At that time there was no sign of fire, but THEATER heard a door slam, and on getting up found that the rear part of the theater was on fire. He then went to box 2, at the Russell House, and pulled an alarm. By this time the flames had gained great headway, and were reaching the entire height of the building and shooting from the curved windows at the top. The firemen were on the scene with commendable celerity, and as soon as the chief arrived BURNED!

was sent in, to which the entire brigade responded. Lines of hose were laid quickly, and in short order eight streams were playing on the burning building. The flames, at first confined to the east end of the theater, found a ready prey in the stage setting and delicate fixtures, and in a few minutes the whole interior was a seething furnace. Tremendous volumes of water were being poured on the doomed building, but it seemed of little avail.

Ottawa, Ont., April 9.-Ottawa's magnificent playhouse, the Russell Theater, was totally destroyed by fire in the early hours of this morning, and now only irregular columns of smoldering debris fill the place of one of the finest theaters in the country. The loss is NEAR THE $100,000 MARK,

It is believed that the Mongolian rebellion was brought about through agents of Prince Tuan and Gen. Tung Fu Sian. Unofficial Chinamen of intelligence regard the rising as most unfortunate, at the present time, to the interests of China, and as possibly meaning the use

TORONTO LETTER

Premier Ross Setting the Pace as to New Railway Ideas in New Ontario.

Mr. Whitney Leads a Disgruntled Party-The Opposition Leader Finds Old Followers Bropping Out.

Toronto, April 9, 1901. In its railway policy the Ross Government has shown itself thoroughly abreast of the time. It has always been quick to anticipate public sentiment and alert to implement it when that sentiment was healthy. Perhaps no executive body has kept such a careful gauge of public opinion, or has steered so wise a course among many conflicting elements. In this stage of our development, Ontario needs railways, and railways need capital to build them. Without discouraging capital, the Ross Government has yet kept in mind the fact that railways are public utilities and ought some day to be the property of the people if they so choose

A COMPARISON. Of course the railway question Ontario is not such a large subject as it is at Ottawa. The Dominion Government is tackling the subject bravely, but they have a legacy of mistakes from the Conservative regime which complicate the problem to some extent. In Ontario the subject is comparatively free from these embarrassments, and the Ross Government starts with a pretty clear field. At Ottawa, they are not prepared to take the public ownership of railways into immediate favor, although they seem to be swinging round gradually in that direction. At Toronto, Premier Ross is more enterprising. He has only Ontario to consider, and as far as Ontario is concerned, he has discerned a growing sentiment for public ownership and a pretty deep-seated one for GOVERNMENT CONTROL

RAILWAYS. This is only natural in the banner province of the Dominion, the province which is in the van both in wealth and in intelligence. During this season the Ross Government has indicated in two cases its capacity to represent a progressive people. The question of government ownership will be investigated, and if the investigation is favorable, the Temiscaming Railway will likely be a government institution in construction, and perhaps in operation. The advisability of government centrol is fully recognized in the latest railway bargain made by the govern-of these things which have had much discussion in the press and on public platforms-the likelihood of public ownership in the future, government ontrol of rates in the meantime, and, in case of purchase, a price to the government of cost and interest minus the provincial subsidy and one-half of any Dominion subsidy.

A GOOD BARGAIN. The bargain not only recognizes these principles, but it confers practical advantages which are worth enumerating. In the first place, did not cost a cent in cash, and the lands which have been granted will be greatly benefited. The land grant is large, but much of it will never support a population. The land is arranged in alternate Government and railway township blocks. The township block idea seems to get over certain difficulties about taxation which complicate the C. P. R. situation in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. It will also encourage settle-ment and the establishment of municipal institutions. The alternate township blocks means also that the country all along the line of railroad will be equally developed, and not some particularly favored section. The rallway will run through new territory where settlement can be most easily established. From Sudbury west to Michipicoten there is a territory 175 miles wide at the western end, narrowing to about 40 miles at the east-ern end. All this is now unsettled wilderness. An extent of country as large as from Toronto to Kingston, reaching back forty miles, will be opened est effect upon the blood and liver, up for settlement. Put a thousand which are the real sources of catarrhal settlers a year in this country-as the diseases. company intends to do-give them a the new district seems pretty well safeguarded. MANY ADVANTAGES CONFERRED The settlement part of the bargain is accomplished by the construction of the North Shore line, but it is also worth noting that the construction along the peninsula confers other advantages. It will put old Ontario and New Ontario in closer touch, a good thing for both, inducing Old Ontario to make ventures of capital and energy in the great north land, and New Ontario to trade with us. If other good features than these are to be good features than these are to be sought in the railway bargain, it will to point out that this line may yet become a link in another transcontin ental highway which will give competition and make the railway probem of Canada easier of solution.

