"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER VII.

"Miss Sidney—Miss Sidney dear!" Sidney opened her heavy eyes languidly.

"What is it, Bessie?"

"It seems a pity to wake you, Miss Sidney dear; but, if you want to go by the ten o'clock train, you must get up. It is gone nine now; I have brought you some tea."

Sidney raised herself wearily from her pillows, wondering why her head ached so, and why it required such an effort to rouse herself, until looking rather stupidly round the room, she saw the dress she had worn on the night before thrown upon a chair, the flowers faded and withered upon her table, the little satin shoes upon the floor. She remembered then how long she had lain tossing in her pretty white bed before she had slept, how often she had got up and looked out into the street, where the snow was falling, and how toward dawn, she had fallen asleep from sheer fatigue and weariness.

"Is it snowing still, Bessie?" she asked, as she sat up and took the cup of tea from the hands of the kindly old woman who had been her mother's nurse, and had come to Ashford with Mrs. Arnold, a comely middle-aged woman, who the fair young bride loved and trusted and depended upon, and to whose care she had left her little child.

"Yes, my dear, but not so heavily as it snowed early this morning," Bessie answered. "I am afraid you are very tired, Miss Sidney? Was it a nice ball, dearie?"

"Yes, I think so," Sidney said, drinking her tea thirstily, for her lips were dry and parched.

Bessie glanced at her for a moment as she busied herself about the room, folding the pretty crushed ball-skirts and putting away the little shoes. Usually Sidney awoke after a ball fresh and unwearied and full of merry chatter and pleasant descriptions of the entertainment; but this morning she looked pale and haggard and weary.

"Perhaps you had better rest to-day, Miss Sidney," she suggested, "and not go to Lindhurst until to-morrow?"

"No; Miss Bevis will be expecting me," Sidney answered, slowly. "Will you take the cup, Bessie, and get my bath ready?"

"Your hand is very hot, Miss Sidney," the woman said, gently, as she obeyed. "Are you sure you are well?"

"Quite well, Bessie. Is papa at home?"

"No, Miss Sidney."

"Gone out already?" the young girl

exclaimed, in a tone of disappointment.

"Yes, quite an hour ago."

"Where to, Bessie? Do you know?" Mrs. Sandys hesitated a little.

"I think there was an accident, my dear," she said, keeping her face turned away from the bed. "A man on horseback came, and the doctor went off at once. Will you have a cold bath this morning, Miss Sidney? It is very cold."

"Never mind; the cold water will freshen me up."

Sidney's toilet was usually a very expeditious business; but this morning her movements were so languid and inert that Mrs. Sandys could not help again asking if she was quite well; and the girl herself was almost startled by the white face reflected in her looking-glass.

"You have packed, I suppose, Bessie?"

"Yes, dearie; all is ready for you. Try to make a good breakfast, my dear; it will be so cold traveling."

"Yes," Sidney answered, shivering a little as she stood for a moment at the window looking out into the street, so pure and white, for it had been snowing heavily, and as yet there had not been much movement or many passers by.

"You must not linger, Miss Sidney," Bessie said, hastily. "You have no time to spare."

"Don't fidget, Bessie! If I do not go at ten, there is a train at twelve thirty."

"I think the doctor wished you to go early, Miss Sidney."

Sidney turned quickly.

"Why?"

"I—I—I don't know, dearie; but it soon grows dark now," Mrs. Sandys answered, stammering a little.

"It is only a two hours' journey," Sidney said, laughingly. "But I will hurry, Bessie; still I cannot go without seeing papa."

"I am quite sure the doctor would not like you to miss your train on that account, Miss Sidney," the old woman remarked, hurriedly.

"Are you? Well, I am sure papa would not like me to go without saying good-bye to him," Sidney declared. "What are you thinking of, Bessie?"

"I don't want you to be traveling after dark, dearie," the old woman said, gently. "You are not very strong, and you have your mother's delicate chest, you know."

"You think I have, you dear fussy old thing!" Sidney answered, smiling and shaking her head as she left the room; but, as the door closed upon her, the smile faded, and her face wore a sad and anxious expression as she passed along the long old-fashioned corridor and went down-stairs, a pretty graceful figure in her close-fitting dress of fine dark blue serge.

The fire was blazing up cheerily in the dining-room, and a servant hurried up with hot coffee and eggs; but Sidney did not feel inclined to fulfill Bessie's injunction, and, instead of applying herself to her breakfast, she sat down by the table and glanced round the room.

"Is Dr. Elliot out also?" she asked, as the old man-servant put the dishes near her and took off the covers.

"Yes, Miss Sidney."

"Do you know where he has gone, Benson?"

"He followed the master immediately," Benson said quietly, and, perhaps to avoid further questioning, left the room.

Sidney glanced round her anxiously; something was wrong, she thought, and the servants did not care to tell her even what they knew. What was the mystery? Her father had evidently departed in hot haste, for a pile of letters, some of them unopened, lay beside his plate, the envelope of one partly open, then evidently dropped in haste. Had there been an accident somewhere? Had anything happened last night? She put down her untasted coffee and rose. She could not be still in this state of anxiety and alarm, and she went from the table to the window and from the window back to the table restlessly, endeavoring to put aside her fears, but vainly.

Pushing back her hair from her forehead, she tried to recall the events of the past night. She remembered the angry eager voices in the little sitting-room, the quick, almost imperative words Stephen Daunt had spoken to her when he mistook her for Mrs. Rutledge, the beautiful frightened face which had been raised to his, and his long absence from the hall-room. Sidney's early departure, and Frank's disappearance. What was the meaning of it all?

Bah! How foolish she was. What could have happened? No doubt Mrs. Rutledge had left early, in obedience to her husband's wishes, and Frank, finding the ball tedious after her departure, had left also. And Stephen was always to be beguiled away from the ball-room by the temptation of a cigar. She was getting foolish and imaginative, nervous and fanciful. She would eat her breakfast and start for Lindhurst, where a favorite school-fellow, the daughter of the rector, was looking forward to her visit, and the change would put her all right again.

She drank some coffee, and half mechanically, helped herself to an egg; but there her breakfast ended; although she sat at the table for a few minutes longer. Then, once more rising hastily, she went over to the window, as if oppressed by some intolerable anxiety. It had begun to snow again, although not heavily, and a horseman who was pulling in his horse just outside at the gate of the Gray House was lightly covered with the white flakes. He lifted his hat to Sidney and smiled, and the girl's heart almost ceased to beat in the sudden relief to her over-powering anxiety. The next minute she had turned from the window and put her hand in Stephen Daunt's.

"Well, how are you?" he said cheerily. "I hardly expected to find you down after your dissipation."

"I am going to Lindhurst this morning," Sidney answered, raising her shining eyes to his face, which was calm and serene, as usual, but very pale.

"Yes, so Dr. Arnold told me. I am the bearer of a note to you, Sidney."

"Thank you," Sidney said slowly, taking it from him. "Are you going to the works, Stephen? Have you breakfast?"

"Thank you, yes."

He sauntered across the room while Sidney opened her note. It contained a few lines from her father.

"Do not wait to see me and so miss your train, dear Sidney," wrote the doctor. "I shall probably be detained for some time. Good-bye, little daughter; have a pleasant time, and bring me back some fresh roses."

London Police and Crime Records

The strength of the London police force on December 31, 1924 was 19,356 according to an official report of the commissioner of police, data from which have just been made available through the Foreign Information of Bankers Trust Company of New York.

At the close of the year the force was 1,025 below the authorized maximum. This shortage is attributed to the need for strict economy in the expenditure of public funds. The number of constables, or as we would call them in New York, policemen, available for beats, fixed points, and patrol beats in the metropolis, after providing for the men assigned to traffic duties, station reserves, etcetera, was 9,198, out of a total of 15,350. The commissioner of police states that owing to this reduced strength at his disposal great difficulty had been experienced in carrying on the multifarious duties with which the force is charged, particularly in the suburban areas. He therefore urges the necessity of an increase in the number of men enrolled.

The report states that satisfactory discipline has been maintained and that infractions have, for the great part, been of a minor nature. It is stated that the offense of drunkenness, or drinking on duty, formerly too prevalent, has been almost entirely eradicated; that the policemen found on duty, or the worse for drink, is invariably severely punished.

The commissioner notes the improvement which had taken place in recent years in the social status of the policemen, which he attributes, among other things, to the better rate of remuneration now given for their services. Another contributory cause to the higher grading of the police officer is attributed to the care now taken to provide him with ample facilities for joining in healthy recreation. Improved training and education have also played a very prominent part, and a great deal has been achieved in recent years in the way of arranging sports, pastimes and entertainments to be more fully participated in by the police. Numerous successes in open sports competitions have been secured, and the sectional and inter-divisional competitions have tended to create healthy rivalry.

There are now 50 women police on the London force; namely, 2 inspectors, 5 sergeants and 43 constables.

As to the work of the police, the commissioner observes that there has been a slight increase in the number of crimes committed during 1924, there having been 15,438 indictable offenses during 1924 against 15,333 in 1923. Burglaries and house-breakings show very little variation; there was a noticeable increase in the number of cases of larceny by servants and embezzlement. Taking all classes of larceny together, and including embezzlement, an increase of 70 cases is shown over the figures for last year. Cases of obtaining goods by false pretenses show a substantial decrease. A decrease is also shown in cases of receiving stolen property. There was a decrease in crimes of violence during 1924; 16 cases of murder of persons above one year of age and 12 cases of murder of infants are recorded, as against 27 and 15 respectively in 1923. There was an increase of 10 in the number of cases of manslaughter, but wounding and assault show a decrease of 25 cases.

There were 309 motor vehicles stolen in 1924 and 199 recovered. The number of sets of fingerprints received for search in 1924 was 36,006, of which 15,750 sets were identified as those of persons who had been previously convicted since the introduction of the finger print system in 1901, 217, 948 identifications have been effected.

Cases under the Dangerous Drugs Act show a remarkable decrease; in

New C.H.E. Syllabus

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—The C.H.E. syllabus is always looked for with a certain amount of expectation and dread as the outgoing teacher awaits whatever new burdens may be laid upon him.

Happily the previous syllabuses have been fairly reasonable, but the syllabus recently issued contains some rather discouraging tidings.

In the Primary Grade a knowledge of two abridged books ("The Tale of Sinbad the Sailor") is required, a long novel by Sir W. Scott in addition to regular and solitary Literature Reader of last year.

This hardship is not so great as might at first appear, however, as spelling and grammar sections may offset the Literature handicap. But passing on to Preliminary conditions gives us a greater shock. In order that a Preliminary student may obtain a Pass diploma he must gain 40 p.c. in every subject excepting Geography, History and Geometry, in which he must obtain 30 per cent.

True he may obtain a pass by satisfying the examiner in 6 subjects, but this in the world is the use of a pass when he obtains the diploma of that pass?

My experience—I don't think it is unique—teaches that History, Geography and Geometry are the most difficult subjects in our curriculum, and Geometry has I venture to say the lowest average marks in the C.H.E. Examinations, particularly in Preliminary Grade. If Geometry is to be compulsory the quicker the syllabus for said subject is remodelled the better for all concerned.

No one wishes the C.H.E. diploma to be too easily gained, but the conditions now imposed on Preliminary students are in their way almost as difficult as the conditions for the London Matriculation.

In the Intermediate Grade although 30 p.c. is necessary for a pass, the student is not so heavily handicapped as those in the Preliminary; he is given some kind of foundation on which to build. One should very much like to know if other teachers feel any undue hardships in the above conditions as contained in the 1925 syllabus.

Yours truly,
TEACHER.

Tendered Farewell

On Wednesday afternoon, the 9th inst., at Mount Pleasant Farm, the home of Chas. Simmonds, a farewell party and presentation was tendered Miss Helen Finn, who is leaving shortly for Boston, by her co-workers at London, New York and Paris Association of Fashion, Ltd. The affair, which was a surprise to Miss Finn, was under the capable management of Miss Ida Simmonds, who had prepared a sumptuous supper which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. After the wants of the inner man had been attended to, Miss Hilda Moore, on behalf of the girls, spoke of the regret that was felt at Miss Finn's departure and presented her with a gold signet ring, which she hoped would be a constant reminder of the many pleasant hours spent together and the true friendships made in the store.

Miss Finn replied in a few well chosen words, thanking the girls most sincerely for their good wishes and their thoughtful gift, which would ever remind her of the pleasant hours she had spent amongst them.

After a very enjoyable evening the party ended, with the girls wishing Miss Finn every success and God speed.

French Exports Exceed Imports

Exports from France exceeded imports by 451 million francs during the month of July according to figures compiled by the French customs authorities and transmitted to the Bankers Trust Company of New York by its Foreign Information Service.

Exports for the month were 3,484,373,000 francs and imports were 3,033,549,000 francs. Exports show a decrease of 22,161,000 francs over the month of June but are nearly 500,000,000 francs higher than for July 1924. Imports are 42,306,000 francs higher than in June of this year and roughly 35,000,000 francs lower than in July 1924.

