A Great Intrigue,

CHAPTER XI.

It was a room corresponding to his own, and if anything more meagerly furnished. There was one thing, however, remarkable about it, and that was the number of engravings and plates of old country houses which were stuck and pinned upon the walls, and a dusty old secretaire, which was crammed—the drawers were too full to shut—outside and in with dusty, time-stained papers.

In a corner of the room, near the secretaire, sat an old man, a very old man.

"Been at work again, Mr. Pollard?" Mr. Sinclair asked.

"Work?" Yes—oh, yes," said the old man, in a hollow voice, with a glance at a heap of papers lying at his feet. "Always at work, always. No end to my work. I'm like the sexton; days in, days out, wet or fine, graves must be dug."

"Ah!" said Mr. Sinclair, "but you dig graves that's dug already, eh?" and he laughed.

"Dig graves, that are dug already," he repeated. "Yes. Nobody knows what secrets are hidden, what stories are buried, what treasures are concealed, what sins and shame are put away and covered up, as the hidlers think, from all mortal eyes. But I know."

"Yes, young man," resumed Mr. Pollard, fixing him with a glassy, colorless eye. "To me the noblest of them all is speckled and flawed by some shame which they think secret, but which I know."

"Ah," said Mr. Sinclair again; "not very pleasant for the 'igh and lofty ones, Mr. Pollard. And all these papers there, littering up that old bookcase of yours, contain those secrets, I suppose?"

"Yes, all there—all there!" he murmured. "Lords and ladies, dukes and earls; even the mere barons, their secrets lie there, covered with the dust, as they think them, covered from memory and knowledge. But look, young man—he stretched down and drew his hand over the top of a roll of parchment—even as I wipe the dust from that roll, I could, with a word, wipe off the dust of ages and reveal the truth. But, no—they will die with me. They will die, and be buried with me."

"Very proper, too," said Mr. Sinclair. "And very much more comfortable for the 'igh and lofty gentry that they tell about. Bless me, I ought to tell you that I've been down in the country to-day."

"Country!" repeated the old man. "Ay, the green country. It's years since I was there."

"Yes," said Mr. Sinclair. "Down at Darracourt?"

"Darracourt?" repeated the old man. "Darracourt?—I don't know—ah, Merle; Merle, you mean."

"There is a place called Merle, and a marquis," said Mr. Sinclair. "Yes, I was there; the Hall, they call it."

"The Hall? No, the Court. Fool! Idiot! Do you think I do not remember?"

This astonishing exclamation was all the more embarrassing to the recipient by reason of the expressionless and colorless manner in which it was delivered.

"Of course, of course—quite right. Don't be excited, Mr. Pollard," said Sinclair. "The Court, if you like; there is a young lady there, a Miss Darracourt."

To his dismay the old man turned his yellow face towards him, and opening his white lips, smiled an awful smile.

"Fool! I know the whole story. With a word—one word—I could—"

But Mr. Sinclair did not wait for the end.

"No doubt, no doubt," he said. "I'll go now, Mr. Pollard. Good-night. And muttering, 'The old fool's as mad as a 'atter,' he stole out and closed the door after him."

CHAPTER XI.

Lady Farnley's report of the Lady of Darracourt was so glowing that visits and invitations poured in from all sides; and on all sides it was decided that Lady Farnley, enthusiastic as she had been, had not exaggerated. There were some who declared that they did not believe the story of the school at St. Malo, and that Lucille must have been perfectly "finished" and brought out before she came into the property. How else could she have obtained that quiet dignity and easy, unconscious grace which she possessed in so conspicuous a degree?

In a word, Lucille was pronounced a distinct and decided success. The unmarried men went mad about her, and swarmed round her in eager shoals; but alas! they received no encouragement. The great heiress, the richest "catch" in the country, was civil to one and all, and that was all.

Now, there was one man who did not join the ardent swarm of worshippers who buzzed round her, and angled for a word or a smile, and that was the Marquis of Merle, who wanted her most, and who had sworn to marry her within six months, who must marry her unless he meant to drift to ruin and disgrace.

She met him nearly everywhere she went—at dinners, and afternoon teas, at musicales and dances, but beyond shaking hands with her, and once, in the evening, perhaps, exchanging a word or two with her, he did nothing to mark his special attention. But when he spoke to her it was in a lowered voice, a voice which was unusually saddened and subdued, and he stood and looked at her from a distance, with a humble, pleading gaze, which, though he concealed it from others, he took care should meet her eyes whenever she glanced at him.

It was flattery of the most artful and effective kind, and it was backed up by Marie Verner, who never lost an opportunity of pleading his cause in a light and careless sort of way.

"I really do pity that unfortunate marquis, Lucille," she said, as they were being driven home from a dinner, during which the marquis had only said two or three words to her, and had appeared as if lost in melancholy reveries.

"Pity him! Why should you pity him?" said Lucille, coldly.

"Well, I cannot help it. The poor man is so palpably and genuinely miserable. He knows that he has offended you, and he thinks you will never take him back into favor. If I were in his place I should take my forgiveness as a matter of course, and be as bold as the rest, but he holds you in too much respect and awe for that. He has simply lost his temper, owing to his anxiety on your account."

"Or his own," said Lucille. "We had this discussion before, Marie. If I have been offended with the marquis I have—forgiven him, and now let it rest, dear."

Marie Verner sank back amongst the soft cushions, and laughed carelessly enough, but the next morning the marquis received a short note, unsigned, and contained in three words, "I should call."

That afternoon the Marquis of Merle was announced.

Marie Verner, who was sitting at the piano, while Lucille was reclining on a couch by the window, not reading, but with a book in her hand, looked up and smiled, as she shrugged her shoulders.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You?

If Your Color is Bad, If You Suffer From Pimples, Here is Good Advice.

Fine Results in Two Weeks.
 Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash, and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarrhzone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

"Poor marquis! Summoned up courage to call, has he? I expect he'll be frozen to death for his pains."

"Not by me," said Lucille, coloring; "I do not do things by halves. You are a very energetic advocate, Marie."

"Oh, I like the marquis; perhaps all the better for his little display of temper; besides, he may do me a good turn some day. Always useful to have a marquis for a friend. Hush, here he is." And she dashed into a vase as the tall, thin, aristocratic figure appeared in the doorway.

