The KING OF DIAMONDS

By LOUIS TRACY

Author of: "The Wings of the Morning," "The Pillars of the Earth," etc.

It was never heard such a blizzard," said the old man, indignantly. "I was in the middle of telling him about Old Nick himself."

In the Mile End Road the rawboned person who betrayed such excitement followed the policeman awaiting him.

"I knew I was right," he said. "I don't need to look twice at that sort of customer."

And he entered the Mary Anson Home again to ask the porter what had taken place.

It was an easy matter for Jocky Mason, released from Portland Prison on ticket-of-leave, after serving the major portion of a sentence of fourteen years' penal servitude--the man he assaulted had died, and the ex-convict narrowly escaped being hanged--to ascertain the exact facts of Philip Anson's later career.

It was known to most men. He was biographed briefly in Who's Who and had often supplied material for a column of gossip in the newspapers. Every free library held books containing references to him.

It was quite impossible that the source of his great wealth should remain hidden for so long. In one way and another it leaked out, and he became identified with the rags and yoke which created a sensation in the docks of the Clerkenwell Police Station.

But this was years later, and the clever manipulation of Mr. Anson, as his estate agent, and of Mr. Weststein, as his representative in the diamond trade, completely frustrated all attempts to penetrate the true extent of the meteor's value.

For now Philip owned a real diamond mine in South Africa, had a fine estate in Sussex, a house in Park Lane, a superb sea-going yacht, a colliery in Yorkshire, and vast sums invested in land and railway. The latent value of his work had been converted into money-earning capital.

Mr. Anson proved himself to be a very able business man. When the administration of Philip's revenue became too heavy a task for his unaided shoulders he organized a capital estate office, with well-trained lawyers, engineers and accountants to conduct its various departments, while he kept up an active supervision of the whole until Philip quitted his university, and was old enough to begin to bear some portion of the burden.

They agreed to differ on this important question. Philip was fond of travel and adventure. With great difficulty his "guardian" kept him out of the army, but compromised the matter by allowing the young millionaire to roam about the odd corners of the world in his yacht for eight months of the year, provided he spent four months of the season in London and Sussex attending to affairs.

In this month of April he was living in his town house. In July he would go to Fairfax Hall, in August to Scotland, and a month later would joyfully fly to the North, where the Sea Maids awaited him.

This lady, whose waist measured eighteen feet across and whose length was seventy feet, with a fine spread of canvas and auxiliary steam, was the only sloop able to charm him.

He was tall now, and strongly built, with something of the naval officer in his handsome, firm face and well-set-up figure. As a hobby, he had taken out a master mariner's certificate, and he could navigate his own ship in the teeth of an Atlantic gale. He loved to surround himself with friends, mostly Oxford men, of his year, but he seldom entertained ladies, either on board the Sea Maids or at either of his two fine mansions.

He avoided society in his general acquaintance, refused all overtures to mix in politics, took a keen delight in using his great wealth to alleviate distress anonymously, and earned a deserved reputation as a "bean" among the few match-making mammas who managed to make his acquaintance.

In other respects, as the boy was so, was the man--the same downright character, the same steadfast devotion to his mother's memory, the same relentless adherence to a course already decided on, and the same whole-hearted reciprocity of friendship.

As he stood in his drawing room before dinner on the evening of the day

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

SHERLOCK HOLMES TONIGHT

Another enthusiastic audience greeted the Joseph Selman Company last evening to see "When We Were Twenty-Two." To-night they revive Conan Doyle's famous melodrama "Sherlock Holmes."

The two met with a cordial greeting that showed the close ties of mutual respect and fellowship which existed between them together.

"Fox won't be here," said Philip. "Grainger has broken down--ill health, I suppose--and wired for him to go to Lincoln."

"Ah, that's a lift for Fox. He is a clever fellow, and if he manages to tell the jury a joke or two he will influence a verdict as unfavourably as any man I know until the crack of doom. Pascal laid it down in an epigram--'Plaisante justice! qu'une riviere on une montagne borne! Verite au deca du Pyrenees, erreur au dela!'"

"I am glad we are alone to-night--we can speak freely. Some people named Sharp & Smith wrote to me yesterday. 'I know them--an old-established firm of solicitors.'"

