

STREET RAILWAY HAS NO PROPOSAL TO MAKE Proposed Tariff Would Cost London $500,000 Annually

SAYS BUSES TRANSIENT TRADERS

Street Railway Vice-President
Discusses Position of New Transportation Units.

NO PROPOSITION COMING

Too Late To Get Council To Act On Matter Before the Election.

The London Street Railway company is not contemplating making any further proposition to the city council as to purchase price, extension, or price by arbitration, Richard Ivey, vice-president of the street railway, stated this afternoon.

This means that the people will hardly vote on any purchase price or agreement as advertised by the mayor at the coming municipal elections.

"What's the use of making a proposition?" queried Mr. Ivey. "It is too late to do anything before election. There are always men in the council to fight it anyway, whether it be for the interests of the city or not."

"Transient Traders"

"Merchants would put up a kick if transient traders were allowed to operate in London without paying a business tax. The buses are in the same class. They come into the city, they are only here for a time, and they don't pay any taxes."

Mr. Ivey stated that he could not say whether or not the street railway would take legal action against the buses, as he didn't go into the matter from a legal standpoint.

He predicted that the buses would not last long, as he was convinced that they could not operate on a level fare and make money.

"They came here at the best season of the year for business," said Mr. Ivey. "I feel, however, that they cannot make money unless they are crowded to capacity every hour of the day, and that is impossible in a city of this size. The result is that nobody makes any money."

Dr. Douglass Disagrees.

Ald. Dr. L. H. Douglass, who was responsible for bringing the Metropolitan Bus Company to London, does not agree with Mr. Ivey. He declares that the bus people are delighted with the business they have received in London, so much so, that more buses will be brought here in the near future.

"The buses have certainly put some semblance of life into the street railway," said Dr. Douglass. "I notice that they are running 'trippers' on the Richmond line, from Horton to Chesapeake, and have generally speeded up. They will have to improve a whole lot more before they can really compete with the buses."

No Bus Bylaw.

Dr. Douglass stated that there would be no bylaw as the coming elections asking for an exclusive franchise for buses.

"There is no necessity for it just now," he stated. "The bus company will demonstrate just what service it can give, and possibly there will be something next year for the people to decide."

Vining Urges Support For Little's Election

JARED VINING.

WHOLE-HEARTED support for E. S. Little as London's representative in the federal parliament is expressed by Jared Vining, one of London's best known public men, who was himself nominated at the Liberal convention on October 9 and who withdrew in Mr. Little's favor.

"I urge support for Mr. Little at the polls," said Mr. Vining in a statement given to The Advertiser. "Both as an energetic representative of the city itself, with the experience and training of six years in public life, and as the supporter of the prime minister whose moderate policies present the only hope of uniting all Canada, I am convinced that Mr. Little should be the choice of all who have at heart the needs of Canada and of London."

"I nominated Mr. Little myself, I shall of course vote for him and I venture the hope that all my friends will vote for him also."

Appeal of London's Mayor Enlists Aid of Murdock

Mayor Wenig has expectations of getting a relief grant to be devoted to extra cost for winter work for the unemployed, providing the Liberal government is returned to power at the coming election.

"I received a letter from the minister of labor, the Hon. James Murdock, this morning," stated the mayor. "I wrote him asking consideration for London and his stand on the question of the government helping us out by paying part of the excess cost involved in giving unemployed work in the winter on city construction."

Mr. Murdock tells me that personally he is in sympathy with my request for assistance in relief work and that he will lay our claim before the cabinet in a most favorable light. It looks as if we are going to get somewhere this year."

BRITISH TO QUIT COLOGNE

Evacuation of Bridgehead To Take Place in Fulfillment of Security Pact.

PROMISES TO GERMANS

Early Removal of Troops Will Put European Peace Plans
On Solid Footing.

Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, Oct. 19.—Evacuation of the Cologne bridgehead, now held by British troops, is expected to result from the agreement reached in the security conference, although it was said in French official circles today that no promise, verbal or written, had been made to that effect.

Foreign Secretary Chamberlain of Great Britain and the French foreign minister, M. Briand, who returned today from Locarno, were discussing with Premier Poincaré this afternoon the question of realigning the territory in the Rhineland between the forces of the allied powers after the evacuation of Cologne. This was taken to mean that the bridgehead would be returned to the Germans within a few weeks.

Renewal of German co-operation in the administration of the occupied territory is being considered by the allies.

The desire is, it is said, in official circles, to give the Germans every satisfaction possible in the administration of German territory on the left bank of the Rhine, and it is thought the best way to attain this end, pending final evacuation, is to ask the Germans to name a new representative on the Rhineland committee to take the place which under the organization of the occupation was reserved them.

The activity of the allies on these questions immediately after the close of the security conference is taken to indicate that the French arrangement to take the place which under the organization of the occupation was reserved them.

The child could tell nothing about himself except that his name was Walter. However, when he saw a crucifix he recognized it, and declared his mother was with Jesus. Later on he said his sister Nettie went to St. John's school.

Early this morning Father Chisholm of St. Mary's church was notified. He visited the district from which St. John's school draws its pupils, and by this means found out that a child had been missed.

Neither of the parents was able to speak English, and it was for this reason that the police had not been contacted with.

LITTLE APPEALS ON GOOD RECORD

APPEAL FOR AUTOMOBILES FINDS GENEROUS RESPONSE

An appeal to owners of motor cars for assistance in getting out the voters of the city on behalf of E. S. Little, Liberal candidate in the coming election, went out from campaign headquarters this morning. Mr. Little already has the assurance of a host of friends that he may count on them for their automobiles on voting day, and the latest appeal makes it certain that there will be a veritable fleet of cars available for use of the Liberal candidate. The city organization of the Liberals has now assumed formidable proportions and the workers are settling down an intensive campaign that will mean success on the 29th.

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, Oct. 18.—E. S. Little, K.C., writer on constitutional matters, has addressed an open letter to each of the parliamentary candidates in Ottawa on the question of ratification of the Locarno "security pact" as just signed.

"The United Kingdom and Italy," the letter states, "are promising that in case of war between Germany and France they will join in the hostilities as against the aggressor nation. Is it your opinion that Canada should make similar promise?"

He proposes to endeavor to have announcements on the issue from all party leaders.

Four-year-old Polish boy who was lost in North London and remained unidentified for nearly a day.

CHILD OF FOUR IS LOST BY THAMES

Soon Restored to Parents, Though Unable To Tell His Name.

Found crying on the banks of the Thames last night about half past nine by Emmett Brennan, Walter Walaschiski, four years old, of Simeco street, was restored to his parents last afternoon by Father Chisholm of St. Mary's church.

The little lad wandered away from home early yesterday afternoon. How he got to Brouhaide is problematical. Returning home from a walk in the country, Mr. Brennan heard sobs while "crossing the Brouhaide bridge. On investigation he found the lad sitting on the bank of the river crying his eyes out. He picked him up and carried him to the home of Mrs. Leathorne, 1121 Richmond street.

The child could tell nothing about himself except that his name was Walter. However, when he saw a crucifix he recognized it, and declared his mother was with Jesus. Later on he said his sister Nettie went to St. John's school.

Honesty of Car Sweeper Saves Immigrant $1,370

New Arrival in London Overjoyed To Recover Cash From C.N.R. Worker.

ROLL DROPPED IN CAR

Henry Davis Gets Back Life Savings by Telegram Appeal to Toronto.

If Diogenes or his reincarnation had been present with the now famous lantern at the union station in Toronto Saturday night his quest would have ended.

Richard Bryant, a car sweeper employed by the C. N. R. in that city, climbed aboard the International Limited when it arrived there from Montreal at 5:40, and proceeded with his work of cleaning up the aisles before the express pulled out again for Chicago. Prosaic work generally, but productive at times of a little smile or a little tear. This time it was an act that chased the gloom from a little family of immigrants here in London, Ontario, and an act that marked the Queen City worker as a man of sterling worth.

Henry Davis, who was on his way from England to the Forest City to join his wife and family, became aware of the loss of his funds, the savings accumulated through several years' hard work. A wire was sent back to Toronto, and this morning Mr. Davis received his money from local officials of the road. In thanking them for the help they had rendered, he was loud in his praise of the honesty of the Toronto employee in turning it over so promptly and also for the efficiency of the C.N.R. in returning the entire sum to him almost immediately.