FAILED TO FIND FAULT. The leader of the Opposition could find no fault with the Manitoulin and North Shore agreement, although he declined to be as optimistic as Premier Ross about its future. However, he gave it his approval, and though his outlook was not so rosy,he pronounced the railway a good thing, because it was a necessity. Still, there may be some people who will object that Mr. Clergue will make a little money out Manitoulin and North Shore Railway. of the enterprise, Mr. Clergue's genius ment-that is the bargain with the This bargain acknowledges the force for exploitation has already borne fruit drug.

in the colony of industries he has es-stablished at the Sault. True, he takes toll for himself, but the benefit to the country is none the less because he has planted something better than a garden in the wilds of Algoma. The government and Mr. Clargue's com-pany have made a good bargain all round—good for the people, good for Ontario, good for the company. Until Ontario is prepared to go into railway building on its own account we can building on its own account we can hardly do better than to turn our railway enterprises over to men like Mr. Clergue, who are satisfied with a fair reward on their investment.

A DISGRUNTLED OPPOSITION. The events of the session have been enough to make Mr. Whitney get hot under the collar. The majorities in the legislature have been discouraging. The Ross Government has never been sustained by less than 10, and in some cases the majority ranged up to 15. However, this is not the least of it. Mr. Whitney finds old followers dropping out, on account of that hope de-ferred which maketh the heart sick. It is said that Mr. Marter will not run again. This deprives Mr. Whitney of one of the best front benchers, perhaps his most popular colleague. Mr. Foy is an able man, but somewhat aloofish. Colonel Matheson is not exactly a heavyweight in debate. One of the men who might hold up Mr. Whitney's hands shows signs of disaffection. Two or three times Mr. Carscallen, of Hamilton, has pulled against his leader, and in one instance he gave Mr. Witney a notable rebuke. Everybody remembers the to-do the leader of the opposition made over the Pritchett affidavits during the budget debate. Consequently, when Mr. Cars-

CENSUS MAN'S TRIBULATIONS

Some of the Trials of the Enumerators Now Among Us.

Answers and Experiences That Mcks Him Wonder Why He Took the Job.

Possibly one-third of the city, or, more correctly, of the original four wards, that constitute this census district, has been worked by the enumerators, and in the time already spent, they have had the many troubles and the few pleasures that are usually experienced. They have often found it Dr. Ainslee, in speaking of the new eatarrh cure, says: "I have tried the new catarrh remedy, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, upon 30 or 40 patients, with remarkably satisfactory results. They liave often found to a tedious undertaking to get the required information, for while many are pleasant about it, many others are not; markably satisfactory results. They pleasant about it, many others are not; and instances are not rare when the proverbial tooth-pulling process is an easy job compared to this manifold query business. It is remarkable how many people lack the slightest conception of the census man's object, despite all that has been published upon the subject, and undoubtedly read by the majority of citizens. The plaint of the enumerators has often been that sometimes it takes more time to tell why they came than to get the answers to their questions, and several have ex-pressed the wish that it was the men that they had to deal with, as the women didn't read anything but advertisements anyway. A NECESSARY OBLIGATION. It must be admitted that it is tedious to a housekeeper to be interrupt-ed in her work and plied with a lot of questions, but it is necessary that the task should be well and quickly done, and that it were best for all to do what possible. In the majority of cases there are own choosing. something like 182 questions to be asked. They deal with the general population, real estate schedule, mortuary statistics, agriculture, shade trees, live stock, and so on. As the work is carried on in the daytime even more than in the evening, it often falls to the woman to answer questions concerning matters that her husband usually attends to. She generally has vague ideas as to the value of the house and the land where it stands. She knows little more than that she has heard her husband remark that he would not sell the place for less than so many thousand dollars. Often this lack of accurate knowledge entails

QUESTION OF SALARIES. No question receives more ridiculous eplies than that referring to men's replies than that referring to men's salaries. Many people simply refuse to say anything. "Oh, I've got Schwab skinned to death on salary." "as much as the change of a $5 bill when it ain't garnisheed." "none too much." and "thirty cents" are some of the answers given the enumerators. Only the incomes of wage carners are ask. the incomes of wage-earners are asked for. Professional men, men in business, farmers or those living on their means are not required to state the amount of their incomes. When the enumerator went to the commissioner's office afterwards, he asked the man of another district when Michaelmas Day was, and was told that it was the Monday following Easter. He got an almanac and found the right date. Then, with the help of an ancient friend, he worked it out that his woman would be 7 years old on Sept. 29 last.