His manner of greeting the two young ladies was simply perfection. Respect, admiration for Marie Verner; an awed humility and suggestion of reverential worship for Lucille.

"We thought you were never coming to see us, Lord Merle," said Marie Verner, with an arch nod.

He looked at her almost piteously, and the glance was not lost upon Lucille, as he had intended it should not be.

"I—I—" he stammered, with a splendid affectation of embarrassment. "I thought that you would have had a surfeit of visitors this last fortnight, Miss Darracourt; and, indeed, I should not have ventured upon coming this afternoon, but that my gardener requested me—commanded me, is the word—to bring you some orchids which he flatters himself are unique."

He had a bunch of rare exotics in his hand, and extended them to Lucille with a bow such as a knight of old might have made when he offered the prize for which he had risked his life and limbs to the lady of his love.

Lucille took the flowers and examined them.

"They are very beautiful," she said, pleasantly.

"I am glad you admire them," he said; "they are curious."

"They are delightful!" exclaimed Marie Verner. "We have got nothing like them here; have we, Lucille? I'll go and get a few of our miserable specimens, and you shall see how far you excel us," and she ran from the room as innocently as possible.

The marquis took a chair near the couch.

"I cannot tell you how gratified I am, Miss Darracourt," he said, in a low, humble voice.

"Gratified?" repeated Lucille, raising her brows.

"That you should receive me," he went on, hurriedly. "I had expected that you would have declined to see me. I deserve that, and any punishment you might think fit to visit upon me for my conduct."

"Do not say any more, Lord Merle," she said. "If you think that you have offended me, how much more cause have you to consider that you have injured another person?"

His lips tightened for a moment, then he looked up at her, with humble eagerness.

"Yes, I know. You allude to the young man Harry Herne. I did insult and wrong him, Miss Darracourt, and I am anxious to make amends. I have sought him with the intention of doing so, but he has kept out of my way, I fear persistently. Believe me that I will make whatever amends may lie in my power; and if I succeed, may I venture to hope that you will not only forgive, but forget my display of hasty and evil temper?"

Lucille could not resist the pleading voice, the humble, imploring gaze. She held out her hand with a smile.

His pale face flushed as he took her hand, and it seemed as if he were about to raise it to his lips, when Marie Verner, who had been waiting outside the room for a suitable moment to enter, came in.

His pale face flushed as he took her hand, and it seemed as if he were about to raise it to his lips, when Marie Verner, who had been waiting outside the room for a suitable moment to enter, came in.

"Here are the miserable specimens," she said, "and I had to beg hard for these."

"Really," said the marquis. "How I wish I could show you my orchid house. Is it quite impossible?" he added, looking from one to the other eagerly.

"Nothing is impossible to a man," said Marie Verner, pertly. "I don't know why we shouldn't go and see them. Mrs. Dalton can come with us and play propriety. What do you say, Lucille?"

Lucille, thinking that it would seem ungracious to refuse, got up at once. "I will ask Mrs. Dalton if she could go. You mean us to come now?"

"Yes, certainly," he said, with unconcealed pleasure. "No time like the present."

The four set out for the short walk to the Hall.

The marquis seemed as if a load had been lifted from his heart, and became the most charming of companions. He talked most to Mrs. Dalton, but he took care that Lucille should be drawn within the circle of the conversation, and gradually the distrust which she had felt for him began to lessen.

Suddenly, as they passed through the large gates of the park and were emerging in the road, they saw Harry Herne on horseback.

CRITICAL SITUATION.

The Germans Attempting Great Flank Movements on Left Wing of Allies and Right Wing Near Basle --- Reported Russian Defeat---Stubborn Fight of British Troops Last Week --- Casualties 6000 --- German Cruiser Leipsic Captured.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Aug. 30. After four days of desperate fighting, the British Army in France rested, refitted and reinforced for the next great battle, according to an announcement today by Lord Kitchener, Secretary of State for War. In his statement, based on reports from Sir John French, Commander of British Expeditionary Forces, Lord Kitchener says "The British, after struggling against tremendous odds, retired to a new line of defense where they have not been molested since Thursday. Their casualties were between 5,000 and 6,000. Since this fighting ceased, the French right and left have brought the German attack to a standstill, it is declared."

Lord Kitchener's statement, which was issued through the medium of the Official Information Bureau, is as follows: "Although the despatches of Sir John French as to the recent battle have not yet been received, it is possible now to state that the British have held the German attack to a standstill, it is declared."

There has, in fact, been a four days' battle, on the 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th of August. During the whole of this period the British, in conformity with the general movement of the British Army, proceeded to occupy in resisting and checking the German advance and in withdrawing on new lines of defense.

The battle began at Mons on Sunday, during which day and part of the night, the German attack, which was stubbornly pressed and repeated, was completely checked by the British front.

On Monday, August 24th, the Germans made vigorous efforts in superior numbers to prevent the safe withdrawal of the British Army and drive it into the fortress at Maastricht. This effort was frustrated by the steadiness and skill with which the British regiment was conducted, and, as on the previous day, very heavy losses, far in excess of anything suffered by us, were inflicted on the enemy, who in dense formation and enormous masses, marched forward, again and yet again, to storm the British lines.

The British, after struggling against tremendous odds, retired to a new line of defense where they have not been molested since Thursday. Their casualties were between 5,000 and 6,000. Since this fighting ceased, the French right and left have brought the German attack to a standstill, it is declared."

"Cambrai is a fortified town in the department of Nord, thirty-two miles southeast of Lille on the River Scheldt. Cambrai is fourteen miles east by southeast of Sambrail.

It has been officially announced that the retirement at daybreak on the 26th, but the German attack, in which no less than five army corps were engaged, was so close and fierce, that it was not possible to carry out this intention until the afternoon.

The battle on this day, 26th, was of a most severe and desperate character. The troops offered a superb and most stubborn resistance against the tremendous odds with which they were confronted. At length they exhausted themselves in good order, though with serious loss, under the heaviest artillery fire. No guns were taken by the enemy except those, the horses of which had all been killed, or were shattered by high explosive shells.

General French estimates during the whole of these operations from 23rd to 26th, inclusive, loss was between 5,000 and 6,000. On the other hand, the losses suffered by the Germans in their attack across the open through their dense formation, are out of all proportion to those which we have suffered.

