

CITY MAY BAN STREET CURB GAS STATIONS

Council Legislation Following
Hamilton's Lead Liable
To Be Retroactive.

'RATHER VEXED QUESTION'

Toronto, Windsor and Woodstock Already Have Ordinances Governing Depots.

The matter of "existing and future" gasoline curb stations in the city was referred by the council at its last meeting to No. 2 committee, and that body will give it some consideration Tuesday night. The council's action came at the conclusion of a rather heated debate, one of several debates which have arisen of late at various meetings over what is now being termed this "rather vexed question."

The city is without a bylaw governing the installation of gasoline tanks, the absence of one, or any other measure of control, being the method adopted by the council to abrogate the city from responsibility should accidents or damage result from the installation of these tanks.

Of late, the number of stations has increased rapidly. Within a few weeks twelve were placed, mostly in the downtown section. Protests against the installation of some districts, and the city men, and these became so insistent that finally action was taken to stop the installation of a couple of tanks. This brought protests from the other side, a demand for a definite regulation from the council, and a statement that the tanks would be removed in any way.

May Remove Some Tanks.

While one committee was considering the matter, the other committee took it up and finally it reached the council. The responsibility was then placed with No. 2 committee. The resolution which the council adopted, reading: "Existing and future gasoline and curb stations, is taken by some of the officials at the city hall to indicate that it is the intention to make whatever regulations are adopted retroactive, and it is said that some of the aldermen hold that some of the stations already installed will have to come out."

Realizing the important task which the board of works has ahead of it, and desiring to assist so far as possible in securing this new legislation, the best possible plan that would care for the interests of the whole city and those more vitally interested in the installation and use of these tanks. The advertiser took the matter up with a number of centers with a view of learning how they handle it.

The matter was gone into thoroughly. The law on the question, the attitude of the provincial fire marshal, was sought, and this information is given below. Copies of bylaws, in force in other centers, also permit forms and agreement blanks, which were gathered at the same time, will be turned over by the advertiser to City Clerk Baker for study and use by the committee.

It has been asked on several occasions, if the city has the power to control the location of these curb stations. Under the municipal act, the city has full control of its streets, and as these curb stations are being erected on the streets, the city had power under the act to control their location. Furthermore, under the same act, specific powers are given a municipality to control the handling of gasoline. This is in respect to fire prevention and fire prevention. Subsection 27 of Section 392 of the act says a council may pass a bylaw "for prohibiting or regulating the keeping or storing of gasoline or benzene, and prescribing the materials of which the vessels containing it shall be composed, and the classes of buildings in which it may be stored or kept for sale, and for making regulations for the prevention of fires and accidents from the combustion or explosion of such substances."

Anticipate Legislation.

During the recent discussion before the council, it was hinted that within a year legislation would be forthcoming that would ban these curb stations from the streets. The impression was left with the committee that such action would come from the provincial fire marshal. If such a law were in the making, a local measure of control would be useless. The advertiser wrote Fire Marshal Heaton, asking if

BULLETIN.
Washington, Nov. 14.—It was officially announced for the British delegation today that at tomorrow's session of the arms conference Commissioner Arthur J. Balfour will make a speech on behalf of Great Britain accepting "in principle" the Hughes proposals for limitation of naval armament.

BY WM. PHILIP SIMMS.
(Written Expressly for The London Advertiser.)

Washington, Nov. 14.—The arms conference here, when it reconvenes Tuesday forenoon, may be called upon to face a dramatic and far-reaching change in China's status, according to a high authority in the confidence of Chinese officials.

The calling of a national convention, the resignation of President Hsu Shih-chang, a struggle between Peking and a coalition of Eastern and Southern China, and the unification of the country along entirely new lines are among the sensations forecast.

The war lord of Manchuria, Marshal Chang Tso-lin, commonly spoken of as China's real boss, is reported as being disgruntled. Further, he is said to be flirting with Dr. Sun Yat-sen's faction in Canton, where a "rebel" government has been set up. Marshal Chang and Dr. Sun, according to information emanating from Peking may join hands in an effort to gain control of the country.

Call for Convention.

Meantime, Gen. Wu Pei-fu, commanding the Yangtze River Valley, or Central China, the richest part of the country, is working with Peking against both Chang Tso-lin and Dr. Sun. His idea is to call a national convention, unite the nation, and elect a new president.

The present president of China, Hsu Shih-chang, would resign office, it is said, immediately after the national convention had assembled and thus leave the way open for an election. President Hsu is known to be desirous of quitting office even now.

It is suggested that Gen. Li Yuan-hung, vice-president of China, under President Yuan Shih-kai, then president upon the death of Yuan, might be induced to accept the presidency again.

Behind this movement is a nationwide demand for a China on the order of the United States, but with much more power left to the states, or provinces, and less to the central government.

Unless foreign powers interfere with China's domestic aspirations, a government patterned along these lines is considered a certainty.

Favor Federation.

Dr. Sun, General Wu and the Peking government, despite their differences, all favor a system of virtually autonomous provinces joined in a federation with a central government of limited powers.

But a showdown between the rival factions, and even a brief civil war, may be necessary before it can be determined how the new government is to function.

Should Marshal Chang march on Peking from the north, and Dr. Sun

How I'd Make Our London A Bigger and Better City

FRANK WHITE.

BY HELEN McMILLAN.

A large, iron-grey man with a suggestion of power in his glance—such is Frank White, who gave me his opinion on London's needs from the familiar precincts of his own armchair at his home on King street.

Mr. White believes that in suggesting plans for London's betterment, the most important fact to keep in mind is London's already high tax rate. Perhaps that very fact is one of the points to which London could turn in the making of improvements, Mr. White declares.

London needs a very great many things, but those things cost money," he says, "and it is a question whether it is wise to consider improvements which must send the tax rate up higher than ever. Public works which can be executed in the winter and thus help out the unemployment situation should be the main consideration at the present time, especially as the Government is offering to come to the city's aid in assuming part of the cost of such undertakings."

Perhaps the most interesting suggestion that comes from Mr. White is for a new department in the city's government, a department to deal with the location and type of London's buildings in such a way that it would be impossible for a department to put up a blank wall on one of the principal streets of the city.

"I would suggest that a department of the city's government be given authority to pass on the suitability of certain buildings in certain sections of the city," says Mr. White. "Or, if the municipal act does not permit of such a department, let that act be amended to give all cities and towns power to prevent a repetition of the mistake which allowed the placing of the blank wall of a large building on one of the main streets of the city. Perhaps the Provincial Government might establish a municipal department where matters of this kind could be dealt with."

Proper designation of London's streets at the street corners is another matter which Mr. White believes the city could consider with advantage. Mr. White speaks very seriously for the most part, but he is not abrupt, and occasionally he smiles, and his smile makes you feel quite at home with him.

It was such a smile as this which accompanied his suggestion for better street designation. Whether he recalled some humorous incident which was the outcome of not being able to find a certain street in London, or whether he was just feeling good, I do not know. But it was the sort of smile that made me feel good, too, and I enjoyed the interview from then on much more than at the beginning.

On the subject of street marking. Mr. White believes that something on the order of the illuminated sign to be placed on the street corner electric light posts, might be used with advantage to point out the names of the streets and the numbers included within the block.

This would be a great boon to the city, especially in the winter months when the pavements are covered with snow, and the names engraved there, cannot be discerned.

Mr. White would ask for better railroad passenger terminals in London and better direction of passengers going and coming.

He believes that the present station accommodation in London is very inadequate for a city of its size, and that finer entrances to the city would give a better impression to the visitors who come to it and who advertise it abroad.

He would complete the paved road to Springbank.

Wants Public Interest.

Most earnestly he desires for more interest in public matters on the part of the citizens of London, not only at election time but throughout the whole year. He is of the opinion that one of the big drawbacks to London's advancement as a city is the failure of the majority of her citizens to take any interest in public affairs save when it comes time for them to poll their votes, and many of them not even then.

"If our citizens took more interest in public matters throughout the whole year, a larger percentage of our voters would express themselves at the polls," he claims.

He also appeals for less fault-finding with those whom the citizens vote into office, asking the people of London to remember that those whom they elect to office are their own choice and should be supported as such.

Finally he points out how much better it would be for the city were less of the money of its citizens invested in mining and oil ventures of a speculative nature and more were available for solid investments in their own city.

AWAITS ACTION ON PINE LAWN ROOFING ORDER

Housing Commission Finds No
Move Has Yet Been Made.

TIME LIMIT ENDS TODAY

Plan To Repair Defects With
$2,000 Unpaid Original Contractor.

Monday, Nov. 14, was the last date set by the housing commission for the contractor and architect to make a start on replacing the roofs of the Pine Lawn houses, 42 in number. No move has been made at the last meeting of the commission.

City Clerk Baker states that he has received a letter from the contractor, H. Hayman, which will come before the commission at its next meeting. He declined to reveal the nature of the communication.

However, it was learned that the latter declines to carry out the order of the commission to replace the roofs. When the commission fixed a time limit on when the work should be undertaken it did so after the contractor and architect had ignored a first request that the work be done. The resolution passed at the last meeting declared that if the contractor and architect would not replace the roofs, the commission would have the work done by others and pay for it out of the money which the commission held back on the two officials as part of their contract price. This is about $2,000. It is estimated that this amount will be sufficient to do the work, but failing this the proviso was made that action should be taken to recover any sum which the commission itself had to lay out.

Letter-Carriers Will Take Along Stamps For Sale

It has come to the notice of the postoffice department that it is the common practice of senders of parcels to leave such parcels outside of parcel receptacles and on top of street letter boxes to be taken away by the collector on his rounds.

This practice provides the opportunity for serious loss, for which the postal service is frequently blamed. The postoffice department will not consider parcels left on top of parcel receptacles and street letter boxes as being posted, and any loss which occurs in this manner is a matter entirely outside the jurisdiction and operation of the postal service.

A postoffice department memorandum says: "Commenting on 15th November, 1921, letter carriers shall carry for sale a stock of postage stamp books sufficient to meet the demands of purchasers on their routes."

ROTARIANS TO HELP EDUCATE BOYS IN NEED

Members of Club Take Definite Action Following Lloyd
Houlding's Appeal.

DISCUSS JUVENILE COURT

Jared Vining Declares Time Is Opportune For the City Council To Act.

Following an appeal by Lloyd M. Houlding, boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A., eighteen members of the London Rotary Club volunteered to take an active interest in the careers of none local boys between the ages of 10 and 13 years, whose fathers served overseas during the war, and were either disabled, ill or handicapped by large families, so that these youths cannot be properly cared for and educated.

The Rotarians will visit the homes of these boys, and will provide them with employment during spare hours, so that they may earn funds to purchase their own clothing and assist in keeping their respective homes together.

"These boys, if not properly cared for, are the delinquents of tomorrow," declared Secretary Houlding. It is the intention of the Rotary Club to extend these efforts later, with these nine boys as a nucleus in the movement. The club also decided to assist in the "stick to school" movement, and to provide means for boys to obtain education which they might otherwise be deprived of owing to the financial condition of their parents.

Vining Enters Plea.
Jared Vining entered a plea for these youths and obtained the sanction of the club for his committee to extend its efforts in this direction. He stated that there are 301 boys exempted in this city from attending public school, and suggested that efforts for night school be provided for them.

He also outlined the juvenile court situation in this city.

"The position is now that it is to the city council's advantage," he declared, "where it has been for a year. Action is hoped for but with not very great confidence."

He mentioned the cases of a 15-year-old boy in the county jail here and five youths in the Victoria Industrial School, who, he asserted, would not be in these institutions were a juvenile court in existence.

"They are all bright kids," he concluded.

B. K. Sandwell Speaks.

A plea for more encouragement to Canadian authors by more reading of Canadian literature, was addressed to the club by B. K. Sandwell, secretary of the Canadian Authors' Association, and editor of the Canadian Bookman.

"The literature written by Canadians for Canadians should be read by Canadians," he asserted. "We have to have more readers, and the only method to obtain them is to convert Canadians to become readers of Canadian literature."

Could Limit Membership.

George Copeland also addressed the meeting, which was held in the Tecumseh Hotel, briefly pointing out the value of limited membership in the Rotary Club. He sketched the history of this organization from its inception in Chicago in 1905, with a membership of four.

The club decided on motion of Rev. G. A. Lechlitter to telegraph greetings to the Disarmament conference now in session at Washington. President Yen-dall announced that Sir Harry Lauder will address the members of the club and their wives at a luncheon to be staged at the Masonic Temple Dec. 2.

WENIGE OUTLINES STAND FOR MAYOR

Favors Commission Government and Juvenile Court.

Ald. G. A. Wenige, who returned on Saturday from Chicago, where he attended the International Bicycle and Cycle Dealers' convention, of which body he was elected vice-president and came within seven votes of being elected president, on Monday announced the platform on which he will stand for the mayoralty.

"First of all," said Ald. Wenige, "I intend to stand on business principles only."

In his written platform he declares in favor of commission form of government, with a city manager, finance manager and purchasing agent. "These," he says, "must be all big men in every sense of the word." He gives details as to how he would work out the system, outlining the duties of the manager, finance head and purchasing agent.

On the street railway question, he believes that if the matter is taken up without fear or favor it can be easily settled. He calls for an entirely new franchise as a means of dealing with the gas problem.

Opposes Wage Cut.

He does not favor a cut in civic wages, but believes that better supervision will bring better results for the money. He expresses the opinion that there are too many employees at the city hall and would live up to the procedure bylaw in calling for tenders on all work, letting the work to the lowest bidder. He would insist on the lowest wage clause in all contracts.

Touching on the juvenile court, he

FIVE BODIES RECOVERED

Victim Falls to Death After Clinging to Window
Ledge.

New York, Nov. 14.—Ten lives were lost and more than a score of people injured in a fire of unknown origin, which partially destroyed a five-story tenement house on West 17th street before dawn today. The building was occupied by fifteen families, mostly Armenians and Greeks.

Nine were burned to death and the tenth died in a fall from a ledge, where he had clung until exhausted.

Five bodies, all unidentified, were found huddled together near a doorway on the fifth floor of the building, and firemen state there are four more bodies in the ruins.

Investigation by firemen showed the fire had originated in the basement and roared up the shaft to the second floor, where it "mushroomed," spreading through the four upper stories of the building. The fire had gained a good headway before being discovered, and when the firemen arrived the flames were pouring out of the windows of the second and third stories.

Many of the people who lived in the tenement groped their way to windows, where they clung to ledges and screamed for help.

One man became exhausted while clinging to a window ledge and fell to the street, suffering a fractured skull.

PREVENTS DUKE FROM SPEAKING

London, Nov. 14.—The Duke of Devonshire was given a distinctly hostile reception when attempting to address a League of Nations meeting at Chiswick, and it was impossible for him to deliver his speech. The animus against him was ostensibly inspired by his being a landowner in that district, although it was equally obvious that the disturbance had been carefully organized by a section of the community which regularly practices disorder at public meetings.

The Duke of Devonshire was the immediate predecessor of Lord Blyth of Viny as governor-general of Canada.

CIRCUS OWNERS DENY ANIMALS WILL-TREATED WHILE BEING TRAINED

Pets Are Brought Into British Parliament During Investigation.

ORANG-OUTANG CAN BE TRAINED IN TWO WEEKS

Dr. Dittmars Blames Movies
For Creating Impression of Abuse.

BY TORREY FORD.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Over in England a select committee from the House of Commons has been considering for the last few weeks a performing animal bill. Allegations of cruelty in the training of dogs, elephants, lions and canaries for vaudeville and music hall acts stirred British legislators to the point of legal discussion. Somebody thought a bill ought to be framed to deal with the matter.

In fairness to the owners and trainers it was decided to hear both sides of the question. Accordingly, invitations were sent out to such artists as happened to be in the vicinity to appear before the committee and explain some of the elementary principles of getting a dog to bow three times and stand on its head before the footlights.

The resulting animal story was something that made history for Parliament. Eyewitnesses report that only by the turn of a hair did the dignified House of Commons escape being turned into a belterous three-ring circus. The absence of pink lemonade seems to have been the only discriminating feature of the entire performance.

Eager as the trainers were to testify in their own behalf, they apparently came to the measured conclusion that the dumb creatures would make the better witnesses. So they brought their pets along, a procession of monkeys, dogs, elephants, chimpanzees, donkeys, canaries and snakes.

Bars of House Let Down.

Mr. Carl Hertz, owner of the "disappearing canary," made the first witness for the defence. He denied that there was any cruelty involved in his trick. He said there was no bloodshed and he laughed at the suggestion that he killed a canary at every performance. And while he was denying things he denied that he was a German, explaining away the "Hertz" as an assumed stage name. Then he brought forth a canary in a cage and held a smaller cage in the other hand. With the aid of an M. P., the bird was transferred to the smaller

Nervous Breakdown

The extreme depression and discouragement which comes over one at times is the most alarming symptom of nervous exhaustion.

This letter is a message of hope to all who find themselves in this unfortunate condition.

