Love a Conqueror

OR WEDDED AT LAST!

CHAPTER IX.

Shirley stood talking to Sir Guy glanced across the room to Gilbert, who had followed Major Stuart into the oak parlour; she was very pale, but she was listening to and answering her uncle with perfect composure.

"I am very disappointed myself," he said quietly. "I had no wish to pass New Year's Day in a railway carriage; but you see it cannot be helped—and I have no time to lose, Miss Fairholme," he added quickly, seeing that Shirley had already escaped from the room. "I have to catch the seven p.m. train from Dumfries."

"It is not a pleasant time of the year for travelling," remarked Alice, with a graceful little shiver. "I don't envy you, Major Stuart. But I hope you will find your uncle better than you expect. Medical men are not infallible, you know."

"Thank you, I hope so," said Guy absently. "Good-bye, Miss Fairholme. You will, I hope, allow me to thank you for your kindness during my visit at the Court?"

"You must at least carry away one pleasant reminiscence with you," she responded smiling, as she gave him her hand. "Good-bye, Major Stuart. We will take good care of Shirley during your absence. I hope you will not be snowed up on your way."

"I hope not," Guy said, as he spoke his farewells and hurried out of the room.

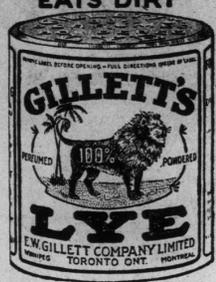

"Poor Shirley! Hard lines for her!" remarked Ruby regretfully. "Her pleasure is spoilt."

"Yes, poor child," said Alice, in her soft voice, half-triumphant light shone in Sir Hugh's blue eyes. "But what can't be cured must be endured, you know, Ruby; so she must bear it as philosophically as she can."

CHAPTER X.

Shirley was standing waiting for Guy in the great hall; and as he was toward her, with a very tortuous look in her lustrous hazel eyes she put out two little trembling hands to meet his. The hall was all ready for the ball, being profusely decorated with evergreens and garlands and rich crimson hangings, while the polished floor was simply perfect for dancing. It was a pretty and tasteful ballroom, being somewhat out of the common, for in the recesses the suits of steel armor caught and reflected back the fire and lamp light, and the grand staircase at one end, carpeted in crimson, would make a very comfortable resting-place for the tired dancers by and by. Shirley was standing before the great wood-fire that was blazing on the wide old-fashioned hearth, a slender drooping figure in a black dress, and as she put out her hands to meet Guy's, the diamond on the little white left hand flashed and gleamed in the firelight.

"Oh, Guy," she cried pitifully, as he took the little hands in his strong grasp. "This is a disappointment!"

"Is it dear?" he said kindly. "I am very sorry, Shirley."

"Must you go?" she whispered unsteadily. "Guy, it is my first ball, and I wanted to be so happy to-night."

"And I hope you will be happy," he replied, smiling a little—"you must be happy without me, my child."

"Happy without you!" Shirley echoed drearily. "I can't, Guy. Do you think"—she lifted her eyes to him with a little coquetry—"that you could be happy without me?"

Guy's smile deepened.

"I think I could, my child, if it were necessary," he answered; "and I expect you will be so to-night."

"Then I am sorry to say that your expectations will be disappointed," she said drearily. "Guy, don't you care? Are you not a little sorry?"

"Yes, and such a kind letter. You will give him my love, Guy, and tell him that I shall always love him for his goodness to his unworthy nephew."

"You are a darling!" Guy said softly, as he bent over her and put his lips to her brow. "I really think you are fond of me, Shirley."

"I really think I am—a little," she responded, laughing; but the next moment with a sudden tenderness and pain she had pressed her face against his breast. "Oh, Guy, oh, Guy, what shall I do even for those few days without you?"

"Shirley, if you cry, you will have red eyes for to-night," he said, bending over her with smiling yet sorrowful eyes; "and I cannot have people saying that Major Stuart has a queer taste to take that ugly girl! Darling, look up and give me a smile to take away with me."

"I am very sorry, Guy, old fellow," broke in Sir Hugh's voice at his friend's elbow, "but it is time to go! I cannot give you even five minutes more."

"All right—I am ready," Guy answered, as Shirley started up, flushed and trembling. "We don't mind Hugh, my darling," he went on, smiling. "He is very sympathetic, and can readily understand that I am not

"My dear little girl, I am very sorry," he answered fondly, putting his arms round her and drawing her to his side. "I never care much for balls, but I confess that I have been looking forward to this one. I wanted to see Miss Ross in all the grandeur of her first ball-dress. But other fellows will be lucky enough to do as while I am travelling in a cold draft railway-carriage. However, I shall have one consolation," he added laughingly.

"What is that, Guy?"

"I shall see you hundreds of times in your war-paint, my darling," he replied fondly. "Don't throw me over for a richer suitor in my absence, little woman."

"As if I could!" she said sadly, too much depressed at the thought of his departure to remember her careless words.

"Could you not?" he questioned, smilingly. "Then what were those very heretical and unorthodox opinions you were giving vent to in my absence?"

"Ah"—Shirley drew a long breath and colored a little—"I did not think you heard, Guy?"

"But I did hear, Shirley," he answered gently; and, with a pretty little penitent gesture, Shirley put both hands on his breast.

"I am very sorry, Guy. I would not have had you hear them for the world; but—"

"Dear," he said, softly, "you spoke the words, did you not?"

"Yes, but not as they were repeated," she answered eagerly. "You know, Guy—you are sure, are you not—that I would not pain you for the world, and that if you were a private in your own regiment I should love you just as dearly?"

"Would you?" he answered smiling. "Those are pleasant words to hear, sweet."

"Then let them make you forget the others," she said, softly. "Those are true—the others were not. Guy, they do not pain you now, dear, do they?"

"I do not think they pained me much," he replied, smiling into the loving eyes which were lifted to his face. "We will not think any more about them, Shirley. You will write to me, dear?"

"Of course. It will be so pleasant to write to you. I have never written to anyone but Jack," she said, smiling; "so you must not mind the letters being stupid."

"I dare say I shall not think them so," he answered, "especially if they tell me all about yourself and your doings and your flirtations."

"My flirtations?" Shirley echoed, with wide, innocent, smiling eyes. "What are they?"

"You know very well. You are a very demure little maiden on the surface; but still waters run deep. Do you think you will have forgotten me if I am away longer than a fortnight?"

"Of course. I shall in all probability have married some one else if you prolong your absence for three weeks," she answered, laughing.

Guy laughed also. It was strange how little both seemed to feel this separation. Certainly it was to be but a short one; but so much may happen in a fortnight, in a week, in a day, that some of the coming trouble might have cast its shadow upon them.

"Saucy girl," he said. "Marry some one else at your peril and his! If you do, as sure as my name is Guy Stuart, I will kill him! Therefore, if any one proposes to you in my absence, you can tell him so, and warn him."

"I certainly will," she replied merrily, and then the smile faded, and she rested her head against his wearily. "Guy, I wish you had not to go."

"So do I, love. But the dear old man has been so good to me always that I could not bear to think of him as ill and lonely. Dr. Crowter is a bit of an alarmist," he added, musingly, "and he always thinks 'nele Jasper worse than he is, so that I do not believe he is so ill as he says. Why, I had, as you know, a letter from the dear old fellow last week?"

"Yes—and such a kind letter. You will give him my love, Guy, and tell him that I shall always love him for his goodness to his unworthy nephew."

"You are a darling!" Guy said softly, as he bent over her and put his lips to her brow. "I really think you are fond of me, Shirley."

"All right—I am ready," Guy answered, as Shirley started up, flushed and trembling. "We don't mind Hugh, my darling," he went on, smiling. "He is very sympathetic, and can readily understand that I am not quite as rejoiced as I ought to be to leave you."

"Readily," Sir Hugh answered, in rather a low tone, his face looking strange and pale in the firelight.

