THE EVENING TIMES.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARCH 9, 1907.

The St. John Evening Times is published at 27 and 29 Canterbury street, every evening (Sunday excepted) by the St. John Times Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., a company incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Act.

JOHN RUSSELL, JR., President. TELEPHONE—News and Editorial, 122; Advertising Dept., 706; Circulation Dept., 706. The Times has the largest afternoon circulation in the Maritime Provinces.

CLEAR THE ATMOSPHERE

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was quite right in stating yesterday that no enquiry could be made on the vague charges made by Mr. Fowler. Before there can be an enquiry the name or names of some man or men must be coupled with the charges. If Mr. Fowler makes definite charges against a member or members, naming them, the enquiry must proceed, otherwise the talk on the subject is a waste of time.

PROFITABLE FARMING

The Report of the New Brunswick Commissioner for Agriculture for 1906 states that the province received a larger money return for agricultural products last year than ever before. Hay, grain, potatoes, pork, cheese, butter and eggs made record prices. Beef alone was depressed. It is noted that during the last two or three years there has been a large increase in the quantity of potatoes raised, with a new and profitable market in Montreal and Toronto, held by the superior quality of the tubers from the soil of New Brunswick.

A PREJUDICED JOURNAL

It seems to be somewhat difficult for the Moncton Transcript to be fair in discussing matters in dispute between St. John and Halifax. The Transcript is published in New Brunswick, but invariably takes sides with Halifax. Thus on Thursday it said: "In the best interests of Canada the C. P. R. steamers should call at Halifax, as it is the nearest Atlantic port to Great Britain, and as the route is ample accommodation for steamers of the turbine class. If the C. P. R. could get running rights over the I. C. R. on its own terms, St. John people would quickly see how the C. P. R. would give the port the go-by."

WILL HELP NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. I. B. Oakes has been asked by the Department of the Interior "to spend a few months in England and Scotland in the effort to induce good farm laborers to come to Nova Scotia, also men of more or less means to come and settle on our farm lands." Mr. Oakes will sail today, and takes with him a pamphlet on Nova Scotia issued at the expense of the provincial government. He will also while in England receive carefully prepared statements of farms for sale, with photographs, to enable him the more effectually to deal with intending emigrants. The work of Mr. Oakes will unquestionably benefit the province of Nova Scotia. One of the great sources of complaint made in England by those interested in the maritime provinces is that there are no small, well-illustrated pamphlets, setting forth briefly and attractively the advantages to be gained here to make a home. All the attractive literature and practically all the active missionary work points to western Canada. It is high time that the claims of

GERMAN PROSPERITY

Perhaps the most effective reply that Germany can give to the Socialists is the statement made by Vice Chancellor Weber in the Reichstag the other day, in reply to a complaint about the high rate for money maintained by the Imperial Bank. He said, according to a cable to a New York paper, that this dearness of money was due to Germany's unparalleled activity in trade and industry, and that the bank was unable arbitrarily to maintain a low rate when the demands of commerce were heavy. The foreign trade of Germany increased $250,000,000 in 1906, and such intensity in the movement of trade necessarily increased the demands upon the credit of the Imperial Bank. These demands had been greater during the past two years than ever before, and in spite of the high bank rate they were still extraordinary. Owing to the favorable balance of trade, the vice chancellor continued, Germany was able to make net gold imports in 1905 to the value of $44,750,000 and in 1906 to the value of $31,500,000.

WINTER AND SPRING

(By Charles Stewart Humbert.) Old Winter the King, is dying at last, his number was cold. An he rode on the blast, with his white mantle flowing, O'er all, as he passed On his mission of death. Farewell, then, King Winter, Why struggle so long? From the south comes our hero, Less fierce, yet more strong, With sunbeams for armour, Young love for his song, And life in his breast. And now the fields are brown and bare, The winds beyond deserted, From harvest till the farmer rears, And waits the coming months severe— For buds of hope, his heart to cheer, Are found upon the leafless trees— Then hope and let anxiety fear. And burst in life when spring shall appear, Then hope and let anxiety fear. With sunbeams for armour, Young love for his song, And life in his breast. Their of gods of love on all bestow.

A WOMAN'S REPLY

"If I could only die and leave you well off," he said, after they had had their first quarrel, "I would be glad to go." "How," she calmly asked, "could you die and leave me otherwise than well off." —Chicago Record-Herald.

THE THEATRES

AT THE OPERA HOUSE The Myrtle-Harder Company continues to draw capacity audiences at the Opera House and the best evidence that patrons are being attracted is the fact that many of the same people are seen in the theatre every time there is a change of bill.

NEXT WEEK AT KEITH'S

One can, with every confidence, sound a note of praise in favor of the vaudeville offerings at the Keith Theatre, and next week's bill promises to be, if anything, a little above the usual high-class standard. It is headed by the Zoyaras, described as a revolving sphere performers. They introduce many strange features on the rolling globe, and are usually commended to be the greatest globe manipulators in vaudeville. Another headliner of equal importance will be the Democella Trio, appearing in a clever comedy skit on the legitimate entertainment acts, in which they introduce a number of acrobatic feats, singing, and grotesque table and barrel work.

INTENSIFIED FRUIT JUICES
AN IMPROVEMENT ON NATURE
 A Discovery that is Revolutionizing Medicine.

Remarkable Success Attends the Finding of a New Medicinal Compound by Combining the Juices of Apples, Oranges, Figs and Prunes.

Fruit helps to keep one healthy. Fruit, in itself, will not cure disease. The medicinal principle—or that part of fruit which has a curative effect—is in such infinitesimal quantities, that it is unable to overcome a diseased condition of the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys or skin.

Just here is where science stepped in. An Ottawa physician did what nature could not do. He first found that some fruits were stronger medicinally than others—and that apples, oranges, figs and prunes contained all the healing properties of other fruits. There are two principles in fruit juices—bitter and sweet. After extracting the juices of the four fruits mentioned, this physician succeeded in replacing one atom of the sweet principle by one of the bitter. This resulted in an entirely new combination being formed. This new compound was many times more active medicinally than the fruit juices. While eating fruit only helped to keep one well, this compound actually cured disease.