"Well, they urged me to give them an appointment on a private matter, and I did so. They began by trying to cross-examine me, but that was an absurd pretence. Seeing that whatever they had to say must stand on its own legs, they told me an extraordinary story. It appears that at a place called The Hall, Bellham, Devon, lives an elderly baronet, named Sir Philip Morland."

"Morland? Philip Morland!"

"Ah, you remember the name! It was given to a young devil who once figured in the dock before you on a charge of being in unlawful possession."

"The matter is not serious, then?"

"It is very serious. The real Philip Morland is my uncle."

"Do you mean to say that you learned this fact for the first time to-day from Sharp & Smith?"

Philip laughed. By this time they were seated at the table, and their talk descended to a certain extent on the company and goings of servants. At a dinner in the presence of ponderous butler and solemn lackey was dispensed with.

"Oh, you lawyers!" he cried. "That's a nice sort of leading question. But, my answer--'Yes.' My mother's maiden name was Moreland. Her brother had a lady married to him, and it appears the dear woman married to please herself, thereby mortally offending the baronet."

"Because my father's social position was not equal to that of the aristocratic match-maker. Moreover, her brother had an accident in his youth which rendered him irritable and morose. From being a pleasant sort of man, which, indeed, he must have been did he share aught of my mother's nature--he grew into a misanthrope, and gave his life to the classification of Exmoor beetles. He treated my mother very badly, so vilely that even she, the dear soul, during her married life held no further communication with him, and never mentioned him to me by name. Now, one day on Exmoor he found a lady, who also was devoted to beetles. At least, she knew all that the Encyclopedia Britannica could teach her. She was a poor but handsome widow."

"It is delightful to talk with you Abingdon. Your monomaniacal helps the narrative along. Sir Philip married the widow. There were no children born of my uncle's marriage."

"Oh!"

"When poverty overtook my dear one, she so far obliterated a cruel memory as to appeal, not once, but many times, to the human compassion of Exmoor, but she was invariably frozen off either by Lady Louisa Morland or by Messrs. Sharp & Smith."

"Did they admit this?"

"By no means. I am telling you the facts. I am still on top of the Pyrenees."

"Then how did you ascertain the facts?"

"I have in my possession ever since my mother's death the letters they wrote to her. They were fresh in my memory will be shown. We can assure our readers that this is one of the finest dramatic pictures yet shown. Where Is My Prisoner is one of those comedies that make you forget your troubles; another of the same order is The Chronic Life Saver, which is a comedy in which the author, Percy Sayer, has written a picture that is both instructive and amusing. Doreilly Lee has the comedy role of Mrs. Hudson and arouses many hearty laughs. The stage setting in the third act is very effective; it shows the old boat house on the river Thames and the capture of Small, the ex-convict and the death of Tongue, the East Indian Dwarf. An entire change of specialties at to-night's performance. That brilliant young comedian Harry Wilson, has new selections. Don't fail to see "The Sherlock Holmes Company are evidently creating a favorable impression with the fair sex of St. John, as sixteen young ladies made application yesterday for seats for the play this evening."

MR. ROCKEFELLER AND ACADIA UNIVERSITY

President Hutchinson, of Acadia University, was asked yesterday afternoon about the statement that John D. Rockefeller had been communicated with for a further gift to the institution. He said that he had no preliminary correspondence had been exchanged on the subject, and it was impossible as yet to say whether or not the idea of again asking Mr. Rockefeller was the outcome of a meeting of the college men, who attended the closing of the business in June. Each of those present volunteered certain views on certain conditions. It was felt that the endowment of the university must be increased if any progress was to be made. The board of governors were anxious to have Mr. Rockefeller make an unconditional gift, but this, Dr. Hutchinson said, judging from the tone of the correspondence already passed, he would hardly do. In any event the board wished not to commit themselves too far, but would like to be able to decline a gift with too strenuous conditions attaching.

