The following letter, received from Captain Colquhoun, tells how that gallant little soldier went through the hard-fought day safely—a seeming miracle:

In the Field, April 30, 1915. At last I get time to drop you a line. We are resting for a ew days after having six days' and nights' continuous fighting. We suffered very badly. I have been working on my casualty list all day, and find I have lost about 160 out of a total of 227that is, killed and wounded. I will send you a list of the Brantford boys as soon as I get it completed. They say it was the hardest fight of the war. I am the only company commander left in the Fourth Battalion, and my company suffered the worst of the lot. I had to lead the attack all day. It was a very hot spot, and no one can understand how I came out without a cratch. I was knocked down three times with Jack Johnsons, t they could not stop me. I got up, and on we went, although was badly dazed. The bullets were as thick as hail, and I do see how any of us came out, as we had no cover at all, and we need about 1200 yards in the face of that terrible fire. I got draft of 150 men for my company, Walter Towers among them. here is only Lieut. Jones and I left. Captain Collins, Lieuts. iller and McGuire are wounded. I will write to-morrow if we

By Special Wire to the Courier.

LONDON, May 18.—Seven separate and distinct battles were fought in the week just closed, and there can be little doubt that the days from Saturday, the 8th, until Saturday; the 14th, will rank among the most bloody in the history of western Europe, says the Das de Calais correspondent of the Times.

"Saturday night saw no lessening in the intensity of the struggle. On the Ypres front, although outnumbered and in danger of being outflanked, our men again and again hurled back German attacks. During the darkness the Germans, as though aware that with every passing hour their opportunity was slipping away, continued to hurl themselves against our lines. Men who lived through this night shot until they could no longer hold their rifles. The fury of the assault was indescribable. Dawn of Sunday showed in the fields in front of Ypres the dead piled like corn stalks at harvest time, British and German lying side by side."

Is Accepted by City Daddies-Hearty Resolution Passed on Behalf of Club.

At the council meeting this letter was read:-

To His Worship the Mayor: Dear Sir,—On behalf of the directors of the Brantford Baseball and Amusement Company, I have much pleasure in extending to yourself and the members of the City Council an invitation to be present at the opening of the local Canadian League baseball season at Agricultural Park. on Thursday afternoon, May 20th. The game will be preceded by a par-ade from Victoria Park at 2.30 and autos will be provided for those members of the council who can make it convenient to participate. Some of the Canadian League cities have declared a public half holiday for baseball opening day. Owing to conditions which have existed in Brantford since the outbreak of the war, we feel that this would be too much to ask here, but anything your honorable body may be able to do in the way of assisting to boost the game and club, that has done much to boost Brantford, will be sincerely appreciated

Anticipating the pleasure of your company on Thursday, I am yours, Very sincerely,

T. J. NELSON, President. The communication was received with manifest pleasure by the city fathers. They felt the event justified a half holiday, but agreed with the expression in the letter that this might prove a hardship to a great many who for some time past have had none too much work. However, they heartily felt that employers should, as much as possible, enable their help to see the opener. feelings in the matter received formal expression in this resolution, which was unanimously passed.

"That this council place on record its appreciation of what the basebail club has done in the past in the way of advertising Brantford abroad and providing clean sport for the citizens at home, thus keeping much money in the city, particularly on Saturday afternoons and holidays, that otherwise might be spent elsewhere;

"That, owing to existing conditions while it might inflict a hardship on some were a half holiday declared, this council would drge manufactur-ers, merchants and other employers

FAREWELL SERVICES AT IMMANUEL

Pastor C. J. Loney Bids Congregation Farewell.

Farewell services at Immanuel Baptist Church were largely attended. Rev. Clifford J. Loney, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church, after a very successful pastorate, bid farewell to his congregation on Sunday.

In spite of the disagreeable weathe a large congregation gathered at the morning service, Rev. Mr. Loney delivered a strong and forceful sermon on the subject, The King's Business, based on the words "Occupy Until 1

The speaker showed that the interests of the Kingdom of God were the supreme things in every man's life. "This was the supreme thing in the life of Christ himself. As a boy of twelve, he realized that this was the great purpose of his life, when he said "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business." It is the supreme business of every Christian to serve the King, and to promote his interests in the world.