To make it more valuable still, this physician added the finest tonics and antiseptics, and then, by evaporating the entire compound to a powder, made it into tablets.

This, in short, is the method of making "Fruit-a-tives"—these wonderful tablets—the most reliable cure for Constipation, Biliousness, Stomach Troubles, Kidney and Bladder Disease and Skin Affections. Being made from fruit, "Fruit-a-tives" may be taken by women and children without fear of ill-effect.

Don't take a substitute. If your druggist does not handle them, send 50c for a box to Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THREE MEN MURDERED
 A Terrible Triple Crime Off Coast of Labrador.

SYDNEY, N. S., March 8.—Mail advices received here by way of Brigus, N. F., from Baieau, on the Labrador, tell of a terrible triple murder which occurred there recently.

It appears that four men, all named Dyson, were out shooting in two boats, a man from each boat fired simultaneously at a bird, and the nearest boat rowed alongside to pick it up. One of the Dysons took the bird into his punt, but no sooner did so than he was shot dead by the man who fired at the bird from the other boat. This enraged the chum of Dyson who was shot and taking aim he killed the murderer of the first. The boat mate of the second Dyson retaliated by shooting Dyson No. 3, and then rowed to land and reported the matter.

Baieau is about 70 miles from Baie Harbor. The only justice of the peace on the Labrador coast is Mr. Fraser, at Rigoquet, about 138 miles from the scene who, no doubt, has since heard of the affair, as he makes a trip over the coast with his boat and dog every season.

The members of the Thistle Curling Club will attend divine service at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in St. Mary's church. The club chaplain, Rev. Dr. W. O. Raymond, will preach. The club members will meet at 10:30 o'clock at the rink and march to the church, and an invitation to all former members of the club to join them is given.

ARE YOU SUBJECT TO HEADACHE?

If you are, and have never tried Burdock Blood Bitters it will pay you to profit by the experience of others and give it a trial. A healthy stomach, right acting liver and bowels that properly perform their important duties, will render anyone free from headache. If these organs are not in perfect condition, headache must follow. The proper course is obvious—restore the stomach, liver and bowels to health, and headache cannot exist. For this purpose no medicine equals

I. C. R. PENSION BILL CHANGED IN SENATE

Ottawa, March 8.—The bill to establish the government railways provident fund was put through committee in the senate after Sir Richard Cartwright had agreed to some amendments.

One made at the suggestion of Senator Loughheed admits women to the benefits of the fund.

One suggested by Sir Mackenzie Bowell amends clause 17 so as not to take any possible authorization from the minister to reinstate employees who have been dismissed for drunkenness and dishonesty.

At the suggestion of Senator Robertson the medical examination clause was strengthened by declaring the examination should be made by "a duly qualified practitioner."

"77" Humphreys' Seventy-Seven Cures Colds and GRIP

First Aid to the Injured

First aid to the injured is not more important than the first and especially the prompt treatment of Grip. "Seventy-seven" taken early, it cuts it short—taken during an epidemic, it pre-occupies the system and repels the invasion; taken while suffering, quick relief is given. The long continued weakness and dependency caused by the Grip, finds no better remedy than "77."

Colds which are obstinate, that "hang on" and do not yield to treatment, find relief from "77."

"77" fits the vest pocket.

At Uruggis, 25 cents, or mailed, Humphreys' Home, Medicine Co., Cor. William and John Streets, New York.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

It removes the cause of the headache by its splendid cleansing, strengthening and tonic properties, whereby the entire system is brought into healthy action. Miss Orlina Dubal, Letellier, Man., writes: "I suffered for fifteen years from sick headache. To the advice of a friend I owe my complete cure, and it is with great pleasure that I testify to you that I have not suffered since using your wonderful remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters. I can recommend it as an efficacious remedy for sick headache, which caused me so much misery. Price $1.00 per bottle or 6 bottles for $5.00 at all dealers."

HON. MR. DRYSDALE FOR NOVA SCOTIA BENCH?

Halifax, N. S., March 8.—Rumors have been current today that Attorney General Drysdale will be gazetted to the supreme court bench tomorrow, but his closest personal and political friends profess to know nothing about it.

A member of the Nova Scotia government, who should know, said that he believed either Hon. Mr. Drysdale or F. A. Laurence would be appointed tomorrow, but could not say which.

Mr. Drysdale is in Windsor tonight and could not be reached.

General opinion favors the story that Drysdale will be the man.

A TRIAL BOTTLE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY CURE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE TO EVERY READER OF THE EVENING TIMES WHO SUFFERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER, BLADDER OR BLOOD DISEASE.

Mrs. L. Clifford Figg, of Chicago, Ill., who suffered intensely for months from Kidney and Bladder Trouble, Says That After Taking Other Medicines Without Relief Warner's Safe Cure Restored Her to Health. She Writes June 1st, 1906.

"It gives me great pleasure to recommend Warner's Safe Cure to all who may be suffering from kidney and bladder trouble. I was ill and miserable for months with backache, sick headache, dizziness, rheumatic pains and neuralgia, grew daily more nervous and irritable, and finally, after consulting a physician, I learned that I had kidney and bladder trouble. After taking his medicines for some time with little or no relief, I determined to take the advice of a friend and try Warner's Safe Cure. One bottle certainly made a great difference, and continuing the use of Safe Cure, I soon noticed the urinary disorders and pains disappearing and gradually my health and strength returned. I took six bottles in all, which effected a complete cure, and I am most happy to commend your medicine to all in need." - Mrs. L. Clifford Figg, 146 Dakin St., Chicago, Ill.

