NEPONSET

WALL BOARD

FOR WALLS AND CEILING

It was no trouble at all and took me a very short time. You see, anyone can apply it.

I simply gave my dealer the dimensions of the cottage and he sent me up enough bundles of this new material to cover the walls and ceilings—I did the rest with hammer, nails and saw.

It cost me a great deal less than lath and plaster, and there was no dirt and mess or delay of drying-out.

NEPONSET WALL BOARD comes in sheets, all decorated; 7 to 10 feet long, and to fit across standard windowing. It is ideal for unfinished rooms in houses, camps, garages, and for partitions anywhere—makes wonderfully attractive interiors. Surfaces waterproofed.

Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Carroll Fitzhugh had never been so amazed and puzzled in his life. He stood irresolute a moment, his gaze fastened on the girl's face.

How beautiful she was, surpassing any woman he had ever seen, and he loved her with a selfish passion.

"I'll risk it," he mentally decided. "Once mine, I can mould her to suit my will."

"Very well," he said quietly. "I'll agree to your terms. May I put this ring on your finger?" he added, producing the great, white, blinking solitaire.

Kelpie put forth her slender hand. "You may put it on," she said, softly.

Carroll grasped her hand with eager passion, and in defiance of her command, as he slipped the ring on her finger, he bent his handsome head and kissed her white wrist with passionate fervor.

"There, now," she cried, snatching away her hand, "that makes our contract null and void. You have broken your promise, and I can do the same at my pleasure."

Carroll laughed pleasantly in reply to this defiant little speech.

Accustomed to, and wearied as he had been from his boyhood up by the adoring attention of women, the young aristocrat found his petulant and self-willed little sweetheart immensely attractive, and was more in love with her than he had been, when she refused and held him at a distance, than he had ever been before.

"You don't mean a single word you are saying," he said pleasantly. "You couldn't, you know. It would be too cruel. But have your own sweet way about it, my darling. I am content to bide my time, believing and trusting, with all my heart, that as you used to care for me in the happy summer days down at Thatcher's Rock, you will learn to care for me again. My life belongs to you, dearest, and you cannot have the heart to make it miserable."

Kelpie turned from him in silence, and her mother, entering the room at the same moment and chancing to catch a glimpse of the great solitaire blazing on her finger, took her in her arms and kissed her with fond pride, while Carroll looked on with envious eyes.

"My precious children, this is the happiest day of my life," the lady assured them again and again.

At the grand opera a little later, when her friends clustered about her box and Mrs. Vancouver came up with the rest, leaning on her son's arm, Mrs. van Cortlandt's triumph was complete, and she beamed and smiled in the most gracious manner.

"I've got the sweetest secret to tell you," she whispered, in an audible aside: "My dear little daughter is engaged, and I am the happiest mother in the world."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"When man wills, the devil drives." It was this old saying, or something conveying the same idea, that flashed through Aubrey's mind, as, muffled from head to foot in a black waterproof, she made her way out of the rear door of the Van Cortlandt mansion, and, hurrying across the courtyard, plunged into the darkness and silence of the street beyond.

It was a back street, unfrequented at that hour of the night, especially in stormy weather, and the girl could not have explained the impulse that was leading her thither. She desired to get out of the house, out of the gorgeous rooms, with their gilded luxury and flashing lights, out into the wild windy storm and darkness, where she could give free rein to her bitter anguish and wild desire for revenge.

Mrs. van Cortlandt and her dear children, as she fondly called Kelpie and her betrothed lover, accompanied by a few very dear friends, had gone to the grand opera.

Aubrey had not consented to make one of the party, though Mrs. van Cortlandt had been gracious enough to invite her, after a fashion.

"Aubrey, my dear, wait a moment," she had said, as the girl, whether by accident or intention we will not pretend to say, passed through the drawing room in which the recently betrothed lovers were still standing, Carroll with his pretty fiancée's opera cloak on his arm, and a half-amused, half-dubious expression on his handsome face.

"Aubrey, my dear, wait a minute. You've got to know the secret. I suppose, and I might as well tell you at once. Those two happy young people over there"—indicating the couple by a nod—"are engaged, and will be delighted, no doubt, to receive your congratulations."

"I shall be delighted to offer them, I am sure," was Aubrey's prompt reply.