Winnipeg Accidents Takes Lives of Three

Nurse Killed When Auto Stalls in Path of Express Train.

Certain That King Will Make Real Tariff Survey

RAY LAWSON, of Lawson & Jones, Limited, printers, publishers and lithographers, with factories in London and Montreal, believes that a scientific study of the tariff, as proposed by Premier King, and favored by E. S. Little, Liberal candidate in London, is what industry in Canada will welcome. Mr. Lawson is directly connected with industries that have over 1,000 employees. Here is his opinion:

"We are working in our business under a tariff that is a remnant of the old National Policy, which may have been a very good thing at that time, but which does not meet the conditions as we face them today. In our work, for instance, we find it necessary at times to import certain grades of paper, and on these we pay a duty of 35 per cent. We can import the same stock with nine colors printed or lithographed on it by paying only 22 1/2 per cent duty, an arrangement which was made by a Conservative administration."

"To my mind that is not fair to the workmen engaged in the printing and lithographing industry in Canada. The duty should be graded on the extent to which the article is advanced toward the completed stage before it enters Canada. Products that are looked on as raw materials to enter into the process of manufacture should, I believe, come into Canada at a comparatively low rate of duty, and this should be raised as the process of manufacture in outside countries increases. What would help our industry and give work to a far greater number would be to have a certain rate of duty on plain papers. When one color is printed on this outside of Canada the rate should increase, and so on as to the number of colors or to the extent of manufacture that could be done economically in this country."

"I believe that the return of the King government will see an immediate step taken toward a scientific study of just such problems as this. Sir Henry Drayton, when he had the opportunity, made his survey, but that was the end of it. I am convinced that Mr. King means just what he says when he speaks of a scientific study of tariff conditions by an advisory commission. That is exactly what industry wants and it will result in better employment conditions for our people. For that reason I am supporting E. S. Little, the King candidate in London."

MEIGHEN'S COAL PLAN IS COSTLY

Tariff On Bituminous Would Mean $500,000 Burden
Annually For London.

UP GOES LIVING COST

Coal Dealers Laugh at Opposition Leader's Suggestion At Edmonton.

A tariff of $3 per ton on American bituminous coal, making the price of that commodity equal with that of Alberta coal here, would cost London more than half a million dollars annually.

Manufacturing concerns, which a high tariff policy is aimed to protect, would be seriously affected. They would be forced to expend a third greater amount annually than they do at present for their supply of fuel. Similarly the householder would be directly compelled to pay an increased amount. A coal tariff, therefore, would not only entail a greatly increased expenditure, but would also tend to increase the cost of production and the cost of living.

Argument Ridiculed.

With these arguments, local coal dealers this morning "laughed at" Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen's declaration, in an address last week at Edmonton, that he would put a tariff on coal should he be returned to power. "His proposal is ridiculous and was made in the western city entirely for political purposes," said William Martin, of the Martin Anthracite Coal Company.

In an approximate analysis of the situation should a tariff ever be placed on American coal, London dealers point out:

The present price of high grade American steam coal in London is $6 per ton. The price of the same variety of Alberta coal is $9 per ton.

A tariff that would make American importation would be the difference between the two prices, or more. A duty of $3 per ton at least would have to be set, and taking this amount as an approximate tariff necessary to shut out importation, the following conservative estimates of increased expenditures are compiled: increased expenditures of about 200,000 tons of steam coal are used annually, the increased cost would be $600,000. In the domestic market, where more than 12,000,000 tons are imported annually, according to figures for 1922 from the department of customs and excise, the increased cost would be $36,000,000.

Big Firms Hard Hit.

The tariff would cost the McClary Manufacturing Company in London, in which one of the largest firms of 5,000 tons of imported coal is used in a year, $18,000. The London Rolling Mills, using about 10,000 tons a year, would pay $30,000 more than at the present time. The McCormick Manufacturing Company, using 4,000 tons, would pay an increased sum of $12,000. The Helena Costume Company, using 1,000 tons, would pay $6,000, and the two London breweries, using 3,000 tons each, would pay $18,000. The Ontario division of the C. N. R., consuming about 200,000 tons a year, would pay an increased amount of $600,000.

The object of a coal tariff is, of course, to stimulate production of Alberta and Nova Scotia coal, and its sale in Ontario, and freight rates, and the hauling of coal for a great distance, make it impossible to compete with American coal in an Ontario market, without a tariff or without reduced freight rates. An alternative solution to insure the sale of Alberta coal here would be for the government to bonus the railways for hauling the product to this market, where it can be sold at a competitive price. This scheme, however, would also entail an increased expenditure, the dealers say, and where London itself, for example, would not directly pay the price difference of the American and Canadian coal, the individual in the country as a whole would be called upon to foot the increase through taxation.

INSIDE ENEMIES CHURCH'S WORST

Dr. A. Grant Preaches at St. George's Presbyterian Church.

"Enemies from within are far more dangerous than those without," Rev. Dr. Andrew S. Grant, general secretary of the Presbyterian church in Canada, told the congregation at St. George's Presbyterian church at their anniversary services Sunday morning. "The 'wet blankets,' the members of the body who continually cry, 'We can never hope to accomplish this' or 'That is impossible of attainment,' are the real enemies of the church, and do many times more harm to her than those who desert her or those who assail her walls from the outside," continued Dr. Grant.

For the anniversary sermon Dr. Grant took as his text, Nehemiah, chapter 4 and verse 6, "For the people had a mind to work." Comparing the reorganization of the Presbyterian church to the rebuilding of the walls and fortification of Jerusalem after the dispersal of the tribes, the doctor pointed out that it is the continuing Presbyterianism pressed on by the God-given task of evangelizing the world as if the whole success of the work rests on the shoulders of each individual, in short, if they had a mind to work, as had the ancient Israelites, God would prosper their labors with an abundant success.

"If this sad upheaval in the Canadian Presbyterian church has done nothing else, it has fulfilled a great purpose in driving us back upon our own resources, back to more careful and prayerful consideration of the truth conveyed to us in the Holy Bible, and back to the family altar. Sunday school helps and leaflets are all right for home study of lessons, but in the Sunday schools we should place the word of God in the hands of our children, that they become as familiar with it as they should," said Dr. Grant. "The same thing is true of our pulpits. We are no longer hearing politics discussed in the churches by God's ministers, but rather Christ crucified and Christ risen again. The loss of our clergy has not discouraged us, nor has the loss of our buildings made us downhearted, but with the faith of our fathers as a beacon, we are pressing on, with renewed reverence for God's word, even when heard in dingy halls and in theatres. We have lost what we did not know we were losing, and we are doing it all the while. We are not taking from us, but we are not ill-will even for that," concluded the doctor. Dr. Grant stressed the need for the church to be a beacon throughout the whole dominion, and pointed out that in some cases the elders of a congregation had to dispense the word themselves, and were doing it successfully with the grace which God had provided them in their needs. The anniversary will be observed this evening with a service at the church. Rev. John Hosie is the pastor of this continuing congregation.

NEW STORES STARTED ON RICHMOND NORTH

Buildings Being Razed on the Property Adjacent to Parkview Apartments.

Construction of three stores on Richmond street, north of Central avenue and adjacent to the Parkview apartments, has just been commenced last week. The property is owned by Mrs. D. McEachern. The stores are expected to be ready for occupancy by March, according to plans of the contractor.

The stores will be of up-to-date construction with large basements extending a considerable distance in the rear. The property on which old buildings are now being torn down was originally owned by H. H. Douglas, who recently made over the deed to his daughter.

DANGEROUS HIGHWAY BRIDGE BEING WIDENED

The bridge on the provincial highway a few miles west of Melbourne is being widened to the full width of the road. This bridge was an extremely narrow one and was the scene of a fatal crash this summer when two tourist cars met head-on. The bridge will now be some twelve feet wider.

Is Your Back The Weak Point

Then get your kidneys right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Very few people are in perfect health. There is a weak spot somewhere. When you get tired or your system gets a little run down you feel the effects at your weak spot.

If your weak spot is your back, then you may suspect that your kidneys are not in perfect order. The back aches or is weak and sore; you may have headaches; there will be dryness of the skin, pains in the limbs and disorders of the bladder.

The quickest way to regulate the kidneys is by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are bound to be effective because they arouse the action of the kidneys, liver and bowels and thereby ensure the elimination of poisons from the system.