"And I am leaving you in Hugh's charge," Guy went on fondly—both arms were round Shirley now, and his face was bent over her. "I know Sir Gilbert and Lady Fairholme are very good, but I know that Hugh is my friend, and that he will take better care of my property than any one else," he added cordially; "so, sweetheart, if anything goes wrong during my absence, will you go to Hugh as frankly as you would come to me?"

"Of course, if you wish it," she said shyly. "But Guy, nothing can go wrong, dear."

"I think you know that nothing could give me truer pleasure than to render you any service," Sir Hugh put in, his voice a little husky, his lips parched and dry; "although of course I hope there will be no occasion."

"At any rate, I leave her much less regretfully knowing that you are at hand, old friend," Guy said, in his warm frank manner. "Now, good-bye, my darling; take care of yourself—and take care of her, Hugh."

He held her close for a moment and Shirley clung to him with sudden passion and pain. Now for the first time a heavy foreboding of dread and terror was upon her, and she shrank from the separation with fear and trembling.

"Darling, let me go," Guy whispered, as he unclasped the clinging hands. "Why, you foolish child, it is only for a week or two! Don't sob so, you silly girl. Why, Shirley, I shall not be able to leave you!"

Sir Hugh had walked over to the hall door and had drawn aside the heavy sheltering curtains and opened the strong iron-studded door.

"Guy, old fellow!" he called warningly, and at the sound of his voice Shirley started, checked her tears, and disengaged herself from Guy's clasp.

"Good-bye," she said, faintly, forcing a little smile to the trembling lips. "Guy, don't forget me!"

"That's my brave Shirley! No, don't come to the door, darling; it is so rough and boisterous. Oh, you willful lassie!" he added, smiling, as she went with him, and watched him get into the dog-cart which was to take him to the station.

"Readily," Sir Hugh answered, in rather a low tone, his face looking strange and pale in the firelight.

"And I am leaving you in Hugh's charge," Guy went on fondly—both arms were round Shirley now, and his face was bent over her. "I know Sir Gilbert and Lady Fairholme are very good, but I know that Hugh is my friend, and that he will take better care of my property than any one else," he added cordially; "so, sweetheart, if anything goes wrong during my absence, will you go to Hugh as frankly as you would come to me?"

"Of course, if you wish it," she said shyly. "But Guy, nothing can go wrong, dear."

"I think you know that nothing could give me truer pleasure than to render you any service," Sir Hugh put in, his voice a little husky, his lips parched and dry; "although of course I hope there will be no occasion."

"At any rate, I leave her much less regretfully knowing that you are at hand, old friend," Guy said, in his warm frank manner. "Now, good-bye, my darling; take care of yourself—and take care of her, Hugh."

He held her close for a moment and Shirley clung to him with sudden passion and pain. Now for the first time a heavy foreboding of dread and terror was upon her, and she shrank from the separation with fear and trembling.

"Darling, let me go," Guy whispered, as he unclasped the clinging hands. "Why, you foolish child, it is only for a week or two! Don't sob so, you silly girl. Why, Shirley, I shall not be able to leave you!"

Sir Hugh had walked over to the hall door and had drawn aside the heavy sheltering curtains and opened the strong iron-studded door.

"Guy, old fellow!" he called warningly, and at the sound of his voice Shirley started, checked her tears, and disengaged herself from Guy's clasp.

"Good-bye," she said, faintly, forcing a little smile to the trembling lips. "Guy, don't forget me!"

"That's my brave Shirley! No, don't come to the door, darling; it is so rough and boisterous. Oh, you willful lassie!" he added, smiling, as she went with him, and watched him get into the dog-cart which was to take him to the station.

A Baby Bond as a Christmas Gift

As a Christmas present for a child what could be better than a $100-6 p.c. Bond? We have prepared a table showing the swift and remarkable growth of $100 invested in this way in 21 years.

You may see from this table how the habit of giving a boy each Christmas (commencing with his first) one of these so-called "Baby Bonds," and likewise investing the proceeds, would result in the very comfortable sum of $4,219.41 on his twenty-first birthday.

He would not only have this amount to assist him in starting for himself, but the fact of having received and wisely invested $100 every Christmas could not fail to inculcate in him an appreciation of the value of economy and thrift. For a little girl such a gift would be equally appropriate.

Call on or write to Mr. R. C. Power at his office, Mercantile Chambers, St. John's, for full information about these "Baby Bonds."

Prize Day

AT METHODIST COLLEGE.

A goodly gathering of pupils, parents and friends met in the Methodist College Hall last night for the Prize-Giving. The chair was taken at 7.45 by the Hon. R. K. Bishop, and the programme entered upon. The Head Master reported in an unostentatious manner the work of the school during the past year, and particularly the features of the examination results. The Rev. J. W. Barlett delivered an eloquent address on education. The distribution of scholarships and prizes then followed. His Excellency the Governor handed them to the winner with a few pleasant and congratulatory words. The usual tedium of this part of the programme was relieved by calling the prize winners of each grade in groups. Then His Excellency made a brief address, expressing his pleasure at the encouraging nature of the Headmaster's report and the modest way in which the success had been set forth. The College had reason to be proud of the even way in which the successes were distributed, for it indicated the grounding of the average pupil was sound and thorough and after all the country would have to depend on the training of the average man and woman. Book-learning at schools was not the be-all and end-all of education. It was important as it was a beginning. But it was only a beginning to that after learning of the management of men of affairs, which was to be found in the school of experience, and depended largely on the development of character for which it was not usual to award prizes in the schools, but on which the prizes of life depended. There was sound material to work upon and he was gratified to find the College was making good use of that material to prepare it for the great struggle which he felt was coming on this continent. The Hon. James Angel proposed and Mr. Arthur Mews seconded a vote of thanks to His Excellency for his presence and his services at the gathering. The audience showed their appreciation by a standing vote and hearty applause. His Excellency the Governor and staff then vacated the platform and a school exhibition followed. A squad of boys were put through some sets of club exercises, which they performed with precision. A choir of boys sang agreeably a motion song, "The Merry Sailors," a squad of girls in suitable costumes, gracefully went through a series of extension movements. Miss Pauline Inkpen played acceptably a Pianoforte solo. A squad of boys were put through some vaulting horse exercises and earned much applause from the audience. Next followed a farce in one Act: "Mischief Making," the actions of which were performed with spirit and the words delivered in good tone and clear enunciation. The cast of characters was as follows:

Henry Desgrais, a young officer—F. Rowe.
Oliver Guioi, a fisherman—L. Curtis.
Nicholas Dovetail, a carpenter—W. Forbes.
Madame Manette, a washerwoman—Helen Oates.
Jacquette, Louise, Jane (Washerwomen)—Marion Kendall, Helen Peters, Ray Kendall.
Villager—Mary Abbott.
Therese, adopted daughter of Oliver—Emmeline Joffe.
Washerwomen—Agnes Soper and Laura Roper.
A Part Song "Blue Danube," by girls, the Newfoundland Ode and National Anthem brought the entertainment to a close.

SPECIAL TO EVENING TELEGRAM.
VANCOUVER, To-day.
The cash in the North Vancouver Branch of the British North America, is short $11,000 according to a statement made yesterday. It is stated in the bank that a clerk, suspected recently, applied for leave of absence to get married, had over stayed his time. The investigation resulted in the above result.

LONDON, To-day.
Premier Asquith opened direct communication this week with Lord Lansdowne and Andrew Bonar Law on the subject of Home Rule. Heretofore the tentative settlement had been between others, notably between Churchill and Austin Chamberlain. Nothing so far, has been effected in the way of agreement, but the Prime Minister's direct invitation for suggestions, marks another step in the negotiations.

LONDON, Dec. 17.
Sir Edward Grey addressing his constituents in Northumberland today, acknowledged that no progress had been made yet in the direction of achieving a settlement of the Home Rule question by consent. The Government, he said, was actuated by a spirit of conciliation, had opened the door, but instead of entering in and discussing terms, the Opposition persisted in staying outside and shouting in things through the window. Still the door would be open, and it would not be the fault of the Liberal Party if a peaceful settlement was not reached.