Without an instant's hesitation or the faintest betrayal of surprise or emotion, she crossed the room and stood, calm and smiling, before the two.

"Allow me to offer my best wishes for your future happiness," she said, with charming graciousness. "I suppose, my dear Carroll, you feel very proud to have won the prize of the season at this early hour."

She offered the young man her hand as she spoke, and, taking it mechanically, he was electrified to find that she still wore the ring he had put on her finger when in the dim, religious light of a quaint old church they had breathed the solemn vows that were supposed to make them man and wife.

The shock was a trying one, but Carroll stood it well, meeting the steady gaze of Aubrey's strange eyes with a smiling, half-insolent glance.

"I am more than proud," he answered, with emphasis; "I consider myself the most fortunate fellow under the sun. Thanks for your congratulations, my kind friend."

With a profound bow he touched his lips lightly to Aubrey's hand as he relinquished it.

It was an incomparable bit of acting, which came within a hair's breadth of ending in a tragedy.

Carroll stood breathless an instant, her head bent, a smoldering fire in her deep eyes, almost determined to tell her story then and there.

But impelled by a desire to make her vengeance as complete as possible, she changed her mind and turned away. The time had not yet come, she told herself; the hour was not yet ripe for revenge. Soon! ah, very soon!

Mrs. van Cortlandt watched her curiously as she disappeared behind the heavy portieres, a sudden suspicion taking shape, for the first time, in her none too active mind.

"I wonder if there was ever anything between that miserable girl and Carroll Fitzhugh?" she said to herself. "I must get her out of my house before she does mischief in some way."

The lady did not dream that the mischief was already done. Being of a vain, rather weak, easy-going disposition, she was always slow to act upon any of her ideas and impulses.

Meanwhile Kelpie went off with her newly betrothed lover to the opera, and Aubrey sought the seclusion of her own room, but was too miserable to remain there.

So, when the carriages had rolled away, and the great, gloomy, grand house was silent, she wrapped herself in a black mantle, and, stealing downstairs, went out into the wild, wintry darkness.

Snapdragon, whose yellow eyes, like a cat's, saw everything, watched her from a window as she scudded away.

"That girl is bent on mischief," she said to herself, "but I shan't follow her. I've warned my mistress, and it's no concern of mine."

Aubrey sped on like a spirit of evil, her strange eyes gleaming like a wild animal's in search of prey. She could not have told whether she was going or what purpose prompted her. She was dumb and dazed with pain for the time, conscious of nothing but a wild desire for revenge.

A vague thought of following the lovers to the opera house and stealing behind them as they sat together, and stabbing the girl in her pretty finery, filled her mind.

She had a sharp dagger hidden in her bosom which would do the work well, but to murder her rival would be such a poor, commonplace revenge. She wanted to disgrace Marlon, to drag her down in the dust, and trample her heart beneath her feet, and make her suffer as she was suffering.

Ah, if she could; if some unseen power would only help her, and then, as she sped along, the old saying flashed across her mind: "When man wills, the devil drives."

"Yes," replied Aubrey, shivering with terror, yet conscious of a curious fascination. "Why do you ask?"

"I think I have a friend there, and I would like to send her a message." The stranger drew his breath hard as he spoke, and Aubrey could see his eyes gleaming in the dark.

"A friend?" she repeated. "A man or woman?"

"A woman, of course."

"If you tell me her name, perhaps I may know something about her," ventured the girl.

"Her name used to be Kelpie, but she may have changed it since I saw her last."

Aubrey's heart leaped to her very throat. Had the devil taken her by her word and come to drive for her?"

"No, she hasn't changed her name," she replied; "she is still called Kelpie, but she is a very grand lady."

"Is she married?"

The question leaped from the man's lips like a pistol shot, and Aubrey felt the heat of his breath on her face.

"Not yet, but she will be in a very short time," she answered quietly.

"To that city chap, I'll warrant, Carroll Fitzhugh was his name."

"Yes, Carroll Fitzhugh is the man." A sound that was more like the snarl of a wild beast than the cry of a human being burst from the man's lips, and, seizing Aubrey's arm a second time, he drew her so close to him that she could feel the mad throbbing of his heart.

"Who are you?" he demanded. "Tell me quickly!"