For the first seven months of 1925 France's favorable trade balance amounts to nearly three and a quarter billion francs.

THE SIGN OF THE BIG BOOT.

The Record Shoot of Seven Tigers

THRILLING INCIDENT IN KANARA JUNGLES IN COURSE OF SHOOT.

MAHABLESHWAR, India, Aug.—(By Mail)—After a very disappointing start His Excellency the Governor completed his shoot in Kanara by establishing what is probably a record besides participating in an incident which is undoubtedly unique in the annals of Indian shikar. His Excellency and party arrived at Anavara station on April 19, and motored to Yellapur, meeting the members of the Hallyal Municipal Council on the way. No kills were reported on the 19th and 20th and Mogum beats were accordingly organized, but not an animal was seen. Again on the 22nd, there was no shooting as the Governor on that day motored down to Karwar, where he inspected the Oyster Rock Lighthouse, the Kodli Bag Log Depot, and other features of interest in that town, which with adequate assistance and encouragement promised to be a very large centre in the future. With the return from Karwar the luck of the party changed and within four days the Kanara jungles yielded no fewer than seven tigers, two of which went to His Excellency, two to Mr. M. Webb, the Private Secretary, two to Capt. Figgott, the A. D. C. and one to Mr. Newman, the Conservator of Forests. Of the seven kills by tigers reported, five were village kills and two were "ties."

A Thrilling Experience.
The real thrill of the shoot occurred last Friday. Two kills were reported within three or four miles of one another. The whole party went to the scene of the first kill, and after a long beat and a short follow-up a large wounded tiger was bagged at about four o'clock in the evening. A hurried move was then made to the scene of the second kill, where the party met with a most surprising adventure. The jungle in which the kill took place was an open one and in front of His Excellency's ladder, which was in the middle of the line, stretched a clear space of about 300 yards running down to a nullah, and thence up to a small ridge. Soon after the beat began a herd of bison appeared over the ridge thundering down to the nullah with a tigress galloping at full pelt in front of them. The bison swerved at the nullah and went out of the beat, but the tigress came on as hard as she could go straight for His Excellency's ladder and was bowled over by him like a rabbit within an hour of the last bag.

The shooting party, now back in Mahableshwar, freely admit that these remarkable results could not have been obtained without the assistance of Mr. Edie, the Chief Conservator, and the local Forest Officers, Messrs. Newman, Hiley, Petty, Holmes and Smith. Mr. Edie was for 13 years in the Yellapur Forest Division, and his knowledge of the jungles and acquaintance with the local shikaris is unrivalled. His enthusiasm and thorough local knowledge are most amply supported by the officers now serving in the division, and they placed them most generously at the service of the party.

A Map of Columbus

What is declared to be one of the most interesting bibliographical finds of late is what is supposed to be the map drawn by Columbus himself, which he used on his famous voyage of discovery to the New World. The map is in the National Library of Paris, where it has long been preserved and known to be among the treasures of this wonderful library. It was, however, looked upon merely as a Portuguese map of the 16th Century, and it was not till the historian of the French Navy, Charles de Roncier, stumbled upon a series of interesting facts in connection with it which made it more than probable, that it was the work of Christopher Columbus, and a treasure of almost priceless worth. This "map of Columbus" consists of two portions, on the same sheet, one of which shows the coasts of Europe, Western Asia, and Africa as far as the Congo, whilst the other depicts the world, as it was then known, in the shape of a cross, surrounded by sea. The map of the world is supposed to have been made between 1488 and 1493, and shows the whole of the western coast of Africa, as far as the Cape of Good Hope, which was discovered by Diaz in 1488, though America was unknown till 1493.

World's Poultry Congress Meet in Canada

TORONTO, Sept. 4.—(Can. Press)—The committee of the World's Poultry Congress will meet in this city on Sept. 11, to make final arrangements for the third meeting of the World's Poultry Congress, which will take place in Canada shortly, at time and place to be determined. The meeting of the committee will mark the commencement of activities in connection with the biggest international event in connection with the poultry industry that has been staged on the American continent. World Poultry Congresses are held every three years, the first being held at the Hague in 1921, and the second in Spain in Barcelona, in 1924. Canada has the honor of entertaining the delegates to the third Congress.

Arrangements for the Congress are in the hands of a committee, composed of the Dominion and Provincial Ministers of Agriculture, leading poultrymen, trade and transportation representatives and publicity men. The executive of this committee is:—Hon. Chairman, the Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture; Chairman, Dr. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture; F. C. Efford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman, Vice-Chairman and General Director of the Congress; W. F. Garland, M.P., Ottawa; W. A. Brown, Chief, Poultry Division Dominion Live Stock Branch; T. H. Blair, Ottawa; J. B. Harkin, Commissioner, Canadian National Parks, Ottawa; R. J. C. Stead, Director of Publicity, Immigration and Colonization Department, Ottawa; and R. S. Peck, Director, Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, Ottawa; with Ernest Rhodes, Assistant Chief, Poultry Division, Dominion Live Stock Branch, as Congress Secretary.

The International Association of Poultry Instructors and Investigators has already sent announcements of the 1927 Congress to over one hundred governments, and the British Colonial Offices has also sent a similar announcement to fifty-six colonies and dependencies.

The President of the International Association, Mr. Edward Brown, F.L.L. of London, England, is now in Canada for the purpose of attending the Congress Committee meeting. He will address the Canadian National Exhibition Luncheon on "Farmers Day," Wednesday, September 9th.

These World Poultry Congresses are held for the purpose of bringing together Poultry Instructors and Investigators in order to discuss world poultry problems, and to display exhibits which will represent the more important phases of the poultry industry. The Congress is open to delegates representing any Government, teaching and research institutions, and organizations engaged in some phase of poultry breeding, production and distribution, and also to private individuals.

An Inducement to Retiring Millionaires

LONDON, Sept. 1.—(By Canadian Press)—The Daily Chronicle published the following in a recent issue:—"Some people will be green with envy of the movement in British Columbia to secure recognition of the province as the most comfortable place for millionaires to die in. It is to be done, if it is done, by abolishing Death Duties. Florida set the example and has its reward in the settlement there of thousands of people who, having amassed great fortunes, desire that in death, as in life, the tax collector shall make the smallest possible inroads into them.

"If Florida, why not British Columbia? It will not admit that its climate is inferior to that of the southernmost State whose shores are lapped on one side by the Atlantic and on the other by the Gulf of Mexico. Indeed, the all-time mildness of British Columbia is declared to be 'ideal for those in the sunset of life.' Nowhere else can retired millionaires hope to live longer or die less unpleasantly, and, if given the assurance that their estate will pass undiminished to their heirs, nowhere else will they die in greater contentment.

"So the Provincial Government is being urged to ask the Legislature next session to abolish the succession duties. They yield about $150,000 a year, and if only the millionaires are attracted, it should not be difficult to find full compensation for loss of that. The product of income and property taxes would be swollen, land values would decrease; the 'pull' of the Province would in many ways be strengthened; and, meanwhile, there would be substantial picking for real estate agents and others who have anything to sell. If only the Government will oblige them, they are hoping to find good customers among the retired business men of Eastern Canada and the United States. We should not be surprised, indeed, if the lure reached some of our own countrymen. The Channel Isles are the almost-tax-free Mecca of some, but against Death Duties, at any rate, they are not so secure in Jersey or Guernsey as they might be in the recent years of Canada.

Battle of Sexes

LIKELY TO CAUSE WORLD CONFLICT.

Central Europe, the cradle of wars, is on the verge of another war which doubtless will ensnare the rest of the world before peace returns or civilization is destroyed.

If this war comes, it would wreck homes as no other war has done. Fathers and mothers would meet as strangers, brothers and sisters would fight; Uncle Jim's would never bring candy to little Alice; nor would Aunt Mary's tie up Tommy's sore thumbs.

By future historians, this conflict will be known as "the war of the sexes," a war of trousers vs. petticoats. In some countries the issue touches National tradition; in others it is related to moral customs; and in yet others it is mixed with religion.

The first battles of this sex war already are past events.

They occurred almost simultaneously in Austria, Hungary and Italy. In Austria bobbed hair precipitated the conflict. For centuries the long plaited tresses of the German Frau have been the sine qua non of respected womanhood. Along came short hair and later ostracism, ridicule and later ostracism were tried in vain against the rebelling tradition-worshipping German and Austrian youths in their efforts to persuade them to give up the indecent and unGerman bobbed hair. The bobbers, at first, few in number, were careful to conceal their shame except on special occasions, but they became bolder and actually began to appear in public without hats. During one of their periodic university riots against the Jews, the men students pounced on a number of bobbed-haired misses and attempted to pull out what the barbers had left.

In Hungary the boy scouts fired the first volley. Girls in Hungary, as in most every other European country adopted as their 1925 bathing dress a costume modelled rather closely on the uniform of Rudyard Kipling's dusky youth hero, Gunga Din. The brevity of some of the swimming suits at one resort so distracted the mind of a local scout master that he instructed the boys of his troop to give the girls a lesson by showing their masculine disapproval in every way possible. One alert scout noticed a girl whose shoulder strap had dropped down over her arm. At once he approached, replaced the offending strap, and administered severe lectures on the evil of exposing too much neck.

Instead of hiding her head in shame, the rebuked young lady rose and gave the scout a slap which ultimately may "be heard round the world." Already, via the newspapers, it has resounded up and down a good part of Europe.

Orders for an advance on the Italian front came from no less important headquarters than the Vatican at Rome. The right to bare arms has long meant much more than a technical right to both signoras and signorinas. Recently they began to bare their legs also, and to wear dresses so flimsy as to be transparent even in the shade.

Local priests prayed and pleaded for the return to the good old days of "Christian morality." More and more petticoats were discarded and more limbs made bare. The Holy Father inaugurated a crusade against immorality. Gently at first he sought by persuasion to impress the viewpoint of the Church upon the underdressed women. Gentle means having failed to accomplish any reform, he adopted more vigorous measures.

As a result of the Pope's crusade women who the priests consider to be insufficiently or improperly clad are refused all the privileges of the Church. The sacraments, confession, marriage, baptism, and confirmation are all closed to them.

From other European capitals numerous reports have reached Vienna that the cohorts of the sexes in these places also are manoeuvring toward the big war. As soon as one of the armies is in readiness for battle the general conflict may be expected.

Caught Through Bank Notes

HOW BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES ARE TRACED.

Bank of England notes have probably provided more useful clues for the police in criminal cases than any other object which is in everyday use. Not only in cases of robbery, but in many other instances, the criminal has been brought to book solely because he could not escape without spending money.

When a five-pound note leaves a bank, the clerk always notes the number in a book. When a bank note is paid into the bank, an entry is made in another column.

In all banks, except the Bank of England, these notes are circulated in the same manner as Treasury Notes. The Bank of England, however, issues none but new notes. All notes which return to the head office or any of the branches are immediately burnt.

This task has been devised to simplify the task of checking every note in the country. The bank notes of various values are issued to other banks in bundles of a hundred.

When inquiries are instituted by the police, who wish to trace a certain note, the Bank of England officials can follow a minute that all notes between two definite hundreds were sent to a certain bank on such-and-such a date.

The other bank continues the inquiries, and the note is gradually traced. Some years ago, a rogue who had made the most elaborate plans for escape, was arrested on board a ship bound for a foreign country, entirely through clues supplied by bank notes.

The police went to the man's bank and discovered that he had drawn out a considerable sum in bank notes about a fortnight previously.

Nearly all these notes were traced to foreign exchange offices, and in each case money of a particular foreign country had been obtained. All the police had to do then was to search the boats which were proceeding there.

Turkey Charges Britain Hostile

A Turkish attack on Great Britain, alleging that British airplanes and warships have been engaged in demonstrations against Turkish territory, marked the opening of discussion of the Mosul question to-day before the Council of the League of Nations, which is to decide whether Mosul shall go to Great Britain or Turkey.

The Turkish Foreign Minister, Tewfik Ruzhdi Pasha, charged the British with staging these demonstrations as a threat and to exert pressure in connection with the settlement of the Mosul problem. The British Colonial Secretary, Lieut.-Col. L. C. M. Amery, denied that Great Britain was seeking to influence the council, and repudiated the Turkish charges of military and naval demonstrations.

He asserted that the manoeuvres in the Mediterranean were normal peacetime practices, not directed against Turkey, and that no British airplanes had passed over the disputed district. The Turks, however, he charged, had been violating the provisional Mosul boundary.

Tewfik Ruzhdi Pasha agreed to permit discussion of the main issue of sovereignty, with the understanding that he reserved the right to re-open the question of the alleged British demonstrations.

M. Briand, the French Foreign Minister, who was in the chair, said the main issue was sufficiently delicate and that the council would be happy to see any new incidents settled or disregarded.