Sewell and Elliott

Farmer Candidates Supporting the Liberal Campaign.

GEORGE D. SEWELL.

Successful Agriculturists in Norfolk and South Waterloo Are Campaigning Against Protection—George Sewell of Simcoe Is Former Member of the Ontario House—Elliott Has Backing of Labor, Progressive and Liberals.

Agriculture, even in the comparatively small area of Western Ontario, offers a variety of specialization that almost cuts it up into a dozen occupations. Two candidates in the federal elections on October 29 typify the extremes of specialization in Ontario farming. George Sewell, who is running in Norfolk-Elgin with the backing of Progressives and Liberals, owes most of his worldly wealth to the insignificant strawberry. At least it is insignificant when taken singly, but if berries may be regarded as being taken in mass they are not really insignificant, as Mr. Sewell's life story shows.

Now, up in Waterloo, the strawberry is not a maker of wealth, but rather Christ crucified and Christ risen again. The loss of our clergy has not discouraged us, nor has the loss of our buildings made us downhearted, but with the faith of our fathers as a beacon, we are pressing on, with renewed reverence for God's word, even when heard in dingy halls and in theatres. We have lost what we did not know we were losing, and we are doing it all the while. We are not taking from us, but we are not ill-will even for that," concluded the doctor.

Dr. Grant stressed the need for the church to be a beacon throughout the whole dominion, and pointed out that in some cases the elders of a congregation had to dispense the word themselves, and were doing it successfully with the grace which God had provided them in their needs. The anniversary will be observed this evening with a service at the church. Rev. John Hosie is the pastor of this continuing congregation.

21ST ANNIVERSARY HELD BY BAPTISTS

Egerton St. Church Hold Special Services—Dr. Hutchinson Delivers Sermon.

An eloquent exposition of the doctrine of the resurrection, as one of the great fundamentals of the Christian religion, and without which we have no hope, featured the sermon of Dr. David Hutchinson of Brockville, at the 21st anniversary services of the Egerton street Baptist church, yesterday morning. The church was filled at both services to hear this eloquent preacher, who is in the front rank of those Baptist ministers who are steadfast in the fundamental doctrines of orthodox Christianity.

In the morning Dr. Hutchinson took his text from the first epistle of the Apostle Paul to the Corinthians, 5th verse, 15th chapter: "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

"This great chapter bears on the resurrection of Jesus, and of all those who believe in Him. Why did Paul thus exhort them? Think you for the purpose of emphasizing the comfortable doctrine of the resurrection? Yes, it was, but he has always on the job, no matter what the difficulties may be. Many people in Norfolk have reason to be thankful that George Sewell was their life story shows."

William Elliott, of South Waterloo, is one of the numerous graduates of the Ontario Agricultural College who have entered politics through the U. F. O. or Progressive parties. In this election he is endorsed by the Liberals and Labor, as well as the Progressives.

MISS PRIDDIS FOUNDER OF HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Donor of $1,000 For Museum Active Worker For Many Years in City.

The gift of the late Harriet Priddis of $1,000 and a number of curios suitable for a museum, recalls other commendable works Miss Priddis performed in her home city.

Her fondness for historical subjects was quite marked and she was really the founder of the London and Middlesex historical society which has been in existence for 23 years and whose publications have not been surpassed by any kindred society in Ontario.

Miss Priddis donated several articles of value to the society and contributed several invaluable papers to the local archives, which will tend to perpetuate her name in the city she loved. The carving in her handiwork as shown in Saturday's Advertiser, is a beautifully carved chess table on which she spent much time and labor. The carving is her own work, to complete which she took lessons in the technical school, having previously studied this art at Helmut college. The willow pattern dishes contributed are at the present time very rare, but quite common in the olden days.

MEN LONG LOST, STILL GOD'S OWN

Asserts Rev. Bruce Hunter at Empress Avenue Anniversary Services.

"No matter how far a man may wander from the path of righteousness, no matter how long he may be lost, he still belongs to God. Even in his state of isolation, he is still 'His,'" declared the Rev. Bruce Hunter of Metropolitan United church, in his sermon on the 55th anniversary of Empress avenue United church, yesterday morning.

This church, which was the pioneer of Methodism in London West, and is now the bulwark of the United church in that section, marked with special services and music its anniversary. During the pastorate of the present minister, Rev. F. E. Chapman, and that of his predecessor, the Rev. George Dewey, the church has experienced considerable progress, both in a spiritual and material way. Rev. G. K. Bradshaw of Hyatt avenue United was the special speaker in the evening.

In the morning, Mr. Hunter took his text from Luke xv:3, "And He spake this parable unto them." Mr. Hunter briefly reviewed the three stories of the lost coin, the lost sheep and the lost son. He did not consider them separately, but applied them to the needs of men today. The friendly enemies, says the state, and the all sufficiency of God, was Mr. Hunter's theme.

The parables suggested types of persons "found and lost." Even Mr. Hunter, two persons may be found under the same roof, one may be lost, and the other found. One is experienced in fellowship with God, and is happy in it, while the other knows no such joy. He is lost so far as God, or his religious life is concerned. These two types will be found in the next world, in eternity, the preacher believed.

MORE BENCHES ORDERED AT FAIR

Seats Ordered For Springbank Found Unsuitable For Exhibition Grounds.

More bench accommodation at the Western Fair is a matter that will be discussed by the fair board before next year's exhibition rolls round. It was hoped that the type of bench to be built by the P. U. C. for use at Springbank park would be suitable for the fair and that the 200 new benches authorized by the P. U. C. at the last meeting would fill the bill.

The benches ordered to be made during the winter months will be combined picnic tables and benches which could not be used at the fair grounds on account of the great amount of space they occupy.

It is pointed out that the fair grounds could certainly stand more benches than are used at present and it has been suggested that plank benches could be placed against such buildings as the Crystal Palace, Horticultural Building and Manulife building, which would be used as backs for the benches. This would involve very little expense outside of the cost of the planks and would help solve the problem.

OLD BOYS ON COAST STRONG FOR REUNION

Forty Former Residents of London Will Come From Los Angeles.

Plans for London's centennial next summer are going on apace in far distant parts, the mayor related this morning.

A letter received today from William Gilbert, formerly in the employ of the D. S. Perrin Company, stated that a London picnic held in the city of Los Angeles recently was attended by 40 former residents of that city, who all declared that they were coming back home next summer.

BISHOP CONFIRMS CLASS AT ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH

Following high mass celebrated by the parish priest, Rev. E. L. Tierney, Bishop Fallon confirmed a class of 34 children and five adult converts at St. Michael's church, North London, on Sunday morning.

Mrs. Gilbert, Rev. F. J. Brennan, Father Tierney, Father Kelly and Father Valentine of St. Joseph's hospital, assisted the bishop in the sanctuary.

Those children should be taught to pray and to understand the thought expressed in the prayers of the church which they repeated, was the message given by Bishop Fallon in the confirmation sermon.

N.Y. LAW IMPOSES MANTLE OF SHAME, SAYS MRS. STOKES

Declares End of Mutual Love the Only Reason For Divorce.

CAREER ROMANTIC

Associated Press Despatch. New York, Oct. 18.—Throwing off "the mantle of shame" which she considers imposed upon her by law, Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes explains that only the cessation of mutual love has caused her to be divorced. "The rose of the Ghetto," cigar worker and reporter, who 20 years ago became the wife of J. G. Phelps Stokes, wealthy socialist, and helped him spend his millions in ways that sometimes got her into trouble with the law, in a statement published today tells why a romance that attracted wide attention ended in a divorce court at Nyack, N.Y., last Saturday—the only grand divorce under New York law. A hotelkeeper named Grossman, but not identified further, was named co-respondent.

"Though living under the same roof, Mr. Stokes and I have been purely friends for the larger part of our married life—since the war, just friendly enemies," says the statement, written on a battered typewriter in an unheated Bronx flat. "Our profound political differences tended to develop situations domestic and personal that caused both of us intense suffering and made a continued truce impossible."

"A year ago last summer I asked Mr. Stokes to free me, and I had made several similar requests during the several years preceding that time. The mantle of shame seems to have fallen on the defendant in our case. It should be placed on the shoulders of the state of New York, where it properly belongs."

MINISTERS ELECT YEAR'S OFFICERS

Rev. G. N. Hazen Is New Secretary-Treasurer of the London Alliance.