A Pleasing Contralto

AT THE CRESCENT.
Mrs. Hannaford sang "When the Dew is on the Rose," at the Crescent Picture Palace yesterday. This lady possesses a rich and pleasing contralto voice and received hearty applause from the large audience present, both in the afternoon and night.

The picture programme is perhaps the best ever shown at this popular house and the management is to be congratulated on their efforts to please their ever growing clientele, the perfect system of ventilation and appearance generally of the Theatre was the theme of very favorable comment, and Crescent patrons are well looked after in this respect; altogether the Crescent is second to none in the city as a picture house. The same programme is being repeated to-day and we advise all our readers to visit the popular Crescent and see a good show. Two o'clock in the afternoon, 7 o'clock at night.

REGULAR HOURS.
I hit the hay at ten o'clock, and then I sleep around the block, till half past five; I hear the early robin's voice, and see the sunrise, and rejoice that I'm alive. From pain and katzenjammer free, my breakfast tastes as good to me as a meal; I throw in a couple of buckwheat cakes and a scrambled egg and sizzling steaks, and braided veal. And as downtown I gayly wend, I overtake a friend who's gone to waste; "I stayed up late last night," he sighs, and now I have two bloodshot eyes, and dark brown taste; I'd give a piece of my life for a full glass of beer that I can hardly walk; I'll have to brace the drugstore clerks and throw some bromo to my works, or they will balk." But yesterday I saw a man to whom had been attached the can, by angry boss; he wassalled all the night away, and then showed up for work by day a total loss. Don't turn the nightmare into day, or loaf along the Great White Way—that habit grows; if to the front you hope to keep, you must devote your nights to sleep—I tell you those.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. A. Collis' concert takes place on Thursday evening at St. Paul's Hall. A very pleasant evening is in store for all who attend. The comedy "Dinner at Six" is especially good and very laughable.

The Sunday School anniversary at the Methodist Church last night, was a most enjoyable affair. The little ones took their parts remarkably well. A very large congregation attended, although the weather was disagreeable.

A number of volunteers arrived from St. John's by Saturday night on a visit to friends.

Rev. A. A. Holmes will lecture to-night in "Coughlan Hall" on "A Visit to the Land of the Pharaohs."

Miss Maymie Parsons arrived in town to spend a few days with her friends before leaving for the scene of battle where she will perform the work of nursing the wounded soldiers. Miss Parsons is, we think, one of the first of our young ladies to volunteer for this work, and in bidding her good-by we wish her every success in her work and a safe return.

The K.E.B. Armoury was the scene of a very pleasant gathering on Friday evening at 8.30 when the ladies gathered to say good-by to their Colonel, W. J. James, Esq., and present him with an address and a gold watch engraved with the words "From officers and members of the K.E.B. to Colonel W. J. James, Esq., Mr. James replied in very prize-worthy language for the boys. Lemonade was then served and the following toast list some of the toasts:

"The King and Success to the Allies."—God Save the King.
"The K.E.B."—Prop. Mr. O. Leach; Responded to by singing "They are Jolly Good Fellows."
"Nid. Volunteers."—Prop. Major Pike; Responded to by singing "Should Aid Acquaintance be Forgotten."

During 1914 the debt was reduced by $3,427.27. ALBERT BURER died 1528, aged 57. The great German painter and engraver, and friend of Luther. Of Nuremberg birth, he may be regarded as the founder of the German school and the inventor of etching.
STORMING OF BADAJOZ 1812. A town in Spain which was stormed and captured by Wellington after the Peninsular War. The English lost over 500 men, and the excesses which followed the capture of the place have left a stain upon the English Army.

AUSTRIA'S SORRY PLIGHT.
All Formerly Rejected for Service Called to Colors.
Rome, March 27.—Last week's summing to the colors of all able-bodied men up to forty-two years of age proved how inadequate to the situation was Austria's condition.
Hence a new decree was promulgated yesterday recalling all those formerly rejected as unfit, in addition to which middle-aged men up to fifty-two are now being requisitioned and subjected to fatigue training.
Further bread riots are reported in Vienna. About 200 bakers' and confectioners' shops have been closed.
The manufacture of ice, cakes and sweetmeats is prohibited owing to the death of fresh milk and eggs.

