Special to The Advertiser.

Amos, Que., Feb. 21.—The fever of excitement in connection with the rush of prospectors to north western Quebec, has spread to Amos on the Transcontinental Railway, already a number of prospectors have passed this way en route to the new field. The only difference is that those going by way of Amos were entering the field from the opposite end to that of the general rush from the Ontario end on the west.

One outfit, passing through here, carried seventeen prospecting permits, each good for staking 200 acres of mining land, and the indications are staking from this eastern end will be heavy. It is reported that before the spring break-up will be broken over the entire length of the area, linking up Amos with the area of activity in Rouyn township, some 75 miles away to the east.

PROVINCIAL POLICE GET BIG LIQUOR HAUL

Shipment Valued At $5,000 Is Seized At Belle River.

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Feb. 22.—Provincial police seized a large shipment of champagne and other choice liquors at the railway depot in Belle River Tuesday. The shipment is valued at about $5,000. Five large packing cases, each containing from 50 to 60 bottles of expensive wines, liquors, whiskey and gin were brought here by the officers today. It was addressed to John Robinson of Belle River, which police say is a notorious name. The shipment had been sent by express from Toronto.

Unless the liquor is claimed by Saturday, the police will ask for an order for its confiscation. When police knocked at John Kowal's door at his home, 914 Langlois avenue, they saw him pour the contents of a bottle down the sink, they reported. When they unscrewed a tap in the pipe there was still enough moonshine whiskey in the pipe to fill a pint bottle, they said. Kowal pleaded not guilty in the police court today, and was remanded for trial.

BELIEVE MAN SLAIN BY BOOTLEGGING GANG

Los Angeles Police Extend Search For Murderer of Earle Remington.

Special to The Advertiser.

Los Angeles, Feb. 22.—Following the discovery that Earle Remington, a well-known aviator and sportsman, was a leading figure in a big bootlegging ring, police detectives searched Wednesday night for a bootlegger with whom Remington is known to have had a quarrel a short time before his stabbing and bullet-riddled body was found at the door of his home early Friday morning.

Detective Capt. Hoge declared the belief that this man might be the actual slayer. "It seems certain that Remington's death was the result of the operations of the bootleg ring with which he was involved," he declared. Other members of the ring are known, according to the detective, and arrests will soon be made.

Federal Agents Start Roundup Following Convictions in Detroit.

Special to The Advertiser.

Detroit, Feb. 21.—Joseph A. Palma, head of the Detroit bureau of secret service, who is leading federal agents in a wholesale round-up of alleged counterfeiters in New York and New Jersey yesterday informed his assistant, Robert Hynes, by telegraph that 82 persons had been arrested, 61 in New York City.

Counterfeit money, with a face value of $100,000, and a large quantity of tools and chemicals, have been seized, the telegram stated. The nature of the tools indicated that postage stamps and revenue stamps were being counterfeited, as well as bank notes.

The counterfeit plot is expected to involve between $1,000,000 and $10,000,000 in spurious money. The raids in the east resulted from the arrest and conviction here on charge of counterfeiting by Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Rossi, who lived, before their imprisonment, at 3535 Lovett avenue.

The violation charges in smoking in a public place, prohibited by a section of Utah's famous anti-tobacco act. Charges that the arrests were the result of a "frame-up" to discredit the law and aid in the movement for its repeal by the legislature now in session, were vehemently denied at the office of the sheriff, who said that the deputy sheriffs had orders to arrest all violators and did not know the identity of the men taken into custody.

DETROIT CRITICS COLD WHEN WALSKA SINGS

Concede Star To Be One of Most Beautiful Women On Stage.

Special to The Advertiser.

Detroit, Feb. 22.—An on-looker had to choose "blind" as to whether he was dead or thrilled at Mme. Ganna Walska's concert here Tuesday night. This was the unanimous decision of Detroit critics of music, who undertook Wednesday to answer the widely-discussed question whether the Polish song bird, now attempting to follow her marriage to Harold P. McCormack, can really sing. The recent severe cold wave here has been replaced by the frigidly of Ganna's reception by the critics and editors. It was Ganna's first appearance before a big-town audience since her marriage to the famous husband, and many a critic warmed to the occasion. Admitting that as a singer Ganna is one of the most beautiful women on the concert stage, the critics admitted the fact that an audience of 2,000 gave her generous applause to following her marriage to Harold P. McCormack, can really sing.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN FAVORED

Premier King Tells Why Small Body Will Consider Redistribution Bill.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—Referring to the redistribution bill, Premier King said in Commons yesterday that the government was of the opinion that the work of the special committee, to be appointed to consider the bill, would be done if the committee were a small one. It appeared to the government that a committee composed of 11 members would be about the right size to deal with the matters involved in the redistribution bill, without being unwieldy. However, as members of the opposition considered this too small, the government decided to constitute a committee of 15 members, of which each of the different groups in the house would have representation. Mr. Hon. Arthur Meighen, opposition leader, observed that a committee of more than 15 members might seem large, but it must be borne in mind that the conditions were unique. The government long term loans, these would be used as educational centres. So far as cheese was concerned, the remedy lay with the combination of small factories with large ones.

Arthur Meighen, Hon. George P. Graham, acting minister of railways.

The nature of the contract, which provided for the bringing of postage stamps and revenue stamps were being counterfeited, as well as bank notes.

The counterfeit plot is expected to involve between $1,000,000 and $10,000,000 in spurious money. The raids in the east resulted from the arrest and conviction here on charge of counterfeiting by Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Rossi, who lived, before their imprisonment, at 3535 Lovett avenue.

SCORES DRURY POLICY CONCERNING FARMERS

W. E. N. Sinclair Claims U. F. O. Government Has Failed To Aid Farmers.

DOHERTY DEFENDS

Claims Adequate Legislation Has Been Provided At All Times.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Feb. 22.—The policy of the Ontario government in agricultural matters was attacked in the Legislature yesterday by W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal, South Ontario. Hon. Manning Doherty, minister of agriculture, following, defended his department and the government, and gave a detailed review of what had been accomplished in agricultural legislation and administration since the government came into power. Mr. Sinclair moved a resolution that "this House regrets that the present government, supported by a bloc of purely agricultural representatives, has failed to take adequate action for agricultural betterment." Mr. Doherty said the resolution was one of want of confidence in the government. He declared that the government had given a fairly successful administration in agricultural affairs and then went into details on its accomplishments.

Tomorrow Hon. Peter Smith, provincial treasurer, will make his budget speech. Both Conservatives and Liberals are asking numerous questions about the public accounts in connection with the budget debate. Today Hon. Beniah Bowman introduced a bill which proposes to give the government power to expropriate land for reforestation purposes.

Amend Trustees Act. South Wentworth introduced a bill proposing that any elector in a school district be qualified to run as a school trustee. As it is now only a ratepayer can qualify. He would also qualify for municipal candidature a person who has purchased a house from a housing commission even if the house is mortgaged to the commission. Mr. Crockett introduced a bill to amend the Municipalities Act which would compel the municipalities in suburban areas just outside big cities to put in adequate sanitary works.

Mr. Sinclair said his resolution was not intended to defeat the government, although he would shed no tears if the government were defeated. The object of his resolution was to get the farmer to take more interest in his own business, and to get the government to pay more attention to the farmer. Mr. Sinclair declared that the U. F. O. clubs had developed into political organizations and that the rural population had been caused by farmers moving to the west, machinery replacing man labor, and farming being done on a large scale. He gave figures to show that in 1919 the total revenue was spent on agriculture by the government by the day. This had decreased yearly, until in 1922 it was $08.

Suggests Farm Paper. Mr. Sinclair suggested that there should be an agricultural paper published by the government, that county agricultural representatives should operate a demonstration farm; that grants to agricultural societies be increased, and that school houses be used for giving lectures to farm audiences.

Mr. Doherty said the farmer did not want paternal or charitable legislation. He believed that his government had given satisfactory attention to agricultural matters. Few farmers in Canada were in such fortunate circumstances as Ontario farmers were. The farmers had received the best systems in the world. In the year he had, 1,122 applications were received for loans, and 662 were granted. Loans were made for a total of $2,243,500 on total credits held by those from the loans were made of $4,632,600.

Continuing after the dinner-hour, Mr. Doherty discussed the working-out of the rural credits system established by the government late in 1921, during the first year of operation. 100 per cent of the payment on short term loans had been paid up, and 88 per cent of those on long term loans. The latter figure, he thought, was good showing in the face of adverse conditions.

During the first year the administration of the act had cost the province $10,000. "In three years' time the system will be entirely self-supporting."

Mr. Doherty quoted a letter from Sir John Aird, general manager of the Bank of Commerce, to the effect that the government long term loans, these would be used as educational centres. So far as cheese was concerned, the remedy lay with the combination of small factories with large ones.

Turning to the bacon industry, Mr. Doherty criticized the federal authorities for allowing Canadian packers to export to the United States, and re-export as Canadian bacon.

Mr. Doherty quoted from a cablegram to himself by Lord Beaverbrook giving the Ontario minister the chief credit for having the British embargo on Canadian store cattle removed.

Mr. Doherty went on to emphasize to the house his conception of the great single need of the agricultural industry—that of some system of orderly marketing of commodities. Present-day marketing conditions in agriculture, he said, were inadequate and uneconomical, and were not as facilitated speculation.

New-Born Babe Upon Dying Has Life Restored By Drug

New York Physician Performs Miraculous Cure On Boy When Heart Stops Beating At Birth.

New York, Feb. 21.—A boy baby, nursing in an incubator at Borough Park Maternity Hospital, owes his life to a scientific innovation as outstanding as any miracle in the history of medicine.

Dead a few minutes after his premature birth, he was brought back to life by the injection of adrenalin, a goat gland essence. Soon the veins in the tiny body grew pink. The heart was then drained of the drug by massage, and 1 1/2 ounces of blood were taken away to relieve pressure. A pulmotor started the lungs functioning. Within a few minutes the baby had a fair chance to live.

Since then the babies have been written in an incubator and fed on milk. Dr. Minberg says to reason why they cannot develop into normal, healthy children.

Dr. Phillip Minberg, physician attending Mrs. Bertha Isaacson, Wednesday gave a detailed account of the extraordinary experiment, which may result in the use of this drug to restore life to drowning persons.

This charge was a direct connection with the liquor drinking booth, which was operated by Belore for some time, on which he was fined $15 and costs, following the death of a man after drinking moonshine whiskey.

ESSEX EIGHT NAMED AS ELECTION NEARS

Albert Healy To Be Backed by Premier King and Stalwarts in Person.

RIVALS CONFIDENT

Tory Candidate Launches Campaign With Attacks On Present Administration.

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Feb. 21.—Like calm before a storm the apathy that characterized the North Essex political campaign during the initial stages has now given place to one of the fiercest and most active battles seen here in years.

Both party camps have been directing withering verbal onslaughts at each other, and the most active activities include every electoral section and district within the constituency. Strong men of the Conservative opposition will arrive here Saturday, including Hon. Arthur Meighen, Hon. Gideon Robertson and Senator Blondin. Hon. Dr. Manion of Port Hope will arrive here Sunday morning to addressing meetings throughout the riding tomorrow.

After the Conservatives have had their fling, the prime minister, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Hon. James Murdoch, Paul Mercier, M.P., and others of the Liberal party will arrive the latter part of next week, and the party of the new-born will be ready to address meetings throughout the riding tomorrow.

Col. Sydney Robinson, Conservative torch-bearer, has combed every part of the city and starts on a thorough solicitation of voters tomorrow morning. In a number of speeches delivered today his line of argument was an adaptation of planks contained in the Liberal platform of 1921. To his audience he declared that Liberal promises of reduced taxation had not been implemented and that the national debt has increased since then. The present government, he alleged, has made no attempt to carry out its platform of reduced taxation.

Before his election Premier King deprecated Conservative legislators for the huge national debt that had piled up during their term of office, but the Conservative ex-Premier Meighen was burdened with the accumulated indebtedness of the National Railways contracted for a period of two years. In contrast to the alleged admirable attempts on the part of the Conservatives to lessen the public tax, he averred, Premier King with distinct advantages, had practiced extravagance of every variety. The candidate said his charges could be substantiated by the public.