Col. Amery announced that Great Britain was ready to accept a 25-year mandate over Iraq (Mesopotamia) including Mosul. This was the first of three recommendations returned by the League's commission of inquiry to Turkey or to divide the area between Turkey and Iraq.

Salving £10,000

(By Lieut. G. Williams) Salvage operations are now carried out to recover the silver and jewels, worth £10,000, lost by the Turkish fleet in 1821 on the Greek Coast.

The exact number of vessels is unknown, but it is supposed to be the neighborhood of sixty. The vessels were wrecked on the shore in the vicinity of twenty fathoms of water.

These vessels were to be taken at the time when the Turkish invading Greeks, who had raided many towns that were valuable, and placed whips found on board their ships.

After this they sailed for Navarino Bay, where they were to be met by the British fleet. But they didn't realize that the sea was narrow, so much so that the vessels could not pass.

This is actually what happened. A sudden and unexpected place. The Turks could have men not treasure, for the British were on either side of the entrance, thus it happened that every one of the treasure was lost.

Until now no serious attempt has been made to recover this treasure. But the salvors are at the time hard at work, and with salvage appliances it should be an exceedingly difficult task to cover the vast wealth.

Reconstruction in China

Marcus Komura in the Tokyo Times. Japan expects to see a Conference of Powers for action in China in the spirit of sympathy. China, with a view to assisting to settle all foreign loans and not consolidated. Consequently, it is not impossible that the loans will be considered. Great Britain and the United States have cured loans of a similar character. Japan will carefully avoid foreign loans in any form, including the railways. This is especially anxious to avoid. The question is handled extra-territorially, and strictly in accordance with the Highton Agreement, the prospect of smooth progress. Every reason for optimism.

British Trade Reviewed

BY FEDERATION AND SUGGESTIONS MADE.

Opponents of a high tariff for Canada have repeatedly referred to the high position gained by English manufacturers in the world market before the war and the attendant prosperity of that country under what they have been pleased to refer to as "free trade."

The licensing system is one of these means. The bonus system is another. But Canada is ready for neither and must fall back on the tariff wall to protect its home markets for Canadian manufacturing.

"No subject concerns more intimately each individual throughout the United Kingdom than the present condition of British trade."

The transport of wild animals is always difficult and sometimes dangerous, and is seldom attempted on a large scale. During the next five years, however, the Canadian Government are moving no fewer than ten thousand bison from the natural park at Wainwright, Alberta, which has been a buffalo sanctuary for some years, to the Wood Buffalo Reserve, near Fort Smith, in the Northwest Territories.

When the bison were liberated after their long journey they made a mad dash for the shelter of the woods, and were lost almost in a moment.

The move has been made necessary by the increase in the Wainwright herd, which is growing too large for the park. So a new home had to be found for some of the bison. The 60,000 square miles reserve of the wood buffalo, who number nearly 2,000, seemed to be the natural place.

As the Wainwright bison are of the plains variety, which is smaller and more slightly built than the wood buffalo, doubts have been expressed as to whether they may not find life in the north too strenuous.

Whatever is the result of the "move" the previous experiments in bison protection in Canada have justified themselves, and these great beasts, which are in danger of extinction at the beginning of this century, have again begun to flourish in the United States, where a policy of reserves akin to that followed in Canada has been in force for some years.

In the protection of wild life, indeed, the two countries sometimes work together. There is an agreement between them whereby migratory birds are protected in both countries during the breeding season, and bird sanctuaries have been established on either side of the frontier.

Matchless

Seated in the depths of the club's best armchair, the young man reading the morning paper gave vent to a shout of great joy.

"Fine," he remarked. "Perfectly splendid!" interrupted another member of the club, "what can this be that excites this poor fellow's grey matter?"

"My friend," replied the young man in the armchair, "have you observed that petrol has been reduced in price?"

"Yes," answered the other, "but I didn't know you had a car."

"As a matter of fact, I haven't," said the languid one, "but I run a very powerful petrol-lighter."

Fishing Schooners

Return Loaded

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 4.—Practically all of the 80 Lunenburg schooners that have been fishing on the banks of Newfoundland this summer have left for home with full fares, the voyage having been the best for years, according to word received here last night from the Canadian Fishery Protection Cruiser Arras at St. John's, Nfld.

Orders to Quit

A Huge Moving Job Has Been Taken In Hand In Canada, Where 10,000 Bison Are Being Carried 700 Miles.

The transport of wild animals is always difficult and sometimes dangerous, and is seldom attempted on a large scale. During the next five years, however, the Canadian Government are moving no fewer than ten thousand bison from the natural park at Wainwright, Alberta, which has been a buffalo sanctuary for some years, to the Wood Buffalo Reserve, near Fort Smith, in the Northwest Territories.

Two thousand bison are to be shipped north every summer, and the first consignment recently arrived safely at their new home. The bison sent were all yearlings or two-year-olds, and exciting scenes were witnessed as they were rounded up by cowboys and loaded into great freight cars, each containing about thirty animals, and labelled: "Don't touch the buffalo." These cars took the bison about half way to the reserve; the remaining 350 miles, by river and by lake, they travelled in specially prepared boats.

When the bison were liberated after their long journey they made a mad dash for the shelter of the woods, and were lost almost in a moment.

Fighting The Wolves.

The move has been made necessary by the increase in the Wainwright herd, which is growing too large for the park. So a new home had to be found for some of the bison. The 60,000 square miles reserve of the wood buffalo, who number nearly 2,000, seemed to be the natural place.

As the Wainwright bison are of the plains variety, which is smaller and more slightly built than the wood buffalo, doubts have been expressed as to whether they may not find life in the north too strenuous. They will have wolves to fight, and if they do not remember the tactics of their ancestors, who met the wolves with a ring of lowered heads and threatening horns, in the centre of which the cows and calves found safety, it may go hard with them.

But the authorities are hoping for the best. Whatever is the result of the "move" the previous experiments in bison protection in Canada have justified themselves, and these great beasts, which are in danger of extinction at the beginning of this century, have again begun to flourish in the United States, where a policy of reserves akin to that followed in Canada has been in force for some years.

In the protection of wild life, indeed, the two countries sometimes work together. There is an agreement between them whereby migratory birds are protected in both countries during the breeding season, and bird sanctuaries have been established on either side of the frontier.

Removing a Graveyard

One of London's most historic spots will have disappeared when the workmen have finished their excavations in St. Mildred's churchyard, a little-known part of London, although not more than a hundred yards from the Bank of England. The church itself disappeared in the middle of the last century, when the present branch of the Midland Bank took its place, but the graveyard, which contains some very old tombstones, the inscriptions on most of which are scarcely legible, was left undisturbed.

It is now being excavated to allow the Midland Bank to extend its premises, and any descendants of the dead buried there may have the bodies removed to any place they choose at the expense of the bank.

Have Faith in Yourself

Life is an island, entirely surrounded by risks, losses, troubles, hardships and misadventure of all sorts.

Most men go to pieces when they have had a few beatings. They will. They fade away. They crawl into a safe little corner and hide, while the great rough tide of glorious life rushes past them.

The fact is that defeat is the normal thing in this haphazard little world, and victory comes but seldom. Every victory, usually, is the result of a long series of defeats.

A man must have faith in himself and in what he is trying to do. He must say: "I can." He must back himself to win. He must bet on himself. He must put up his money and play the game hard.

He must have faith in the people he works with. He must believe in his team. He must see the better side of his co-workers and not think that his own point of view is the only right one.

He must have faith in his trade. He must believe that his trade is a useful one and well worth all his efforts. He must believe that it will rise again after every depression and that it will be a greater trade in the future than it has been in the past.

He must have faith in those great Principles that make us superior to the animals of the forest—to Truth, Honesty, Sympathy, Justice, Progress. AN INSTITUTION TO BE PROUD OF

We were privileged yesterday to pay a visit to the Grace Hospital, to inspect it from the basement to its—as yet—unfinished top floor, and to be told just what purpose it was intended to serve in the community, to what extent it was meeting the demands made upon it, and in what manner the work undertaken was being carried on.

Those who are already familiar with the work of the institution, and they are many and for the most part women, do not require to be further informed of the great service it is rendering to the mothers and children—not only of St. John's but of the whole Island, and not to one class or creed in the community, but to all.

The Grace does not impress one as a place where there is pain and suffering, but on the contrary, as a home from which gloom has been banished and hope has taken possession. The nursing staff, professional though the members are in the manner in which they perform their duties, seem more like friends and relatives in their attention to the patients, and the latter occupy rooms, which are made as cozy as circumstances permit.

The establishment of the Grace Hospital was undertaken by the Salvation Army and it stands as a monument to their enterprise and to their public spiritedness. From the public they received staunch support, as it was universally felt that such an institution was an urgent necessity. The demands made on the accommodation available, however, are more than it can cope with at present, chiefly because it is not completely finished.

There is another matter which is most pressing and that is the accumulation of a fund to enable the hospital to receive those who are unable, owing to their limited circumstances, to help themselves. In this work of humanity the institution is already doing much, but it will readily be understood that the cost of treating such patients has to be met, and to a great extent the management depend in this matter upon the generosity of the public.

Of this generosity there are many signs as a visitor passes through the building. On the doors of several of the rooms are brass plates indicating by whom each one has been equipped, and on the upper floor a splendid surgical ward, thanks to the munificence of a citizen, is nearing completion.

To-morrow it is the intention of the Ladies' Association connected with the Grace Hospital to conduct a Tag Day in the city, in order to establish a fund to meet in particular the cost of treating patients in poor circumstances. We feel certain that their efforts will be successful, but why not make the collection a record one? It is an opportunity not only to give to a worthy cause, but to show your appreciation, citizens, of efficiency, an opportunity to indicate in a practical manner your interest and pride in an establishment that is a credit to St. John's and the whole country.

Limestone Pulverizer in Operation

The new lime pulverizer, imported recently by the Agriculture and Mines Department, was tried out yesterday at the premises of Mr. James Chalker, besides the Minister of Agriculture and the Secretary, Mr. Bailey, whose presence were such well known farmers as Messrs. Henry Cowan, of Brookfield Farm; George Thomas, of Lookout Farm; Michael Mahon, William Ross and Walter Lawlor of the Port Cove Road; H. R. Cook, of Roxbury Farm; A. V. Ross, Quill Yidd Road, and Richard Hibbs, M.H.A. The limestone was brought from the Cobb's

Arns Quarries, owned by Mr. Chalker, it having been found to be the best available for agricultural purposes. Mr. Walsh started operations with the assistance of Mr. Chalker and Engineer Osmond, and the output was about two tons per hour. The Minister of Agriculture told the farmers that he hoped this pulverized lime would not cost them more than five or six dollars per ton, whereas the ordinary burnt lime was costing 25.00 per ton. The farmers, particularly in the neighbourhood of St. John's, have been appealing in vain to successive governments for a cheap supply of lime. The Minister is to be congratulated on taking the matter up and putting it

Smithville Dinner

Last night a large number of citizens of every walk of life in the community and of every shade of creed and politics gathered round the festive board at Smithville at the invitation of the Committee of the 1925 Unemployed, who tendered a complimentary dinner to Mr. G. W. E. Ayre, their solicitor during those days of distress.

The well known hotel excelled itself in the preparation and serving of the menu, which consisted of the following: Olives, Grape Fruit, Almonds, Tomato Soup, Fried Codfish, Dressed Veal and Botted Ham, Potatoes, Peas, Gravy, Raspberry Tart with Cream, Apples, Oranges, Grapes, Raisins, Rolls, Coffee.

The chair was occupied for the occasion by Mrs. Julia Salter Earle and unique as it was to have a lady presiding at a festive gathering consisting of men. She carried out the duties of the office with the greatest credit to herself and to the utmost satisfaction of all present.

When the gathering had partaken of the various courses Mrs. Earle proposed the toast to the King, which was honoured in due form. The toast list in full was as follows: The King—Prop. The Chairman. The Commonwealth—Prop. A. E. Earle; resp. Sir R. A. Squires, K.G. M.G. P.C. K.C. L.L.D.

The Country—Prop. John Dempsey; resp. A. E. Hickman, Esq., Leader of the Opposition. The City—Prop. Frank Kennedy; resp. His Honor Mayor Cook.

The Legislature—Prop. Michael Bennett; resp. P. F. Moore, M.H.A.

The Council—Prop. William Dunn; resp. Councillor R. Dowden.

Trade and Commerce—Prop. John Cahill; resp. Peter Cashin, M.H.A.

Labour—Prop. Sir M. P. Cashin, M.B.E.; resp. Michael Coady, President L.S.P.U.

The Clergy—Prop. P. Kavanagh; resp. Rev. Canon Bolt, D.D.

The Professions—Prop. George Tucker; resp. Hon. A. Campbell, M.D.; W. W. Blackall, L.L.D., Supt. C. E. Education.