In Landreles alone, on the 26th, as an instance, the German infantry brigade advanced in close order into a narrow street, which they completely failed to carry. Our machine guns were brought to bear on this target from the end of the town. The head of the column was swept away, and a frightful panic ensued. It is estimated that 300 or 400 dead and wounded Germans were left in this spot alone.

Another incident, which may be chosen from many like it, was the charge of the German guard cavalry division upon the British Twelfth Cavalry brigade, when German cavalry were thrown back with great losses in absolute disorder.

These are notable examples of what has taken place over practically the whole front during these engagements. The Germans have been made to pay an extreme price for the forward march made.

Since the 24th, apart from cavalry fighting, the British Army is not been molested. It has rested and refitted after its exertions and glorious achievements. Reinforcements amounting to double the losses sustained, already have joined. Every gun has been replaced. The Army are now ready to take part in the next great encounter, with undiminished strength and undaunted spirits.

To-day the news is again favorable. The British have not been engaged, but the French armies, acting vigorously, on the right and left have for the time being brought the German attack to a standstill. Sir John French reports that on the 28th, the British Fifth Cavalry Brigade fought in brilliant fashion with the German Cavalry, in the course of which the 12th Lancers and Royal Scots Greys routed the enemy, and put a large number to flight. It must be remembered that, throughout, the general operations in France are vast, and that we are only on one wing. On the whole field of battle the strategic positions of our forces and our allies are such that whereas a decisive victory for our arms in France probably would be fatal to the enemy, continuance of resistance by the Anglo-French armies upon such a scale as to keep in closest grip with the enemy's best troops, can, if prolonged, lead only to conclusion.

LEIPSIG CAPTURED.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 30. The British cruiser Rainbow, assisted by the French cruiser Montcalm, has captured the German cruiser Leipsic, after a two hours' battle. The victorious cruisers are bringing the German ship to Esquimaut.

HALIFAX, Aug. 30. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cornwall, arrived here to-night on a military inspection.

TREMENDOUS BATTLE ALONG THE VISTULA.

LONDON, Aug. 30. An engagement of tremendous importance between Russian and Austrian forces is being fought along the course of the Vistula River, according to an official statement at St. Petersburg. The Russians claim successes, stating that they have captured several thousand prisoners and that the Austrians lost three thousand men in one engagement.

ALLIES WILL ULTIMATELY WIN.

LONDON, Aug. 30. Field Marshal Methuen, speaking at Devizes last night, declared the Emperor would find that Germany would get her wings clipped. It might be a long and terrible struggle, but the allies would win in the end. Any reliable man who refused to come forward when the country needed him, was nothing but a coward, the speaker said.

PARIS PREPARING.

PARIS, Aug. 30. It is officially announced that the military Governor has ordered all residents within the zone of action of the city's defending forces to evacuate and destroy their houses within four days from to-day.

INDISMISSIBLE BATTLES.

PARIS, Aug. 30. An announcement made by the War Office says: "In Lorraine our forces have advanced. We occupy a line along the Mortenne and our right wing is pushing forward. There is no news from the Meuse. A violent battle occurred yesterday (Saturday) in the region of Lanney near Lille. Sorny L'Abbaye and Chateau Perrien, but the result has not been decisive. The attack will be resumed to-morrow."

A CRITICAL SITUATION.

LONDON, Aug. 30. The French and British armies are gathering every man and gun available in North Western France in an attempt to stop the German advance on the road to Paris. It is also said General Joffre will endeavor to strike at the German right and bring relief to the British and French forces which have been placed in such a grave and critical situation by the German outflanking movement.

GERMANS ADVANCE.

LONDON, Aug. 30. A despatch to the Times from Amiens, France, says that since Monday morning last the German advance has been one of almost incredible rapidity, the Germans never giving the retreating British a moment's rest. The first great German effort has succeeded, says the correspondent. "We have the fact that the British expeditionary force requires immediate and immense reinforcements. The investment of Paris cannot be hastened from the field of possibility."

CANADIAN CONTINGENT HELD AT QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, Aug. 30. The Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry which sailed from Montreal on Friday on the Megantic, were landed at Quebec this morning, by orders from the War Office. It is thought some German cruisers may have escaped into the North Atlantic after the naval battle in the North Sea, and until these are rounded up the Admiralty considers it would be unwise for the troops to set sail.

MID SHOT and SHELL.

Tasks and Trials of the Workers at Woolwich Arsenal.

Interest in the making of shot and shell and the other munitions of war has lately been aroused in the public mind through the strike of workers at Woolwich Arsenal.

The establishment of the Arsenal dates back more than 300 years, when Queen Elizabeth had a store of arms and armour at the Tower House, a mansion in Woolwich Warren, adjoining the then boggy marshes of Plumstead. But it was not till the seventeenth century that guns were cast, carriages constructed, and powder stored at Woolwich.

The Arsenal at first covered some 42 acres of ground, now it occupies more than 400 acres. It employs over 12,000 men, and the wages bill for a month exceeds £72,000.

At the Woolwich Arsenal guns of all sizes, every form of military wagon, shot, shell, torpedoes, cartridges, bullets, war-signals, and life-saving rockets, tubes, and fuses are produced.

In addition to the Royal Military Academy—the oldest military school in the kingdom—there is another establishment at Woolwich, the Artillery College, where special training is given to officers of the Royal Artillery, in order to fit them for appointments in the manufacturing departments of the Royal Arsenal.

Shells were first heard of at the Siege of Constantinople, at the close of the fifteenth century. These were made of iron and filled with scrap, which spread on issuing from the gun. These bombs were quite common in the seventeenth century, and a smaller type of bursting shell called hand grenades were also in use.

It was during the Peninsular War that Colonel Shrapnel, of the British Army, invented a shell that would carry a long distance before exploding, and that could be so directed as to explode at a given distance. That was known as the Shrapnel shell, and it is the common type of shell used in the army at the present day.

In the old wars, canister and grape played a great part, but they are rarely heard of now. They were really much the same as what is now known as case shot. They were filled with pieces of metal or bullets for rapid bursting after leaving the gun. Case shot and shrapnel are now the ordinary weapons used against men, and "common" shell is employed in the destruction of buildings and defences.