LONDON, Dec. 17.
Lord Cowdray, in denying to-day a statement published in New York to the effect he was about to dispose of his Mexican oil interests to an American concern, said: "Neither my firm nor I have sold, nor are we about to sell our Mexican oil interests to the Standard Oil Company or any one else."

F. P. U. Meeting

At Kelligrews.
President Coaker went to Kelligrews yesterday and held a mass meeting at 5 p.m., returning to town by the shore train which arrived here at 9.15 p.m.
About 300 electors from the South Shore were present every inch of standing space in the S.U.F. Hall being occupied. Only men were allowed in the building. Mr. R. Hibbs, the chairman of the Local Council, presided and introduced the President in a graceful speech. When Mr. Coaker arose to speak he received an ovation, and at the close the audience cheered in a manner that would give no pleasure to any Grabelts present.
The speech was of two hours duration, and but for having to class in order to be ready for the train due at 8.20 p.m., he would have spoken longer. He, however, intends to deliver another public address later on when matters not dealt with last night will be taken up. The singing of the National Anthem closed the public meeting, and those willing to join were enrolled, when some fifty (50) electors came forward to add their names to the roll.
Men from Seal Cove on the north west of the section and from Topsail on the east, attended. M. Hawco, from Holyrood, was also present.
The Council at Kelligrews believe that 400 men will be enrolled in their Council before next Fall.

What is Success?

By RUTH CAMERON.

Some weeks ago I asked my readers to contribute their ideas as to what constitutes real success in life. As usual I have not the space for half the splendid answers, but here are as many as I can crowd in.

"He who by honest work has maintained himself in physical, mental and spiritual health in that state of life into which it has pleased God to call him," writes a masculine reader, "who has laid by a competency for old age, and provided for those dependent upon him; who has cultivated a cheerful mind and merited a few friends; who has left his path through life the sweeter for his passage, and has perceived something of the apparition of the universe—its beauty, and its wonder, and its power, cannot be said to have failed in life."

The religious ideal is well expressed in the following:

"Real true success in life can be secured only through our best endeavours to fulfil God's purpose in our creation, and that manifestly was to give us the opportunity for developing a life and character, fitted to dwell with Him eternally. This high privilege He has inseparably coupled with the obligation on our part to strive earnestly to lead others in the way to Him; and such privilege and obligation confronts every soul in the universe from the captain of industry to the most lowly in life, and with a responsibility measurable only by the circle of their influence."

Several people also expressed it by quoting "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul."

"The making of friends who are real friends is the best token we have of a man or woman's success in life," is another reader's opinion.

This interesting definition is quoted, but I do not know to whom to give credit:

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others, and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration, whose memory a benediction."

"I consider my grandmother one who, though poor financially, has made a success of life," writes a reader. "She is one who always has an encouraging word for everyone, who never complains and who makes the best of things under all circumstances. Children all love and respect her, and no one could know her without feeling just a little better."

Still another reader lets Stevenson define success for him, and to my mind a better definition could scarcely be found:

"To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not to be embittered; to keep a few friends, but these without caputator; above all, on the same grim condition to keep friends with himself."

Slayer Of Elephants.

James Sutherland Has Spent 17 Years in the Jungle—Scotsman, Who Has Shot Six Hundred Elephants and Sold Tons of Ivory, May Visit Canada in the Near Future—He is Tired of City Life and Will Go Back to His Job in Africa.

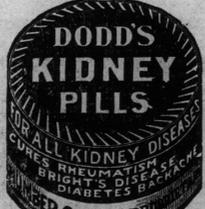

Taking a few days off, before returning to Africa to resume the slaughter of elephants for their ivory, James Sutherland, Scotsman and champion elephant slayer of the world, may pay Canada a flying visit in the near future.

The sport of the giant pachyderm is more familiar to Sutherland than the ways of civilized man and he confesses that he feels a restraint in the stuffiness and restricted area of a city and will return to his job, which is shooting elephants.

For the past seventeen years Sutherland has all but lived entirely in the wilderness of Africa, surrounded only by natives. He has shot some 600 elephants and sold tons of ivory. An average expedition requires six to nine months and yields about two tons of ivory. Ivory in bulk is worth about $7,500 a ton, so that there is a fairly good compensation for the risk and isolation.

As for the isolation Sutherland has come to like it. He has little use for the artificialities of civilization, finding life in the "pori," as the denizens call the dense African forest, more sincere and straight-form-the-shoulder than life in the cities. As for the risk—they are many, but they are a part of the business the same as risk accompanies a steep-climbing and railroad and electrical work. It's all in a day's work. A man who lacks the nerve has no business elephant hunting, says Sutherland.

"There is no calling, except prize-fighting," says the veteran hunter, "that requires a man to be so physically fit as does elephant hunting. Absolute control of one's nerves is necessary. The elephant has the advantage over the hunter. He is higher up, he can see over the tall grass and locate the hunter. The great beasts charge through the forests directly at the hunter and especially if wounded, are extremely dangerous."

Sutherland's closest shave, as he declares, occurred in 1908, when he had to trail a herd of five bull elephants all day. He secured four of the beasts with little trouble. The fifth was wounded near the heart when it charged the hunter. Now in elephant hunting there are only four vulnerable spots and they are small spots, too, which one must hit to have his shot count. These are the brain shot, between the eyes, the shot through the small opening in the ear, a bullet in the vertebrae of the neck or one in the heart. At any other spot on the great carcass a bullet is likely to fly off at a tangent, or make flesh wounds which infuriate the elephant.

This particular big bull, irritated by a flesh wound, was charging the hunter. One does not shoot elephants for a lifetime without learning to hold one's nerves in control and wait until the quarry is near enough to insure a shot in the vital spot. There is not much use in missing the vital spot, because if you don't get the elephant with a single shot the chances are very good that the elephant will get you.

Sutherland's second shot at this pachyderm took effect in the eye, gouging out the optic, but not halting the beast. In an instant the elephant was crashing through the bush and had tossed him with a blow from one of its tusks. Before he had time to scramble to his feet Sutherland was seized about the waist by the elephant's trunk and flung aloft. He landed on the beast's back and slid off. The third attack of the bull lodged the hunter high in the branches of a tree, unconscious. One of his native servants fetched him his gun and assisted him to recover consciousness.

Pulling himself together, his gun supported by the native, Sutherland fired his third shot, when the elephant advanced to within a dozen or 15 yards. Although it brought the bull to its knees, it did not stop it. Nervous himself with all the reserve energy he had, groggy though he was, the hunter managed to put a fourth bullet in the elephant's brain.

The hunter has visited the wilderness camps of Henry M. Stanley and Emin Pasha, paddled up the Semlitz River, teaming with crocodiles, spent days in the forest of the pygmies who shot at him with poisoned arrows and come through alive. Not only that, but he prefers to take the chances of the African forests to the maze of the streets of civilization. Sutherland is 40 years old.

Tartan braids and tratan silks are novel and pretty trimmings to some of the velvet suits.

The serge frock is suitable for almost any informal occasion and possesses a certain smartness.

Fashions and Fads.

The butterfly is still dominant. Yellow is much seen in these days. Scotch plaids are fashionable for children. Few of the new evening wraps are long. Hats for little girls are bonnet shape. Leopard is the favourite fur for the motor wrap. There is a revival of ostrich feather trimming. Under-blouses or corset-covers are very elaborate. The Russian influence in fashion is a little stronger. Flowers for the hair and corsage are made of ribbon. New handbags are of silk embroidered with beads. The high school girl is wearing the tam o'shanter-hat.

The chrysanthemum is the favoured flower for corsage wear. Modified Norfolk suits are being worn by the older school girls. Fashion is designing tunics of tulle edged with bands of fur. Ribbons brocaded with velvet imitations are among the novelties. The newest chemise is shorter, being about 20 inches in length.

Each week sees the fashion of velvet more and more in evidence. All the winter wraps show the upward movement in the draping. Metal woven tissues continue to attract attention for evening wear. Underwear is daintier than ever. Never was there so much silk worn. A few new sweaters of shetland or angora have collars and cuffs of fur. Many smartly dressed women wear the broad scarf of supple fur. New colors are russet brown, bronze gray, foster green and mahogany.