Elections to fill the vacant offices of secretary-treasurer and corresponding-secretary occupied the London ministerial alliance at its meeting this morning in the Y. M. C. A. building on Wellington street. Dr. G. N. Hazen was elected secretary-treasurer and Rev. Mr. Gilmour is the new corresponding-secretary.

The eight members present were the president, Rev. Mr. Burgess, Rev. E. M. Thomson, Rev. W. E. Smith, Rev. H. J. Uhren, Rev. Dr. G. N. Hazen, Rev. J. W. Hilbert, Rev. R. J. Murphy, and Rev. W. M. McDonald.

The third Monday of every month at 10:30 a.m. was the unanimous choice of the members as the best time for the meeting of the alliance. The executive are trying to secure the Canadian novelist, Ralph Connor (Rev. C. W. Gordon), as the speaker for the next meeting which will be held on Nov. 16.

Cards containing the program of the alliance for the coming year will be published and sent out to each clergyman of the city. The arranging of these programs was placed in the hands of the executive. Publication of a directory of the ministerial alliance was ordered.

The small attendance at this initial meeting was due to a number of other meetings being held at the same time, and the executive feel that the November meeting will find the members of the alliance enthusiastic entering into the year's program.

administration and labor, then such a factory should not be in London. Mr. Little also dealt with Mr. Meighen's proposed duty on coal, showing that it would increase the high cost of fuel, which is already a very large item. The average home used about six or seven tons, and the tariff would mean $4 or $5 on each fuel bill.

He also pointed out that very little had been done by federal governments for the last fifteen years. In London, although there were certain public works which were most urgent if government business in this city was to be properly handled. There were so many offices in the postoffice and customs in London that he thought the saving of having them all in one building would go a long way to pay the cost of the new station.

"I am not telling you that I am going to get you a new postoffice, because I do not believe in trying to get votes by any such means," he declared.

DEATH IS SUDDEN FOR A. F. COLLYER

Succumbs To Heart Attack While Hunting Rabbits.

Augustus F. Collyer, 14 Victor street, died suddenly on Saturday afternoon. He was returning from a rabbit-hunting expedition on the farm of Carl Fuller, first concession, London township, when he was seized with a heart attack. His dead body was found in a lane west of the Thames Valley golf course.

Mr. Collyer was vice-president of the London Fish and Game association, and was following a customary Saturday afternoon pastime at the time of his death. Apparently he felt the fatal attack coming on. He walked into a lane on Mr. Fuller's farm and sat down on a chair. When his body was found it had slipped forward from a sitting posture.

A gardener employed in the farm found the body. At the feet of its dead master a little spaniel dog played and called to attract the workman. When Dr. C. C. Ross, of Hyde Park, was called, the little dog kept watch by the body of his master, with pathetic solicitude. Mr. Collyer had been dead only a short time when his body was found.

C. E. MARLEY WILL ATTEND POSTER ADVERTISING MEET

An important assemblage of artists, lithographers, advertising men, manufacturers and distribution experts will mark the 35th annual convention of the Poster Advertising association to be held at Kansas City in the near future. According to C. E. Marley, president of C. E. Marley, Limited, of this city, who is attending the convention as a delegate, plans are under way for the progressive development and improvement of the poster.

One of the features of the exhibit which is being planned in connection with the convention is a huge exhibit showing poster advertising done by newspapers all over the country together with facts concerning co-operative campaigns conducted by newspapers and other companies for civic and welfare development. It is expected that some new ideas will be evolved which will enable these two important factors in community education to co-operate more closely and effectively for civic advancement.

FOUR FRIENDS MEET AFTER LUNG SEPARATION

An agreement made a decade ago when they were all employees of the Chatham, Wallaceburg & Lake Erie Railway, yesterday brought together in Detroit, Charles Way of London, an official of the L. & P. These four men had been firm friends when working on the Kent county line and when the little band was broken up with the coming of the great war they promised one another to meet again at the first of ten years. Yesterday was the first time the four had been together since 1915.

ONTARIO CAMPAIGN OF MEIGHEN OPENS KING SAYS PORTFOLIO IS AWAITING MASSEY

Conservative Leader Speaks at Sudbury Tonight—Concludes Western Tour.

ESTABLISHES RECORD

Canadian Press Despatch. Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—Forty-five speeches in 18 days is the record of Right. Hon. Arthur Meighen's campaign tour in the west, which came to an end last night. Since his meetings at the head of the lakes at the end of September, the Conservative leader has spoken at party gatherings and women's organization rallies. At least 15 meetings have been planned for the 10 week-days intervening before election day, during which time Mr. Meighen will confine himself to Ontario.

He will not visit Quebec. Tonight Mr. Meighen is en route to Sudbury, where on Monday night he will commence the last lap of his strenuous pilgrimage. Handicapped at the outset by neuritis, Mr. Meighen is now apparently completely restored to health. In the last three days he has made about a score of speeches in Manitoba, chiefly in his own constituency of Portage La Prairie.

His campaign in the west has included an advocacy of tariff reform as a panacea for trade depression in the dominion, beneficial alike for east and west. He has assured his western audiences that he would impose in his very first budget higher duties on the products of the farm, bringing them to a level more nearly approximating those in force in the United States on similar products.

JAILBREAKERS TO BE TRIED AT NEXT CRIMINAL ASSIZES

Canadian Press Despatch. Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 18.—Charged with escaping from lawful custody and jail breaking by violence, Alex Shupinski, John Stanton and George Laboduk appeared in county court to elect for trial. Laboduk asked for speedy hearing, while the others elected to be tried at the next criminal assize court. The crown, however, would not consent to Laboduk being tried speedily on the more serious charge, and all men will have to appear for jury trial. Stanton is a former St. Marys man.

Premier Declares Former Progressive Leader Is Liberal To the Core.

SPEAKS IN DURHAM

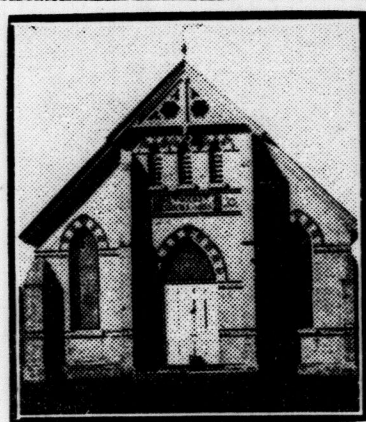

Liberal Campaign Going Well, Premier Asserts, and Outlines Plans.

By Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press. Bowmanville, Oct. 18.—Hon. Vincent Massey is to be given a portfolio in the government if it is returned in the general elections. Premier King last night made this announcement here in the riding of Durham, in which Mr. Massey is a candidate. At present Mr. Massey is a member of the government without portfolio. "I intend," announced Mr. King, "to give him one of the best portfolios I have. I think by so doing I shall be meeting the wishes of the Canadian people."

"Perhaps," continued the prime minister, "you are thinking that I am going a little quickly. Perhaps you are asking yourselves how I know that we shall be returned. As to that, I can tell you that anyone who has travelled about the country as I have within the last few weeks, who has come into contact with the numbers of people I have come into contact with, will have no doubt as to what the outcome of the election will be."

There was an outburst of applause as Mr. King made his announcement. He thanked Progressives of the riding for their recognition of the "common purpose" that Progressives and Liberals had in view. He had, he went on, not hesitated to support Progressives where they were prepared to co-operate with Liberals in the house. He instanced three Progressive Independents in British Columbia. They were sound Liberals at heart.

"I have said to our friends in British Columbia," he added, "make sure they are returned." He mentioned further that he had asked Liberals to support the candidature of ex-Premier Drury. "When

RUTHERFORD AND GRAHAM CHEERED BY THOUSANDS

4,000 Electors Acclaim Popular Liberal Candidate in Kent Campaign.

G. P. GRAHAM SPEAKS

Minister of Railways Addresses Gathering—Sen. McCoig Accepts Challenge.

Special to The Advertiser. By Staff Correspondent. Chatham, Oct. 18.—More than 4,000 electors who crowded the Chatham armories to the doors Saturday night acclaimed Dr. J. W. Rutherford, Liberal candidate, as the future representative of Kent in the continuing King government.