Conservative Hope Reigns. In conversation with The Advertiser, Colonel Robinson declared his satisfaction with the trend of events, and thought prospects for his election extremely bright. He said his association with the Essex Fusiliers and 18th Battalion, C. E. F., had gained for him an army of new friends among the Liberal element.

Saturday night, the Conservative candidate will speak before meetings at Woodlee and Tecumseh in the afternoon, and will outline the alleged sins of the King government before audiences at Waterville, Sandwich in the evening. On Monday Mr. Meighen addresses a gathering of women at the Prince Edward Hotel, and on Monday afternoon the wind-up will be staged at the Windsor Armories in the form of a mass meeting. The Conservative candidate has been appearing at public meetings each evening for a week and reports a most encouraging outlook.

Premier Will Speak. Premier King is expected to speak on behalf of the Liberal candidate at Windsor on the 27th or 28th. Hon. Mr. Lapointe will address the voters of Ford City and Waterville on the 27th, and Hon. Mr. Murdoch will be engaged in Windsor and suburban points the next day. The Liberal organization has been active in the city, and the women are reported to be working tooth and nail for Mr. Healy.

The latter spoke before three applauding meetings of his supporters this evening, two at Riverside and one in Tecumseh. He referred to the laudable achievements of the late Hon. Mr. Kennedy whose death was necessary the North Essex by-election, and declared it was vitally essential that the great work commenced by the former minister be carried on with unceasing energy. For the good of Canada and benefit of the border cities it was imperative that a Liberal be returned from North Essex to take Mr. Kennedy's place in formulating national policies. He referred to the project of Mr. Kennedy in connection with the removal of railroads from the border and waterfronts that all available space might be taken for shipping purposes.

Mr. Healy pledged himself to agitate for this measure as soon as he was returned to parliament. He pointed out the necessity of the present government having a working majority in the house. It was in the interests of Canada that a clear path be made for Premier Macdougall in effecting legislative measures that were for the betterment of conditions and in the general interests of the people. A vote for the present government would mean approval of unstable government.

Senate Members to Speak. Senators Pardee, McColg and Hartley Dewar will address meetings here in the next few days, and it is expected that the campaign, so far as outside ministers and members is concerned, will terminate with a grant-in-aid. Liberal supporters later on, while the prime minister will take the Conservative opposition to task by concluding the issues and making political practices unheard of in countries where clean and irreproachable methods are the custom. Feeling runs high as the date of the election, March 1, approaches.

The general attitude is that Albert Healy will emerge triumphant with a reduced majority. Colonel Robinson is one of the most active Conservatives seen here in many years, and his personal friends will doubtless contribute materially to lowering the anticipated Liberal majority.

Senator Robertson, in his recent address favoring the section of Robinson, took an hour's fling at the Government for its action in negotiating with France and Italy for a treaty, which he claims does not meet the support of Canadians. He averred

SARNIA POLICE ARREST WOMAN ON RECEIVING TIP FROM PAL OF RAILWAY VICTIM.

SEIZE 200 CARTONS Claim Stock of Extract Confiscated Enough To Supply Whole City.

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, Feb. 22.—An extraordinary sequel to the death of David Hill, an Indian, who was killed by a freight train on the P. M. Railway, Sunday morning, occurred with the seizure by Provincial Officer Leslie Atkins and High County Constable William Scott of 200 cartons, each containing a dozen bottles of various extracts from the store of Mrs. R. Jacks, Chipewick street, Sarnia. The seizure was made in connection with the stock of Mrs. Jacks, which was sufficient to supply the legitimate requirements of the city for six months.

When the body of Hill was viewed after the accident, the police found indications that he had been drinking, and were successful in tracing another Indian who had been with him on Saturday night. It now appears as if the dead man lost consciousness and was lying on the track when the train came along and severed his legs.

Following inquiries, a visit to the store of Mrs. Jacks resulted, and when the lady was asked to produce her stock of extract, the officers state she brought out 200 cartons, each containing nearly 200 cartons, which now occupy about half the space in the provincial police office.

There is an extract to suit every taste, vanilla, lemon, raspberry and almond. It is said to have been sold openly by the store in Sarnia to Indians and foreign residents of the South Ward, whose practice was to mix the extract with two per cent beer. With the seizure, it is believed the provincial police has eliminated the origin of much of the drunkenness which has been prevalent in the South Ward. Mrs. Jacks will be called to police court at the end of the week to show why she carried such a large stock of extract, and will probably be charged with carrying on an illegal business.

League of Nations Representative Fear Spread of Conflict.

Special to The Advertiser.

Paris, Feb. 22.—European nations are waking up in a conflict that is being waged between Lithuania and Poland in Eastern Europe, according to indications. Reports that over 200 have been killed and many wounded in battles between Lithuanians and Poles in the vicinity of Vilna, has caused representations on the council of the League of Nations that the league must intervene at once to prevent a war in Eastern Europe.

Rene Viviani, the French delegate on the league council, it is understood, favors calling a special session of the league council, which would reach more serious proportions. Rumors of war over a few square miles of territory are flying thick and fast. The chancelleries of Europe, according to many persons in the situation, only needs its Sarajevo to start a widespread conflict.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1923.

The Premier's Position.

The Conservative organ in London takes a few disjointed words from an abbreviated press despatch and labels them as "Premier King's Empire Policy." It is made to appear as follows: "One portion of the British Empire should take responsibility for the troubles of another portion only to the extent it is itself concerned."

Accepting that as the "Empire policy" of the premier, the paper in question says:

"Can you bear it? Just as the world is coming to believe a little bit in brotherhood; just as the League of Nations' idea, the responsibility of all for one and one for all, is beginning to take root in the minds of statesmen of the better and more unselfish order, along comes Canada's Tory paper to discuss Premier King's views of Canada's position to the empire in case of war, and obviously that is what is referred to in the article, let it take the premier's own considered statement, made on the floor of the House on the day that parliament opened this year. After dealing with the request for the opinion of Ottawa as to the advisability of sending Canadian troops to the scene of the Near East crisis at that time, Mr. King said:

"We have felt and feel very strongly that if the relations between the different parts of the British Empire are to be made of an enduring character, this will only be through a full recognition of the supremacy of parliament, and this particularly with regard to matters which may involve participation in war. It is for parliament to decide whether or not we should participate in wars of different parts of the world, and it is neither right nor proper for any individual or for any group of individuals to take any step which might limit the rights of parliament in a matter which is of such great concern to all the people of our country."

The Advertiser submits that if Premier King is to be judged on the basis of his empire and parliamentary ideals, it must be on the basis of a statement wherein he is fully and carefully quoted, and not on a theory built around a few garbled words from a news despatch.

The premier of Canada, in making his statement to parliament, made a notable contribution to "brotherhood," the very essence of which must find expression in acknowledging the supremacy of parliament. That point must be established, and firmly established beyond the power of any political drill-sergeant to tear it down. It is the recognition of this principle that is going to give us statutory grounds, as sacred as anything in the Magna Charta, to pass on from the place where a few men could control the lives and deaths of millions.

Premier King has taken his stand, and he puts at the very forefront of it his belief that the elected representatives of the people, as they come together in parliament, constitute the one and only competent jury to pronounce on measures involving the declaration of war.

On that ground he is prepared to rest his case for the verdict of the people.

The Qualities of Manhood.

An inquest in Toronto inquired into the death of ten men at the plant of the Consumers' Gas Company.

Some were overcome while in the discharge of their work, and others gave their lives in efforts to rescue their companions.

The questioning eliminated a great pile of irrelevant material, and finally focussed on valve No. 8. It should have been closed, but it was not.

Hugh Thompson, general foreman of the company, took the stand. It seemed that events were so shaping that this man must be near the crux of the whole situation. As questions became more pointed the witness answered more directly.

With no urging, and with no attempt to drag in a qualifying circumstance, Hugh Thompson, the witness, took the entire blame for the leaving open of the valve that caused the whole trouble. It was his own frank admission that he had been responsible for the death of ten men.

His admission does not bring the victims back, nor does it make the loss to those left behind one bit less keen. It does none of these things, but it allows a man to stand forth who is brave enough and honest enough, in the face of an overwhelming tragedy, to bend his back for the loading of the entire burden of responsibility.

The events surrounding that whole awful catastrophe have served to show that there were some real men at the Consumers' Gas plant—men whose characters and ideals must have been built of gold, silver and precious stones. They rushed into a gas-filled room and met death trying to rescue their comrades. That in itself is the highest type of manhood as we know it. In this sacrificial pose it seems to be almost reaching out and approaching to the divine. Then, this latest aftermath, where one man comes forward, and with the full weight of the awfulness of his admission before his mind, names himself and none other as the man to blame.

The sad feature is that homes should be called upon to pass through this furnace of affliction before we get such a vision of the finest qualities of full-orbed manhood.

Where Is Our Mixer?

Has any person seen a cement mixer? That is, our city cement mixer? Not a very thing to lose, like a collar-button or a street car ticket, but it's gone just the same.

We heard once of a man who lost a bass drum, but that was a long time ago, and there's no occasion to lose such things now. But this cement mixer—during its existence here it was a busy little beggar. It whirled and ground all day and was reckoned as a regular dandy with its red paint. It helped to build quite a few foundations for the houses that went up on the housing commission ground, and, according to local tradition, was trundled back to the city yards at the close of the season.

But that cement mixer must have been left close to the door. Where it stood it was perhaps beside a wheelbarrow and a shovel. No cement mixer that has any pride in itself can sit still in that company. It longed for action and the outside world again, so it must have been that one day when the door was open that cement mixer got out and, what's more, it has stayed out ever since.

In a way it's like the "Minnie M." or Gamey's piano-box—it has provided something to talk about at elections ever since. Every now and again some official nods and whispers, the inference being that he knows where that famous cement mixer is. Some sleuth is reported to have traced it as far as Lucan, but there the trail was dropped, and it is not on the civic tablets whether the machine went on its way up into Biddulph or turned back toward London.

Now the mayor says he knows where the thing is, and says it will return to the place from which it started some two or three years ago. We'd almost like to bet him a printing press to a bicycle that he can't bring the mixer back.

No Censure Needed.

Much importance seems to be attached to the fact that Brantford stands to lose about $23,000 on its importation of Welsh coal. Out of the many things that are printed one draws the inference that old line companies have shipped a lot of coal to that city to make the Welsh article a drug on the market and force the price down.

Brantford council saw a fuel shortage and bought coal in Wales to protect the city from a famine. That protection in itself was and is worth much.

If the presence of that Welsh coal made outsiders anxious to ship in more coal, then citizens and dealers alike should have been glad the Welsh coal was there. It might even pay to get some more and keep it on hand.

A city council has to act in advance many times, and that action must be governed by what the aldermen think may take place.

Brantford city council took steps that gave its citizens good coal and plenty of it, while other centers have been scraping around, taking any shipments they can get.

Brantford should call its 1922 council back long enough to tender a vote of thanks.

Note and Comment.

A good many people owe their trouble to the fact that they regard enough as just a little more.

Sir Harry Lauder has sailed from San Francisco. He was headed in the dir-r-r-rect-ion of Austr-r-r-alla.

Quebec has people rushing in to take up land where gold is reported. Surely Hon. Charles Stewart should be able to start some such rumor about western Canada.

Andrew Gump, who frolics around on The Advertiser's comic page, is a sick man. They have tried many things on him, but we believe senna tea and a mustard plaster would do the trick.

A despatch from Hull, Eng., tells of a shipment of B. C. apples arriving there in first-class condition. The B. C. people, in the growing and marketing of fruit, are setting a pace that Ontario has shown no inclination or ability to follow.

A big 16-year-old son was in Hamilton court for beating his mother. The magistrate gave him two weeks and five lashes. When a son gets the beating idea established in his mind it's high time for the law to show him how it should be well done.

Despatches say the employee who caused the strike at Sydney, N. S., has been permanently discharged. Steelworkers went on strike over this and lost between $75,000 and $100,000 in wages. That means poor generalship on the part of the men's leaders.

IS THE BEAR ONLY A DISINTERESTED SPECTATOR?

The Despondent Carnegie Trustees.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)

THE difficulty that rich men have in knowing what to do with the money they leave—a difficulty comparable with that of their eye-of-a-needle progress into Heaven—is intensified by a melancholy report which Mr. Carnegie's American trustees have issued after disbursing his colossal bequests for ten years.