Drawers are made quite narrow with fitted tops and short, straight legs. Fashion depends on the waistband to give the finishing touch to the costume. It is fashionable to wear blouses of chiffon or mousseline de sole with cloth skirts.

Over blouses of chiffon vests of ecru lace, bordered with narrow bands of fur, are worn. Children's coats are fur trimmed, with collars made to turn up and keep small ears warm. The most elegantly dressed women prefer sealskin, lamb or mink-skin for coats. Wide frills and turnover collars do much to bring good lines to the thin woman's figure.

Not a Secretary.

Sam had worked on the farm for nine years, and until his master took to poultry-farming he was quite satisfied with life. His business was a bit too much. He had to take the eggs as they were laid and write the date on them with an indelible pencil. And worse than that, he had also to write on the eggs the breed of the hen that laid them.

So one day he marched up to the farmer.

"I'm about fed up," said he, "and I'm going to leave."

The farmer was astounded.

"Surely, Sam," said he, "you're not going to leave me after all these years?"

"Yes, but I am," retorted Sam. "I've done every kind of rotten job on this here farm, but I'd rather starve than go on being secretary to your old hens!"

THE EASTERN TRUST COMPANY.

The business of the The Eastern Trust Company is to administer Trusts. In this work it specializes, and it does no other. But no kind of trust is foreign to its scope or beyond its power to administer efficiently.

The Eastern Trust Company never speculates. It invests. It depends for its prosperity upon the efficiency of its management of its clients' business and upon the security of its investments.

The Eastern Trust Company executes the office of executor or administrator with unexampled efficiency, and its usefulness in this field is becoming rapidly more availed of.

For instance:—In St. John, New Brunswick, where it has quite lately established a branch, the estate of James Ready, of Fairville, which has been sworn to under $651,300.00, is being administered by The Eastern Trust Company as one of the joint executors of Mr. Ready's will.

In Halifax, Nova Scotia, again, The Eastern Trust Company has just been chosen to administer the estate of Captain William Fleming, which is valued at more than half a million dollars.

The Company now administers many estates which is value amount to several millions of dollars. Particulars will appear in later advertisements.

The Eastern Trust Company can execute this function of executor or administrator as efficiently in Newfoundland as it can in Nova Scotia, Quebec, or New Brunswick.

Filed for a Year—At Hand in a Minute!

There are records kept in your business which are seldom referred to, but when reference to them is desired, can you locate them instantly?

"Office Specialty" Filing Systems do more than provide a place to file papers. The method of filing the papers under proper indexes makes the finding of any letter, on any subject or from any firm, as easy as the filing. You don't have to tumble all the letters out of the file to find any particular one. There is only one place for each letter, and every letter is in its place. Card Records, Cheques, Stock Records, Correspondence, are all found instantly when wanted if filed by "Office Specialty" Filing Systems.

Here is a very convenient stack of Sectional, Quarter-Cut Oak, Filing Cabinets, 2 vertical drawers for Letters, 5 drawers for 5 x 3 inch Card Records, 3 Shannon drawers for Receipts, Invoices and Bills, 4 drawers for 6 x 4 inch Card Records, 3 Stationery drawers, which together with the top and base make a very useful stack for any business office.

THE SCHOOL OF LIFE.

Christmas is heralded in many ways and none more agreeably to the children than the Speech Day and Prize Distribution which bring the rewards of school merit and close the school door for the winter vacation. Last night such a function was to be seen in the Methodist College Hall, and as is customary His Excellency the Governor was present to give a word of good cheer to prize winners and priviledgers alike and to hearten on children, parents and school authorities to make the best of the opportunities afforded. He spoke as one who had been through the schools and as one experienced in the large school of life. His words were words of wisdom garnered in many parts of the world, and his advice was the counsel of one who was a scholar and statesman, officially trained in educational matters and schooled in the affairs and manners of men. He told of the intense struggle for existence he anticipated for the coming generation and the need of training the boys and girls of to-day to be the fit men and women of to-morrow. School and school books are not the be-all and end-all of education, they are but the beginnings of the education of life. No more emphatic words could have come from one in the country better fitted to deliver them. Too often is the idea expressed that education is closed with the school and that the college crowns the whole edifice and puts the finishing touch on its graduates. Nothing could be wider of the mark. Not even books should be closed with the school days, the literatures of ages, the wisdom of philosophers and the technical instruction are to be found at all events in part there and these books can be studied only with profit as the mind matures and the experience of men and affairs grows in the rough and tumble of life, and it is in the rough and tumble of life that experience is to be found and can only be gathered in the struggle itself, which in itself reacts on the mind and character and brings out what was nursed in the home and school. The latter can and does measure the acquisition of knowledge, the simbleness of wit in text book problems and facility in the use of words and awards its premiums and properly so, but other elements which are classed under the words character, are two elusive to be measured by written and oral tests and there is a tendency to minimize them comparatively. The problem of the day is how to keep them to the fore in the school and playfield as well as the home in order that boys and girls may go forth better equipped to fol-

What to Give.

Isn't it a most perplexing question? There are so many you would like to give something. There are so many you don't know what to give. There are so many who will treasure dearly any little thing you give. There are so many things here to give that you are sure to be suited.

Hudson Straits

As Virgin Fishing Ground Said to Rival British Columbia for salmon.

Special to Evening Telegram. OTTAWA, To-day.

That the prospect is favourable for the final conclusion of an international Fisheries Treaty between Canada and the States is the inference drawn from the first day's negotiations between the Dominion and the American Fisheries Commissioners. The St. Lawrence fisheries are not greatly at issue. The present negotiations is for the creation of a mile of prohibited water instead of a mere boundary line as present through the Great Lakes and make more practical the prevention of poaching, which is however one topic which will come in for considerable discussion. New Virgin fishing area is rich in possibilities, not only in the millions it may produce, but also in the employment it will afford to native population of the surrounding country has been found in the waters of Hudson Strait, according to a report which has been made to the Marine and Fisheries Department by the Dominion Fishery Officer, Tanager. Its salmon catch probably may yet rival that of British Columbia. Tanager made an official patrol of the region from the Fall of 1912 to that of the present year. He reports that the waters of Hudson Strait so far as the fisheries are concerned may be regarded as a virgin area, though no thorough investigation, it shows that there are supplies of valuable fish which could be made of great market value and are well worth development. Two difficulties are the sparse population and lack of fishermen first, and second the short season which would involve all of the work being done in a short time. These two difficulties can easily be overcome, says Tanager. He proves this by citing the case of British Columbia which in spite of the former limited population and the short season, could now boast a total catch of salmon of over $10,000,000. From a commercial standpoint he observed cod is a most important fish. There is a regular fishing being carried on and there is no limit to the quantity of codfish. The weather is perfect for fishing, but not so favourable for drying them on the spot. Catches, however, can be salted and taken home. Curing is just as it is the practice of the Lunenburg fleet. As this is deep sea fishing no doubt a bounty could be authorized during the first few years when the industry is in the first stages of development. A sum of $160,000 per annum is available.

Judge Aldrich has announced the appointment of a Commission to examine Harry K. Thaw to determine whether his liberty under bail would be dangerous to public safety.

MEXICO City, To-day.

A Presidential decree making the State Bank notes legal tender throughout the Republic, a guarantee fund to be subscribed by the State Banks and deposited in the National Bank, and finally a Government guarantee of Bank notes is the program decided by a Committee of Bankers representing the National Bank of London and Mexico and two or three other concerns, who met with the acting Head of the Finance Department. No difficulty is anticipated in having Huerta issue the decree, the Bankers deeming this the only means of maintaining in circulation a sufficient amount of medium of exchange. Luis Terrazas is still held prisoner by Villa whose avowed purpose is to compel Terrazas family to pay a large sum of money for his release. Villa asserts that the Terrazas succeeded in taking much of their cash and securities to the States before the Rebels arrived, and it is his plan to hold Terrazas, until $250,000 or more is sent back.

Kitchen Wrinkles.