Like the noblemen in the parable, Christ has entrusted the earthly interests unto us, His followers and the extension of the Kingdom of God de-pends upon the fidelity of the indivi-dual Christian. The talents represent the varied powers which God has given to His children to carry forward the interests of His Kingdom. We each have all the capital that is required to do the business God has asked us to do. Continuing, the speaker asked what kind of business his hearers were doing for Christ, and reminded them that it was not what they had, but what they used, that counted. Better make a small business pay, than be

Mr. Loney then illustrated what uccessful business for Christ was and how it was carried on by the early church. The secret of success might be summed up in one word, "Faith-

Having enumerated the profits and olessings that come to those who vere faithful to their trust, he made eference to the work that had been lone in the church, and paid tribute to the beautiful spirit of harmony and of the loyal support he had received during the past year.

In closing, he asked the church to stand together, to be loyal to the Bible, the church and one another and to show an unbroken front to the world. Make the Bible a united facor, and not as some, a dividing factor. Remember, that you and I must one day hand our record and our time sheet into the hand of our Master.

In the afternoon the pastor spoke few parting words to the members of the Sunday School in whom he has been specially interested. He urged em to accept and serve Christ.

At the evening service Mr. Loney delivered an unusually strong and fervent sermon to a large and apprecia-tive audience, which filled the church o its uttermost capacity.

The theme considered was, 'Is there Heaven, based on the words of John, 14: "In my Father's house are many mansions." The speaker introduced the subject by referring to the story of the Fall, in Genesis, and showed how that all man had lost and more, was regained in the Homeland of the soul through our Lord Jesus forget that all arguments for existence of heaven applied equally for the existence of a hell. The first outstanding argument in favor of the existence of a heaven was a popular belief that had always throughout all ages been held in favor of an after life. The Egyptians in embalming thor dead as mummies in order to prepare them for the future life. The peculiar custom of the Indians, the Norsmen, the Greenlanders, the Chinese, in regard to their dead, all tended to prove that the general belief was that there existed a home-land for the soul. All cannot be deceived. The universability of the belief is the greatest argument in the favor of its justification. In the second place it was a gen-erally conceded fact that all really bad men were not adequately punished in this world, and similarly others were not awarded according to their dues. Thirdly there was the scriptural argument in favor of the existence of heaven. The bible had opened its passing through a long period of sin and strife, had terminated in the paradise regained our heavenly home. This grand and glorious home-land of the soul is represented under dif-ferent figures. It is called a kingdom, a kingdom of righteousness and peace, whose king is love, where millions of COMPANY. loyal and loving subjects serve the kind for ever.

It is a heavenly country, where all is beautiful and delightful, where the Good Shepherd leads his flocks by crystal streams. It is a heavenly city, with gates of pearl and streets of gold and walls of precious stones, rooms, no card tables or thescres. At this point the speaker declared heaven copies be filed as early as possible. would be a mighty slow place for some folks, and in fact there would have to be a big change even in some professing Christians if they were ever to see heaven, Finally, heaven is a home of many wonderfud and beautiful things, where there would be joy and happiness in long since and lost awhile.

An earnest appeal was made to accept Christ and make sure of heaven to which at least one responded pup-BAPTIST CHURCH licly. The ordinance of baptism was administered to two candidates, after which the Home Circle's song service was held, which had a record attend-

THE SITUATION.

The report of General Sir John French confirms the satisfactory news with reference to the British advance towards Lille. The French forces also continue to carry German earthworks. In both cases the fighting has been of exceptional severity, and the losses enormous, especially among the Germans. PRESIDENT WILSON REVIEWS

U. S. FLEET. The head of the neighboring Repub lic yesterday reviewed Uncle Sam's Atlantic fleet. There was a brave showing of vessels, but, incidentally, it may be remarked, as a record of fact, that the Star Spangled Bannerites have let this branch of their service fall away a good deal of late years. They had climbed into third place, with John Bull, as always, first, and Germany second, but now have to than that. The truth is that there has ahead. Adhi Baba is the first of the ator was taken in charge by the milibeen no apparent need to join in the enormous navy outlays of other lands, and hence the lapse. President Wilson in an address kept very carefully away from any references to incidents of the war, and in general terms referred to the peace desires of the nation.

