CHAPTER XLVIII.
"So she has, poor child; I am sure of that. This is one of the evils of life that we must deal with patience. We have done all that is possible. I have telegraphed to London for two experienced nurses—I cannot have Leah always in the sick room—and now we must await the result."

"Does the doctor think there is danger?" asked Sir Basil, with white lips.

The fever runs high, and she is very weak. I hope for Leah's sake, she will spend as much time here as possible. The days will be dreadfully depressing for her, poor child."
"You may rely upon me," said Sir Basil. "Indeed, the difficulty would be for me to keep away. My world is here."

It was indeed a melancholy time.
For many days the shadow of death lay over the household. There were hushed voices, silent footsteps, and fervent prayers for the beautiful young girl who lay quite unconscious of all that passed. Everything that skill and love could suggest was done, for many days the issue was doubtful. It was Leah's first experience of illness or physical suffering and it impressed her greatly.
The house was put under a discipline.
No visitors came; there was no sound heard. Piano, harp, singing—all were tabooed. Leah would have shut out if she could the soothing of the wind and the creaking of the great bare boughs. It was the strange death-like silence that made the place seem so unearthly. Not even the barking of a dog was allowed near the mansion. The poor tortured brain could not endure the least sound. It was a piteous sight to see the fair head tossing restlessly to and fro on the white pillow; it was never still—from one side to the other it turned with unwearying motion; and the muttering—which is perhaps the most awful accompaniment of brain fever—never ceased. None of the sufferer's words were intelligible.
Her utterance was only an inarticulate murmur vague and terrible.
Once or twice, when Leah was with her, she thought she overheard the word "Glen," but she concluded it must have been fancy. It brought no meaning to her, although it was the name of her lover's home.

During those long weeks of weary suffering no man could have been more miserable than Sir Basil. He wandered round the house like a shadow. He could not bear to leave it, nor could he bear to be left alone.
He seemed to spend the greater part of the day in asking but one question from different people: "How is she now?" He grew thin, pale and haggard, years seemed to have fallen on him.

Leah was troubled about him, and warned him to be careful, for he looked as though he were about to have a severe illness himself.

One day, while the general and Sir Basil were walking along the high-road that led to Arley, they met a huge lumbering wagon on its way to the hall. When they drew near to it, they found that it was from the railway. The driver stopped when he saw Sir Arthur, and asked if he was to drive through the park.

"What have you there?" asked the general in wonder.

"Ten packages," answered the burly driver. "Would you like to see the book, Sir Arthur?"

The general looked at it, and found that there were ten packages from Southwood. Then he remembered that, when leaving there, several things in the cottage were packed up, and left at the railway-station to be forwarded to Brentwood—Martin Ray's writing-desk, his favorite books, one or two things that the girls prized, Hettie's music, and what few mementoes remained of the dear dead mother. It occurred to Sir Arthur that any knowledge of the arrival of these things would be hurtful to Hettie; so he tore a leaf from his pocketbook and on it wrote a note to Leah, telling her that the packages were from Southwood and that they had better be put away in some remote corner of the house until Hettie had quite recovered, and the sight of them would not hurt her. He gave directions that the wagon should not go near the hall.

"No one can tell," he said, "what harm the sound might do to Hettie;"
and Basil was struck by his kindly consideration.

Leah read the note and hastened to give the necessary orders. The packages were stowed away in one of the unused rooms of the western wing. One of them, a square packet, attracted Leah's attention. She unfastened the canvas in which it was folded, and found that it was her father's writing-case. Heaven only knew what burning, bitter words had been written on it! How well she remembered the case! How often she had seen her father seated at it, with frowning brows and flashing eyes! It lay open before him on the day that she had left him—the day he had cursed her. She thought of Hettie's words, that the curse must have fallen on her by mistake, and she reflected that it was indeed true that everything had gone wrong with her hapless sister. If Leah could but have known what the desk contained, she would not have looked at it with such careless eyes.

She forgot all about the packages.
Hettie, though weak as a little child, hardly able to see or hear, was out of danger, and the doctors agreed that she had taken the critical turn which leads to health. The terrible strain of anxiety was ended, the great mental stress over. Every one in the house breathed more freely.
During her illness Hettie had endeared herself to all. Her sweetness and patience, the severity of her sufferings, her thought for others, her loving gratitude, were things to be remembered; and, when it seemed certain that she would not die of this terrible fever, the rejoicing was great.

Once more the cheerful sound of merry voices was heard. Hettie, half amused, half alarmed at her own feebleness, slowly traced the path that leads from sickness to health. It would be some weeks yet, the doctor said, before she could be taken downstairs or allowed to see anyone—even the general. It was five weeks since the evening when she had cried out to Sir Basil that she could not bear her pain, and the overwrought brain had suddenly given way; it would be some weeks more before she saw him again. When she was strong, when her brain was clear, and she could think without a hundred fancies weaving themselves in her thoughts, she would make up her mind with regard to the future.

CHAPTER XLIX.
"What shall I do to rouse her?"
said Leah to herself, one morning, after her usual conversation with the doctor. "She is sweet-tempered, loving, and grateful; but she seems to have lost all desire to live."

Suddenly Leah bethought herself of the packages from Southwood.
Surely among them she would find something that, by memory or association, would startle her mind into activity.

Leah went to the unused room in the western wing where the packages lay, and the writing-case was the first thing that caught her attention. It was probable there would be among her father's papers something which would remind Hettie of her old home and rouse her into a more active state of mind. She opened the case and found it filled with documents.
Martin Ray had evidently arranged it before his death. There, all yellow with age, the thin edges all worn folding, were her mother's love-letters, written many years before! They were tied with blue ribbon, and with them were fastened flowers that had soon died. He had loved her fair young mother well to have preserved these with such loving care. She would not open them; they were sacred to her, these letters written by the hand so long dead. She kissed them with reverence, wondering as she did so whether, if she died young, Basil would keep her love-letters.

She found certificates of her parent's marriage, of her mother's death and of her birth and Hettie's. She found a life insurance policy for one hundred pounds, which had evidently been intended for Hettie. There were numerous other papers—invitations to political meetings, reviews of her father's books, articles written in his favor, and articles that held him up to ridicule and contempt. She found some letters which she placed aside for destruction—letters the contents of which she well knew and shuddered to remember. There were account books showing how Martin Ray had spent the people's money; she turned from them with loathing. Ah, what was this? A letter in a square envelope, on which was written,

"For my daughter Leah, written now that I know I am dying, to be sent or given to her after my death." She looked at it again, mistrusting her eyes while she read the words.

A letter from her father, written when he knew that he was dying!
How was it that it had never been given to her? Plainly no one had known anything about it. He had written it, meaning, without doubt, to give it to Hettie, had put it in his desk, and had either forgotten it or his sudden relapse into danger had put it out of his mind. She recognized the bold, free hand-writing that had been so characteristic of Martin Ray. She never doubted but that it would be a loving letter, written to take from her the horrible curse which had preyed so heavily on her mind. She put it into the pocket of her dress; she would read it when she had finished her search. She would be all the happier if that letter were a kind and loving one. It had been a sore trouble to her that she had reached her father's side too late, and that he had died calling for her, and she was not there.

A few minutes later she had gone back to Hettie's room, with many little mementoes of home that she thought would interest her. Then a visitor arrived, one of the ladies of the neighborhood, to make special inquiries after Hettie. Leah went to the drawing-room to receive her, and found that the general and the young baronet had driven over to Glen. She was slightly disappointed. She would have enjoyed a few minutes with Sir Basil;
it was her one source of pleasure when she could leave Hettie. She entertained her visitor, Lady Drake, with all the charm of manner natural to her. Then, when she left, more charmed than ever with the beautiful chateaufort of Brentwood, Leah remembered the letter.