For size and enthusiasm, the meeting eclipsed any local political rally of any party within the memory of the oldest residents. It was a meeting at which the immense crowd enthusiastically applauded the record of Premier King as enunciated by Hon. George P. Graham, the principal speaker, cheered to the echo Senator A. B. McCoig's acceptance of the challenge of R. L. Bedford, publicity agent of the Chaplin forces to a joint meeting to discuss issues, and rose to its feet proclaiming victory for J. W. Rutherford on Oct. 29. Although suffering from a severe cold, Hon. Geo. P. Graham delivered a fitting speech in which he took the Hon. Arthur Meighen to task for his blue-ruin campaign speeches. He likened him to a man who rings a fire alarm, getting people out of their beds when there is no fire, an act, he said, to say the least, is annoying. But when you know that he is ringing the alarm to get you out of bed so that he can crawl into yours—"The applause was so deafening that the balance of the veteran Liberal's utterance was not heard. The crowd grasped his point.

A False Alarmist. "Meighen is nothing more than a false alarmist," Hon. Mr. Graham went on. "This country is not in a bad condition. We have reduced the debt of this country by 50 million dollars; we have reduced the annual interest charges by nine millions; we have balanced the budget and reduced taxation by 50 millions. My dear brother, Meighen, you are a false alarmist on your counts."

Adhering to his metaphor, Hon. Mr. Graham said that there had been a fire, but that Meighen was four years late in ringing the alarm. The present government on taking office had found the economic structure of Canada a shambles.

Discussing the railroad question, Hon. Mr. Graham said that immigration would solve the problem, and Premier King's policies would be formulated accordingly. He stated that he was unalterably opposed to a merger of the C. N. R. and C. P. railway as a last extreme monopoly of transportation would mean sucking the public.

Referring to Meighen's criticism of the purchase of the Scribner Hotel, Paris, and a golf course, the minister of railways said that the government had no say in these matters, such transactions being carried out by the C. N. R. board. It was Meighen who passed legislation to remove railroads from politics. "Now he wants you to kick him back into politics," he said. The action of the C. N. R. board was worth defending, for, as he pointed out, by the purchase of the Paris Hotel, the railway has free offices and obtains a revenue in rentals which pays a six per cent interest on investment of money borrowed at four and a half. The golf course at Jasper park had stimulated railway business to such an extent that with hotels and cottages full, tourists had to be accommodated in sleeping cars.

Stressing the benefits to Canadian farmers by the Canada-West Indies treaty, the speaker asserted that it would bind empires more closely and offset U. S. penetration. "Instead of allowing this far-flung part of the British empire to be drawn into the United States, Canada steps in and assumes the role of big brother. Our government does not only wave the flag, it keeps on serving."

Canada For All. Dr. J. W. Rutherford, in a vigorous address, declared he would support the policy of Premier King as an independent Liberal, reserving the right to act as he thought best in the interests of the riding. He declared in favor of a tariff for revenue, national unity, no monopoly of transportation on land or sea, and protection within reason for manufacturers and farmers. "I believe in a motto of Canada for Canadians, not for a few," he declared.

Senator McCoig, accepting A. D. Chaplin's challenge for a joint meeting, declared he would go further and meet with the supporters of to the core. If he is elected he will not support Mr. Meighen. He may try to drive me a little faster than some would like to go, but that is all right.

"If you feel the Liberal party is not going fast enough," proceeded Mr. King, "the thing for you to do, if you are of pronounced ideas, is to get into the Liberal party and make it go a little faster."

Mr. King thought it was "really funny" to listen to Mr. Meighen's attacks on the Australian treaty. Mr. Meighen said that under the treaty the cost of living would go up because the housewife would have to pay more for the raisins she used in making raisin pie. But if raisins were to go up in price because of the higher duty on United States raisins, what, Mr. King queried, would be the effect on the cost of living when Mr. Meighen increased duties all round? Mr. King pressed this argument further at a subsequent meeting in Oshawa.

He held that the cost of living was an important factor in the overhead charges of a manufacturer, especially when he had to compete in world markets.

"If," he said, "you can bring down the cost of living without lowering wages or profits you are helping both capital and labor." And how could this be done? It could be done by lightening the tax burden instead of making it heavier.

Mr. King proceeded to Ottawa after the meeting. His next speech will be at the mass meeting in Montreal on Monday night.

FAMOUS 'MR. A' KASHMIR RULER

Associated Press Despatch. Simla, Oct. 18.—The British and Indian governments have formally recognized the succession of General Rajah Sir Hari Singh, nephew of the late Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir, to the throne of his uncle. At an informal durbar here, John Wood, British resident in Kashmir, conveyed to the rajah the British regime's approval of the succession.

Sir Hari Singh brought on himself world-wide notoriety a year ago as the famous "Mr. A," a central figure of a sensational blackmailing case in which it was disclosed he had been mulcted of $750,000.

Alex Chaplin every night between now and election date. He pointed out, however, that neither B. E. Bedford or himself were the principal figures in the election, and that the electors, at the joint meeting, should have an opportunity to judge between the Liberal candidate and the Conservative candidate. "The electors want to know if Chaplin can stand on a platform and advocate the requirements of this country," he said. "For Mr. Chaplin will not be able to read in the house, speeches written for him by somebody else, or give some other person's speeches over the radio."

Dr. C. B. Oliver and J. G. Kerr, K. C., also spoke, declaring their faith in the policies of Premier King as in the best interests of Canada. J. A. McNevin presided over the meeting, which included a musical program, and which was brought to a conclusion with rousing cheers for the candidate.

During the course of the meeting, Hon. G. P. Graham was presented with a basket of flowers by little Miss Margaret Harrington, which he gracefully acknowledged with a kiss.

ASSERTS DOMINION REALLY PROSPERS

C. M. Bowman Addresses Liberals at Kitchener On Behalf of Euler.

Special to The Advertiser. By Staff Correspondent. Kitchener, Oct. 18.—C. M. Bowman, chairman of the executive committee of the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, speaking in Wellington, Ont., Saturday evening, in behalf of the candidature of W. D. Euler, Independent Liberal standard-bearer for North Waterloo, declared his unbounded confidence in Canada, and deprecated the campaign of vilification of Canada and its interests by Mr. Meighen and his allies during the last three years. He declared that the world drunk with prosperity following the world war, plunged into reckless spending, with the result that a depression followed, which was felt alike in Canada and United States.

There had been a steady improvement in business and industrial conditions in the country since the King government, but nevertheless Mr. Meighen has turned into an apostle of gloom, and for the past three years has been on a blue-ruin rampage. Real prosperity has come back to the country. The west has recovered to a great extent, and just now conditions are better in Canada than at any time since 1920.

Mr. Euler was given a rousing ovation when he arose to address the large gathering. In the course of his address he quoted the Conservative candidate of Port Arthur, J. J. Carriek, who has gone on record as declaring for a clean fight and who has been charging Mr. Meighen with talk of his own party. Mr. Euler stated that Carriek characterizes as piffle the statement that four more years of the King government would mean the crumbling of confederation. Mr. Euler also expressed surprise at the attacks which have been made on Sir Henry Thompson by Mr. Meighen. He declared that Sir Henry has cleaned up the mess that was left of the National Railways by Mr. Meighen. He stated that if Mr. Meighen were sincere in the matter of tariff-raising he would pledge himself to wipe out the British preference.

HESPERIAN CLUB HOLDS MEETING

Mrs. Wade Gives an Interesting Address—Members to Study Modern Drama.

The University Hesperian club held its first meeting for the season at the home of the president, Miss Eleanor Doherty, Talbot street, with a very large attendance. Mrs. Wade, the talented wife of Dr. Wade, professor of romance languages at the university, gave the address of the evening.

She took as her topic "Some Modern Dramas," viz. the Italian, Puandello; the Hungarian, Molnar; and the American, George O'Neill, being three of the leading dramas of the present day. Miss Helen Patterson played several interpretative selections on the piano. Miss Gertrude Moore read an original essay written by a member of the club, and Miss Erma Berry read a digest of current events in the dramatic world. This part of the program was in charge of Miss Aida Little and Mr. L. Rinn.

This year the club has decided to make a study of the modern drama. The serving of refreshments brought to a close a very pleasant and profitable evening's entertainment.

Course of Instruction For Girls' Work Begins on Thursday Evening.