"The inspiring thing about America," the President asserted, "is that she asks nothing for herself except what she has a right to ask for humanity itself. We want no nation's property; we wish to question no nation's honor; we wish to stand selfishly in the way of the development of no nation."

Whether or no the demonstration was intended for the benefit of Germany, it is not likely to have very much effect upon that moral-benumbed nation, which has so diabolically run amuck.

MEN VERSUS SHELLS. The following editorial from the Chicago Tribune tells the modern war story in a most forcible manner:-"Men in the European armies are valuable only as they have cartridges, guns as they have shells. Half the force and twice the ammunition about equal twice the force and half the ammunition. The outcome of the war is not so much in the reserve population of the nations involved as in the capacity of the munition factories. Russia, with an immense army, may be less formidable than France with a much smaller army. The question is how many shells and cartridges France has and how many Russia has, and how many France can produce and how many Russia can produce.

Recruiting and conscription have less effect than shell and cartridge making. The nation which produces the greatest amount of ammunition is the strongest nation. Another may have twice its strength in men. Strength in shells is the factor.

No advance against entrenchments is possible without an expenditure of ammunition which would have fought the Napoleonic wars. Neuve Chapelle consumed the supplies of an entire campaign. A French advance in Alsace, gaining a few hundred yards, requires the use of more ammunition than in other wars decided the fate of

The necessary prodigality in shells and cartridges has put an entirely new significance upon the work of the men in munition factories. Formerly it was possible to meet and anticipate all the needs of the men at the front. Now strategy is qualified by the new factor of supply. Movements hesi-

The parade of the 38th Dufferin Rifles last evening took a leap upwards when the 391 officers and men turned out. In that list were a number of recruits, which shows that the interest in the local militia is being maintained. In Which a Piano Company Lost Against Brant County Resident.

An interesting case was tried at Toronto before Judge Denton and a jury. The Newcombe Piano Company of Toronto sued Mrs. Cecilia Vivian of Scotland for $375, the price of a piano placed in her house over a year ago. Mrs. Vivian contended that the piano did not suit her and that she did not have to pay for it unless she was satisfied with it after one month's trial. Mrs Vivian was not satisfied and notified the company to take the piano away but they refused to do so and relied on an order signed by Mrs Vivian. Mrs Vivian stated she had cancelled the contract before the piano arrived and also claimed that the piano was not a new one and did not conform with the representations made by the agents. The trial lasted all day yesterday, safe for traffic in the meantime.

Alderman Suddaby wanted to know when the Board of Works would be tion with costs.

Two Thousand Men Crossed the Channel to Reinforce Division.

London, May 18 .- About 2,000 men narched out of Shorncliffe camp Sunday, May 2nd, fully equipped, co take the cross-Channel steamer. It was their second muster. Three days previously they had lined up and marched down to the harbor of Folkestone, but in the meantime a heavy fog had crept up, and the trip was cancelled. The draft which went over on Sunday was drawn from the 17th, 23rd, 30th and 32nd battalions. The new extension camps at Sanding Junction and Dibgate are beginning to fill up. The Grampian and the Northland, which reached England near the end of last week, brought about 3,500 men, including 4th, 5th and 6th Engineers (Ottawa), 18th battalion (London), field ambulances casualty clearing hospitals and divisional train. The trip was said to have been devoid of accident.

When a newspaper correspondent visited Shorncliffe camp on Sunday Montrealers in the 1st Reserve Battery (old 21st) were eagerly scan-ning home papers just received, all mail being a week late, held up no doubt by troop transport arrange-ments. A paper which was handed round with much interest was the special supplement of the McGill Daily.

Reserve Artillery would be wanted for the front in a few days caused certain enthusiastic sergeants to volunteer to go over as gunners. Lieut. A. C. Hersey, of Montreal, is now stationed at Shorncliffe in the base pay office.

CASTORIA For Infants and Children In Use For Over 30 Years Always bears the Signature of Chaff Hilteling

Never have the prospects for a glorous tennis season been so bright and never have so many adherents rallied to the courts as there have during the opening days this year. This applies to all tennis clubs and all report a full influx of members.