When making blue-water for clothes, add a little salt to it. This distributes the color evenly and prevents "atches."

Cook cauliflowers in milk and water; it gives them a better flavour and they look whiter than when cooked in water.

Sometimes boot polish becomes quite dry with keeping. Moisten it with a little turpentine. It softens the polish, making it usable at once, and also gives a good gloss to the leather.

If at any time you should have a gathered nger or poisoned hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juice comes, and tie it on the affected part. This will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

When using oil stoves, to prevent them from smoking, dissolve one tablespoonful of common salt in every pint of paraffin oil that you use. This also gives a much clearer light, and it prevents the oil vessel from rusting.

engine had passed over the trestle bridge near the round house, two cars became derailed, and the sleepers were cut up for a considerable distance before the train was brought to a standstill. Upwards of fifty passengers were on the train at the time, some of whom became unneces-

Kitchen Wrinkles.
Never have linen starched if you are to crack and even to rot. Rinse the articles quite free from starch, dry, and fold up in blue paper, as this keeps them from turning yellow.
A capital cleanser for varnished and stained woodwork is tea-water.
This may be made by pouring boiling water on spent tea-leaves, straining the liquid afterwards through a cloth or muslin. The tea-water loosens the dirt quickly.
To free hands from disagreeable
odours such as that of onions, oil, silver oil, etc., mix a little ground dry mustard with warm water and wash
the hands well with it. The savours of scales or vessels used in cooking can be freed from odours by the same method.
If you possess a stone hot-water bottle that is cracked, fill it with sand and then place it in the oven two or three hours before it is needed. You will find it quite as useful for warming a bed as when it was new.

The sand retains the heat longer than water does, and there is no bother in emptying the bottle in the morning.
Tact or Discretion?
He was rather a pathetic figure. He had the soul of a real knut but was afflicted with one of those faces the appearance and colour of which clash with all but the most subdued fashions and shades.
His hair, too, was that of violent red that overwhelms the brightest specimens of neckwear — even the ones that are ornamented with water-colour paintings or dancing ladies.
Yet he was a brilliant youth withal.
One afternoon he sallied forth to call on a neighbouring damsel, and whilst waiting for her to appear was entertained in the drawing-room by her eight-year-old brother.
"Well," said our hero, smiling, "And what do you think of me, Horace?"
Horace scrutinized the young man carefully, but maintained a discreet silence.
"Aren't you going to say, Horace?"
"No," answered Horatio stoutly.
"Don't you think I want to get a tickling?"

Princess Mary Earns $1,250.

London, Dec. 12.—Princess Mary has earned $1,250 in eleven months by her own little hands in the cause of charity.

Several charitable institutions are benefiting by the labors of the young Princess and one portion of the money has been expended on two hundred pairs of boots, which she will give to other organizations this Christmas.

What Princess Mary, who is only sixteen, has earned by her own unaided efforts for charity within the last half dozen years would make a very considerable amount.

A large proportion of the money was made by the sale of Venetian glass beads, necklaces which Princess Mary made. She was given a quantity of Venetian glass beads by the Queen, and with these she started to make necklaces. Princess Mary worked with a will and by her industry soon made a number in a wide variety of designs and styles. These were soon sold for sums ranging from half a dollar to a dollar and a half. Some of the necklaces took longer to make than others, but on an average each occupied Her Royal Highness two hours.

But Princess Mary's work did not stop with the beads. She is a youthful vice president of the London Needlework Guild, in which the Queen takes so great an interest, and she also has spent a considerable time in sewing for the poor. Both the Queen and her daughter have made a large number of stitched or knitted garments for them.

When any important ceremonies have taken up most of the Queen's time Princess Mary has made it a point of working harder, so that the guild should not suffer. The youthful vice president, too, not only makes the garments but is quite proficient in the cutting out pieces, and can moreover, make a first rate choice of materials to be used. In her official capacity, too, Princess Mary, in addition, has collected three thousand garments for distribution this Christmas.

Some of her own work includes a dozen dainty little woolly petticoats crocheted by herself. These pretty little pink and blue garments are to be sent to as many children's hospitals as there are petticoats.

The Roaring Lioness.

He was a lion-tamer.
Yet the man who ruled the kingly of the forest was in turn ruled by his wife.

One evening, however, he contrived to dine alone with some of his old bachelor friends, and was detained convulsively until the small hours of the morning.

On his way home, fearing that he might not be received so cordially as he deserved, he decided to spend the night elsewhere, and later to slip into home with the milk—quietly, he hoped and unobserved.

But alas! no sooner was he beside the front door than a voice from the top of the stairs greeted him ominously:

"John, where have you been all night?"
"Well, my dear," began John, "I was afraid of disturbing you, so I—er—I slept in the lions' cage."
A tense silence followed this utterance. Then one word floated down the stairs:
"Coward!"

Proof Positive.

Dejectedly twirling his thumbs, the clerk sat in the box-office of the Festival Theatre. A depressing air of failure hung over the theatre, and it looked as though the piece would have to be withdrawn very shortly.

Suddenly he perked up as a countess and her husband came in, followed by their three daughters and two sons.

"Have you got seven stalls in the middle of the second row for tonight?" asked paterfamilias.

The box-office man made a pretence of examining the plan of seats.
"Yes, I find they are vacant, sir," said he, trying to repress his excitement. "Shall I book them for you, sir?"

"Er—no, I think not," said the man from the country. "If you've got those seats on your hands, it seems to me the play can't be up to much! Good-morning!"

"Do you think your son's college education is going to be of any real benefit to him?"

"Yes, I think it is; I notice that he can get out and run around for hours with nothing but a pair of scanty trunks to shield him from the heat. It will be a lucky thing for him to be able to do that in case he is unable to earn his clothes after I get through paying for them."—Chicago Record Herald.

We Are Weaving Away.

We are weaving away!
From childhood to age,
We are weaving and weaving
Our life's brightest tapestry.
Its close-woven tissues,
Though seeming to stand
Are silently passing,
Like ripples of the sand:
We are weaving away!

We are weaving away!
How this poor, tired heart
Is beating and beating,
As if it would part
And these vigorous limbs
Grow weary and worn,
By working and weaving
From dawn until dawn,
We are weaving away!

We are weaving away!
Yes, these eyes are growing dim,
And by evening are troubled,
In tears dimly swim;
And the wrinkles are coming
So silently now—
And the hair is slow silencing,
I cannot tell how—
We are weaving away!

We are weaving away!
O, I know it is so:
For we're moving and moving
Straight onward, though slow;
By the weight of these limbs,
And this fast-dimming eye
I know we are weaving,
And fast speeding by—
We are weaving away!

We are weaving away!
I am glad it is true;
For we should be weary,
To never get through:
And still I am bound
By the thought, as a spell,
That, though weaving away,
It may yet be well—
We are weaving away!

The Coming Pantomime.

How great will be the astonishment of all who witness the splendid programme provided for them at Christmas, for everything is being rehearsed again and again, and now "Jack and the Bean Stalk" is under way, and will be the very funniest ever seen. How the youngsters will be delighted when they see the great big giant, who roars "fee fi fum" how the old folks will laugh when they recall how they used to revel in the old fairy stories as children. It will be delightfully portrayed. Then the terrible "Blue Beard". All those old fairy plays will work out into delightful pantomimes that will charm old and young for they are clean, without the slightest tinge of vulgarity.

Radium Might Supplant Coal.

London, Dec. 11.—Radium was referred to as a possible means of running ships and motor cars by C. E. S. Phillips, physicist, in an address on cancer last night.

If it was a fact, he said, that the world's coal supply might give out in 200 years, scientists must look about for some new source of energy and perhaps radium would supply it. There might be enough energy in the iron stand on his table to run a steamship across the Atlantic if they could only get it out.

Although Mr. Phillips said he was not saying this with any seriousness, he carried out an experiment which indicated that there was some foundation for the observation.

In a solution radium decomposes water giving off an explosive mixture of gas. Mr. Phillips produced large gases and by fusing them with an electric spark created a current of air which drove a small fan.