The common shell is filled with bursting powder which causes a great explosion on striking the object. Such shells have in recent years been filled with lyddite, and the effect at Omdurman was very pronounced. Tons of lyddite which is supposed to throw out a gas which is fatal to everything within two or three hundred yards—were exploded in the Boer trenches in the early days of the South African War, and the Boers said that it gave them headache!

In the making of all these arm-piercing and man-slaying shells an immense amount of labor and skill is employed. The rough shell is frequently turned out by firms of steel-makers, who contract for thousands of them to the Government, and the finishing and loading of them is completed at Woolwich. The powder is made at the Government factories, and brought to Woolwich in casks. The largest shells made weigh 350 lbs. These are sufficiently terrible in appearance, although in the American Navy shells weighing 1,400 lbs are used. When one sees the enormous plates that are rolled out for the ships of the Navy, it is hardly conceivable that guns and shells could be made to pierce them. Yet they can be heated like timber walls, or that is abundantly proved by the relics of plates which the gunners preserve and photograph as trophies. Strangely enough, it is often the same steel-makers who turn out the armour plates that also make the shells which go through them, and parts of the guns that fire the shot.

Most of the bullets and cartridge-cases for the riflemen are also made at the Woolwich Arsenal. The bullet factory is quite a large building, and is fitted with a surprising number of machines, each employed in performing some part of the work of forming the little core of nickel and lead.

After the nickel case has been cast it is rolled out into sheets, cut up into strips and smaller parts, formed into a tiny cup, driven thro' a machine which "draws" it, and the point formed by another machine.

The lead meantime has been cast and run out like a rope, which is cut off in suitable lengths, and each of these is pointed to fit the case. Then case and lead are brought together and the lead inserted in the nickel.

A machine half closes the nickel over the core and it passes to another, which gives the point its final form. Another closes up the end of the bullet firmly, and then a ridge is made round it, so that the brass of the cartridge may be interlocked in it by a simple pressure. Altogether a dozen different machines are required to make a rifle bullet of the ordinary type.

The work of making the brass cartridge-cases is somewhat similar to the forming of a nickel case for the lead. The metal is formed into a little cup. Then it is driven through a hole in a machine about the size desired, a plunger forcing it down. This has the effect of "drawing" the metal out to a thinner state, and this drawing goes on till the desired length and thickness is attained.

The workshops at Woolwich Arsenal are fitted with machinery of the best and most modern type, and great quantities of all kinds of warlike stores are collected, ready to be issued to either the Army or the Navy, should such an unfortunate contingency arise. As Mr. Will Crooks, M.P., said when addressing the men on strike, "Woolwich is the pick of the industrial world."

It is on these men that the Empire relies to keep it supplied with the implements that strike terror and death into the heart of the enemy.

Where Responsibility Lies. No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modernly and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." With sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessary this equipment can surely be of use to you. Boy Scouts. Recognition by the Government—200,000 For Official Duty. (Daily Mail.) The Boy Scouts' Association has received authority to announce that the uniform of the Boy Scouts ("B.P." hat or Sea Scout cap and fleur-de-lis badge essential) is recognized by the Government as the uniform of a public service, non-military body. Boy Scouts or men in sympathy with Scout ideals who are unable to enlist in the Regular Army, Territorials, or Navy, are invited to communicate with the Scouts' Friendly Society, 114 Victoria-street, Westminster. Women are eligible as honorary members. Headquarters wish it to be known that it is most important that no officer or Scout should carry arms. They should be careful to take their instructions from the authorities they are assisting, and should not indulge in indiscriminate spy-hunting.

What the Scouts Can Do. There are 200,000 Boy Scouts. They are fully organized, ready, and competent for many services that will release thousands of grown men for sterner duties. The non-combatant array of young chivalry is of immense assistance to the military, civil, and coastguard forces.

This is what the Boy Scouts are doing already or are prepared to do:—

Handing out notices to inhabitants and other services connected with billeting, commanding, warping, etc.

Serving as despatch-riders, signalers, etc.

Guarding and patrolling bridges, culverts, telegraph and telephone lines.

Collecting information as to supplies, transport, etc.

Carrying out organized public relief measures.

Helping families of men employed in defence duties or sick and wounded.

Establishing first aid, dressing, or nursing stations, refuges, dispensaries, soup kitchens, etc., in their club rooms.

Acting as guides.

Making up and forwarding despatches dropped by air craft.

Assisting coastguards as sea scouts.

Struck an Iceberg

S. S. FLORISTON IS WRECKED IN STRAITS OF BELLE ISLE.

The S. S. Floriston, Capt. J. Donnelly, bound from Montreal to Avonmouth, England, with a large cargo of wheat, struck an iceberg going through the Belle Isle Straits. The ship is now ashore filling with water and likely to become a total wreck.

Saturday evening Deputy Minister of Customs, LeMessurier, received the accompanying messages from the Sub-Collector at Port Saunders:—"Steamer ashore one mile west of Kepple Island. Believed to be British with cargo. Boat from ship just left here for King's Cove. Water smooth; will likely float at high tide."

Ship referred to in previous message struck iceberg in the Straits and was forced to run ashore. Her name is the Floriston, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, from Montreal to Avonmouth, England—wrecked; will probably become a total wreck.

Yesterday Mr. LeMessurier was wired by the West Coast Commissioner as follows:—"Floriston" has been cast forepeak and No. 1 hold full of water; Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 dry; water smooth at present. Cargo, 180,000 bushels of grain. Everything orderly."

Messages of a similar character as the foregoing were received in the city by Messrs. Bowring Bros., Ltd., Mr. Tasker Cook and others.

The Floriston is fifteen years old and was built by Roper and Son, Stockton, for R. Chapman and Son, her present owners. She is 3,429 tons gross and 2,236 net.

county basis, reporting to the chief constable of each county or to the local section of the British Red Cross Society. In Kent, Scouts are already watching all the trunk lines of telegraph and telephone between London and the coast to prevent tapping and cutting. In emergency of any sort the association can arrange within a few hours relay of cyclists and runners who can average ten miles an hour across open country. All the east coast is being watched by them in supplementary assistance to and in conjunction with the Admiralty and coastguards.

The Scout movement as everyone knows, is voluntary and has been self-supporting. The organization has had to feed all the Scouts who are actively helping. It is to be hoped that this expense will be borne by the country they are serving, so well.

It is on these men that the Empire relies to keep it supplied with the implements that strike terror and death into the heart of the enemy.