Under such circumstances it is well that enough foresight has been shown to enable the establishment of a regular league this season. This was accomplished in the Y.M.C.A. last night when a meeting of enthusiasts took place and two distinct groups were formed with a membership of eleven teams taken from eight clubs. Groups are A and B and they do not distinguish either senior or junior, but are merely so formed for the facilitat-ing of arranging schedules. Thus we find the Dutferins, Y.M.C.A. and Bell View with two teams, one in each group, neither of the teams being the stronger but only distinguished by the group in which they are placed. Games are to be played every Saturday, and any player becoming identified with any one team cannot transfer to another team, even f it belongs to the same club. Referees will be selected by the oppos-ing teams and results will be tabulat-ed by the president, W. D. Ansell of Bell View. The winners of each group to contest the finals at the end of the season. Full information may be had from Secretary Phillips, Phone 79.

The first group will be composed of Dufferins, Y. M. C. A., Bell View, St. Judes and Echo Place and the schedule drawn up is as follows:

May 24-Duffs vs. Y.M.C.A.M St. Judes vs. Bell View. May 29— Echo Place vs. Duffs. Y.M.C.A. vs. St. Judes. Bell View vs. Echo Place. St. Judes vs. Duffs

NOTES ON TORONTO GAME A bad beginning may have a good ending.

Three Richmond batters had three and two on them in that ninth inning before they were passed.

Crane, the young shortstop, releas-ed by Connie Mack to Richmond, looks the smoothest fielding shortstop seen in the International in a long time. He covers any amount of ground while his effort on Trout's hit in the tenth, although daylight robbery, was brilliant and graceful. Both he and Andrews are blondes and resemble Joe Schultz, now with Brooklyn.

shaped up like a grand hitter. He had three safe wallops in five times vup, and only missed a home run into the left field bleachers by inches when the ball curved over the line before it hit. He also did some nice fielding. With good pitching to-day the To-ronto Leafs should turn the tables, but there is still a lot of rough edges to be worn off on the defensive. Luque was nailed at second in the fourth inning when he over-ran the bag on Hollander's bunt. Pick whipped the ball to Jordan, cutting off Hollander, and Tim pegged it to Crane at second, the latter putting

ELM AVENUE CHURCH HELD

The following new books have been put in circulation at the Public ib-Other Side of the Lantern by Sir Frederick Treves.
And That Reminds Me, by Stanley

Juvenile Talent That Was Astonishing---A Rare Evening.

At the Elm Avenue Methodist Church last night, was held one of the happiest and most successful concerts of the year. Many clever things were done during the night by the children and while each had a distinctive merit of their own, it was impossible to say that one little artiste excelled

The speakers of the evening, the Rev. T. E. Holling, B.A., and Mr. Raddock, the Secretary gave unstinted praise to the church-workers of this new pastorate.

Mr. Barnes, the chairman, was quite n touch with all the activities and very acceptably filled the role he was unanime,usly called for.

The event of the evening for the grown-ups however, was the part play Spirits', when a bevy of damsels and charming dames from Colborne street Church, with tragic mien and feminine art displayed their talents and gave interpretations of justice, mercy, love, etc. Prize giving, however, was what the kiddies had come for and their expectant little faces clearly demon-strated the anxiety with which they waited for is advent. The reports of the secretaries were couched in an optimistic vein, despite all things, war and depression of trade, the church was going ahead splendidly. The at-tendance had increased and the offerings were liberal and well maintain-

RICH PROGRAM

The opening numbers included meritorious piano duet by Miss Burri and Jim Tullock, and a rendering of Builders' by Miss Tullock's class that reflected the ability of the 'young uns.' The Primary Class exceeded its greatest hopes in a chorus, which was followed by Harold Day reciting "When Grandma Baked" with clever nd happy ease. 'Hush-a-bye' a lullaby was a sweet little part well taken by five little ladies, Marjorie McCubbin, Bessie Sowden, Agnes Johnson, Jeanette McIrvin and Flora Davidson.