PROTECTS YOU FROM CATARRH

Just Breathe "Catarrhose" and You're Insured Against Colds, Coughs, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

As the only way to reach catarrh is by inhaling medicated air, it follows that the healing balsams of Catarrhose can't fail to cure. It is a purely vegetable antiseptic—soothing and heals wherever it goes. The germ-killing vapor is inhaled at the mouth and instantly spreads through all the breathing organs. Every trace of bronchitis and catarrh is rooted out, and such health and strength is imparted that these troubles never again return. Catarrhose has cured thousands, and here is quoted the experience of Mrs. James A. Tweedie, of Jay Bridge, Maine, who sent for sixteen outfits of Catarrhose for friends in her locality. This lady gives very full particulars why she did so. Her daughter, fourteen years old, had doctored for Catarrh, obtaining no benefit, tried lots of other remedies, but all failed—recommended by a neighbor to try Catarrhose. Instead of despairing as she had good reason for doing, obtained Catarrhose, and before it was done, as she states she was completely cured. No wonder she recommends it. Child had drooping in the throat, hawking, spitting; father thought she was going into consumption; could not sleep at night, and add: I only wish anyone suffering from Catarrh to give it a fair trial; any druggist will enable you to do this for they all sell it—your money back if Catarrhose does not benefit you. Complete outfit is guaranteed, price $1.00; small (trial) size 25c.; all dealers or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U. S. A.

GEO. W. FOWLER IS THE STAR WITNESS IN TORONTO CASE

He Creates Something Like a Sensation in the Case of Peter Ryan vs the Bank of Montreal and J. D. Montgomery

Toronto, March 8.—Private letters written by George W. Fowler, M. P., to his solicitor, J. D. Montgomery, produced something like a sensation in the non-jury assizes before Justice Clute this afternoon. Mr. Fowler was the principal witness in the case of Peter Ryan against the Bank of Montreal and Montgomery. The reason for his being called was that he became interested in certain alleged securities held by the bank for Ryan. In the letters mentioned he referred to the plaintiff in the case as "an old villain" and "rascal, who was a menace to the peace of the community."

On one deal regarding these securities Fowler said he had made $85,000, and that the funds had been obtained from the Union Trust Company to put it through. Mr. Fowler pointed out, when he took the stand, that the Bank of Montreal had certain claims against the Ashcroft Water and Electric Company, and that in purchasing the collateral given by Ryan to the bank he was so in order to protect his own interests. "How did you come to obtain the claims held by the bank?" asked Mr. Miller. "The bank held certain collateral of Ryan's, among which there were some notes of the Ashcroft Company, some of which had been used and judgment entered. That meant, as I was informed by Shields, that if these went to execution the assets would be sold. I felt I must take over the claim against the Ashcroft Company in order to protect my interests."

SUFFRAGE BILL TALKED TO DEATH

Verbose British M. P.'s Kill the Women's Suffrage Measure—Indignation Meeting Follows.

London, March 8.—The bill to extend the right of suffrage to women was defeated in the house of commons today where it was talked to death without coming to a vote. The supporters of the bill made a determined attempt to secure a vote, but the speaker declined to accept a motion of closure, and the sitting of the house closed automatically at 9 o'clock this afternoon. The bill is thus killed for the present session. The result was not surprising, even to the suffragists themselves, as some of the strongest sympathizers of the women's cause realized that the question was not ripe for legislation and that parliament was not in a position to deal with the question until it becomes a definite issue at a general election. The suffragists, however, were not daunted, and tonight they held an enthusiastic meeting at Exter Hall. Resolutions condemning the attitude of the government and parliament and expressing the determination to carry on the agitation were adopted. The speakers at tonight's meeting included James Keir Hardie, Socialist member of the house of commons; Philip Snowden, M. P., a new recruit to the women's cause; the Rev. Charles P. Aked, who was pastor of Pembroke chapel, Liverpool, and who has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, New York; Israel Zangwill, the prominent Zionist, as well as many of the prominent suffragists. Rev. Dr. Aked had attended the session of the house of commons during the afternoon in behalf of the suffragists in order that he might be able to communicate to tonight's meeting an account of the debate on the bill.

QUEEN PRAISES DEAD HEROINE

Her Majesty Expresses Admiration for Montreal School Teacher Who Died for Her Children.

Ottawa, March 8.—Lord Elgin cables Lord Grey as follows: "The Queen has learned with great regret of the disastrous fire which has occurred at the Protestant Children's School at Montreal. Her majesty desires to convey to you her great admiration of the heroic conduct of Miss Maxwell, who gave up her life in a gallant attempt to rescue the little children entrusted to her care, as well as her majesty's deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of this brave woman." CALAIS MAN HAS AWFUL ACCIDENT

William Franks Falls From Roof and is Impaled on Picket Fence—Little Girl Burned to Death.

St. Stephen, N. B., March 8.—A terrible accident happened in Calais this afternoon. William Franks was on the roof of his house removing snow, when he slipped and went over the edge, alighting on a picket fence. One picket penetrated an eye, another fractured his jaw bone, and another dislocated his shoulder. At this time he is still alive, though his chances for recovery are not promising. Last evening a three-year-old daughter of Charles Blakeley, of Scotch Ridge, was playing with matches in an upper room, and set her clothing on fire. As soon as possible her parents wrapped her in blankets and extinguished the flames, but the burns were fatal, her death resulting in about five hours.

IS THERE ANY PAIN IN YOUR SIDE OR BACK?

Pains anywhere—in the chest, neck, side, back or muscles—they are always a discomfort. If the inflammation is severe, the pain will be intense. If allowed to continue, complications will follow. Nervine can help curing because it penetrates through the sore tissues, carrying healing properties that destroy every symptom of ache or distress. As a true antidote for pain, nothing yet discovered equals Nervine. For colds, sore chest, pleurisy, it's a specific. In rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia, results are just as sure. Nervine will not fail you—that's sure; try a 25c. bottle.

THE MARCH HARES

WHEN THE MARCH HARES WENT MAD.

BY HELENA DAVIS.

There was a terrible commotion among the inhabitants of Hareville. The March Hares and the March Lambs and lambskins could hear it from their respective abodes, the lions from the deep wood in the heart of the forest and the lambs and lambskins from their delightful valley protected from the winds and storms by a range of purple mountains.