That amazingly successful Scotchman had a proper passion for organs, libraries and free university education. His American trustees do not, so far as a condensed report of their statement shows, complain that the organs or the libraries have done much harm. But over the free education they begin to shake their heads.

They are indeed so depressed that they assert that "big giving" of any sort results in social toxins that do enough harm to more than counteract the benefits and in particular that the subsidising of universities, of which Mr. Carnegie was particularly fond, "has placed an over-emphasis on going to college and diverted many young men and women from vocations in which their real happiness would lie." They do not specify the case of Scotland, which enjoys a particularly generous experience of Mr. Carnegie's belief that university education was the best permanent present he could make to his poorer fellow-countrymen. But they might reasonably have instanced the excess of would-be professional men and women—their number is enormous—who are producing in Scotland. The lad who comes to college from a Hebridean croft as the guest of the shade of the Pittsburgh millionaire does not willingly go back to the croft. He is trained, thanks to Mr. Carnegie, for a profession. It was the ideal of his parents that he should have that chance, and he has it. He is destined to be a black-coated worker for life, even in a world too full of black coats. It is a curious result, this of a praiseworthy beneficence by a notable individualist, that it should be to destroy the individuality of the beneficiaries. But surely it is less the fault of the benefaction than of the use made of it. The complaint of the Carnegie trustees should not be against making university education a profession, but against the conception of it. It is a profession, it must turn out "professional" men, whereas its pious purpose is to enable a man not only to preach or teach, but to plow, fish, build, or sell goods better and more happily for having read and loved the Odes of Horace or wrestled with and defeated the variants of the syllogism.

The first crop of new hair may not last, but it is replaced with a more vigorous growth. The new hair, when it decides to stay, may not be quite the same color as the rest of the hair supply, but it is a joy to have the bald spot covered, no matter what the hue may be.

WHAT "ALOPECIA AREATA" IS AND THE WAY TO WIN RELIEF

By Royal S. Copeland, M.D.

Did you ever see a man with an irregular spot of baldness somewhere on his head? I do not refer to the common baldness of old age, but to a patch on the crown, but to a patch on the side of the head or in the back.

This condition is called "alopecia areata," or "circumscribed alopecia." The word "alopecia" is from the Greek and means "fox-mange." You know about animals you are aware that the mange is a rather common affliction, the usual expression of which is a falling out of the hair in irregular patches.

In its effects upon the hair, alopecia areata is a sort of human mange. Of course, it is not the same disease as mange in animals. It comes on at almost any age, but particularly between 10 and 30 years of age. Whether it is due to a germ or parasite, or to some nervous disturbance, is a disputed question.

In considering the causes some authorities have dwelt upon the importance of diseased teeth and tonsils. They have suggested these as possible sources of infective poisons which extend to the scalp and cause loss of hair. One writer contends that excessive use of ammonia for filling decayed teeth may be a factor.

Worry, shock and all sorts of nervous disabilities have been counted among the causes. The downright truth is that we do not know at present exactly what causes the loss of hair in this disease.

But there is one thing you can do as certain: If you want good, strong hair and a full shock of it, you must be well-nourished and have a good heart. I saw a group of kindergarten children the other day. They had been under-nourished and almost the first thing that improved was their appearance of the hair. Where it had been dead and lustreless originally, it had become bright and shiny with improved health.

A weak heart or a soft-beating heart does not send the blood in forceful stream to the extremities. In such a person the scalp suffers its deprivation of blood and baldness progresses.

In alopecia areata the bald spots develop with surprising rapidity. A whole handful of hair falls out in a bunch.

There may be several small patches which gradually unite. In exceptional cases every bit of hair disappears. There are other instances when all the hair of the body falls out and the victim is left absolutely denuded.

Fortunately, this variety of baldness is overcome and the hair grows again. The younger the victim, the more hopeful the outlook. If you do it is less favorable in the prospect.

The Daily Story

THE SANDWICH MAN.

By Ross Meredith.

"Joe Dalton has come home!" As Mrs. Fletcher made this announcement she sank breathlessly into a chair and fixed inquisitive eyes upon Sarah Maud.

Sarah Maud paled under her healthy color, and her breath hastened through her parted lips as if eager questions struggled to escape.

"What say?" prompted Mrs. Fletcher. Sarah Maud smiled a little and carefully picked up a stitch in her knitting. "I didn't say anything," she murmured softly, then, boldly, "I suppose his folks are glad to have him back again."

"Yes—he looks kind of peaked, but he says he's all right—seemed prosperous. I asked him plump out what business he was in, and he seemed frustrated at first, then he laughed and said he was in the restaurant line."

"Yes?" Mrs. Fletcher could not see the shining eyes fixed on the gay yarns in Sarah Maud's deft fingers. "They say there is money to be made in New York," responded the girl.

"I hope he isn't running a caddy," worried Beulah Fletcher, rising indignantly and picking up her bundles. "I believe I'll stop in Mrs. Dalton's and find out for sure—Joe used to be in my Sunday school class and I feel responsible for his morals. In a way, he has been wild—you know how he suddenly left town three years ago and hasn't been home since, but he and she, not hearing it, has banked every penny in his name—but for Sarah Maud, they say he went away, because some girl threw him over, and I'm just wondering what girl it could be—he never showed any liking for anyone—"

"What do you say, Sarah Maud?" The girl lifted a proud head and her own soft eyes met the hard, curious gaze of the older woman. "Three years is a long time, Mrs. Fletcher, and I have been away so much that I have forgotten a great many things, but I do remember," she managed to smile, and Beulah plodded down the bricked path to the gate with a repressed smile curving her lips.

"You may have forgotten a good many interesting things, my lady," she muttered to herself, "but I'll warrant you've never forgotten Joe Dalton. You haven't looked at another man since Joe went off." She hurried down the winding village street to the brown house where the Daltons lived.

Sarah Maud Leeds did not fly up stairs to her bedroom as she wanted to do, because her Aunt Dorothea was talking her afternoon nap and she did not want to awaken that easily aroused lady. But she walked sedately out through the kitchen door, where Amanda was peeling apples up the path to the vegetable garden, hastening through the rows of cabbage to a little footpath across the lawn. "She's going to Beesie Blake's," surmised Amanda.

Amanda was wrong. Sarah Maud was on her way to the one spot where she felt that she could be alone—where she could cry out her old sorrow and rid her heart of the pain. There was a steep hillside clothed in land pasture, gay with goldenrod and asters, and flaming with scarlet leaves touched by a sharp frost. There was a steep hillside clothed in pines, and at the very summit of this was a heap of gray bowlders. Sarah Maud sank breathlessly down, and, snuggling her chin in her hand, stared off at the glory of the sunset sky. On such a day, at such an hour, she had said good-bye to Joe—and he had gone away to make his fortune, and he had never written to her since. Tears filled her lovely eyes and her lips quivered. She had tried hard to forget. She must not betray herself again—she must not betray herself.

How quiet it was up here. One could think things through—the peaceful village was nestled in the valley below, the wind hushed through the pines. There was a groaning sound nearby that brought her to her feet with sudden fear. Softly she climbed the rock and looked and there on the other side face down in the grass, was a youthful form clad in gray clothes. Sarah Maud heard her name whispered wildly.

She knelt beside him, touching his arm with shaking fingers. "I am here, Joe," she said, softly. He jumped up, disclosing a tortured face, out of which shone incredulous blue eyes. "Not you?" he whispered hoarsely as he lifted her to her feet. He forgot to release her hands. "What are you doing here?" he wanted to know.

"I come here often—to see the sunset." "Because we used to come?" he demanded. She could see that he hung upon her reply—there must be no playing with words now. "Yes," she replied, "because we used to come together."

"Then you do love me—after all my failures?" "I did not know you had failed in anything—only you did not write to me." He told her of the bitter disillusionment that he had suffered—of his pride—his refusal to acknowledge failure—how he had "gone from one job to another, and now I am peddling sandwiches in an office building—working for a restaurant."

"Are they good sandwiches?" asked Sarah Maud unseeingly. "Horrible!" he said wryly. "People buy and buy—all the time."

"Why don't you go into the business yourself—make the best sandwiches in the world out of home-made bread?" demanded practical Sarah Maud, who found it easy with Joe's arms about her, and his lips on her hair.

"I couldn't make bread," objected Joe. "And I couldn't buy it. Not the home-made kind."

"You? Oh, darling!" Joe's words were muffled in the silken strands of her dark hair.

"I could make the most delicious sandwiches—and cookies and little cakes—after while we could have a business of our own. You could have the money your mother has saved for you to make a start and we—"

"What? Do you mean it, Sarah Maud? Just we two—in the big city?" "Aren't two enough for happiness?" she whispered against his shoulder. (Copyright, 1923, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

PLAN RESTRICTION ON IMMIGRATION OF THE CHINESE

Hon. Charles Stewart To Bring Down Bill in House Next Week.

URGES REGISTRATION

British Columbia Members Ask For Absolute Ban On Orientals.

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, Feb. 22.—Chinese immigrants to be registered and their fingerprints taken to secure identification—these, announced Hon. Charles Stewart...

Mr. Neill said his bill provided that no immigrants should enter Canada without the permission of the minister of immigration first being obtained.

The bill made ample provision to admit those who wished to visit Canada for short periods on business or pleasure; provision was also made for the exemption from the operation of the bill of all white British subjects.

Mr. Neill outlines plan. Similar legislation, Mr. Neill said, had been adopted in New Zealand, and it had been found that this did not conflict with the rights of other sections of the empire.

Mr. Neill said he was not wedded to the details of his bill. If any other method would secure the same result, he was willing to accept it.

Hon. Charles Stewart, minister of immigration, said he was not prepared to give an opinion on the details of the bill at the present time.

Such a feeling should not exist. The people whom we desire to come to Canada should be welcome in British Columbia.

W. G. McQuarrie, Conservative, New Westminster, declared that the public of British Columbia felt the exclusion of immigrants from British Columbia continued unabated.

Agreed on Damage. This was not a political question in British Columbia, Mr. McQuarrie stated.

L. J. Laidner, Conservative, Vancouver South, stated that Mr. McQuarrie that the people of British Columbia wanted total exclusion.

Hon. J. A. Robb, minister of trade and commerce, said that while not advocating unrestricted immigration of orientals to Canada, he wished to call attention to the rapidly growing value of the oriental markets.

He had learned recently that the government of India was considering revision of the trade policy of the country, particularly with a view to preferential trade within the empire.

Absolute Ban. J. A. McKelvie, Conservative, Yale, said he would support the resolution, if there were any treaties standing in the way he would denounce them.

Hon. H. H. Stevens declared that British Columbia had on the subject of oriental immigration, asked for bread and had been given a stone.

The time had come for the government to declare to the world that Canada was going to exclude oriental immigrants. In British Columbia the only safeguard was to deny the orientals the franchise.

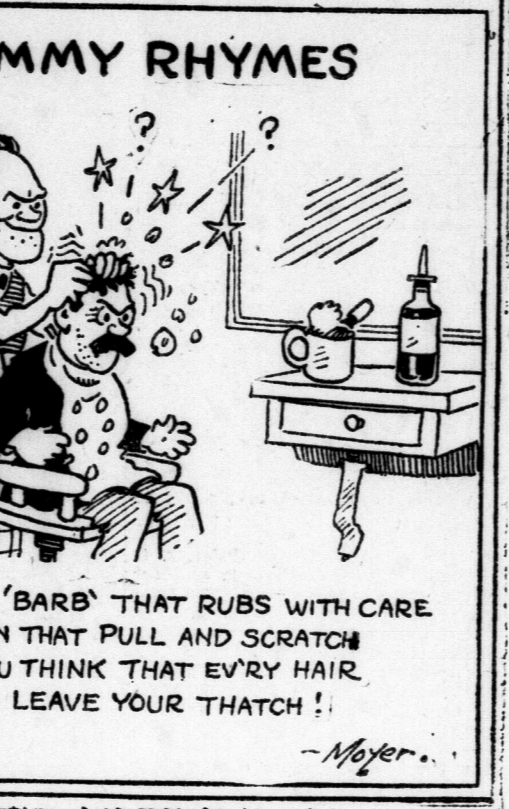

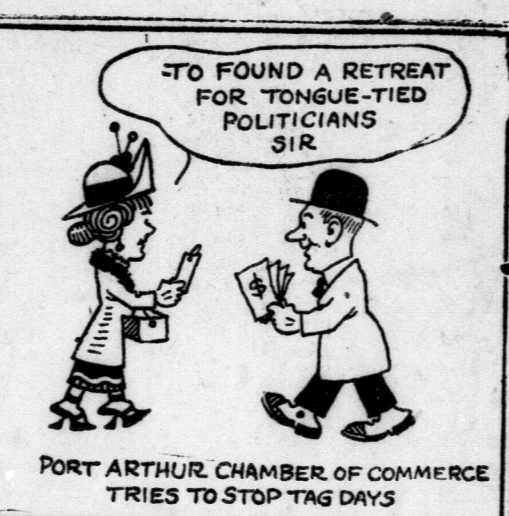

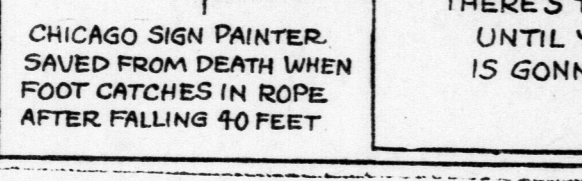

Mr. Stevens was still speaking when the house rose at six o'clock.