Our Plucky Fighters.

Our most encouraging news comes from the sea. The two most powerful of the German cruisers in the Pacific, the Griemau and Schirnhorst appear to be bottled up at Tao Tsing in the German Province of Kia Chaut in China. It is reported that they tried to get out last week and were driven back battered by the allied fleet. The German cruiser Leipzig, whose captain boasted the Germans were going to sink a British or French cruiser a day in the Pacific until they were disposed of, is the first victim of the war, according to a report from Vancouver. The Leipzig is reported to be captured by the Canadian cruiser Rainbow and the French cruiser Montcalm. Even more cheering news comes from the South Pacific, where a New Zealand force has taken possession of the capital town of German Samoa, a group of islands about 1,200 miles to the N.E. of New Zealand. This precautionary feat must afford much satisfaction to our brethren under the Southern Cross. The story of the Heligoland raid, the sinking of German torpedo boats and light cruisers were lured out by two or three destroyers. The only enemy the Germans found was a light cruiser, apparently the Arethusa, and the two or three destroyers. They enticed them out to sea, and the British bait vessels put up a fight against great odds. This is shown from the fact that they took on themselves great punishment. The Arethusa was damaged in the engine room and the upper works of the destroyers were battered, and the commander of one of the destroyers killed. This was Lieut-Commander Bertie. It is clear that these ships could have escaped punishment had they so desired, for their names are given the Laertes and the Liberty. These are two of the twenty destroyers of the L. class, whose tonnage is 950, and which have a speed of 35 or 36 knots. The cruiser appears to have been the Arethusa, one of the new class of the scouting cruiser of 4,000 tons and 30 knot speed, just completed, and which have been commissioned since June last. Their part in the war game was to act as bait to draw the Germans out to sea. When they lured the latter out to sea, more British light cruisers and battle cruisers appeared on the scene. One shot a German battle cruiser and a German cruiser sank the rest took to flight, but they lost five vessels, and others were damaged in the pursuit put up by the British. The Germans seem to have 'lost' in prisoners and drowned, about 1,200 men. It appears, however, that some German cruisers may have escaped into the Atlantic and the Admiralty are endeavoring to make sure of this, before any troop ship is allowed to leave Canada.

Put into Portugal Cove

To Land Body of Banker who Died Suddenly.

The Gloucester banking vessel Preceptor, Capt. McDonald, put into Portugal Cove yesterday evening, to land the body of a member of her crew named George Ross, who died at sea on Friday last. The vessel was fishing on the Grand Banks and made a hurried run for this port when the death occurred, but owing to the strong S.E. storm of last evening Capt. McDonald would not take any risk and reached Portugal Cove. The death occurred, but owing to the failure. He had not been complaining up to a minute or so before he died when he collapsed on the deck of the vessel. The body was fed in and landed at Portugal Cove where it was taken charge of by Rev. Canon Smith, who examined the body and found death to be due to heart trouble. The remains are being interred at the Cove this afternoon. Deceased was a robust man and is survived in Gloucester by six children, who are now both fatherless and motherless. A magisterial enquiry into the affair began before Judge Conroy at 12.30 to-day when Capt. McDonald and Mr. Hills, of Portugal Cove, were examined.

A Monstrous Impertinence.

(New York Sun.)
 In addressing to the Governor of California a telegram calling his attention to the action of England to draw Japan into the present war the Chamber of German-American Commerce has committed a monstrous impertinence and a gross impropriety. While hypocritically reciting that "there is a great danger that under these circumstances the United States must also be embroiled in the world-wide conflagration," it is clear from the tone of the communication that its purpose is to involve the United States in the war and array it on the German side. It is an appeal to the strong anti-Japanese sentiment of California, an attempt to inflame that sentiment for the benefit of Germany. The President and Congress of the United States, and not the Governor of California will determine the policy of this Government in the Far East. They will do so from an American standpoint and not from that of any of the parties to the war. The people of the United States have advanced in national consciousness far beyond the point of tolerating such insolence as they bore in Citizen Genet's heyday. They wish to maintain a strict but friendly neutrality to all the belligerents. They know how to conserve the interests and the honor of their country; and they need no suggestions and will resent the pragmatic interference of persons whose technical American citizenship seems not to have made them other than permanent aliens, their real allegiance given to a foreign country.

Story of the Heligoland Fight.

Destroyers Lured Out German Destroyers and Light Cruisers ---The Laertes and Liberty, Two Destroyers, Fought Grand Fight

Special to Evening Telegram.
 LONDON, To-day.
 The following particulars of the recent naval engagement is published. The Liberty, one of the British destroyers which took part in the battle off Heligoland was hit by a shell which shattered her mast, tore away part of her bridge, then smashed her searchlight and killed her commander, Lieut-Commander Nigel Bartlett and William Butcher, his signal man. Accounts of the battle say it was perfect in execution as well as in plan. Led by a small detachment, the destroyers crept within the German lights at dawn between Heligoland and the German coast. As the morning broke they then gave the news to the Germans whose destroyers then came out. The British destroyers lured the Germans to the open sea, where other destroyers were awaiting spread out in fan shape. A small detachment followed and then the German cruisers came out. A British light cruiser after a sighting shot got her range splendidly and hit the foremost gun of one of the German cruisers and demolished it. The Arethusa then sent a few broadsides at the enemy. Her practice was excellent. She hit the German cruiser which at once burst into smoke and flame, but soon afterwards a German shot did some damage to the engine room of the Arethusa. The destroyers Liberty and Laertes fought a grand fight. A shell brought down the mast of the Liberty. The Laertes was hit amidships. A hole was shot through her funnel and her forward guns were damaged. She received also a shell in the dynamo room and a shot off, which wrecked her cabin. It was hot work but at that moment the British light cruisers and battle cruisers appeared. It was the moment for which they had been waiting. Their destruction was deadly. The first shot from one of the British battle cruisers sank the German cruiser which had been battering a destroyer. The German fleet then turned and dod in the direction of Alkathen but they were pursued by British destroyers which did terrible execution with their four inch guns. Many Germans landed from the British ships after the battle, were wounded by revolver bullets and declared that revolvers were used by the German officers to prevent their men surrendering to the British boats which had put out to save their drowning opponents. Some of the boats lowered and rescued the Germans. It is said, were fired upon by a German cruiser. An official statement issued says that of 1,200 men, comprising the crew of the five German warships sunk off Heligoland, only 330 were saved.

