicked shall go away into everlasing punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." If the punishment of the wicked is not eternal why the happiness of the righteous?

Do you not now see, then, dear hearer, in the future punishment of the wicked, not one ray of God's justice and righteousness and love will be removed. He will be then as He is now, slow to anger full of compassion and long-suffering If the sinner shall suffer this death described a his eternal punishment, when he shall be called before the Judge to testify against his injustice he will be speechless. He will recall those numerons exhibitions of his merciful character in "willing not his death, but rather that he should turn unto him and live." In not cutting him down long ago in his sins, but in prolonging his life by lavishing bountiful supplies, unasked for unthought of &c. How all the Divine attributes, unlimited as they are, have combined in the scheme of the great salvation. And while our nature is corrupt and helpless, how He offered to bestow His Spirit to regenerate it and provided every means of subduing passions owever strong, and withstanding temptation however powerful. And whilst He made it our duty, he made it in every sense our highest interest to live soberly, righteously and godly. That his commandments were all so wisely order

 Is was never the intention of Ger. McClellan to occupy Leesburg. It is so situated as to be of no more use to him in the present position of the two armies than the occupation of the North back of the Potomac. He was willing to send ont a reconnoisance in force, as he did on Saturday by the advance of by Gen. McCall's divition to beyond Drainsville, with a view of simply making such demonstration as would induce the abandonmeux by the rebels of Leesburg, as well as the places they bad occupied interesting in front of Washington. General McCall was ordered forward, and occupied the position as used in obedience to orders, he leisurely returned.
 When the first intelligence of the engagement near Leesburg was received, orders were sent to General McCall to retain his position at Drainesville; but he had then already reached his headquarters at Langley's and was a long day's march from the scene of action.
 General McClellan, accompanied by Colonel Olburn, of his staff, returned from 'Edwards' Ferry this afternoon. Before leaving, General McClellan all the facts relative to the affair . e r Leesburg on Monday, and will undoubtedly authorize a published statement.

And Honor beckons to his lofty seat.

Old heads and hearts take up their warning And tell us Honor vields a stinted dole.

In the first tasting cloys the cup of pleasure, And riches are but shackles to the soul.

Can we believe them ? Life is so alloring-She promises our hearts perpetual May Our unfledged hopes reply, "There's no enduring

The wornsout song of ' All is vapity !' "

Fate is upon us, and with heedless pinious We seek the net to know if 'tis a snare-We chase gay phantoms over earth's dominions But to be sure that they are made of air.

Perhaps fame's mount hath some lone cliff projecting, Thither with venturous toil our steps aspire

We climb, with deeper gloom our brows dejecting ; Even here are footprints-some one has been

Where gentle Peace and Love await its call, Loud o'er their dove-notes ring the questions burning,

" Is there no happier Eden ? Is this all ?" It we have gained a joy for which we waited.

A Dead Sea apple in our grasp we find,---When one desire is sleeping, fully stated, Another, gaunt and lean, starts up behind.

Tis true, too true, what hoary sages taught

All things are emptiness and vanity ; And since our search but weariness hath brought us,

Shall we not, sickened, turn from earth away P

No; but we will be grateful to our Father For love like manna' dropped on being's shore,-

While every day a sweet content we gather, We'll thirst for rank, unwholesome joys no more.

And His dear, frequent gifts, so gently given, Shall teach us not to seek our all below,-

The joys of earth are whispered hints of heaven; In heaven alone Life's perfect flower will grow.

ANTIQUITIES IN THE MODERN CITY.

The visitor to Rome is at first disappointed as he looks around in search of those antiquities of which he has heard and read so much. He had expected to find monuments which in number and form might correspond with his idea of the original vastness and magnificence of the ancient sity. But as he surveys its site from some lofty ice, as the Tower of the Capitol the sumimmence, as the lower of the Capitol the sum-nit of the Coliseum, or the ball of St. Poters, he serceives only here and there some relic of the ast which equals his anticipations and accords ith his ideas of imperial power and splendor.