INDIAN ASSEMBLY PASSES MEASURE ON CRIMINAL LAW

Removes the Discrimination Against Indians in Present Legislation.

BODIES GOOD WILL

Sir Malcolm Hailey Emphasizes Necessity of Co-operation Between Races.

Canadian Press Despatch. Delhi, Feb. 22.—After two days animated discussion, the legislative assembly of India unanimously passed the bill embodying an agreement between the representatives of European and Indian communities for the removal of the major distinctions between the two communities regarding the criminal law, which resulted in discrimination against the Indians.

Sir Malcolm Hailey, member of the governor-general's executive council, and government leader in the legislative assembly, paid a high tribute to the assembly's handling of the bill. He said the measure represented true statesmanship embodying good will between the Europeans and Indians, and showing that they were willing to join in the task of developing India's political future.

Emphasizing the necessity for good will between the races, Sir Malcolm Hailey, in his speech, presented the strongest arguments India could advance before parliament for progress would be that Europeans, as well as the Indians, wanted to see the country working for it. This statement was greeted with applause.

Sir Malcolm, continuing, said the co-operation of the Indians with the Europeans would afford a guarantee to the component parts of the empire that whatever their future form of government might be, they would not do anything inconsistent with British ideals. Above all, with this bill they could go triumphantly before the world and say that they represented the better mind of India, and India would not let racial animosities impair her political future.

Several speakers who do not occupy any office in the government, led by Seshag Sanyal, leader of the democrats, endorsed Sir Malcolm's sentiments, and expressed the hope that as a result of the special treatment accorded colonial in the bill, the dominions and colonies would reciprocate and assist in the solution of the Indian problems overseas.

The news of the passage of the bill by the legislative assembly was a determination to the nation, she was closing the chapter of bitter controversies of past years.

WILL ASK GOVERNMENT FINISH NORTH RAILWAY

Resolution Introduced by Premier Bracken Unanimously Passed in Manitoba House.

Canadian Press Despatch. Winnipeg, Feb. 22.—Introduced by Premier Bracken, a resolution calling on the federal government to complete the Hudson Bay Railway was unanimously passed by the legislature yesterday. In speaking of the resolution, Premier Bracken outlined the advantages to be gained by the farm-ers if the work were carried through to a finish.

W. C. McKinnell (Rockwood) proposed that the legislatures of the three prairie provinces complete the road if the federal government failed to take action. If the Hudson Bay terminus was made a free port for five years, he prophesied it would become the greatest port on the North American continent.

'Tis rumored there will be a school for teaching etiquette in offices on Dundas street that are just now for let. They teach you how, when courting a young girl, to make a hit; how often you should clean your nails, and other things to wit.

Should you cut lettuce with a knife? Ah, never! You will see a pair of scissors does the work five times more cleverly.

And should you eat asparagus with fingers? I suppose it would be much more versatile to do it with the toes, if you should one eat corn on the cob? Now that is simple, quite. One eats it in the bath tub if one wants to do it right.

When eating beans, if one of them on your table makes a spot, avoid comment. If you should see a new tie-pin bought. How do you like it? Don't you think it sparkles very nice?

Such quick remarks are almost sure to offend. It is a new tie-pin. This school of manners has arranged within the reach of all a brand new book on etiquette that tells you at a glance, at dinner, business, or even at a church, how to comport yourself with ease, so never more to smirch your "savoir faire" and "savoir vivre" among the gay "beau monde". They show you how to small talk you may wittily respond. How to outshine Lord and Lady Vere do Vere, and be all etiquette up until you have no peer.

"Book of Good Manners" is the name of one of these tomes rare, and when you've read it all right through, I really do declare, a social error you can tell at just the merest glance and know with just what divine tools you ought to take a chance.

"How many social blunders can you in this picture find? 'Is now the wrighte inferior sport of every master mind. Prohibition agents at your table, e'er they pass, politely wipe their lips before they taste what's in your glass, in every birthday wrapper in our dry and arid land, I've seen a book of "manners," bound in half Morocco grand.

They say this school of etiquette is just a little win of the world. Mayor Wenige. It is sure to confound him, for when great dukes and lorded earls and lords and ladies have come to the town to be received, he'll know how to behave. And every day, in every way, throughout our happy land, we're getting etiquette "etiqueter."

Aln't it grand?

FREE STATE TROOPS CAPTURE 61 REBELS

Daring Attempt of De Valera in Dublin Yesterday, Failed.

Special Cable to The Advertiser. Dublin, Feb. 22.—Sixty-one rebel soldiers, fully equipped, were captured by Free State troops in North Galway. It is said they are responsible for many of the recent burnings perpetrated by the insurgents. The daring attempt of De Valera to effect a coup in Dublin yesterday, at the city's busiest hour, and in the heart of the business district, failed.

Bullets flew, traffic halted, pedestrians scattered for safety, as rebel soldiers on housetops opened fire upon Free Staters, and others raided the income tax offices and set fire to the building.

Many were wounded and seven arrests were effected, the rest of the rebels escaping.

HOLY SEE APPROVES REGIME OF FASCISTI

Venutelli's Eulogy of Premier Mussolini So Construed in Italy.

Associated Press Despatch. London, Feb. 22.—Special despatches from Rome say that Cardinal Venutelli's remarks to Premier Mussolini at the marriage of the cardinal's niece to Deputy Fiani, under secretary of the interior, created a great impression and were generally commented upon by yesterday afternoon's newspapers as having an important significance.

The cardinal, who is dean of the sacred college, told Premier Mussolini that the latter "for his energy and devotion to the country" had been chosen to "save the nation and restore her fortune."

These remarks, the despatches say, are not only a further indication of increased cordial relations between the Vatican and the state, but also suggest that the Holy See approved the Fascist regime.

Miss Marion Beck and Miss Helen Little Receive a Warm Reception at Jenkins Art Gallery Last Night.

By AUGUSTUS BRIDLE. Special to The Advertiser. Toronto, Feb. 22.—The duo-recital by Miss Marion Beck and Miss Helen Little last evening at Jenkins Art Gallery was an almost unanticipated success. The place was packed, even to the rear stage and the foyer, and the audience almost tumultuously appreciated the program.

A fashionable audience is usually pertuofactory. This one was enthusiastic. The program fitted the occasion. Both artists were very much at ease. The music began late, as usual in the Jenkins galleries; but it was done early. The one object was to weary nobody. Good taste characterized everything. A quiet elegance pervaded the evening; art and fashion are rarely so fortunately expressed. The audience did not overwhelm the artists, and the musicians made no attempt to dazzle the audience.

Le Papillon, with its refined abandon, suited her better. In L'Heure d'Exiluse, which has been notably popular in the hands of eminent artists, she developed in a real atmosphere of preciosity, and achieved a striking contrast, Les

The majority of her songs were Italian and French. This often makes a convenient mask for imperfect vocalism and sometimes causes an artist who would be bewildered by the plain use of her own language.

They were all expressively sung. Best of the eight Latin songs were Les Pecheurs De Perles (by Bizet) and the four in the second group.

These four by Hue, Foudrain, Hain and Delibes, were beautifully done. The "Au Pleurs Es Revo" tempted the singer to rather more emotional tone color than was judicious, because her voice is natively optimistic and buoyant.

Le Papillon, with its refined abandon, suited her better. In L'Heure d'Exiluse, which has been notably popular in the hands of eminent artists, she developed in a real atmosphere of preciosity, and achieved a striking contrast, Les

ALD. DRAKE OBJECTS TO SECRECY POLICY

Says Council Might as Well Be Reduced to Two or Three Members.

Ald. Gordon Drake favors a reduction of the council from twelve to two, or possibly three members. "We won't need a council at all after a while," he stated today, referring particularly to yesterday's conference with the school trustees, at which Mayor Wenige and Ald. Judd attended.

"Two or three of the council can do all the business," he continued. "I asked the mayor yesterday morning if there was to be a conference with the trustees and he said he hadn't heard anything about it."

"What's the matter with these fellows? Funny why they have of doing business, I think. I don't see why they couldn't have told me about the meeting when I inquired."

PLAN EMIGRATION AS A SOLUTION OF PROBLEM OF IDLE

Hold London Meeting To Take Immediate Action For Empire Development.

NOT DUMPING SCHEME

Lord Amphill Would Restore Pre-War Movement to Colonies.

London, Feb. 22.—A meeting organized by the National Constitutional Association and presided over by Lord Amphill was held in London last night to urge the government to take immediate action towards a solution of the unemployment problems by means of empire development and settlement.

Lord Amphill said there was no question at all of dumping shiploads of British unemployed into the colonies, where they were not wanted. It was a question of those behind the proposal to restore emigration, under the empire settlement act to its pre-war dimensions and thus eliminate unemployment.

T. J. MacNamara, M. P., said the unemployment problem had improved and that the worst was over. As regards the various methods of dealing with the question, the method proposed by labor would leave the country in a worse condition than before. Emigration would make a big contribution to a solution of the problem. He admitted that the prejudice of the workers against emigration was the result of poor organization. It was proposed now, however, to put emigration on a new, practicable and more feasible basis.

Sir Joseph Cook, high commissioner for Australia, was continually interrupted, as were the previous speakers to a lesser degree. He said no emigrants would be taken to the dominions in every state and province. Wages were awaiting them. The question of emigration was one of organization and capital.

Lieut.-Col. Page Croft, M. P., moved a resolution expressing the hope that the empire settlement act would be widened so as to include organized schemes in the empire and declaring that organized emigration would prove the greatest relief to their taxpayers and contributors to unemployment insurance. Moreover, in view of the chaotic condition of the European markets, the speediest way of increasing financial and commercial activity in developing the waste places of the British empire and thus stimulating the British imperial trade.

Col. Page-Croft recommended the raising of groups of "pals" on the lines of the Pals' Battalion in the war. There would be preserved in the country the spirit of home and kinship.

Mr. H. Roberts, M. P., seconded the resolution, which was carried by a large majority.

Taylor, who was paid $50 a week as president of the institution, was a tool of Marcino and others, who left a trail of bank wrecking, robbery, and safety deposit vaults and wild chisels. Burns detectives charged, has fled to South America, department of justice agents declared.

SUGGESTS SEGREGATION OF THE MENTALLY UNFIT

Canadian Press Despatch. London, Feb. 22.—Suggesting that it might be an economical and merciful step if the mentally unfit were segregated, Justice Roche, at the opening of the assizes in Durham today, stated that a large number of the cases of crime in this country could be traced to unbalanced minds. Sterilization of the unfit, he added, had nothing to do with birth control. He intimated that he favored the former, but the latter might be very disadvantageous to the state.

Similar sentiments concerning the segregation of the mentally unfit have recently been expressed by Justice at other assizes, and these have been received with favor by eugenicists.

PRICES OF PIG IRON TAKE SHARP UPTURN

Heavy Buying of Basic Grades Has Brought Many Advances.