Stronger Timber

Probably the strongest timber in the world is a species of eucalyptus known as yate, which grows to a considerable size in Australia. Its average tensile strength is 24,000 pounds per square inch; in other words, a bar of this wood one inch square will (in theory, at least) hold up a weight of twelve tons. This is equal to good cast iron. No similar tests of Canadian woods have as yet been made, but at the Forest Products Laboratories, recently established by the Dominion government at McGill University, it is proposed to investigate the mechanical properties of native species with a view of determining, on a scientific basis, their utility for structural work.

Murdered for His Gold.

Aged Retired Baptist Minister slain and House Ransacked.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 8.—The Rev. John L. Gaunt, an aged retired Baptist minister, who lived the life of a recluse and was known to have hoarded gold coins, was murdered yesterday and his body thrown into a creek near his cottage at Fishersville, a suburb. The house had been thoroughly ransacked. The negroes are being sought in connection with the murder.

Gaunt was a bachelor and for years had made a practice of changing silver and bank notes for gold pieces at the stores in the vicinity of his home.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL.

The Banker.

I'd like to be a banker and be, or seem to be, the bulwark and the anchor of my community. Existence would be sunny if it an income meant from the people's money loaned out at 8 per cent. The banker has no troubles, the banker has a snap, for people bring their rubles and pour them in his lap, and thank him that he takes them to swell his shining store; the banker loans and makes them bring many rubles more. The banker's social standing is always up in G, he's an air commanding, a port of majesty; the banker's smiles are regal, and if he deigns you one, you're feeling like an angel until the set of sun. And should misfortune s l a m you still you are needing gold, the banker's frown will dam you, and knock your credit cold. The banker sits disburstin' the cash he doesn't own, and makes or breaks the person who drops in for a loan; he has more power than princes or tyrants ever shared, and potentes are quines when they're with him compared. It's ill to win his rancor. It's good to gain his smile; who would not be a banker, behind a golden pile?

Healthy and Unhealthy Lighting

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not viliate, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:— Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this amongst other reasons, that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jamieson B. Hurry. He would merely add that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Dudley, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health. I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity, the latter been employed with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions. The result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—Vivian B. Lewes, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—nov8,13

Girl Does Not Know Her Name.

New York, Dec. 12.—Huddled on a bench in Stuyvesant Square last night, her clothing drenched by snow and rain, a girl about 16 years old, was found by Patrolman O'Connor of the East Twenty-second Street station. She was in a profound slumber, for it was fully five minutes before he succeeded in arousing her. And then she increased the puzzle of the situation, for when he asked her why she was stretched on a park bench, exposed to the cold and wet, she shook her head and said she had no idea how she came there. "What is your name?" he asked. "I don't know," she answered. "Don't you know where you live—where your parents are?" "No," answered the girl. O'Connor took her to the police station. After an hour's questioning had led the police to the conclusion that her mind had become suddenly blank she was taken to Bellevue Hospital. Dr. Rutledge in the psychopathic ward questioned her in vain. The strange girl is black haired, and has large, black eyes, and fine teeth. She is about five feet four inches tall and well formed. She wore a neat blue serge dress, black velvet hat, black shoes and stockings, a necklace of beads and a plaid winter coat. She had in one pocket a tooth brush and box of powder, bought in a Seventh avenue drug store, but the druggist there could give no information tending to lead to her identification.

Schmidt Weeps Before Father.

Refused at First to Recognize His Parent. New York, Dec. 12.—Hans Schmidt, on trial here for the murder of Anna Ammuller, fell on his knees yesterday afternoon in the District Attorney's office, kissed the hand of his aged father who has come all the way from Germany to try to save him from the electric chair, and in a flood of tears begged his forgiveness. Wednesday Schmidt refused to recognize his father. Mrs. Elizabeth Schadler, Schmidt's sister, who made the trip from Germany with her father, was present at the meeting. Schmidt embraced her affectionately. For half an hour she and her father tried to soothe the prisoner, but he refused to be comforted and was still weeping when led back to his cell. All the state's witnesses, except alienists, have testified and Schmidt's trial was adjourned until to-day to permit the District Attorney to confer with the alienists before putting him on the stand. Schmidt dropped his mask of indifference yesterday afternoon long enough to laugh heartily when a witness testified that the Ammuller girl said she was going to marry a millionaire. Joseph Egler, an acquaintance of Schmidt, testified that he endeavored to prevent Schmidt from sending money to the girl to return to America from Germany a year ago. "I told him," Egler said, "if you send her money to come back you will end on the gallows." Schmidt said it was too late, that he had already sent the money. "Did Anna ever tell you," asked Schmidt's lawyer suddenly, "that Schmidt's had told her he had, been commanded by God to make a blood sacrifice of her, as Abraham intended to sacrifice Isaac?" Egler replied in the affirmative.

Western Banking Fleet.

The coming fishery season will usher several new vessels into the western banking fleet. Besides the new one to be commanded by Captain L. Inkpen of Burin, there are five other vessels under option and will likely be purchased for the south-west coast. Many of the skippers are now engaging crews for 1914, and in view of the fact that men were scarce last year, big wages will now be offered to secure men for the additional fleet.

Obituary.

Mr. W. R. Stirling received a message yesterday from Toronto, announcing the death of his sister-in-law, Mrs. George W. Gaden, which sad event took place on Tuesday, 10th inst., at the family residence, Toronto. Mrs. Gaden leaves one sister (Mrs. Hummer) and several relatives in this city to whom the Telegram extends sympathy.

ZYLE , A MARVELLOUS OINTMENT.

Wherever Zylex has been used it has quickly made its own reputation as a certain remedy for Eczema, Pimples, Rash, and other annoying skin diseases; while for Piles it has been equally successful, giving relief from the start, and curing some very severe cases. If you are troubled with any of the above, go to your druggist, get a box of Zylex, and use it faithfully. It does not matter how bad it is, or of how long standing; it does not matter that you have used a dozen other things without getting sensible relief—Zylex delights to show its power where other remedies have failed. Begin using Zylex today—the sooner you start, the sooner you get relief. Price 50 cents a box at all druggists.—Zylex, London.

On The Bottle.

Two doctors were having a holiday, and were amusing themselves by fishing for whiting off the coast of Deal. They had fished for some time, when one of the doctors lost the sinker off his line. Being a man of some resource, and an old fisherman, he quickly filled a bottle with water, and tied it to the end of his line in place of the lost lead. After a few seconds he felt a hard bite, and on pulling up his line, found a fat whiting on each of the two hooks. "Hallo!" said his friend. "Twins this time, old man." "Yes," rejoined the other; "and brought up on the bottle, too!"

INDISPOSED.

Mr. J. L. Slattery, Secretary-Treasurer of the Municipal Council, has been laid off from work the past few days, suffering from a heavy cold. His many friends will regret to hear of his indisposition.

Criminals

Hire Substitutes to Serve out Terms. New York, Dec. 13.—The police today discovered a system whereby, they believe, minor criminals sentenced to short terms have been able to hire others to take their places in prison. An investigation was started when a pickpocket who had been started on his way to Blackwell's Island, December 1, was found walking about the city. It is said that many young men out of work during the winter are willing to sell their time as prison substitutes. So far police have not found where the substitutions are made.

Before The Falls.

He, his wife, and his wife's sister had started to see something of the world, and had got as far as Niagara. Directly they had engaged rooms at the hotel they set out to see the wondrous falls. As they walked along the two ladies became engrossed in an excited talk on the question of walking skirts, paying no heed whatever to the scenery. "Aren't we getting somewhere near the falls, George?" said his wife at last, taking a look round. "We are," said George. "In fact, they are only a few yards off, and I think if you would stop talking for a moment or two you would hear the thunder of the waters quite distinctly."

LONDON, Dec. 17.
Mrs. Pankhurst has again been released. She was in jail since Saturday.

PRINCE RUPERT, Dec. 17.
Ernest G. Kenneth Young, an English rancher, was murdered on a train between Kispiox and Glenora, near Hazelton. Indians are suspected of the murder. They resented his work as a rancher.