Mrs. Geo. T. Tingley, Albert, N.B., writes:—

"For years I was in a very nervous, run-down condition, was much depressed in spirits and suffered a great deal at times. The least noise would irritate me and at times I felt as though I certainly would go crazy. I consulted different doctors to no effect.

"A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and I can truly testify today to the great benefits received. There was a marked change before I had finished the second box and when I had used a dozen boxes my nerves were thoroughly restored and I was entirely relieved of those terrible feelings I used to have. I shall ever be ready to testify to the benefits of this wonderful medicine, feeling sure that it will give to others the quick and permanent relief it has given me."

No Gas For Jacko

Old Molar Hurt Him and He Was Glad To Get It Out.

LONDON, England, Nov. 10.—Jacko, a monkey in the London Zoological Gardens, recently had a tooth extracted to relieve him of pain he had endured for weeks.

The dentist did not use any pain-killer or gas and Jacko submitted to the ordeal with less "fuss" than the majority of human beings.

At this point, Mr. Hertz gave an exclamation that startled the room, and tossed the cage in the air. Both bird and cage disappeared in a twinkling. When a moment later, the trainer came out with the canary in his hand, still chirping merrily.

Meanwhile, the select committee sat spellbound until someone proposed an adjournment to the Embankment for air and—

Various circus proprietors added to the testimony. James Sanger said he thought it would be rather severe to abolish Sanger's Circus that had been in existence 100 years because of a few black sheep in the profession. He thought much of the objection to trained animals came from theatrical people who were upset at seeing their names on the bill in smaller letters than the performing animals. He denied that fear formed the basis of training.

"An animal which is stimulated by fear," said Mr. Sanger, "will not come to you. It must respect you and recognize your authority, but it won't do that if it fears you."

On the other hand, there was a group of stage people ready to testify to cruelties they had witnessed behind the scenes. Cases of lions being tamed by hot irons, elephants tortured into action, dogs growled by great quantities of meat, monkeys tied to musical instruments, and other varieties of inhuman practices were recited to the committee.

One venerable member of Parliament seemed to sense the situation when he asked if the protests were not stimulated by professional jealousy. While this was vigorously denied, a point was scored for the animal trainers.

When I set out to prove something or other from the 100 per cent American animal trainers I started intrepidly for the Hippodrome. George Power's jazzing elephants, who play a complete set at every performance, appeared to be the most typical American animal act on the boards.

Power Chokes Back Answer.

I found Mr. Power and asked him point blank if he ever treated his pets with cruelty. He choked back his answer and led me on to the elephant stalls. There were Lena, Jennie, Roxie and Julia—four perfect ladies, munching hay and more hay. I would not care to make even a faint estimate as to how many tons of elephant were represented by the quartet. Anyway, retail or wholesale, it was a lot of elephant.

Mr. Power hardly appeared a giant set off against that background. It seemed foolish to press our question. In fact, I was ready to withdraw it hastily when the trainer answered:

"I wouldn't get much out of them if I did," he said. "They'd just get excited and lose their heads and forget everything I'd ever taught them. No, sir, I wouldn't risk much cruelty on these babies."

"But how do you train them?"

"Oh, I just say, 'Julia, shake it up' and Julia shakes it up."

And Julia did, her big thighs (you might call them that) moving in rhythm to Mr. Power's syncopatic demands. As a demonstrator of the original shimmy Julia left nothing to the imagination. She was there to let the world know that there was nothing about jazz that hadn't happened before in the jungle.

But I wanted something more definite in the line of training information. I wanted something less primate. I would like, for example, to see how Mr. Power would go about putting Jennie through the preliminary steps of the scandal walk.

"How does it go?" said Mr. Power. "Hitching Jennie and moving out to a closed space."

That was the question: How did it go? If you have ever tried to explain a complicated dance step with a four-ton elephant standing by your left shoulder waiting impatiently for the thing to begin, perhaps you can appreciate that our embarrassment wasn't a mere case of stage fright.

"I wasn't so particular about this scandal walk," I told Mr. Power. "The idea is to let me know how you would break Jennie in on any new dance step."

"Oh, that," said the trainer. "Come on, Jennie! Two steps to the right. Hold it. Forward. Drag the left foot. Jennie. Hop! Back, now. Steady!"

Jennie followed along without a single can miss. Once or twice she became slightly confused as to the instructions, but she was doing her best all the time.

"Hm-m!" I remarked. "She seems to think with her feet rather than with her head."

"Think so, eh? Come on, Jennie. Show the gentleman different. Make up something yourself."

Again Jennie came through. She improvised a novel little polka, fantasy that would have done credit to any two-footed artist in the business. Perhaps she took her corners a trifle awkwardly, but the spirit of the dance revel was unmistakably present.

I thanked Jennie and complimented her trainer. It was all very fine, but what I really wanted to know was his system of training.

"Oh, I just show her," he said. "If she does it right I give her an apple. If she doesn't, I don't. The reward and punishment system."

"If you could call not giving her an apple punishment, I suppose that's the system I follow."

We were heading for the dressing-room, Jennie following along in a businesslike manner.

"She's coming after the apple," said Mr. Power.

Two apples didn't seem much of a reward to give an elephant for going through a fifteen minute session of modern jazz. But Jennie was content. It was the spirit in which the gift was given rather than the gift itself that pleased her.

Mr. Power read the dispatches from England telling of the agitation against animal trainers and the alleged cruelties to the dumb creatures.

"You've got to treat 'em kind," was his chief comment. "You can't get rough with animals and expect them to show off much."

I next went to the Zoological Society Gardens at Regent's Park and talked with Raymond L. Dittmars, curator of reptiles and amphibians, a man who combines scientific treatment with an instinctive love for animals.

Generally speaking, Dr. Dittmars believes there is less cruelty in the training of animals than in the rearing of children. A man doesn't go into the animal business unless he likes animals, while children may find themselves in families where the parents neither want nor expect them.

"A man doesn't go out and start training animals for exhibition purposes merely as a means of earning a livelihood," said Dr. Dittmars. "He has an inherent love for animals, and knows them thoroughly to begin with. Then he may train them as performers so he can stay with them and still earn his living."

"I have talked with hundreds of animal trainers and it is very rarely that I find one who has lost his love for his pets. Occasionally a man may get hard-hearted, but these are the exceptions."

Gives Life to Cruelty Charge.

"Cruelty in animal motion pictures has been a means of calling public attention to a few of these indiscriminate trainers. For a time the motion pictures were running riot, showing animals being shot and maltreated. But it was all in the evolution of good and bad. The bad phase was only a temporary one."

"Training animals for a circus is not a cruel process. Take the superb condition of these animals. They look as though they had just stepped out of the jungle. You can't knock the spirit out of an animal and still show off as superbly as the circus performers do."

"I think it is a splendid thing for children to have an opportunity of seeing well-trained animals. They will remember the pleasant memory of the animal tain as he goes and realize his mental capabilities. Professor Osborn of the Natural History Museum prophesies that in two generations the larger mammals will be wiped off the map. And humanity will be responsible for their disappearance."

"With all the room there is in Africa for these larger mammals to roam, it seems a crime to shoot them down. These wonderful forms of animal life are the last hints we have of a former age. Yet today they are only a passing phase and fast disappearing."

"Reports of cruelty are frequently exaggerated. Lions and tigers are trained by inducement. When the trainer steps in the cage and fires off some blank cartridges he does it merely to assert his authority."

"To show you how easily a chimpanzee or an orang-outang can be trained, I can take one of them fresh from the jungle, and, without the use of a switch, in two weeks have him ready to give an exhibition that would hold the attention of an audience of a thousand persons. He learns through observation. I show him just as I would a child."

In six months of observing humans he has picked up a store of accomplishments. He can select a key and open a lock. If any of the carpenters leave any tools around the monkey house he will manage to get hold of them and break havoc with the place. He understands the principle of the lever from the jungle, and from observation he soon catches on to the ways of a monkey wrench and nuts and bolts."

A zebra is a very intelligent animal and quickly responds to any training. The rhinoceros who has never been trained at all will come in his house on a cold day and close the doors after him. We have three bears who will close their doors behind them in cold weather."

ASKS FARMERS TO UNITE WITH LIBERAL PARTY

King, Opening Western Campaign, Declares Joint Effort Will Defeat Tories.

CLARK TAKES PLATFORM

Liberal Victory Will Avert Disaster, Says Former Crerar Follower.

MELVILLE, Sask., Nov. 13.—(By Staff Correspondent, Canadian Press.)

"If the Progressives desire unity with the Liberal party in a joint effort to secure the passage of legislative measures sought by both of these parties then the Progressives must seek to bring about that unity before the election by working with the Liberals for success in the campaign."

This was the declaration of Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberal party, in his first speech on the prairies during his campaign Saturday.

"The Progressives," said Mr. King, "gave the people the idea that they had no use for either of the old parties."

"If that was the line the Progressives took, then they could not hope that either of the old parties would 'have any use for them'."

The Liberal party declared Mr. King was coming into power with a strong representation from all the provinces.

The Progressive party were heading toward what could only be more or less complete isolation of the prairie provinces and by bringing about three-cornered contests in seats which the Liberals made it possible for the remnants of a Tory force "to remain where otherwise it would be practically wiped out."

"The Tory party would not have a remnant in the House of Commons," said Mr. King. "If it were not for this force of Progressives which will permit of Tory candidates slipping in between."

Regarded As Liberal.

Mr. King said that last year he had visited the West to deliver a message of reconciliation between the Liberal and Progressive forces. The policy of the Liberal party had not been antagonistic toward the Farmers. He had along with him a Liberal movement, as a movement, destined to give one great body of producers fuller expression of their needs.

"We have come to the point," he said, "where we must face with us the question whether we are fighting for a principle or for the triumph of a name."

Mr. King reviewed the platform as put forth by the Liberals, and said that his party stood for democracy, revision and for relieving of taxation as far as possible on implements of production in the basic industries and necessities of life. The record of the Meighen Government was attacked by the Liberal leader, who declared that a change of Government was absolutely necessary in order to give Canada proper management.

Says Should Be Grateful.

Mr. King said that there was one part of Canada above another which had reason to be grateful to the Liberal party it was Western Canada. The Liberal party had had to fight every stage of the way against "bribery" to make its policies prevail. These policies included a railway program aimed against the monopoly of any one railway, and designed to develop for the people the western country; the establishment of a railway commission to help control rates; the creation of the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta; the immigration policy; tariff revision in 1917 and in 1919; the reciprocity pro-

How to Test Nourishment In Meals

There are various scientific ways of testing a nourishing meal, of course, but a simple test is to eat a full meal, then note what length of time elapses before hunger is felt again.

Measured in this way, ROMAN MEAL is the most nourishing food food, as you can prove for yourself. Eat the most nourishing breakfast you can think of to-morrow; pork chops, ham and eggs, beefsteak or any other, and note the time thereafter when hunger begins. Another morning, make an entire breakfast upon ROMAN MEAL porridge and you will note that you go from 2 to 4 hours longer without hunger than upon any other breakfast—positive proof of its nutritive value.

Get it at your grocer's to-day and make this interesting test.

MOTHER!

Move Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

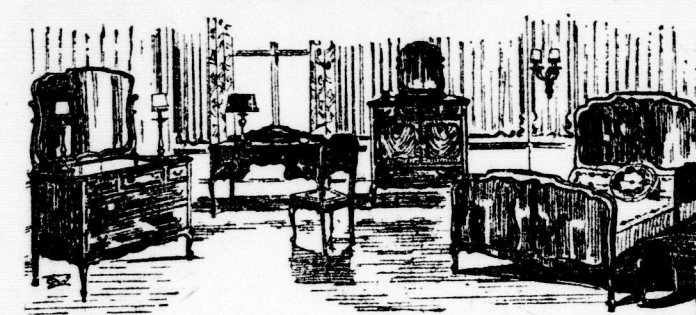

Even a cross, feverish, bilious, or constipated child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." teaspoonful never fails to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the way through the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child, a week's worry, a doctor's visit, and a prescription for purgatives.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Dr. Michael Clark, formerly member of Parliament for Red Deer, Alta., and in recent years an outstanding figure in the Progressive group in the House of Commons, was another to give an address to the Progressive party and is now running as a Liberal in MacKenzie, Sask., declared that financial ruin faced the west if the present government remained in office. Living costs in the west were abnormally high, and only a change to Liberal Government would bring about a reduction.

DO ALL MY HOUSE WORK

Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could hardly get about.

Cobourg, Ont.—"For many years I have had trouble with my nerves and have been in a general run down condition for some time. I could not do my work half of the time because of the trouble with my monthly sickness. I was told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by friends and advised to try it. It has done me good, and I strongly recommend it. Since I have taken it I have been able to do all my work and I also know friends who have found it good. You can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. ELLEN FLATTERS, Box 761, Cobourg, Ont.

Why will women continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For forty years this good old fashioned root and herb remedy, which contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ULSTER ARMING FOR NEW WAR

21,000 Guards Ready To Act Should Negotiations Be Broken Off.

BELFAST, Nov. 13.—Twenty-one thousand Ulster Imperial guards were organized to protect Northern Ireland against possibilities of a Sinn Féin attack in the event negotiations in London for a settlement of the Irish situation are broken off. The guards held their first public parade here today.

The British cabinet considers the Ulster proposal a compromise offer was not made public. It was learned from an official source that the Ulster premier asserted Northern Ireland would be willing that the Sinn Féin be given dominion home rule for a trial period of five years. If at the end of that time the Sinn Féin has demonstrated its allegiance, Ulster would enter an all-Ireland parliament.

Craig Declines Rupture.

It was stated Craig did not look upon the Ulster counter proposals as necessarily involving a rupture of the Irish peace negotiations. The Ulster premier, however, was not sympathetic towards the proposals offered by Premier Lloyd George.

Lloyd George's official residence in Downing street, it was stated the premier was still looking for a solution of the Irish situation.

Prominent Unionists, who have backed the British premier in his endeavors to bring agreement between the Sinn Féin and Ulster representatives, said they were not sympathetic toward Craig's latest move, which has threatened to throw the Irish situation back to where it was before Lloyd George called the two Irish factions into conference.

A dispatch from Londonderry declares that if peace negotiations fail, three days' notice of the termination of the truce will be given before hostilities are resumed.

DUNDAS CAR HITS RIVAL MOTORBUS

The Dundas street railway is facing competition during the rush hour each night. A large motorbus is building for a portion of the Dundas street east traffic, and Saturday night just before 6 o'clock there was a clash between these competitors.

The motorbus was returning to Dundas and Richmond streets to solicit a new load. Traffic on the westbound side of Dundas was blocked with cars and autos almost at a standstill. The motorbus, however, pulled up behind the car and stopped. It was just off the eastbound car tracks. Car 158 was coming east. It struck the bus. "You deliberately ran into me," charged the motorbus driver of motorman 139. "You deliberately tried to block us," came back the motorman. "The next time you hit him, hit him hard," advised motorman 121, who was riding on the car with motorman 139. The car backed up to untangle from the bus, and both proceeded on their way, no worse off as a result of the collision.

Russia's Food Production Is Decreasing

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—The food production in Russia has fallen to about one-half of the total production previous to the war, according to a statement made by L. D. Wilgess, Canadian trade commissioner. In the weekly bulletin department of trade and commerce, who has just returned to London from a visit to Moscow, Petrograd and the famine belt at Kazan. Industrial production, says Mr. Wilgess, is now only one-tenth what it was in 1913.

The total production of rye in Russia before the war amounted to 75,500,000 tons, while in 1920 the crop amounted to 40,000,000. The immediate cause of the famine is the long drought of the past summer.

PROPOSE WOMAN SCHOOL OFFICER

Education Board May Appoint Assistant to Dr. Weir.

London may have two public school attendance officers in the near future. At the next regular meeting of the board of education, it is proposed to consider the appointment of a woman as assistant to Dr. George S. Weir, the present officer, will be submitted.

This proposal has been under consideration of the school trustees and several for some time past, and the name of the prospective assistant has already been suggested.

A list of all adolescents holding working permits is now being prepared for Principal Beal of the Technical and Art School, to be utilized in an effort to have these children attend the evening classes at that institution. WANT CONGRESS TO ACT QUICKLY

St. Lawrence Waterway Promoters Claim Need Is Urgent.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 14.—"Action by Congress within one year" has become the slogan of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association, the parent body of those who are working for the improvement of the St. Lawrence River in order to admit ocean-going commerce to the Great Lakes.

A statement issued by Charles P. Craig, executive director of the Tidewater Association, announces that two additional states, Oregon and Utah, have joined the original sixteen states whose delegates journeyed down the St. Lawrence last July, and that the eighteen states who now advocate the improvement comprise one-third of the area of the United States and 40 per cent of the population.

The statement says "that the improvement of the St. Lawrence to admit ocean-going commerce to the Great Lakes would sometime be made self-evident. Our sole effort has been to bring it to pass immediately because the need is so urgent."

Appeals to Nation.

The statement then issues an "appeal to the nation," which says: "These eighteen states do not of themselves command a majority of either house. Progress of the bill must depend on the supporting votes of friendly and sympathetic interests in other coast states, in the Gulf and the southwest, on the Atlantic seaboard and in New England."