"When the noise reached the ears of the lions they came from their lair to prick up listening ears and to put scenting noses to earth. The lambs and lambskins, hearing the terrible commotion from the domain of their neighbors, gathered together to hold council. 'What can it be?' asked one of the older lambs of the flock. 'There is some sort of trouble in Hareville,' answered another lamb, one of the favorites of the flock. And all the lambskins sat up a 'Daa, bas, bas,' with all their pretty might.

The lions in their lair heard the lambskins, and their pitiful bleatings caused the lion cubs to begin roaring. These noises of wood and valley, added to that coming from Hareville, where the March Hares dwell, made the whole countryside tremble like an earthquake.

"I'll go and ascertain the trouble," ventured one old Papa lion. "It seems our friends the lambs and lambskins are excited over it as well as ourselves, if one is to judge by their bleatings. 'I'll bear you company,'" spoke out a fine young lion, half grown and very strong.

The two lions set out toward Hareville stopping en route in the valley to hold council with the lambs. The lambs seeing them coming—and being on the friendliest terms—advanced in a body to meet them. "What can be the matter with our neighbors, the March Hares?" called out the lions to the lambs as soon as they came within speaking distance.

"We are quite unable to explain, friends," answered the lambs. "We're quite worked up over the terrible noises from their quarter."

"We are off to ascertain the trouble," explained the lion. "Do some of you care to accompany us?"

"With pleasure," replied several of the largest and oldest lambs. After coaxing the lambskins to be quiet and to seek their beds of clover under the sheltering cliff, the committee of investigation hurried off across the valley toward a broad, open upland with a thick grove of heavy timber in its center. Toward this grove the committee hastened, for within its shelter dwelt the March Hares. This place was called Hareville.

As the lions and the lambs approached nearer and nearer to the grove the noises from Hareville became more deafening, and instead of warning the comers that something dreadful was the matter there, the noises took on the sound of revelry. "I believe upon my soul that they are having a great house-warming," declared the old lion, chairman of the committee. "And how would we feel should we step into a party where we were not invited?"

"But friend lion, how could they have a house-warming without inviting the lions and lambs?" questioned one of the lambs.

"True, that would be quite out of the question," admitted the lion. "Well, let us advance with some caution and see from a distance what this commotion—and at the dead of night—means."

They circled the grove and came in near a clearing—or open space in the wood—from where a good view could be had of the Hares. There, in the wildest confusion, were assembled as noisy a lot of Hares as it was ever the lot of earthly skies to look down upon. The lions and the lambs were dumfounded. They thought they must be dreaming, and they bit each other's sides to wake each other up. But, no, they were not asleep. What they saw was not from dreamland's fancies. The March Hares were screaming, laughing, dancing and standing on their heads for a certainty. In fact, of all the crazy capers that were ever cut by animals these capers now in Hareville were the wildest.

"Suppose we enter in a body, serious and collected," suggested the old lion. Acting upon his suggestion the lions and lambs walked right into the midst of the excited Hares and began to address them.

"Friends, what means all this?" asked the chairman of the investigating committee, raising his great roaring voice above the din of noises. "Why this undue demonstration at midnight when all peace-loving animals should be in bed? Some calm-minded Hare please speak."

Hereupon a small, withered old Hare, his ears drooping sadly and his cotton tail falling pitifully behind him, came close to the speaker. "Come to one side," he bleated in the lion's ear, "and I'll tell you all about how this began."

The lions and the lambs withdrew with the old Hare to a vacant place at the edge of the grove and made ready to hear his story. The old Hare rubbed his nose in a puzzled way, tried to assume a more decorous and law-abiding bearing, but his voices fell upon deaf ears. The more we talked the louder became the rioting and revelry around us. Indeed, those wretched ones lost all respect for the dignity of age, and catching me, two by two, they ran round and round me, crying out all sorts of silly things. At last I managed to get away from that crowd, and going to another group of hilarious Hares, I begged of them to tell me what had come over the spirits of them. They laughed like mad, crowded like packs, barked like dogs and mewed like cats.

Then, with one accord, they began pulling my ears and tail till I feared I'd lose those necessary accessories to my anatomy. Then, growing tired of me, they began to tease some other poor fellow who had not gone out of his mind. At this point in my story, friends, you appeared upon the scene. I have spoken."

The old lion meditated a moment, then said: "It has just occurred to me that Hareville has gone suddenly mad. What you tell me, as that which I have seen with my own eyes and heard with my own ears, make me draw this conclusion: There is but one thing for us to do—withdraw while we can. Those of you who are still in your senses would better join us and be on the safe side. Just now the mad ones are in the gay state. Soon may follow a fighting state, and the few who are sane would be annihilated in quick order. Come, my old friend, call together your brothers and sisters who have escaped this terrible affliction of mind, and let us be off for Lion Lair."

"Spoken with wisdom," said the lambs, wagging their tails by way of indorsement of the lion's plan. "We agree with our leader, the March Lion."

"Perhaps he is right," sighed the little old Hare. "I'm certain of one thing—it is not safe for one with dignity and sense to remain in this bedlam. I shall call together the few of us that—"

But the old Hare did not finish his sentence, for at that moment a wild stampede of the frenzied Hares took place, they heading for the mountains far away. All that the sane ones could do was to get out of their way, hide themselves behind the trees and clumps of bushes till the mad crowd had well disappeared from the grove. Then, overcome by the terrible sight, they drew together and decided to remain where they were, knowing full well that the mad Hares would never return.

And to this day the mad March Hares are loose in the land, always coming out on their wild stampedes in March, then hiding away in caves and canyons till the season of their madness again arrives. But never have they returned to their first home in the grove of Hareville. And even to this day the lambs and the lions tell the story to their lambskins and cubs of that terrible night many, many centuries ago when the March Hares went mad. But as the lions and lambs and Hares' language cannot be understood by the children of men, the story of the Mad March Hares Revivly has never before been told.

QUEENS OF ENGLAND.
Anne of Cleves, fourth wife of Henry VIII., was a young German woman of plain face and figure, a good sort of soul, simple in taste and of a domestic nature, having been brought up in the closest companionship of her thrifty and housewifely mother. She was little educated, for at that time the German people scorned the notion of girls learning the languages and music. The needle and household management were considered more fitting accomplishments for the fair.