107 THE PRINCE

An Old Montreal Crook.

"RASOR" FENTON, A FORMER
PICKPOCKET NOW A RE-FORMER.

One of the best known crooks in Montreal twenty years ago was Robert W. (Razor) Fenton. He was of a trio of brothers who were "known to the police." "Razor" appeared in the Court of King's Bench for sentences more than once and was sent to penitentiary for picking pockets, for that was his trade, and he was exceedingly proficient at it. On one occasion he was charged with picking the pocket of a well-known Outremont farmer of several thousands of dollars, the proceeds of a sale of land in what is now a thickly populated part of Outremont.
He was tried and convicted and given a long term. It was a sad scene in the court, for the convicted man plainly showed his distress. He was not deserted, however, for his relatives, women folk, supported by friends, came up to the prisoner's dock and kissed him good-bye. Then he stepped back to be taken to prison for a number of years. He was a youth then, but the terrible lesson was impressed and he kept on getting into trouble in cities all over America.

Years of hard living began to pall on "Razor" in time, however, and he came at last to realize that the way of the transgressor is hard. The picking might seem easy, but there was always the sequel, which was frequen-ly a trip to jail or penitentiary.

"Razor" Fenton has reformed after all these years and is now a preacher in the United States. He is telling young men that it is both foolish and unprofitable to follow the crooked path. The game is not worth the candle. He should know.

Fenton in an interesting interview in the New York American, gives his views on crime and relates some of his exploits, in Montreal, especially.
The present King of England unwillingly permitted him to pull off a big con in Montreal, he says. When the King was the Duke of York he was on a visit to Montreal in 1901. The newspapers were full of stories about the great receptions planned for the visitor. Fenton says he went to Quebec to get a line on things. When he and his companions returned to Montreal they decided to visit a bank and steal a victim. It did not take long to find one. The man who was selected was known by the crooks to carry plenty of cash in his business. Fenton and his partners took up the trail. A reception to the Duke was scheduled that day. While the royal visitor rode by in his carriage there was a slowing up and the man with the wad, a prominent citizen, managed to exchange compliments with the Duke. That was the crooks' opportunity for while the two were conversing, the rich citizen's pocket was picked. Fenton said he robbed him of $10,000. It was so easy he says, it was a shame to do it.

That was a big haul, but it was only one of the many made by the expert in his career. Fenton says it was his custom to travel south with the vacationists in the winter, and return with them in the spring. In the summer the biggest seaside resorts were worked. The crooks always followed the money around. They made those who could afford it pay for their vacations.
Fenton and his pals were the big fellows in the game. But even at that he had nothing to show for it.

Fenton estimates that during his crook career he made more than $200,000. His biggest single job netted him $20,000, and his second best, $10,000. The latter was the Montreal touch.

Where did all this ill-gotten wealth go? Much of it was squandered, a lot spent in travelling about and looking for victims; and a fortune went in lawyer's fees and expenses while under arrest. Easy come, easy go.

"Then there was the great underworld to help support the saloon-keepers, the cigar stores, the cabarets, and the like, because that is the game of the underworld, and if you are a member of it, you play the game that way. All this kept me broke. Those people got the money I stole. I didn't get the worth-while thing out of it."

So that is why "Razor" Fenton reformed and started to earn an honest and sure living. The famous Montreal pickpocket is making amends and warning others to avoid the path he once trod. He is a preacher now—

May Upset Terms of Treaty.

Collins-De Valera Agreement Regarded With Alarm---Bulgaria Has Dictatorship of Peasants---Foreigners Warned of Interference---Ulster Cabinet Ministers go to London.

STRIKES AT TREATY.

LONDON, May 31. Winston Churchill, Secretary for the Colonies, asserted in the House of Commons that the agreement reached between the political factions in Southern Ireland last Saturday strikes directly at the provisions of the Anglo-Irish Treaty. Mr. Churchill in beginning his statement on the Irish situation, which he had promised for to-day, said this would only be a statement ad interim. No one disputed the Secretary, that the wish of the Irish people was for a reconciliation which would give Ireland her freedom, her place in the world and hope of final unity. Up to ten days ago the leaders of the Provisional Government had appeared to be resolved to march steadily forward through a free election and put down, if necessary by force, all armed persons who tried to prevent them. The agreement between Michael Collins and Eamonn De Valera, however, struck directly at the provisions of the treaty, Mr. Churchill declared. He did not believe the members of the Provisional Government were acting in bad faith or hand in glove with their Republican opponents. He was convinced of their earnest desire and resolution to carry out the treaty even though they may have not taken the wisest or strongest course. The consequences of the agreement, Mr. Churchill said, were very serious and it seemed probable the Irish people would not be able to give free expression to their views. Secretary Churchill, in the debate following his statement, reiterated that Great Britain would not tolerate the establishment of a Republic in Ireland. He said the British troops remaining in Dublin were military security and were awaiting eventualities. In the event that a Republic was set up it was the intention of the British Government to hold Dublin as one of the preliminary and essential steps of military operations. Mr. Churchill admitted that the disturbances in Ulster had played a part in making the position of the Provisional Government difficult by exasperating the Catholic majority in the South. De Valera had been aware of this and one of his surest means of striking against the Provisional Government and the Treaty had been the exciting of outrages in Ulster and so provoking a counteraction which would raise the passions of the south, said Mr. Churchill. Former Premier Asquith said Mr. Churchill's picture was disquieting and he counselled patience and forbearance. Captain Charles Craig, of Ulster, demanded that the Government take measures to put things right on the frontier, adding that Ulster's anger was rising and the breaking point will come sooner or later. After Mr. Churchill's speech, Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins said the Colonial Secretary had made a perfectly fair presentation of the situation.

PEASANT DICTATORSHIP IN BULGARIA.

SOPIA, Bulgaria, May 31. A warning to the Bulgarian Bourgeoisie that rule by the peasantry is now an actuality, was given by peasant Premier Stamboullieff in an address before the peasants' congress. "We are now able to do what we will," he said. "Let foreigners not mix in with affairs. We will pay our war reparations if forced to, but we will force those amongst us who brought on the war to do the paying." Members of the Bourgeoisie Party, fearing dictatorship of the Farmers' Party, attempting to export their valuables and many have been caught and jailed. The Premier proposed that only working women earning their living should be given the vote.

OTTAWA, May 31. The Royal Naval College of Canada at Esquimault will be closed in June and will not re-open in September. There will be no naval cadetship examinations this year.

DID NOT ISSUE LEAFLET.

LONDON, May 31. The Provisional Irish Free State Government did not, as charged, issue a leaflet urging Irish voters to support Treaty candidates in the coming election on the ground that they could thus secure a Republic "through the safe short road of the Treaty." This assurance has been received by Winston Churchill, he informed a questioner in the House of Commons this morning.

CRAIG GOES TO LONDON.

He said they were going on the distinct understanding they would not meet the Dublin representatives.

Henry VIII. Did Not Start Anglican Church.

WAS IN EXISTENCE CENTURIES BEFORE THIS MONARCH REIGNED.