ITALIANS CAUSE TROUBLE. Much trouble was experienced with the Italians, none of whom apparently spoke English. "No talka English," was the invariable answer, and at last the commissioner had to hire an interpreter. If the head of the family is and eat, details that the government does not ask. At one of the houses in the district, while the enumerator was making frantic efforts to write what he could learn and guess, he spilt the ink on the carpet. He im mediately knew that while the English education of that housewife had been neglected, they had a few extremely expressive English expletives.

Dien Labor Law, the Chinese and the Record of Parties.

Mr. McCreary, M.P., for Selkirk, in the recent discussion on the alien labor act, which has been on the Dominion statute book since 1897—the previous Government having refused to take action-scouted the idea promulgated by the Opposition that the another view of the army which for had been of no benefit to the our present purpose we may neglect. workers of Canada. "But for this law," he said, "there would have arrived for work on the Crow's Nest Pass road sabout two thousand Italians. These people were hired by labor agents in Minneapolis and Duluth, and some were actually on the train to come to Canada; but when it was known that this act was in force, they were stop-The incident reminds us of an encounter between Mr. Raiph Smith,

M.P., who is president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Council, and Mr. Prior, M.P., for Victoria city. The last named, who was a member for years of the late Conservative Government, undertook, during the debate on the budget, to argue that the reason why the lumbermen of British Columbia had to employ Chinamen and Japs was because lumber was on the free list, and they were unable to compete with lumber sent from the United States. Mr. Ralph Smith, who has proved one of the most incisive debaters in the new House, took the ground that high taxes on commodities never increased the remuneration of the working classes, and he undertook to put the test to Mr. Prior. He asked that advocate of taxed lumber if he would guarantee that the British Columbia lumbermen would discharge their Chinese and Jap help in the event of a tax being put on lumber, for their benefit, by the Dominion Parliament. Mr. Prior said of course he could give no such guarantee, but -and he thought he "squelched" Mr. Smith by the retort—he had voted for a tax on Chinamen five times as great as that put on by the present Government. Mr. Smith promptly replied that Mr. Prior had been for many years a supporter and a member of a Government that turned a deaf ear to the appeal to them to increase the tax to the amount levied by the present Administration. He might have added, further, that prior to the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, there were but a mere handful of Mongolians on the Pacific coast of Canada; that the late Government did everything in its power to encourage the importation of Chinese into British Columbia, that they might be got to labor cheaply for their pet contractor, Onderdonk; that after the country had been deluged with Chinamen, they attempted to head off public condemnation by putting on a $50 tax on new comers. Thus the evil was encouraged at the start, and the small tax put on after the Chinamen were in sufficiently large numbers to menace the welfare of the white people in the Province. Moreover, though often importuned to increase the tax to $100, which the present Government last year imposed, the late Administration went out of office without having done anything to meet the evil. Their record in this respect is matched, as we have pointed out, by their record on the question of alien labor legislation. They simply toyed with the question until their defeat in 1896, and it was left for the present Government to pass the measure of 1897, which has had the salutory effect set forth above, and which has been used to compel justice being done in many instances,

The Russian Army.

The Russian Empire maintains ar immense army. It is said sometimes that five millions of soldiers could be put into the field. Of course, putting them in the field is one thing; maintaining them, and using them effectively when they are there, is another. There can be no doubt that the fact of the Russian army, whatever may be its present character, gives strong backing to Russian diplomacy. Tolstoi propounds the view that armies are not necessary against outside foes, and are a danger to the nation that maintains them. This is at the present time doubted by men as sincere and as courageous as the great Russian thinker. Setting aside the controversy as to this central principle, we may, probably allowing for a little coloring, accept Count Tolstoi's statements as to the army of his own land. He views the army as an instrument in the hand of the oppressors for keeping the poor in order, and it seems absurd to him that peasants should join an army where they can be used to persecute their brothers and fathers. That is

A boy is forced to enlist as soon as he has attained full physical strength; but at a time when his mental condition is still immature. "Then he is separated from all his former surroundings. He is made drunk with gin or beer, clothed in a gaudy dress. Shut up in barracks with other lads like himself, where he lives in utter idleness, that is, without doing any useful or reasonable work; he is taught the most absurd military rules, and names of things, how to use instruments of murder, etc." His point is that the great thing is to make a mere machine of the soldier, hence he is taught that the supreme virtue is obedience to his superiors; but is not taught selfrespect and obedience to real moral law; but rather that the view taken is that the degradation of the man is necessary to the making of the soldier. For acts of disobedience they are punished in the most cruel way, someimes even by death. At the same time, drunkenness, depravity, idleness, foul language, and murder, instead of being forbidden, are encouraged. The soldiers are treated to gin; they are taught shameful songs, and trained to mur-