The Unemployed—Prop. Caleb Robbins, Vice-Chairman 1925 Unemployed; resp. Geo. W. E. Ayre, L.L.B.

The Guests—Prop. John Power; resp. Hon. P. Templeman.

The Ladies—Prop. H. E. Cowan; resp. Mrs. Julia Salter Earle.

The Press—Prop. C. E. Hunt, Esq.; resp. G. B. Jeffrey, Editor "Evening Telegram."

To attempt to reproduce the many speeches delivered is an impossibility with the space and time at our disposal but it must be said that throughout the fullest accord and fellowship prevailed and the tone of the speeches throughout indicated that one and all were prompted in their remarks or influenced in their opinions by the single intense desire to help their country to come fully into its own, and to maintain with all the loyal fervour that Newfoundlanders possess the constitution as it has been handed down and all the best traditions which it represents.

Despite the fact that the gathering did not disperse until three o'clock this morning, during the whole of the time there was not a dull moment and the enthusiasm with which the dinner opened was maintained to the end. The National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

Discontinuing Service to Kelligrews

The railway management have decided to discontinue the operation of the steam coach between the city and Kelligrews on Wednesday next. The coach since being placed in the service has been the means of accommodating a large number of people who resided in the suburbs during the summer months, all of whom speak highly of the service and the satisfaction given. After Wednesday next the coach will run between Bowling Park and the city only, resuming the St. John's to Kelligrews service again in the spring.

Inaccurate Enumeration Case

A civil action taken against the Supervisor of Enumerators to recover $58 for services rendered in connection with the forthcoming Municipal Election, was dismissed in the Magistrate's Court to-day. The complainant engaged an enumerator on one of the city wards, was refused a certificate by the supervisor which would entitle him to payment for the names taken on the grounds of overlapping. The matter came up for hearing some time ago and was postponed for investigation. To-day two sets of books were produced showing that 1700 names in the ward had been recorded. It was shown that the enumerator in transcribing from his note book to the completed list had raised the status of 422 persons to that of voters by giving them a twelve months' residency in the locality. The note book showed that they had been residents there but a few weeks or months. The enumerator claimed that they were all eligible to vote because they were residents in other parts of the city for the required period. Mr. T. P. Halley appeared for the complainant. Mr. E. L. Carter for the Municipal Council.

HONOLULU, Sept. 11. Captain John Rodgers, the commander of the missing naval seaplane PN-9 number one which fell near the end of a Frisco to Honolulu flight a week ago and his companions were discovered in their drifting plane early this morning and are being towed by a submarine to Pearl Harbor Hawaiian Islands. All hands were reported well but no details were available.

DRASTIC ACTION CAUSES COLLAPSE OF SEAMEN'S STRIKE.

LONDON, Sept. 11. Despatches from Australian ports where the unofficial British seamen's strike is most serious state that the strike is dying down owing to the drastic measures adopted by the authorities. Over two hundred strikers have been sentenced to short prison terms and fined.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11. His Excellency Governor General Lord Byn of Vimy, is sixty-three years old to-day.

ECONOMIC CONFERENCE SUGGESTED.

GENEVA, Sept. 11. A project to convoke a big international economic conference to study the cause of economic uneasiness through Europe was set in motion last night by the French delegation to the League of Nations assembly. Louis Loucheur speaking for the French delegation recommended calling the leagues technical organization together with the International Labor Bureau to be asked to draw up a program for such a conference including such subjects as distribution of raw materials, as well as raw questions and tariff laws which now threaten economic chaos and possibly contain the seed of new wars.

PRINCE MAY BE DELAYED BY SNOW DRIFTS.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 11. Heavy snows yesterday caused the suspension of the International Railway Service to Chile on the Trans-andean line. Officials hoped to have the service restored this week permitting the Prince of Wales to return to Buenos Aires Monday as planned.

AIRPLANE EQUIPPED WITH RESTAURANT.

LONDON, Sept. 11. The latest addition to the air service between London and Paris is a giant plane for thirty passengers equipped with a restaurant and carrying a steward ready to serve hot meals at all times during the voyage.

Magistrate's Court

A drunk was fined $1.00 or 8 days and blacklisted.

A labourer convicted of Section 24, Sub Section 3, of the Alcoholic Liquors' Act, was fined $200 or 3 months' imprisonment. It was his second offence under the Act.

A case of wife vs. husband was postponed until Monday next.

A defendant in a lewd and abusive language case was ordered to pay costs.

A case for assault was dismissed.

A resident of the West End was summoned by the Board of Liquor Control on a charge of manufacturing alcoholic liquor, committing a breach of Section 18 of the Act, and a second charge of exposing the liquor for sale, which is a breach of Section 22. The accused pleaded guilty to both charges and was fined $10.00 or in default 30 days' imprisonment. The case arose over certain evidence that was submitted in court a few days ago. The defendant, a woman, told His Honor that the party responsible was a member of a club, which had rented a room on her premises.

Summons Issued

A summons has been issued to a farmer of the eastern suburbs to appear in the Magistrate's Court to-morrow in connection with the alleged kidnapping affair of Wednesday.

BORN.

"Proud Flesh" is Best King Vidor Picture to Date

Eleanor Boardman, Pat O'Malley and Harrison Ford Head Great Cast.

A daring production, clothed in comedy and satire is "Proud Flesh," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production directed by King Vidor, which opened yesterday at the Nickel Theatre.

The novel of the same name from the pen of Lawrence Sanders was one of the year's "best sellers," and the screen version of it bids fair to surpass the sensation created by King Vidor's last picture, "Wife of the Centaur."

The plot of the story has for its theme a young girl of culture and pride who heeds the call of the primal urge. Born amid the ruins of the great San Francisco holocaust, Fernanda is taken to Spain where she is reared in every luxury.

Her confinement education results in a disdain for Americans and their mannerisms, and she returns to her native land arrogant and snobbish.

She meets Patrick O'Malley, a young, go-getting Irish-American who has built up a large plumbing company and who doesn't hesitate to put on a pair of overalls if necessary. Don Jaime, a suave, likeable member of the Spanish nobility, follows Fernanda to America and a struggle then ensues between Don Jaime and O'Malley for the girl.

Eleanor Boardman, as Fernanda, offers something different from the unsophisticated role she will be remembered for in the "Wife of the Centaur." Her portrayal of the character is charming and lays emphasis on her versatility.

Pat O'Malley, as Patrick O'Malley, puts all the determination of his race into the part and is most convincing. Harrison Ford, as Don Jaime, does some fine work.

Salmon at £350 Each

There's a Fortune in a Good Salmon Stream—For the Man Who Owns It.

Salmon were scarce this spring, and the midsummer drought made them scarcer still. In that famous Scottish river, the Spey, where in an ordinary year, two or three thousand fish run up to spawn, only a tenth of the usual number have appeared.

Fishing on the Spey is always costly. On one reach, where the rental is £70 a week, a sportsman, who took the water for five weeks last spring, caught one fish only. So, quite apart from travelling and living expenses, his salmon cost him £350.

Some years ago, a certain duke took one of the beats on the Tweed, paying £1,200 for the autumn fishing. Day after day passed, but the water was so low and clear that not a fish would rise to the fly. Twenty-four hours before the time was up, a little rain came, and the river rose a few inches. That day four fish were landed, the duke's share being one fish, a grilse—that is, a small salmon coming up the river for the first time in its life.

"I ate that grilse myself," said the duke. "It cost me £300, and I did not see why I shouldn't."

A couple of miles fishing on a well-known salmon river is as good as a gold-mine. Even without a house, such a fishing will rent for £1,000 a year. A stretch of water on the River Wye, now the best salmon river south of Scotland, sold recently for £18,000. The land is a mere strip along one bank, and the only house is a very small place, hardly more than a cottage.

The Return of Germany

Hamburg Fremdenblatt: An official statement has been issued of the formal entry of Germany to membership of the International Chamber of Commerce. This step was imminent before the war, but hostilities naturally prevented its achievement, and even after the war difficulties super-vened until the administrative council of the Chamber declared about a year ago that membership of the League of Nations was not a prerequisite condition to membership of the Chamber. This membership is not likely to become effective before September next, and Germany will probably make her voice heard in this body for the first time at its October assembly in Paris.

Further Notes on The Labour Party

(I.C.M.)

As a party, and as members of a party, the Labour delegates who visited St. John's won high esteem, and their ability and manners reflected credit upon them, and they could teach lessons to more pretentious people. What the gentlemen stand for personally may be a different matter to what they represent. Of their personal characteristics we have not much conception, as we were not near them, nor did we catch the expression of their countenance nor see their soul through their eyes. But as far as could be judged there was nothing very special about them—they were plain, ordinary men, "of like passions" with their fellows.

It was this feature of plainness that appealed to the guests, and at once won their sympathy. There was not any reserve, but at the same time there was splendid decorum. In this there was a timely lesson, for men in such places are sometimes too stand-off, and by their attitude they defeat their purpose and court contempt. Not so with the Labour delegates—nor is it so with men who have "gone through the mill" and who have "paid the price."

This oneness with the people is certainly advantageous to the party, and will tell in its favour. This gives rise to the question as to what would really happen to the British Empire if the Labour Party should get the reins of Government. Would conditions throughout the Empire become better? At present the conditions are not desirable, but we have yet to learn, and yet to be convinced, that it is within the power of any political party to reform society. For fifty years we have watched the statesmen of the Empire, and have seen them in turn fall, and their victory of to-day was but the forerunner of their defeat tomorrow. It is the same at home and abroad. It was the same with the men of Galilee, and the shouts of Hosannah were but incitements to the shouts of "Crucify Him."

But while parties cannot do much it may be possible that the Labour Party would improve matters. They claim they can. It is a mighty big undertaking. Do they really know the magnitude of it? It is an Empire problem and behind it stand all the traditions of the world's history. The Empire is now consolidated, and the best of the people is expressed in the term Imperial Federation. Do not parties lead to factions and factions lead to civil war? This implies internal disruption, which is the same principle of "a house being divided against itself cannot stand."

The many factions now agitating for power within the Empire all claim to have a better way to govern the people than is being administered; hence they want to upset the powers that be. The recent attempt of the communists is a regrettable instance of this. Is there within the ranks of the Labour Party any who foster this same spirit? The facts would seem to indicate that there are. One member who was appointed on the delegation refused to join his colleagues because he feared he should be attending functions at which he should join with his hosts in singing the National Anthem. Is he the only one, or are there others? Many people fear there are others, and for their fears there is foundation.

The populace have been led to expect great things from the Labour Party, and many of the disturbing elements of the day favour the Labour Party. This suggests the query as to whether the Labour Party would be able to control these elements should the party gain power. Of all the factions that now clamor for power the Labour Party is the sanest, and if untrammelled they may do some good; but it is the other elements that may do the harm, because they would claim common interest in the spoils. Of course, the Labour Party is much misunderstood, and they are looked upon as rank Socialists, and Bolsheviks and Soviets and all the rest of it, nor is it easy to dissuade people to the contrary, but as before stated, judging from the gentlemen who visited us as members of the Parliamentary Delegation, the Empire has not much to fear from the Labour Party.

What then is the point, and what is the deduction which we make from all this? It is simply that party will not change present conditions. There is a greater principle involved, but it is ignored, and while it is ignored conditions must continue as they are. The hearts of the people are tired of such terms as transformation and reformation, and even regeneration. They really need these principles, but they will not get the benefit of them until men are personally satisfied to bury selfishness, and bring into daily life the teachings of the Golden Rule. Some say that this is not possible, but say so without a fair trial. The Labour Party believes that there is a better way for the people, and every student of the slums believes the same.

There must be a better way. It was never meant that such a beautiful world as this, and that such a race of beings who inhabit it, should be for ever wrong and should only live to suffer. The world truly needs an uplift, but we fear that the task is beyond the power of any political party, even though it be a Labour Party.

The ideals of the Labour Party may be of the highest type, but opposing interests seem to ever defeat such ideals. The prevention of war would in itself immortalize any party that could accomplish such a menace; but war is largely an international question, and if one nation becomes the aggressor the other nations must assume the defensive. No man would let his home be ransacked without putting up some sort of a defense, and so with nations. Europe has many danger spots, and as Britain holds the key to many European problems, it is an easy matter to compromise her, and complicate her, and to embroil her in the scuffle.

We should like to believe that the Labour Party could save the nation from war, but the pages of history seem to prove the contrary. However, we give them credit for having the prevention of war on their programme and it may be that having started the ball a rolling, the powers may take it up and finalize the good work. Let us at least hope so.

Rotary Luncheon

ACTIVITIES OF MONTREAL BRANCH.

At yesterday's Luncheon of the St. John's Rotary Club, Rotarian "Herb" Russell introduced Rotarian John Jenkins, of Montreal, who gave a most interesting address on the activities of the Montreal Rotary Club. Rotarian Jenkins conveyed to the St. John's Rotary Club, the greetings of his President and fellow members, and assured any St. John's Rotarians anticipating a visit to Montreal, that a very hearty welcome would be extended to them, and any information or assistance required would be gladly given.