Special to The Advertiser.
New York, Feb. 21.—Pig iron has definitely taken the strong turn. Heavy buying of basic malleable and foundry grades has brought a number of advances in the East. Sales of basic making irons have included 45,000 tons of basic and 5,000 tons of low phosphorus. The latter to be shipped from England by a steel corporation subsidiary. There has also been heavy buying of foundry iron in the East and in Chicago, and of basic iron in Cleveland. Charcoal iron has been advanced $1.50, basic has been marked up 60c to $1 in the Central West, and foundry and malleable have advanced 40c to $1. At Pittsburgh steel operations have been well maintained, but scheduling of mill orders continues to exceed shipments, admitting the effect of car shortages and embargoes. The buying volume in large mills is taking note of what is regarded as expedient, kind and quantity considered. The market in bars, plates and shapes is generally a minimum at 2.25c, Pittsburgh.

It is largely nominal, indicating that the larger companies are well booked to July 1, and that the smaller companies for urgent needs readily get higher prices. The advance from 2c to 2.25c has come from a continued buying demand after large commitments at the former prices, and thus does not affect much of the orders on the books. Today in Chicago the Inland Steel Company's response to the advance was the naming of 2,300, 2,400 and 2,500, Chicago, for bars, shapes and plates respectively. For the second quarter and in the few days elapsing they found its capacity for the period overbid. The Iron Age composite price for finished steel now stands at 2.50c, 2.56c last week, and one year ago 2.00c. The selling of plates by eastern mills for shipment west has been at 2.50c, mill, often equivalent to 2.65c and 2.75c, Pittsburgh.

High prices are offered as the reason for the abandonment of some lake ship-building prospects. Especially noteworthy is the railroad equipment buying, swelled by 27c for the Pennsylvania. Three hundred and three locomotives were bought and inquiries appeared for 277, including 66 for the Southern, 88 for the Louisville and Nashville, and 30 for the Seaboard. Orders accepted 8,250, with over 14,000 added to the pending list.

| Annual Interest on Mortgage Debt (including this issue) | 643,928 | |

Net earnings from the electric light and power and gas utilities alone amount to $813,908 and are equivalent to ONE AND ONE-QUARTER TIMES total interest charges, which ratio will materially increase in the future due to the large amount of electric power available from the new Hydro Electric Power Plant of its subsidiary, the Manitoba Power Co. Limited.
FRANCHISES: In the opinion of Company's counsel the street railway, electric and gas utilities are operated in the City of Winnipeg under perpetual franchises, the City having the right in 1927 and at the expiration of each five years thereafter to purchase the railway and all the real and personal property in connection with the working thereof upon payment of the full value of same, to be determined by arbitration.

The new tariff went into effect September 1, 1922. Canadian imports in that period were $46,809,128 compared with $24,418,212 in October, 1921. TRADING WAS REPORTED IN ST. MAURICE SHARES

Montreal, Feb. 21.—Trading was reported today for the first time in the St. Maurice Power bonus shares, which were distributed to Shawingian holders. Only a few small lots came out at 40c. It is understood that there is a demand at that price for further offerings. The advance in Montreal Power shares to 110 levels has caused a new high in the street, with the view of the suspicious start of the company's earnings in the new year in the matter of earnings, whether it is not likely to work up to a 5 per cent yield basis.

CANADA'S COAL IMPORTS REACH LARGE FIGURES

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Feb. 21.—Canada imported 2,676,036 tons of anthracite coal from the United States during the twelve months ending Jan. 31, 1923. This was valued at $22,864,588, and came in duty free. This information was given in the House of Commons this afternoon by Hon. A. B. Copp, secretary of state. In the same period Canada imported 10,327,460 tons of American bituminous coal, valued at $37,675,381, on which duty was paid to $1,650,215 was paid. Coal mined in Canada during the same twelve months totaled 42,000 tons of anthracite, 3,841,465 tons of bituminous and 3,524,000 tons of lignite. During the year 1,526,105 tons of Canadian coal were exported to the United States.

SUGAR

New York, Feb. 21.—The raw sugar market was firm and unchanged, at 5 1/2c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 7.00c for centrifugal. There was a sale of 24,000 bags of Cubas, March shipment, at 5 1/2c, cost and freight, equal to 7.00c.

Raw sugar futures were firmer, with prices at midday 6 to 12 points net higher on buying by trade interests and good inquiry for refined sugar, and the fact that there was renewed interest in raws at quoted prices, seemed responsible for the early buying. Refinements were reported in refined sugar, with one granulated 2500 at $8.25 to $8.29, but there was a good inquiry, with some refineries unable to accept all the orders offered them. Refined futures nominal.

LABOR TAKES PART OF CHIROPRACTORS

Trades and Labor Council Decides To Help Fight Proposed Medical Legislation.

SEEK MEMBER'S AID
Druggists Physicians Ask Support in Fight Against Medical Men.

A decision to assist the chiropractors of the province in their fight against the amendment to the medical act, which would give medicine men the right to practice in the Ontario Legislature in an endeavor to regulate the practice of druggists and other professions, was passed at the business meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night. The members of the council, who are druggists, practitioners sought the aid of the labor men to "crush any attempt to give the right of the doctors of medicine to quash the practice of chiropractic."

One delegate suggested that if the proposed amendment to the medical act, which would give medicine men the right of first aid work, pointing out that many injured workmen are thus treated by their fellow workmen, who are not in any sense of the word medical men.

Another member advocated supporting the chiropractors and osteopaths, and that his brother had been in the hospital for over two years without being cured by medical men. He further stated that, on being removed from the hospital and placed in the hands of an osteopath, he had totally recovered in three months.

Has Seen Benefit.
A returned man present declared that while in France, he had seen M.D.'s frequently come to the aid of a practitioner in his regiment for advice in certain cases, and that he himself had been beneficially treated by this druggist practitioner.

If the proposed bill becomes law anyone not having a degree of Doctor of Medicine will be forbidden to practice the healing art in the Province of Ontario, it was stated.
Mr. A. W. MacFie explained to the members of the council that all persons entering the study of chiropractic in Ontario must have matriculation standing, and must spend at least three years in the study of this branch of druggist treatment.

"Premier Drury told the medical men some time ago that their profession, if not the medical act, would not be considered, and that if an invalid wanted a chiropractor or an osteopath, he should be at liberty to call upon one," he stated.

Two Members Oppose.
With two exceptions every member of the Trades and Labor Council was in favor of supporting the druggist and osteopaths, and their prohibition in Ontario. One of the opponents to the motion pointed out that the druggist practitioners should affiliate with the labor movement before they seek help from the latter.

At last night's meeting the council affirmed their decision of last week to oppose any repeal of the adolescent school act.
The next regular organization meeting of the council will be held next Thursday in the Labor Temple.

QUESTIONS RIGHT TO SPEND HYDRO FUNDS ON EDUCATION

Auditor of Commission Reveals That Much Money Was Devoted To Promoting Public Sentiment in Favor of Electrical Enterprises.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Feb. 22.—The right of the Provincial Hydro Commission to spend money to educate public sentiment in favor of hydro enterprises was questioned when radial matters came under review yesterday before the Gregory Commission, which is investigating hydro costs.
G. T. Clarkson, auditor to the Hydro Commission, stated that for the year ending October 31, 1919, the expenditure on the Toronto and Port Credit lines was $18,584, of which $14,811 was for purchase of right of way, and $40,773 was disbursed for preliminary surveys, engineering investigations and other purposes.
Questioned by Chairman Gregory, he said the "other purposes" were expenditures made by the Hydro Commission in connection with the holding of public meetings, interviewing councils and promoting or educating public sentiment in favor of the undertaking.
Mr. Clarkson said that "in regard to the $54,000 there was no statutory authority for the commission to make such expenditure for that right of way. The Hydro," he said, "had claimed to have received a letter from Mr. William Hearst, premier, at that time, authorizing the expenditure and giving assurance that the government would support enabling legislation."
"In regard to the $40,000, the right of the commission to make such expenditure is questionable," Mr. Clarkson stated, "and even if the government had no right to take funds from the Hydro, it is not the duty of the Hydro to spend them to that extent."
Asked by Chairman Gregory where the money was to be obtained to repay that taken out, Mr. Clarkson said he supposed if the Toronto and St. Catharines lines were not proceeded with the amount realized by the sale of the right-of-way would reduce the total.
Answering the chairman, Mr. Clarkson said he thought the commission would have power to recover the money from municipalities, graduates and under-graduates, and the university and the official head of each county and city in the western Ontario.
Mr. Adam Beck, questioned by the chairman, said the money was per-municipalities secured by the bonds of the municipalities, and even if the bonds were not deposited, the municipalities would be liable.
The chairman sought information as to the amount of interest still remaining unpaid on the Nipigon System, and Mr. Clarkson gave a total of $221,000.

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, Feb. 22.—Strongly advocating the securing, training and qualifying for effective maternity service the class of home helper now known as the midwife, the executive of the National Council of Women in session here yesterday passed a strong resolution, asking that training for these women be secured through the provincial legislatures and boards of health. MRS. S. GREATREX GAINS 25 POUNDS

Declares Tanlac Completely Overcame Nervous Break-down, Extreme Weakness and Insomnia.

"I believe in giving everything its due, and must say that it is just wonderful the way in which Tanlac helped me," is the statement made recently by Mrs. Sophie Greatrex, 318 Hamilton St., Vancouver, B. C.

"About four years ago I suffered a nervous breakdown and I don't believe anyone could feel more miserable than I did. I could not even stand the children playing around the house and could never get a good night's sleep. I had to force down every bite of my food, and became so weak I could hardly stand on my feet. Why, I fell off to only one hundred and ten pounds in weight, and was getting worse all the time.

"I sent one day for a bottle of Tanlac, and it helped me so much that I sent back for more. Well, a few bottles have put me in perfect health, and I have been feeling fine ever since. I now weigh one hundred and thirty-five pounds. I will praise Tanlac as long as I live.

"Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35-million bottles sold—Advt.

WHOLE COUNTRY FIELD FOR JUVENILE COURT

Raney Acknowledges Nomination of A. E. Barbour by the City Council.

Attorney-General Raney acknowledges the nomination of A. E. Barbour by the city council as prospective juvenile court judge.

In a communication to City Clerk Baker today, he explains also that the new court, once in operation, will have jurisdiction throughout Middlesex as well.

This fact is already known to the county authorities, who have expressed willingness, in the past, to shoulder a fair share of costs incurred.

During the recent conference between the attorney-general and the local deputation, the advisability of a separate judge was broached, but Mr. Raney voiced disapproval. The present arrangement, he pointed out, is now in vogue in other sections of the province, and the result has evidently been satisfactory. No complaints have been since registered, at least.

It is also pointed out by Dr. Stevenson, M. L. A., that a juvenile court judge may be written consent to the bill, and the bill, in another, who may, if a suitable reason arises, journey to Strathroy, Glencoe, or other parts of the county to hold court.

SHIP BILL FILIBUSTER MUST BREAK FRIDAY

Serve Notice on Senator Jones, Threatening To Send Measure Back to Committee.

Associated Press Despatch. Washington, Feb. 22.—The line of defenders, holding out against the filibuster on the administration shipbuilding bill today began to crack and crumble, under the fear that the session might end without an opportunity being afforded to get through legislation which is considered more important to them than the subsidy bill is to the administration.

Notice was served on Senator Jones, threatening to send the bill back to the committee, thus removing it definitely from the legislative slate.

HAS SERVED CITY FOR FORTY YEARS

mass of crushed humanity. The scene was one of horror. For years it was customary to have a policeman in the city hall to keep order during the debates of aldermen. No rumpus taking place for the presence of an officer was superfluous and no one has stood guard for many years.

The Good Old Days. When Mrs. Macgregor came to London, the town boasted a population of about 2,000. It was a veritable wilderness, and the main street was a collection of ugly pine stumps. In those days you could carry a pall in any direction and procure enough whiskey to keep you in good spirits for a week for 25 cents.

Living costs were a fraction of what they are now," said Mr. Merritt. "Eggs were 8 cents a dozen, butter 10 cents a pound, and beefsteak 7 cents a pound."

Merritt received a raise in salary from $5 a week to $7, and flushed with wealth, made ready for marriage. His wife lived for years in comparative luxury of a dollar a day. Sewing girls were then paid the munificent salary of $2.50 a week, and domestic workers got $2 a month, or 8 cents a day in their terms.