If these passages, leaving out the murder, which we suppose refers to killing in war, represents the Russian methods, and the moral condition of the Russian army, it is a sad state of things. Count Tolstoi's point is that you cannot have an army without these things being widely prevalent. In that we think there is some exaggeration. But we are afraid that this much great bodies of men into barracks, and at this moment, individually, the most must be admitted, that removing separating them from the common healthy pursuits of ordinary life, does tend to produce artificial and immoral conditions. From what we have read of the British army, we cannot believe in such widespread rottenness; and though we regret the necessity for the South African war, we accept Lord Roberts' testimony that there never was a more sober and orderly body of men brought together for military pur-

An Unconventional Teacher.

The Bibelot for April contains "Lyrles from Ionica," by William Cary. It appears that this gentleman bore originally the name of Johnson, which he changed to Cary on his accession to some small property in Devonshire. He was born in 1820, of an old Devonshire stock, was educated as a King's Scholar at Eton, and went on in due course to King's College, Cambridge Though pre-eminent as a composer in Greek and Latin, he was also an accurate and philosophical student in history and moral science. It is, however, as a teacher that we call special attention to him here. "It was as a teacher and a talker that William Johnson most impressed himself on his generation; there are many among a very distinguished roll of pupils, containing such names as Lord Rosebery, Lord Halifax, Mr. Edward Lyttleton, and Mr. John Julian Sturgis, who attribute the first quickening, not where, under the old order of things, only of intellectual life, but also of serious enthusiasm, to him." Yet this the honest worker would have had to William Johnson was hardly a sucsuffer. That the law is being amended cessful teacher. So far as the average by the Government is further evidence boy is concerned, he was not a good If such were deemed necessary, that disciplinarian, though many of the the Liberal party, as represented in boys were kept in awe by his power Parliament by the Ministers and their of penetrating irony. His lectures supporters, believe in acts and not were epigrammatic and suggestive, but it needed a very clever boy to see the depth of meaning.

Here is a picture of the teacher in the dingy schoolroom, with his division of 50 or 60 boys: "Here, standing aside on his crooked yet sturdy legs, Paris Exposition. And, while on general principles it is never wise to prowould comment, lecture, question, to the perpetual delight of the few who were wise enough to feel what a teacher they had, and sensible enough to secure seats close to him; of what was going on in the further corners of the room, as long as the boys kept their peace, he was almost totally ignorant, occasionally flying a book, the nearest volume at hand, if a boy was either flagrantly unoccupied or susspeaks, throughout the Dominion at piciously absorbed." "His short sight the last general election, would not was almost phenomenal. The legend of his pursuing a black hen some way down Eton high street one day, when Ottawa, which has suffered much of a high wind was blowing, under the late from fires, has now to deplore the impression that it was his hat, which loss of the Russell Theater, closely ad- all the time was perched securely upon joining the famous Russell House. Such men, though they seem more cut out for the quiet, contemplative life than for rough contact with the world, do in their own way exert a stimulating influence, and it is an admitted fact that, though England may be somewhat behind in fechnical education, she has produced great teachers in many departments, men who have influenced the early life of her great statesmen.

Canadian Boys.

Nobody can walk about these fine spring days without noting the number of rude, unmannered boys on our streets. It is not necessary that a boy should be a "molly" or a Little Lord Fauntleroy, but the lad who shouts rude remarks at ladies and gentlemen on the street, who smokes gentlemen on the street, who smokes and swears and uses foul language, who never thinks of saying "please, sir," or "thank you, ma'am," who tyrannizes over smaller children, is no credit to the home whence he comes. How many parents have reason to blush for their children! - Hamilton

As to the manners of boys, referred we really cannot say how countries; but probably Canadian boys are as good as any. deal of the mischiefgood making of boys everywhere arises largely from excess of animal spirits, the best method, ordinarily, of dealing with high-spirited boys is not so much the suppression of their spirits as in the proper direction of their energies into unobjectionable channels. It is desirable, of course, that altke in the home and in school, as much attention as possible should be paid to the cultivation, not of obsequiousness, but of genuine politeness. On the other hand, it is not desirable that anything should be done to destroy that forceful individuality and manliness sure to be sorely needed in the after battles of life. The true mean between the overaggressive boy and the "mollycoddle" is, like everything in this world, not always easy of attainment. The serious illness of Principal Caven at Toronto will be heard with general regret, irrespective of denom inationalism. Principal Caven is a singularly able man, and for many years no one has begun to approach him as regards influence in the General Assembly of Canada. His quietness of manner would at first give one no impression of his intellectual strength and lucidity of mind. As president of the Pan-Presbyterian Council, he may rightly be said to be byterian in the world.