The Right Rev. Arthur Foley Winington-Ingram, Bishop of London, who is Chaplain of the London Rifle Brigade, has announced that he will accompany the men to the front.

Out of the hundreds of applications that have come in from trained nurses and young women all over the Dominion, one hundred will be chosen to go to the war with Canada's first army division.

Lord Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, has notified the press that any newspaper publishing news of naval or military movements except that issued by the official bureau, would be suspended.

Fifteen women attending a special mass for the Belgian army, were killed in the Church at La Louviere on August 14th, when a cry of fire caused a panic and rush by the congregation for the only exit. Fifty other women were injured.

A Paris correspondent tells of the capture of 700 German Uhlans single-handed by an Alsatian railway driver. He was moving a train carrying Uhlans to the frontier, and purposely diverting it to another track, ran the cars full speed into France. He stopped at the first French station and handed over the train load of Germans with their horse equipments to French soldiers.

The Russian Emperor, a Paris correspondent asserts, will sign a proclamation at an early date giving the Jews in his dominions equal civil and political rights with his other subjects.

The independence Belge, of Brussels, the leading newspaper in Belgium, says the Vatican has warned the Kaiser of the moral consequences of his invasion of Belgian neutrality.

The story has been revived that Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the German Socialist leader, in Berlin, has been shot for refusing to do military service. It is also reported that Rosa Luxemburg, the noted social writer, who declared that soldiers were maltreated in the army, has been shot.

A Vilna Cossack named Krutichikov enjoys the distinction of receiving the first Russian decoration for valor of the war. By order of the Czar he has been invested with the Cross of St. George. His exploit is reported as the killing, single-handed, of eleven Germans in a fight in which he himself sustained sixteen wounds.

A Belgian woman caught a German spy on the train to Brussels from Antwerp, in the act of releasing carrier pigeons which he had concealed in a bag. She seized and held him until other passengers came to her assistance. The man was handed over to the military, tried by court martial and shot.

The Canadian Relief Commission was formed on August 14th at Government House, Ottawa. It brought together representatives of the principal organizations in Canada, and resulted in the selection of a central organization for the purpose of supplying auxiliary aid to the sick and wounded in the field, at home and abroad.

The British Embassy at Washington has drawn the attention of the United States Secretary of State to rumors that one Seligman is instigating certain German subjects to join in raids through the Maine and Vermont roads upon the Dominion of Canada. The Governor of Maine thinks the rumor absurd, but is looking into the matter.

Remanded.
 The Canadian physician, who was arrested Saturday, on a serious charge in connection with the Game Laws, as we have already alluded to, was tried in camera to-day before Judge Conroy. The professional man was charged with unlawfully dealing with foxes. He was represented by Mr. R. F. McGrath, who asked for a postponement of the case. This request was acceded to by the court and the defendant was remanded for eight days. His Honor intimating that he would accept bail from two bondsmen of $1,000 each, but in this latter direction there was nothing doing up to press hour. Meanwhile the police are investigating and we understand some sensational developments are going to occur.

 Every one should see the beautiful sight to-night at Rossley's. Real living pictures, the children trained by Mrs. Rossley will present a war drama without words, in full costume, a novel, charming and artistic sight, and an inspiring one as well. The wonderful patience displayed by Mrs. Rossley will be shown in this production more than any of her pantomimes, for the grouping and poses of the children is very remarkable. Besides there are several new motion pictures. "In Diplomatic Circles," Biograph; "Sweet Deception," Vitagraph; "Religious Customs in India," Feeding Time, Pathe. "If Dreams Came True," Vitagraph, with Robert Gilford, Lillian Walker, James Lachie and Hugh Mack.

Total Wreck.
 Sending Steamer to Salvage Cargo. Messrs. Bowring Bros., Ltd., who are the Agents for Lloyds here, are now making arrangements to send a steamer to the s.s. Floriston, which is now beached near Port Saunders as referred to by us elsewhere, for the purpose of salvaging the cargo of grain that she has on board. Bowring's will send along one of their sealing steamers, probably the Terra Nova, and she will leave port this evening. The latest from the Floriston is that she is filling with water and will be a total wreck.

ALLIES IN GOOD POSITIONS.
 LONDON, To-day.
 The French army and our English troops are now holding good positions in a much stronger and closer line, and stemming the tide of German hordes, rolling up to Paris, says the Chronicle's Amiens correspondent. General Paul Pau, the hero of this war, after his swift return from the Eastern front where he repaired the deadly check at Muelhausen, has dealt a smashing blow at a German army corps which was striking at the heart of France. Paris is still safe for the time being with the great army of the allied forces drawn across the country as a barrier which surely will not be broken by the enemy.

MARSHALL BROTHERS.

When People Surprise Us.

An unusually fearless and lively young girl started us all by almost fainting when a caterpillar was found crawling down her neck.

"To think of Becky's minding a little thing like that," said everyone, "it doesn't seem like her."

Indeed if we had not seen the whole thing the report of it, for Becky, in our minds, had always been identified with fearlessness.

Yet, after all, there was nothing really strange about it. Becky is just a human being, not a personification of fearlessness. Because she is naturally brave, that does not mean that she does not have the human capability of feeling fear.

I think this is a very common mistake,—that is, to think of a person as representing some quality, and to expect him to consistently display that quality, to be consistently good or bad, selfish or unselfish, brave or cowardly, wise or foolish.

No human beings ever consistently anything—not even inconsistent. Consistency is the one quality you can make sure of not finding in anyone.

And yet we are always expecting it and marvelling when we do not find it.

We can scarcely believe that Mr. A. is the most generous and selfless of men. He had always typified the thoroughly self-centred man to us and we do not understand this inconsistency.

And when Miss B., who has hitherto seemed a personification of discretion, falls in love and commits astonishing indiscretions, we feel as if she had been magically changed by some supernatural force.

But she has not been changed. She is simply showing another side of the many-sided character with which the least complex of us is endowed. People are never mere personifications of some quality. That is the mistake that the inferior novelist makes. He takes an abstract quality such as selfishness or unselfishness, give it a face and hands and calls it a man.

"There's nothing surprises me more than the badness of the good," says Dr. Lavender, "unless it's the goodness of the bad."