The following letter has been received from the British Consul General, Havre, to whom all the clothing for the refugees has been sent:

"I have received twelve cases out of the fourteen advised in your letter. The other two are amongst a large amount of stuff which has accumulated in the trans-Atlantic sheds. They will doubtless be found in time, as I apply every few days for them. I have distributed the greater portion through my wife to Belgian Refugees. Some have gone to Etretat where there are French Refugee children from the North. I enclose a letter of thanks from the Belgian Consul."

What is particularly wanted is clothing and boots for men. There are numbers of wounded soldiers, discharged from the Army, who are in want of clothing of every description.

Yours faithfully,
H. S. CHURCHILL.

The Event of the Season

Jack Rossley is to be highly complimented for the treat he has given his patrons in bringing from Scotland the great Ballard Brown and the favorite Scotch prima donna Miss Madge Locke, and last night hundreds had to go away disappointed at not being able to even get standing room. For lovers of real singing, music and dramatic entertainment the treat of last night will long be remembered. Mr. Harry Lauder knew what he was about when he selected those clever artists to help form his touring concert party, and the St. John's audience gave them a great reception and welcome, and though not yet recovered from the effects of sea sickness and long and dangerous journey. Everybody should see Miss Locke give a correct imitation of Mr. Harry Lauder telling funny stories. The stage setting with its beautiful blue satin drop. The costumes—there is only one verdict from intelligent people. A wonderful show.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END. Crowded to the doors at every performance was the West End Theatre. The two little singers made a wonderful impression last night with their new novelty numbers. The pictures, the finest on the market, and the music very fine indeed. There is another big shipment of films on the way and will be the best ever seen here or elsewhere. A capital show that can't be duplicated.

TWO ARRESTS.—The police were called to a New Gower Street store last night and had to arrest a man who fell through a window glass. Last two officers were called to a West End residence to take charge of a man who was kicking up a dust with his wife.

It was too much to expect the American Government to give an adherence to any plan which prevented Americans earning money by trading with Germany.

UNUSUAL SCENE.—The clock had just announced ten o'clock yesterday forenoon as a prominent public man walked down a well known street in the city. Much to his disgust he noticed no less than a dozen unsightly ash cans, decorating the sidewalks. He forthwith communicated with the head of the administration of the city's affairs. The latter was brought to see matters for himself as they were. Both made a thorough inspection and, we understand something will be done.

LONDON, April 5.

The Governor, Newfoundland:

The Russian Government reports its offensive in the Carpathians to be developing with success. On Thursday the Russians captured 100 officers, over 7,000 men and 10 machine guns.

The Foreign Office understands that on the whole, there have been great improvements at Rubleben Camp during the last week.

"ON TO BUDAPEST."

PETROGRAD, April 5.

With Russian forces holding the Beskid and the Anstrian forces in retreat southwards, the mighty forces of the Czar are being hurled at the defences of Uzok Pass to-day to clear away the last obstacle to a general advance in the plains of Hungary. Night and day Russian troops are assailing the Uzok position of their foes, and no rest is given to the Austro-German forces at this point. With its great resources in men, Russia is able to replace the troops with fresh men. The Russian steam roller was never operating with greater force than in the battle raging just north of Uzok Pass. The War Office officials assert that it is not within the power of the Teuton troops to withstand the attacks they are undergoing from the corps massed along their front. "On to Budapest" will be the battle cry of the Russian legions when Uzok Pass is captured.

AMERICAN NOTE TO BRITAIN.

WASHINGTON, April 5.

The United States Government to-day made public its note to Britain, announcing it "could not admit" either the right of the Allies or their claim for justification in placing an embargo on all commercial intercourse between Germany and neutral countries. "To admit it," says the communication, "would be to assume the attitude of unneutrality toward the present enemies of Britain, which would be obviously inconsistent with the solemn obligations of this Government in the present cir-umstances, and for Britain to make such a claim would be for her to abandon and set at naught the principles for which she has consistently and earnestly contended at other times and circumstances." The note reviews at length the legal phases of the blockade of belligerent territory and the virtual blockade of neutral coasts. In conclusion, the U. S. states that it is in expectation that Britain, after having considered "the possibilities of the serious interruption to American trade," under the order in Council, "will take the necessary steps to avoid them, and, in the event that they should unhappily occur, will be prepared to make full reparation for every act which, under international law, constitutes a violation of neutral rights." The American communication interprets the circumstances under which Great Britain claims to be justified in adopting retaliatory measures toward her enemies, as "merely a reason for certain extraordinary activities" by her naval forces, "and not an excuse for, or prelude to, any unlawful action." "If the course of the present conflict of Britain," the note adds, "should prove to be tainted by illegality and disregard of the principles of war sanctioned by enlightened nations, it cannot be supposed that this Government, for a moment, believe His Majesty's Government would wish the same taint to attach to their own action."