An old landmark in Toronto is being torn down-Rebert Walker's Golden Lion building-to make room for a paiatial hotel after the style of the best hotels in New York. 'There is no dcubt Montreal has reaped many advantages from its possession of a great hotel. For some reason a noticeable hotel is one of the best advertisements any city can have, and seems to be talked of outside almost more than anything else. Toronto is well situated for tourist travel from the United States, being convenient for Muskoka, the St. Lawrence, and the Upper Lakes. Toronto is getting to be quite a chunk of a town, and when it gets its palace hotel will be more airy than ever,

KAISER CONSULTS A SOOTH-SAYER.

Berlin, April 9.-Mme. De Thebes the famous old chiromancer, who is said to have foretold Khartoum's fall, the Carnot assassination, Faure's sudden death and Victoria's demise, the latter to the exact hour, claims she was summoned here ten days ago by order of the kaiser, who expressed a desire to consult her.

Mme. De Thebes attributes the violence of the emperor's recent Barlin speech to what she found in the cards. Part of this was a prediction of the disruption of the German empire, precipitated by the discontent of the minor sovereigns against the preponderance of Prussia. Prussia, itself, she told him, will rise against him, led by a republican and a socialist, on the first pretext. Following all this coming turmoil and the death of the Austrian emperor, causing a separation of the Hungarian portion, there will be a general European war over the allotment of the remaining provinces. Mme. De Thebes predicted that the kaiser will die in England 23 years hence, exiled by his people. She refused to give further details of the interview beyond reporting the farewell words of the emperor: 'Adieu, madam, your predictions won't sway me, but I shall be interested to see what share of them come true. THE KAISER PESSIMISTIC. Berlin, April 9.—Careful investigation at Potsdam regarding the circumstances in which Emperor William delivered his latest military address developed the information that, during a review last Tuesday, not Friday, as originally cabled, of a number of military bodies belonging to the Potsdam garrison, extraordinary precautions were taken to prevent any representatives of the press or other civilians obtaining knowledge of his majesty's remarks. From persons who ware marks. From persons who were pre-sent it was learned that the Kaiser spoke substantially as follows: "A hand from out of the people was recently raised against me to my intense sorrow. Evidently serious times are coming, which will try our mettle. I know that the army is true to traditions and to the solemn oath it remain has taken. I know it will steadfast and faithful to me. My conviction is especially strong regarding the guards and regarding this regiment now present, which is tied to the Hohenzollerns by indissoluble bonds, as the past has shown during the trou-

CANADIAN PAN-AM. BUILDING. Commenting on an item in the Buffalo Express to the effect that the Canadian building at the Pan-American Exposition is in such an out-of-theway corner that a special guide will be required to direct visitors to it, the Free Press says: "If the building is not yet begun the exhibition will probably be over before it is completed, so perhaps the more inaccessible and out of vision it is kept the better." Mr. H. McBride, of this city, who is the architect of the building, says that both the item in the Express and the comment in the Free Press are miseading, and a reflection on those in charge of the Canadian exhibit. The building, as a matter of fact, is now being roofed. Its location is one the best in the exposition grounds. It is directly opposite the stadium, where the international sports are to be held, and is convenient to any portion of the exposition.

THE TAR MACADAM.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review: The members of the board of works returned home last evening from their tour of inspection to western cities, having visited, London, St. Thomas and Detroit. The councilors were somewhat disconcerted in their views. After visiting Hamilton and hearing such glowing accounts of the splendid results achieved there with tar macadam as a street paving material, they scarcely knew what to make of the poor satisfaction secured in Lonwith the same material. In the latter city, the Sentinel-Review is informed by one of the board, a pentheir sister, Mrs. Aaron Kerr, London, knife could be stuck into the pavement almost any place. The explanation is said to be partly due to the fact, that No. 91, was held in while in Hamilton no tar macadam is noon, resulting as for allowed to be put down after the 1st of October, the London pavement was no finished until December. In addition to this, however, it is believed that the material used in the Forest City was of an inferior kind. "London is not dissatisfied with its tar macadam," said Engineer Gray-don today. "One small portion might have been a little better if constructed earlier, but it's a good pavement all the same. About the material, though, there's been no better material used in the country than we used here. Our material, foundation and construction were better than Hamilton's, and the pavement is splendid for residential streets."