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (A.P. Mail).—A committee of Ave Episcopal clergy and laymen to urge that public school pupils in New York City be not instructed that Henry VIII started the Church of England has been appointed by the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Long Island. The committee was instructed to put its plea before the superintendent of schools, the board of education, and the committee on revision of history text books. The convention held that there was confusion in the minds of pupils between the start of the Christian Church in England, which they said was in the fourth century, and the split between the Church of Rome and the Church of England at the time of Henry VIII. Rev. Frederick Stevens of St. Mark's in Brooklyn, who introduced the resolution which resulted in the committee said: "I recently asked a confirmation class of fifteen, 'who started the Church of England?' Five of them, all public school pupils, replied: 'Henry VIII.' 'The Church of England was started, probably about 310 A. D., by disciples who followed the teachings of St. Paul.'"

Turks Continuing Barbarities.

LONDON, May 31. Acts of great barbarity are still being committed by the Turks against the Greeks in the Trebizond District, in Asia Minor. Cecil Harmsworth gave independent witnesses who had just left Trebizond as authority for the statement. He said it was reported that little boys were collected in compounds and there allowed to starve to death. The British Government was doing all in its power to accelerate the dispatch of the proposed commission of inquiry, but so further action could be taken until a reply was received to the invitation extended to the United States Government. The United States reply, he said, was expected to-day or to-morrow.

When Was It Stopped?

BELFAST, May 31. Firing was resumed here last night and two girls were wounded.

The Glorious 1st of June.

Two notable and important British sea fights took place on the same day of the month, but in different years. One in 1784, and the other in 1813. The first was fought in the North Atlantic against the French fleet, the latter being defeated, but so shattered were the British by the gallantry of their opponents that they were unable to capture the convoy. The second action was contested off Boston, U.S. between the American warship "Chesapeake" and H.M.S. "Shannon." The "Chesapeake" was superior to the "Shannon" in size, armament, and number of crew, and on receiving the challenge she came out of harbour and stood out to sea, luffed up close to the "Shannon," and poured in an opening broadside, which the "Shannon" met with terrible effect. In fifteen minutes the whole affair was over. Thousands of spectators on the shore near Boston witnessed the fight, and when the smoke cleared away, the "Chesapeake" was seen with her ensign down and the Union Jack floating in its place. Seventy-seven officers and men lay dead on her deck, and a hundred more were wounded. The "Shannon" had lost twenty-three dead, with fifty-two wounded, including the commander, Captain Brooke.

Tarvia Prevents Dust; Tarvia Preserves Roads.

In the United States and Canada Tarvia is the standard by which all other road-binders and preservatives are judged. Tarvia is made in three grades—"Tarvia A" for road construction, "Tarvia B" for preservation of road surface and "Tarvia K-P" for repaving roads. Both "Tarvia B" and "Tarvia K-P" have been used in St. John's Municipal works for several years. "Tarvia B" actually enters the road surface, acts as a cement and resists the tear and wear of traffic. By cementing together the dust particles "Tarvia B" prevents the formation of dust. After the application of "Tarvia B" to a road surface a thin layer of sand should be applied to take care of the excess liquid, and to prevent Automobiles from slipping and skidding. Broken stone is not as satisfactory or as economical as sand for this purpose.

After being treated with "Tarvia B" a road becomes muddy in rainy weather, but sheds the water and dries off quickly after the rain, leaving the road in admirable condition while untreated roads are still deep with mud. "Tarvia B" surfacing should be applied annually but only when roads are in good condition and free from surplus dust. All holes and depressions should be repaired with fine broken stone and "Tarvia K-P".

When "Tarvia B" is applied by mechanical sprinker, care should be taken to have men with brooms and hand sprinklers go over the ground so that excess "Tarvia B" may be brushed out and not allowed to run waste and so that bare spots be treated and the entire road surface sealed.

A loose, "happy-go-lucky" application is sheer waste of time and money, "whatever is worth doing, is worth doing well."

"Tarvia B" is admirably adapted to the treatment of sidewalks and walks in parks, hospital grounds and cemeteries. Wooden planking of bridges will last longer if treated with "Tarvia B". Fence posts, sills and houses etc., will be greatly benefited by treatment with "Tarvia B". Further particulars will be gladly given upon application to COLIN CAMPBELL, LTD. may2,ood.1f Tales of the Turf.

ABOUT A DREAM TIP—AND A BET KING EDWARD FORGOT.

Don't trust racing "tips" that you get in your dreams!

That's the moral of this little story, told by Major Harding Cox, who, the night before the Jubilee Stakes one year, dreamt that a horse named Euclid (No. 9 on the card) had won. Next day, on arriving at Waterloo Station, on the way to Kempton, he bought and scanned a race card with feverish haste. There was a horse named Euclid, and its number was 9. He backed it, and won a "pot" of money.

All his friends knew of this, and jokingly told him, when the eve of the Duke of York's race came round, to go to bed and try to dream again! He did. And in the dream a voice said: "Do as you did before."

Dream Let Him Down! This was not very clear. Did it mean that he was again to back Euclid, who was also running in this race; or did it mean that he was to back No. 9 on the card, which was a horse called Miss Dollar.

Eventually he decided to back Euclid.

Miss Dollar won—at 100 to 1. The above story is told by Major Cox in his newly-published "Chasing and Racing," a book which will appeal to all lovers of sport. Here's another yarn:—

King Edward once won £1,000 on the Derby—and forgot all about it!

It happened while he was Prince of Wales. Three weeks before the race was due to be run His Royal Highness approached Major Harding Cox, and asked him to place a bet for him on a horse called Jeddah.

Mr. Cox did so, securing the excellent price of £1,000 to £80.

Forgotten About the Bets.

Afterwards he laid a similar wager on his own behalf, and a third on behalf of Mrs. Langtry, whose guest he chanced to be at the time.

Jeddah—a rank outsider—won at 100 to 1. But neither the Prince nor Mrs. Langtry remembered the bet; Mr. Cox found them on the conclusion of the race lamenting their lack of foresight. Their faces, however, quickly became wreathed in smiles when he reminded them of their good fortune.

The author raises one very interesting point. It is—there something unlucky about the pronoun "the" as regards the Derby?

No horse with "the" in front of its name has ever won it. The Bard, a hot favourite, was beaten in 1886. The Baron, another greatly-fancied horse, also failed; while The Tetrach, after being heavily backed, went wrong during his training shortly before the race.—Pearson's Weekly.

SHOULD BE A BIG CROP OF WHISKERS IN SACRAMENTO.

Out in Sacramento, Cal., where the inhabitants are celebrating the famous gold discovery of 1849, the City Council on April 27 passed a resolution making it a punishable offence for any male resident of the city to shave or be shaved until the celebration closes on May 28. The object is to have the men resemble as closely as possible the hardy adventurers who poured into the California gold fields in those early days. These strong determined men came from all quarters of the globe. Many of them walked across the continent over untouched prairie and desert and over the Rocky Mountains, where there were only Indian trails. There were no trains in those days. Others from the Atlantic Coast states sailed in schooners down the coast of America from New York, tramped across Panama, and took ship again on the Pacific north to San Francisco, where they resumed their walk. Both by foot and vessel the going was hard and beset with perils from nature and man, yet many overcame all obstacles. All were spurred on by the lure of gold, which has acted as a lodestone to man from the earliest times.

The Forty-niners were whiskers partly because they were in vogue in untamed America and partly because shaving with cold and often alkaline Naiads and Water Beetles Insect Engineers.

It is claimed that the diving bell was invented by a spider. At least we are certain that if it was not actually invented by him it was used by him long before the hydraulic engineers made one for the same purposes.