Entertained.

Last night at the General Hospital Miss Maise Parsons, who leaves by this evening's express en route to Montreal when she will proceed to the front as a Red Cross nurse, was entertained by her associates of the institution. Dr. L. E. Keegan, resident physician, the members of the medical and surgical staff, Miss P. F. Moore and many other friends were present.

A wreat watch, the gift of the medical staff, and a suit case, the gift of the nurses, was presented to Miss Parsons by Dr. Keegan, who in doing so, paid a high tribute to her ability as a nurse and her qualifications for the work which she is about to undertake. Several others of these present spoke also in congratulatory terms, and endorsed all that Dr. Keegan had said.

During the evening refreshments were served after which dancing was indulged in until midnight, when the gathering dispersed, all wishing Nurse Parsons every success in the noble work she has undertaken.

"And that poor man was so sound asleep, so dreadfully tired," concluded Molly, star-eyed, "that the conductor could hardly wake him up."

She had been telling us the sad tale of the poor sick looking man on the seat in front of her on the train who had evidently come through without a sleeper because he just dropped his head forward on the window sill and slept.

"Silly," said the author's wife. "Of course he was drunk. That's what makes people go to sleep like that."

"He was not," said Molly, the wistful stars in her eyes changing to blazing suns of wrath.

The laugh that is more cutting than words.

The author's wife laughed the scornful laugh that is a more cutting answer than any argument.

And as I listened my mind flew back to an occasion years ago when, as a newspaper woman, I was suddenly sent out on an assignment, to a city some hundreds of miles away in the late afternoon. I worked on my story until eleven and wrote until two. I had to be up at six the next morning to catch the train back to the office. I could not get a parlor seat and I slept all the way back with my head pillowed on my arm. "Doubtless," I now reflected as I saw myself for the first time in the light of the author's wife's positive judgment, "doubtless all the passengers in the train thought of course I was drunk."

At least half the injustice of the world is not deliberate. It is simply careless. It is the injustice of judgment founded on the basis of prejudice and semi-truths.

People who are asleep on the train are sometimes under the weather. Therefore anyone who is seen asleep on the train is to be adjudged in that condition.

An Injustice That I Always Resented.

As a child nothing made me more indignant than this form of reproof: "How did you break such and such a thing?"

"I didn't break it."

"But it's broken."

True, I was an impetuous young person and frequently did break things but I did not think that was a fair premise on which to base the judgment that anything broken around the house was my doing.

We were talking about canned goods the other day. I am a great believer in a reasonable use of good canned things because they are usually cooked by first class cooks and because they save so much time.

The woman with whom I was talking doesn't believe in them. "My dear," she said, "they're not nourishing."

"What makes you think so?" said I.

The Reason Why She Knew.

"I know so," she answered. "Why, I know two young stenographers who kept a little apartment and they ate almost nothing but canned goods and one of them broke down."

It is a very common falling judgment, this habit of basing one's judgments on semi-truths and prejudices, but remember they are a very wobbly foundation and the judgments built upon them are about as dependable and valuable as the house built on sand.

Telegram to Pope Stopped.

German Authorities Insist Poles Express Loyalty to Kaiser.

Rome, March 29.—Fifteen Polish members of the Prussian Diet tried to send a telegram to the Pope thanking him for his expression of sympathy and sorrow over the death of the Archbishop of Posen, expressing loyalty to the Holy See and declaring that the Polish nation treasures above all else the Pope's sincere affection.

The telegram was stopped by the German military authorities because it omitted to make any reference to the war and the loyalty of the Poles to Germany. Herr Miserski declared that he and his fellow members of Parliament had the right to exclude politics from religious matters. He entrusted a copy to an Italian priest coming to Rome, who delivered it to the Pope.

German Piracy.

Official Statement of the French Government.

The attack on the "Amiral Ganteaume" in October, is a startling proof that there is nothing new, not even the bluff, in the intended German submarine blockade of the English and French coasts, and that the piratical methods of German warfare were in use long before its formal declaration by the German government.