GUATANAMO, Dec. 17.
The U.S. battleship Ohio has arrived at Guatanamo from the Mediterranean with six cases of smallpox on board. Twenty men are suffering from fever, whilst two of the smallpox cases are in a critical condition. One man died from smallpox on the way across.

ROME, Dec. 17.
The death of Cardinal Rampolla, former Papal Secretary of State, was not made known to the Pope until this morning. His Holiness was overwhelmed with grief. When he had somewhat recovered his composure he said: "Cardinal Rampolla was one of the greatest men of the Church; he has become even greater since he had been relieved from state affairs." Pope Pius ordered that the greatest honors should be paid the Cardinal, upon whom he bestowed the highest tributes.

BERLIN, Dec. 17.
The Countess Von Tetenburg, who has been on trial here for nearly a month on charges of usury, fraud, and matrimonial swindles, in which people in high society have been involved, has been found guilty of fraud and blackmail, also with abetting usury, and has been sentenced to 15 months' imprisonment and a fine of $875. Princess Von Isombourg was fined $750, with the alternative of 20 days, for refusing to testify. It was claimed that she introduced the Countess to the client, who had her arrested.

LONDON, Dec. 17.
The newest development in wireless telegraphy was demonstrated at the exhibition of the Physical Society of London. This invention aims at the detection of the direction from which the message comes. No one has yet discovered how to send wireless, like the searchlight, in any definite directions they go out everywhere, but even though they cannot be directed, it is just possible a ship will be able to find out whence they come. This is done by a wonderful new instrument shown by the Marconi Company.

LONDON, Dec. 17.
Speaking at a reception of the crew of the New Zealand battleship, Winston Churchill said that the gift of the ship by the Dominion of New Zealand, at a time of serious crisis, was one of the greatest acts of far-sighted imagination, which any modern state could claim credit for. The Admiralty did its best at all times to assist the Dominions to give effect to this universal desire to aid the Imperial Navy according to their means. They recognized the sacrifice Australia had made, and look forward with confidence to the assistance which Canada would bring.

NEWCASTLE, Dec. 17.
Eighteen mangled and burned bodies have been recovered by rescue crews from the Vulvat mines, in which an explosion occurred yesterday. Searchers have reported the locations of seven more dead miners. There was no hope this morning that any of the thirty-seven miners were alive. A pathetic incident of the rescue work last night was when Harry Meez, stripping, emerged from the mine, carrying the body of his father. After the explosion young Meez, with an oxygen helmet, was one of the first to enter the mine. He wandered about the workings, guided only by the flash of his electric torch, stumbling over body after body, till he came upon that for which he searched. Meez lifted the body of his father to his shoulders and carried him over a mile through the lane of Death home to mother.

Ponderous Personages.

BEETHOVEN.
By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "St. Good Old Swash."
Beethoven, whose name is familiar to almost all people except lovers of modern popular music was a German, who lived over a century ago when Germany was stronger in melody than it was in politics.

In 1770 when Beethoven was born, music meant more to Europe than baseball does in America to-day, and the man who could compose a class A concerto could drop around to breakfast with Kings and Emperors almost as freely as if he had carried a ward election. When Beethoven was five years old he began to study the violin, the piano, forte, singing and composition. Later at the age of nine he got a little education in writing and reading but was always a poor mathematician, seldom asking for change when paying for his purchases. At eleven he was assistant court organist and at 13 was publishing music.

At fifteen Beethoven was supporting his family with his music. He was a rough unpolished boy, with a bad temper and ridiculous clothes, but when he went to the piano and began to tease heart throbs and day dreams but of it, his queer clothes were forgotten and even conversation ceased. Still we must remember that this latter story may have grown some during the last hundred years.

Beethoven lived almost sixty years and in that time produced about as much music as a good, right-and-left-handed comic opera composer now turns out in a couple of seasons. His fame became world wide, and when it became known that he was about to finish a new concerto there was as much suspense in England as there is now over the American tariff bill. But Beethoven himself was not unhappy. Before he was forty his hearing began to fail, and in his last years he could not hear at all. This made him gloomy, despondent and gruff, but it did not impair his music.

Beethoven's deafness was a tragedy, especially because at that time it was so unnecessary. Haydn, Mozart, Schubert and other great masters filled the world with beautiful music, and even had he possessed four ears, a young composer would not be in danger. But to-day when deafness until the age of twenty-five would be almost necessary to produce another Beethoven, all musicians have good ears and most of them get syncope in time and perish in comic opera.

Beethoven was great because he gave more to the heart and soul, and not so much for the feet.

Declares Bed Bug Is Dangerous.

New York Physician Urges War 'On the Insect.

New York, Dec. 13.—The Cimet Lectures, less elegantly but more familiarly known as the bed bug is a still more dangerous insect than is generally supposed. It is a potent factor in the transmission of tuberculosis, according to Dr. J. Walling Beveridge who has presented a paper on the subject to the conference on safety and sanitation which is being held in this city.

He said that only recently had the bed bug had been given serious consideration as a carrier of germs, but that a number of authorities were agreeing upon the possibility that leprosy and spinal meningitis germs were carried by this household pest, and that numerous cases had recently been recited where tuberculosis infection has been seemingly caused by the bed bug. It has been discovered that the bug is able to live 223 days without food, he remarked emphatically in urging that a public-health campaign be conducted to warn housewives of the grave consequences which might result in permitting the bed bug to live.

Canadian Loan Fund.

London, Dec. 9.—Underwriters of the Canadian Government four per cent loan of £4,000,000, offered last week at 97, have been left with 83 per cent of the amount on their hands. The scrip yesterday was finally quoted at one-quarter discount for special settlement after being three-quarters discount.

The market is not greatly surprised, the opinion being that the loan followed too closely on top of the Montreal and Toronto issues as well as the dominion loan of £200,000 in September last.

Many investors, anticipating that the scrip would go to a discount, had kept back buying orders, as when the price was quoted at five-eighths discount a brisk demand followed, the loan closing yesterday at one-quarter discount for special settlement.

The Pall Mall Gazette refers to the loan as "the biggest fiasco that has been seen for a long time past in a new issue in any part of the world," and complains that while the list closed on Friday the result was not known until Monday. It anticipates, however, that the loan will find a home fairly rapidly at the discount on the issue price prevailing.

A Canadian In England.

(The Morning Post, London.)

My first impressions of England were gained through a car window. Now, I know all about the smallness of the fields, their fresh green, the hedgerows, the softly rounded trees; we Britons from overseas are trained to expect these, and the English countryside is astonishingly familiar to us at the first glance. But one thing did give me a start—certain very large fields, brown and bare, ready, I suppose, for their winter snow-blanket. What struck me was partly their great size, but more the exquisite neatness and finish with which they had been ploughed and harrowed. Mine is a country of hundred-acre farms, with fields neither so large as your larger nor so small as your smaller fields, and of a husbandry limited not so much by deficiency of knowledge as by lack of hands.

Our New Houses.

But my first real start came south of the Thames, when my train was bearing me down towards the sea. The first of my new houses I saw, I confess, when my train was approaching London. It was growing, and striding over the countryside. We are trained to think of England as old and ourselves as new; I was aware, with the front part of my head that London is growing, but at the back of my head the picture was that of the old house and the time-honoured street; and here I saw new houses, new streets, new towns. At Eastleigh, observing the size of the railway station, I made inquiries and found that within the last few years from being a village it had increased by some few thousand thousands, perhaps ten, perhaps twenty; the railway company had established its shops there. I had never heard of Eastleigh, and when one of our own people marvels "puts on" ten or twenty thousand people in so short a time our skies, and perhaps yours, resound with exclamations.

Our Solid Railway Stations.

So one of the sharpest of my impressions is your newness. Perhaps I may add that these new houses which I saw from the railway struck me as looking well designed, and better to live in than the older ones. Nor must I forget the amazing prevalence of the garden, and the great number of recreation gardens I noticed. Our towns are built by "real estate men" who grudge garden space, and we yet shall pay dearly for our neglect to provide parks and open spaces.