The diving bell, as is well known, is a cup-shaped body with an open end down, which is let into the water. The air is caught in the bell and keeps the water from rising beyond a certain level from any specified depth and, of course, allowing any one inside to breathe and act as if he were on dry land. The improvement of the diving bell, known as the calson, is a huge pipe that has compartments, into which the air is pumped from above. The spider's bell is filled more in this manner than in the other.

The name given to these little spiders is very appropriate—the naiads, of the family of arachnids. A naiad will build a little house of waterproof silk, held fast by strands fixed to the neighboring blades of grass and stones several feet under water. He completes the entire structure before filling it with air—as if he knew that the air would tend to make it rise to the top, and thus hinder the attaching of the anchors.

The naiad swims down from the surface with bubbles of air and turns them loose in the airy structure. The process is repeated several times until the little house is full of air. Of course, the open end of this house is down, and this has to act also as the entrance to it.

Another peculiar thing about naiads is that they never get wet. They have thousands of small hairs on their bodies which hold and keep the air from being washed off when they enter water, and so the air sticks and water cannot approach.

The water beetle is probably the only other insect engineer. In the naiad's class, it builds a waterproof nest under water, but does not live in it. It merely lays its eggs in the nest, seals it up and leaves.

The mason bee, as its name implies, is a builder of structures of stone and mortar. The nest is attached to almost any solid structure and actually does consist of small stones cemented to-Brairs of Russia Are Dying.

STUDENTS WORK ALL DAY; DO LESSONS AT NIGHT.

LONDON. (Associated Press).—The Soviet Government is really trying to further education in Russia, but because of the lack of supplies and above all the lack of food, "the brains of Russia are dying at present," says E. T. Colton, of Montclair, N.J., who has just returned from Moscow, where he was the Young Men's Christian Association representative on the staff of the American Relief Administration. Mr. Colton's work was confined to investigating conditions among professors and students with a view to affording them A. R. A. relief. This was subsequently given.

"There are more bona fide students in Russia now than there were before the war," Mr. Colton said. "There are many more women students than men even in the mining schools. They are short of all supplies from text books to laboratory instruments. Moreover the professors, most of whom were on the verge of starvation, had no energy left to do research or creative work. Consequently Russian education is not what it was."

PROFESSORS DIE OF STARVATION

It was Mr. Colton who drew up the feeding program for from 7,500 to 10,000 Russian students which the A. R. A. initiated in Moscow, Petrograd and Kazan. It is confined to the two higher classes of university students, a great number of whom are mature men and women, because they abandoned their studies in 1914 to go into war work in some form.

"We chose these," Mr. Colton explained, "because they will get soonest into the productive life of Russia. We couldn't possibly feed all, with our resources." One curious thing about the Russian universities is that most of them now function at night for a great percentage of the students work during the day in order to earn some money. "There have been many famine deaths among professors and students," Mr. Colton declared. "There will probably be many more, because there can be no question but that as a class they are suffering greatly. For the professors to do creative work under present conditions is out of the question. The miracle is that they can work at all, and unless help comes to them quickly, the best brains of Russia will die for lack of food."

Courtship Pays Dividends.

Ask twenty shoppers why they dislike to trade at this, that or the other store and fifteen of them will say, "Because I don't get courteous attention there."

Courtesy doesn't cost a cent, but it will pass current everywhere in exchange for real money.

What is courtesy? Courtesy is the art of doing and saying the right thing at the right time in the right way.

Real courtesy springs from an honest and earnest desire to be kind, polite and helpful.

It is possible to develop a veneer that may, for a time, pass for courtesy, but, like other counterfeits, it will neither last long nor go far.

Courtesy is the business man's most valuable asset, because it builds good will and good will builds business.

Courtesy has its refer on character, for it is impossible to com-hend how a thoroughly courteous person can fail to grow day by day in the graces that make for higher and better living.—The Optimist.

"MAJESTIC"

YOU WILL REMEMBER and not want to forget

An unusual tale of an unusual chorus girl.
Where maternal love shines brighter than the white lights.
Her choice was the one the magnate least expected.
Showing how a marriage certificate became a mere scrap of paper.
In which a large check has no value—when offered for a baby.
A thrilling mixture of high life and wild life.
Wherein the bonds that bind grow tighter as they loosen.
Again a chorus girl proves that "you never can tell."
It was the weak voice of the stronger call that the angry girl heard.

Light Travelled 186,000 Miles a Second

The record long distance for stellar objects is held at present by a faint globular star cluster in Delphinus which is 220,000 light years from the earth. This cluster is known only by its catalogue number of N. G. C. 7066. When the human race was still in its infancy the light rays from this cluster that are now entering our telescopes started on their long journey through the universe at the speed of 186,000 miles a second. While these rays have been traveling toward the earth the sun with its planets has also been journeying onward at the rate of about 1,000,000 miles a day and has covered a distance of 14 light years. Every 15,750 years the sun covers a distance of one light year, which is equal to about a trillion miles. The nearest star, Alpha Centauri, is four and one-third light years away, and the brightest star, Sirius, is 3 1/2 light years from the earth. So our solar system has traveled a distance greater than that which separates us from the nearest stars while the light from this cluster has been speeding toward us.

The method of measuring the distances and diameters of the globular star clusters was developed by Dr. Harlow Shapley, formerly of the Mount Wilson observatory, now director of the Harvard College observatory. Dr. Shapley has made a detailed study of practically all of the known globular clusters, about 70 in number. The results of his investigations show that all of these clusters are at enormous distances from the earth. Even the nearest, Omega Centauri, is more than 22,000 light years away and many of the clusters are nearly as distant as N. G. C. 7066.

Measurements of the distances of the globular clusters are obtained through a determination of the apparent brightness of giant variable stars that exist in all of the clusters. The absolute magnitude or intrinsic brightness of the giant red and giant white variable stars is very accurately known. So, when the apparent brightness of these stars has been found, the distance of the cluster they are in is obtained from a very simple relationship connecting the apparent brightness and the absolute magnitude or intrinsic brightness. In fact, now that the method has been perfected, there is less labor entailed in determining the distance of a globular star cluster many thousand light years away than in finding the distance of the nearest stars by the trigonometric method of direct measurement, and the results are proportionately more accurate. It has been estimated that the errors in the values given for the distances of the globular clusters do not exceed one fifth of the measured distances.

All of the globular clusters consist of thousands of stars, many of which are several hundred times more brilliant than our own sun. Indeed a star no brighter than the sun would be entirely invisible if located in one of these clusters. The diameters of some of the globular clusters are so great that light would take several hundred years to cross them. In the most powerful telescope N. G. C. 7066 appears visually as a nebulous star, but a seven-minute exposure on a fast photographic plate has shown about 200 stars in this cluster that are well within the limit of visibility of the greatest telescopes.—Kansas City Star.

Terry's collection of egyptian or famous personages, or of Mr. Jefferson Kerahan's old china? This list might be indefinitely prolonged, but all these are more or less commonplace, and can be passed over for other collections of a rarer character.

A man living in Australia had a century or so ago had a gruesome collection of human skulls, which he ranged in rows on shelves round his living room. This man had had a first-class education, and was, for his position and surroundings, cultured, and though he knew but little of anatomy, yet human skulls had a strange fascination for him.

How or where he became possessed of them was a mystery, but reports of his having been seen near the churchyard at night were rife, and the authorities regarded him with suspicion, but nothing could ever be proved against him, and he was allowed to live in quietness among his weird collections.

A GRIM COLLECTION.