Here is the official report of the French Government of the explosion followed by shipwreck of which the French steamer "Amiral Ganteaume" was a victim and which caused the loss of many lives.

After having caused a minute inquiry to be made by the competent authorities, the Government of the Republic has the honour to place before the Powers the following facts:

On the 26th October, 1914, the French steamer "Amiral Ganteaume" of 5,489 tons, belonging to the French Chargeurs-Reunis Co., left Calais at 2 p.m. bound for La Pallice, after having taken on board 2,500 refugees of both sexes, fleeing from the seat of hostilities. Suddenly, at 4.25 p.m., the vessel being 4 1/2 miles south-west of Cape Gris-Nez, there was a violent explosion on the starboard side between the engine boilers, raising a column of water about 150 feet and covering the ship of debris of all descriptions. Terribly shaken, the vessel listed to port and the water almost immediately invaded the engine room, the boiler room, one bunker and No. 2 hold. Thirty of the crew and refugees were killed by the explosion and it is only thanks to prompt assistance, rapidly obtained in such frequented waters, that the greater part of those aboard were happily saved. The hull of the vessel was towed to Boulogne where she was immediately inspected.

From the inspection and the enquiry held, it was shown that the "Amiral Ganteaume" had been treacherously attacked by a German submarine. On the one hand, the look out, staman Amirand, and the cadet, engineer Heblot, saw the one torpedo, and the other the periscope. On the other hand pieces of the torpedo itself were recovered, sufficient to testify that an automobile torpedo of German construction had been used. The inscriptions in German "Ander unten" and "Sperring y" were still plainly legible.

The attack on the vessel and her passengers was accomplished by the warship of the Imperial German

Navy: 1st. Without daring to show her colors; 2nd. Without warning, arrest or summons; 3rd. On a defenceless Merchant Ship carrying women and children and old men; 4th. Without any naval or military strategic utility and without any other possible result than the murder of inoffensive persons, and the destruction of a merchant ship without attempt at capture and outside of any ultimate reference to the procedure of a prize court and condemnation as a prize.

If, outside of written law, it is a recognized principle of maritime law that the merchant ships of an enemy are liable to capture, if it is admitted that captured enemy merchant ships may be destroyed on condition that safety be afforded to the crew, passengers and ship's papers, and under reservation of the ultimate decision of a Prize Court, never, even during the most barbarous epochs of naval history has any navy sullied its flag by a crime like that of the Imperial German Navy, which has not even the pretext of gain by an act of piracy.

Such outrages are not even worthy of protest. The Government of the Republic, however, believes that it is acting in the common interests of the civilized world in bringing the knowledge of these facts publicly before other Governments, which, like itself, have received this declaration solemnly made before all the Powers: "The Officers of the German Navy, I say it for all to hear, will 'always observe' in the strictest manner the duties which are incumbent under the 'unwritten laws of humanity and civilization.' Newfoundland Poultry Association.

Our readers will notice by our advertising columns to-day that the above Association's President, Geo. W. Gushue, has arranged to offer the general public this year a limited number of hatching eggs from prize winning birds at the Newfoundland Poultry Shows. The members individually only carry small flocks and supply of eggs is limited, but this season it is hoped more of the general public will become interested, and as pure bred fowls pay better than mongrels, it is a chance not often offered in this country. Some of the birds when imported costing $25.00 each, and last week 4 birds were imported that cost eight guineas in England so that nothing but the best is offered for sale. The egg supply of the country should be better developed, and this move of the Association to share its stock up for a small fee to the public is a move in the right direction.

Beautiful Drama of Human Interest.

THE HOUSE ON THE HILL.

The re-opening of the Nickel Theatre yesterday attracted large audiences both afternoon and evening. The attendance for both sessions was one of the largest on record. The Theatre has been thoroughly renovated and is in better condition than ever. The programme opened yesterday with a pretty melo-drama: "The Only Clue." The next picture was in two parts. It is by the Vitagraph Co. and entitled: "The House on the Hill." The story is one which interests all, and it has been pronounced as one of the finest ever given at this popular house.

"Happy Go Lucky" and "A Row Boat Romance" are also amusing. Mr. Cameron whose reputation as a comic singer is well known was heard in one of his best entitled: "When Father Killed The Cock-a-Doode-Do," which brought down the house.