Therefore, when Anne came to Henry VIII., she fell far short in his critical eye, both physically and mentally. In spite of the fact that she was a lady in every sense of the word, Anne of Cleves drew a long face and was heard to mutter the most uncomplimentary things to his courtiers about the physical blemishes of his bride-to-be.

At that very moment Henry determined to rid of so ungainly a woman, either before or after marriage. In vain he urged Cromwell to "find a remedy" to prevent the marriage, but matters had gone too far and Cromwell urged Henry to fulfill his marriage agreement. Most unwillingly Henry acquiesced, but Cromwell's doom was sealed. And from the hour when he wedded Anne of Cleves Henry began to scheme to have the marriage annulled. It is needless to say that he accomplished his desire, for Henry was not one to suffer a disappointment. Within a short time Henry found an excuse to rid of his fourth wife. Previous to Henry's negotiations for Anne's hand in marriage she had been betrothed to a young German nobleman. This was a reason sufficient to have his marriage with her annulled, and parliament confirmed his decision.

Thus did Anne of Cleves, repudiated w.e. of Henry VIII., quietly relinquish all claims as Henry's wife and live apparently untroubled through one of its cruel sons.

Danny and Granny Groo carefully tied up the locket and its contents. Then Granny placed it safely in her breast as they went to the spring to dig up the treasure there. To their great happiness they found the pot of gold, and ran to the cot with it. When they counted it they found themselves very rich, indeed. They decided to go at once to the country where Danny was to rule some day and learn the ways and needs of the people. So, putting on their wraps, they hurried to the village, where they first proceeded to have a good supper, and secondly to send for a poor, old relative, to whom they presented their little farm, telling him to raise a body of sturdy followers and to go into the mountain and drive out the robbers who were now coming down into their territory. Then they brought a little rig and horse, for they were too little to be extravagant in the eyes of the townspeople, as there were some of a disreputable character, who would have robbed them.

And so on and on they rode toward the land where happiness was in store for them.

so small when he was told of the locket, soon forgot its existence. He was an industrious little fellow, rising before the sun during the farming months and going to the fields to till. Old Granny helped, of course, doing all the "man's work," as she called the labor which was too heavy for Danny. Besides the garden and the wheat and barley fields, there was a small flock of sheep and a milk-patched cow to be looked after. Often on warm summer days, after the crops had all been garnered, Danny would take his flock of sheep up the mountain side, some two miles from his home, where they might nibble the fresh young herbage that grew there. Old Granny Groo remained at the house and churned the golden cream to get a bit of golden butter for their supper, or spun flax in the cool shadow of their loomroom.

Thus, while they were very poor, it will be seen that they were busy and happy. But one day their peace was sadly perturbed. One day they were sitting at the cupboard of every household of the time. They had just finished their meal and were sitting at the table, when a knock came at the door. It was the first time since the death of his mother.

"Oh, lad, lad, the mountain robbers have been here and taken all our grain and the cow and the sheep," said the man who had just come in. "I begged them to leave the cow and cheese to keep us from starving. But they laughed at me as they drove her away. They came into the house and robbed the cupboard of every morsel of food. They ransacked the chest and found a piece of new cloth I had laid away and which I was going to make into a new coat for my wife. They even took the grain of new wine I was so proud of, and the first time these robbers had seen fit to come down that side of the mountain, for the wealth of that part of the country lay on the side opposite the home of old Granny Groo and her little grandson. In fact, on this side of the mountain land was so poor that very few risked trying to get a living from it, and Granny Groo and Danny Groo had no neighbors within many miles. Their own especial little farm was tillable, but it was due to their own perseverance and careful husbandry that they had made it yield the scanty living it did."

"With a heavy heart Danny ran down the mountain side to tell his grandmother the awful news of their loss. When he arrived there he found the old woman sitting in the doorway weeping and lamenting loudly and heart-brokenly, her well-patched apron over her face. Danny forgot the sheep and his own sorrow in the presence of his good old grandmother's grief, and hastening to her, he threw his arms about her neck and asked what troubled her so deeply. It was the first time Danny had seen the poor old woman in tears since the death of his mother.

"Oh, lad, lad, the mountain robbers have been here and taken all our grain and the cow and the sheep," said the man who had just come in. "I begged them to leave the cow and cheese to keep us from starving. But they laughed at me as they drove her away. They came into the house and robbed the cupboard of every morsel of food. They ransacked the chest and found a piece of new cloth I had laid away and which I was going to make into a new coat for my wife. Their own especial little farm was tillable, but it was due to their own perseverance and careful husbandry that they had made it yield the scanty living it did."

"We'll have to drive a sheep to the village and sell it for enough to buy a bushel of oatmeal at the miller's," said Granny Groo, rising feebly from her seat on the door sill and bravely drying her aged and tender eyes. "We'll not eat till we've done this, lad. While I put on my shawl and get my staff you run and drive from the flock one of the fattest sheep. It's a good five leagues to the village, so we'll have to hurry for the sun is west of the roof tree. We'll stop at the miller's on our way home and get—"

Danny threw his arms about his grandmother's neck, tears streaming from his own eyes as he interrupted her: "Oh, granny, the flock has been driven away by the same mountain robbers. I hated to tell you—oh, I hated to bring the bad news to your ears when I saw how much you were already troubled."

At this woeful news Granny Groo became very feeble, dropping into her arm chair and giving herself up to terrible weeping. "Oh, what shall become of us! I am an old woman and have worked so hard and honestly. And my little lad has

The Story of a Lost Curl.

BY MAUD WALKER.