Rotarian Jenkins, in the course of his remarks, emphasized the fact that, to be a Rotarian, a man must have a keen interest in the welfare of his particular community, and be a representative citizen, and, for this reason, one attending a Rotary meeting comes in contact with those who are most prominently associated with the business and social life of the City. The Educational and broadening effect of such an association is of incalculable value in helping Rotarians in their efforts to improve social conditions, and, at the same time gives each member a truer vision of the principles which should govern his every-day relations with his fellow-men.

The membership of the Montreal club totals about 225 members, which number is all that can be conveniently handled so that each may have an opportunity of knowing the other as he should.

One unique aspect of the Montreal Rotary Club, which is somewhat similar to that of St. John's, is the fact that Montreal is in the Rotarian District of Northern New York, and may, therefore, be deemed international. Conferences are held alternately in Canada and the United States, and the result of such an intercourse, must naturally be beneficial to members of both nationalities. Here, in St. John's the Rotary Club has a separate existence—there is no other club in the Island. Another unique aspect of Canadian Clubs, particularly in Quebec, is the fact that addresses are delivered in English, and in French alternately. The dual language is also in vogue in Havana, Cuba, and presumably in the South American cities where the Anglo-Saxon element is in the minority. Thus, different languages are no impediment to the progress of Rotary, and its organization is sufficiently versatile to cope with any situation that may arise in the dissemination of Rotary principles over the world.

The most active Committee of the Montreal Rotary Club, is, perhaps, the Boy's Work Committee. Considerable assistance is given to the Boy Scout movement, and a practical interest is also taken in the Farm for delinquent boys. Boys are sent to this Farm from the Juvenile Courts, and they are here instructed in work which, later in life, will be of service to them.

One building is maintained by the Rotary Club in commemoration of a member who fell in the Great War. Another feature of the Montreal Rotarian work is the supervision of boys by individual Rotarians, that is a boy is attached to, or given in care of each Rotarian who takes a special interest in his particular ward and renders any advice or assistance that may be necessary.

Frequent visits are also made to the hospitals and sanitariums for returned soldiers, and motor drives, musical entertainments, boxing matches, etc., help considerably in lightening the burdens with which they are afflicted. Those afflicted with blindness are also provided with gramophones, radios, and other things which may be of practical interest to them. Activities in connection with the crippled children are not now as necessary as formerly, owing to the fact that new institutions have been established to deal effectively with this class of affliction. Frequent entertainments and dinners are also given to the under-privileged boys and girls and at which the opportunity is taken to put in some effective educational work. The merit of each Rotarian is judged by the amount of practical work that he performs in the carrying out of Rotary ideas.

In conclusion Rotarian Jenkins expressed the pleasure of the cordial reception which he received from the St. John's Club and stated that he thoroughly enjoyed his visit to Newfoundland and will carry back with him happy recollections of Newfoundland's hospitality. Rotarian Jenkins was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his interesting address.

Visiting Rotarian Morarty of Halifax, and Rotarian Pomeroy of Charlottetown, who were present at the luncheon, also conveyed greetings from their Presidents and Members. The former gentleman is visiting St. John's with the idea of obtaining information as to the advisability of organizing a branch of the Y.M.C.A. in this city and outlined to the Rotarians the advantages which would accrue, and the work which has been accomplished, by this organization.

President "Jim" Ayre informed the meeting that the members would have the opportunity of meeting District Governor Young at a luncheon to be held in his honor on Thursday next.

They are Content to Wait for a Four Like This Uncommon eagerness to own the new Chrysler Four indicates how far this latest Chrysler achievement is an advance over the usual standards of four-cylinder performance, appearance and value.

Never, perhaps, in history has a four-cylinder car been so heartily welcomed or so greatly desired.

The first showing of the Chrysler Four has attracted thousands to our show-rooms. Scores have placed orders, without demonstrations, after a first view of the car. So instantaneous has been its appeal that, already, public demand exceeds scheduled production.

It is especially significant of Chrysler value that buyers everywhere express their willingness to wait rather than purchase a car of lesser quality than the Chrysler Four.

Every facility of the great Chrysler plants is concentrated today on meeting the public demand for the desirable new Chrysler Four. Production is now running more than 500 quality cars a day, the greatest output of four-cylinder cars ever attained in a Chrysler plant.

Chrysler dealers today are making delivery with a rapidity not anticipated by the thousands who placed their orders content to wait until delivery could be made, knowing that a Chrysler Four is well worth waiting for.

We are eager to give you an immediate demonstration.

CAN WE USE THE ENERGY?

The claim is once more made that the time by a young Westinghouse, that the problem of the energy of the atom is solved. The experiment is in progress for a definite purpose. The results reported to date have been at more prominent places than in any previous time in the great scientific world. Ernest Rutherford, who is investigating the nature of the atom, has agreed that the energy is enormous. He has calculated that the atom's energy is sufficient to drive a piece of metal the size of a pin across the Atlantic in a day. It is but a small step toward control.

The Sun's Activities

Curie's experiment, and those of the past have followed her in the investigation, enable us to grasp the elementary principles of the problem. The scientific world is now in the midst of a grain of pure radium, which is a million electric particles.

These particles, which are smaller than the size of a molecule, are scattered, but they have been isolated, and it has been found that a thousand million million electrons would have rather less than one gram. The researches of Rutherford, and others have shown that matter of whatever kind is composed of negative electrical particles, or electrons, and positive particles, or protons. The electrons, even in an atom, are in a state of motion. It is the energy indicated by constant activity in the atoms. Scientists are seeking to control.

We have the most powerful illustration of atoms in the radio-activity of which, according to Sir Oliver Lodge, radiates four million times every second.

The World's Greatest Secret

HOW WE USE THE ATOM'S ENERGY

The claim is once more put forward, this time by a young Welsh investigator, that the problem of utilizing the energy of the atom has been solved. The experiment is in too early a stage for a definite pronouncement to be made, but it may be said that the results reported to have been obtained are more promising than have been at any previous period. This is the opinion of the great scientists, headed by Ernest Rutherford, who have been investigating the properties of the atom. It is agreed that its potential energy is enormous. It has been calculated that the atomic energy of a piece of metal the size of a walnut would be sufficient to drive the Mauretania across the Atlantic and back, and it but be released and kept under control.

The Sun's Activities

Dr. Curie's experiments with radium, and those of the physicists who have followed her in this line of investigation, enable the layman to grasp the elementary conditions of the problem. The seventeenth part of a grain of pure radium emits thirty million electric particles in one second.

These particles are so minute that their size can only be calculated mathematically, but it has been found that ten thousand million million million electrons would have a mass rather less than one gramme.

The researches of Rutherford, Curie and others have shown that the matter of whatever kind is composed of atoms; that all atoms are composed of negative electrical particles, or electrons, and positive electrical particles, or protons, and that the electrons, even in an apparently inert mass of iron, are in a constant state of motion.

It is the energy indicated by this constant activity in the atom that scientists are seeking to control and utilize.

We have the most familiar and powerful illustration of atomic energy in the radio-activity of the sun, which, according to Sir Oliver Lodge, radiates four million tons of matter every second.

Although of this vast total our small globe receives only an exceedingly small proportion—about three hundredweight per minute—that portion is responsible for all the activities of the earth and for our life itself.

The correlation to be noted between the enormous mass of the sun, whose diameter is one hundred times that of the earth, and the mass of the atom, which is so infinitely small as to be beyond detection by the most powerful microscope, is that both manifest the same form of energy.

Can It Be Done?

The analogy may be carried further. "I am sure that France could make such an arrangement with us, and one on like terms with America, without risk of exceeding her capacity to make foreign payments, I do not believe that such a liability would be an intolerable burden, even if German reparation payments failed altogether."

"If the Dawes Plan should realize 50 per cent. of its paper estimate," Lord Bradbury added, "I believe France would be relatively better off than we are."

A great many fall-top coats feature the shawl collar. A chic little ribbon that has a narrow, rolled front brim.

SEWARD'S LIMENT FOR COLDS.

ther, inasmuch as every atom has a solar system of its own in which the electrons revolve round a central nucleus just as the planets revolve round the sun; only with the difference, that the electrons may, and such change liberates a certain amount of energy which takes the form of radiation.

One of our most famous chemists has calculated that if the molecular energy of two grammes of hydrogen could be utilized, it would be sufficient to raise a weight of 770 lb. through a distance of one metre, which is a traction over 39 in.

The calculation is greatly simplified if it is remembered that two grammes are roughly equivalent to a little more than one-fiftieth of an ounce troy. Thus, if the energy of the atom could safely be utilized it would offer to the service of mankind an inexhaustible source of power, comprised within an exceedingly small compass.

Can it be done? Some of our most famous authorities on physics have declared it to be as visionary as the Philosopher's Stone or the Elixir of Life, yet we have already approximated to the one by the transmutation of mercury into gold, and the science of electricity may easily bring us within reach of the other.

Common Ailments of Middle Age are indicated in women by nervous conditions, irritability, melancholia, pains and aches in the back, dizzy spells, headaches and heat flashes. These trying conditions may be easily overcome and such symptoms controlled by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will interest women to know that in a recent canvass among over one hundred and twenty-one thousand women, ninety-eight out of every hundred reported benefit from its use.

France's Power to Repay

"If France will manage her finances prudently and submit to taxation comparable to that in this country and in America, she can certainly undertake the repayment of the money she borrowed from England and America.

"This is the considered opinion of no less a European financial authority than Lord Bradbury (who, as Sir John Bradbury, was Chief British Delegate on the Reparations Commission), given in a Daily News interview.

"Always with the proviso," he added, "that France were given a funding arrangement, similar to, but rather more generous than, our own engagement with the United States.

"France has recovered remarkably from the war, 90 per cent. at least of her damage has been repaired, and this almost entirely by means of the savings of the French people.

"The productive capacity which this really amazing effort represents is now free to create new capital, and to pay her debts. The wealth of France, with Alsace-Lorraine, is now probably greater than before the war. Her capacity to pay her foreign debts out of her own resources is certainly not less than two-thirds that of Germany. I do not believe France will suffer at all by adopting the policy of paying her debts, nor that she will suffer from receiving payment.

"A creditor nation must, in the long run, always have the advantage of a debtor, even in the prosperity of its export trade. For years we lived as a creditor nation," said Lord Bradbury emphatically, "and it is rubbish to suppose that anything else will happen in these days.

"I would be content with comparatively small payments in the earlier years, although a beginning should be made at once, the payments rising gradually to the full normal payment at, say, the end of eight or ten years."

"Discussing a possible funding arrangement on the terms of the Anglo-American debt settlement, Lord Bradbury said he was disposed to suggest an arrangement with a rather lower rate of interest, especially in the early years.

"That settlement," he said, "gave us an abatement as compared with the 5 per cent. basis of about 28 per cent. The more generous France rates I suggest would give France an abatement of at least 40 per cent., which would make the total sum to be repaid about £280,000,000."

"I am sure that France could make such an arrangement with us, and one on like terms with America, without risk of exceeding her capacity to make foreign payments, I do not believe that such a liability would be an intolerable burden, even if German reparation payments failed altogether."

Casino Theatre Monday

The W. S. Harkins Players commence their engagement in St. John's at the Casino Monday evening next, in the melo-dramatic success "The Acquittal" on their departure from Halifax. The Daily Herald of that city speaks as follows:—

"The large audience present on Monday night to witness the farewell performance was proof that the W. S. Harkins Players had established themselves in the appreciation of Halifax theatregoers, who, as is well known, are as critical and as hard-to-please audiences as may be found anywhere on the continent. Playing at the Casino precisely when the call of salubrious summer evenings was most insistent and when only the most ardent devotees of the theatre could be expected to give up lovely evenings outdoors for the theatre, the W. S. Harkins Players drew relatively large audiences and won very favorable appreciation, so much so indeed that had they continued here for an extended season they would have had a splendid success throughout. It is understood that they may return for a limited engagement; and if so Mr. Harkins, Mr. Selman, Miss Violet Deane, and Fred S. Nelson, and the whole company may be assured of a hearty welcome and first-rate public support. The Players leave for St. John's, Nfld., where on arrival they open their regular fall season. They go with the best wishes of Halifax theatre patrons in general and of the many friends they made here in particular."