In a similar vein to the above, a man living in a populous town in the Lancashire cotton district a few years ago had a collection of pieces of rope that had been used in the execution of famous—or rather infamous—criminals. These he neatly ticketed with particulars, and placed in cases in his house, displaying them with pride to his visitors. He made no secret of how he became possessed of them. As is well-known, the ropes used at executions are the property of the hangman, and from this official this ardent collector used to purchase small portions to swell his grim collection.

Of a different type was the collection of a young fellow in Birmingham some 45 years ago, who had a passion, almost a mania, for collecting portions of the clothing of mistle-hall singers.

He used to show with pride two buttons from the overcoat of George Lebourne, which he wore when he sang "Champagne Charley," and an umbrella, once the property of "Great Vance."

Another gentleman living in North London, who for many years was a Capt. in the Mercantile Marine, was a collector of relics from various wrecks which have taken place round the British coast of recent years, and to glance over his collection is to gain in some measure the history of the great wrecks which have occurred of late, for whether it be a bolt from Nelson's old flagship, Foundry, which was broken up by the storms at Blackpool, or the portion of a hencoop from the Eider, which foundered of the Isle of Wight, it is carefully labelled with full particulars of the vessel and its fate.

Mementoes of the Mohegan, the Paris, and the Stella are all in the collection, the owner of which spares no pains in obtaining them, and the adventures he has had in search of relics to add to his collection would, if published, prove far more interesting than many of the works which have been published during recent years.

Bird Killed.
WORM ESCAPED.
GENEVA, N. Y.—Getting worms cast an early bird its life recently on the Geneva Country Club Course, when a golf ball in a low drive by F. V. Henderson caught a robin as it rose from a tussock with a stubborn angle worm. Killing of the bird in this manner is especially unique, as similar incidents in golf annals record long high drives. The robin was struck in the breast, its feathers scattered for a foot around. A big fat angle worm wriggled speedily to safety as the golfer approached.

Children's Concert.
ENTERTAINMENT IN CLAYTON WOOD HALL.

children of Miss Kathleen education class presented a pretty entertainment in the Wood Hall last night. The program consisted of songs, dances, tableaux vivants, and a concert. The performers were excellent and gave proof not only of their own talent, but also of no small measure of their teacher's training. The costumes were very pretty and added to the effect of the various tableaux. The tableaux from the French Revolution were well arranged, and the audience delighted to see the various especially effective. The playlet

Crusade for Commerce.

The above title may at first glance appear to the reader to be a bit far-fetched. But we think that on second thought it will be found most appropriate, when considered with the subject under discussion, and after all a crusade is an enterprise undertaken with zeal and enthusiasm, so that there is no flamboyance in the selection of the caption "A Crusade for Commerce." For that is actually what the exhibitions of local made goods in the various shop windows really mean, and "Buy Home Made Goods" becomes the battle cry of the Commercial Crusaders. Apt and fit slogan to be in the way of a war of competition with foreign manufactures in an effort to capture the trade and have the business houses purchase locally produced wares and merchandise, when in quality and price they are equal to the imported articles of similar manufacture. The advertising scheme of showing off Newfoundland manufactures in the city shop windows is a good one. Yet there is ample room for extension, and as the outports are larger consumers of the goods so advertised by exhibition, would it not be a good plan to have the wares and products as shown in St. John's similarly exhibited in Brigus, Bay Roberts, Harbor Grace, Carbonear and the other chief trade centres of Conception Bay, for a week, and then have them packed and shipped to places in Trinity, Bonavista and Notre Dame Bays for show purpose and so on continuing throughout the Southern and Western Districts, in order that our people may see for themselves that in the manufacturing line the factories of St. John's are second to none. None of the population, comparatively, have had an opportunity of seeing with their own eyes the very excellent products of local skill and workmanship, and we are therefore of opinion that the Commercial Crusade should not be confined to the capital but should be carried throughout the whole island. The results, we believe, would be surprising. The cost of re-packing and shipping would be infinitesimal compared with the increased business that such would obtain. People—not only in Missouri, but in Newfoundland—want to be shown, and the only way to bring that about is to place the goods and wares of local make in full view of them, for seeing is believing. Article for article, Newfoundland's products of industry are equal to, if not in many cases superior to the imported, and value for value compares most favorably, with the preference invariably to the home made. We commend this suggestion to local manufacturers, and would wish to see them carry on a more intensive advertising campaign in the chief outports, by adopting the method outlined. It is not impossible of accomplishment. Very little effort is required if all work together. Having once taken up this Crusade for Commerce it should be carried on until the local made articles have been seen by as many of the population as they can reach. Thus the slogan "Buy Home Made Goods" will be heard all over the island, and adopted, accepted and acted upon by all classes of purchasers.

PONIES ARRIVED—A shipment of small sized Tumblers, known as "Ponies" has lately arrived in town, and are selling for 75c a half dozen, at STEELES.

Personal.

Mr. James Herder, son of the late Mr. W. J. Herder, who has been pursuing his studies at Picton Academy, returned home by the Rosalind today.
Mr. J. A. Craig, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows (Independent Order) arrived by S.S. Rosalind today on his annual visit to Newfoundland, and will make official calls on all Lodges of the I.O.O.F. in the Colony. A Committee of the local Lodges was present at the steamship pier of the Red Cross Line to meet Bro. Craig, and extended to him a cordial Newfoundland welcome. Bro. Craig is too well known to need any further reference.
Mr. Ronald Ayre arrived on the Sachem. After the war he renewed his studies in Cambridge devoting his attention to Economics. He received his B. A. in 1920. Since then he has been with Jocelyn, Miles and Page, Chartered Accountants, London, and now returns home to enter Ayre and Sons Ltd.

Canadian Postage to Newfoundland.

Considerable irritation is being caused by the addresses in Newfoundland due to the fact that short paid letters from Canada are being taxed double the deficiency of delivery says the Halifax Morning Chronicle, and with much force of truth.
The rate of postage on letters from Canada to Newfoundland is four cents for the first ounce and three cents for each succeeding ounce. Any short paid letters are taxed double the deficiency on delivery. The minimum tax exacted is 6c.
Those who mail letters in Canada to points in Newfoundland should see that a four cent stamp is affixed to the envelope, thus saving their correspondents the irritation and annoyance of being subjected to payment of the short postage tax.

Approve Outright Sales.

LONDON BROKERS UNANIMOUS ON THIS POINT.

"We the undersigned, beg to advise you that we have had a meeting in London, in order to discuss the question of future business, and we have all unanimously come to the conclusion that business on the basis of outright sales will be the best for the interests of the Newfoundland shippers, and we suggest for the coming season for the Italian and Greek markets, that business should only be done on the basis of outright sales and that consignments should be completely done away with." This is the important opening statement in a letter addressed to the Newfoundland Board of Trade and certain local exporters by the London firms of Harrington and White, Rolfe and Co. Ltd., and Holmwood and Holmwood Ltd.
The letter goes on to state that considerable losses were sustained last season, particularly in Italy, through fish being sent on consignment when the selling broker or with a London Bank in the joint names of the Inspector and the selling broker and should be held until the shipment in question has been approved by the buyer. It will therefore be seen that the intention is that the buyers should be asked to pay full cash in exchange for consignments in London. The deposit is raised only as a question of security. Contracts are enclosed with the letter. The writers emphasize the need for co-operation. In the event of the adoption of the proposals contained in the letter, the writers suggest approaching the Italian and Norwegian shippers with a view to getting them to adopt a similar policy. The advantages of the suggestions made are pointed out. When the demand falls off the fish could be kept in Newfoundland far more cheaply and in better condition than if stored in a foreign market. This letter, the first of which we have given above, is causing considerable comment in trade circles. Does it call for more regulations?