John Sowden was reserving of the applause he received and Johnny will be encouraged to persevere as an elocutionist. The "Rainy Day Brigade," part song by eight boys, left the audience in tears-of mirth. A piano duet with trim little fingers rattling the keys in juvvenile enthusiasm, but nevertheless with harmony was given by Florence Day and Mar-ion Moyer of Miss E. Tottle's Class. Another juvenile elocutionist made his debut in the person of Jim Davidson and got a reward that will be the inspiration for an encore at another date. CHORUS SINGING. Miss L. Moyer's class did excelently in the Mission of Children's Day, and was followed by a duet by Earnest and Sam Johnson of Mr. Gullen's class. A trio was then brought made an appealing harmony for the words of "Jesus Color Bearers." Two duets by Miss V. and F. Day on the piano and Marion and Marjorie Mc-Cubbin who sang with pleasing effect were much enjoyed, and Miss Beatrice

Meyer.
Point of Contact in Teaching, by Davidson who came next with a piano solo were a combination that constituted a most exceptional group.
Miss Tottle's class sang, "God Will Care For You," and Miss Crispins class with machine-like precision, did a little musical drill. A little girl then recited and the boys looked on with envious eyes; in the light of a girlish treble the boys had to take second thoughts as to their laurels. Miss M.

Edmondson was the little girl. Concluding the evening were three plendid efforts. Last, but not least, Valse Caprice, piano solo, by Miss M. Davidson, a selection by Mrs. Douglas' class and the exercises by Mrs. F. Leeming's class, all deserving credit and reflecting on the energy of their teachers. It is rare, indeed to find an array of talent such as was put on last night at Elm avenue church, and rarer still to find them so worthy of their parts.

"Sunday, during the night we or-ganized our new front. In Neuville "Reaching the village of La Tar-gette, they fought foot by foot through the streets and orchards. As town where we were huddled together the village is small, they were soon under an artillery fire that was bound past it, and 300 metres farther on to become more and more severe as were in contact with the first houses of Neuville. It was then 11.30 hold our position near the cemetery and to the south our line ran up held only a part. Our task then, during the next few days was the capture and occupation of Neuville. Well, we knew that the fight, in the streets house by house, would be a bitter one but the reality surpassed even what our imagination had conceived of it.

GERMAN CELLAR SYSTEM "No one who has not seen the cellar system and, beyond all, the subcellar system of Neuville can ever appreciate the perfection to which the olding, as on the left, five big lines Germans have carried the art of encumbering their positions. Under the cellars already existing they dug out new and strongly protected subways, all solidly bedded in concrete. Here they hid themselves during the bombardments and from one end of the village to the other they circulated like moles, suddenly coming to the surface when their presence was least expected. One of them was even seen watching us through a perscope from an opening behind our PALE ANAEMIC GIRLS lines and was able to escape underground before we could trace him.

"Every group of houses hid a machine gun, protected by a concrete shelter. Some of these shelters had iron gates which locked with keys. "The enemy began by directing against that part of the village occu-

"His thought of her had been less vivid in the last few days, for, though still using steady discretion, he had been drawn gradually nearer the fascinating whirlpool of new interests and new work. Shut his eyes as he might, there was no denying that this moment, so personally vital to him, was politically vital to the whole country and that by a curious coincidence Chilcote's position well nigh forced him to take an active interest in the situation. Again and again the suggestion had arisen that should the smoldering fire in Persia break into a flame Chilcote's commercial interests would facilitate - would practically compel-his standing in in the campaign against the government.

The little incident of the tea table, recalling the social side of his obligations, had aroused the realization of greater things. As he stood meditatively in the middle of the room he saw suddenly how absorbed he had become in these greafer things—how, in the swing of congenial interests, he had been borne insensibly forward, his capacities expanding, his intelligence as serting itself. He had so undeniably found his sphere that the idea of usurpation had receded gently as by natural laws until his own personality had begun to color the day's work.

As this knowledge came he wondered quickly if it held a solution of the present little comedy; if Eve had seen what others, he knew, had observedthat Chilcote was showing a grasp of things that he had not exhibited for years. Then, as a sound of skirts came softly down the corridor, he squared his shoulders with his habitual abrupt gesture and threw his cigar into the Eve entered the room much as she had done on her former visit, but with one difference-in passing Loder she quietly held out her hand. He took it as quietly. "Why am I so honored?" he asked.