In the long, long ago there dwelt in a land far beyond the seas a poor old woman called Granny Groo, whose only companion was a little grandson named Danny Groo. Danny and his aged grandmother had hard work of it to keep the wolf from the door. Their little home consisted of 10 acres of prairie land, on which they holed early and late to raise their small crops, and five acres of woodland, from which they gathered their fuel when it was cold. The little possession had been left to them by Danny's father and mother, who had died while Danny was a baby. On the death of Danny's mother, who had grieved blood in her veins, there was found hidden away in her breast a small locket attached to a silver chain as fine as a thread of silk. About the locket was wrapped a piece of paper, on which were written these words: "Do not open this locket until Danny is in his twentieth year. Then a gift will be found that will make him both rich and great if he use it as he is instructed to do. Only on this condition must he ever open this locket before his twentieth birthday. If severe illness or great danger threaten him or his dear old grandmother he may open it and make use of a part of its contents."

After Danny's mother's burial the old granny had put the locket carefully away in a pewter mug and buried it in one corner of the little living room, where she slept as well. Danny having to himself a small room that connected. And, to be particular that no harm should come to the precious locket, Granny Groo put her bed of straw and rushes over it. So the pearls had gone by and Danny, bed bent under burdens of labor too young—too young. Why should the wicked men come and rob an old woman and a little lad?"

"Do you remember, Granny, that we are to open the locket if any great trouble falls upon us—a trouble we cannot live through without aid? Well, we've lost everything today except the house over our heads and the fields, which will not be ready for planting till spring. The winter is before us, and we must needs starve unless we find succor from some source. Shall we get the locket and open it?"

"But you are only ten and four years of age," said Granny. "Six years must pass before we can in conscience open the locket. I have always declared to myself that nothing short of dreadful sickness to you should force me to open it. And suppose I should now open it and use the treasure—whatever it may be—and then the robbers should come again? Ah, we'd be done for, lad. Even the locket with its hidden treasure would be gone. And you would never come into your great inheritance on your twentieth birthday. No, no, lad; let us not be tempted." And Granny's eyes dimmed with unshed tears, for she was beginning to be herself again and was forcing back the tears which she had let fall so easily awhile before. "No; we've our loss," Danny kissed her withered cheek tenderly, but murmured in her ear: "Dear Granny, we cannot regain what we have lost. We have not a mouthful of food and no way of providing for food. Our next year's seed has been stolen. Our sheep and cow are now furnishing meat and milk to the mountain robbers. We must fall off of hunger. Then we must die and the treasure fall into the hands of strangers."

"Danny's sensible words had weight with the old woman. She arose and went to her bed, which she removed from the corner. Then, with the aid of a deal knife she lifted the edge of a flagstone and drew forth the pewter mug. Danny cautiously closed and bolted the door and drew the window-shutter tight to prevent any casual passerby from seeing them in the cot. Old Granny Groo mist the locket, and touching a spring, it flew open. A small piece of paper was lying inside it. Unfolding this, Danny read the following:

"My son Danny is the thirteenth generation of my blood. A kingdom and a fortune await him in a land many leagues from here. But this he cannot have till he is in his twentieth year. Should want or sickness come to him before that time he is to open the locket and find in it the spring a pot of gold that will keep him and his aged grandmother, till he comes into his kingdom. This locket and chain will be a link which will connect him to the peculiar chain of circumstances which will bring him into his inheritance. At the bottom of this paper will be found directions to guide him to the land where he will reign. Let him always be a good and just ruler, and thus pre-estabish his blood, which has lost the bed them, and the next morning bright and early, with a good supply of cold victuals in a box under the zig seat, they set their faces toward the Southland, following to a letter the directions on the bit of paper that was folded inside the precious locket.

"And now, Granny Groo," smiled her affectionate grandson, "we'll soon be far away from poverty and loneliness. It is my intention to help rid the world of robbers and thieves when I'm a king. And also shall I befriend all poor people—more especially the old poor."

And Granny Groo, her face becoming younger with each hour, for now plenty was promised to herself and little lad, put a hand on his shoulder and said: "You've been a noble boy, lad, and you'll become a noble man and a just ruler. People shall be happy in your realm for all shall have justice. To be good is to be so on."

PLUMES of MILLINER

Modes of the Picturesque Type-Flowers Replace Feathers for Early Spring Wear-- The Hat and the Hair.

There is a sweet reasonableness apparent in the models that are daily arriving from these shores from France. If one is to judge by the advance guard of those fascinating chapeaux that fine frenzy which gave vogue to hats worn on the bias, hats tilted over one ear, has altogether subsided; and the new crop of headgear is such that need not make one ashamed to have a photograph taken in one of them, and boldly acknowledge it two or three seasons later.

The milliner and the coiffeur seem to have gotten their heads together when planning the modes in millinery for the new season; for never before have we had so many models devoted to the wearers of varying styles in hairdressing. Only last season the girl with classical features and a Madonna parting in her hair found it almost impossible to get a hat to suit her hair and her face. As one of them said, when after "trying on" hats before the milliner's mirror for the best part of an hour: "I simply cannot go out with any one of them on. They all make me look like a saint suddenly turned sinner and a most woefully wicked one at that."

The very large chapeau, and the tiny one that seemed merely an imitation of a hat, are both conspicuously missing from the new show, and one shrewdly suspects that there are none to mourn their absence. A moderate size and a moderate amount of trimming is the latest mode, but both hat and trimming must be of the very best quality if the desired result is not achieved.

The little mushroom shape is holding its own manfully against all newcomers. There is a certain girlish smartness to this simple little shape that makes it becoming to almost everybody whether her locks be of gold or of silver. One sees it in Leghorn in Milan and in chip straws, as well as in the thousand and one made shapes that are on sale ready to be trimmed in all of the big shops; and the fact that it demands but a scant amount of trimming on top will be sure to make it a favorite with those to whom the matter of millinery expenditures is food for much thought.

While in the late winter shapes that headed in the spring ones there was but little evidence of the bandeau, later arrivals show it fully as important and as prominent as ever. It is the all-around bandeau, however, that leads, the one that goes all the way around the headsize. Most of them, though, are fitted quite high in the back, narrowing to almost nothing in the front; but the chapeau that dispenses altogether and entirely with the bandeau does not seem to find any recognition at the hands of the modish milliner.