THE BRUTE IN MAN The brute in man dies but slowly. In this city last evening some fifteen hundred men paid to witness a series of what by courtesy are termed boxing bouts. Not only the gutter element, but men prominent in the public life of the city and province were present. By their action they encouraged the boy on the street to believe that to reach the pinnacle of fame he should become a bruiser. There is a lot of cant about the value of boxing as a means of physical development, and a comfortable ignoring of the moral effect of such exhibitions as that of last night. We are told there was no disorder, but, since the police were present, and it was announced that unless peace was preserved the affair would be stopped, the good order will scarcely be attributed to the benign influence of jobs and uppers. The last time there was a boxing exhibition here an unfortunate young man was killed. It was then hoped that the tragedy would sour the public taste for such exhibitions, but we are told there is to be a revival of the sport (?) The tendency in this kind of public sport is always downward. It is in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred bad in the end for those who follow it up year after year, and it stirs no generous impulses in the hearts of the onlookers. For one who sees in the bout an exhibition of science, to be critically admitted, there are hundreds who only see a fight, and who want their favorite to win. The appeal is to the passions, and the grosser passions of man's nature. The world will one day have done with it, as a degrading influence which can well be spared. The amount of profanity with which the reading of this gentle criticism will be punctuated by many readers is respectfully submitted in evidence of its truth.

PRAISE CANADA The diversion of a considerable portion of the grain trade from New York to the Montreal route is still the subject of interested discussion in the United States press. The New York Journal of Commerce roundly denounces American railroads, and contrasts their course with that of the railroads, the government and the commercial interests of Canada, greatly to the credit of the latter. We quote: "The export grain trade has been light this summer, but the Canadian railroads have had the enterprise and foresight to make the most of it for the port of Montreal, while the great 'trunk lines' of the United States have supinely let them have their own way with it. The Canadian lines have made such rates as were necessary to get their share of the traffic, and they have got more than their normal share because the New York Central has insisted upon a rate from Buffalo that was sure to throw the bulk of the trade to Montreal. The Central has not been competing for business, but 'fighting' for increased rates and pretending that is the way to improve conditions in time of poor traffic. The 3 1/2 cent rate for wheat from Buffalo used to be considered fairly remunerative and 4 cents now would enable the grain from the lakes to come to New York for export, but the railroad obstinately hold out for 5 1/2 and lets cars lie idle and grain go to Montreal. The Grand Trunk will take grain round through Canada to Portland at a rate to keep up its share of such export trade as is going, but the New York Central, with its control of the Boston & Albany, will not let it go to Boston. Montreal is getting the lion's share of the business, and Canadian railroad officials declare that their opportunity has been revealed to them and they intend to hold the advantage. When a full movement develops with the new harvesters, other ports will get what Montreal is not able to handle, but the Canada railroads and canals and the St. Lawrence port will see that its capacity for handling is increased. "The trunk line policy, which has been dominated by the New York Central so far as grain traffic from Buffalo is concerned, is extremely short-sighted, even from the railroad point of view, while it is seriously injurious to the commercial interests of this city. It would have been sensible for the railroads to hold their share of the traffic in a dull time, and to avail themselves promptly of an increase in the traffic accessible to their lines. Grain-carrying from the lakes to the seaboard may be relatively unimportant to them in and of itself, and of diminishing rather than increasing importance, but the export grain trade is of first-class importance to the seaports for outgoing cargoes. This bulky freight can be taken at low ocean rates, but it is a necessary item in the steamship traffic and helps to maintain the regular lines and to attract the casual shipping to this port. It is one of the things that have given New York its pre-eminence and it is essential to its maintenance. It is an element in our foreign trade worth striving to retain and the foreign trade of New York is of no small consequence to the railroads terminating here. When it wanes it is bad for their business and when it increases they get a large share of benefit. There could be no greater folly in railroad management than failing to do all within reason to sustain each factor in the foreign trade of the seaports at which railroad lines terminate. The railroads of Canada make every effort in this direction because they see it is for their own advantage. "The railroads, the government and the commercial interests in Canada are working together to develop the export grain trade through that country, especially by way of its one great port, Montreal. When the new government aided transcontinental lines are completed ports may be developed on the Eastern coast to escape the perils and high insurance of the St. Lawrence route and to supplement that route with one available for a longer season. So far as port accommodation and ocean transportation are concerned, New York has every advantage over any Canadian port on river or seacoast, except that of cheapness in handling cargoes, but this advantage may be largely overcome if Canadian railroads and canals make the cost of reaching the shipping points materially less than it is in this country, and that is what they are working for. Our established trunk lines, with their highly developed facilities, could certainly hold their own in this competition if they will. "The grain trade by itself may not be so important to them as to the Canada roads, on account of the bulk and greater profit of their other traffic, but it is still important, not only for its own sake, but for the indirect benefit to the other traffic that will come from the encouragement of foreign trade generally. It is short-sighted folly to show indifference to it and allow it to be gradually lured away to other routes to build up other seaports at the expense of those on the North Atlantic Coast. Our main hope for retaining this trade lies in an enlarged and improved waterway, but we get that the railroads are bound in their own future interest to do their share toward keeping it. When the canal is ready to take more of the heavy and bulky traffic it will give a stimulus to industry and trade along its line and at its terminal from which the railroad will get benefit. Transportation men are too apt to think that they create industry and trade, whereas it is the growth of industry and trade that creates occupation for them, or rather the two forces must act and react upon each other and work together to produce the best results for both."