It is Not the Clothes That Matters

Toronto, Sept. (By Canadian Press).—A feminine correspondent of a local paper, living in a small place, recently spoke her mind on the, to her, unseemly habit of women appearing in men's clothes. She was assured that she was a woman, she announced. Isabella Osborne Fleming, of Tomdrom, Ont., answers her with rebuke and says: "I may state here I have not bobbed my hair—partly because it is rather nice hair and partly because it is less expensive to keep it as it is—but I do wear breeches, and have done so for three years, and no words can tell of the joy and beauty these breeches have brought me. I am married and have a home to keep in order—a trying job sometimes, you will admit—but when I begin to feel tired I don't try to fight with my own shadow I don my 'breeks' then I am able to go into the bush, or up to the summit of the hill-top. Had I a skirt on I could not do these things. I would not undoubtably be in tatters ere I reached the first fence. When I return I can pick up the thread of my work with renewed strength, clearer vision and a greater tolerance of the foibles and weakness of human nature. Very often my husband goes with me on my tramps, and what a great camaraderie is ours. I think if the objectors once donned breeches and felt the joy of open spaces they would forget this hypocrisy and mock modesty about such petty things as our clothing and the way we wear it, or cut or worn. After all, it is the soul that matters, is it not?"

POLICE COURT.

I take my nephews to the court where Burns and tramps assemble, and where the thief and kindred sport are made to shrink and tremble. The prisoners a row of tawdry jays, all shy of cuffs and collars, and some are given thirty days, and some are taxed ten dollars. There is no dignity on deck, it all is cheap and shoddy, and every prisoner's a wreck in soul and mind and body. "Behold these wights, my nephews mine," I say, when all is ended; "they once had hopes and dreams sublime, ambitions high and splendid! They once were blithe and starry-eyed, and thought the world their oyster; but some would let their duties slide, while they'd carouse and revel. And some would quit the useful job to hunt for pastures greener, they moved on, with the idle mob, and found the picking leaner. Some figured that the tainted lace is better than the shilling one earns where honest ways prevail, and honest men are drilling. Some lads postponed the vital chore, they'd do their stunt tomorrow, and now, behind the prison door, they molder in their sorrow. Oh, nephews, contemplate these gent, all soeedy and unshaven; their raiment foul and full of rents, the fall their only heaven. Remember that they once were clean, attractive and upstanding; to them the future looked serene—and see where they are landing! Watch well your steps, my nephews, be honest, clean and pious; avoid the fate of those poor men who die, detected, by us."

EXPLAINING GRANDMOTHERS.
 Grandmothers are careful with cookies and cakes. Grandmothers are up when a small tummy is full. Grandmothers refuse, for the good of the child. Grandmothers hurt him, to let him run wild. Grandmothers spoil them. You know that is true. Grandmothers don't have the caring and curing to do. Grandmothers insist in a manner most grave that the way that a good little child should behave. Grandmothers lock up the candy and turn from the door. Grandmothers give "just one little piece more." Grandmothers spoil them. You know that is right. Grandmothers pamper them, fuddle them, too. Grandmothers on them all of the afternoon. Grandmothers with them, grant every wish. Grandmothers give them the chocolate they find on the floor. Grandmothers in their laughter and cote on their girls. Grandmothers they're always gone home when the trouble begins. Grandmothers see in a grandchild much more than they visioned in us when long dresses we wore. Grandmothers enjoy our small children beyond their doubt. Grandmothers there that us they enjoyed when we scandered about. Grandmothers the reason is simple, each crani-Grandmothers knower knows. Baptism Deaths

A remarkable account of wholesale drownings in a river on the Belgian side of Sakania, a frontier township between Northern Rhodesia and the Belgian Congo, is reported. A native named Nyassala, messenger of God, believed to be a religious fanatic from Nyassaland, is the leader of a movement which has been performing baptisms in the river by night. Already more than 50 dead bodies have been recovered. A considerable number of lesser "gods" assistants of Nyassala, have been arrested, but the leader escaped after a chase with the police in which casualties are believed to have occurred. All the baptized are natives.

Little Jack Rabbit
 by David Cory

Goodness me, boys and girls, we left the two frightened little rabbits in a dreadful fix, didn't we? Danny Fox and Old Man Weasel glaring at them from the bushes. Yes, even worse than that; these two wicked robbers were creeping up to the little back porch on which Lady Love and the bunny boy stood, all a-tremble, not knowing what to do. "I saw them first," snarled the old fox, eyeing Old Man Weasel suspiciously. "It's not a question who saw them first, but who gets them first," answered the crafty old Weasel. Just then a joyous bark sounded on the evening air, and the next moment the Yellow Dog Tramp jumped right over the bushes, landing squarely on the little back porch. Raising a big stick in his strong right paw, he glared at the two wicked old robbers and shouted: "Just a moment, if you please. Or you'll take your last, sad sneeze. With this good old hickory stick I will make you might sick."

Not Enough

THE NEW THROW-IN RULE IS A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION, BUT ONLY A STEP.
 So far as the actual rules of play are concerned there has only been one change in addition to the offside rule. This other change affects the throw-in, and the reasons for the alteration have mystified a lot of people. In the past it was necessary for the player throwing the ball to stand with a part of both feet on the touch-line until he had completed the throw.

Household Notes

A little fresh or canned fruit juice is nice added to the dressing for fruit salad.
 As an appetizer, serve thinly sliced hard-boiled egg on lettuce with tartare sauce.
 Checked oil cloth makes delightfully practical luncheon sets for everyday use.
 When you make apple relish, to have it especially good, add a few seeded raisins.
 Before baking cup custards, top with canned cherries, bake and serve with cherry juice.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councilors Martin, Outerbridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present. The Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed and the usual preliminary business disposed of. The following matters then received attention:—
Communication of the Newfoundland Tourist & Publicity Association with regard to an interview recently held with the General Manager of the Furness Withy Company, Limited, as to the encouragement of tourist traffic in this country, and at which matters generally in connection with road conditions were discussed. A summary of the General Manager's remarks was submitted for the information of the Council.
The City Clerk tabled statements of Revenue and Expenditure to August 31st, and pointed out that the several allocations for roads were now exhausted, and it would be necessary to avoid any heavy expenditure in this connection. It was therefore decided that the Government be asked for a decision as regards the several applications for increased road grants recently made by the Council.
The Medical Officer of Health Brehm, in reply to the Council's enquiry as to the cause of several cases of typhoid fever reported of late, stated there is no cause for anxiety, and there is no room to suspect contamination of the water supply. The outbreak was of a very mild type, there being no mortality.
The President of the Newfoundland Highlanders' Association applied for renewal of lease of the property on which their present Armoury is situated. A Committee of Council are to take up this matter and report.
The residents of City Terrace, Duckworth Street, complained of inadequate water supply to their respective dwellings, which they thought due to the fact that they were supplied by a lead pipe from the main on Henry Street. They requested that a four inch main be extended to their vicinity, which would save the Council considerable trouble in opening up services for repairs during the winter season, and at the same time would relieve the residents of the present inconvenience. The City Engineer will see what can be done.

Messrs. W. J. Dowden, Thomas Murphy, William Halliday and other truckmen petitioned for the placing of a watering trough for horses on Signal Hill Road. The City Engineer was asked to report as to submit estimate of cost of such installation.
P. C. Taylor called attention to the need of repairs being made to the retaining wall at corner of John and Dunford Streets. This will be attended to by the Roads Department.
Messrs. W. Lockyer and J. Williams applied for permission to erect dwellings on Blatch Avenue. The plans submitted by them were passed subject to the approval of the City Engineer, but the applicants will be required before permits are issued, to pay proportion of cost for water and sewerage extension according to frontage of their respective properties, the mains having recently been placed in this street at considerable expense to the Council.
James Murdock, on behalf of Messrs. James Hutchings and Anstey, asked approval of plans submitted some time ago for erection of dwellings on the Cockpit Road. At the time the plans referred to were held over because of the fact that no water and sewerage connections were available in that section. However, as the mains are now being laid there, the applicants are to be informed if they will again submit plans and undertake to pay proportion of cost towards the improvements which are at present being made, permits will no doubt be issued.
The application of F. Andrews for water and sewerage connections to his dwelling, Sudbury Street, was referred to the Engineering Department.

The following matters are to be given attention by the City Engineer:—
(1) Repairing of bridges at head of Quidi Vidi Lake and west of St. Clare's Hospital.
(2) To erect in Victoria Park the playground apparatus recently imported by the Recreation Association.
(3) Notification is to be served on the Newfoundland Clothing factory, as also residents of Adelaide Street, to immediately repair or remove the plank sidewalks fronting their premises.
The application of the Star of the Sea Association for bathhouse site, Quidi Vidi lakeside, was granted, as per plan submitted by the City Engineer. Agreement is to be signed and a nominal rental will be charged for the occupancy of the land.
Mr. T. J. Foran, Supervisor of Enumerators, submitted a report on the work performed to date in connection with the taking of Voters' Lists, etc., for the forthcoming Municipal Election.
The Medical Officer of Health reported three new cases of Scarlet Fever in the city during the past week.
The City Engineer tabled his weekly report on the work of the Water, Sewerage and Roads Departments. He stated that the laying of mains, Hamilton Avenue, was now nearly finished; that the extension of water and sewer mains to the Cockpit Road had commenced, and it was hoped to have same completed within a very short time.
The Sanitary Supervisor reported that the cleaning of streets, flushing drains, gullies, etc., had been given special attention by his Department during the past week.
With the granting of requisitions and passing of weekly accounts the meeting adjourned.

STEERING IN THEIR SLEEP

It was recently stated that a motorist had been fatally injured in a road accident caused by dozing while he was driving.
A number of motoring experts seem to incline to the view that many drivers there have dozed at the driving-wheel at one time or other during their career. But they add that usually in such cases the man who dozes is still perfectly capable of driving his car without danger to himself or other passengers.
One case which occurred during the war seems to suggest that, in such circumstances, some special instinct keeps the sleeper tight. An Engineer is believed to have made the discovery. He was ordered out with a big car after a heavy day. He found it difficult to keep awake, and finally succumbed to sleep. He was unconscious for about ten minutes, when he suddenly woke to find that he had brought his car correctly to a standstill in front of a closed level-crossing.

Britain's Biggest Business

The most remarkable business in Britain, and one of the rarest undertakings in the whole world, is also one of the most fiercely criticised. But whatever private grievances we may have against the Post Office, we might be a little more charitable towards it if we recalled the volume of business that it handles.
The Postmaster-General has recently given some really astounding figures regarding the work of the Post Office. Its gross revenue, or the total takings, for last year amounted to the huge sum of £55,000,000, or more than £1 per head of our total population. After deducting all expenses, the net profit amounted to between £8,500,000 and £7,900,000.
There were 6,000,000,000 postal parcels handled during the year, of which 3,500,000,000 were letters. This is an average of roughly eighty-five letters per person throughout the kingdom in one year.
They All Mean Work.
Last year there were 115,000 new telephones "laid on," and the number of calls reached the stupendous total of 1,000,000,000. Of this number 80,000,000 were trunk calls.
Just think what this means—nearly 3,000,000 calls per day. Anyone with a mathematical disposition can work out from this the number of calls per second. Then he might also begin to realise what the work of the exchange staff must be.
In addition to this, the main work of the Post Office, there must also be remembered its many other activities, such as the issuing of postal orders, saving bank transactions, issue of stamps for insurance, etc., the control of wireless licences in itself developing into a great undertaking, the telegraph system, the payment of old age pensions, and so on.

Roman Women's Scent

MORE FINDS AT RICHBOROUGH CASTLE.
With the resumption of excavations on the site of the Roman settlement at Richborough Castle, near Sandwich, Kent, further discoveries have been made.
They include a bone hairpin; a pointed piece of bone, believed to have been used by fair Romans for dipping into their scent bottles; a small disc, seal, a pair of tweezers, a small disc, very well preserved, and several dice.
Since the resumption of the excavations, which are under the direction of Mr. W. G. Klein, the work has been confined mostly to removing large quantities of surface earth from the northeast corner near the houses discovered last year.
Thames visitors are beginning to take an interest in the work, and small parties visit the camp daily.