If you are in need of a good laugh attend to-day and hear him. The pictures are also well worth seeing, so all should make an effort to attend.

"Cascarets" Relieve Sick, Sour Stomach

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, dizziness and sick headache, means a disordered stomach, which can not be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

Fundamentals of Permanent Peace.

Editor Evening Telegram: Dear Sir—It may be of interest to your more thoughtful readers to know that the Independent Labour Party in England has put forward certain proposals which they consider fundamental to permanent peace when the present war is over.

It urges: First. That the pursuit of the Balance of Power shall be totally ended, i.e., a federation of all the Powers to take the place of the antagonism of two groups of Powers. Second. That the frontiers of nations shall represent the desire of the peoples instead of the desires of Governments. So long as military conquests determine who shall rule territories, military conflicts will occur. Third. That secret diplomacy shall be abolished and democratic control of foreign affairs established. So long as agreements are made without the knowledge of the people, the people cannot prevent the outbreak of hostilities. The Foreign Policy of Governments must be brought into the arena of public discussion. That is not real democracy where the Foreign Policy is not the peoples business. Fourth. That the manufacture of armaments be taken from private hands and placed under national control. As long as profits accrue from national hatreds, those to whom those profits accrue may be expected to encourage national hatreds. Fifth. That women be welcomed as citizens. Sixth. That national armies and navies be "scrapped."

The time was when the Labour Party was perhaps extreme and utopian. But that time is rapidly passing away and it now has within its ranks many of the ablest and sanest writers and men of affairs.

Many thoughtful students of human progress are of the opinion that the reforms urged by that party in English social and industrial life are in the best interests of the Empire and are bound to come. Many of the Church's leaders are urging her to bestir herself lest she once despised Labour Party with its Socialist friends outstrip her in the struggle for the betterment of humanity. The Church and the labouring man need to get closer together. May I advise your readers to watch the Independent Labour Party.

I am, sir, yours, etc., DOUGLAS HEMMEON.

P.S.—Since writing the above I learn that the Social Democratic Party in Germany protested against the laws by which freedom of meeting and publicity are being suppressed and against any schemes of conquest which would prevent the establishment of a lasting peace. The whole party there abstained from the new war-vote of £500,000,000. It is quite probable that a Programme of Peace will be drawn up to be advocated simultaneously in all countries by the Socialist and Labour Parties.—D.H.

At the Institute.

A small but appreciative audience attended the first of the Spring series of entertainments at the Seaman's Institute last night. The programme was under the direction of Mr. H. W. Stirling and consisted of selections by the Glessingers, Mrs. W. C. Job, Misses G. Strang, M. Doyle, S. Johnson, L. Anderson, N. Job, M. Morris, D. Johnson and Mr. F. Ruggles all of whom deserve congratulations. The proceeds will be devoted to the Patriotic Fund.

One Ship's Shots Cost $1,250,000 an Hour

What the Queen Elizabeth Could Shoot Away With All Her Guns Going for Sixty Minutes.

London, March 24.—According to a writer in the War Budget, published to-day, it would cost the Queen Elizabeth, Great Britain's new super-dreadnought, which is working havoc among the forts of the Dardanelles, £250,000 (about $1,250,000) if she were to fight with all her guns at full capacity for one hour.

The Lion, Admiral Beatty's flagship, used up about 75 pounds worth of cordite and shall every time she emptied one of her 13.5 guns at the Blucher in the fight in the North Sea.

NEW WATER PIPES.—By the next New York boat a shipment of new pipe for the extension and improvement of the water service will arrive. The laying of the pipes will afford employment to a large number of workmen.

Evening Gowns at Reduced Prices!

While many of the larger social functions are—on account of the war—conspicuous by their absence this season, there are never-the-less many smaller affairs which take place where a really smart gown is not only admissible, but really necessary.

¶ We are offering a limited number only of Evening and At-home Gowns and Blouses, in combinations of Silk and Net, Satin and Lace, Charmeuse, Ninon, Voile, etc.—in very beautiful designs and in different sizes. These Gowns and Blouses are copies of French and American models, and, owing to the depression in trade, are to be sold at heavy reductions.

¶ This week presents an excellent chance for you to purchase a dainty Evening Gown for the coming Easter festivities at actual cost.