This movement will win, and win quickly. The forces now in motion make certain, if quickness is to be measured in comparison with the long and tedious progress of similar undertakings in the past, the weary progress of a decade or a generation. But our efforts for immediate results for action by Congress within the year. It can be done, and it is being done. It will be done if these eighteen states so determine."

No other state has been considered, but at the next meeting of Nov. 30, it is expected, this week another state will be considered.

CROWDS SURGE AT ARBUCKLE TRIAL

Film Comedian Is Placed On Trial On Manslaughter Charge.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle, favorite motion picture comedian, was tried today on a charge of manslaughter growing out of the death of Miss Virginia Rappe, motion picture actress, Sept. 3. Scores of witnesses on both sides addressed the jury.

The crowds began to surge early today, the narrow corridor of the third floor of the Hall of Justice, where the trial court is located.

For more than a week the contending sides have had their respective attorneys, and the eagerness with which they collected all possible evidence in support of their case was reduced to a trial was to have started last Monday, but a local election and Armistice Day so broke up the trial that a postponement until today was granted.

In the two months that have elapsed since the commission of the alleged criminal act by Arbuckle, the defendant has been in prison for several days, and has had a preliminary hearing on a charge of manslaughter, which was reduced to the manslaughter charge, on which he went to trial today, and has been made defendant in a charge of manslaughter. The federal charge remains to be tried, and will presumably await the action in the state court.

OBJECTION RAISED TO NEW LIGHTING

Waterloo Street Owners Will Combat Suggested Ornamental System.

Not all the residents of Waterloo street from Dundas to Huron streets regard with favor the suggestion to install ornamental street lighting. What many of the property owners of Waterloo street are reported to have signed a petition asking for this improvement, it was learned Monday that a counter-petition had already been placed in circulation, and that the residents of one block have registered their emphatic disapproval of the proposal.

Last week a representative of the former group called upon the manager of the public utilities commission asking for estimates on the work and subsequently many property-owners on Dundas from Wellington to Waterloo street also made the request.

It has been pointed out that the latter undertaking would be more feasible at this moment than the Waterloo street project, as considerable of the expense of additional lighting on Dundas street will be carried by the city, and the government by reason of the city hall and the armories being situated in that block.

The Waterloo street opponents to the ornamental lighting scheme are determined, they say, to battle to the last ounce before giving up the fight. They contend that the street has already attained a sufficient record now as a "speedway."

PASTOR REVEALS JOYS OF LIFE TOIL FOR GOD

Has Two Great Sides—Human and Ministerial—Which Together Make Calling Irresistible, He Says.

By Rev. G. S. A. MOORE, Managing Editor "The Living Church."

Millwaukee, Wis., Nov. 14.—I am asked why did I enter the ministry? and I turn to ask, "Why the question?"

Without question of motives, considering the natural result of inclination, desire, or ability; and in some instances the realization of an ideal of life.

Let a man enter into the most dominating, alluring, strenuous, and many times precarious, calling of all, the church, and people would say, "It seems to many that they are away from the opportunity for material advancement, and it is, for the call to the church precludes any ambition of the sort."

Welcomed as Preliminary. He explains as briefly as possible. Born in a Christian home, where the presence of God was a real thing, and the example of service for, and following with, the brotherhood of man, was a part of the life, a home where religion was a perfectly natural, healthy thing, expressing the joy of life, the ideal was ever before me, and the love of God was the basis of my life.

Human Side Comes First. As the realm of literature and philosophy were opened, the eternal ideas thus revealed, strengthened and confirmed the faith into which I had been born, and with it came conviction that the church was indeed the "pillar and ground of the truth."

Firstly—the human side—and that is the side which appeals for we all are so very human. In the ministry, I find the opportunity to enter into all phases of human life and nature. No calling presents a more varied scope, and none gives such intimacy and knowledge of life as unfolded in the lives of one's people.

The sorrows, the burdens, the heartaches, the misunderstandings, the loneliness of the individual soul, the sins, the joys, the mighty conquests, the hopes, and plans, the new ventures, the failures, the triumphs, of each soul become a part of the pastor. He shares in such, and gladly becomes the burden-bearer. But one must not forget that these burdens are many of them, ones of joy and happiness, and because of the love of human souls, all are easy and the yoke is light.

Idea, abiding friendship, unmeasured love of humanity, the joy of having all the children regard you as their spiritual father, the feeling that if in the course of one's life you have helped to make life more sweet and happy for just one soul in the journey, makes all the hardships, oftentimes the poverty, the criticisms, the misunderstandings, the hard never-ending grind, sometimes the bitter persecutions, and above all the terrible loneliness, which only a clergyman can feel, more than worth while.

Can Feed Souls of Men. Secondly—the ministerial side. To realize that we have the power to deal with holy things, "the substance of things hoped for," that no matter what our failings, we can feed the souls of men; and helping them towards the

Right Hand of the Most High Brought Victory to the Allies

Very Rev. Dean N. L. Tucker, coadjutor of the Rev. J. C. K. Tucker, officiated in Croydon Memorial Church Sunday morning. The ceremonies in connection with the service were very impressive. The Royal Canadian Regiment, the Royal Naval Brigade, and the London Girl Guides were in attendance. At the close of the prayers, following the recitation of the Creed, while the large congregation remained standing, the choir of the R. C. K. were taken by officers from the west end of the church and dipped. Following this there were two minutes' silence in memory of the boys who fell in the great war. The funeral march, "Our Illustrious Dead," was played by the R. C. K. Band. The sounding of the "Last Post" and the "Rolling of the Drums" followed.

Dean Tucker chose as his text, Psalm VII, verse 10: "My Defence is of God, Which Saveth the Upright in Heart." "If ever there were a series of events to be commemorated," said Dean Tucker, "they are those of the late war. The men who lost their lives in the war, who ventured their lives and the victory that God granted us in 1918, will always be held in eternal reverence. If ever a series of events should be brought to the House of God, these should."

In the Bible the power of God is called by the name of the Right Hand, which bringeth mighty things to pass. The Right Hand of the Most High brought victory to our armies in 1918. God is here with us today. We must exhibit reverence in the House of God, and this must be with us outside.

"Back of the conference at Washington, which aims to abolish war," said Very Rev. Dean L. N. Tucker, in his evening sermon in St. Paul's Cathedral Sunday, "is the inspiration of Christianity, the most powerful influence in the world today, the influence that radiates from the Word of God, and from Jesus the Christ."

Practically all civilized countries recognized Christianity, said Dean Tucker. It was the hope of the uncivilized and pagan races in the heart of Africa, and it was spreading rapidly in the heathen countries of India, China and Japan.

Basing his sermon on a text, commencing: "And they continued steadfastly, from the 42nd verse of the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, Dean Tucker said that the early apostles recognized man as a social animal. They went out "severally"—in little groups. The early church was a family in which all the members loved and served one another. "New members didn't go to church for twelve months in those days without being recognized by the other members," said Dean Tucker, intimating that there was again in the modern church for greater sociability.

The zeal, earnestness and sincerity of desire to serve which actuated the early disciples and apostles was pointed out. These were the qualities of the early Christians which accelerated the growth of the church at the time of its beginning.

There are many voices calling for the restoration of the church, of science, of philosophy and of morality are loud, but above them all is one voice, the voice of Jesus the Christ, which has dominated the ages and will continue to do so, said Dean Tucker.

Announcement was made of a supper under the auspices of the Men's Association of St. Paul's Cathedral, to be held Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY. The meeting of the Theosophical Society was opened by a pianoforte rendition of "The Island Spell," by Miss Burns, following which Miss Whitehead read a selection from the works of Rev. Robert Nozwood.

A. E. Roberts of St. Thomas spoke on the subject of "The Law of Renunciation." The speaker contended that there was a continual search for happiness going on in every known sphere, the animal, vegetable and human world. This happiness can only be attained by renunciation. Renunciation such as practiced by Jesus Christ.

Mr. Roberts maintained that there were three stages in the struggle for happiness, the first being the search for happiness; the second, renunciation, and the third, transformation. Renunciation, while it is the only true goal to happiness, will never be popular with the masses on account of their living in a materialistic world. When human nature realizes that it is divine it will have its reward, but this will not be attained without a probationary period of suffering, despair and danger.

The speaker ended his discourse by saying that renunciation means happiness by giving satisfaction to the higher self on account of its subjugation of the lower self when man becomes an intelligent co-worker with God. Mr. Maude Lambert-Taylor of New York commences a series of lectures in the city this week.

TELLS OF CHRIST'S COMING. A large audience gathered to hear A. H. McMillan, special director of the International Bible Students Association, speak in the Grand Opera House Sunday afternoon on the subject, "The Coming of Christ Soon: Millions Now Living Will Never Die."

In approaching the topic the speaker said: "The time in which we live is undoubtedly one of the greatest times in all history." He then told how the great world happenings of the past few years were in fulfillment of Biblical prophecy regarding the approach of God's tribulation for the world in the next few years, even as is being experienced in the countries of continental Europe now, from a tour, which countries, he said, he had recently returned.

And after these tribulations have come to pass, God will establish His kingdom, said the speaker. "And on that day there will be absolute disarmament of all nations, Zion's banner will wave from sea to sea, and there will be general peace and happiness," he concluded.

goal, we may, perhaps, be permitted to go with them into the Kingdom of God. To realize, through the sacraments, the personal relationship with the Father of All, and our sense of sonship. To feed a sin-sick humanity with the forgiveness of transgression, to lighten the burdens of a weary race, and point the finger of hope and courage, to heal, to bless, to sanctify, all these are only part of the richness of the life.

Besides that, being somewhat of a mystic, the final lure of the church satisfies the being. As pastor, and so, as sacrificer, to be able to stand before the altar of God, and call into being the mystical presence of God Himself, under the sacramental form, and best of all, to then convey that Presence into the lives of the people.

Little by little, step by step, accepting life's events, is only brightening it, and freshening it with strength and beauty and joy, is it any wonder that one loves to serve God as His servant, and that of men?

Little by little, step by step, accepting life's events, is only brightening it, and freshening it with strength and beauty and joy, is it any wonder that one loves to serve God as His servant, and that of men?

"God's presence is necessary in all great events. He was with the Israelites when they were delivered from the Egyptians. The people never forgot this and it was the talk in the land for 1,500 years. But that great deliverance was only wrought through sacrifices."

The League of Nations, having known that sacrifices are necessary in wars, are having a conference in Washington on the reduction of arms at all corners of the earth and sea. There are thousands of cemeteries in France, and nearly all have Canadians in them. They are being cared for by 1,200 skilled gardeners. A white cross is placed at the head of each grave and flowers are blooming around them.

"We at home preserve their remembrance," he continued. "As a fitting example of this, millions of people stopped work for two minutes last Friday, millions of wheels stopped turning, ships stopped their progress and the whole world stood in solemn silence for minutes in memory of the brave fallen. Their souls are alive forevermore, for they are in God's keeping. They shall not hunger, thirst or know of any sorrow."

"It is our duty now not to forget them. We must take care of the widows, orphans and loved ones, and ever keep them in mind. We must concentrate our thoughts to justice and peace among nations or the brave boys shall not sleep in Flanders Fields," he concluded.

600 MEN ATTEND MONTHLY SERVICE The Holy Name Society Holds Communion Throughout the City.

Close to six hundred men of St. Peter's parish, turned out to the 8:30 mass on Sunday morning for the monthly communion of the Holy Name Society. At St. Martin's, St. Mary's and St. Michael's there were also large turnouts. The communion Sunday of this organization now falls on the same day throughout the United States and Canada.

Father Pocock, speaking at St. Peter's on Sunday, preached on the parable from the gospel in which the corn is compared to the mustard seed which grew to a towering tree. The speaker said that Christ had instituted his church to tower above all others. Christ came into the world to save men. He chose his two apostles, telling them to "go forth and teach all nations." The speaker continued to quote, "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you. He that heareth you, heareth me." "Behold, I am with you always." Father Pocock said, Jesus turning to one Peter, said: "On this rock I will build my church." After quoting several other Scriptural texts the speaker remarked that his Lord made it clear which was his true church.

It was announced at St. Mary's Church that the Holy Ladies' Society would be reorganized this week.

URGES CHURCH MEMBERS TO SERVE TO SACRIFICE Very successful and inspiring anniversary services were held Sunday at Wortley Road Baptist Church. The speaker for the day was Rev. W. H. Leighton of Brantford.

Dealing with the subject, "The Task of the Church," he declared that the battle of right against wrong was never so fiercely waged in the history of mankind as was the case today, and he called upon Christians to stand fast to the colors. "The world needs the Christian, and the church possessed of the spirit of Christ," he said, adding that without the practical application of his spirit the pressing national and international problems of our day could never be solved satisfactorily.

Calling upon church members to serve, even to the point of sacrifice, he declared: "There is no room for the unemployed in the Kingdom of God. Get out your tools, and God will find you a task. Unemployment means poverty and distress, and there is no more pathetic and tragic sight in the world today than a spiritually poverty-stricken, professing Christian. The world expects, and has a right to expect, something grand and noble from those who name the name of Christ."

A pleasing part of the day's services was the singing of the choir and soloists, and the special musical numbers were greatly appreciated. In the morning Misses Sals and Struth of the Elgar Ladies' Quartet sang with great feeling a duet, "O Loving Saviour." Another duet in the evening by Messrs. Cockrell and McFadden, Segant's well-known "Watchman, What of the Night," was much enjoyed. Mr. Cockrell also sang "Consider and Hear Me" in excellent voice.

TENDER PASTOR BANQUET. The congregation of Maitland Street Baptist Church will tender Rev. Dr. A. T. Sowerby a reception at the church Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock. Rev. Sowerby is currently of Talbot Street Baptist Church.

All the Baptist ministers of the city, together with the Presbyterian, Methodist and Anglican ministers of this district are invited to attend. At the evening service Sunday, chairs had to be brought in to accommodate the crowd. This was only his second Sunday at his new charge.

URGES SYMPATHY FOR CONFERENCE

Rev. W. Beattie of First Presbyterian Church Makes Plea.

Taking from the fourth chapter of Malachi, third verse, the text: "They Shall Beat Their Swords Into Plowshares," Rev. William Beattie, D.D., of the First Presbyterian Church, Sunday night, made a strong plea for whole-hearted sympathy with the aims of the Washington disarmament conference.

"It is sometimes imagined," stated the pastor, "that soldiers are hankering after a fight. This is utterly wrong. There are no greater advocates of arbitration than the survivors of the last great war. Those who stood in the midst of raining shot and shell, who saw their comrades mown down, or who sat behind a machine gun and poured lead into the coming foe and saw his victims fall by the score, would have no more to do with the utterly silly whole business of killing."

Rev. Beattie pointed out, however, that times arise, as in 1914, when it becomes the nation's high duty to take up arms. "The fools are not all dead—kaiser, Turks, Lenin and Trotsky still live and still make some degree of physical force necessary."

"The Washington conference is designed to bring clearer thinking and a keener conscience into international affairs. This conference simply must not fail, for having come together to find a peaceful way, an separation of arms, finding it will be to seal the delegates back to their governments to report that sitting calmly about a table, the Allies could devise no safe means of sheathing the sword," stated the pastor.

Continuing, he said: "A lasting peace must be established upon foundations deeper than 'Industrial Prosperity.' We must take care of the widows, orphans and loved ones, and ever keep them in mind. We must concentrate our thoughts to justice and peace among nations or the brave boys shall not sleep in Flanders Fields," he concluded.

"Complete disarmament in the present condition of world affairs would be a disaster. We might as well disarm the police and piously request the bandits to stop robbing banks. But a continuance of the mad race for huge armies and navies means financial and moral bankruptcy of the world," he said.

Rev. Beattie pointed out that all peace is a spiritual achievement, and that there is not one rule for the section and another for the individual, and that in the business of the Christian church, namely, to point out much, everywhere, to Him, who said: "My peace I give unto you."

TOIL HOLDS DIVINE URGE, SAYS MOULD Would Have All Engage in Mental, Manual Labor.

The great defect in Socialism, according to Arthur Mould, Labor candidate in the federal field, who addressed the Social Psychology Club in DeLeon Hall, Highgate Block, Sunday morning, is the apparent inability of Socialists to recognize the "psychological urge" back of human endeavors.

"Quite separate and distinct from the purely economic determinism, which some economists erroneously consider the driving force back of all labor," said Mr. Mould, "there is a psychological urge, a divine urge—in toil."

"I have sometimes stood amazed while watching the almost frenzied ardor with which certain workmen in a manual trade pursued their appointed tasks. Their ardor and intensity of application seemed to testify to some great, extraneous need," Mr. Mould continued. "But the surmise was false. In the majority of instances, the production of these ardent workers far exceeded the demand. Trying to be logical, I had to attribute their overmastering impulse to work unceasingly, untiringly, although uselessly to some more subtle origin than mere economic conditions."