Palmistry de Luxe.

GYPSY FORTUNE TELLER MUST LEAVE COUNTRY OR GO TO PRISON—AMUSING INCIDENTS IN COURT.
Considerable amusement was caused in court to-day when a woman named Markovitch was charged with fortune telling. As there is no local law to cover such a charge, the Judge explained that the case would be tried under the English law. A police witness said he had gone in plain clothes to the shop in which accused told fortunes. There was a glaring advertisement on the blind to attract passers by. He went behind a curtain into what witness termed the "fanciest sanctum sanctorum." Accused asked to see his hand and told him he had been born in a lucky month. He would shortly be going on a trip and would meet with success.
His Honour—"Have you had a message from St. Pierre?" (laughter.) Witness said he was told he had not been born here, and that he belonged to a long life family and would live for seventy years. He was then told to put fifty cents in his hand. Accused asked if that were all the money he had. Witness said no and took out another half dollar. In return, he was told that he had two enemies whom he thought were his best friends.
His Honour—"Did she say anything about a dark haired lady?"
Finally, said witness, he was told that if he paid $5 he would be told his luck. Then accused asked him to go out and buy her two yards of silk. If he did this she would tell part of his luck. Another police witness told of a visit to the accused. He had found ladies waiting in the place. Accused told him he had had poor luck but it would improve. He was asked if he would like to have his head read for $2 and when leaving accused told him to be sure and send in someone else.
Accused, sworn, said she only told the past and present. She did not know even her own future. The Judge said the law called for three months imprisonment without the option of a fine. He would suspend sentence and give the accused and her family a week to leave the country. The husband of the accused expostulated in several languages, and still charged away, picked up two large saucers he had with him and clanked out of the court with his spouse and their son.

Newfoundlanders at North Sydney.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING.
A meeting of the executive of the Board of Trade of North Sydney was held recently at the Council Chamber, to consider what action should be taken in connection with the dispute between here and Newfoundland, according to a report in the North Sydney Herald. President Jubien, and nearly all the members of the executive were present, as well as W. H. Hynes, a prominent merchant of St. John's, and several other Newfoundland citizens who have been held up here by the stoppage of the service. A. W. Shano, who had communications from Premier Squires of Newfoundland in connection with the matter, was also present.
Messrs. Hynes and Shano read telegrams they have had from Premier Squires. From those it appeared that the dispute between the Reid Nfld. Co. and the Nfld. Government would come up again before the Legislature, and the government would not take definite action until the whole matter had been laid before the Legislature for debate.
There was a general discussion which resulted in the passing of a resolution moved by W. S. Thompson that President Jubien, Mayor McLean and J. S. Macdonald be a committee to draft and send a telegram to the Minister of Railways, Ottawa, and the Hon. D. D. McKenzie, solicitor-general, urging that the Canadian Government get a steamer from here to St. John's, and bring back the mails and passengers for Canada. Mr. Shano had a telegram from Premier Squires authorizing him to look after the welfare within reasonable limits, of six Newfoundland families who are among those stranded here, and whose funds have given out because of being delayed here at considerable expense.

Pulpwood Sold.

HON. W. F. COAKER ARRIVES—VISITED WEST INDIAN MARKETS—HAS SOLD ALL GOVERNMENT PULP WOOD.

Hon. W. F. Coaker, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, arrived home by the Rosalind this morning, being met at the pier by a large number of friends who had gathered to welcome him from his sojourn abroad. Interviewed by the Telegram Mr. Coaker declared that he had nothing to say concerning political issues as he was not conversant with recent developments. He stated that he had arranged for the sale of all the pulp wood and pit props cut by the Government in the last two years for relief purposes. Mr. Coaker visited most of the West India Islands in the interests of Trade Extension. The markets, he says, are clean of fish and prices are extremely good. Nippon, of the fish trade of the West Indies is being done by Halifax firms, on account of their possession of splendid shipping facilities. While in New York, Mr. Coaker met a group of financial and industrial capitalists and discussed with them the Humber Development Project. American capital is available for the purpose of carrying out the scheme under certain conditions, when the Newfoundland Products Company is ready to talk business. These conditions, said Mr. Coaker, did not include a guarantee of either principal or sinking fund. The Minister looks well after his trip and will probably take his seat in the House this afternoon.

Hop Beer Case.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED.

A postponed charge against a woman for selling overproof hop beer was heard before the Magistrate this morning. Mr. J. G. Higgins, B.A., asked for leniency for accused. The Judge gave her the same option he had given accused in similar cases heard yesterday, of giving up the sale of the beer or paying a fine of $100. Accused took the former course and was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Fight With Pitchforks.

Seven many years ago in a dispute over a sporting dog, a feud between two families named Carriere and Crayasac, in the village of Larrouque, in the Lot Department of France, ended in a fight with pitchforks, in which the head of the Crayasac family was killed. Carriere's son and Crayasac's son had just returned home after completing a period of military training, and in a chance meeting started the old quarrel over the sporting dog. Hearing the argument, their fathers rushed up, and all four seizing pitchforks joined in a battle. The struggle was terrible, and it was not until the elder Crayasac fell dead with his head pierced by a pitchfork that the others, terrified, stopped fighting.

Have You Seen Them?

During the past week quite an interest has been excited by the many attractive and practical displays of NEWFOUNDLAND MADE products at present on exhibition in the windows of the Water Street Stores.

It is indeed an eye opener and an education to pass down Water Street and view the variety of products which are being manufactured by local concerns—products which really stand the test of workmanship and quality, in comparison with any foreign made article.

Our local manufacturers are alive to their interests and are making every effort to meet the most exacting demands of the public, and deserve the whole hearted support of every Newfoundland.

Magnificent displays of Fancy Biscuits, Pastry and Bread are being made by G. Browning & Sons and McGuire's Bakery. For Aerated Drinks none are superior to those exhibited by the British Aerated Water Co., the Royal Aerated Water Co., and Gaden's. "You hit the nail on the head" when you say the display of local products is the best of the NEWFOUNDLAND MADE article. The Horwood Lumber Co. display is the acme of perfection in artistic wood-working designs, and serviceable brushes. In the Newfoundland Knitting Mills display we find everything in knitted goods to meet the requirements of the most exacting. It is a treat to see the excellent materials turned out by the Riverside Wool Mills. Last, but not least, for smoke comfort and satisfaction, the display of the Imperial Tobacco Co., (Nfld.) Ltd. in their Premium Department window, will appeal to every lover of the weed.

Every citizen realizes that the most practical way to help relieve the unemployment situation is to keep our local factories running at full speed, and this can be very easily accomplished if every man and woman insists on getting NEWFOUNDLAND MADE GOODS.

GOODS MADE AND SOLD IN NEWFOUNDLAND BY NEWFOUNDLANDERS MEANS PROSPERITY FOR NEWFOUNDLAND.—jnel,11

WEDDING CAKES. STEWART'S FANCY BAKERY. WEDDING CAKES.

STEWART'S FANCY BAKERY.

The Wedding Cake in the Marriage Ceremony occupies a central and altogether unique position and is rightly considered indispensable to the success of the function. It is peculiarly the Bride's Cake, and is an object of thoughtful care and concern. It must not only be ample in quantity and of the best quality, but also from an artistic point of view, worthy the occasion.

STEWART'S FANCY BAKERY do not hesitate to claim for their Wedding Cakes a position unequalled for quality, artistic finish and good value. The materials used are the finest, and the workmanship is such as ensures complete satisfaction.

It is to be understood that no matter what size cake may be ordered the quality of the materials used is the same.