MARRIAGE CONGRESS IS BEING ADVOCATED A Case That Has Arisen in France Emphasizes the Necessity for It. Paris, Aug. 25.—The Paris society, which is collecting evidence in order to prove the need of an international marriage congress for the purpose of removing the inconveniences arising from the differing marriage conditions existing in the various countries in Europe, recently had laid before it the following case: Ten years ago, a Frenchman married a German lady living in Paris. The couple moved to Denmark, where the wife sued for divorce, obtained it, and then remarried. As this divorce was pronounced judicially in the husband's country, he could not re-marry in Denmark. He returned to France and instituted proceedings for divorce since the wife's divorce was not valid there. But the Tribunal of Seine refused the Frenchman's request on the ground that although in French law the marriage of the defendant would appear to be null and void, that marriage, contracted by the woman in good faith and in conformity with the law of the country in which she at present resides, must produce its effect so long as its nullity has not been expressly pronounced, and no demand having such an object has been submitted to the Tribunal. The judgment, which condemns the Frenchman to pay the single both in Denmark, where his former wife has re-married, and in his own country, has been upheld on appeal by the Judges of the Court of First Instance in Paris. TOO MANY HARVESTERS. Winnipeg, Aug. 25.—From all indications it would appear that the West is to have not only a bumper crop, but a bumper harvest. The demand for farm help this season. There are already almost as many men in the country as the demand calls for, and when the last of the crops from the East has arrived all places will be well filled. Hundreds of harvesters are idle at Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Deloraine and Manitou. After being supplied, he drank it and was about to walk out when the following conversation took place: Landlord—"Here, sir, you haven't paid for that whiskey you ordered." Irishman—"What do you say?" Landlord—"I said you hadn't paid for that whiskey you ordered." Irishman—"Did you say for it?" Landlord—"Of course I did." Irishman—"Well, then, what's the good of both of us saying for it?"—The Bir. HE WAS A WONDER. Digger—"I'll tell to see anything remarkable about that man." Diggs—"That's because you don't know him. Last winter I was out for nearly two weeks, and, although I met him every day during that period, he never once suggested a remedy."—Chicago News.

BEAR INVADERS TOWN A Visit From a Big Bear Created Some Excitement in Sackville on Sunday. (Sackville Post.) Sackville and Middle Sackville were greatly excited Sunday afternoon and our usual Sabbath quiet was rudely disturbed by the appearance of a bear. Some parties discovered bruin in the lower part of the cemetery early in the afternoon, and the alarm quickly brought out every man and boy and a goodly portion of the female population. Firearms of all kinds were requisitioned and some joined in the chase armed with pitch forks, shovels or any other weapon that came handy. The occasion gave two of our citizens opportunity to distinguish themselves, and Sunday night the praises of His Worship Mayor Pickard and Warren Cop were in everybody's mouth. As soon as bruin became aware that he was likely to become a target for hostilities, he started off across the Tantram and towards Middle Sackville at a lively trot. Messrs Pickard and Copp, armed to the teeth, jumped into a carriage, and putting the whip to the horse, started up the road to head off the unwelcome visitor. This they succeeded in doing, and getting within range, the Mayor, with a Bisley shot, laid bruin low at first pitch. After everybody about the town had had inspected the dead bear, the carcass was loaded into the carriage and brought to Sackville.