She laughed a little and looked across at the fire, "How like a man! You always want to begin with reasons. Let's have tea first and explanations after She moved forward toward the table and he followed. As he did so it struck him that her dress seemed in peculiar harmony with the day and the room, though beyond that he could not follow its details. As she paused beside the table he drew forward a chair with a faint touch of awkwardness. Sheathanked him and sat down.

He watched her in silence, as she poured out the tea, and the thought crossed his mind that it was sincred-Ibly long since he had seen a woman preside over a meal. The deftness of her fingers filled him with an unfamillar, half inquisitive wonder. So, interesting was the sensation that when she held his cup toward him he didn't immediately see it. Don't you want any? She smiled

Bor a moment he felt relieved. Then, as a fresh silence fell, his sense of awkwardness returned. He sipped his tentand ate a biscuit. He found himself wishing, for almost the first time, for some of the small society talk that came so pleasantly to other men. He felt*that the position was ridiculous. He glanced at Eve's averted head and laid his empty cup upon the table. Almost at once she turned, and their

The curtness of the answer might have displeased another woman. Eve seemed to take no offense.

"I had a talk with the Fraides today," she said, "a long talk. Mr. Fraide said great things of you, things I wouldn't have believed from anybody but Mr. Fraide." She altered her position and looked from Loder's face back He took Sheeres puiter bee to him. He would

"Oh, I mustn't tell you!" She laughed a little. "But you have surprised him." She paused, sipped her tea, then looked up again with a change of expression. "John," she said more seriously, "there is one point that sticks a little. Will this great change last?" Her voice was direct and even, wonderfully direct for a woman, Loder thought. It came to him with a certain force that beneath her remarkable harm might possibly lie a remarkable character. It was not a possibility that had occurred to him before, and it caused him to look at her a second time. In the new light he saw her beauty differently, and it interested him differently. Heretofore he had been inclined to class women under three heads-idols, amusements and incumbrances. Now it crossed his mind that a woman might possibly fill another place—the place of a com-

You didn't make very ardent love," she smiled, "but I think I had forgotten about love. I wanted nothing so much as to be like Lady Sarah-married to a great man." She paused, then went on more hurriedly: For awhile things went right; then slowly things went wrong. You got your-your nerves." Loder changed his position with something of abruptness. She misconstrued the action.

"Please don't think I want to be disagreeable," she said hastily. "I don't. I'm only trying to make you understand why-why I lost heart." "I think I know," Loder's voice broke in involuntarily. "Things got worse, then still worse. You found interference useless. At last you ceased to have a husband.' "Until a week ago." She glanced up quickly. Absorbed in her own feelings, she had seen nothing extraordinary in his words. But at hers Loder changed color.

"It's the most incredible thing in the world," she said. "It's quite incredible and yet I can't deny it. Against all my reason, all my experience, all my inclination, I seem to feel in the last week something of what I felt at first." She stopped with an embarrassed laugh. "It seems that, as if by magic, life has been picked up where I dropped it six years ago." Again she stopped and laughed. Loder was keenly uncomfortable, but he could think of nothing to say. "It seemed to begin that night I dined with the Fraides," she went on "Mr. Fraide talked so wisely and so kindly out so many things. He recalled all we had hoped for in you, and-and he blamed me a little." She paused and aid her cup aside. "He said that when people have made what they call their ast effort they should always make just ne effort more. He promised that if I could once persuade you to take an inerest in your work he would do the est. He said all that and a thousand ther kinder things, and I sat and lisened. But all the time I thought of othing but their uselessness. Before left I promised to do my best, but my hought was still the same. It was tronger than ever when I forced myself to come up here"- She paused again and glanced at Loder's averted head. "But I came, and then, as if by conquering myself I had compelled a eward, you seemed, you somehow eemed different. It sounds ridiculous, know." Her voice was half amused, half deprecating. "It wasn't a difference in your face, though I knew directthat you were free from nerves." Again she hesitated over the word. "It was a difference in yourself, in the things you said, more than in the way you said them." Once more she paused and laughed a little.