A teachers' training course is being arranged for workers among girls in the city, and is opening at Lenmore, the King street Y. W. C. A., on Thursday evening of this week. Advise Women to discard old hygienic methods and retain freshness every day

LARGELY on medical advice, women are abandoning the old time "sanitary-pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Last days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! And odorless—ends ALL fear of offending.

As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitancy.

Costs only a few cents. 8 in 10 better class women employ it. Proves the folly of old ways.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PLEASES BIG CROWD

Sunday Evening Concert Is a Triumph For Gesensway Organization.

The first of a series of five Sunday evening concerts was presented in the Capitol theatre last night by the London symphony orchestra to an appreciative audience that packed the building. Buster Bear Explains the Reason For His Necessary Greed to Peter

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

"My!" said Peter Rabbit to no one in particular, as he watched Buster Bear stuffing himself with beechnuts. "My! I never did see such greed."

Buster Bear stopped abruptly and swung his head around so as to look straight at Peter. "What was that remark you made, Longears?" inquired Buster in his deepest, rumblest, grumblest voice.

"Nothing," said Peter hastily. "That is, nothing personal, Mr. Bear. What a wonderful lot of beechnuts it takes to fill you up!"

"It isn't a matter of filling me up," replied Buster Bear. "It's a matter of getting enough fat under this black skin of mine."

"Humph," said Peter. "I should think that you would be afraid of getting too fat. I can't imagine anything more uncomfortable than being too fat."

Buster chuckled right out loud. "I don't think you need worry, Peter," said he, "and I'm sure I don't worry. I can't remember ever having been quite fat enough. You see, the fatter I get the better I sleep. Fat and sleep go together. So because I want to sleep good I want to get fat. You see, with we bears in the winter it is a case of sleep or go hungry."

"No, I don't see anything of the sort," retorted Peter. "What has sleep got to do with going hungry?"

"Well," said Buster, "if you are asleep you don't know that you are hungry, do you?"

"No-o," replied Peter. "But if you are awake and hungry you know it, don't you?" continued Buster.

"Yes-s," replied Peter slowly. "Well, if next winter I am awake I certainly will be hungry, and winter is no time to be hungry," replied Buster.

"Nobody knows that better than I do," retorted Peter. "I should think if a little fellow like me can stand it, a great big fellow like me would be able to stand it."

"Did it ever occur to you, Peter Rabbit, that the smaller the stomach the less it takes to fill it?" retorted Buster. "There is nothing truly nothing, for me to eat in winter. I've got to do all my eating beforehand. If I sleep right straight through I don't know any discomfort until spring."

"But if you are awake and hungry you know it, don't you?" continued Buster.

Goodness knows there is enough of it then! But if I wake up in the middle of winter I can't go to sleep again because I'm hungry, and I'm hungry because I can't go to sleep. So I'm laying in all the fat I can right now. It isn't green at all. It is just plain everyday common sense. As between sleeping and going hungry, it is me for the sleep every time."

"You ought not to have any trouble getting fat this fall," declared Peter. "Right, Peter! Quite right," replied Buster. "Some years I have to keep travelling all the time to get enough food and then I walk the fat off as fast as I put it on. But this year there is plenty to eat everywhere, and getting fat is no trouble at all. I certainly ought to sleep well even if the winter is long and hard."

"Do you think it is really going to be?" asked Peter anxiously.

"I don't know anything about it," replied Buster. "What is more, I don't care. I will simply sleep so much longer if it is a hard one. My, these beechnuts are sweet!" Buster resumed his search among the leaves and paid no more attention to Peter Rabbit. Buster was getting ready for winter just as much as were the Squirrel cousins.

TO EXHIBIT WORK OF CITY ARTISTS

Nicholas Wilson Chapter Arranges To Display Paintings.

The Nicholas Wilson chapter, I. O. O. F., is arranging to hold another art exhibit in the city about the middle of November. This year, as last, the pictures will be displayed in Willow Hall, owing to the kindness of Otway Hayden, Mrs. J. W. Russell is convener of the committee which is making arrangements for the showing, with Mrs. J. R. Le-Touzel and Mrs. Roberts on the committee. Already a number of prominent London professional artists have consented to have their work hang in the exhibit, including Miss E. Broadbent, Miss Caroline Farncombe, Mr. Templar, Edward Glen, J. P. Hunt and Dr. J. R. Le-Touzel, all of this city. Plans are also being made to show a picture of E. Hargitt of Petrolia.

The aim of the exhibit is to promote an interest in art in the city. The hope is that if the works of London artists are brought before the public in this way, the interest of the people of London will become so aroused that a London art gallery will be the result.

Recently the members of the chapter, under the convener of Mrs. J. W. Russell, have secured the promise of one picture from each of London's professional artists, these to hang temporarily in the public library, and eventually to become the nucleus of a public art gallery. Already a picture by the hand of the late Miss Mary Healey, the gift of her brother, hangs in the library, and to it will be added the others.

SPINDRIFT

An Adventure of the Great Lakes

By HAROLD TITUS

INSTANT 14.
That night Janet Needham sat in the living-room of her father's house with a small fire in the grate and the glow of an oil lamp on the modest and worn furnishings of the room, the double row of books, the model of the brig on the mantel.

Ezra smoked his pipe and read the Escanaba paper. Finished with that he put it aside and looked at his head, a mild change of expression came into his eyes.

"It won't be long now, that we'll sit together evenings, Janny," he said a bit drowsily.

The girl drew her needle through the cloth and cocked her head as she listened.

"Less than three weeks before I must go—if I go."

"What's that? If you go?"

She put down her sewing and looked at him with a grave smile.

"Father, have you a teacher for the school here yet?"

"Why, no; not yet. We had one but she took sick. The county commissioner says he can fix us up."

"Well, don't you think I might possibly do?"

"You?" The cap'n removed his pipe and stared at her incredulously.

"Why, Janny? What's come over you? You teach this little country school?"

"Don't you think I could fill the place?"

"Fill it? Great hat, of course, you could! If you really mean it? Mean you'd be willing to work here and stay with me all winter? And I wouldn't be left alone through the idle time, with nothing to think about but the day you'll be comin' back to keep me company?"

The old man's eager acceptance of her suggestion and his incredulousness at the probability of this blessed circumstance took the smile from the girl's eyes and she rose and crossed the room to sit on the edge of the bed, holding the pipe, trembling.

"I want very much to stay home this winter, father," she said. "I can give these other people notice enough if I make up my mind now. It would be so fine to stay, now that he's dropped. He leaned forward in his chair and laid an unsteady hand on her shoulder.

"Janny! Janny! You're goin' to stay here with me? You're goin' to teach our little school and be happy here? And let me be happy all winter because you're here?"

"I hope you'll be happy, father. You see, I want to stay because—"

In his excitement the old man would not let the explanation come. "Great hat! Where's my glasses? Here—I'll be a cookie I've got a contract right here in my desk. I had 'em laid spring. He crossed to the old walnut desk, and muttering to himself and chuckling, rummaged in a drawer for the papers, all but his hands knotting in great gray hair and he raised his eyes to the ceiling.

"Here it is, Janny," the cap'n cried, holding up a slip of paper with much fine printing on it. "Here's the contract!"

He seized a pen and uncovered the inkwell. "What's the date? Eh? Oh, sure. And the salary. That's all we can pay but I'll make up the difference out of my own pocket. He wrote as he talked. "Here, sign this, daughter!"

Janet took the pen and her father watched almost breathlessly as she wrote her name when it was done he gathered her in his arms with such vigor that the pen dropped to the desk and rolled across its surface, leaving little blobs of ink here and there.

"Janny! This is the happiest hour I've had in years! Just to think that you'll be here all winter, that I won't have to—whatsoever put this into your blessed head, anyway?"

With the first edge of his excitement worn off the cap'n could see that the motives that had brought about this happy arrangement. "How'd you come to make up your mind to do this, eh? That's what I want to know!"

He held her at arm's length and shook her playfully.

"A look came into the girl's eyes, then she wiped out the reflection of his high spirit that had been on her face, and the old man's grip relaxed a trifle.

"Janny, what's the matter?"

"It's something that had to be some time. It's something that I'm glad had to be. It's the big something that every girl waits for. Now, father, it has come to me!"

"Oh!" he muttered, as though in a daze. "Janny? You mean—you've found somebody? Somebody you love?"

"No, father. I mean—I mean—I mean I love you!"