St. Petersburg, April 8. — The stop-page of the works in the Province of Ekaterinoslav has caused 10,000 workmen to become idle. The government, with a view of preventing disorders, political agitators being busy, is sending the unemployed gratuitously to the places whence they originally came. The closing of the factories in Kharkoff has produced much unrest there and trouble is likely to occur during the Easter festivities, not only in the districts of Ekaterinoslav and Kharkoff, but also in the factory quarters of St. Petersburg, Tula, Moscow and Briansk, where work is almost at a

New York, April 7.—It was a somber Easter—rain-coated and much umbrellaed. It did not rain enough to drive the people straight from church to their homes, nor did it shine enough to drive them in the old-time throngs to Fifth ayenue. Altogether it was the drearlest Easter in twenty years in New York city.

At all the churches in the city elaborate Easter services were held, and the weather seemed to have no appreciable effect on the attendance. At Old Trinity Church more than 1,000 people were unable to find even standing room within the doors. The music in the church was of the finest character. Many of the graves in both Trinity and St. Paul's graveyards, were decorated with flowers in honor of the day. It St. Paul's the huge tomb of the Rhinelanders was fairly buried beneath hydrangeas, hyacinths and Easter lihes, and in Trinity graveyard there was the same lavish display of flowers.

CAPTURED A COUNT.

New York, April 8 .- The romantic story of the courtship of Miss Marie Satterfield, the daughter of Mrs. John Satterfield, of Buffalo, and Franz Josef, Count Von Larisch of Austria, has become known at Allentown, Pa., through friends of the couple, according to a special to the Journal and Advertiser. The prospective bride, who has just reached her majority, met her future husband a year ago, while touring the continent. The count, who is 22, came to America several months ago, proposed marriage and was accepted. WEST'S MINSTREL JUBILEE. The William H. West Minstrels this season have been doing a most phe-nomenal business, the largest in point of receipts ever recorded by any min-strel organization. On the Pacific coast tour, just brought to a close, the West receipts averaged for nine weeks over $1,000 a performance, which is the record in that part of the world for any kind of a performance. This, of course, is partly attributed to good times, but principally to the very excellent entertainment offered by Mr. West this season. It is said to be most satisfying and the most perfect minestral organization even presented in minstrel organization ever presented in this country. It is a high-class, dignified and meritorious performance, introducing some of the most expensive features and most renowned vocalists ever seen with a minstrel show. West Minstrels form one of the attractive offerings of the season by the Opera House management. They will give a matinee and evening performance on Saturday of the current week.

Service of Praise.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was completely filled last night by an audience which listened with appreciation to the anniversary service of praise given by the choir of the church, under the leadership of Mr. C. E. Wheeler. The service was undoubtedly the most successful of the kind yet held in the church. The choir was assisted by Miss Greta Masson, of Toronto, Master Harry Carson, boy soprano, and other local talent. Miss Masson's rich and admirably-cultivated voice was heard to especial advantage in Barnard's "Plains of Peace" and Shelley's "Abide With Dr. Stirton, Guelph, who is in Toron-Me." The chorus work of Mr. Wheeler's choir, and duet numbers of individual members were distinctly creditable to both the leader and the choir, as a whole. The anthem soloists were Mrs. A. Brown, Miss Hartson and Messrs. McIntosh and Galpin. The church managers entertained the choir and their friends at supper after the concert. The evening's programme, which was introduced by Rev. Dr. Johnston, was as follows:

Care of Plants in Spring.

(From the Ladies' Home Journal.) In the springtime, when plants are making strong and rapid growth, particular attention must be given to training them. If neglected in this respect they soon get beyond control, and the only way to bring them into and the only way to bring them into subjection then is by sacrificing a good deal of the growth they have made. This there is no need of doing if the training is begun in the right way and at the right time. If a branch is inclined to outgrow others, pinch off the end of it and keep all such branches from growing by pinching until other branches have had a chance to catch up. If a plant is not the skin a soft, smooth and white appearance. All irritations caused by hard water, cold winds and exposure are removed. Chapped hands, face and lips are not known where this lotion is used.

Price 25 cents.

Chance to catch up. If a plant is not bushy and compact, make it so by pinching off the ends of all its branches. Keep up this treatment until as many branches have started as you think the plant ought to have. If you desire a plant to grow in tree form, train it to one stalk until it reaches the height you desire and then nip off its top and force it to branch. Save the branches at the top to form the head of the tree. If you want a Save the branches at the top to form the head of the tree. If you want a shrubby plant, begin the pinching process when it is small, thus forcing it to branch close to the pot. The old saying of "as the twig is bent the tree inclines" applies pertinently to the training of plants when in their early stages of development. stages of development.

TANNING BY ELECTRICITY.