TRADE REVIEW CHANGES HANDS

The Trade Review and other assets of The Trade Review Publishing Co. have been acquired by a new concern known as The Trade Printers and Publishers, Ltd., of which Mr. B. H. Stafford is president and Mr. D. H. Thistle secretary-treasurer. A little while ago The Trade Review Publishing Co. made a sale to Mr. Thistle who, after negotiations with Mr. Stafford's concern, decided on an amalgamation and The Trade Printers and Publishers, Ltd. will continue the publication of The Trade Review as a strictly non-partisan paper, devoted to local commercial interests, while the plant will, as formerly, continue to cater to the job printing needs of the trade and others. We understand that the new owners intend to make such improvements to the building and such additions to the plant as are desirable in the interests of quick and satisfactory job printing service.

Lecture and Concert.

STAR OF THE SEA ENTERTAINMENT.

"Padraig Pearce, first President of the Irish Republic," was the subject of an interesting lecture delivered by Mr. James A. Gibbs in the Star of the Sea Hall last night. Several songs and dances were rendered during the evening. The performers were Misses Howlett and Krentalin, Messrs. Dobbin, Brown and Dillon, and boys from Mount Cashel. The lecture proved most interesting and Mr. Gibbs showed himself to be fully conversant with his subject. The political philosophy of De Valera was founded upon a careful study of the life and thought of Pearce. During the Easter revolution of 1916, Pearce threw himself fiercely into the movement and became President of the Republic. A vote of thanks to the lecturer was proposed by J. T. Martin, seconded by W. F. Graham and spoken to by G. F. Power and J. G. Higgins, B.A. It was accorded unanimously.

Red Lions Meet.

BASEBALLERS ELECT OFFICERS.

The Red Lion Baseball team held their annual meeting in the R.N.C.'s freight office last night. Mr. J. H. Fulmore presided. Considerable enthusiasm was evidenced and the team intends to do its utmost to carry off the coveted trophy. The officers elected for this season are:

President—Mr. Robin Reid.
Vice-President—Mr. J. H. Fulmore.
Secretary—Mr. James Jacobs.
Manager—Mr. D. P. Duff.
Captain—Mr. C. Quirk.
Sub-Captain—Mr. W. Callahan.
Messrs. Hillis, Callahan and Munn were appointed League Delegates. Mr. R. G. Reid was elected Honorary Vice-President.

Personal.

Mr. R. F. Goodridge, who has been spending several months in England, returned by the Sackham.

Mrs. J. E. J. Fox arrived last night from England on a visit to her parents Dr. N. S. and Mrs. Frazer.

Mr. G. J. Carter arrived from England on the Sackham.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Blackburn and Miss Blackburn are here on a visit from England.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Duff and Miss N. and Master C. Duff returned by the Sackham from a tour of the Continent.

Major A. H. Atkins, a director of the firm of Wm. Heap and Co., whose local agent is Mr. F. W. Angel, arrived from England last night.

Rev. J. M. Jor. P. P. of Port au Port, returned last night from a visit to Rome.

Mr. H. M. Garland, son of W. J. Garland, of Lower Island Cove, B.D.V., is in town on business and for the purpose of consulting an eye specialist.

Tragic End of a Painter.

On Tuesday, June 1, 1841, Sir David Wilkie, one of Britain's celebrated painters, died on board the Oriental, in Gibraltar Bay. Queen Victoria had honored him by sitting for his first splendid picture of Her Majesty's "First Council," and he had gone to Constantinople by her orders to paint a portrait of the Sultan of Turkey. But during his return in this vessel, after it had touched at Malta and at Gibraltar, he was taken suddenly ill and expired, at 56 years of age. The Governor of Gibraltar could not allow the corpse to be brought on shore, and it was therefore committed to a watery grave. Some who use the Church of England prayer Book may never have noticed that it provides for such cases. Sir David Wilkie was a Scotsman. Born near Cupar, in Fifeshire, in 1785, son of a minister of its established church, but like many of his countrymen, he came to England in 1805, and while for health's sake visiting Italy and Spain, he studied there the art in which, previously and afterwards, he was so distinguished.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

WHO DOES IT!

Strange as it may seem to you considering the confidence with which I address you on all kinds of subjects, there are really some things I do not understand.

And this is one of them.

Who are the people who go and repeat to a person what another person says about them, and how they can do it.

I wrote the other day of friends who are lost because something one has said about them is repeated to them.

A Few Premature Angels.

Now, I can understand how anyone might be very fond of a friend and yet in a moment of temptation say something a little too witty, a shade too sharp about him or her. There may be a few premature angels who could say they never (not hardly ever) do that. But what I cannot get through my head is how anyone can be mean enough to deliberately repeat those things to a person of whom they were said. Of course such things travel. That's inevitable. We all like to talk about other people. And what they think of themselves and what we think of them and what other people think of them, etc.

But what kind of a person is it who supplies the final link in the chain that carries the words back to the person of whom they were said? And how does he go about it. (Or perhaps I should say "she".) I suspect the fact that a husband is supposed to be the last one to hear about his wife's clandestine affair and a wife the first to hear of her husband's is a straw that shows I should use the feminine pronoun in this connection).

How Does She Do It!

And then I want to know how she goes about it.

Does she step up to the person involved and say, "I must tell you the funny thing your friend, Grace, said about you. She said: 'Lita's getting so fat I'm never sure when I see her coming whether it's just Lita, or whether there's someone with her.'"

Or "Amy says she thinks it's a perfect scream to see you try to act kiltish. She says she thought you had more brains than to do that sort of thing even if you were interested in a man." (Not that Amy really said anything as bad as that. That is supposed to represent the remark after it has passed through a dozen mouths).

She Let's You Dig.

No, it doesn't seem possible anyone could be as crude as that. I suppose what she really does is this. In a confidential moment she hints that she knows something that you would like to know and then gradually permits you to dig it out by her with many protestations that she ought not, and that she knows it will hurt your feelings, and she just wants to warn you not to trust so-and-so too much, etc., etc.

To be the kind of person who is perfectly loyal to one's friends and never says anything about them behind their backs that one would not be willing to say to their faces is a fairly big order.

But to be the kind of person to whom anyone can, with safety, say something about anyone else without any fear of your carrying it back to the person involved seems to me the A. B. C. of plain decency.

Copper Men Think Problem of Ages Solved.

Fighting fires in mines is a slow, tedious job and since the dawn of mining has been considered almost a hopeless undertaking. Rich mines in many parts of the world have been burning for generations, their stores of wealth being guarded from the hands of man by a barrier of deadly gasses and rock walls white with heat.

But underground fires no longer are to be considered unquenchable, as in the Butte district, a process of fire fighting has been developed by the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, which is salvaging an ore body of tremendous extent. Fires that have been burning for 15 years in three connecting mines are being smothered under a million tons of mud.

By the end of 1922 2,000,000 tons of metalliferous ore, containing, according to expert estimates, at least 80,000 tons of copper, once more will be accessible.

A great part of this store of wealth already has come within the reach of the miners and not only that, but a large area which heretofore has been inaccessible because of poisonous gasses, now is being worked.

The process of lighting the subterranean fires as developed is not complicated. It is an adaptation of an idea evolved in 1884 by fire-fighters at a coal mine in the Schuylkill region of Pennsylvania. Sand, decomposed rock and other materials which were discarded as tailings in the process of copper extractions, simply have been turned back into the fire area. Water, which in many cases has proved its uselessness as an extinguisher of underground fires, is used for transportation. It conveys the tailings in the form of silt down to the fire regions, 1200 to 2500 feet underground, where the soup-like slime fills the abandoned drifts, crosscuts and stopes and literally smothers the fire.