Sleep Sickness and Sleeping Sickness

In the minds of most people there is a very natural confusion between the two very different diseases which are known respectively under the names of sleep sickness and sleeping sickness. The last named, sleeping sickness, holds but an academic interest for the little Englander, though of great moment to the Imperialist. It is a disease endemic to different parts of equatorial Africa, notably Uganda. It is characterized by a gradually increasing somnolence, together with mental and physical degeneration, and, so far as is known at present, it invariably terminates fatally. About twenty years ago there was an epidemic of this disease in Uganda which brought death to about one-tenth of the inhabitants. The disease was, until quite recently, considered to be due to a parasite conveyed into the body by the bite of the tsetse fly just as malaria is caused by a parasite conveyed by the bite of a mosquito. It now looks, however, as though the true tsetse (glossina palpalis) were not the only delinquent, for a cousin of his, glossina maritima, is, on good evidence, believed to be participis criminis. However that may be, the fact that the bite of certain kinds of fly gives rise to the disease in human beings and deals death broadcast is undoubted. The problem then is, clearly, how to eradicate the said flies. That it is a problem of overwhelming importance to all colonising nations is evident from the fact that it has come into the purview of the League of Nations. Our own Colonial Office recently inaugurated an international conference on the subject which was held in London in May. In opening the proceedings, Mr. Ormsby-Gore gave a very interesting and lucid history of the whole matter, and ended by saying that the crux of the problem resided in the tsetse fly, the extermination of which was essential to any real progress in controlling the disease. Inasmuch as the fly is found in belts of varying sizes throughout the whole of tropical Africa from Senegal, on the Northwest, to Zululand, on the Southwest, the magnitude of the task of its extermination can well be imagined. As many nations are interested, and as they have all combined to seek for a scientific solution of the great dif-

Shakespeare to Order

W. S. Gilbert, of light opera fame, was always full of whimsies. We quote a story about him from a recent English publication: At the Garrick Club, one evening he made the astounding statement that Shakespeare was a very obscure writer. His statement was immediately protested by most of those present, and he was asked to prove it.
"Well," said Gilbert, "what do you make of this passage:—
"I would as lief be thrust through a quickset hedge as cry 'plosh' to a callow throstle."
"There's nothing obscure in that," said one member. "It's perfectly clear. Here's a man, a great lover of the feathered songsters, who, rather than disturb the croalling of the little warbler, prefers to go through the intense pain of thrusting himself through a thorny hedge. But I don't know that passage; in what play does it occur?"
"In no play," said Gilbert. "I've just invented it. And jolly good Shakespeare, too."—Boston Transcript.

One electric power board has firmly determined to have nothing whatever to do with German goods, even if they are cheaper than the British.

Distributing Canada's Wheat

(By G. F. BANNERMAN, for Canadian Press)

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 4.—Binders are whirling through the length and breadth of the Western prairie land as miles of waving grain resolve themselves into golden bushels thrown along stubble burdened ground. Myriads of men garnered from every quarter of the far-flung Dominion gather ceaselessly from day to dark the richly laden bundles into compact stacks of potential machinery and sharp explosive bursts from laboring gas proclaim the first visible source of that mighty river of wheat, the economic life stream of Canada, as it flows in an increasing and unending volume to strategic centres throughout the world from whence in millions of rivulets it goes to feed multitudes of hungry mouths. By what miracle of man does this life giving stream flow from the great spaces of the West to the distant centres?

Early in the year, before the prospective harvest is more than a carpet of green blades, the servants of the two great railway companies are busily engaged in overhauling and repairing, old equipment and securing new to replace the worn-out. Tracks and roadbed are thoroughly gone over and keyed up to the highest efficiency in order that there may be no weak link in the system. All through the summer the intelligence services of these two companies are almost daily reporting to their respective headquarters upon the crop situation in the many different areas of the Western Provinces. They are the heralds in the gigantic drama of the west. Sometimes they herald the grim silent tragedies of blighting heat and smiting hail, sometimes extensive and devastating, but happily this year much restricted.

Finally they announce the first whir of the binders and then in a twinkling orders reach into every division of the railway systems and the mobilization of their motive power is under way. Gradually there is a concentration of locomotives and grain cars at strategic points on the western lines. Here they are ready for immediate and rapid distribution wherever they are needed. Three hundred and seventy-five million bushels are the recent estimates for the 1925 crop, and all this, except some 80,000,000 of 90,000,000 bushels must find its way to the outer world through two gateways, Vancouver on the West and Winnipeg on the East. During the next eight weeks wheat will flow with great rapidity from the farmers' wagon into the local elevators. Each station has its quota of these elevators varying in number from one to ten according to the surrounding acreage and its productivity. From their bins grain cars are filled daily and long trainloads behind panting locomotives find their way to terminal elevators. Here the grain is loaded upon lake and ocean carriers and gradually finds its way to all parts of the world.

This seemingly commonplace task of distributing Canada's wheat to the world is enveloped in intricate problems. These difficulties call for the most careful organization and closest co-operation if the grain is to move steadily and smoothly to its destination. Even the weather effects the flow for it may be that a storm on the lake will hold up a considerable number of carriers, and cause congestion in the elevators, resulting in a loss of time and money to the railways. It speaks well for the organizations engaged in the work of distributing the crop that seldom if ever is the steady flow halted.

Relics of Past Age

From time to time interesting ancient articles are discovered in the Fens of Norfolk, Suffolk, and Cambridgeshire.

Recently, Mr. Taylor Vine, a fen worker, found in Methwold Fen a number of blue clay earthen pots, or vases, 4 in. in diameter and 2 1/2 in. in height, and also in the same area a flint battle-axe with the portion of a wooden handle remaining, together with a quantity of clay pipes of curious design.

The axe was purchased by Mr. Beloe, a solicitor, of King's Lynn, for his private museum.

Mr. Fred Hicks, of the White Dyke Fen Farm, has also recently found at a considerable depth some stag antlers (of the red deer variety) in perfect condition and 43 in. long.

A large quantity of Roman coins were found previously in the Fens, near Fen area, with about the same time a man while ploughing between Southey and Methwold Hythe, Norfolk, struck some hard substance which investigation showed was a boat or oaken canoe. Close by was the skeleton of a man, with the exception of the feet, and an earthen vessel which contained a quantity of old coins.

It was presumed that someone had met with an accident while travelling for trading purposes across the great waters that predominated in the fens before being drained from Ely to the higher ground at Methwold Hythe.

Reports Mongolia Ousting Andrews

Moscow, Aug. 28. (A.P.)—The Mongolian Mission in Moscow issued a statement yesterday declaring that the third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews, has been ordered expelled from Mongolian territory by the Unga Government on the ground that the expedition violated agreements made by its leader with the Mongolian authorities.

The statement alleges that the expedition entered Mongolia in May, "fully armed in military fashion," and that it included lieutenants of the British army, a British consular secretary and other persons whose names Mr. Andrews did not register with the Mongolian authorities.

The statement continues: "Andrews was cautioned several times to limit his investigations to scientific work, but he disregarded all warnings. The Mongolian Government, upon the statement, says, had no other choice but to order the expedition's expulsion." An Unga despatch on August 19 said that the Mongolian Government had ordered the third Asiatic expedition to cease its exploration and scientific work and leave Mongolian territory. The expedition is known to have included Lieut. Robinson, assistant topographer of the British army, stationed at Peking. Other members were Lieut. Butler, an assistant topographer, formerly on the staff of the Commander of the United States military forces in China; Major L. B. Roberts, topographer, who was a member to the United States Army in France during the war, and J. McKenzie Young, in charge of motor transportation, formerly of the United States Marine Corps.

Lieut. Smith, Sydney, Lost With Friend

PADDLED FROM ENGLAND TO ROME.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—A despatch to the Journal from St. Raphael says that a bottle containing a message, penciled on a sheet of paper, and dated September first, signed by Lieutenants Smith and Brant, saying they were wounded and starving on an island near Cape Corse, the northern part of the island of Corsica, has been picked up by an Italian torpedo boat destroyer. Smith is a Canadian canoeist who paddled from Canada to New York and then from England to Rome, and surprised the people of Paris some time ago by diving into the Coscoff Bridge with his canoe. He is now trying to round the world in company with Lieut. Brant, in a small boat. The Italian Admiral commanding at Spezia advised the naval authorities of the bottled message and a party has been despatched to rescue the two men.

In July, 1924, Smith paddled away from the ferry wharf, Sydney, on a voyage to Rome, which city he expected to reach by Christmas. After a period of thrilling experiences which included near drownings in the Bay of Fundy and the English Channel, the intrepid canoeist arrived at the Eternal City, several weeks behind schedule. He was royally feted by the Romans, and for a period faded from the news.

He was next heard of joining up with a French officer for a cruise around the world, with the result above mentioned.

Lightning Not to be Seen by Human Eye

Alexander Larsen, Dutch scientist, has established the fact that there is such a thing as a lightning flash invisible to the human eye. These flashes were recorded by a specially arranged camera, but not by the sight. Larsen suggests that this particular type of lightning gives out wave lengths of visible light, and so intense that the human eye is incapable of seeing them.

That the firefly burns oxygen to produce its light seems beyond doubt. It has been proved that the firefly uses 86.5 per cent. of its energy for light, whereas in a man-made glow lamp, only about half of one per cent. of the energy is available for light. To make a light equal in brilliance to that of the firefly by human methods would require a temperature of something like 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

Glowworms and scores of different sorts of fish are able to produce this cold light. The most brilliant of the light burners are creatures which live in the tremendous abysses of the oceans where the temperature is always at or about freezing point.

Mr. R. Crall, assistant manager of the Cunard Line, said at a luncheon yesterday that the world voyage would embrace a distance of 35,000 miles, and the passengers would make it at a rate of 2d. a mile, or at a cost of a little more than 22s. a day.

This would be the first liner on a world cruise to carry people to Australia and New Zealand, and the voyage would last 150 days.

"Sundown" Has 105,000 Actors in Cast

The largest cast in the history of motion pictures enacts the scenes of "Sundown," the first National feature being shown Monday at Star Theatre. The cast comprises 5,000 human actors and 100,000 bottles. The immense herds of cattle, the migration of which forms the theme of the Earl Hudson story, are the majestic background for the action of the semi-inspiring story enacted by the human members of the cast.

Onward, ever onward the cattle thrudge. In every scene there are thousands of them passing South, their hoofs beating a funeral dirge, the passing of the West's greatest industry, cattle raising.

Without doubt, the scenes in "Sundown" showing the immense herds, stretched as far as the eye can see, in one slowly moving procession, are the most spectacular of like nature ever seen on the screen.

Moscow Menaces World Peace Through China

Before we can arrive at the truth of the present situation in China, says Walter Littlefield, well-known expert in international affairs, in The Forum, one must be able to discover points of common agreement in the mass of conflicting testimony at hand. This is quite as difficult as it is to fix the blame for the Shanghai tragedy. Why we realize something of the difficulty when we understand that the present situation no more interests the millions of Chinese provincials remote from the Treaty Ports, the lines of traffic, and the Peking phantom government than the quarrels of the Tachuns interest other millions living remote from the zones of conflict or reposing under the rule of some rare, beneficial government, no more than the Tachuns themselves, with the exception of Chang Tso-fu and Feng Yu-hsiang, are interested in the present clash between the new political and academic class and the Treaty Powers.

It is probably true that neither the student class nor the proletariat, which it is befriending, organizing, and reforming, is consciously committed to Moscow with its schemes for a Chinese Soviet Republic. Yet it is true beyond all question that both the official U. S. S. R. and the unofficial Comintern at Moscow are attempting to strike the bourgeois governments of the world through the anti-foreign movement in China.

The student class has its ideals but no authority. In demanding the "immediate" abolition of the special privileges of the foreigner it does not even contemplate what would be the result if they should be abolished: the students would annihilate foreign trade, exile the merchant class, and turn China into a federation of Tachun-ruled states—much worse than those under the viceroys of the old régime. The actual power and authority in the China of to-day resides in the Tachuns, but only when one of them is in power at Peking does he possess international prerogatives. So the Signatory Powers, for their own interests, must still join the United States in perpetuating the Peking fiction, and they will support the Washington Government so long as that Government does not attempt to allow the student ideals immediate realization. Should that attempt be made the conflict between the vast, vested interests of Japan and the European nations and the moral, traditional interests of the

BRAZILIAN HAD FAVORABLE JULY.

Net Earnings at $1,290,790—$385,550 Above July of Last Year.

TORONTO, Sep. 3.—Net earnings of Brazilian Traction, Light and Power for July, 1925, compare favorably with those of any month since January. This is taken to mean that the adverse conditions, including curtailment of operations in Sao Paulo, have been at least partially overcome. Brazilian exchange rates during July averaged higher than in the months immediately preceding.

Aggregate of gross earnings for the first seven months of the year amounted to $16,468,414, an increase of $1,271,935 over the corresponding months of last year. Aggregate net earnings for the seven months were $9,435,088, a decrease of $24,463. In issuing the statement of July earnings, Mr. J. M. Smith, Secretary of the company, called attention to the fact that the earnings in July, 1924, were affected adversely by the revolt in Sao Paulo during that month.

Net earnings for the month amounted to $1,290,790, an increase of $385,550 over the corresponding month of last year. Gross earnings

United States would probably wreck any future conference on Chinese affairs at its inception.