Some years ago a number of English scientists reported on and highly recommended a system of electric tanning it was proposed to introduce into this country from the continent. Not only did the electrical process largely diminish the time required by the hides in the pits, but the resulting product was stated to be relatively superior to the material treated in the normal The electrical process was scouted with derision by the London tanners, who found it impossible to understand how any improvement could be made upon a process whose goodness had been demonstrated by long and time-honored experience, and the rash innovators soon made an ignominious retreat. The Groth electric tanning system, however, has been working most suc-cessfully in various parts of the continent during the past four or five years, and has even discovered at last a convert in England. In Shropshire, a short time ago, ten tan pits were converted for electrical tanning, and the result has proved so satisfactory that provision is now being made for 20 more. Meanwhile, the bulk of the tanneries are still persevering in the methods of their forefathers, only advancing upon their ancestors so far as to reduce the time (and, therefore, the quality of the leather) they give to the impregnation of the skins with the tannic acid, a concession to the modern spirit of haste in industrial methods that has met with but scant welcome from the public.—London Ex-

"Well, I suppose Norwood would feel that you were using him shabbily, and, for the present, perhaps it will be as well for you to remain where you are; but you'll come home to live, Clif. It isn't hardly respectable for my son to be staying at a third-rate boarding house. You can hardly do any better than that on the salary you are getting," Mr. Vining concluded, with a mild look of disgust.

Clifton smiled.

"Not quite so bad as that, father," he returned, pleasantly, "and I am leading a far more praiseworthy life than I have ever done before, with my simple fare and habits; but if you desire me to come home I shall be very glad to do so; if what I am about to tell you meets with your approval..." Clifton smiled.

what I am about to tell you meets with your approval—"
"What! more confessions, Clif!" interposed his father, jocosely. "I begin to think we are turning over a new leaf in good earnest. Well, what is it?"
"Since I left home I have met a young lady to whom I have become deeply attached." Clifton began, with rising color. tached," Clifton began, with rising color.

Mr. Vining gave vent to a soft, prolonged whistle at this unexpected infor-

Fallen in love, eh?" he exclaimed, but "Failen in love, eh?" he exclaimed, but chucking inwardly as it occurred to him that Blanche Norwood might perhaps be the fair charmer, and nothing could have pleased him better than to have Clifton marry the brilliant daughter of his friend. "Wel, this is news indeed, Clif. Who is the tavored lady?"

"Her name is Livingstone—Shirley Livingstone," Clifton responded.

"What!" and Mr. Vining wheeled about and squarely confronted his son, a look

It was the strangest thing in the world! Shirley Livingstone was the name of the pretty girl who had shared his seat that morning on his way out of town, and who had so skillfully relieved him of the troublesome cinder.

He had voted her a very charming little lady, but whether she was the sort of person he would be willing to receive into his farnily as a daughter-in-law was altogether a different question.

Ciffon regarded his father in surprise, wendering what could have forced such

Vining inquired, bending a searching look upon the young man, and suspicious that he knew of the morning's adventure. "I think not, sir," Clifton innocently answered. Where did you meet her?

Who-what is she?" Mr. Vining demanded, and recovering himself somewhat.
"Well, there is a story to it." Clifton returned, flushing, yet determined to be entirely straightforward in the matter.

I may say" he added with a smile, "that I may say," he added, with a smile, "that you were responsible for the occurrence." "I responsible?" repeated Mr. Vining, wonderingly. "How can that be pos-

It is not only possible-it is the fact," Clifton replied, and then proceeded to relate the adventure he had had in Houston street, and how he had saved the lovely girl from a violent death. He gave him an account of Shirley's early life, of the tender manner in which she had been reared, spoke of her many accomplishments, and dwelt enthusiastically upon the beauty of her person, as well as upon the loveliness of her character.

Mr. Vining listened to this with a face which gradually grew black with wrath, figuratively speaking, though literally he was deadly white from repressed pas-

He allowed his son to complete his He allowed his son to complete his story without interruption, for he meant to get to the bottom of the affair, and thus ascertain just what he had to contend with before committing himself. Clifton made no reservation, for he wished his father to understand exactly where he stood, and finally concluded by begging him to sanction his engagement with Shirley and allow his mother and sister to visit her.

with Shirley and allow his mother and sister to visit her.