She looked into his face, then with that steadiness of eye which she knew so well, which was so like the quality in his own gaze.

"That is it, father. I love you, Goodheart."

"Simple words and quietly spoken, Janet's shoulder and laid it on the arm of the old chair. The other elicitly into his lap. For an instant the room seemed to him to be spinning, and then his own voice brought steadiness to his senses.

"You love him?" John Goodheart asked.

"Yes, father! Oh, I've wanted to tell you for days! Why? What's wrong? What's the matter, father?"

He had lifted one hand quickly, faintly, in a commanding gesture for silence. He did not look at his daughter. He averted his face as though from a terrible sight and bling slightly. He hid his face in his hand, and then he turned and looked at Janet, seized, it in both hers and cried out.

"What is it? I'll not be leaving you yet. Maybe we'll always live here in Fairport. It's what had to come some time!"

He lifted his eyes to her and she gasped at the look in them. "This had to come, Janny. This? Oh, no, girl, not this. It's—it's too much!"

"What is too much?" she begged, completely upset by his manner. "Haven't you seen, father? Haven't you known that he is the finest?"

"Don't! Let me get up, Janny!"

He thrust her from his lap almost roughly and rose walked to the mantel, and stood as though staring at the model of the sailing craft there. The girl drew back against the desk, one hand to her pale cheek, following his every move closely.

After a moment he turned about. His face was set in a mask of pain and he spoke thickly, as though the words hurt his throat, but his voice was as steady as the house in which they stood.

"This can't be. And I can't explain why. It is something I hadn't reckoned on. Forgive me if I'm a bit hard. I can't tell you why I must not be. That is for your lover to say."

He stayed a bit. The girl saw his hands knot into great gray hair and he raised his eyes to the ceiling.

"O God, why did this come?" he asked in a whisper.

The girl covered the distance between them in unsteady strides and flung her arms about his neck.

"Father! What is it? Why can't you tell me?"

Slowly he disengaged her hands, without looking into her face. He could not bring himself to behold her suffering.

"It's his affair; not mine. If the man you love can't make you understand no one else can. If he is worthy of your love he will be clean and do his best to make you know!"

He drew her close, holding her cheek to his, feeling the sharp tremors run through her body.

"Poor, poor Janny!" he muttered, huskily. "It's too much. It's too much to be put on you. But it has to be—it has to be! Go to your room, now; so there and sleep, if you can."

"Sleep? Me, sleep? Where are you going?" she asked, as he moved slowly toward the back of the door.

"I'm going to talk to your lover. There's something you must know. It must come from him."

He went unsteadily outside and closed the door behind him.

About the house a chill September wind moaned in the trees a melancholy sound, a sobbing for the gone brightness of summer, as the girl left alone sobbed brokenly for the peace of mind that was no longer hers.

John Goodheart was in Cap'n Needham's net house working at a foot lathe to turn net floats from blocks of cedar.

He whistled lightly to himself as the sunset-glows came from his chisel and about his eyes were the traces of a faint, happy smile.

That afternoon Janet had told him of her decision to remain in Fairport, and now he was waiting for the summons which would take him before her father.

What he expected from the cap'n he did not know. He had not considered it. Swept forward on a great wave of emotion he had let the past, the future, go hang. He had forgotten that there was such a thing as indiscretion. He had been so supremely happy in finding love that he had not reckoned the cost of abandoning reality or of his neglect to share with Janet the secret that was his.

He looked up quickly as a step sounded on the stairs. He had expected Janet, but instead the cap'n stood there, and in his clear blue eyes was a look that stopped John's heart.

Neither spoke for a moment. The whirling of the lathe dwindled to a light rumble and stopped, leaving the sound of wind the only sound.

Then the cap'n said grimly:

"Janet told me."

He might better have shouted curses. The effect on the other would not have been so pronounced, would not have sent his heart fluttering on so drunkenly.

"Yes?" he said, dully. "She told you? And you're not like it?"

He found himself against the attack he now knew must come, and in his voice was just enough natural defiance to set the color surging into the old man's face.

"Like it?" he echoed, and laughed mirthlessly as he advanced, hands dropping to his sides. "Her father like it when she told him she's in love with an escaped convict?"

John recoiled as though his friend had struck him across the face. The glamour, the dream, the vision of days were dissipated. Facts rained in upon his consciousness, brutal, unsoft facts, staggering him, beating his head down like a hammer.

"But—but it's all a mistake!" he cried. "I didn't kill him. I—"

No. You didn't. I took you in because I thought you were John Goodheart. You're not John Goodheart! You're Cap'n Garrison and you've no right to the eyes of the law to be here! You're here now because I happened to think the jury was wrong. Your place is back yonder, where you came from, and where you belong."

"Cap'n, I'm not guilty! I didn't do what they think I did! I can't tell you why. I haven't remembered. I've lost my mind. Some day I will remember, but—"

"And instead of tryin' to do what you've got to do before you get here, you've been makin' love to my Janny—you, an escaped convict!"

John slipped from Goodheart. He half raised one hand in a gesture of protest, but it fell back to his side, as though all strength had gone from his body.

"I know," he said, as though he had been struck. "I fought it. I fought her as long as I could, Cap'n. But a girl like that, after what I've been through. . . ."

The sound of her voice, the sight of her hand. Oh, he'd been so hungry for gentleness and sweetness like that. I'm just a man! I'm no different from any other men expect that life's played a low trick on me. I want a mate; I want happiness! Can't you see that, sir? Can't you understand?"

"It made me forget this thing tucked away in her—striking his forehead. "She made me forget every thing except that she can give me what I want. You've been making love to my Janny—you, an escaped convict!"

It was so good to let things go, just for a little while; it was so fine to have her loving him!

"What is it? I'll always live here in Fairport. It's what had to come some time!"

He lifted his eyes to her and she gasped at the look in them. "This had to come, Janny. This? Oh, no, girl, not this. It's—it's too much!"

"What is too much?" she begged, completely upset by his manner. "Haven't you seen, father? Haven't you known that he is the finest?"

"Don't! Let me get up, Janny!"

He thrust her from his lap almost roughly and rose walked to the mantel, and stood as though staring at the model of the sailing craft there. The girl drew back against the desk, one hand to her pale cheek, following his every move closely.

After a moment he turned about. His face was set in a mask of pain and he spoke thickly, as though the words hurt his throat, but his voice was as steady as the house in which they stood.

"This can't be. And I can't explain why. It is something I hadn't reckoned on. Forgive me if I'm a bit hard. I can't tell you why I must not be. That is for your lover to say."

He stayed a bit. The girl saw his hands knot into great gray hair and he raised his eyes to the ceiling.

"O God, why did this come?" he asked in a whisper.

The girl covered the distance between them in unsteady strides and flung her arms about his neck.

"Father! What is it? Why can't you tell me?"

Slowly he disengaged her hands, without looking into her face. He could not bring himself to behold her suffering.

"It's his affair; not mine. If the man you love can't make you understand no one else can. If he is worthy of your love he will be clean and do his best to make you know!"

He drew her close, holding her cheek to his, feeling the sharp tremors run through her body.

"Poor, poor Janny!" he muttered, huskily. "It's too much. It's too much to be put on you. But it has to be—it has to be! Go to your room, now; so there and sleep, if you can."

"Sleep? Me, sleep? Where are you going?" she asked, as he moved slowly toward the back of the door.

"I'm going to talk to your lover. There's something you must know. It must come from him."

He went unsteadily outside and closed the door behind him.

About the house a chill September wind moaned in the trees a melancholy sound, a sobbing for the gone brightness of summer, as the girl left alone sobbed brokenly for the peace of mind that was no longer hers.

John Goodheart was in Cap'n Needham's net house working at a foot lathe to turn net floats from blocks of cedar.

He whistled lightly to himself as the sunset-glows came from his chisel and about his eyes were the traces of a faint, happy smile.

That afternoon Janet had told him of her decision to remain in Fairport, and now he was waiting for the summons which would take him before her father.

What he expected from the cap'n he did not know. He had not considered it. Swept forward on a great wave of emotion he had let the past, the future, go hang. He had forgotten that there was such a thing as indiscretion. He had been so supremely happy in finding love that he had not reckoned the cost of

Autumn Weddings

LISSO-McCONNELL.