Offered Restful Vision. The speaker cited the case of a philosopher friend he once had, a machinist, who earned upwards of $20 weekly; and as a capable workman always had employment available. But every so often, the machinist would quit his job and go far away to a lumber camp, or to some less profitable work. Once he quit the $20-a-week job to work as a grave-digger at $10 a week. Something in his nature made him like to cut the grass in the cemetery, the grassy grounds and the fresh upturned earth offered a "restful vision," the grave-digger told the speaker.

"It was the old lure of Mother Earth, a deep-rooted psychological urge," said Mr. Mould. In the speaker's opinion everybody should engage in both manual and mental labor. It was a natural law as well as a biblical law, he said that "In the sweat of his brow shall man eat bread."

W. E. MILLSON SPEAKS AT DUNDAS CENTER METH. It was the pleasure of the congregation of the Dundas Center Methodist Church to hear Sunday evening from Rev. W. E. Millson, field secretary of the social service department of the Methodist Church in Canada, of the work being achieved by those interested in this endeavor.

Mr. Millson particularly stressed the things accomplished in the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. In these provinces, where the workers devote their attention to delinquent children, great good had resulted. In touching on the subject of child delinquency, the secretary spoke of the necessity of a regulation governing marriage. He asserted that there should be a mental, physical and moral examination.

He said that it was hoped, within a year, legislation would be in effect requiring a certificate of mental and physical fitness by persons about to marry. Ninety-five per cent of child delinquency was the result of either parents or environment, said Mr. Millson.

SUNDAY BAND CONCERT. The Great War Veterans, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the G. W. V. A. held a band concert in the Patricia Theatre, Sunday evening. Dr. H. A. Stevenson, M. L. A. president. He outlined the work that the Women's Auxiliary were doing, and stated that the proceeds of the band concert were going to be utilized for relief work this winter. Fred Scott sang several solos, and Miss G. Harding gave piano selections.

Fire Used as Symbol of Divine Spirit During the Christian Era

"Constancy in Christian service" was the subject of the Sunday morning sermon delivered at the Robinson Memorial Methodist Church by Rev. J. E. Hunter, pastor of the Lambeth Methodist Church. His text was taken from Leviticus, chapter 6, verse 16: "The Fire Shall Be Burning on the Altar; It Shall Never Go Out."

"Fire is a symbol of divine spirit in the Christian era," said Mr. Hunter. "It was kept burning on the altar in olden times for the purpose of human sacrifice by the Greeks, Persians and Romans. The altar fire was carried from Judea and preserved in Babylon during the days of the city's captivity and returned to Judea again in the time of Nehemiah."

Fire was regarded as a symbol of divine favor. The properties of fire are light, heat, comfort, assimilation or welding, and purification. Divine love is the utterly selfless, the Christian life. Fire in the olden days was kept burning on the altar by fuel supplied by the priests. In modern times, we are the

London Churchmen Send Plea For Peace to Arms Delegate

Stirred by an address by Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown on the subject "Canada and the League of Nations," 75 members of the Askin Street Methodist Brotherhood Sunday morning unanimously supported the following resolution, moved by F. Landon, a copy of which was forwarded Monday to Sir Robert Borden at Washington.

"That the Men's Brotherhood of Askin Street Methodist Church desires to place its approval of all means for ending war. The recent terrific catastrophe through which the world has passed, causing untold suffering to millions of helpless people, has shown every man and woman to the earnest effort that it shall not occur again. Nevertheless we know that without provisions being made to prevent the same causes from again acting the world will again be thrown into war, the horrors of which will be greater than those that we have known."

"We welcome, therefore, the coming together in Washington of representatives of the world powers with the aim of reaching a definite understanding on certain issues that have in them the seeds of trouble for the future. We believe that it is within the power of the nations so assembled to dispel these potential causes of trouble and to make the future of the world more hopeful. We desire to place ourselves on record as standing for world peace and pledge ourselves to do all we can to succeed ideas of good-will."

"We pledge our backing and support to the Canadian representative at the Washington conference. Sir Robert Borden, and desire a copy of this resolution should be sent to him at once."

Lieut.-Col. Brown urged that the men of Canada give every bit of support possible to the Canadian representative at the conference and that resolution was an outcome of his plea. He claimed that the Washington parley was not engineered by the United States alone but was an outcome of the work of the league of nations. He warned his auditors not to expect that the conference would destroy all armament, as it was called together merely to decide on the limitation of arms and to curb the possibility of war.

$2,000 COLLECTED AT ANNIVERSARY

Rev. G. N. Hazen Preaches At Centennial Methodist Church.

Two splendid congregations Sunday enjoyed the anniversary services of Centennial Methodist Church. The preacher for the day was Rev. G. N. Hazen of Listowel, a former pastor of the church. In the morning, Dr. Hazen chose as his subject "What We Owe to the Church."

He said in part: "Because of our likeness to God we have a longing in our souls for God, and in the church there is given to us an opportunity of satisfying the spiritual thirst in worship, and we find a peace and satisfaction that we find nowhere else."

"The church is the greatest teacher of men, it has the greatest and most indispensable message, and is the only institution which stands to save men from sin. It is the fountain of the highest types of civilization and national strength, for it molds the character of the masses of the people, which is the most essential thing in the making of a nation."

The music for the day, under the direction of Bert Weir, organist, was exceptionally good, and included several well-rendered anthems. Solos were rendered by Miss Hird, Mrs. Hayward and Charles Hall.

An appeal was made for a thank offering and nearly $2,000 was placed on the plates.

SALVATION ARMY ACTIVITIES. Brigadier Miss McEwan of the Toronto Training College for Salvationists, president over the meeting at No. 1 Citadel Sunday night.

Using an incident which happened in Toronto as an illustration, she said, the board of health recently sent us a pamphlet on cancers, describing it as incurable. This dreaded affliction, in its first stages, is not felt, and therefore is not fought against. Sin is the same, said the brigadier, because when it first comes into our lives it is not, we think, harmful. But it is extremely so, and can only be cured by the precious blood of Jesus, who died to save us all from sin.

On Sunday morning, the brigadier spoke on "The Highway to Holiness." At the Sunday afternoon meeting, Sergt. Broome, who is accompanying the brigadier on her visit to the Forest City, played a violin solo. This is the first occasion on which the brigadier has been in London.

UNITY-NEW THOUGHT SOCIETY. Reading by Mrs. Elizabeth King from "The Modernists," a work of Robert Norwood, former London vicar, were a feature of the service of the First Unity-New Thought Society in the Higgins block Sunday afternoon.

Affirmations for the success of the disarmament conference at Washington were made. Musical numbers were contributed by Mrs. William Demetriou and Mrs. W. J. Brown.

Announcement was made of a study class to be held Tuesday evenings at the home of Mrs. King, 829 King street, and conducted by Mrs. A. J. Rowell.

URGES UNLIMITED CHRISTIAN SERVICE

Dr. Hayward Appeals For Thoroughness in Daily Tasks.

"The Gospel of the Overflow" or "The Gospel of the Second Mile" gave Rev. P. R. Hayward, Ph.D., who preached at Talbot Street Baptist Church on Sunday, an opportunity to deliver a practical discourse on the need for whole-hearted service.

Reverting several times to the verse, "And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain," the speaker developed the idea that real Christian service consisted in giving every ounce of energy to a given task, no matter where it was found or what the circumstances.

Success, he claimed, never came to the man or the woman who shirked the unpleasant part of a day's work. "Washing dishes isn't such a bad job until you come to that dirty, greasy dishpan," was one point, after which he went on to explain that every worth-while task, in home life, in business or in Christian service, had its dreary dishpan, that it was so easy to let slide, and leave for someone else.

Service to Very Limit. The real joy in service is when service is given to the very limit, when one's generosity knows only its bounds by the limits of other people's needs, and where Christian love will drive men out into the world to get close to people who are not regarded as desirable or lovely in the ordinary sense of the word.

Dr. Hayward spoke in the evening on "The Adventure of Faith," supplying for the day for Rev. T. S. Roy, who was in Toronto, conducting anniversary services at College Street Baptist Church.

Phone Is Speedy Method for Securing Competitive Prices

Thrifty Housewife Can Save Price of Tolls and Have Good Margin of Profit on Year's Purchases.

"What a wealth of business is lying dormant in London and the surrounding country for merchants handling different lines if they were alive to the possibilities of selling by telephone," said a telephone booster in discussing the possibilities of the "Buy-By-Phone" movement.

London today is a network of phones, and the same can be said of the surrounding country. In all, there are, within a reasonable radius more than 20,000 prospective customers for the business house that gets out and makes a drive for this business.

The value of the telephone to the housewife has been appreciated by hundreds of London women during the past week. The first snow-fall is always nice from the inside looking out, but it is anything but nice to have to plow through the slush and snow to the corner grocery or to run down town for a couple of articles. The phone in this case is a rapid and unerring little messenger.

"I am lost without a telephone" is frequently heard from the housewife who is now without the phone. These are people who really appreciate the phone's value. There are hundreds who have a phone and who fail to get anything like the service and benefits from its presence that they might if they were alive to its value.

As a purchasing agent it stands out as one of the greatest inventions of the times. This is said to be the age of selling, and if this is true it must also be the age of buying, for there must be a purchaser in every case to make a sale. And the argument holds good, that if the salesman finds it is necessary to call into play every device and convenience to boost his sales, the buying public should be no less particular.

In this connection, what is quicker than the telephone if a buyer desires to get competitive prices on a certain article? A case in point. A person wants to order a Christmas turkey. In fifteen minutes it is possible to call up half a dozen merchants and find out just what they are quoting. Thus the very best price is soon secured and the saving effected in this way will not only soon pay for the phone, but will leave a good margin besides. A year's good buying will make the phone not only a time and shoe leather saver, but also a good investment.

People are steadily coming to realize this. The fact that phones are getting harder and harder to get as time goes on, is due to the fact that there is a constant demand for them. Undoubtedly the buy-by-phone movement has created a great part of this demand and forced the phone company to go heavily in for two and four-party lines in order to cope with the demand.

The Bell Telephone Company has set aside this week as Telephone Week. On behalf of the local staff, C. H. Beard, manager of the London branch, has invited the public to inspect the local exchange, believing that demonstrations of the actual operation of a switchboard and an explanation of the method of handling telephone calls to be of genuine interest to the public. Visits can be made any afternoon or evening this week.

Tub and Washboard Make a Mess of the Home

The mess and discomfort of wash day make worlds of trouble for men, women and children. You know what it is to have the place full of steam; sudsy, soapy water all over the floor, with the baby crawling through it and the iceman and the grocer splashing in and out.

Phone 7,000 and We Will Do Your Next Washing FREE

Wash day with the tub and washboard is an all-day job. The housewife dreads it; the men folk and children abhor it. Everyone is in ill-humor—and everyone has a right to be, BECAUSE IT'S UNNECESSARY. An electric washer will do the work in an hour, without fuss or dirt, and with but little labor on the part of the woman. Everything that should be washed will be made spotlessly clean, and wrung ready for the line in the power-driven wringer. The electricity used will cost less than a cent.

ONLY $15.00 DOWN

Pay only $15.00 down (the balance at your convenience), and the famous Kribs' "Miss Simplicity" will be placed in your home. It is simple, durable and efficient, up-to-the-minute in every detail, and is guaranteed by the makers and the Hydro Shop.

1914-R. B. Bennett-1921

London has heard the Hon. R. B. Bennett, minister of justice. He is not the fiery, interesting Bennett that we know a few years back. He speaks without the enthusiasm that used to carry him over his weak points.

Some of his remarks in London were interesting. Referring to his leader, he said:

"You have heard Mr. Meighen, your premier. Do you think he is a man liable to be bought? . . . Yet Mr. King and Mr. Crerar state that the premier and myself are in with the big interests."

If any person regards Premier Meighen as tied up to the big interests, he could turn and point his finger at R. B. Bennett, and say: "You are the man who gave me this impression."

At the time a vote of $45,000,000 to MacKenzie & Mann interests was being discussed in the House at Ottawa, R. B. Bennett, then Conservative member for Calgary East, said, referring to Mr. Meighen:

"My honorable friend's presumption and his thoughts had better be revised. These are the cold facts of the case, and if the honorable gentleman had fortified himself with facts rather than presumptions he would have made out a better case."

Later on in the same debate, Mr. Bennett, being interrupted by Meighen, observed:

"If the gramophone of MacKenzie & Mann thinks that I consider that as other than an insulting remark, he is mistaken."

Again during the same debate, Mr. Meighen was apparently getting under the skin of Mr. Bennett, for the latter said:

"I will not be diverted from my argument by the impertinent interruptions of this young man."

. . . I do not propose that the thread of my argument shall be broken merely by the honorable gentleman standing in his place and repeating the record he has received from the gramophone."

Now, Mr. Bennett, can you blame us if we ask why it is you blew cold in 1914 on Meighen and why you blow hot for him in 1921?

You claim Crerar and King call him the friend of the big interests. Mr. Bennett, it is recorded in Hansard that on May 14, 1914, you told Mr. Meighen that he was nothing but a gramophone for the MacKenzie & Mann people, kings and aristocrats in the school of big interests.

And yet today you ask us to take an opposite view.

Your words in 1914, Mr. Bennett, were very plain. They insinuated a very nasty thing, viz.: That the man who is now premier of Canada and leader of the Conservative party, was under the influence and instruction of a group of men who were lobbying and asking at the time for millions of money from the people of Canada.

Now, Mr. Bennett, before you come here and ask us to agree with you in renouncing the insinuation that Mr. Meighen is friendly to big interests, we must ask you to stand up and tell the people you were talking through your hat in 1914.

You surely cannot blow cold in 1914 and blow hot in 1921 and expect people to take you at your word both ways.

Hon. R. B. Bennett is the admitted orator-in-chief and spell-binder of the Meighen Government. Outside of the prime minister himself Mr. Bennett is almost the only big gun of the ministry who can be counted upon to enthuse an audience and make votes by pyrotechnical platform work. Despite the well-known former friction between Mr. Bennett and Mr. Meighen—whom the new minister of justice a few years ago castigated in Parliament as "the gramophone of MacKenzie & Mann"—he was brought into the breach last month by Mr. Meighen. Mr. Bennett accepted a portfolio only after repeated urging. Possibly one influence which made him agree to serve with "my colleague," as he called Leader Meighen on Saturday night, was the fact that by the will of the late Mrs. Eddy Mr. Bennett has now become a chief stockholder in the E. B. Eddy Company of Ottawa, one of the great protected industries of Canada.

The meeting was well advertised. The drawing-card was the party's see. It may be presumed that Mr. Bennett made the best case for the Government that could possibly be made. The result was an audience of about 700—less than a quarter of the number that turned out to hear MacKenzie King. The audience was fairly responsive, but there were certainly no "wild yelps of ecstasy." The cheering was palpably a trifle perfunctory. None who came to seek remained to pray. And in Mr. Bennett's peroration it was noticeable that there was no ringing note of expectant victory. It was a sober plea for support of the old policy of protection, but not a vindication of the administrative acts and record of the Government or a clarion call to keep the old crowd still in power.

Well-founded rumor has it that Mr. Bennett himself will not be unduly disappointed if Premier Meighen and he part company again after December 6. It may be added that Mr. Bennett's eulogy of Premier Meighen on Saturday night emphasized the latter's "cleverness," but not his broad and honest statesmanship.

Mr. Bennett's first main point was that the growth of the Progressive movement in the west was a constant of world-wide post-war unrest. He did not bother to go back farther and trace the real cause of the movement to the results flowing from the defeat of the reciprocity agreement in 1911, and the outcry of the farmers against tariff tolls to agricultural implement makers.

Then he turned to what the Government had done for the soldiers. He made out a good case. But he did not note that what was done was done by Parliament as a whole and the people of Canada as a whole. The credit does not belong alone to the Meighen Government. Incidentally he challenged any one to point to a single instance of graft in all the rehabilitation and demobilization expenditures. It was officers of Mr. Bennett's own department who recently had to investigate the pay office at Ottawa in connection with the scandalous exchange frauds.

The railway problem Mr. Bennett passed over very lightly and gingerly. He himself it was who was the bitter critic of the Government's handling of the railway problem four years ago which led up to the present mess.

To the tariff Mr. Bennett devoted his main attention. His most telling point was that practically every other country had been forced by post-war exigencies to raise higher the tariff protection walls. He instanced Australia, the United States, South Africa, India, the South American republics, Spain and even Great Britain. His argument was that world opinion favored high protection, and consequently King and Crerar must be wrong. In passing it may be noted that Mr. Bennett claimed that Canada had now more prosperity and less unemployment than any other country. One of the audience was heard to remark: "The principle of the Laurier-Fielding tariff under which we are now working must be a pretty good tariff since we are better off than all these other countries where the tariff has been boosted."

Mr. Bennett charged MacKenzie

King with constantly wobbling on the tariff—one policy for the west, one for the east, a Somerville policy for London and a McCoig policy for Kent. The minister of justice did not accept Mr. King's challenge to quote specific instances of wobbling or inconsistent statements. Mr. King's speech in London ten days ago was still fresh in the minds of most of Mr. Bennett's auditors, and carried its own refutation of the minister's unsupported assertion.

On the whole it was a good meeting and a clever campaign speech. But it is very doubtful if it changed any votes—at least among those who knew anything of the Liberal side of the case.