The short front chapeau, the one that looks as though it once had a projecting brim in front, but accidentally got it dropped off, is a prime favorite with those who follow the fashion in all of her most audacious moods. There is a certain piquancy to the mode when well worn that commends it to some; but few there be who can wear it after this fashion. It takes a low and broad forehead oval contour of features and a certain classical regularity of outline to carry this trying style well—but then this same type of features would carry anything at all well, and so comparisons were invidious.

Out thing that the clever observer will see at almost the first glance is that most of the trimmings are posed at or towards the back. Feathers when they are used are so arranged that their tips most usually are draped over a back that projects somewhat, and their curly tips mingle with the frothy mass of tulle or maline that decorates the under part of a modish hat.

Another point is that for daylight use flowers are the favored mode; while real lace and long feathers are employed to designate an evening hat. Of this latter character, however, are the chapeaux designed for bridesmaids' use at several of the weddings that are planned for immediately after Easter, and whose one plume did duty last season this year it takes three of that same size, and preferably each one of a different though harmonizing color. For instance, smart chapeaux have been ordered in which the brims are fashioned from real lace colors, the crowns covered with white roses and three plumes, a white one, in the center, a chamois yellow at one side and a pale blue at the other, will be worn at a coming wedding by the attendants on the bride. Both families being of Revolutionary stock, it is to be a buff-and-blue wedding, and the plumes in the chapeaux carry out the idea.

Buckles are destined to play a very important part in the trimming schemes; and broad velvet ribbons are expected to be very much in evidence. There is a certain richness to a velvet ribbon that does not seem to attach to any other sort, no matter how expensive it may really be, and when drawn through a rhinestone or a cut steel buckle the effect is all that could be desired.

Leghorn hats are scheduled for an immense vogue, and the tints shown are far deeper than we have been accustomed to for some time. In the early showings there is usually a velvet facing to the under brim, the heaviness of this relieved by a ruffling of a couple of rows of Valenciennes or Mechlin lace along the outer edge. All sorts of shapes and effects are shown, from the stiff tailored hat for shirt-waist wear to the romantic and picturesque affairs that are intended for carriage and garden party use later on.

Most, if not all, of the new models declare a decided preference for some part of the trimming to fall on the hat in the back; and this is so variously and so cleverly managed that there is no danger of its becoming too popular, and therefore monotonous, early in the season. From a finger's length of ribbon flossed out at the end to an elaborate trail of roses, buds and foliage that may drop to the shoulder it is all a matter of taste, occasion and becomingness; but that there must be some sort of a trimming at the back is already a foregone conclusion.

Modes and Materials.

What the Creators of the Mode Are Using--Sheer Fabrics in Silk, Wool and Cottons--Jumper Frocks in Soft Silks and Coleen Poppins.

This season it is not so much what material is used as it is the mode and manner of its making that will declare the frock a success—or otherwise.

That there is choice in material, of course, goes without saying, and the counters are piled high with diaphanous fabrics of all sorts and styles and colors until the eye is bewildered with the complexity presented.

By every steamer models from the famous houses of France are arriving, and it is delightful to note the smart simplicity that adheres to even the most expensive of these foreign creations. While the shirtwaist suit and the jumper frock are both of them American inventions, having their origin, their launching and their vogue almost entirely on this side of the Atlantic, the best makers abroad have not been slow to take the hint and are now sending us over models of our own invention—but in a glorified design, of course.

For school girl wear the specialty shops are showing extremely attractive little frocks of the jumper order done in shawl cloth. This seems to be something between a henrietta and a broadcloth, light in weight, but strong enough to be serviceable for school use. That the guinea idea is used for all it is worth in these can readily be understood, and the best makers are providing two or three sets of guineas and undersleeves to go with each frock.

The chiffon weaves in mohair, too, are receiving a share of fashionable attention, too. Chiefly in the delicate tints are they being used, although the plaids are highly popular as well. In soft nappies, rosewood and copper tints those silky materials are at their most attractive best, and when piped—as most of them are—with tiny edges of black, white and some contrasting color, all cleverly grouped, even the simplest little dress can be made to take on quite an air of elaboration.

And this matter of pipings is quite worthy of consideration. They add but little to the labor on a gown, but they do add quite tremendously to the result. No matter what the body color of the gown may be, there is quite a fancy for using black piping, then a narrow border of white, and then the color that either matches or contrasts best with the fundamental color of the frock. Occasionally a very narrow gold or silver soutache is exploited instead of the frock color, and then the effect is even better. Plaid piping, too, comes in for quite some share of attention, and most elaborate effects are gained by covering thick featherbone cords with the silk or woolen goods cut on the bias and then twisted into fanciful shapes for trimming purposes.

A New York specialty shop that caters largely to girls' schools is making up quite a number of jumper frocks in landsdowne of dainty colorings. On these there is a good deal of real elny and real maline lace used, the jumper top, the armholes and the front panel of the skirt being trimmed with the real lace. The yoke and undersleeves, too, are likely to be of lace with a chiffon lining, should the little frock be donned for afternoon or evening use at school; while for mornings there hand-embroidered linen guineas—just the same style and cut as the little six-year-old tot of the nursery—wears—that will go through the tear and stress of the laundry times without number and look all the better for it each time.

Another fall or fashion—call it what you will—is the making of one coat to two skirts. For instance, one of those dark green and navy blue plaids is chosen for a shirtwaist suit, and to this there is a dark green broadcloth coat and a dark green or navy blue skirt as well, both coat and skirt having a touch of combination in the trimming of the bias plaid moiré hair that forms the shirtwaist suit. In this manner there are really two or three combinations possible, a plan that makes for economy of both clothes and space for wardrobe purposes.

Where an inexpensive silk is liked there are the over-present foulards. The late productions in these are simply charming, and bordered goods, while expensive, are selling like the proverbial hot cakes. Coleen poppins, while somewhat more costly, find a due meed of appreciation, since their wearing qualities are far ahead of any other silk weave in the catalogue just now. Chinese gowns are fashioned of this latter silk, to which the popular Irish crochet makes a most delightful appropriate trimming. The fact that, in spite of its goosy wearing qualities, it is a soft and pliable silk, makes it a favorite in the dressmaker's workrooms; and tucks, soft folds, tiny pleatings and ruchings are easily huddled in this modish fabric.