Loder's discomfort grew. "But it didn't affect me then." She spoke more slowly. "I wouldn't admit then. And the next day when we talked on the terrace I still refused to admit it, though I felt it more strongly than before. But I have watched you since that day, and I know there is a change. Mr. Fraide feels the same, and he is never mistaken. I know it's only nine or ten days, but I've hardly seen you in the same mood for nine or ten hours in the last three years." She stopped, and the silence was impressive. It seemed to plead for confirmation of

Still Loder could find no respense. After waiting for a moment she leaned forward in her chair and looked up

"John," she said, "is it going to last? That's what I came to ask. I don't want to believe till I'm sure. I don't want to risk a new disappointment." Loder felt the earnestness of her gaze, though he avoided meeting it. "I couldn't have said this to you week ago, but today I can. I don't pretend to explain why. The feeling is too inexplicable. I only know that I can say it now and that I couldn't a week ago. Will you understand-and answer?"

Still Loder remained mute. His position was horribly incongruous, What could he say? What dared he say? Confused by his silence, Eve rose.

"If it's only a phase, don't try to hide it," she said. "But if it's going to last -if by any possibility it's going to last"-She besitated and looked up.

unconscious of the subtle contact of her glance, the nearness of her presence and no one had ever hinted that manhood was lacking in him. It was a moment of temptation. His own energy, his own intentions, seemed so near, Chilcote and Chilcote's claims so distant and unreal. After all, his life, his ambitions, his determinations, were his own. He lifted his eyes and looked at

"You want me to tell you that I will go on?" he said.

Her eyes brightened. She took a step forward. "Yes," she said; "I want it more than anything in the world." There was a wait. The declaration that would satisfy her came to Loder's lips, but he delayed it. The delay was fateful. While he stood silent the door opened, and the servant who had brought in the tea reappeared.

He crossed the room and handed Loder a telegram. "Any answer, sir?" he

Eve moved back to her chair. There was a flush on her cheeks, and her eyes were still alertly bright. Loder tore the telegram open, read it, then threw it into the fire. "No answer!" he said laconically. At the brusqueness of his voice Eve looked up. "Disagreeable news?" she said as the servant departed.

"Ne," he said at last in a strained voice. "No; only news that I-that I had forgotten to expect."

CHAPTER XI.

HERE was a silence, an uneasy break, after Loder spoke. The episode of the telegram was, to all appearances, ordinary enough, calling forth Eve's question and his own reply as a natural sequence, yet in the pause that followed it each was conscious of a far, each was aware that in some subtle way the thread of sympathy had been dropped; though to one the cause was inexplicable and to the other only too plain. Loder watched the ghost of his message grow whiter and thinner, then dissolve into airy fragments and flutter up the chimney. As the last morsel wavered out of sight he turned and

"You almost made me commit myself," he said. In the desire to hide his feelings his tone was short. Eve returned his glance with a quiet regard, but he scarcely saw it. He had a stupefied sense of disaster, a feeling of bitter self commiseration that for the moment outweighed all other considerations. Almost at the moment of justification the good of life had crumbled in his fingers, the soil given beneath his feet, and with an absence of logic, a lack of justice unusual in him, he let resentment against Chilcote sweep suddenly over his mind.

Eve, still watching him, saw the darkening of his expression and with a quiet movement rose from her chair. "Lady Sarah has a theater party tonight, and I am dining with her," she "It is an early dinner, so I must think about dressing. I'm sorry you think I tried to draw you into anything. I must have explained myself badly." She laughed a little to cover the slight discomfiture that her tone betrayed, and as she laughed she moved across the room toward the Loder, engrossed in the check to his own schemes, incensed at the suddenness of Chilcote's recall and still more incensed at his own folly in not having anticipated it, was oblivious for the moment of both her movement and her words. Then quite abruptly they obtruded themselves upon him, breaking through his egotism with something of the sharpness of pain following a blow. Turning quickly from the fireplace, he faced the shadowy room across which she had passed, but simultaneously with his turning she gained the door.

The knowledge that she was gone struck him with a sense of double loss. "Wait!" he called, suddenly moving forward. But almost at once he paused, chilled by the solitude of the room. "Eve!" he said, using her name unconsciously for the first time.

But the corridor, as well as the room, was empty; he was too late. He stood irresolute; then he laughed shortly, turned and passed back toward the fireplace.