"She has stirred all that is noblest and best in my nature," he said, with deep feeling, as Mr. Vining could not at once find words to reply. "She has made me desire to become a man, in the highest sense of the term, and with her love to influence and spur me onward I feel that I can attain to almost any position in life. I feel that this is the turning-point with me, father, and so I pray that you will countenance my union with Shirley."

with me, father, and so I pray that you will countenance my union with Shirley."
Mr. Vining found his voice at last. He looked up, white and stern, into the face of his son.
"And you dare to come to me with this sickening tale! You, my son, and a Vining! Having been reared amid luxury and the most refining influences, you now have the face to confess to an infatuation for a low girl from the slums!" the man cried, wrathfully, his eyes blazing with anger, his whole frame quivering with passion. "Was it not enough," he went on, with increasing anger, "that you should leave your home in the way you passion. "Was it not enough," he went on, with increasing anger, "that you hould leave your home in the way you did, to create a scandal among our fash-sonable friends, without adding this fresh disgrace to other follies? Where is your self-respect? Where is your pride, that you should presume to come to me and beg me to sanction your union with such a person?"

"Shirley is not a girl from the slums," Clifton responded, with outward calmness, though he was trembling with repressed excitement. "As I told you before, she has been most carefully reared and educated; indeed, in point of knowledge, of culture and of accomplishments, she is vastly my superior. It was only the force of circumstances which took her into that low quarter of the city. She was almost driven to despair upon finding herself there, and became so desperate to escape that she nearly sacrificed her life, as I have said."

Don't Neglect

A Cough.

"Foo!! do you think, for a moment, that I would ever countenance your marriage with a girl who has such low connections, even though she were a walking encyclopedia of knowledge?" demanded Mr. Vining, hoarsely.

Clifton flushed scarlet at the epithet applied to him; but he forced himself to be calm, for he was determined to win the day for Shiritey if possible.

"But her connections need never be known," he said. "Shirley herself repudiates them, and almost everyone has relatives who are no credit to them. The relatives who are no credit to them. -it is enough that my son has been hood-winked by her. I have met her!" thundered Mr. Vining.
"You have met Shirley! When—where?" demanded Clifton, greatly surprised.

"This very day."

"Impossible!" the young man returned, "for she was out of the city all the morning, and I have but just come from her."

morning, and I have but just come from her."

"And I also was out of the city all the morning," said his father. "The girl happened to come into the very car I was in, and occupied a seat beside me. She has a pretty face, I admit. Her manners are well enough, too, while she showed considerable nerve in getting a beastly cinder out of my eye. Of course, I asked her name, and told her mine. But were she a hundredfold more beautiful—were she as learned as a Bacon, or had the manners of a duchess, you should never marry her. I will have no such canaille allied with my family," he concluded, with almost frenzied vehemence.

"Father, you must not speak of Miss Livingstone in such terms in my presence." Clifton sternly commanded, as he arose and confronted his angry parent, "I love the girl with all my heart, and she shall not be maligned in my hearing."

"I believe you are an idiot," growled his companion. "You have surely lost your wits, and are a fit subject for some bunetic acceptance."

"Say rather that I have come to my senses, and am prepared to live as a man ought to live, thanks to the girl whom you so despise." the young man gravely remarked.

"I had begun to hope that you were going to reform, until you told me this sickening love story," said Mr. Vining.
"I fondly believed that you had made up your mind to try and be a credit to your family; but now—" your mind to try and be a credit to your family; but now—"
"You are right, father; I have been so trying," Clifton returned. "And I want to impress upon you that the change in me is due entirely to the influence of the lovely woman whom you have been so abusing. It was she who made me ashamed of my wasted life. I admit that I was going downhill as fast as a young man can go; I was a reckless spendthrift, seeking my own pleasure, and caring little for anything else, until I met Miss Livingstone, and she made me feel that there is something better worth living for."

for."

Mr. Vining uttered an angry oath at this point; but though Clifton changed color, he continued, as if he had not heard the interruption.

"She has won my respect, my admiration, my heart; I can love no other woman—no other can ever be my wife—"

"Do you mean to defy me to my face by telling me that you intend to marry this girl?" demanded Mr. Vining, aggressively.

"I do not wish to do anything that appears like defiance, father, Clifton quietly replied. "But I am surely old enough to judge for myself in a matter of this nature—you will perhaps remember how you felt yourself when you were to Church Membership Without Confirmation.

Hamilton, Ont., April 9. - Contrary to Bishop Dumoulin's warning, Rev Thos. Geoghegan, rector of St. Peter's Anglican Church, on Sunday admitted about twenty young people to full membership of the church and permitted them to partake of the Holy Sacrament without first having been confirmed by the bishop. Since Bishop Dumoulin suspended Rev. Mr. Geoghegan from the priesthood for seven years for immorality and Mr. Geoghegan's restoration to his rectorship on his appeal to the House of Bishops Bishop of Niagara See has refused to visit the church, and when requested to do so by Rev. Mr. Geoghegan declined to permit them to do this, and against the warning of the bishop, and he alleges following a rubric of the church, he admitted the members to full com-