WHAT NEXT IN MOROCCO Opinion in London, Paris and Madrid is That Almost Anything May Happen. Paris, Aug. 25.—News of the proclamation as Sultan of Mulai Hafid is taken here to mark the complete triumph of the usurping Sultan against the hostilities, Abd-el-Aziz, the Sultan of record, who, according to the latest reports, has definitely given up the struggle and has announced his intention of retiring to Damascus, where he will await the turn in the tide of fortune before he raises his standard again. While not minimizing the gravity of the situation created by the battle, the Paris newspapers are inclined to use caution in forecasting the future in view of the frequent vacillations in the fortunes of the rival Sultans in the past. Madrid, Aug. 25.—The Spanish press is of the opinion that the downfall of Abd-el-Aziz is now an accomplished fact. The newspapers point out that recent events must necessarily affect the attitude of Spain and France and other signatories to the Algeciras Act with regard to Morocco. Several of the newspapers are urging a new Algeciras conference. London, Aug. 25.—The morning papers, in discussing the Moroccan situation, are inclined to the opinion that Mulai Hafid's victory introduces new complications in an already difficult problem, and that Morocco is such a country of surprises that it is next to impossible to predict the outcome of the latest events.

LABRADOR COAST NEEDS LIGHTHOUSES London, Aug. 25.—The havoc along the Labrador coast moves the 'Westminster Gazette' to demand the establishment of meteorological stations for the purpose of warning fishermen of coming storms. The paper also complains of the unlighted state of the coast. A despatch from Laporte, Indiana, says 'The official announcement was made at Peru that Mr. Luke J. Ferritor, superintendent of the Springfield division of the Wabash Railroad, has resigned to take the superintendency of the Grand Trunk Railway, with offices in Montreal.

HALIFAX BOXER HAD BETTER OF IT

Tom Foley Given the Decision Over Dan Littlejohn Last Night.

Fifteen Hundred People Saw the Boxing Match in the Victoria Ring—Mike Twin Sullivan Appears in Exhibition Bout.

About fifteen hundred people attended the boxing show at the Victoria Ring last night when Tom Foley of Halifax was given the decision over Dan Littlejohn of this city in a ten-round bout.

Before introducing the boys Referee Powers expressed his pleasure at the revival of boxing in this city. He exhorted all to keep within bounds and said that if there was any show of over enthusiasm he would stop the fight.

The first two rounds in the Rogers-Watts was about even, the boys doing a lot of fiddling and sizing each other up. The third round rather more lively, both mixing matters, with Rogers finishing the stronger of the pair.

Round 10—The men went at it hammer and tongs. Dan rushed to clinch and succeeded in landing a hard right at the jaw. Foley landed right on the nose.

Reardon's bay stallion, Allen Winter, from an Indianapolis stable, won at the Readingville track today in capturing the largest share of the $50,000 American trotting handicap from the field of thirty-three starters, is believed by the 20,000 followers of harness racing, who saw the contest, to establish a new era in the history of the sport and ensure its rejuvenation in this country.

Round 5—Dan tried a right for the head and missed. Foley also missed an upper cut. Tom rushed Dan to clinch and the latter slipped to the neck and body, forcing Dan to the ropes.

ENGLISH COMMENT ON CANADIAN DAIRY TRADE

Improvements are Commended and Comparisons Made With Other Colonies.

London, Aug. 25.—Weddell & Company's annual colonial dairy produce review says the Canadian export butter last year was the smallest known since 1886.

Some inferior quality which yet comes, is damaged by want of proper refrigerating arrangements before it is shipped, and the remainder of its defects, in its manufacture are avoided if proper care is taken.

There has been a steady decrease in the cheese exports from Canada and the United States, and their decrease has given an opportunity to New Zealand to make up some of the deficiency. The imports from New Zealand have advanced in ten years from 5,870 tons to 13,122 tons.

An improvement in quality continues to be shown in Canadian methods of curing, and better transit arrangements which have been provided for Canadian cheese, have added largely to the improvement in quality which now prevails.

Australia sent a small shipment of cheese to London last year and the quality was very satisfactory. One shipment from New South Wales was superior in quality to the best Canadian owing to its being made on the English cheddar principle and having approached very closely in having the milk held close to the factory door so that the milk was always in sweet condition when it came under the cheese maker's control.