Conservative Advertising.

From a correspondent in the northern part of the province comes a letter of protest that The Advertiser should be printing the paid advertising matter of the Conservative party.

In the latter quotations are made from the advertising matter in question, and certainly it can be at once recognized as having nothing to do with the editorial policy of this paper in regard to tariff matters.

The Advertiser realizes that its readers can take exception to the matter that is contained in the Conservative advertising, where the case for the Meighen Government is set forth. This paper also realizes its responsibility, as a public institution, to allow its columns to be used by advertisers whose views it does not necessarily endorse.

There is nothing new in the placing of advertising matter in newspapers of other political faiths.

One British admiral may have furnished the idea for this form of campaigning. When he was asked concerning the proper location for the British navy the reply came very carefully and very decisively: "The place for the British navy, sir, is as close as possible to the guns of the enemy."

Newspaper space is bought now by almost any organization who has any views to place before readers. They believe they have something for sale, or something they want to buy.

The Advertiser believes it is quite in keeping with its policy to publish the advertising matter of any political party, except where views in direct defiance of constituted law and authority might be set forth.

This is the first time during the present campaign where a letter has been received from a subscriber taking exception to the carrying of the Conservative advertising matter.

LINES

A H, well for him, who in the first clear faith of youth,
Not disillusioned by the fisticuffs of fate,
Of those sweet things taught at his mother's knee,
But ardent-eyed and mystic-souled, goes out,
And feels his passing to be but a voyage
Into a larger realm of hope and life.

A H, well for him, and for the aged man who sinks
By slow degrees into the gentle arms of death;
His mind is mellowed by the flight of years,
Cold reason yields again to childish faith,
And from the troubled turmoil of his age
Calm-browed he looketh to a time of peace.

BUT in the pride and flush of manhood, in the midst
Of life's ambitions, and the joy of doing things,
When clear-cut reason rules the mind and heart,
To drop the unfinished task and baffled aim,
To know the full-pulsed tide of life must cease:
Ah, that is hard, and fate doth seem unkind.

BUT still that inward light that raises us
Above the level of four-footed beasts,
Whose only thought is for their present need,
Bids us still hope that in some pleasant land
Yet undiscovered by our mortal eyes,
The aim will be fulfilled, the task complete.

LITTLE 'TISERS

Canada should have a standing at the disarmament conference equal to the standing of her sons in the great war.

C. R. Somerville states plainly that the introduction of free trade is impossible. MacKenzie King said the same thing in London. F. F. Pardee used words of similar intent in this city. So why continue the nonsense of trying to make a bogey free trade party the issue in this contest.

The question is raised in a musical journal whether or not a musical critic should be able to sing in order to criticize singing, or play the piano in order to write intelligently of piano playing. It can't be done. The man who is most willing to admit that he is a top-notch dramatic critic is the reporter of two weeks' standing. The less one knows about any given subject the more learnedly and pointedly he is able to write about it.

A lot of political tub-thumpers seem to be alarmed over grass growing on the city streets. Crerar told them at Oshawa that grass would grow on the streets there if the farmer were not prosperous, and in Brantford at the Meighen meeting voters were told there would be grass on the streets there if the Meighen Government were beaten. Next time we see MacKenzie King were going to ask him what his idea is on this grass-growing industry.

The Farmers' Sun, says an exchange, is having some fun at the expense of some of the leading protectionists of the country. It gives the names of a score or more of prominent men, mostly of the city of Toronto, who drive automobiles made in the United States. These men include leaders in the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and protectionist politicians who are on record as favoring legislation to penalize the people for buying other than Canadian goods. They shout for "no truck or trade with the Yankees," but spend their own money for Yankee products. The Sun states also that the manufacturers of Canada buy a large proportion of their fire insurance from United States companies and gives the figures to prove it.

The Seaforth Expositor fails to see any sense or reason in accusing the Liberals of being a free trade party. It says: The Liberal fiscal policy is not, as the Tories often assert, one of free trade. Indeed, it is common ground among all parties, including the Progressive party, that a policy of free trade is not one susceptible of application to this country in existing conditions. But just as little is Liberal fiscal policy that which finds favor in the "true-blue" eyes of the Tory. The sort of tariff to which Liberals will give their assent is not of the Tory type; not, that is to say, a tariff designed to insure bloated profits for capital, to foster parasitic industries, to bolster up inefficient management, to cover up the delinquencies of antiquated plant, or to make the way smooth for obsolete methods of production and marketing. The only form of tariff to which Liberalism can assent is one that is calculated to insure to the general good of the whole people, and not to the particular advantage of any group of individuals. In other words, a Liberal tariff is a tariff for revenue purposes only.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

Here We Have Items of Local and District Interest,
As Recorded in The Advertiser of 1896.

NOVEMBER 14TH, 1896.

Rev. L. H. Brown of Delaware, and Rev. Mr. Johnston of Wardsville exchanged pulpits last Sunday.

At the meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. Thameville, on Wednesday, Mr. Beckett, in the absence of Mrs. Beckett, assumed the office of leader. Miss McMillan read a paper on missionary work at home and abroad. Mr. A. E. Cameron spoke of the need of more earnestness in Christian endeavor work. C. D. McBeth and Miss McPherson also gave addresses. Miss Lydia Duffus sang a solo.

Mr. D. McArthur, U. S. Government Inspector for Ailsa Craig for export stock, is kept busy examining stock being shipped to United States from this vicinity.

Rev. Mr. Davis of Dresden will preach the anniversary sermon for the Baptist Church at Blenheim this year.

The London Advertiser celebrated the third of a century mark in its career on Thursday evening by a dinner given by its founder, Mr. John Cameron. The entire staff were present, as were also several former associates, including Mr. J. S. Willison, editor of the Globe; Mr. Thos. Coffey, of the Catholic Record, and Hon. David Mills. An address was given by Mr. Cameron on the origin and progress of The Advertiser.

Mr. A. M. Wickers, the Ontario Government Inspector, has finished his examination of the pollers and machinery at the London Asylum and Strathroy Dairy School and left for the east to-day.

Judge Edward Elliott held a session of the First Division Court this morning.

Rev. Robert Johnston city, speaks at the anniversary of the West End Y. M. C. A., Toronto, tonight.

The anniversary services of the Asin Street Methodist Sunday School took place on Sunday next. Rev. W. J. Smith, pastor of Agnes Street Methodist Church, Toronto, will preach morning and evening.

The minister of education has forwarded diplomas to the following pupils of J. R. Peel, who sent pictures with the Ontario exhibit: Miss Anna Cooper, Miss Amy Buckle, Miss Lizette Gibson, Charles Houseman, Walter Hall and George Cooper.

Rev. E. B. Lancelley, pastor of Dundas Center Methodist Church, has received a unanimous call to the First Methodist Church, Hamilton, as a successor to Rev. Dr. Tovell. He has not accepted the call.

Rev. Robt. Johnston, B. A., of this city, delivered a lecture at the Park-dale Y. M. C. A. last night.

The Rev. James Henderson, D. D., of Toronto, spoke at Dundas Centre church yesterday at both services.

COMMON SENSE WAYS TO KEEP WELL.

MASTICATION

BY DR. R. H. BISHOP.

WHETHER it be from lack of hard foods, requiring prolonged chewing, or from the nervous hurry of modern life, or from other causes, it is undoubtedly a fact that most people in Canada eat too rapidly. The correction of this habit will go far toward reforming an individual's diet in every way.

Thorough mastication means chewing up to the point of involuntary swallowing. It does not mean forcibly holding the food in the mouth, counting the chews, or otherwise making a bore of eating. It merely means giving up the habit of forcing food down, and applying to it the same rule as to liquid foods, which should be sipped.

The consequences and evils of insufficient mastication are many, and may be enumerated as follows:

Insufficient use of the teeth and jaws, and hence dental decay, as well as other oral diseases, even to such a point as to require the extraction of teeth.

Insufficient mastication of the food, and hence imperfect digestion of the food, and hence slow digestion; the failure of the taste nerves to telegraph to the stomach, and to the stomach and other digestive organs an intimation of the kind and amount of digestive juices required, and hence indigestion, the over-seasoning of food to make it palatable even when bated, and hence over-eating and irritation of the mucous lining; the excessive use of meat and eggs and like foods, which can be eaten rapidly with relative impunity, and the corresponding neglect of other foods which require more mastication, like bread, grains, vegetables and salads, and hence intestinal poisoning.

The habit of insufficient mastication is subtle, because it has become "second nature" with most of us. To free ourselves of it we must first of all allow plenty of time for our meals and rid our minds of the thought of hurry.

A boy's school, in which the principal is endeavoring to fight the habit of food-bolting, has wisely ordained that no boy may leave the dining-room until a certain hour, even if he has finished eating long before.

To the scientific observer such an event means the passage of the earth in her orbit through a spot in the solar system where it encounters an unusual number of fragments of what may once have been a planet or might yet go toward the making of one, if the material were sufficient.

The earth's mass must be greatly increased by the weight of these bodies, and the number that fall into the sun must be vast, and may have no small part in furnishing it fuel.

There is nothing to fear on nights when stars fall in unusual number, nor does any special significance attach to the event. The laws governing the fall of these bodies are well known, and some of the places in the earth's orbit, where they are thickest are definitely charted, and the annual recurrence of the event clearly predicted.

Not all of them are thus located, and surprise occurs. When they occur they may be studied or enjoyed without fear. Falling stars are not stars, and their fall leaves no vacant space in the galaxy of the heavens.

The real stars are still doing business at the old stand. The stars are reliable.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

BY EXTORRIS.

THE SCHOLAR'S WORKSHOP.

The work the philologist has devoted himself to is that of comparing and analyzing the languages that he tells us are sprung from a common origin.

When we take two languages as near in historic fellowship as English and French, and compare them, we find the same in the words. Later Aryan tongues have exchanged these forms for connecting words by which the relations among the main ideas are expressed. Yet few as are the traces of infection left in the English language, such as are left are all formed after the same method as the infected forms in Sanskrit, Greek and Latin.

There are two kinds of infection, one of which is the method of expressing a change in meaning by a change of vowel within the word, as: Tooth, teeth; bleed, bled; know, knew; fill, full; fell, fall. In the first we have a change in number; in the second and third, change in time; in the fourth, change from verb to adjective. In the fifth, change from transitive verb to intransitive.

A few other examples of interior infection are: Sing, sang, sung; swim, swam; drink, drank; ride, rode, ridden; fly, flew, flown; foot, feet; man, men; mouse, mice; cat, cats; garden, gardens; field, fields; Haus, houses; brother, brothers; Mutter, mothers; and only a few words nearly the same in the two languages.

Yet we find likenesses in vocabulary to be at times but a poor and elusive guide. Not unfrequently do we find in the same language words which are identical in form, but of totally different meaning, and quite different in meaning.

Thus in French we have souris, a "mouse," and souris, a "smile." In Latin we have arch, the latter from the Latin word for "bow," and arch, the former from the Latin word for "arch." In English we have arch, the former being from the Latin word for "arch," and arch, the latter from the Latin word for "arch."

The Teutonic, and originally meaning "wicked," the latter through French from Latin arcus, a "bow." Identity of form, then, is clearly not an infallible guide to identity of origin. The real guide is similarity in grammatical structure, and as a consequence of this, fundamental identity of roots.

Let us try to catch what is meant by similarity in grammatical structure. The largely responsible for the changes, instigated by the struggle to retain the guttural in light, might, night, which were written in infected English, light, might, night. The g was added to make the guttural strong, but the Norman refused to sound either h or g. Even when daeg was lightened to day, he would not sound the y.

Many English words contain infections that were current powers full of life and vigor in the languages from which we get them. Let us take to pieces the word "inaccessibility," the conception of which is clear enough to any reader. We find that its core is the syllable "cess," on which the accent falls; and this syllable has a number of modifiers around it. Cess comes from Latin cessi, the perfect tense of cedere, "to move." "Access" is the euphonic form of adcess, "move to." "In-" the Latin syllable of negation in compound words, makes inaccess mean "not moved." The "bi" is from Latin habilis, "able." The "ity" is the French termination "te," from the Latin ending "tas," the mark of an abstract noun. Hence, the whole word means "the condition of being able to be moved to"—a conception which is easily grasped when presented by the one word.

NO. 34—WIDE HEADS.

Long heads have been discussed. Wide heads are their antithesis, but remember that it's the comparison between the length and the width of the head that counts, not its actual width, measured in inches.

Persons whose heads are relatively wider and shorter than normal are the world's first-rank "scrappers." They are not the people who fight to gain an object, though they may do this incidentally, nor who fight when they are cornered. They may fight for an ideal, but that isn't the fundamental explanation of their scrappiness. Nor do they fight because they are peevish or high-strung. As a matter of fact, they are rarely either of those things.

They fight because they love to fight. They'd rather fight than eat. Maybe they don't fight with their hands, or knives, or guns. They may only use their brains, but just the same they fight.

More than this, they are inclined to fight to the finish, just because it's their nature. They are bitter-enders, with a tendency to be almost effciently stubborn. Sometimes they fight nature, as construction engineers; sometimes as mothers they fight their children with ruthless but efficient discipline.

With low mentality and coupled with indications of moral shortcoming, wide heads become a veritable warning of danger.

"I would like to get you to teach me to sail a boat," said the city visitor. "Sail a boat?" answered the boatman. "Why, it's easy as swimmin'. Just grasp the main sheet with one hand and the tiller with the other, and if a squall strikes, ease up or bring 'er to, an' lose the halyards, but look out for the 'saff an' boom of the hull thing'll be in the water an' ye'll be upset; but if the wind is steady ye'll all right, unless ye're too close in 'uffin', 'cause then ye'll upset sure. Jump right in an' try it; but, remember, whatever ye do, don't jibe!"

Seeing Week-End Market With Aunt Maria's Eyes

Want to cut down the high cost of meat? Why not try rabbit pot pie for Sunday dinner? The woman who certain sure is going to have one told Aunt Maria Saturday that she really prefers rabbit pie to chicken. Sometimes she just has rabbit stew, others she makes a deep pie, nicely seasoned and absolutely delicious the family votes it. In rabbit season "Father" is sure to be early at market to get his rabbit. He is leaving with a nice big pair, just as she got there shortly after 9 o'clock.

Rabbits there, were a-plenty. One vendor, who always has a big supply when there are rabbits at all, announced that he had brought in sixty pairs—or was it sixty dozen? He had a rapidly disappearing pile, in any case, and he asked 40 cents each, or 70 cents a pair.

It was the first really big rabbit catch of the season, though he had brought in a few earlier. "But you can't get anything like a satisfactory number till the snowfall," he said, "because the dogs get so tired tracking when they can't see the rabbit tracks."

How did he and his partner-son catch them? Mostly with traps. Son had a queer looking little animal in a wire-screened box for sale. A ferret, he told the curious people who inquired, the little animal that plays aloof when it comes to getting the rabbits out of holes.

For quite another purpose than to form the chief dish of the Sunday dinner was a fluffy looking white Belgian hare held in the arms of a friendly small boy.

"Your rabbit?" he was asked.

"Yes," he said, "but I'm going to sell it. It's the last one I got this morning. I've sold all the rest already for pets."

"Moulted, isn't it?" queried Aunt Maria.

"Why, no," was the reply, with just a hint of resentment.

"Did you give it a bath last night then?"

The boy looked at the treasure in his arms. "No," he said, laughing. "She's always nice and fluffy like that. Isn't she a beauty?"

The slaughter of fowls, ducks and geese for Thanksgiving apparently didn't begin to deplete the available supply in the district surrounding London. There were almost as many Saturday as the week before, especially of chickens, which sold at prices ranging from 75 cents each to $1.60. Aunt Maria was offered a plump partridge for $2.25. Beautifully dressed wings, and plump enough for the most finicky housewife could be purchased all the way from $1.15 to $1.75.

Geese were about the same as a week ago, $3 up to 30 cents a pound.

Lots of "Bite-Em-Ins."

What kind of cabbage do you prefer? One farmer had curly green Savoy cabbages, taken out of his garden on Armistice Day, and selling at 10 cents each.

"The English people especially, I find, won't have any other kind of cabbage."

Length Depends on Material

If they can get the Savoy," he told a woman who contemplated trying an experiment with a variety new to her. "They seem to think the greener the cabbage, the healthier it is. In though some folks won't have it unless it is white, and the whiter the better."

"One of these flossy, high brow wimmen that's learned cooking according to rule, come along not long ago, and said she'd take the Savoy every time because they got more 'bite-ems' whatever that may be. We never noticed no unusual kind of a nip in 'em when we cook 'em at home."

White radishes. Big as turnips, were quoted by the bushel. "But who would think of buying a bushel of radishes?" asked the surprised writer person.

"The Chinese do. They are our best customers for white radishes. We find a lot of foreign-looking people who want them, though a good many English seem to favor 'em, too. What do they do with them? Search me."

He turned aside, just then, to sell a big bunch of red radishes of the garden variety for 10 cents.