And it is not only goodness and badness which astonish us by appearing when we expect their opposites, but all kinds of qualities.

As Tolstoy puts it:

"One of the most popular superstitions consists in the belief that every man is endowed with definite qualities—that some men are kind, some wicked; some wise, some foolish; some energetic, some apathetic, etc. This is not true. We may say of a man that he is often kind than wicked; often wise than foolish, often energetic than apathetic, and vice versa. But it would not be true to say of one man that he is always kind or wise, and of another that he is always wicked or foolish. And yet we thus divide people. This is erroneous. Men are like rivers—the water in all of them, and at every point, is the same, but every one of them is now narrow, now swift, now wide, now calm, now clear, now cold, now muddy, now warm. So it is with men. Every man bears within him the germs of all human qualities."

Household Notes

Never cook vegetables in an iron kettle.

Sugar tends to improve the texture of cakes.

If a cake cracks open while baking, there is too much flour in it.

Soaking in cold water makes the washing of all garments much easier.

The quickest method of warming cold plates in winter is to dip them in hot water.

Baking soda will sweeten milk vessels, clean brasses and is good for dish washing.

When the nails are brittle, apply vasoline, or hold them in warm sweet oil every day.

When a vegetable has lost its firmness, soak it in very cold water until it is crisp and plump.

If boiling milk is poured on the beaten eggs when making baked custard, it will bake them firm.

A good test in choosing beef is to press it with the thumb; if it rises quickly, it is of good quality.

The flavor of peas will be much improved if a dozen pea pods are washed and cooked with them.

In making a plain omelet, it is better to add hot water than milk, as it makes it much more tender.

In the sick room, it is much more pleasant for the patient if the medicine bottles are kept out of sight.

Try frying fish in fat that has been saved from former frying; the flavor will be very much improved.

When cutting fur, never use scissors, soak it in very cold water until it is crisp and plump.

Big Jim Vaughn.

Red McQueen

Red McQueen says: Big Jim was with the Cubs last year, but somehow Jim did not appear in box scores very much. He batted fungoes now and then and warmed up with the other men and carried bats and such.

"Too wild," was Johnny Evers' hunch. "He's got to get the big league punch before we let him start." So all that big Jim Vaughn could do was wait for some chance to come through and show his pitchin' art.

He got that chance against the Sox. They called on him to fill the box in one post-season tilt. He made that tribe of Callahan believe he was a pitchin' man whose arm was edged with gilt. Chicago fans began to see why he'd been brought from old Kay See. He made his mark right there. This year he's crowdin' Matty's pace, helps keep the Cubs up in the race—he's pitchin' like a bear.

I don't know what got into Jim that filled his ol' left wing with Vin. When he was up before he didn't wear well with the Yanks. Perhaps it was his southpaw pranks that made the big town sore. The rep he's makin' now will last an overshadow all the past, so Jim don't need to fret. He's laid the wild stuff on the shelf and steadied down and made himself a safe, sane pitchin' bet.

St. John's Gas Light Company.

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Roast Beef.

How pleasing is the juicy roast—old England's bulwark and her boast, on which her sons grow strong!—we eat it all day long. A chicken now and then is good, although when old turkey, at Thanksgiving, is served, it makes the eater mad. The turkey, at Thanksgiving, is served, and then they're simply great, but, at four successive meals it has been dished, follow feels like uttering some screams. And thus it is with goose and fish and nearly every other dish that's for the fleshly kind; served now and then they're simply great, but, too oft, they agitate the patient's soul and mind. But good roast beef is always fine; I place it in this frame of mine, and hate to pause or stop; and when I've chewed a juicy slice I sound my war whoop once or twice and whip a cop.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

TO THE PEOPLE OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN:

The Mother Country has been compelled to go to war and preserve, among other things, the rights and liberties which we all enjoy as citizens of the Empire.

Newfoundland in common with the other Oversea Dominions, has pledged itself to assist the Mother Country with material help in the present extremity.

This is to take the form of an increase of the Naval Reserve from Six Hundred to One Thousand men and the raising of a Regiment of Five Hundred men for land service abroad, and the Colony has further undertaken to assume the full cost of this contingent of Five Hundred men during the course of the war.

It is our duty and privilege, as loyal and patriotic citizens of the Empire, to voluntarily assist in supporting this movement, and, to raise a fund for that purpose. This Patriotic Fund will be applied primarily in making provision for the depending relatives of those who undertake to fight the battles of the country and the Empire by land and sea and afterwards to such other objects connected therewith as may be deemed desirable.

The need is great and in the confident expectation that this appeal will evoke a prompt and generous response, we respectfully but strongly urge all who can, to give as liberally as possible towards this most deserving object.

The undersigned, on behalf of the Patriotic Committee appointed to undertake the organization and despatch of this regiment, appeal for subscriptions toward this Fund. Contributions may be sent to the nearest magistrate, to the branches of any of the Banks doing business in the Colony, or to the Treasurer, J. S. Munn, Esq., and they will be gratefully acknowledged.

The Pork Barrel.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old St. Wash."

The Pork Barrel is a name given to the Rivers and Harbors Bill in Congress by those who haven't gotten an appropriation for their own district.

The Rivers and Harbors Bill is very important. It provides money for the dredging of harbors and canals and for the improvement of rivers. If it were not for this bill, only small-sized steamship would be able to enter New York harbor and only large-sized statesmen would be able to stay in Congress.

After a congressman has begun his career his first duty is to get an appropriation in the Rivers and Harbors Bill. Every district is entitled to this. We are a free and equal country and if New York can have a million spent on its harbor, Wahoo, Nebraska, has a perfect right to a harbor too.

This makes it very difficult for the government engineers, because they must find a stream in each congressional district upon which a million dollars can be spent. Nothing is more pathetic than the sight of a gov-

Pepsin will digest eggs, meat, etc., but has no effect on starchy foods like bread, potatoes, cake, pudding—in fact, most of the eatables that cause the trouble.

Prescription "A" is the thing.

It contains all the active ingredients for the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis, nervous dyspepsia, etc.

Divorced Life

A Pleasant Compact

"So you are really leaving to-morrow?" questioned Marian. Barker was certain that he detected a bit of sadness in the girl's voice.

"How about a quiet stroll through the park?" Then we can wind up at some quaint place for dinner. It's a gorgeous afternoon, and I'm strong for a walk.