Silks of chiffon thickness—that is, of no appreciable thickness at all—are far and away the most modish for evening wear. They do form a striking contrast to the chiffon velvets that we have had with us for formal toilettes for so long, and they are all the more welcome in that they offer such a direct contradiction to their predecessors in this line.

Another point is that for daylight use flowers are the favored mode; while real lace and long feathers are employed to designate an evening hat. Of this latter character, however, are the chapeaux designed for bridesmaids' use at several of the weddings that are planned for immediately after Easter, and whose one plume did duty last season this year it takes three of that same size, and preferably each one of a different though harmonizing color. Both families being of Revolutionary stock, it is to be a buff-and-blue wedding, and the plumes in the chapeaux carry out the idea.

Harry Harrison for the plaintiffs, and Tweeds & Haviland for defendant.

At a meeting of the Board of Health yesterday afternoon Dr. Lewin was appointed as a health official to inspect all persons who had been working in the lumber camps and are now returning to Nova Scotia via the Prince Rupert. This was done at the request of the Digby Board of Health, who desire certificates from the local board as to the freedom from small-pox or other infectious diseases of the men going to that town from the lumber camps. If necessary the men will be vaccinated.

MAIL TRAIN DERAILED

The C. P. R. special train bearing the Over-Sea mail for transportation to England by steamer Tunisian was delayed yesterday at Wytopitok, a small station on the Maine Central, the baggage car and tender having been derailed by a loose tie on the trail wheel of the tender. Little damage resulted and the mails were uninjured. It was not expected to make connection with the Tunisian at this port, but the mails and passengers on arrival here at 11 p. m. were transferred to the 11:30 train for Halifax where they will be put on board today. The Tunisian left here about 6 o'clock last night for Halifax.

STREETS ARE DANGEROUS

St. John's Streets at Present Are Worse Than Country Roads—Two Accidents.

That the streets of St. John have never been in a worse condition than at present is the opinion of the majority of the citizens. Complaints are being made by teamsters from all over the city, especially the streets through which the street car tracks run are in a wretched condition. The street railway people have kept their rails cleared of snow, but all along the line there is a ridge of ice that makes it a very risky undertaking for teams to successfully navigate without being upset. Yesterday a big lumber wagon upset with its load on Main street, near the corner of Mill, and this morning another teamload of lumber was overturned at the same spot.

It is claimed that the street department should put a large force of men at work to cut down the ice ridges and so make the streets safer for the teamsters. Under present conditions a team can get along all right if it has the right of way but in turning out one way or the other it is liable to be taken over and goes the rig. Immediate action by the street department is urged to remedy the existing conditions which are worse than the country roads.

EVERYDAY CLUB

Tomorrow Evening's Temperance Meeting—Will Endeavor to Effect Better Organization Monday Evening.

Geo. H. McLaughlin will address the public temperance meeting in the Every Day Club hall, Waterloo street, tomorrow evening at 8:30. His topic will be: What it costs to say "yes"; and what it costs to say "no". There will be special music and a social as well as gentlemen attend these meetings.

The following contributions to the funds of a large number of clubs has been acknowledged:

- R. B. Emerson $10.00 E. R. Machum 5.00 A. W. Sharp 1.00

In a letter to the president of the club Mr. Emerson refers to good work the club should be able to do, and adds: "I am sure our citizens are in full sympathy with the work and fully appreciate the efforts put forth to better men's condition; and I feel sure they will strengthen your hands when you bring your needs before them."

The Every Day Club presents a problem which those interested in its welfare find difficult to solve. Between three and four hundred men and youths are within its walls every evening, and the majority spend the whole evening there. These men are entertained every night, and frequently an excellent programme. But it is provided by a few, whose good nature has far exceeded the pressure upon them.

Insofar as it has proved attractive to a great many men, and in the nightly report of a large number of clubs has proved a success. If there were sufficient programme the rooms would be crowded from early till late every evening.

The problem, therefore, is not to get men. It is to get them to take thought for "the other fellow," and organize themselves for helpful work, such as would be expected where comfortable rooms are provided without cost to those who attend. The club offers an opportunity for men to help other men, and should be regarded by a large number as something more than an opportunity for men to amuse themselves.

Every night in the week men who certainly need help are in evidence, and nearly every night more boys drift into the rooms under the influence of liquor. Some youths when perfectly sober give evidence of the need for such a club, but on a sharp curb that they offer a fine field for helpful and restraining influence.

And yet appeals for committees of five or six men, young and old, to take hold of the club and use it for the good of their fellow men have thus far met with only a half response. Last evening the president and J. N. Harvey made strong appeals to the men to organize, and yet before the influence of liquor, and under the very noses of sober men got into a quarrel in the were followed. The club apparently more eager to see a fight than to stop it.

It has become necessary in the interests of the club, to effect such an organization as will guarantee perfect order in the rooms at all times. For this purpose all men who have been attending the meetings of the club, to effect such an organization as will guarantee perfect order in the rooms at all times. For this purpose all men who have been attending the meetings of the club, to effect such an organization as will guarantee perfect order in the rooms at all times.

It would be strange indeed if enough earnest men could not be found in the club to restrain a few troublesome youths and a few intoxicated persons, who, when nobody interferes, make a disturbance out of all proportion to their numbers and importance. It is only now and then that there is trouble, but there will always be the possibility of it unless a strong committee is always in attendance.

WANTS AN EARLY START

President A. O. Steiner, of the Exhibition Association has written Sir Frederick Horne, minister of militia, asking the immediate appointment of appraisers for the Barrack Square property.

Manager Milligan of the exhibition thinks May first will be none too soon for preparations for next fall's show and the association is anxious to know where it stands regarding buildings.

It will be remembered that at the conference in Ottawa it was decided to have the buildings appraised in view of their purchase by the city, the department to find a site up town for the proposed new armory.