Galt, Oct. 19.—A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, Oct. 14, at Spruceclaw, Cedar Creek road, near Galt, the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William McConnell, when their only daughter, Doris Eleanor Abigail, was united in holy matrimony to Mr. Franklin John Lisso, of Ayr, Ont.

The bride was given away by her father, while her uncle, Rev. John A. McConnell, of Bracebridge, Ont., officiated. She wore the gift of the groom, a gold wrist watch and string of pearls, and also an heirloom brooch of gold set with birthstone and pearls, a gift from her mother.

The floral decorations were pink roses and foliage. After the ceremony a dainty meal was partaken of, the guests being members of the families of both bride and groom.

A honeymoon trip was taken to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Lisso will take up residence on the groom's farm near Ayr.

GLOVER-SEBURN.

Melbourne, Oct. 19.—A pretty wedding was solemnized at the United church parsonage on Wednesday, Oct. 14, when Amy Clara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Seburn of Longwood, was married to Mr. Frank Glover, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Glover of Mount Brydges. Rev. J. M. Collins officiated.

After a honeymoon spent at Niagara Falls and other points east, Mr. and Mrs. Glover will make their future home in Flint, Michigan.

HOAG-LOUCKS.

St. Thomas, Oct. 19.—A very pretty fall wedding took place at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when Miss Edith Loucks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Loucks, city, became the bride of Mr. Floyd Page Hoag, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hoag, 44 Elgin street, Rev. J. E. Neenan officiated at the wedding.

The church was a veritable bower of flowers, harmonizing with the music of the organ, presided over by Miss Edith Loucks.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of mauve georgette and green. She carried a sheaf of golden yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Muriel McCully, her only attendant, was wearing a blue silk frock and carried a basket of carnations. Miss Carrie Newkirk sang O Promise Me.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 18 Talbot street, after which the young couple left on a wedding trip to Miami, Florida. They will reside in this city on their return.

SMITH-ROBERTSON.

The marriage took place at the King street United church on Saturday, Oct. 17, of Miss Mary Porter Robertson, daughter of the late Mr. Stuart Robertson and Mrs. Robertson of Perthshire, Scotland, to Mr. James Smith of this city. Rev. Dr. McIntosh officiated.

The bride, who was attended by Mrs. A. Ross and Miss Isabel Macpherson, was smartly attired in a navy blue suit with black velvet and becoming black velvet and with ostrich trimming and smart squirrel choker.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robertson.

wanted to remember just to clear his name of the smirch circumstances he had put upon it; he had wanted to be free for his own peace of mind. Now, though, he wanted to be free as the lover of Janet Needham must be free, and, furthermore, he wanted to be free so that he might justify the charity in the heart of this fine old man.

"Cap'n Needham, I will be like other men. I know how she can love and I know how honest an upright she is. Now, you've got to let her go. She's given her heart to a man who has no right to love a woman until you've remembered this one thing, this reason why the law has no right to be waiting to drag you back."

"Think, man! Think what it'd mean to her! She loves you; she wants you. She knows her because her blood's my blood. I know how she can love and I know how honest an upright she is. Now, you've got to let her go. She's given her heart to a man who has no right to love a woman until you've remembered this one thing, this reason why the law has no right to be waiting to drag you back."

"Not that! She mustn't know! She must never know until it's in the past, until I've every right under the sun to be here and love her and plan to home and live with her as a man should! You can't deny me that much. Cap'n, you can't take that one little thing away from her!"

His outburst shook Ezra from his conviction. He passed a hand slowly over his mouth and waited until John came closer, lowering his voice which trembled with intensity.

"She mustn't know what I am. Not now, I'll do anything to keep the truth from her. I'll go away; I'll give her any reason but that I'm an escaped convict. Can't you see what it would mean to her? Can't you see that it would break her spirit as well as her heart?"

"Oh, I'm pleading for myself now. I'm pleading for Janet, begging you to give her a chance. Don't tell her the reason. Let me go. Let her think anything but the truth!"

He flung out his arms in a gesture of appeal and the other drew a slow breath. "And where'd you go, lad?" he asked, with a small measure of his old gentleness.

"I don't know. I can't tell you. They're waiting and watching for you everywhere. You're safe here, and only here. What you say is right, I guess. It would break her heart to know what I am."

"Then let me stay here. Let me stay here and keep away from her, not even speak to her!"

"Unhand me, roof!"—Again that flicker of animosity.

"No. That wouldn't do"—sadly. "I'll have to live in another place. I'll have to get work with some other rig."

The cap'n's eyes studied John closely in the faint light. The face was drawn and pale and so profoundly in earnest that some of the coldness remaining in the old heart melted.

You won't have to do all that, lad. You stay on the Wanderer. It's hard to turn you out of my house, but—if you're ever the father of a girl you'll understand."

"When I come in here I had only violence in my heart. I forgot your side of it, but now—your side, I guess ain't so far different from mine. I want my Janny to be happy."

"I want you to have your chance to remember John. I've wanted that from the first when you came here with Taffy in your arms, trapped like a wild thing that had no chance of body any harm but was going to its death. And now the father in me wants you to have a chance to remember for the sake of my girl—who loves you."

A change was taking place in John Goodheart. New responsibilities were becoming clear to him. He had

OTHER MEETINGS

Special to The Advertiser
by a Staff Correspondent.

Wallaceburg, Oct. 18.—There was a large attendance at the Cramer Hall on Saturday evening to hear addresses by George Sullivan of Chatham and W. S. Haney, M.L.A. of Sarnia, in the interests of the Conservative candidates for Kent and Lambton. J. S. Fraser acted as chairman. Mr. Sullivan spoke in glowing terms of Mr. Chaplin's sterling qualities, and that his chances to win, from reports received from every part of the riding, were the best. The speaker touched on the various topics of the campaign, and appealed to the electors of Wallaceburg to vote for Chaplin, unless they wished to lose their industries by returning the King government to power.

Mr. Haney opened his address by giving an outline of the third-party system and its results in Great Britain and the United States, and even in the province of Ontario under the Drury regime. He prophesied that this third party would be eliminated for all time out of politics at the coming election. Mr. Haney at the coming election, and pointed out that King's associates any idea that he would be returned they would not have been leaving him as they have been doing during the past few weeks. King was being denied the assistance of Lomer Gouin in this campaign. Fielding had apparently dropped out of politics, and out west the Hon. Mr. Crerar had such an unsavory atmosphere around him that he could not be appointed pound keeper if he wanted to, and the Hon. McMurray dared not show his head above the parapet for fear of getting shot. King might be likened to the boy on the burning deck.

"Could it be wondered," asked Mr. Haney, "why we were feeling blue during the years after the war, with such a government, which had gone out to utterly betray the citizens of Canada, and set capital against labor, and one part of the dominion against the other?" The speaker hoped that the same unity which had been conspicuous in army, and which was devoid of class rule or grouping would result in Canada, and in closing he said, "I hope that on October twenty-ninth, Mackenzie King will be eliminated and hurled into a state of oblivion from which he will never return."

At Leslie's school house, south of Erin village, Friday evening, Mr. Guthrie addressed an audience of 17 Conservatives being present. In the course of his speech, Mr. Guthrie promised the farmers that he would see that the farmers got better prices. These farmers do a big business in shipping turnips to the United States. They now receive 20 cents a bushel, where they formerly only got 12 cents, and this advance has occurred without resorting to high tariff.

SEEK WIFE'S EVIDENCE IN TRIAL OF JANISSE

Ruth Janisse May Go On Witness Stand This Week at Sandwich.

Special to The Advertiser
by a Staff Correspondent.

Windsor, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Ruth A. Janisse, convicted slayer of Clayton McMullen, may take the stand to tell her own story, when her husband, Arthur J. Janisse, is tried on the same charge, this week at the fall assizes at Sandwich, James H. Clark, defense counsel, said today. Clark said he would put Mrs. Janisse on the stand, if necessary, during the trial of her husband. In discussing the charge against Janisse, Mr.

Janisse was arrested and charged with homicide because he failed to take the law in his own hands, when his wife was wronged by McMullen. The matron at the jail, the only person who has seen Mrs. Janisse since a jury returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter against her Friday night, said the only remark made by the convicted woman was to express her gratitude that she had not been found guilty of first degree homicide. Mrs. Janisse was reported improved today and ate a little breakfast, but was still very ill and listless. The prisoner is impatient to be sentenced, the matron said.