In spite of the barren aspect of the country, young people of that day enjoyed themselves. Girls weren't so stylish, save for a Merritt, and young men would appear slovenly compared with the dapper youths of the town dance. The old fire hall was never did such an outrageous thing as a two-step or tango. Squares dancing was the vogue.

"In the Old Town Hall." The social events of the elite were held at the city hall, and curious onlookers would through the doors and windows to get a glance at society negotiating in the papers for Mr. Merritt to save a flock of ducks in the eastern part of the city. He saw a number of little ducks on the surface. Unfamiliar with the habits of the peculiar variety of fowl, he heroically dived in after them, and was rewarded by a severe peck on the ear from the mother of the brood of young. When he came up he heard, he and his comrades slid down the brass pole, seized the engines and pulled them without assistance to the scene of the blaze. Horses were not used to draw the brigades until years later. Merritt remembers King Edward, Sir John A. Macdonald, and many others. He thinks Sir John A. Macdonald the greatest man that ever lived, and next to him Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The greatest scandal of his time was when Phoebe Campbell murdered her husband to run away with a young man of 19 years. She was the only woman ever hanged in the local courtyard.

When Lord Byng was in London, he asked Mr. Merritt the history of his adventures during the Fenian raid, for services in which he was presented with a medal. Merritt replied not any further than Sarnia, but he recalls the incidents of the uprising with singular accuracy.

Merritt is an Irishman, and thinks the establishment of the Irish Free State the logical method of settling the traditional differences in Ireland. He believes prohibition is for the good, but deprecates the provisions that make it almost impossible to obtain a bracing drink of old Mull.

He thinks the days when everybody had a cow and ladies lined up in front of Carling's brewery for their daily toddy were more enjoyable than the present time. Since coming to London 30 years ago, the only landmark that still remains are the Grand Truck station and the Tecumseh House.

BYRON PATIENTS ANSWER GOVERNMENT'S QUESTIONS

Veterans Urge Improvements Concerning Pension and Medical Treatment—Ask Men Afflicted With Tuberculosis Have Assistance Extended for Period of Five Years.

A copy of the first questionnaire to be sent in to the royal commission on pensions and re-establishment of returned men is on hand from the veterans at Byron Sanatorium.

In reply to the question, "What suggestions have you to improve the method of applying for pensions or medical treatment?" the men at Byron say, "We, as members of the Tuberculosis Veterans' Association of Canada are naturally concerned with that most insidious disease, tuberculosis, which may be classified as acute, sub-acute or chronic. To quote from Sir William Osler, in his work, 'The Principles and Practice of Medicine,' 'the disease is chronic, lasting from ten to twenty or more years, during which time the patient may have fair health.'"

"Quoting Francis M. Pottenger, in his book, 'Clinical Tuberculosis,' 'patients will go back, weeks, months, and sometimes even years, before the time when they really feel well.'"

"Further quoting Maurice Fishberg on his work on tuberculosis: 'The disease begins insidiously, runs a slow, sluggish course for many years, incapacitating the patient now and then a variable period, yet he lives indefinitely, perhaps his natural life, and may die from some intercurrent disease.'"

Recommend Procedure. "In view of the well-known facts, we strongly recommend that the following procedure be adopted when applications are made to the government for assistance: 'That all men having reasonable service in the C. E. F., who are unfortunately broken down within a period of at least five years from date of discharge, and who upon medical examination are found to be suffering from tuberculosis, be considered as having a disability due to the above-mentioned service, and furthermore that these men should be entitled to treatment with pay and allowances, and all existing provisions of the pension act, and in addition, to such other care as the government may provide.'"

In answer to the second question, reading "What suggestions have you to improve the method of applying for assistance?" the men at Byron reply: "We are unanimously of the opinion that a board should be established which applicants who had received unfavorable decisions could appeal, and appeal to with confidence, knowing that this board would not be influenced in any way by the findings and decisions of former boards and individuals."

Three Members. "We would recommend that this board consist of three members, one to represent the government and to be appointed by them, one to represent the soldiers and to be appointed by the Dominion Veterans' Alliance, and the third member to be neutral, but a person whom the other two members have agreed upon."

"Our final recommendation on this subject is that decisions arrived at by this board of appeal be considered irrevocable."

In reply to your third question which reads: "What provisions (continued on page 2)..."

ASK SCHOOL BUILDING BE FIXED AT $84,000

Mayor Wenige and Ald. Judd Favor London West School Site. REQUIRE $945,000

School Trustees Require This Amount For Year's Work.

Mayor Wenige and Ald. Albert Judd, chairman of the finance committee, favor a board of education building expenditure of approximately $84,000. This includes the purchase of a site for a new West London school.

Following a special conference yesterday afternoon with the mayor and the representative from the council, members of the board place their estimate for the year at $945,000, roughly.

The chamber of commerce was instrumental in bringing Mr. Adams to London to carry out this survey and is confident that it has secured for the city the best man available.

Proposed changes in the city's garbage collection are under consideration.

The suggested alterations were made; the work would be greatly simplified, it is promised, tending toward improved service, actually at a lowered cost.

As an instance it is pointed out that a larger type of garbage wagon could be introduced, drawn by two horses, in lieu of one, as at present. In this way the work could be accomplished with much better results, it is reasoned.

There is a suggestion today that this question receive the special consideration of a sub-committee of four, two from the finance committee and two from the board of works.

That right?" he questioned Mayor Wenige, loitering nearby. "Yes, yes, let this go," concurred his worship.

"Then you want this to be a secret session," questioned The Advertiser, prepared to abide by the ruling from the city's chief magistrate.

"Oh, no, not a secret session," replied his worship, but we won't have anything for publication."

"Well, if the public and The Advertiser is barred it must be a secret session," pursued The Advertiser, but his comment passed unnoticed as the elected representatives of the taxpayers passed into their committee room.

The following civic administrators attended: Mayor Wenige, Ald. Albert Judd, chairman of the finance committee, Trustee A. N. Ulfy, chairman of the board of education; Trustee Bryden Campbell, Trustee Silverwood, School Inspector V. K. Greer, W. H. T. Mooney, principal of the Central Collegiate Institute; E. A. Miller, principal of the London South High School, and H. B. Beal, principal of the London Technical and Art School.

Shaking hands hither and yon he welcomed the ancient foe from the municipal chambers, Trustee Silverwood, advised that according good humor until he encountered The Advertiser. His entire manner underwent an immediate change. He was no longer the object of reverence but he was the object of scorn.

"What are you doing here?" he inquired aggressively. "We understood that a meeting was to be held when the city council and board of education would discuss the spending of the people's money," replied The Advertiser, determined to engage in no useless controversy.

"Forget it," suggested Trustee Silverwood, brushing past on his way to the "inner shrine," the trustees' committee room. Fully appreciating the fact that this could not be considered as an official order, The Advertiser representative advanced limply, trusting blindly that Mr. Silverwood was in more or less of a jocular mood. He was soon disillusioned.

Invited to Depart. "Forget it. Run away," urged Trustee Silverwood decisively. "I'm not"

HEARD JOY BELLS RING FOR SON OF PRINCESS

Mrs. E. B. Smith Staying Opposite Buckingham Palace On Happy Occasion.

Mrs. E. B. Smith, president of the London Local Council of Women, regent of the London Municipal Chapter, L. O. D. E., and Ontario provincial commissioner of the Girl Guides, had the interesting experience of being in Old London when the rejoicings were in progress a few days ago for the birth of a little grandson for the king and queen.

In a letter received yesterday from Mrs. Smith by Mrs. John A. Rose, secretary of the Local Council of Women, Mrs. Smith says: "The joy bells are ringing in London today for Princess Mary's little son. This hotel (Ruhens) is just opposite Buckingham Palace. The king and queen are there tonight."

Continuing the charming and well-known London woman refers to the contrast between old England in February and zero weather back home. "This dear, wonderful old city," she says, "how it brings back my girlhood days, several years spent in boarding school."

"The grass is green in these glorious parks, the crocuses are all in flower. The young, tender buds on all the shrubs are bursting."

A letter from the boat some days earlier, the Mont Clare, which also only reached the city yesterday, told of a most stormy crossing. Thanks was expressed to the Local Council of Women for thoughtfulness in sending a "bon voyage" telegram to St. John, New Brunswick. This reached Mrs. Smith just as she was about to sail. Mrs. Smith was accompanied to England by Mr. Smith and Mrs. H. W. Auden.

IS UNANIMOUS CHOICE FOR PRESIDENT OF "W"

Mrs. Donald McLean Succeeds Mrs. King—Attending Dominion Council Meeting.

The necessity for electing a new president to succeed Mrs. C. B. King, who has resigned the office, created very special interest in the February meeting yesterday afternoon of the Y. W. C. A. board. Miss Donald McLean, who has given valuable service as first vice-president in the past year, was the unanimous choice of her associates, who thus showed their sincere appreciation of her work.

Mrs. Frank White, who is at present in Ottawa for consultation with her husband, Frank White, M.P., was made first vice-president; Mrs. Gordon Philip, convener of the physical education committee, second vice-president; Mrs. J. K. McDermid, vice-president; Mrs. J. H. Cameron, recording secretary; Mrs. (Dr.) Angus Graham, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. M. W. Bruce, treasurer.

The newly-elected president, Mrs. McLean, begins her duties at once by representing the local association at the annual meeting of the Dominion Council, which is being held in Toronto today and tomorrow.

A very warm vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. C. B. King for the ability and faithfulness with which she carried on the duties of chief executive for three years.

Fashions by Wire

Special Cable to The Advertiser. Copyright. Paris, Feb. 21.—A separate coatee, useful for wear with semi-dress skirts, shows in the window of a Paris store. It is made of dark blue wool, and has an uneven edge. It fastens on one hip with a big catch. One such coat was used with a suit of dark blue wool. The coat has revers of brocade in dark blue, and is fastened with a huge orange button.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE! Paris, Feb. 21.—First the very large hats, then the very small, and now comes the very big. One of the large hats now making its appearance is of black satin, with a moderately high crown, balanced by big satin quills that stand out on one side beneath the brim.

THE SWANKY BANDANA. London, Feb. 21.—The bandana handkerchief which is today such an important feature of many blouses, no longer lies in the centre of the front. The swanky bandana just now ties in a little knot, with saucy ends, on one shoulder.

SURPRISE TO FORE. London, Feb. 20.—The cross-over, or surprise, line is something to be reckoned with at the moment. It is on street costumes today as well as on house and evening frocks. The cross-over bodice is especially good on women inclined to stout figures.

FLANNEL MAKES NEGLECTEE. London, Feb. 21.—One of the interesting negligees shown today in a smart shop is of the new flannel in a pale mauve. The new flannel is almost as soft as the finest silk. It is a neck and sleeves of this model is a fringe of tiny gilded ostrich tips.

STYLES GROW CHECKERED. New York, Feb. 21.—One thing which strikes the eye on Fifth avenue today is the prevalence of check in silk gowns, not only the silks designed for sporting wear, but also those intended for afternoon gowns, show checks ranging from bold over three inches square to others so tiny and shadowy as to be almost invisible.

SUCH A HANDY BAG! New York, Feb. 21.—A beautifully-gowned woman at the opera on Tuesday night carried a brocade vanity bag in palest green and silver. From the bag she took a powder box in brocade to match, and a pair of opera glasses, also in the green and silver fabric.

GOLF COATS DOMINATE. Palm Beach, Feb. 21.—A noticeable feature of the season today among the ponderance of golf coats. Once upon a time these would have been called sweaters, but they differ from the usual garment of that name by the plaidness of their sleeves and backs. The fronts are in checks or plaids or lozenges of contrasting colors.

MAYOR URGES AUDIENCE TO USE RIGHT TO VOTE. Addressing a largely-attended public meeting this week of Knollwood Park Mothers' Club on the subject of "Good Citizenship," Mayor G. A. Wenig impressed upon his audience the responsibility of making use of the privilege of the ballot. He paid tribute to the value of mothers' clubs and similar organizations in helping members of the same community to know and to understand one another better.

TRACKS IN THE SNOW. The Ontario Provincial Girl Guide Bulletin for February contains an interesting new feature, a nature study corner, conducted by Mr. W. H. Saunders. Mr. Saunders talks this month about "Tracks in the Snow," telling of the different kinds of animals that leave their footprints behind in the vicinity of Springbank.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN. Reference was made by the treasurer in her report to $5 for Northern Ontario fire relief, forwarded through The Advertiser.