The blow had fallen, the inevitable come to pass, and nothing remained but to take the fact with as good a grace as possible. Chilcote's telegram had summoned him to Clifford's inn at 7 o'clock, and it was now well on toward 6. He pulled out his watch-Chilcote's watch, he realized with a touch of grim humor as he stooped to examine the dial by the light of the fire-then, as if the humor had verged to another feeling, he stood straight again and felt for the electric button in the wall. His fingers touched it, and simultaneously the room was

The abrupt alteration from shadow to light came almost as a shock. The feminine arrangement of the tea table seemed incongruous beside the sober books and the desk laden with papers -incongruous as his own presence in the place. The thought was unpleasant, and he turned aside as if to avoid it, but at the movement his eyes fell on Chilcote's cigarette box with its gleaming monogram, and the whimsical suggestion of his first morning rose again. The idea that the inanimate objects in the room knew him for what he was, recognized the interloper where human eyes saw the rightful possessor, returned to his mind. Through all his disgust and chagrin a smile forced itself to his lips, and crossing the room for the second time, he passed into Chilcote's bedroom.

BOOTS THAT

STOOD THE TEST

MES HOLDEN McCREADY LIMITED, Canada's largest shoe manufacturers, supplied, within thirty-three days, 32,217 pairs of leather ankle boots and 30,000 pairs of canvas shoes for the outfitting of the First Canadian Contingent, the largest quantity supplied by any manufacturer.

These boots were worn by our soldiers on active service both in this country and in the training camps in England. They were subjected to the most severe usage that boots could be subjected to. They travelled over rough roads and smooth. They waded through mud and through slush past all description. They were soaked by the never-ceasing rains of an abnormally wet English winter. They were baked on hot stoves, grilled on steam radiators and roasted before open fires. Yet, THEY STOOD THE TEST.

Out of the entire 32,217 pairs of leather boots supplied by this company only a single pair was shown to be open to criticism when the Government enquiry was made six months later.

Experts employed by the Government examined 1365 pairs and 348 odd boots made by various manufacturers. Among the number were found only seven pairs of boots of Ames Holden Niccready manufacture, of which five were found to be repairable, one pair unrepairable, and ONE PAIR HAD A SOLE UNDER GAUGE.

The best proof of the durability and serviceability of the Ames Holden Mc-Cready boots, however, was afforded by the sworn statements of soldiers who had worn these boots constantly from the time they were issued in September, 1914, right through to March, 1915. They swore that they had worn the boots through all the rough experiences at Valcartier and on Salisbury Plain and that they had given excellent service throughout. Sergeant Nussey, of Toronto, who had served twelve years in the British Army, appeared before the Committee with a pair of such boots still on his feet and submitted them to the committee's inspection.

The testimony of these witnesses has since been amply corroborated by nu-merous reports and letters received from officers and soldiers at the front all testifying to the good wearing qualities of the Ames Holden McCready boots.

When the question was raised concerning the quality of the Canadian soldiers' boots, Ames Holden McCready Limited placed themselves IMMEDIATELY upon record, by writing to the Government, as desirous of having the most thorough investigation of the matter. The appointment of a Parliamentary Committee and the official enquiry followed. It occupied several weeks' time. The Committee stopped at nothing in their efforts to get at all the facts.

This Company purchased the best leather and supplies available in Canada and spared no expense in manufacturing the boots. All our invoices, and shop and manufacturing records were produced before the Parliamentary Committee for their inspection and information. We had nothing to hide and were proud of the boots which were furnished to the Government.

THE AMES HOLDEN McCREADY BOOTS CAME OUT OF THE ORDEAL UNSCATHED. INTO LEGISLION

The Committee reported to Parliament that the boots supplied by this company substantially complied with the sample, that no paper or other fraudulent substances had been employed in their manufacture and that all charges involving the integrity of this company or of the boots supplied by them had been abundantly disproven by the sworn evidence taken before the Committee.

The report, which was adopted by Parliament, was A COMPLETE VINDI-CATION FOR AMES HOLDEN McCREADY LIMITED.

In bringing these facts prominently before the people of the Dominion, Ames Holden McCready Limited are actuated by the desire not only to protect their own good name---which needs no vindication with the thousands of Canadians who are familiar with this company and its products---but also that of a notable and important Canadian industry, which has been unwarrantably aspersed.