Belgian Traitor to Die.

The Belgian Court of Appeals has denied new trial to Armand Jeannes, a Belgian, who is under sentence of death for acting as a German spy during the war. Jeannes will now be put to death. While he was convicted of responsibility for the shooting of many Belgian patriots during the period of German occupation, the prosecutor acknowledged that Jeannes had nothing to do with the betrayal of Edith Cavell, the English Nurse, who was shot by the Germans. The execution of Jeannes will be the first in Belgium since peace was declared.

For the Benefit His Little Son Obtained.

THIS MAN PRAISES DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. J. H. Mercier pays well earned tribute to Dodd's Kidney Pills as a Family Remedy.

St. Agathis de Lotbiniere, Quebec, May 31st (Special)—Enthusiastic over Dodd's Kidney Pills as a family remedy is Mr. Joseph Henri Mercier, a well known resident here. And Mr. Mercier is always ready to give the reason.

"For four years I used Dodd's Kidney Pills for my family," he says. "I have a little son thirteen years of age who also suffered from his kidneys. I gave him Dodd's Kidney Pills and now he is well."

The kidneys strain all the poison out of the blood. The very nature of their work keeps them constantly in danger. They need almost constant help in order to do their work properly.

Ask your neighbours if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the help weak kidneys are crying for.

THE REAL GARDEN.

He showed me round his garden and the awn was green and sweet, and it was like a rug of velvet, and sprang to the feet:

And the pansy bed was lovely, and the peonies straight and fair—
But there wasn't any laughter of the children ringing there.

The roses stood in order and were beautiful to see,
I heard him sound the praises of a fine old maple tree,
But beneath its spreading branches was no branch that should be bare.

For the swing of happy childhood had not ever dangled there.

There were blossoms rich with color and the gardener named them all But they'd never known the havoc of a little fellow's ball!

There were blossoms of rare perfection which require man's constant care,
But there wasn't any symbol of a youngster playing there.

Now, my lawn is poor and barren and my grass is hard to grow,
And I struggle for existence, for the youngsters tramp it so,
And my garden seems untidy, but I fervently declare
That to me its greatest beauty is the children playing there.

Many women find that their ironing boards become very dusty while not in constant use. To avoid this, make a bag long enough to fold over at the top, and slip the board into it after using.

Act of Heroism.

BUT VAIN SACRIFICE OF LIFE.

An act of heroism that cost him his life was performed by John Murchison of Port Arthur, Ont., when, in attempting to remove an iron gauge from the path of an approaching Canadian Pacific train, he was struck by the locomotive, and hurled down the embankment. When picked up by his fellow-workmen life was extinct. Murchison was one of the section gang working on the right of way about six miles east of here, and was engaged in putting in ties. The signal had been given the train, freight No. 90, in charge of Conductor Connell, to proceed through the path being worked, and it was fully undre way when Murchison noticed that an iron gauge had not been removed from the track. He attempted to beat the train to the danger spot, but was unable to dodge the train before it was upon him.

Young Girl Forced to Model Severed Head.

To a young Swiss girl, Marie Groscholz, fell one of the most gruesome tasks in history, that of modelling in wax the heads of French revolution victims fresh from the guillotine, says the Mentor Magazine.

Marie Groscholz later married Francois Tussaud and moved her collection of waxworks to London, where they may be seen to-day. Among her portraits were those of Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette, Robespierre, Charlotte Corday, Marat and Danton.

Many of the guillotine's victims had been intimate friends of the young woman. Her own death would have been the penalty had she refused the revolutionists' orders. Upon entering the studio one afternoon she found the executioner's basket awaiting her. She withdrew the lid and gazed into the dead eyes of Robespierre, with whom she had dined a few days before.

Giant Salt Mine is 7th Wonder of U.S.

The ancient world has seven wonders. We to-day, if we look about us, can find an equal number within the limits of the United States. Niagara Falls, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, the Yellowstone National Park, the Yosemite Valley, the Cliff Dwellings of the Southwest, the Petrified Forest of Arizona--these will do for six.

The seventh has never been seen, and never will be seen, by anybody, because it is far underground. Nevertheless, it is a first-class marvel. It is the greatest bed of salt in the world, averaging at least 200 feet in thickness and extending over--or perhaps one should say under--an area of 100,000 square miles.

The northern end of this salt bed, in central Kansas, has been known for many years, but not until recently was the fact ascertained that it extends thence in a southerly direction through northwest Oklahoma, northwest Texas and eastern New Mexico. This discovery has been made by numerous borings--not for salt, but for oil, gas and water. This vast bed of salt extends at least 650 miles from north to south and 150 to 250 from east to west. In many parts it is more than 300 feet thick and in some places its thickness exceeds 700 feet. Assuming an average thickness of only 200 feet, the bed must contain at least 30,000 billion tons of salt!

It was formed by the evaporation during long ages of a shallow sea, which in very ancient times covered all that part of the United States. The deposit has great economic value, the salt being easy to mine as it is mined even now in Kansas) by the simple expedient of boring two holes and forcing water down one of them. The water comes up out of the other hole laden with salt, and is evaporated in pans.

It is thought that valuable deposits of potash salts may perhaps be found locally in this great basin of saline accumulation. -- Philadelphia Public Ledger.

When Old Earth Becomes a "Dead One"

The scientific "fellows" have been busy lately with the theory that within the next 20 or 24,000 or 30,000 years the earth will freeze up, and that all forms of life will disappear from it.

And the Bible says that the world will be destroyed by fire.

Looked at either way, and believing the one pronouncement or the other, it seems certain that there will be an end to the earth, at last. The day is sure to come, no matter how far off it be, when this old world will go blithering through space a dead world like the moon.

Well, when that day comes, the earth can at least point to a wonderful record. It will have the memory of countless ages of joys and sorrows, of miraculous achievements, of love and strife, of tears and laughter to carry with it.

Looking down from the parapets of heaven there will be an innumerable host who will look with pity and with a loving regret on that once proud earth which shall then be a whirling cinder or a leaping snowball.--Los Angeles Times.

Then Trouble Began.

Never use a hard pencil. This is the advice of a benedict who explains thus: His wife asked him to write a note to a lady friend, asking her to meet a company at their house. He did so, and after he had gone to post the note his wife saw on another sheet of paper an impression of what he had written. It ran as follows:

"Darling Emma, Emma desires your company on Wednesday to meet the Wellers. Don't fail to come, and then, my darling, I shall have the happiness of a long walk home with you and a sweet good-night kiss. I dare not see you often, or my all-consuming love would betray us both. But, Emma dear, don't fail to come."

Household Notes.

Lamp chimneys washed in ammonia water and dried with a soft cloth and polished with tissue paper will shine beautifully.

The addition of a tablespoonful of fruit juice and a half cupful of almonds, blanched and chopped, makes hard sauce delicious.

Never wash black stockings in the water in which white flannels have been washed, or they will come out covered with white fluff.

A delicious fruit salad is made with diced tart apples, celery and coconut, macerated with French dressing and dotted with tart jelly.

Before using canned foods, allow them to stand half an hour after being turned from can. This is done to freshen or reorganize them.

Wholesome candy can be made with puffed rice or wheat. Melt one cupful sugar until it is a golden brown. Pour in the cereal, cool and break.

Serve the correct dessert: With the substantial meat dinner, a fruit or a light pudding; with a vegetable dinner, a rich dessert made with milk and eggs.