Hawkins is the treasurer for 1923, Mrs. F. Marshall, secretary; Mrs. Le Touzel, phoning secretary; Miss Gertrude Morgan, press secretary, and Miss Margaret Coleman, flower convener.

Preventing Loss of Rubbers. My little girl was always losing rubbers and mittens. I gave her an "allowance" each week, a certain sum of money she could have to spend, under my guidance, for things she really wanted. However, rubbers and mittens were lost, her spending money had to go toward buying new ones. She soon developed the habit of looking after her belongings. (Copyright, 1922, Associated Editors.)

GIVE PATIENTS TREAT. Forty young people of Adelaide Street Baptist Church made happy the big family at Victoria Home by presenting an amusing program this week of choruses, comic songs and recitations. They went over loaded with fruit and candy, which they distributed to the patients. Mr. T. H. Yull acted as chairman.

KERWOOD W. M. S. ENTERTAINS. A most enjoyable time was spent at the public meeting of the W. M. S., held in the Sunday school rooms of the Kerwood Methodist Church, last week. Owing to the absence of the president, the meeting was in charge of Rev. C. J. Moorhouse, who gave a talk on the mission fields of the church, the successful work done, and also showed an advance in givings over past years. Mrs. E. Edgan gave a recitation, which was much enjoyed. This was followed by delightful solos from Miss Beatrice Foster, Miss Hazel Patterson and little Miss Isabel Chittick. A quartet by the young men was much appreciated. A playette, called "The Missionary WITNESSED LONDON'S REJOICINGS. Mrs. E. B. Smith, president of the Local Council of Women, regent of the Municipal Chapter, L. O. D. E., and Ontario provincial commissioner of Girl Guides, was staying at the Hotel Ruhens, directly across from Buckingham Palace, the day the news was announced of the birth of Princess Mary's son. A letter received yesterday by the secretary, Mrs. John A. Rose, expressed warm appreciation of a telegram of good wishes from the local council, which reached Mrs. Smith at St. John just before the sailing of the Montclare some weeks ago. She is enjoying a few months' rest abroad, the first holiday since before the war, accompanying Mr. Smith.

MRS. FRANK WHITE.

Elected first vice-president of the Young Women's Christian Association at the first meeting of the board after the annual, held yesterday at Lenmore, the King street residence. Mrs. White is the wife of the member for London in the House of Commons.

Dear Cynthia Grey and Boxites. Everybody shuffle over a little mite, and give me a seat about 6:30. I see by the Advertiser (of course, in Cynthia Grey's column), that Aunt Maria is offering a quilt top for anyone who will boost the Sick Children's Hospital Fund by $1. If I am the first, just let me know, and I will send the dollar along. I see where Calamity Ann's kuk kuk is coming along nicely. I will send some recipes later on. Well, I will slip out (easily done this weather), and leave a shimplaster behind for the S. C. H. Fund.

TIGER LILY. Thanks ever so much for the shimplaster, Tiger Lily, but am sorry that you are one of the late-comers for the quilt. Write again soon, and send your recipes.

Dear Miss Grey.—Since coming to London a few years ago, and reading The Advertiser occasionally, I have noted your department with interest, and now that the paper comes regularly, am going to add one more recipe to the Mail-Box. What is the recipe book idea in deep—and I add quicker than granulated, a pinch of salt, a little vanilla, and enough milk to stir into about the consistency of real ice cream, and even the grown-ups say it isn't bad.

JOAN W. You are very welcome amongst the Boxites, and I hope you will write frequently. The cook book idea is this: One of our number, Calamity Ann, has volunteered to collect all the Mail-Box recipes, and when a sufficient number are gathered, to have the Cynthia Grey Cook Book printed. Any recipes which are sent to me will be forwarded to Calamity Ann. Am sure you can let us have some delightful ones.

Penholder is the most recent arrival to the Mail-Box, and she is anxious to receive a letter from Dad's Brown-Eyed Housekeeper, since she keeps house for her father, as well. If you will send your letter to Lonely Country Girl to the Mail-Box, Penholder, it will be forwarded. Your address is in the Mail-Box also. If Dad's Brown-Eyed Housekeeper writes, your first attempt at writing to the Mail-Box was a success. I hope you will write again.

Dorothy. Thanks for the croquet patterns Dorothy, but I am sorry that your request for Eleanor came too late. Hope your luck will change with the spring.

Bomish. Thanks for the gingerbread recipe, Bomish. It will be forwarded.

THE ETERNAL QUESTION by Felice Davis. Irene—Where am I? What do you mean by bringing me here? You are at last! I mean that you are mine at last! I am yours—yours—yours! Louis—Great! Fine! Say, if we do this play as well for the Charity Bazaar as we've rehearsed it, we'll make a big hit!

Irene—You acted it very well that time—I almost thought you were a real brigand!

Louis—You're so beautiful you could make me a real brigand!

Irene—Wouldn't it be wonderful to have a real brigand make love to you?

Louis—Do you mean it? Irene! Irene—Just like the play—if it were only real!

Louis—It IS real! I'm a brigand from now on!

Irene—Then—why don't you begin? Louis—You she-devil! Now for a kiss! A kiss from the tigers!

Irene—Help! Help! Help! I'll scream from joy if you don't kiss me quickly! (Copyright, 1923, by Public Ledger Company.)

WEDDINGS

WHITE-PAGE. A pretty wedding took place at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday, Feb. 14, at the home of Mr. William Tye, Lambeth, when his adopted daughter, Pearl Page, became the bride of Harry O. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. George White of "Kenwood," Glasgow.

The strains of the Bridal Chorus, played by Miss Madeline Ray of Clinton, the bridal party took its place before a bank of ferns and spring flowers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. C. Tiffin of Blyth, an old friend of the bride, assisted by Rev. J. Jefferson of Lambeth. The bride's gown was of ivory crepe and chantilly lace, with pearl trimmings, and she wore a veil of embroidered net trimmed with pearls and orange blossoms. Her bridal bouquet was of Richmond roses. Miss Annie Glenn of Glanworth, a cousin of the groom, was bridesmaid, and wore a corn-cobbed tulle gown, and a cream satin hat, and carried a cluster of pink roses.

Mr. Glen Colledge of Byron acted as best man. Following the ceremony, a dainty supper was served, and the toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. J. Jefferson. Her going away the bride donned a gown of red velvet and a black mohair hat. Her coat was of northern muskrat, the gift of her father.

MY THIRTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By JOHN J. MCGRAW.

The Hall of Fame Pitchers — Devore's Experience With Walter Johnson's 'Smoke'—Rube Waddell's Hands.

(Released exclusively through the North American Newspaper Alliance.)
ARTICLE 42.
I have selected Christy Mathewson to top my staff of pitchers for the grand All-American team of all time. I am inclined to believe that ninety-nine baseball men out of every one hundred will agree with me.

There has never been a pitcher like Mathewson in the past and I do not expect to see another like him for the next quarter of a century. Men who combine all the co-ordinated qualities that he possessed are not born often. And there are few who have the trend of mind that will develop these unusual qualities that are given by birth.

It was my fortune to be Mathewson's manager during the years of his greatness, and I was in a better position to observe his development, perhaps, than any other man. To my mind, Mathewson's reputation will live as long as baseball lives.

In addition to physical ability, Mathewson had the perfect temperament for a great ball player. Always he sought to learn something new, and he never forgot what he had learned in the past. He had everything—strength, intelligence, courage and willingness.

Early in his career Matty saw the necessity of control and change of pace. Then he originated the feint-away curve and other deliveries that were equally puzzling and effective. To his ability I give a large share of the credit for my success with the Giants, especially in the earlier days. Mathewson's record is so well known that I need not go into details.

John McMahon, "Sadie" he was nicknamed, was with me on the old Baltimore Orioles. We had a great string of victories to our credit and to McMahon is due a large share of the credit. He was one of the greatest boxmen that I ever knew. He had practically everything that a good pitcher needs, but his one great quality was nerve. In the most critical moments he was as cool as a cucumber. The harder the fight the more effective he grew. I never knew him to weaken.

John Clarkson, the third pitcher of my All-American staff, was with the Chicago club for years under Cap Anson. Clarkson was easily the most brilliant pitcher of his day. There is no doubt in my mind about his right to a place on the list.

Amos Ruste, the Hoosier Cyclone, as he was called, was the best pitcher the Giants ever had up to the time of Mathewson. His tremendous speed accounts for the nickname of Hoosier Cyclone. He came from Indiana. While great speed is usually associated with a "fast ball" rather than with a curve, Ruste's particular greatness was the great force he could put behind the curve. Even with the count two and three Ruste would not hesitate to shoot a curve over the plate with the speed of a bullet. Later he developed a slow ball, and this proved a perfect foil for the "smoke" he could use if necessary. Owing to trouble that arose between the Hoosier Cyclone and Andrew Freedman, owner of the Giants at that time, this great speed artist's engagement with New York was curtailed. His one year's absence from baseball proved very injurious to Ruste's rare effectiveness and he soon retired from the game.

Amos is now employed at the Polo Grounds in New York. As I have mentioned before, it was the work of Ruste and Joutet Meekin that beat the Orioles in the first Temple Cup series. They pitched all the games. What's more, they pitched all the games the last month of the season.

Walter Johnson of the Washington club is a pitching star whose reputation for speed challenges that of Ruste. It is to be regretted that

Johnson never had the good fortune to be on a championship club. His fame would have been greatly enhanced. There have been few greater pitchers in all the history of baseball than Walter Johnson. I shall never forget when we went to Washington to play an exhibition game with the Senators and Josh Devore, for the first time, saw the great Johnson. There had been much talk among the players as to whether Walter really had so much smoke or if it was just fan talk.

Devore, a whimsical little fellow, walked up to the bat and set himself. Immediately Johnson whizzed one by him so fast that he didn't even see the ball. He looked around sort of dazed, and as he did so Johnson whipped over another. By this time Devore was staring in wonder. Then Johnson popped one into the catcher's hands so quickly that Devore didn't get a chance to draw back his bat.

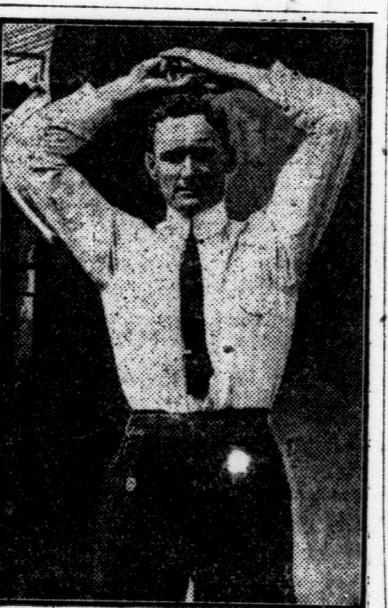

"Say," he said, coming back to the bench, shaking his head, "you know, that's so what them fellows 've been saying about that guy. He's got it."

In addition to his smoke ball Johnson had a wonderful curve. Also he knew how to pitch. He belongs on any All-American team.

Addie Joss was another of the star pitchers of the American League along with Johnson. He was what ball players knew as a thinking pitcher. Joss was very tall and had such an easy motion that he could keep the ball on top of the batter all the time without the latter realizing that he was being fooled. Against Joss the ordinary batter was always on the defensive instead of the offensive. He knew the weaknesses of his opponents and played them as a cat would a mouse. Addie Joss was indeed a great pitcher. He was one of the best loved men in the game. Sadly enough, he died while still quite young.

Rube Waddell was, perhaps, the most picturesque of all pitchers, as I have pointed out by incidents in previous chapters. He was nothing more nor less than a southpaw freak. No body ever knew exactly the mental process that enabled Waddell to think so clearly and quickly on the field and then do such nonsensical and freakish things off the field. There was never another like him. I am inclined to believe there never will be. The nearest to him in mental characteristics was Bugs Raymond, though they were in no way alike in pitching.