B. L. S. CELEBRATE VICTORIES.

The B.L.S. club rooms were the scene of a very happy re-union last night, when the athletes of the society assembled to celebrate the victories they had achieved during the past year. Mr. W. J. O'Neill, Chairman of the L. and A. Committee, opened the function by asking the President of the Society, Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., to take the chair. Mr. Higgins explained that trophy night had now become an annual institution for the Society. It was merely an informal gathering at which the various teams would be given an opportunity to report progress. Every year they had many trophies to present, and this year was no exception. The first trophy for the year was the winning of the Inter-Club bowling championship. Capt. T. Manning, on behalf of the team, presented the trophy. Then followed the presentation of the Governor Harris Cup, for football success, won at the G.W.V.A. Sports. Also the football trophy which was won at the Wilkes Bay Garden Party. Messrs. G. Halley, H. Buckingham, the respective captains, passed over the trophies. Although these cups have not been won outright, it was the wish of those present that the teams would be equally as successful next year. After the serving of refreshments the toast list was taken up as follows:

Wesley Defeats B.L.S.
Only a small attendance of spectators was present at St. George's field last evening to witness the Wesley and B.L.S. teams of the Junior League, play what proved to be a hard fought game for the points. The one and only goal of the game came after fifteen minutes of play when Wesley scored from a corner kick. All through the game honors were pretty evenly divided, with repeated attacks on the opposing goals. A feature of the game was the splendid saving of both goalkeepers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, arriving from a tour of Europe on the Aquitania, expressed the opinion that the proposed match for the heavyweight boxing out in front of the Giants and the Senators lead the slipping Athletics by three and a half games. The Pirates are practically assured of the flag, while nothing else but a complete reversal of form by Washington will give the Athletics a new lease of life. The fall and decline of Connie Mack's club of aggressive youths is one of the mysteries of the season. On their last western trip they lost ten out of twelve games. The club simply went to pieces. It may have been the strain of the race or it may have been the lack of seasoned players here and there among the youngsters.

HOBBS FIGURES AGAIN.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Jack Hobbs, Surrey's famous cricketer, who recently established a new world's record for life-time batting performances, when he scored his 127th "century," yesterday almost broke another record when he scored 266 runs in a single inning. This figure stands second only to the great performance of Dr. W. C. Grace, the "grand old man of cricket," who set a mark of 344 runs in 1876. Hobbs' best previous performance was 236 runs in a single innings made in 1914. The record for "centuries" recently set by Hobbs displaced the previous record of 126, made by Dr. Grace, which had stood many years. The game in which the score was made was between the gentlemen and players at Scarborough. This is the highest score Hobbs has ever made in first-class cricket. His previous best was on the Oval in 1914, when he made 226. The gentlemen scored 270 in their first innings (Carr 101) and 235 in the second (Tennyson 79). The players, after scoring 480 for the loss of three wickets, declared (Hendren 129, and Hobbs, as stated, 266 not out). Yorkshire defeated Somersetshire by 19 wickets; Somersetshire 135 (Lyon 78 and 147 Young 54); Yorkshire, 382 (Holmes 90, Oldroyd 82, and Leyland 55) and 22 for no wickets.

MISS EDERLE TRAINS IN RAGING STORM.

CAPE GRIS NEZ, France, Sept. 4.—Gertrude Ederle's long delayed second attempt to swim the English Channel will take place before September 20, or not at all this year. Despite a raging channel storm, Miss Ederle took her regular two-hour training swim Thursday. Her decision not to abandon the Channel swim is based on the mid-September successes achieved by Thomas W. Burgess and Charles Toth. Some day between September 9 and 12 is the likeliest date for Miss Ederle's second attempt.

How Soon?

This experiment thinks that we shall soon probe this secret of Nature, which will make it practicable to do all our lighting, heating, and even cooking by radio. Father Beckett calls up an alluring vision of the future. But probably a long time will elapse before we have the radio cook.

"I am experimenting at present," he said, "with a view to increasing the distance that this etheric power can be sent. It should be possible, perhaps by very sharp tuning, to increase the distance tremendously. Many scientists are of opinion that the use of exceedingly short wavelengths offers the solution to this problem."

As the Tri-Bits man said goodbye to Father Beckett outside that little den of science, three schoolboys passed. "They were crowding round the eldest, who was hugging a home-made wireless set. They doffed their caps. But they did not know the secret of the priest's smile."

Malaria and Mosquitoes

Before the war malaria was a rare disease in Great Britain but since the war it has become fairly frequent. The Director of the Mosquito Control Laboratory at Hayling Island, Mr. J. F. Marshall, recently addressed the Portsmouth Literary and Philosophical Society with a view of drawing public attention to the dangers of mosquitoes and the best methods of combating them. The female of the species, it seems, is not only more deadly than the male, but is solely responsible for the ravages of the tribe. The male is quite harmless. Of the 1,400 distinct species which are known to exist in Europe, the anopheles maculipennis is the most important malaria carrier, and she is quite common all over the British Isles.

When she has bitten a malarial patient and has thus become infected, she is capable of passing on the disease to anyone who comes within the range of her sinister attentions. Her eggs, which are laid in water, soon hatch out into larvae. These in due time become pupae from which, in a few days, the complete mosquito emerges. The only really effective manner of attacking these pests is by killing them in the larval stage. This may be done by covering the stagnant water in which they live with a thin film of paraffin, which smothers them; or by draining off the stagnant water itself, which maroons them. Mr. Hogart, the Director of the College of Pestology, warns us in the Morning Post that the mosquito, theobaldia annulata, which, unlike the anopheles, is able to breed in infected and putrefactive matter, e.g., small pools of water, is a most insidious pest. Studying for the priesthood interrupted Father Beckett's hobby, but of recent years he has devoted nearly all his spare time to lecturing and experimenting. In this work he has been associated with some of the most prominent scientists of the day. This modest young priest dreams of the day when towns and villages will be lit by electricity without the use of wires, when motor-car headlights will burn without a battery or magneto, when houses will be heated by wireless. At the moment he is particularly interested in the problem of transmitting power without intervening wires.

"I never tire of watching an electric lamp connected to a frame aerial light up by means of radio waves emitted from a similar coil of wire some distance away. This old but little-known experiment seems to contain wonderful possibilities.

Priest's Magic Lamps.
"You know, if you have a wireless set, that the broadcasting station sends out waves which cause currents to oscillate in your aerial. This is exactly what happens to my receiving apparatus. But your current is very small—just enough to make delightful music in your telephone. Mine is strong enough to light one of the gas-filled electric bulbs used in ordinary house lighting.

Father Beckett has constructed frame aerials for this purpose which are probably the largest ever made. By using small lamps he has succeeded in sending power by radio over a distance of ten feet.

"During the war," he went on, "it was proposed to provide London with wireless umbrella hand lamps, so that the streets could be darkened still more. Our umbrellas were to be

Labour Press Raps New Police Force

LONDON, Sept. 3. (B.U.P.)—How Britain is building up a special constabulary under the command of army officers, for use in case of civil disturbance and able to meet the Red menace, is revealed in the Daily Herald which quotes from official army orders. The army authorities former regular soldiers and policemen for what is called the War Department constabulary, one of the pretensions of enthusiasm being that no member may retain membership in any trades union other than an association formed within the ranks of the constabulary.

The Herald attacks the new body as "shocking" and intended for use in the intervention in industrial disputes against the workers. It implies that the constabulary are being recruited and trained in readiness for the day, nine months hence, when the truce in the mining industry ends and an industrial crisis faces the nation.

There seems little prospect now of the attack on Harleok and his Union succeeding, since the rival organization has little money and small influence, although Mr. Shinwell, former Minister of Mines in the Labor government, is backing the Alliance of Marine Workers. It is pointed out, however, that he knows nothing of the sea or of seafaring conditions, being a tailor's presser in the east end of London. The sailing of the Majestic is taken as a sign that the strike is likely to end rapidly. One of the reasons why the Reds are finding it so hard to get a foothold in the Labor movement is that they are regarded as "quitters" when a strike is on.

Walk Three Miles Daily

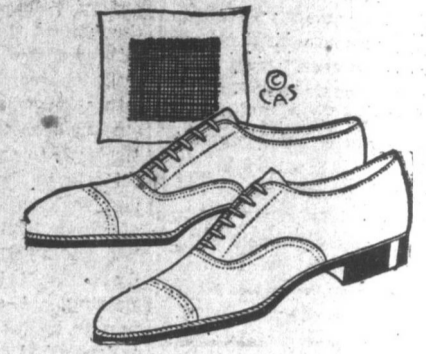

The averaged man engaged in a sedentary occupation should walk in the open at least three miles a day, according to Dr. George E. Kanouse of Newark, New Jersey. More than that is not too much. Walking, by its effect on the muscles, stimulates the heart and the organs of digestion, and thus produces an invigorating effect upon the whole body, says Dr. Kanouse, who is associate medical director of the Prudential Insurance Company of America. He is thus quoted in a recent press bulletin issued by the company:

"The manner of walking determines to a large extent the value as an exercise. One should walk briskly, vigorously, and not in a leisurely stroll, if benefit is to be derived from the walk. Cross-country walking is preferable to striding along city pavements, for new scenes engage the attention and remove the sting of drudgery, into which deliberate walking oftentimes descends. The automobile has not been an unmix'd blessing. It has made accessible many places hitherto remote; it has promoted social intercourse, and facilitated the transaction of business. But it has also cut heavily into the amount of daily exercise which man had previously obtained on foot. In pre-automobile days man walked to and from his work, about town, to and from the station. Now he uses a car. He saves something in time but loses much healthful exercise. Contrary to a general belief, Dr. Kanouse points out, the man in the city, particularly the youth, does more real walking than the country cousin. Sundays and holidays always witness the exodus of large crowds from the cities, with lunch kits and hiking togs, off for a day in the country. On the other hand, the man in the country does not stir about much, except in the course of his work. His idea of an outing is generally a ride in the car to some fixed point. Walking will not only save wear and tear

Every time the wireless cooker is used, it should be washed, dried thoroughly and sunned.

Serve hot, boiled cauliflower with sour cream to which has been added a little salt and paprika.

Clean the teeth of your comb with white cotton tape, which can be discarded after it is used.

When making a plain pudding, the cover of the mold, as well as the inside, should be greased.

Use shredded maraschino cherries to garnish sliced pineapple and serve with cookies as a dessert.

Fill halves of canned peaches with chopped nut meats; top with shredded maraschino and brown.

The Mosul Question

TEST FOR THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Britain has always taken the lead in advocating arbitration as the method of settling international disputes. Moreover, we have practised what we preached, says the Daily News.

Cheerfully Accepted. Adverse Decisions. The famous case of the Alabama half a century ago, and in the instances of the Venezuela, the Behring Sea Fisheries, the Alaska-British Columbia, we cheerfully accepted adverse decisions. Just as we expect to accept them when the disappointing Report from the Government were in the definite pronouncement on the dispute between Iraq, for which we hold a mandate, and Turkey, which is contrary to our settled policy to complain of the judgment of the judges.

The keenest British supporters of arbitration may take exception to the Report not merely because it is biased against Great Britain, but also because it is indefinite on the main point at issue. It must be clearly understood that the Commission, consisting of M. G. Sorensen, a Swedish diplomatist, and Colonel Paulis, of the British Army, was appointed by the Council of the League of Nations to ascertain all information and to make suggestions which may be of a nature to assist it in making a decision. It was not for the Commission itself to make the final decision.

The Commission was to act in an advisory capacity, and its suggestions were to be accepted or rejected by the Council of the League, which has the right to refer the matter to the League of Nations. The Commission's suggestions were strictly limited to the making of suggestions, it has gone beyond its way—consciously or unconsciously—to couch these suggestions in such a form as must be regarded as embarrassing to the British Government and tend to postpone rather than to expedite a settlement of the difficulty.

So far as the report goes, the British Government are confronted with a simple question, to which there is no reasonable reply. The final decision rests, of course, with the Council, which will have to decide whether it is necessary to point out to the Commission that its report in many respects shocks British opinion, and that it would be in the interest of the British people to have the remaining dispute settled in Asia on grounds of justice and a resolute determination to submit the whole case to the arbitration of the world.

It is impossible to anticipate the answer which the League may be expected to give. It would be in the interest of Great Britain to accept responsibility in a limited degree. Last night, we might heavily disagree, and yet accept an invitation to King Feisal's consent to the partitioning of the territory. The Christian and Kurdish elements of Mosul need protection. It would almost certainly be impossible to persuade any British Government that we should continue to exercise direct administrative control over Iraq and Mosul over a period of 100 years. The Iraqis, however, should be maintained at the expense of the British taxpayer, remarks the Daily News.

A Gross Betrayal. The present Treaty with the Iraq Government expires in 1928. Some form of agreement will have to be made, for it is out of the question that, having set up the Iraq Government, we should abandon it utterly before Iraq is firmly established as an independent State. Absolute withdrawal would be a gross betrayal of our obligations under the League.

On the other hand, it would be grossly unfair to Great Britain if the League were to seek to impose costly and onerous conditions. The League Council is not, of course, bound by these findings. They may, in a favourable atmosphere, form the basis of a practical solution. But it is conceivable that Turkey will neglect to hang on with a bulldog's grip to the dominant political dictum that Mosul must be regarded legally as her own territory.

While the Report is so constructed that it seems to give support to both Turkish and Iraq claims, and to both unity and partitioning, it may be capable, says the Scotsman, "in the hands of the Council of the League, of being turned to good purpose, although not without more delays and complications than are either desirable or necessary."