"Do you know, Mr. Barker," said Marian presently, looking seriously ahead, "I've really enjoyed meeting and knowing you. You've meant much to me. I haven't felt free to talk to many of my friends, but I feel a sort of sympathetic something about you that rests me."

"Well, why can't I become one?" rejoined Barker cheerfully. "That relationship would be splendid," he added, "but just think of all the worry I would cause you, always telling you my troubles." They had reached a secluded spot in the park, and Barker er added abruptly: "Doesn't this grass look tempting? Let's rest a little in this quiet spot." "These little spots of green are wonderful here in New York," said Marian dropping gracefully upon the turf. "I never knew what grass meant to one before coming to almost grassless New York."

Barker seated himself beside her, and Marian, noting the handsome contour of his head and his strong, well-built figure, thrilled with a delicious sense of near-possession. With a little effort, she felt that she could win this man, and she had to fight a strong impulse to indulge in a little flirtation. She felt afraid of herself, afraid of those impetuous impulses which so often had hidden her so exactly what she did not want to do.

"Come, come, all this seriousness on a day meant for fun!" broke in Barker, after watching her in silence for a moment. "Remember I am a student for a good time to-day. No room for sadness."

"I told you what I was thinking about," smiled Marian. "I'm afraid you'd feel terribly flattered." "Don't make me believe you were thinking of me, and then throw cold water on me," protested Barker. He drew a little closer, but Marian did not move away.

To Kill Extortion.

(The 'World,' New York.) One of the most notable despatches yet received from the seat of war in Europe was that which embraced these sentences:

Living in Brussels is not expensive. A little meat and plenty of vegetables take one a long way. Even the very poor can afford such a dinner in Brussels.

Brussels is the capital of Belgium, a kingdom embracing territory less in extent than that of the State of Maryland. Its population is almost as great as that of the States of Illinois and Indiana combined. It has more inhabitants to the square mile than any other nation in the world. Although most of the able-bodied men of the kingdom are under arms, although on one side it is overrun by a great hostile army, and although the other it is occupied by a friendly allied force as large or larger, there is as yet no pinch of famine. The food is held in a ruthless manner, not seized upon the occasion for profit. The very poor as well as the very rich supply their wants at prices which the 'World' correspondent describes as 'extraordinarily cheap.'

What is the situation in New York, 3,000 miles from the theatre of war? Here everything that sustains life has mounted in price. Loaves of bread are shrinking in size. Weights and measures are being clipped. A cent here, a nickel there, a dime more for that, and a dollar more for that, accentuate the most shameless robbery ever perpetrated upon a free people at peace with all the world.

Not long ago a member of Congress asked attention to the alleged fact of American cities New York alone column grimly headed "Starvation." That is a disease of which, with death

Wilhelmina, who succeeded her father William III, in 1890. JOHN BUNYAN died 1688, aged 60. In 1655 he began to preach in the villages and his graphic discourses had a powerful effect upon his hearers. In 1660 he was convicted as a common upholder of several unlawful meetings and conventicles, and was committed to Bedford Jail, where he remained for seven years. "Pilgrim's Progress" was begun during this imprisonment and finished during a second term in 1675 of six months. He wrote many books of religious character. In prayer it is better to have a heart without words, than words without a heart.

St. John's Vessel Abandoned at Sea.

The barquentine Galatea, Capt. Vatcher, has been abandoned at sea and her crew were rescued and brought into Cardiff, where they are being cared for by Messrs. James Baird, Ltd., her late owners. The vessel was on her way to this port from Alicante, when she met her fate. The Galatea was one of our best known fish carriers and made history here a few years ago when she figured in the Baird confagration and was burned to the waters edge, afterwards being re-built and re-classified. Master J. Vatcher, who was on board, was rescued and is now in the hospital.

Barley Escaped With His Life.

Hon. H. J. B. Woods, Postmaster General, was in receipt of the following message yesterday from Mr. Wm. Shano, Newfoundland Post Office at North Sydney: "An I. C. R. train collided with a big baggage truck to-day at N.S., striking the corner of one building, shifting it 7 feet from its foundation, and doing a lot of damage to the whole building. I have reported the matter to the agents, and will report as soon as he goes over the damage, but work will not be interfered with in replacing and repairing. Barely escaped with my life. Was all alone in the office at the time."

and havoc on all sides of it. Brussels as yet knows nothing. Inspectors and teachers attached to New York's public-school system have found that one of the most serious causes of backward scholarship on the part of young children is hunger. That is a social evil which evidently does not menace the crowded population of Brussels, with a million of men in conflict all about it. The scarcity now reflected in this city in the outrageous prices at which food is held is not the legitimate result of war. It is the result of greed. It is not due to shortage. It is due to speculation. It is not a consequence of any convulsion of nature. It is a consequence of a corner. It has no relation to existing supplies, which are abundant and with no immediate outlet. It relates to a ruthless gamble in futures and is based altogether upon the hope that in time devastation in Europe will enable food gamblers here, with governmental assistance, to exact famine prices for their hoarded supplies. Meantime, what are we to do? Those who suggest an export duty are ignorant of the Constitution. Solemn investigations of notorious facts are worse than farces. Public meetings get nowhere. Charity, always blessed, must fall short. Denunciation is ineffective. There is only one complete remedy. If the pirates who are seizing the food supply of America do not instantly relax their hold, Congress should temporarily prohibit exports of grain and provisions. It is a crime to open new markets for men who, coldly calculating upon the forthcoming panic in those markets, are now, in a year of plenty, drawing blood from their own countrymen.

The United States is a sovereign power. It is menaced to-day only by conspiracy and extortion at home. To kill that evil force and lift it outright will be a greater victory than any European army in this struggle can gain, no matter at what bloody sacrifice.

This clever production which is voted to be the best release of the I.M.P. Company, is termed by the Censors as a remarkable achievement and is looked upon as the last word in motion pictures. "Curious Salamander, of Mexico," is an interesting reel of funny fish and their habits; "Oh, What a Dream" is the comedy that is worth white seeing. Another attractive item will be the renditions of the prima donna, who first will sing "The Flower Song" from Faust, and secondly "Mary of Argyle." Miss Clark will appear in character costumes and the accompanist Prof. Spencer will be heard in new selections.