This is the feeling that rests upon me every time I encounter an English railway. I pass by the marvellous solidity, the double tracks, the splendid road-bed, all striking to a man from our continent of single-track railways and lightly-laid lines. But what really took my attention was the railway stations. Those solid platforms, carried to the level of the floors of the carriages! Even in very small places there are platforms on each side of the line, and overhead bridges are provided. And then there are the ample buildings, with waiting-rooms, shelters, news-stands and all the apparatus of comfort. It does not impress me to see such things at very big centres: I take notice when I see them at very little places, and a village of two or three thousand souls accorded such accommodation.

The S. S. Morwenna left last evening for Brazil with a large fish cargo. The S. S. Digby was expected to leave Halifax last evening for this port.

An exceptionally strong social drama. Cast of Characters:

THE MOTH FLORENCE E. TURNER
THE FLAME ROGER LYTTON
THE MOTHER MRS. MARY MAURICE

"Sunday Afternoon in Rural England"—An interesting travelogue of "Home."

"Under a Flag of Truce"—An exciting war drama of the Civil War.

"No Place for a Minister's Son"—A mirthful comedy, "side-splitting" situations.

"The Boomerang"—A pathetic drama with a beautiful climax.

MUSICALE—Arthur Priestman Cameron, in "Peculiar Songs," with Professor McCarthy at the Piano.

The Crescent Picture Palace

Feature Film, the Sensational Mexican Drama,

With a Grain of Salt.

Four others—AN INNOCENT BRIDEGROOM (comedy); A NIGHT IN TOWN (showing the famous comedians, Pearl White and Chester Barnett, in a clever act); THE BURTHAIS ACROBATS in daring feats, and a roaring comedy, BILLY'S MISTAKEN OVERCOAT.

DAVID PARKS (Baritone) sings "I never heard of any girl dying from a kiss. Did you?" Afternoon, 2.30. Admission 5c. Evening, 7. Admission 10c.

Good Show at The Nickel.

The programme given at the Nickel Theatre last evening was an exceptionally good one and delighted the audience. The attendance was large. "The Wings of a Moth" is an exceptionally strong social drama by Florence Turner, Roger Lytton and Mrs. Mary Maurice. The other pictures were entitled "Sunday afternoon in Rural England," "No Place for a Minister's Son," "Under a Flag of Truce," and "The Boomerang" completed the pictures. Mr. Cameron repeated his song which was an immense success. This afternoon the programme will be repeated but Mr. Cameron will sing a new song.

Stephano Here

A Quick Run.

The Red Cross Liner Stephano, Capt. Clarke, arrived from New York and Halifax at 6 o'clock this morning. From the latter port the run was made in forty hours which is exceptionally quick at this season. She brought a full cargo and these passengers in saloon.

From New York—Mr. and Mrs. J. Maher, R. Colford and five in second class.

From Halifax—Miss V. Windler, C. Bell, E. Cowan, C. MacDougall, H. Jones and three in second class.

At The Crescent

The Crescent Picture Palace is fast becoming popular. Yesterday afternoon and evening the new hall was crowded. The Mexican drama, "With a Grain of Salt," held the attention of the patrons from start to finish. It was followed by a series of comedies that created much laughter. The solo "I Never Know of Anybody Dying from a Kiss, did You," has caught on and has already become popular with our local songsters. The Crescent Picture Palace is the home of pleasure and refinement. Afternoon and night sessions. Three entire changes weekly.

Courts by Proxy: Gets "Gold Brick."

Wheeling, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Luigi Fogliana, of Palermo, Italy, is the worst judge of beauty in the civilized world, according to his brother, Joe, who sells pineapples, one at a time, in this city. Joe was just written to the other side wishing Luigi a life of difficulties and requesting him to blot out for all time that blood is thicker than water or that the "for old time's sake" sentiment still is in operation. He declares that henceforth they haven't even a nodding acquaintance.

A month ago when the fruit business was all sunshine and roses in Wheeling, Joe realized that he had not by enough to support a wife. He preferred to support a pretty one, and wrote to Luigi, asking him to seek out the sweetest girl in Palermo. He sent plenty of money to cover all expenses and told Luigi that when he found the girl he was to tell her that he was working for Cupid and give her a ticket and money enough to get to Wheeling. He brushed up a lot and began fixing up his comfortable little home here.

Luigi was prompt. He said in an early letter she was on the way and within a week she was at the depot. Joe's horses, always regarded as trustworthy, shied and carried on when the Palermo beauty appeared at the station door. Joe thought she might be his future wife's mother, and he made himself known. She was the girl picked by Luigi, and she followed Joe when he started to sprint. Since then she has lived at his home.

The local authorities, hearing of her arrival, made a raid on the house last week. They found her in one part of the house and Joe in another, with a bureau and five chairs piled up on his side of the door.

When the police announced themselves, Joe called out that so far as he was concerned he was perfectly safe, and asked if there wasn't some means of sending her back to Italy or anywhere else.

She is still hoarding on her side of the house.

Melancholia.

Little Jim was suffering agonies from ear-ache, and his distracted mother took him hurriedly to the doctor.

The medical, after a brief examination, found the boy's ear to be full of water.

"Good gracious!" said he, fetching a syringe. "How on earth did you get into it's state? Been swimming?"

Jim eyed him scarily.

"No," said he, "not swimming—'ent' in' melon!"

W. S. Harkins, Players

AT CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I.

A crowded house greeted W. S. Harkins' players when they presented in their most capable style, James Halleck Reid's famous drama, "The Confession." The strongest point in the play is that the "confessional" of the Catholic Church must be a solemn secret under all circumstances. In this part Mr. Frank Conway, as Rev. J. J. Bartlett, parish priest, played the part in first class style. His sincere make-up fully fits him for a part of this kind. The play is based as follows:—

The Rev. Bartlett is Parish Priest in a small village and his mother and brother, Tom Bartlett, lives with him at the Rectory. This Tom Bartlett is a young, nice looking chap, and is engaged to marry Miss Rose Creighton (Sue Van Duzer), a very handsome young lady. Tom's only fault is that he is somewhat of a drinker. One day he arrives home from a hunting trip intoxicated and, quite natural, his sweetheart refuses to accept a carress from him—a slight quarrel follows at the end of which Tom is offered either to take back the betrothal ring, or to stop drinking. He accepts the former and leaves Rose in a temper. Tom still keeps drinking until one night he meets Rose's brother in a bar-room. He pleads with Tom to give it up, and a quarrel follows. Creighton is killed and Tom is convicted to hang on circumstantial evidence.

It appears that Mr. Creighton, (Rose's brother), had been keeping company with a daughter of one Jos. Dumant. In her admiration for Creighton she leaves home to go to him. Dumant follows, imagining that his daughter has been ruined, and arrives on the scene as Tom Bartlett and Creighton are engaged in a fight outside the bar-room; he sees the opportunity and shoots Creighton on sight. After he has done this he flies to his Father Confessor, Rev. Mr. Bartlett and receives forgiveness from the church. A little later Tom comes home and tells the story to his brother (the priest) and that he is blamed for the killing of Creighton. He is believed by all his family to be innocent and Rose Creighton at though it is her brother that has been killed also believes Tom innocent and renews the betrothal before he goes to jail.

A great trial follows in which poor Tom is sentenced to hang. Dumant knows that the church cannot betray his secret and swears in court he saw Tom kill Creighton, but in his effort to do so has perjured himself, and is sent to prison for ten years. A great scene follows, when the court tries to force the Rev. Bartlett to give the information that will save his brother. The court recognizes the power of the church and he comes off the stand allowing his own flesh and blood to be doomed rather than betray the secret of a bad man through the Confessional. The execution day arrives and in spite of all pleas to the state governor, Tom must die. The hand of Providence, however, comes to Tom's aid and Dumant is stricken down and on dying confesses to the murder of Creighton—and Tom once more is united to his dear sweetheart and all ends well. Miss Ellen Cessieff, as Patsy Moran, with cute slang phrases, and Michael Crogan, with his burlesque, brought forth lots of real comedy.
