When we hear the music ringing Through the bright celestial dome, When sweet angel voices singing. Gladly bid us welcome home To the land of ancient story, Where the spirit knows no care, In that land of light and glory, "Shall we know each other there?"

When the holy angels meet us, As we go to join their band. Shall we know the friends who greet us In the glorious spirit land? Shall we see the dark eyes shining On us as in days of yore? Shall we feel their dear arms twining Fondly round us as before?

Yes, my earth-worn soul rejoices, And my weary heart grows light For the thrilling angel voices, And the angel faces bright, That shall welcome us in heaven, As the loved of long ago. And to them 'tis kindly given Thus their mortal friends to know

O! ye weary ones and lost ones, Droop not, faint not by the way Ye shall join the loved and lost ones In the land of perfect day. Harp strings, touched by angel fingers Murmur in my raptured ear; Ever more their sweet tone lingers, We shall know each other there.

There is something remarkable in this gift of gan to feel that at last I ought to give my heart

Three," Died at midnight, Dec. 31st, aged one year. A low, sad dirge for the dying year,

Ere we lay him down on his frozen bier, Wrapped in his shroud of ice and snow We shall lay him away with the "Long ago." But ere we whisper our last good-bye,

Let us backward glance o'er the path he trod, And mark his tracks on the yielding sod. He came to us fresh from the hand of time, While the bells were ringing their merriest chime. Clad in his robes of purest white.

He glided in, in the hush of night.

He came to us, bright from another sphere, And we called him then "the glad New Year," We hailed his advent with shouts of glee, "Eighteen hundred and Sixty-three."

But he passed o'er the earth in his hurving tread He snatched the loved from our wild embrace, And laid them away in their burial place. He brought us the spring, but the flowers she gave. We twined in a garland to deck the grave, And the summer breezes that wandered by Whispered a sound of mortality. He has left a shadow on many a hearth, That was decked with flowers to hail his birth, And many a voice that was loudest in glee.

Forever is hushed in its melody. We shall lay him away on his frozen bier. The cold remains of the dear old year, Wrapped in his shroud of ice and frost,

White as the robes of the friends we have lost; Cold as the hands we clasped in rest, And folded them on the silent breast, Lifeless and still as the form we laid Down in the dust, with the flowers to fade.

Eleven o'clock, and his pulse beats slow, His eyes are closing on all below, Gather around and whisper good-bye Gather around him and see him die

Twelve o'clock, and the year is dead, Lay him back on his wintry bed, Stretched on his bier of frost and snow, Lay him away with the "long ago."

Draw the curtains, and close the door, Tread lightly, softly upon the floor ; Trim a wreath for the coffin lid. White flowers and buds in the mosses hid : And the name engraved on the plate shall be, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-three."