Many vegetables still in the gardens? A good many apparently, cuddled down towards the week-end under a blanket of snow. The cabbage would be left in the ground any longer. The majority of roots brought in for Saturday's market had been dug up for the occasion.

Talking of roots, a marketer hesitated about buying parsnips.

"Is it true," she asked the grower, "that it is dangerous to eat them until they get a touch of frost, owing to the poison in them?"

"Don't worry over that, lady," he replied. "The only time it's dangerous to eat them is in the spring when they've started to sprout."

If time isn't any particular object, it really pays to wait about the market in search of bargains. One man got four big Hubbard squashes for 45 cents, same size as were retailing elsewhere for 25 cents each. A market gardener kept his price for big, tender bunches of lettuce down to 5 cents a bunch, while others interviewed were asking 10 cents, or as a very big bargain, 15 cents for two bunches.

There's one woman who is seen regularly at the Saturday market, always looking as she sits behind her big wooden boxes heaped with bottles of beet salad, little white onions pickled with mustard, red cabbage, finely shredded and spiced, and absolutely delicious, grated horseradish.

"I've sold half I brought in already this morning," she announced shortly after 10 o'clock, and she still had dozens of bottles. In addition, she does a good "store trade."

"I'm very busy through the week," said Aunt Maria, "if you put up all those pickles yourself."

"Busy from morning to night," she answered. "I've got a big trade, and I want to see your goods are up to the mark yourself and then be ready with the quantity. It's the only way to get along in any business."

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—It makes quite a lot of difference when we come to consider the long and the short of fashions—what the material is. Meaning, of course, that the longer the better when the material is dishonored.

In the gorgeous Stein & Blaine gown of crepe and lace, the length has certainly gone about as far as the floor will permit.

Flame-colored crepe forms the under-gown while golden shot lace adds to the richness of the creation.

The lace is further enlivened by silken roses of shaded, corresponding tones.

A cape-like drape in the back really forms a demi-sleeve.

The lace extends high in the neck but the crepe is cut low.

It is an evening gown of commanding distinction.

SCHOOLS PLAN FOR BOOK WEEK

During Canadian Book Week in London special attention will be given in the public schools to interesting the children in Made-in-Canada writers and their works. Inspector V. K. Greer is preparing a circular regarding Book Week and its celebration, which will go out to school principals and teachers early this week. A number of teachers have been planning their Book Week program for some weeks past, and in an advanced grade in at least one school a collection has been made of pictures of Canadian writers for posters.

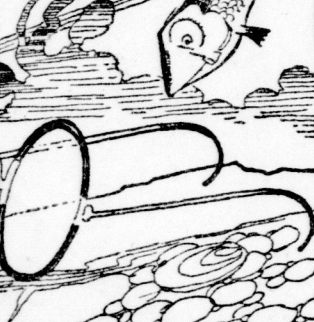

So far as the grown-ups are concerned, the lecture on Monday afternoon by Mr. B. K. Sandwell, editor of the Canadian Bookman, on "Canadian Literature," is the happy idea of the Woman's Canadian Club of introducing Book Week.

In line with the policy of the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire to encourage and foster Canadian art, at least two of the local chapters are planning special Book Week parties, the Nicholas Wilson (educational) and the Campbell Becher. Special honor will be done at these to the official organ of the order, "Echoes," which has won a large circle of friends.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS.

A LOT OF THINGS

[By Olive Roberts Barton.]

There were Professor Peetrabou's eyeglasses with the big rims.

Everything went smoothly for a while in the Land of the Wigglefish. Cap'n Pennywinkle and Curly his sea-horse mingled the traffic where it was thickest, and took care that the big fishes from the north did not bump into the little fishes from the south, and that the big fishes from the south did not get in the way of the little fishes from the north, also that the big fishes from the east did not—but goodness me! You know the rest of it. But perhaps you don't know, my dears, that the reason for such care was that when a big fish bumps into a little fish, or a little fish bumps into a big fish, usually one of them disappears, skin, bone, tail 'n' all, and it isn't the big fish.

Nick and Nancy did lots of errands. Indeed, they were busier than you'd ever think. For one thing there were so many things to be returned, and

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

Dear Miss Grey: This is my first letter to your interesting page. I find some very helpful things in your mail-box. I go to high school and like it fine. Our motto is "Ever Forward." I am very much interested in the Sick Children's hospital, also the S. C. H. P., as I am going to train for a nurse. If you receive this letter and I see in print it will contribute to the fund next time. My school chum is going through for a teacher and wants me to be one also, but I would like to correspond with some one between the ages of 16 and 18 and I wish they would please write first. I will leave my address with Miss Grey.

I have placed your name on file in case it is asked for.

WANTS THE TWINS' ROOTS.

Dear Miss Grey—I noticed where The Twins had dahlias roots to exchange. I would be very grateful to her if she would send me a few roots of white and orange dahlias and I will be willing to send a few pink dahlias roots in return.

Please find inclosed a dime for the Sick Children's Hospital.

ALL.

If The Twins see your request I am sure they will send for your address in order that they may send roots to you. It is more satisfactory to send roots or slips direct to the person wishing them.

LEAVES A DOLLAR.

Dear Miss Grey—As this is my first appearance in the Mail-Box, I will make my little bow and leave a dollar for ten names that I had put on patches and mailed to Tip for quilt. Here's hoping she has received sufficient for two blocks.

Thank you, Nip, for making a patch for our quilt. I hope you received Tip's address, and that the names have reached her all right.

WANTS RECITATIONS.

Dear Miss Grey—Isn't this delightful weather? Could you send me "The Face on the Barroom Floor," please? Also the play entitled "That Rascal," if you haven't got them could you tell me where I could get them? I am inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for same.

MORNINGSTAR.

If any of the Boxes sent in these pages for you, Morningstar, I shall forward them.

A REQUEST.

Dear Miss Grey—I think your Mail-Box very interesting and always read the letters. Will you kindly send me the words of "After the Ball" and "The Blind Girl," and two comic recitations for which find an addressed stamped envelope?

E. A.

The songs you ask for are not in the Mail-Box, but I have placed your envelope on file and if they are sent in, or any recitations, I will forward them to you.

HAS PATTERN.

Dear Miss Grey—Have you Manitoba Maple's address on file? If not, would she please send it in, as I have cut out a cute little romper pattern for her. She also wants some recitations, which I am only too glad to send her. Also, if any other Boxes wanting seed envelopes would let me know, I still have several hundred made, and they are really of no use to me. My address is with Miss Grey.

WIFE.

I am sorry, Wife, but Manitoba Maple's address is not on file, but if she sees your letter I am quite sure she will send it in.

Club Studies Hugh Walpole

Miss Macpherson Predicts Still Greater Achievements for Successful Novelist.

Hugh Walpole was the subject of study at Saturday night's meeting of the University Women's Club held at the Arts Building, Western University. After a brief but intensely interesting account of the life of this distinguished man of letters, given by Miss Skelton, Miss Mary Macpherson undertook to give a critical paper of his works, which proved not only entertaining but exceedingly instructive.

During the course of her critical study of Walpole, Miss Macpherson read brief passages from his works to illustrate his style, mentioning the three groups under which his works are classified: Studies in place, including the "Golden Scarecrow," "The Wooden Horse," and "The Gods of Mr. Perrin"; Prologues, including the "Prelude to Adventure" and "Fortitude"; and the Rising City, including "The Duchess of Rox," "The Green Mirror," "The Secret City," "The Dark Forest," "Jerome," "The Wooden Horse" and "The Thirteen Travelers," this latter group of books showing the struggle between the old aristocracy and the new democracy.

The speaker referred to the author's habit of using the same characters in different novels, without making any attempt to have them grow up in sequence. She also pointed to his very happy faculty of catching just the right word or phrase to set a picture vividly, and concluded with the thought that Walpole showed promise of even much greater achievement in the future.

At the close of the meeting a social hour was spent.

ALLISON-WHITLOCK.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Whitlock, of Uxbridge, when their second daughter, Verna Ina Ruth, was married to Mr. John Allison of Springfield, Rev. W. Williams of Springfield officiating. The bride wore a gown of ivory silk with a high collar, heavily embroidered in beads, and the gift of the groom, a pearl sunburst, carried a bridal bouquet of Sweetheart roses. The house was effectively decorated with yellow mums and palms. The wedding march was played by Miss Evelyn Whitlock, sister of the bride. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served, the only guests being the immediate relatives.

COWLEY-BAILEY.

On Thanksgiving Day a very pretty wedding took place in the Anglican Church, Wheatley, when Miss Gladys Bailey became the bride of William R. Cowley of Tilbury. Rev. A. Kinder of Leamington performed the ceremony in the presence of numerous friends of the bride and groom. Miss Joan Bailey, sister of the bride, and Miss Jennie Cowley were bridesmaids, and were becomingly gowned in yellow and pink respectively. The bride was given away by her father, and looked very sweet in a gown of white satin with veil, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. Two little tots, Elaine Campbell and Roy Hyatt acted as flower girl and ring bearer. After a wedding dinner, the happy couple left for a honeymoon trip. Upon their return they will reside in Tilbury.

PLEASING PROGRAM GIVEN AT RECITAL

The overture to the "Occasional Oratorio" and "Finlandia" (Sibelius) were the big numbers of the program presented by Mr. J. Parnell Morris at the second of his series of monthly organ recitals on Saturday afternoon in Dundas Street Central Methodist Church. Mrs. W. E. Wortman, contralto, sang "The Cry of Rachel," and the Misses Dorothy and Gertrude Cahill, talented young violinists, delighted with their duet, "The Angels' Serenade" (Brazz). "Whose? Whose? Anyone we know?"

Mrs. D. Mills and small daughter, Patricia, of Windsor, are spending several weeks with friends and relatives in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Redmond Meredith have returned from their honeymoon trip and have taken up their residence in the Adnace Apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. James McCurdy of Kirkton announce the engagement of their daughter Beatrice to Lex T. Barr of Motherwell. The marriage will take place in the near future.

Mr. Minnick of the Grand Theatre entertained the patients and staff of Westminster Hospital on Armistice Day at the performance of "Way Down East," which was greatly enjoyed by the guests.

Mr. J. Sandy, manager of the Bank of Toronto, Dorchester, and Mrs. Sandy, who is a resident of Simcoe street, are going to Chatham to attend the banquet tendered Rev. Dr. Daniels Monday evening in the Park Street Methodist Church as a tribute of appreciation, in view of the fact that he is about to bring to a close his years of active work in the ministry of his church. Rev. Dr. Daniels has a wide circle of friends and admirers in London, having been stationed here in both the Colborne Street and First Methodist Churches.

SENDS PATTERNS.

Dear Miss Grey—I received the pillowcase lace pattern. Thanks for your trouble. I am sending you three more. They are good ones. I had in the house. At one time I did a lot of crochet work and sold it, but there does not seem to be so much call for it now. The monkey-face pattern makes a beautiful yoke. I have one of them. I have some others. When I get more time I may take some off if you would like them. I have a very pretty lace with a mark in it. Have you got it in the Mail Box? VELMA F.

Thank you, Velma F., for sending us the crochet patterns and offering more. You did not sign your name and address. Kindly send it in case it is asked for.

Poppies Sell Well on Armistice Day

THE sale of poppies was particularly successful on Armistice Day, with the result that, including previous sales, the total taken in by the special committee of the Municipal Chapter, I. O. O. E., under the chairmanship of Mrs. Allen McKillop, was in the neighborhood of $1,600.

After expenses are paid the balance will be divided fifty-fifty between the I. O. O. E. and the Great War Veterans, the I. O. O. E. to give its share toward the endowment of a G. W. V. A. cut in the War Memorial Children's Hospital.

Dear Miss Grey—I received the pillowcase lace pattern. Thanks for your trouble. I am sending you three more. They are good ones. I had in the house. At one time I did a lot of crochet work and sold it, but there does not seem to be so much call for it now. The monkey-face pattern makes a beautiful yoke. I have one of them. I have some others. When I get more time I may take some off if you would like them. I have a very pretty lace with a mark in it. Have you got it in the Mail Box? VELMA F.

Thank you, Velma F., for sending us the crochet patterns and offering more. You did not sign your name and address. Kindly send it in case it is asked for.

Confessions of a Movie Star

CHAPTER 20.—I RECEIVE A STRANGE LETTER

McMasters would make Cissy a movie star as soon as his reformation promised to be permanent.

So Ross detailed current history as manufactured in the studios. It was really on account of Cissy's fan mail, Rose said. That proved that Cissy had a fund of popularity which the producer could bank on to pay dividends.

My own fan letters had done a good deal for me. Most of them were very welcome, some were astounding, some mysterious, and once in a while, one terrifying.

Quite early in my career, a letter had come to me from a far corner of Brazil. Motherdear, who was my only private secretary at the time, sent the autographed photograph requested. Next the South American wrote that he was on his way to this country—and coming just to call upon me! He appointed the time for the interview!

After that Motherdear was most un-pleasant. He had no more freedom than a convict. Never once was I allowed to go alone on the streets for months. All the men of the company were pledged to guard me at the studios. A private wall-hanger hampered me when I went shopping.

The excitable South American was deported by the government, in the end. But Motherdear lost pounds while he was loose in this country.

I ceased to laugh over the situation long before it was concluded, for it certainly was uncanny to be the object of an infatuation, to be pursued and never once to have a glimpse of the pursuer.

It was almost as strange to be continually reminded of the devotion of girls and men whom I never was to meet; to receive hundreds of pounds of bouquets on holiday time, and scores of letters which belonged to a series received regularly for weeks.

As Miss Bothwell threw down the letter, she exploded:

"Disguised writing! How detestable!"

Perhaps it was her instinct for plot which gave Miss Bothwell her clue to a big adventure which disturbed the monotonous life of a movie star.

When she announced, in an outraged tone, that a certain persistent admirer was faking his hand-writing, Motherdear and I were immediately interested. But for quite different reasons, probably. I don't know what Motherdear was thinking, but I honestly hoped that Jimmy Ainsworth might be the man! Though certainly it was a poor role to wish onto Jimmy!

Miss Bothwell ruined my drama. "It looks like—" she began, then stopped abruptly. Motherdear had motioned to her. I saw the gesture in a mirror.

"Whose? Whose? Anyone we know?"

BY BILLY EVANS.
(Written Expressly for The Advertiser. Copyright, 1921.)

"Babe" Ruth does not confine his home-run hitting to mere baseball. The Sultan of Swat packs a punch in other activities. I have in mind Ruth's recent skirmish with "His Honor," Judge Landis, doing the pitching. Technically "Babe" lost the decision to the judge. However, he scored a moral victory for a principle, that is sure to work to the advantage of the ball player. At the close of the world series Judge Landis, doing the hurling for the magnates, served the following assortment of mixed English for the "Babe's" consideration.

"Both teams that contest in the world series are required to disband immediately after its close, and the members thereof are forbidden to participate as individuals or as a team in exhibition games during the year in which the world championship was decided."

If you were a great ball player like Babe Ruth, possessing unusual ability as a batsman, that rule wouldn't make much of a hit with you. In the above clause you have the reason for the recent difference of opinion between Judge Landis on the side of the magnates and "Babe" Ruth for the ball player.

Offered $40,000. Ruth received about $2,300 for his losing share of the world series. The American League offered him a bonus of $25,000. Ruth would have received $40,000 for playing 25 exhibition games a season. There was nothing of the gamble about the proposition, the money was to be placed in a trust fund for the benefit of the player.

When the Yankees won the right to play in the series, the offer was made. But the rules of baseball said nothing about it. Ruth is unquestionably the greatest man in baseball from the playing standpoint. He resented the manifestly unfair rule. Anyone with a bit of common sense would have taken the same attitude, with a $37,000 loss staring him in the face. He decided to test the offer. Ruth had no grievance against Judge Landis for his refusal to sanction the trip.

Yanks Offer Bonus. The New York club realizing Ruth's enormous value to the club, and the fact that he was a free agent, offered him a bonus of $25,000. I understand, to cancel the tour. There was a principle at issue with Ruth. He wanted to test the offer. Ruth had no grievance against Judge Landis for his refusal to sanction the trip.

Origin of Rule. The rule was inspired in 1910 because of the sorry showing made by the Philadelphia Athletics in Cuba. After having won the world championship, with what was admitted to be one of the greatest teams in the history of the game, the Athletics were beaten in six out of ten games by the Cuban team. The Athletics did not go to Cuba until seven weeks after the close of the season and were in poor physical condition. I was umpiring in Cuba at the time. It was a decided reflection on the season's work. The Athletics were trimmed in such a decisive manner. That trip caused the legislation against barnstorming.

It is apparent why the magnates do not desire a world champion team to barnstorm. They are absolutely right. However, to say that the individual cannot play is hardly fair. The test case made by Ruth is sure to bear fruit.

Argos Smothered Rough Riders. Conacher Goes Through for Five Touches—Score 28 to 5.

Varsity Stadium, Nov. 12.—Argonauts completed the senior inter-provincial series without a defeat this afternoon by defeating Ottawa 28 to 5. Argonauts jumped into the lead in the first quarter, scoring 14 points and held the visitors scoreless. In the second and third quarters Ottawa outscored the Argonauts 5 to 1 when the Argonauts were using a lot of their regulars returned to the game the superiority.