Waddell had such tremendous speed and such puzzling deliveries, coming always as a surprise, that he was practically unbeatable. When in good physical condition Waddell always had the game in the palm of his hand. Incidentally that was a most remarkable hand. Rube's left hand was so large that he could completely hide a baseball in it. He was one of the few men who could make their fingers meet around a baseball. That gave him his tremendous speed. A baseball to him was like a billiard or pool ball to the average pitcher. By being able to completely encircle the ball with his fingers Waddell could put any kind of a twist on it that he desired.

In a previous chapter I have mentioned Waddell's eccentricities. One that will always live in the memories of fans was his trick of calling in from the outfield and infield, with the exception of the first baseman. Then he would wind up the side by striking out the batters or making them bounce the ball to him. He did that in several exhibition games, very much to the delight of the fans and to the satisfaction of his own sense of humor.

While Waddell was eccentric—did many crazy things—don't get the impression that he didn't know what he was doing when in the pitcher's box. No All-American team would be complete without Rube. This completes my selections for the one great team of all time. In the succeeding chapters I will present my selections of the All-American League and All-National League teams.

Churchill Defends Action in Remaining At Belgian Port Several Days—City Abandoned Only After All Other Plans Were Rejected.

I now found myself suddenly, unexpectedly and deeply involved in a tremendous and hideously critical situation which, as I well continue for some time. I had also assumed a very direct responsibility for exposing the city to bombardment or bringing it into the hands of the enemy. I had, in fact, partially trained battalions of the royal naval division. I felt it my duty to see that the city was not left in the hands of the enemy. I had, in fact, partially trained battalions of the royal naval division. I felt it my duty to see that the city was not left in the hands of the enemy. I had, in fact, partially trained battalions of the royal naval division. I felt it my duty to see that the city was not left in the hands of the enemy.

Oct. 5 was a day of continuous fighting. The situation fluctuated from hour to hour. On that day raised our hopes. A counter-attack by one British and nine Belgian battalions drove the enemy back to the positions that had been lost and regained. The line of the Nethe was almost re-established. At midnight at the Belgian headquarters, Gen. de Guise received in my presence by telephone a favorable report from every single sector. The enemy had, however, been maintaining a foothold across the river, and it seemed certain they would throw bridges in the night. Gen. de Guise therefore re-organized the forces in the area.

First Lord to Lord Kitchener and Sir E. Grey. "All well. All positions are being held. The Nethe line will not decide finally on plan operations till I can give you my views. I have met ministers in council, who resolved to fight it out here whatever happens."
"No 2's have arrived yet, even at Ostend."

Situation Improved.
It was 2 o'clock before I went to bed. I had been moving, thinking, and acting with very brief intervals for nearly four days in council and at the front. The situation was, however, very direct responsibility. Certainly the situation seemed improved. The line of the Nethe was practically re-established. The front was unbroken. The naval brigade, already a day behind my hopes, were arriving in the morning. By land and sea troops were being sent to the front. All the various personalities and powers were looking the same way and working for the same object. France and Britain, the admiralty and the war office, the Belgian government and the Belgian command were all facing in the same direction. Rawlinson would arrive tomorrow, and my task would be concluded. But what would the morning bring forth? I was now very tired, and slept soundly for some hours.

All through the night the fighting was continual, but no definite reports were available up till about 9 o'clock. At the Belgian headquarters I was told that the Belgian night attack had miscarried. The Germans were counter-attacking strongly, that the Belgian troops had been driven back to the positions along the Nethe. The situation was very serious. The British and the marine brigade were also heavily engaged. The naval brigade, which had arrived in the morning, were marching to their assigned positions in the line. But where was the line? It was one of the most serious questions that I had to face.

But after all, it is by the results of the fighting that the episode will be judged; and these, as will be shown, were certainly advantageous to the allied cause.

After the departure of the Belgian field army the further defense of the remaining lines of Antwerp was left to the fortress troops, the 2nd Belgian division, and the British naval brigade, who held on their front the equivalent of more than five complete German divisions.

On the evening of the 10th the German division and the British naval brigade evacuated Antwerp safely, and began their retreat by road and rail through the open country, along the roads towards Ghent and Ostend. The enemy's attack was pressed continuously, and the scene of the city was considered to be untenable by the evening of the 11th. The enemy's attack was pressed continuously, and the scene of the city was considered to be untenable by the evening of the 11th.

In this position we awaited the next development and expected to be almost immediately attacked. The Germans to our relief did not make any move.

Fashions for Men

Grant Mitchell's Wardrobe.

New York, Feb. 21.—Grant Mitchell, of the stage, dresses just about the way his dress is in a straight part. In fact, he informed me his stage clothes, made for him by a well-known New York tailor, after they have served their term on the boards, become incorporated into Mr. Mitchell's set of business hours' wardrobe, thus saving him any extra thought on his wardrobe. Example of this is his wearing of a cutaway which had been acquired for "It Pays To Advertise," when he walked up the aisle with Douglas Fairbanks as usher at the wedding of Mary Brandon and Robert Sherwood.

Mr. Mitchell is one of those men who are always quietly and conservatively well dressed without worrying about it to any great extent. He wears dark suits, dark ties, and keeps his hair in a neat, conservative style. He is a man of fashion. He tells me he pays attention to the changing vagaries of fashion. He wears the same style of various articles until someone tells him they are out of fashion. He wears the same style of various articles until someone tells him they are out of fashion.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

WERE HAPPY JACK AND CHATTERER DISHONEST?

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.
Makes right to me be wrong to you. —Happy Jack.

Poor, foolish Sammy Jay! He had worked himself into such a rage that he didn't really know what he was doing. In ordinary circumstances, such a meeting with a powerful tramp in a lonely spot would have frightened him badly. She felt that if at all, and for some moments they looked at each other in silence. The tramp spoke first.

"You look at me," he said slowly, "as though you thought you knew me?"
Joan shook her head.

"You remind me," she said, "just a little of some one I knew when I was a small girl."
A vague remembrance flitted through Joan's mind, across the years of one whom she had known as "Uncle Jim" in childhood.

"A fortunate man," said the tramp, smiling, "wherever he be, to have remained in the memory of so charming a little lady."
"He is dead," replied Joan quietly.

"Long ago?"
"Death," he said, "must come to us all. Believe one who knows—there are many worse things than death."
Suddenly he came a step nearer to her. And still Joan, her heart beating strangely, did not move. It was then that a raucous shout burst upon the silence.

"Joan! Hullo!—hullo! Joan!"
Round the corner of the lane came Emmie, Ted Hartopp, and Alf, riotous and merry. Alf, with wheat-ears and poppies in his hat-band, swung his contentment.

The shabby stranger stepped back. He raised his hat to Joan with a deep, courteous bow.
"Madam," he said, "in the name of charity—I thank you."
He turned and strode past the three new-comers as if they did not exist; in a few moments he was out of sight round the bend. Joan's friends swarmed round her.

"Why, Joan! What had old Weary Willie got to say?" asked Mr. Ted Hartopp.
"Did he interfere with you, Miss Joan?" exclaimed Alf eagerly. "If so, I'll go 'n' dot him one!"

Joan became aware that he was looking down at her from the height of six feet, with the strangest intensity. His pale blue eyes, veiled her face; he did not move, yet appeared to be keeping a strict regard on himself. His long, slim hand clutched the sixpence that Joan herself was aware of a slight, undefined trembling. Yet she was not afraid. THE STRANGER

By JOHN GOODWIN

THE STRANGER SO FAR.
Mr. Callaghan is the "chief" of a band of the most black rascals in the world, who make their headquarters in London. This group, who stop at neither blackmail nor death, is composed of:
Vallie, who plays for high stakes; Henry Drummond, smart, fair, Slaney, always sullen and resentful; and Bell, who looks more like a clergyman than a criminal. These men, as the story opens, are dividing the proceeds of their last haul. They came about for new fields to conquer, and Callaghan submits a proposition to them. Their former leader had been their "Jim Carey," who had led a checkered career. He was the son of Lord Talbois, whose recent death left the Talbois estate without an apparent heir. "Carey," a son of the lord, whose right name was William Travers Talbois, through his escapades, had been forced to leave England. Callaghan, as usual, had been enlisted and was identified as "Stim Jim's" wife died and the girl went into a convent.

Janet Mackellar, who had brought the girl to London. This girl—her name is not known to the members of Callaghan's band—was the rightful heir to the Talbois fortune and Knayth Abbey. Callaghan proposes to find this girl, prove her right to the money, and then force her to keep silent that she is the father's heir. He assigns his men various tasks in this plan.

Phil Mottifson, a young and prominent barrister-at-law, takes a brief to be typed and at the office requests that the work, which is of a particular nature, be done by Miss Joan Ayre, the youngest and prettiest girl in the room. Joan returns the address to Mottifson's chambers when it is done, and the young man almost loses his head over her, but she coolly repulses him. That same evening she and her maid, Emmie Clegg, get ready to go for a trip on the Thames over the bank holiday with Ted and Alf, their "men friends." Joan falls into the water and is rescued by Mottifson. On the houseboat of Lady Dunlace Joan is taken care of, where Mottifson is a guest. He falls in love with her, but she is already engaged to a young man, Next day Joan visits Knayth Abbey, where Slaney, installed as a footman, discovers that Joan is the daughter of the late Lord Talbois. He sends a cypher telegram to his chief, Callaghan. Slaney is recognized by a tramp, who gets the telegram and decipher it.

Joan became aware that he was looking down at her from the height of six feet, with the strangest intensity. His pale blue eyes, veiled her face; he did not move, yet appeared to be keeping a strict regard on himself. System Run Down Blood Out of Order

Many people become run down, but don't know just exactly what their trouble is, when, as a rule, it is improper circulation of the blood. All they need is a good tonic to build up the system and put the blood into proper shape.

For this purpose there is nothing on the market today so equal

Burdock Blood Bitters

It regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, purifies the blood and tones up the entire system.

Mrs. H. Poole, Port Dover, Ont., writes: "My system was run down and my blood out of order, and I suffered a great deal from pain in my head which made me feel very miserable. A friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle and before it was used I found it was doing me good. I kept on until I had taken three, and now I feel like a different woman."

My husband also took it and it has built him up.

Emmie stared at the letter blankly.

"It's a do, you ask me," said she. "Why don't he say what he means. Think you'd better go, Joan."

"Go! Of course, I shall go," said Joan, whose curiosity was intensely aroused. "Though I'm certain it's only a blunder."

"I hope it's nothing worse," said Emmie pessimistically. "You be mighty careful, Joan! I've heard of funny things happening to girls over letters like this. Not what the address is respectable," she added.

"Bedford Row—that's where the gawney lives," Commented Joan, "but I'd tell you that. My Ted could teach him a bit, there. I've had to speak to Ted about that. Yes, you'd better go, Joan. It's a do, you ask me. Why don't he say what he means. Think you'd better go, Joan."

Do Not Give Up Hope Of Health

Often All That Is Needed Is A Tonic To Build Up The Blood.

There are many women who have been invalids or semi-invalids so long that they accept their condition as a life burden. They have endured broken sleep, stomach trouble, nervousness, headaches and weakness so long that they have given up hope of enjoying good health. In most of these cases a well chosen diet, fresh air and a tonic to build up the blood would do wonders. To all rundown, nervous people the statement of Miss Reah Watta, R. R. No. 5, Merila, Ont., will be of deep interest. Miss Watta says: "I wrote these lines to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone who is weak or nervous. In March, 1922, I had a complete nervous breakdown. I was taken to the hospital and was under the doctor's care for four months, but did not improve much. In July I came home and my sister advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After using them for a while I felt much better. At the date of writing (Sept., 1922), I am still taking the pills, have gained 25 pounds in weight, and feel like my old-time, healthy self again. Your medicine has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I hope my experience with it may help other sufferers."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.—Advt.

Rubbing Eases Pain

In his well-known Receipt Book, Dr. Chase writes: "You will allow me one remark about liniments—they ought in all cases to be rubbed in, from twenty to thirty minutes, until the part burns from the effects, instead of two or three minutes, as is the usual custom."

Rubbing with Dr. Chase's Liniment improves circulation, draws the blood to the skin away from the inflamed parts, and stimulates the blood vessels of the skin to healthful action.

Used in this way Dr. Chase's Liniment affords quick relief from Pains, Aches, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sprains and Strains.

Since it reduces inflammation and congestion it is used with good results in the treatment of sore throat and chest colds. Rub in thoroughly until a red glow appears on the skin.