The game was a good one despite the weather conditions and there was more of the running plays by the Argonauts than expected. Argonauts' backs showed many reasons why they should be favorites for the Canadian championship, their tackling, pluck and running being superb at times. Batstone, McCormick, Conacher, Batstone and Conacher made many gains by their running. No other player played a better game than another, all being good, but Conacher with his four touchdowns was the star of the game.

Ottawa looked good at times, but their play was spasmodic. Tubman and Jos. Smith were good while Thomas lined up to advance notes. Walter Gilhooley, with the Argos last year, did not seem to be as good. The game was a clean, the only penalties coming in the last two minutes.

The teams: Argonauts—Flying wing, Strutt; halves, McCormick, Conacher, Batstone; quarter, Conacher, snap, Douglas; guards, Sinclair, and Hugh; middles, Burkhart and Wallace; outside, Thom and Bradfield; spare, McCormick.

Ottawa—Flying wing, Ketchum; halves, J. Smith, Tubman, Gilhooley; quarter, Valieu; snap, Dave Kirby; insides, Gill and Humphries; middles, Dan Kirby and Dewhurst; outside, Thom and Quirt; spare, R. Smith, Chadwick, Dalton, Emerson.

Referee—Percy Robertson.
Umpire—Ben Simpson.

HERMAN GETS JUDGE'S DECISION OVER MOORE

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Pete Herman, New Orleans, former world's bantam-weight boxing champion, received the judge's decision over Roy Moore of St. Paul, in a fifteen-round bout here last night. It was Herman's first appearance in the ring since he lost his title to Johnny Buff last September.

Herman held a safe lead in every round but the eighth, in which Moore had a shade, and the ninth, which was even. The former champion's in-fighting was effective, with Moore taking severe punishment from fast right and left hand body blows.

ALLEGED GAMING HOUSE IN BRIDGEPORT ROBBED

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 14.—The police are today searching for six bandits who, masked, and armed with revolvers, descended upon an alleged gambling house on the Boston Postroad, in Fairfield, at 3 o'clock this morning, and made away with money and jewelry valued at $13,000. After relieving the people of their money and jewelry and cash, the robbers returned the time-piece.

O. L. B. A. LIKELY TO MUSTER OUT FIFTEEN TEAMS

Annual Meeting of Girl Cagers at Woodstock.

C. BLACKWELL PREXY
London Girl Again Leads Circuit—Lady Cockshutt Honorary President.

WOODSTOCK, Nov. 12.—The annual meeting of the Ontario Ladies' Basketball Association was held here Saturday. It was the first annual meeting, and a considerable business was transacted. The reports showed the league in good standing. Last year London and Stratford, Toronto and Hamilton teams composed the league, but this year it is expected to have about fifteen teams lined up, to be divided into three divisions, Eastern, Western and Central. The teams will compete for the championship and the Lady Beck trophy, a beautiful cup, donated last year by the late Lady Beck.

Woodstock was the only addition to the ranks of the league, but inquiries were received from a number of other towns and cities, and those present were enthusiastic at the league's prospects for the present season.

The decision of officers resulted as follows: Honorary president, Lady Cockshutt; president, Miss Carrie Blackwell, London; vice-president, Miss Rose Grosse, Toronto; secretary, Miss Edith Owen, Woodstock; treasurer, Miss Ida Latimer, Stratford.

It was arranged that the groups and schedules would be drawn up by the president and secretary, and all clubs intending to join with the O. L. B. A. are to send in their applications at once, as it is the intention to have the season open the first week in January.

Alert Juniors Start Training

Over 25 Youngsters Are Expected to Turn Out at 'Y' Tonight.

The Alert Club Juniors will inaugurate their early season training tonight in the Y. M. C. A., when over 25 aspirants for the team are expected to turn out. The practice is called for 7:45. Alert Club coaches will give the boys special indoor training in preparation for the ice practice, which will in all probability be started during the early part of December if present weather conditions continue.

All the youngsters who attended the get-together meeting of the club two weeks ago have been notified of the practice this evening, and practically all have signified their intention of coming out.

It is requested that all aspirants turn out early so that their position cards for playing in the junior O. H. A. can be filled out.

The Alert Club executive had a conference with the rink committee of the London Curling Club over the weekend, and final arrangements as to nights on which hockey will be played were made. Tuesday and Friday evenings have been allotted, and this will undoubtedly mean the juniors will play Tuesday evening and the intermediates Friday night.

An executive meeting of the Alerts is called for this week, when representatives to the annual meeting of the O. H. A., the first Saturday in December, will be appointed.

How the Movies Set the Style of Milady's Coiffure

BY JAMES W. DEAN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Styles in Milady's hairdressing were set in the sixteenth century by Benvenuto Cellini, Leonardo, Michael d'Angelo and other artists.

In the eighteenth century the Marquise de Pompadour and the ladies of the court of Louis XV were criterion of coiffures.

Today, of the twentieth century, the fashions of hairdressing are established by movie actresses.

The last statement is founded on data I have gained at first hand in the leading hairdressing establishments of New York. It is no doubt, can be verified in any city of the country where movies are shown and hairdressing shops maintained.

Even while I was talking to a hairdresser in a Fifth Avenue shop a woman who was fat and forty, but not so fair, entered.

"I want my hair bobbed and fluffed all up like Nazimova's," she told an attendant.

"See, that's just an example of what I was telling you," whispered the woman to whom I was talking. "Some-em think that all they need to look like some famous woman is to have their hair fixed in a similar manner. You can't tell 'em that they'll make themselves look ridiculous. They'd just get mad and go to some other shop to get it done, anyway."

Here's what I heard at another shop.

"There's a girl who comes in here now having permanent waves put in her hair. She has a photograph of Gloria Swanson and says she wants her wave to be just like Gloria's. She looks in the mirror and at the photograph to see that it's being done that way."

And at another shop—
"We have about 20 actors of the stage and the movies who are regular patrons. Most of them have their hair curled, but several of them are having permanent waves put in their hair."DOLLAR EGGS APPEAR
IN HAMILTON MARKET

HAMILTON, Nov. 12.—The price of eggs went up to $1 a dozen on the farmers' market this morning, setting a record price for peace times at this period of the year.

THE COUGH
WITH THAT
TICKLING SENSATION

A little tickling in the throat; now and then a dry, hacking cough; you think it is not bad enough to bother about, but every hack makes a breach in the system, strains the lungs and prepares the way for more serious trouble. How many people have lost a good night's rest by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat? The dry, harsh cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had a rest at all.

DR. WOOD'S

is just the remedy you require to stop that irritating, tickling cough on account of its soothing, healing and expectorant properties.

Mrs. P. Johnson, Port Alberni, B. C., writes: "I have suffered for years, off and on, with a tickling cough. I could not sleep nights and had to sit up in bed to get relief. In fact, I coughed so I used to vomit. I tried different doctors' prescriptions until I heard of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I tried it and found great relief after I had taken the first bottle and have not been troubled since. I shall always keep it in the house."

Be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Price, 35c and 60c a bottle put up only by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.—Adv't.

SALTS FINE FOR
ACHING KIDNEYSWe Eat Too Much Meat,
Which Clogs Kidneys,
Then Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and all misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flushed kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Ontario Education Heads Want
Teachers to Sign Year Contract

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Decision to adopt a new progressive policy for the adjustment of educational matters in Ontario was made Saturday, when Ontario representatives of the Women's Teachers' Association, Men Teachers' Association, the Secondary Schools Federation and the school trustees met here and decided to bury their differences.

Several important resolutions were brought forward, one requesting the minister of education to provide for legislation making the school term agree with the academic year. It was also recommended that a board of reference be appointed to settle any disputes which might occur. Among other resolutions which were unanimously carried was the following:

"That this joint conference recommend the minister of education to amend the high school, public school and continuation school acts, so as to require all teachers to enter into a written agreement with the school boards, to be effective until the close of the school year in June and to be deemed renewed from year to year unless terminated by either party on the first day of September, or at least thirty days previous notice."

Among those who attended the conference were: D. J. Ferguson, London; R. J. McKessock, Hampton; Judge J. H. Scott, Perth; Miss Mary Colter, Brantford; Martin Kerr, Hamilton; Miss Jennie Stead, Walkerton; Miss Bertha Adkins, St. Thomas.

Jap Finance Minister Becomes
Premier at End of Life Battle

TOKIO, Nov. 13.—Baron Korekio Takahashi, minister of finance in the Hara cabinet, today assumed the office of premier. An imperial rescript, issued today, summoned the Japanese Diet to assemble Dec. 24.

Baron Takahashi is 67 years old. He speaks English fluently, having studied the language in the United States in 1867 and 1868.

While in America at that time, Takahashi is said to have been held in a state of near slavery for several months through the machinations of a guard. After his return to Japan, Takahashi became successively a teacher of English in a clan school at Karatsu, principal of the Osaka English school, and later an official of the department of agriculture and commerce.

Following this first step, he was promoted to the presidency of the patent bureau, which he resigned in 1899 to engage in a silver mine exploit in Peru. The project failed, and Takahashi again came back to his native land and took up finance in the Bank of Japan.

His rise in the business world was rapid, and in 1906 he became vice-president of the Bank of Japan and president of the Yokohama specie bank. In 1904 and 1906 he acted as financial agent for the government in raising loans in the United States and England. In 1911 he succeeded to the presidency of the Bank of Japan, and in 1913 he resigned to take the portfolio of finance in the Yamamoto cabinet. The new premier was created a baron in 1907, and as such sits as a member of the house of peers.

CRERAR HOLDS
CANADA RICH IN
MOTHER EARTHLeader of Progressives Claims
Wider Outlook Than Two Old Parties.

ANSWERS HECKLERS

W. A. Amos Reviews His Work on Hydro Radial Commission.

STRATFORD, Nov. 13.—By Staff Correspondent, Canadian Press.—Although the temperature was almost sub-Arctic, the audience which greeted Hon. T. A. Crerar, leader of the National Progressives, in Stratford last night filled the large skating rink. "I claim for this progressive movement," Mr. Crerar declared, "that it has the national outlook in a wider sense than either of the two older parties."

He referred to statements attributed to Hon. R. E. Bennett, minister of justice, that the United Grain Growers' Limited (of which Mr. Crerar is president), was a company simply existing as middlemen to take toll from the farmers. Mr. Crerar denied the charge. He asserted that the United Grain Growers, Limited, was a co-operative organization, taking toll from no one. He attributed the railway situation as being largely the result of the "corrupting influence of railway promoters in the past." He charged that the Government had placed no constructive policy before the people. "They want you to sign a blank check," declared Mr. Crerar, "and they will fill it out after the election."

There was some heckling as Mr. Crerar referred to the tariff. He was speaking of disappointing "census returns."

"What will the population be if we have free trade?" an interrupter asked. "If we changed our fiscal policy," Mr. Crerar replied, "our population would be greater, our whole wealth would be greater than it is."

He cited the Maritime Provinces. Before protection, and when they had access to the United States markets, he said, the Maritime Provinces were the most prosperous part of Canada.

Another question came from the back of the hall. "How did the United States get its wealth?"

Mr. Crerar: "My friend had better go down and see. He will find out."

The reply raised a laugh.

Mr. Crerar referred to unemployment in Canada. "Was it evidence," he queried, "that Canada was prosperous under protection?"

"The whole world is upset," shouted another heckler.

"Yes," retorted Mr. Crerar; "Yes the whole world is upset, and my friend a little upset, too."

At this there was another outburst of laughter.

Wealth in Earth.

Mr. Crerar held that the real wealth of Canada lay not in factories, but "in mother earth." "The policy we submit," Mr. Crerar added, "would bring about such changes in our fiscal policy as would encourage the development of this national wealth. We should produce the things we can produce better than anyone else, and sell them for things that other countries can produce better than we can."

"Never for any length of time," Mr. Crerar added, "will the United States go back to the principle of protection in its tariff."

For years to come, the Canadian tariff would be needed to provide revenue, but the protective principle might be eliminated.

W. A. Amos, Labor-U. F. O. candidate in North Perth, spent considerable time in a review of his connection with the hydro-radial commission. Replying to criticisms, Mr. Amos said he had received $5,000 for 150 days' work on the commission, while the highest paid lawyer appearing before the commission received $36,900.

MEIGHEN GOES TO WESTERN FIELD

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 13.—Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, prime minister, arrived here shortly after seven o'clock this evening, ready for his campaign tour in the prairie provinces. The premier was met at the station by a number of prominent Conservatives.

He leaves for Carman at noon Monday to address a meeting at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. In the evening he speaks at St. Eustache in his own riding of Portage la Prairie. His Winnipeg meeting takes place on Tuesday evening, Nov. 15. The premier's trip will take him as far as Moose Jaw, and will comprise about ten meetings.

Canada is at the Cross Roads

PAUSE AND THINK !!

WHAT is the Great Big Issue before the Canadian People in the coming Election?

There is but one—and one only—namely, Free Trade vs. Reasonable Protection.

The People of Canada once more are called upon to decide on the Principle of Protection.

Men count but little—but Principles and Policies and the Interests of the People are enduring.

Canada is once more at the Cross Roads. The issue has been fought out many times in the past and the People of Canada have always stood firm for Protection.

Everybody Knows
Just Where Meighen Stands.

Meighen stands four square for the Protective Principle—for reasonable, moderate Protection—for a Tariff to protect all Canada's industries, all Canada's workmen and all Canada's homes.

He is absolutely opposed to Free Trade, just as the leading statesmen of all other important countries are. He believes in a Tariff merely sufficient to enable Canada to encourage and develop all its industries, to keep our workmen at home, and to induce more men and money to come to the Dominion.

MAKE NO MISTAKE

The Election issue is quite clear. Whether you work on the farm, or in the mine, among the timbers or in the factory, whether your occupation is on land or sea, when you go to vote think of your home, your wife, your children and the consequences to them. Every Canadian home, large or small, in city or country, needs Protection.

THAT IS WHY

Canada Needs Meighen

BENNETT BACKS HIGH TARIFF AS CANADA'S NEED

New Minister of Justice Speaks in London on Behalf of Frank White.

ATTACKS CRERAR POLICY

BY WILLIAM SHARMAN.

Portraying at great length and with powerful eloquence and vehemence the "trifling" possibilities of industrial and national change that would surely follow the adoption of the Liberal tariff policy; warning with grave emphasis that a vote for Charles R. Somerville would actually be a move toward anation of disintegration; waving scornfully and lightly to one side the platform of the Hon. T. A. Crerar; questioning what he termed the war record of the Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and incidentally crediting responsibility for the present Disarmament Conference at Washington, the Hon. R. B. Bennett, K. C., of Calgary, newly created minister of justice in the Dominion Parliament, on Saturday evening last in the Masonic Temple, addressed a mass meeting in the interest of Frank White, the National Liberal and Conservative choice for federal honors in London.

Others, including the candidate himself, to take up the cudgels in the unqualified defence of the last administration at Ottawa were, S. Frank Glass, who represented East Middlesex in the recent house; Mrs. A. T. Edwards, formerly a member of the local board of education and E. R. Dennis, chairman of the evening, who at intervals throughout the meeting, directed an onslaught in the general direction of the Liberal nominee, ex-Mayor Charles R. Somerville.

The gathering was quite substantial, a strong quota of the fair sex being present, representatives of all parties. This is further evidence of the fact that in this election at least, the women are determined to take their politics seriously, and as the fame of the representative for East Calgary as an orator of speed and eloquence is wide-spread it undoubtedly attracted many voters to Saturday evening's gathering.

"I was touched by what your chairman said about being Canadian," said Mr. Bennett, following his preliminary remarks, "because sometimes in the West I hear a doctrine that we of that vast territory are a separate people. Such is quite true. Quite recently Premier Meighen was attacked bitterly because he was alleged to have said that the Agrarian movement sprang from foreign soil. He did not say that. What he did say was distorted. It is true that we of the West have invited the people of all the world, from continental Europe and from the great republic to the South.

Freest Democracy. "Those latter do not know your cities of the East, they know better Chicago, St. Paul, Seattle or Spokane, and sometimes there is a tendency to believe that the institutions of that country from when they came is still theirs. It is not so, however, and will never be. We live under the freest form of democracy. We have a cabinet form of government directly responsible to the people such as that republic to the south does not possess.

"It is our duty to see that our citizens of the next generation and they who settle in Western Canada recognize our institutions and government, and if at any time you read or hear strange sayings I can only say that the heart of the West is sound and true despite the agitators of the few who as they grow older will learn better.

"We have a responsible government, and in these days when the Agrarian movement in the West has assumed such large proportions we should not be alarmed or alarmed. We're but experiencing the 'emotional reaction' such as followed the Napoleonic and other great wars, that spirit of unrest and resentment that is so prevalent. It was the same 100 years ago. It finds expression on the part of assumed leaders who believe that in their hands sets the destiny of the country. It is a different expression today and so you have the Progressive party, the Agrarian movement."

But It Will Pass.

"Do you know it's history in the United States and in this country? Do you remember the old Patrons of Industry? This latest movement is but another manifestation. But it will pass. Did you ever pause and consider what warrant there might be for such a state of mind? There were here thousands recoiling from a great conflict. Three years ago fighting ceased, and thousands of our men who were in the army found themselves out of a job. Thousands of them were deprived of occupation in factories. Then came the inevitable reaction. So some times when you criticize, stop and remember the reasons and causes, and you'll better understand it."

Graphically the speaker told of what the past administration had endeavored to do in the problems that compelled immediate consideration—rehabilitation of the returned veterans and the reconstruction of the country.

"There were they who were left unable to provide for themselves, the widows and orphans of those who paid the supreme sacrifice, and $50,000,000 was expended for pensions. Then again your Government and mine provided pensions for disabled soldiers equal to the United States, and higher than any other country in the world. Yet there are men in London, business men, who with their criticism and censure devote their time of saying 'Nothing was achieved.'

"I say tonight that other nations looked to Canada as the model in its rehabilitation of its soldiers. Others were proud of us, except in Canada. Can you imagine any person so small as to seek party advantage by saying that we did little?"

Drawing a mental picture, Mr. Bennett appealed to his audience to forget all party affiliations and endeavor to see matters as he did.

"We spent millions," he declared, "and notwithstanding the insinuations and innuendoes going forth continually, we have not challenged any person to say that there has been a single cent corrupted. While Australia failed in its town-planning scheme because of graft, and with the United States still facing the soldier's problem, our country and mine has been successful.

"So much for rehabilitation. As in all the countries of the world, we were faced by the question of reconstruction. Jack from the States came thousands who were lacking in employment. In Canada, however, as elsewhere, the real big men dealt effectively with these problems, the great captains of industry, the big men of transportation, etc.

At this point Mr. Bennett touched briefly on the research bureau which has been discontinued, he said and had been subject to unjust criticism and carpentering.

"This country has much to learn," he said, "other nations are not overlooking the opportunities for research work. Is it any wonder then that the people do not want W. L. Mackenzie King?"

Tariff for Defence.

"Relative to reconstruction there was one thing that all the countries agreed upon. What do you think it was? They agreed that the one instrument to be used in self-defence was the tariff. I hold here the tariff policy records of the nations of the world. What do they disclose? Australia after the war raised, not a little tariff as the King or Crerar forces advocate, but a 60 per cent wall sufficient to protect its own industries. "Take South Africa. Thousands of factories came into existence under protection during the war. General Smuts, who compares favorably with our own King, instituted a tariff but was not satisfied with one like Australia's but insisted upon an absolute tariff on boots and shoes.

"India also, with its new grant of responsible government, at once put on a duty on cotton. They also had a million men back from Mesopotamia who needed employment. Then we turn to the United States and we find the application of the same principles. Harding said, 'Put me in power and I'll enact tariff legislation,' and he was put in power. Then followed the Fordney Emergency Tariff Bill, a 35 per cent wall to protect their own people. He expressed regret that he had not sufficient time to itemize similar action by all other countries including, 'last of all, dear old free trade England, where last fall 6,000 articles were placed on the list.'

What Has Canada Done?

"Mr. Crerar asked for a reduction, and we had it. When I entered the house there was a 23 per cent tariff. Now it is down to 22 per cent. No wonder with such a lack of confidence by those who would invest in Canada. We ask for a mandate to protect and preserve the country and give an opportunity to the unemployed to manufacture our necessities. Canada needs a creation of new wealth and such can only be produced by application of labor and capital to our natural resources.

"When Mr. King's candidate in London goes out and says 'all's well,' he is asking for your votes under false pretences.

"King and Crerar unite in saying that the country is owned by the big interests. It remains for the new Progressive party to tell the electors that they are for sale.

"I resent this, and I say to Mr. Crerar, 'You are the interest as he is, and have as much right to assert their rights as he has to claim a monopoly on all the virtues.

Crerar Should Know.

"You have heard Mr. Crerar, your friend. Do you think that he is a man liable to be bought? Yet Mr. King and Mr. Crerar state that the premier and myself are in with the big interests. What are the interests? A company with 35,000 shareholders. There is more yet. Last night in Port Arthur Mr. King declared that soon the active interest in the issue will take up the racial question. Yet on the other hand we have our leader, endeavoring to build up the nation by forgetting old to say that never was there a time when the people will, with the same sense of pride, go out and vote for Meighen. He is first of all a friend and for alike. But more than that in connection with the great disarmament conference now in progress in Washington it was his attitude on I stand here and challenge any person to say that there has been a single cent corrupted. While Australia failed in its town-planning scheme because of graft, and with the United States still facing the soldier's problem, our country and mine has been successful.

"So much for rehabilitation. As in all the countries of the world, we were faced by the question of reconstruction. Jack from the States came thousands who were lacking in employment. is but the outcome of the national policy. We are told of the prosperity of the Laurier regime, but all the world was prosperous at that period. I say that the real Laurier-Pelling tariff was the reciprocity you turned down in 1911.

A Divided House.

"Now they come with a divided house. They are not stable. They are not to be trusted, especially as they will not be free trade in the West and protection in the East, and when he was in London he came no nearer a clear explanation of what he stood for. As a sharp contrast there is the leader of the National Liberal and Conservative party, who goes from coast to coast proclaiming a moderate tariff."

In his introductory remarks, S. Frank Glass, the National Liberal and Conservative nominee in East Middlesex, confined himself to telling many funny stories, following which he launched into a vigorous attack upon the Liberal candidate for London.

"A few nights ago," Mr. Glass reminded his hearers, "Mr. Somerville referred to one of my remarks that American capital was simply waiting the outcome of this election before seeking investment here. He asks me to state a concrete case. I hardly think that is necessary. If Mr. Somerville will open his eyes he will notice that over in Chelsea Green there is a large tract of land that has been purchased by an American firm, which, however, before it establishes its branch is awaiting a settlement of the fiscal policy."

"Let me ask Mr. Somerville if the Ruggles Company is not waiting to see if the country intends to adopt the doubtful policies of Mr. King or Mr. Crerar before it further its development. People can well ask if Mr. King is going where he is looking? If he stands for the Laurier tariff of 1896, why in heaven's sake does he not preach that? Then there would be less unemployment, while the manufacturers wait to see what happens." In conclusion Mr. Glass related two more funny stories about Irish soldiers.

To Guard Our Homes.

Mrs. A. T. Edwards submitted her case for the recent administration this way: "Today we women are called upon to guard our homes. We sent our young men to guard our country. We have the confidence of the people and we should consider of them. Let's keep the wheels of our industries turning. Think what will happen should they be forced to close. Think of the babies of those who would be thrown out of work. "We newly enfranchised women have the power in our hands. We can sway the government. Let's do what is right and come out and vote the right way. I have weighed both leaders and I have yet to determine what Mr. King is doing. He has a different story to tell every day. I have been told that women cannot reason logically, but I am sure that I can reason as logically as Mr. King."

"Let us teach the children about Canada," suggested Mrs. Edwards, lapsing into a patriotic vein, "when they learn about their country they will not leave it. Let's hang pictures in our schools. Over the line the schools all have a picture of George Washington, but how many in Canada contain a picture of the 'Fathers of Confederation?' I appeal to you for your vote. We women are not up so much in politics. I hope that we never shall be. We can leave that to the men. Our part is to guard the homes and country and today we are called upon for that purpose."

As chairman of the evening, E. R. Dennis laid special emphasis upon the remark that he was a representative of that party that had for its good fortune and distinction such a leader as Arthur Meighen—"a real Canadian," he said, "of whom even his bitterest enemy could not admit his sterling qualities and outstanding integrity. At the conference of Dominion premiers," he explained Mr. Dennis, "Premier Meighen to the pride of all Canadians, showed himself a peer of all the empire's statesmen."

After lauding the Tory candidate, Mr. Dennis at some length considered Mr. Somerville's recent manifesto.

"Although I have the kindest feelings for him," Mr. Dennis said, "I believe that he manifested an ill-natured attitude, and his statements are no credit to him or party, and certainly had no effect upon whom it was directed."

"He made some ill-natured remarks about the personnel of our newly-constructed cabinet, and, therefore, it is a great source of gratification to me to be able tonight to afford you the opportunity of judging the calibre and capacity of that group. I want to tell Mr. Somerville further that he has not a half dozen men in his party equal to the Hon. R. B. Bennett."

Mr. Dennis seemingly does not see "eye to eye" with Mr. Somerville's methods of advertising.

"I have been reading his billboards," he said, "I read, 'Safe, Sound, Somerville.' Now, if I was a member of the Liberal party I'd indulge in some plain talk. I'm sure I wouldn't want to see good money expended just to announce that our man was safe. He'll be safe all right—at home on Dec. 6. As regards 'sound,' his leader is all sound but little argument. If they have so much money to spend why do they not plaster their fiscal policy on the boards?"

The gathering broke up with the customary cheers for the King, the premier and the local nominee.

THRICE WIDOWER. SUCCUMBS AT 92

[Special to The Advertiser.]

SIMCOE, Nov. 13.—The funeral took place from Selkirk to Pine Grove Cemetery, Charlotteville Township, on Saturday of Walter Wrightman, 92 years old, who survived three wives, and had 13 children, all of whom were daughters, 27 grandchildren, and 23 great-grandchildren.

Born in Malahide Township, Mr. Wrightman was a prominent lumberman and farmer. During his declining years he lived with two daughters, Mrs. George Gamble and Mrs. Ada Hill of Selkirk.

His first wife was Martha Heagland of Norfolk County, who died 35 years ago and was the mother of all his children. Mrs. Anna Munroe of Charlotteville Township, who died in Freeland, Mich., in 1890, was his second wife. His third, Mrs. Harriet

PORTUGAL, TOO, HAS ITS PACIFIC PROBLEM

[Staff Special to The London Advertiser.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The "Pacific interests" which Portugal will jealously guard at the disarmament conference are one and one-half miles long and one mile wide.

Macao, a Portuguese possession since 1557, is a peninsula jutting out from the island of Hainan Shang on the Chinese coast. It has a population of 78,027—74,568 Chinese, 3,398 Portuguese and 161 others gathered from all quarters of the globe.

Originally Macao was the most important trading port in the eastern Pacific. But when England opened up Hong Kong Macao's importance dwindled.

Today it's an Asiatic Monte Carlo.

Dwellers of the hot cities on the Chinese coast come there in summer both because of the sea breezes and a special kind of liquor Macao manufactures.

Gamblers, swindlers and thugs from every part of the Orient maintain their headquarters in Macao.

For a long time the Portuguese government paid the Chinese government $350 a year for a lease on Macao. Then Portugal decided that was excessive, and the rent collectors haven't been able to get a penny since 1892.

In the first half of the last century Macao's chief industry was exporting Chinese coolies who were sold into virtual slavery. Then the Portuguese government put a stop to it and today the chief industry is smuggling.

VERY BRIGHT!

"Hm! So you wish to marry my daughter. May I ask, how are your future prospects? Can you provide for her?"

"Yes, absolutely. I have a very rich uncle, 65 years old, who has lately taken up aviation."

The Great Route of the Great Lakes

EVEN today Canada, a mere infant among the Nations of the World—though a growing and lusty one—possesses in Canada Steamship Lines' ships a fleet of inland water carriers that lowers its flag to no similar fleet in the World.

The growth of this fleet is not merely the natural sequence of the development of this great route of the Great Lakes, for commercial purposes. It has come as a result of the tribute which the World in general, and North America in particular, pays to the beauty which hourly unfolds to the eye of the tourist who travels this great waterway.

The freight carried by this same line represents a huge proportion of the tonnage passing East and West across Canada.

Wheat from the West—coal from the States—ore from the Lake Superior district—merchandise of all kinds from all lake ports; these find low-cost transportation on the ships that travel our inland seas.

Such a business must grow—as Canada grows. Even in a year fraught with business uncertainty there is plenty of business for such a fleet. The figures for 1921 prove this beyond doubt. In passengers carried and freight transported, the Company's steamers have had a season which compares well with the banner year of 1920, and when viewed in the light of business conditions, this is a remarkable achievement.

The investor who pins his faith to the future of Canada Steamship Lines cannot go far astray. The development of Canada Steamship Lines—holding as it does a strategical position in Great Lakes transportation—must coincide with the development of Canada. No one can belittle this country's future.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

Club Men, Attention!

Do you ever consider the advisability of purchasing a building and site for a club house?

I have just listed one of London's finest residences that is admirably suited for just such a purpose, it being very central, facing Victoria Park.

This is a very large three-story residence, with spacious rooms and an additional building at rear.

A solid walnut staircase that would cost thousands of dollars is located in the wide reception hall in the center of the building, and leads to third floor.

There are seventeen rooms, hot water heated, full basement, slate roof, and about ten fireplaces, three toilets, and two three-piece bathrooms. Large grounds suitable for bowling green, tennis, etc., surround the house.

Relieved Over Night by New External Vapor Treatment

Local Druggists Giving Away 50c Jars.
CUT OUT COUPON BELOW.

Twenty-five years ago, in a little North Carolina town, a druggist discovered a process of combining the old-fashioned remedies—Camphor, Turpentine and Menthol—with certain volatile oils, such as Eucalyptus, Thyme and Juniper, so that, when applied externally, the body heat would vaporize these ingredients. These vapors, inhaled all night long, carry the medication, with each breath, direct to the air passages and lungs.

Today this vapor treatment, Vicks VapoRub, is almost universally used throughout the South in preference to internal "dosing." It is quick in its action, and what is more important, particularly to mothers with small children, it is applied externally, and hence does not disturb the most delicate stomach.

This preparation comes in salve form, and its action is twofold. Externally, it is

CONSIDER 4 CASES AT WEEKLY COURT

Mr. Justice Sutherland Presides at High Court Sessions.

Mr. Justice Sutherland presided at the weekly high court at the London courthouse Saturday morning. Four cases were considered.

Fuller vs. Thames Quarry Company—Motion stands one week at the plaintiff's request in order to cross-examine on affidavits filed. G. A. P. Brickenden for motion; J. W. McEvoy, K. C. opposed.

McKellar vs. Maghall—Motion stands for one week at the defendant's request. If the parties agree, motion may be spoken to earlier before same judge in Toronto. J. C. Elliott, K. C., for motion and speaking also for defendant.

Florence B. Alston, vendor, to H. Hoekman, purchaser—Motion to confirm a sale under the settled estates act, an infant being interested, has been granted. The motion involves the construction of a will, and that other persons should be represented. If all the parties consent, sale may be made, the official guardian to sign the deed on behalf of the infant, and purchase money to be paid into court. The income for life may be paid to the mother. Failing consent, the motion is adjourned one week. The counsel representing the infant will then represent all children living at date of disbursement. Counsel for the executors will also then represent the executor in her personal capacity. Motion will also be for the construction of the will. E. W. M. Flock for vendor, P. P. Betts for the official guardian, and P. H. Bartlett for executor.

Sarah E. McIntyre, a person alleged to be incapable of managing her own affairs—Motion to confirm the report of the local master at London, who reads a letter from the public trustee consenting to the order, but counsel for the public trustee having been instructed to ask for an enlargement, the motion stands for one week unless the public trustee in the meantime consents that the order may go. H. H. Colter, St. Thomas, for committee, and E. E. Perrin for public trustee.

PUPILS GIVE RECITAL

CHANCELLOR TO UNVEIL
PORTRAIT OF LATE DEAN

Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown announced Saturday that Hon. W. J. Roche, M.P., LL.D., M.P., chairman of civil service council of Canada, and chancellor of Western University, has accepted an invitation to attend the official opening of Western University Medical School, next Thursday, and will at that time unveil a portrait of the late Dr. H. A. McCallum, dean emeritus of that institution at the time of his death last winter.

This portrait, painted by E. Wyle Grier, R. C. A., of Toronto, is ready to be hung in the new school, and was made available by personal subscription on the part of the Western University board of governors.

Students Volunteer To Canvass Voters for Their Approval

Definite plans for furthering the proposed grant of $50,000 to be made by the city of London for the construction of new buildings for the College of Arts of Western University, upon which the ratepayers will vote Dec. 5, are now the board of governors of the university selected to inaugurate a campaign in favor of this grant will meet Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of completing arrangements to place the full facts of the case before the public, in an effort to convince every voter that the grant means a better London.

Students of Western University will assist in the advertising campaign, in a manner similar to the course followed in 1915, when their efforts assisted materially in the voters ratifying a grant of $100,000 to the new Medical School by an overwhelming majority.

The students are being organized to canvass citizens prior to election date, and Dean Sherwood Fox of the College of Arts is in charge of this volunteer corps.

It is pointed out that the Chamber of Commerce members have practically unanimously favored the braw, and this factor is an important one in favor of Western. If the grant is ratified the Provincial Government will assign $800,000 to the new group of buildings, to which sum the county of Middlesex has added $100,000 to construct a building in memory of former residents of that municipality who sacrificed their lives in the war.

By the above means Western University has almost $1,250,000 in sight for new college buildings to be erected on property acquired at the Kingsmill farm, thus providing for greater student attendance and better teaching facilities.
