ASKS FOR REFUND

Of Money Paid for Claim on Gold Hill.

The first civil case to come up in the territorial court this morning was that of Cooper et al. vs. Charlton, counsel for plaintiff moving for judgment on the findings of the referee. The case, which has been in court some time, arose out of the sale by Charlton of an undivided half interest in a bench claim on Gold Hill to the plaintiffs for the sum of $5000.

BIG SALMON INDICATIONS

District Is Reported Very Rich by Whitehorse Man.

Mr. Gustave Gervais on Saturday last returned to town on the S. S. Bailey, from the Big Salmon district, after an absence of five weeks. He was fortunate enough to locate several claims in the district and after spending a few days in Whitehorse left Tuesday night to return to his claims.

He reports that the district has every appearance of becoming a big camp. Considerable building activity is shown at Junction City, hotels, restaurants and stores are springing up and a big influx of miners may be anticipated.

Return Postponed. Pekin, Aug. 19.—Emperor Kwang Hsu has issued a decree postponing the return of the court to Pekin until September 6th because of a report by the provincial authorities that the roads are impassable.

To Arrange a Race. Montreal, Aug. 21.—Arthur Irwin, of Toronto baseball fame, is here to arrange a match between the French bicycle champion and McEachran, the Canadian.

Cad Wilson was a passenger last night on the Columbian for Seattle.

Henry McCaulay's new residence on the corner of Seventh avenue and First street is nearing completion.

There will probably be another game of base ball Saturday afternoon between the Lawyers and Civil Service.

Mrs. M. N. Miles took her departure on the Ora for the outside. Mrs. Miles will spend the winter in Seattle.

Sergeant Raven, for a long time in charge of the police detachment at the Forks, left last night for Regina.

Wm. Walsh and family will move into his new residence on First street this week. It enjoys the distinction of being the first building erected in Dawson to be lathed and plastered.

N. F. Hagel, K. C., a building's most unique residence. Its location about half way up the hill from the A. C. road makes it conspicuous from every point in the city. The view had of the river is excellent.

Social Dance. The first social dance of the season was given last night at McDonald hall about 40 of the elite of the city being present. The dance was given as a farewell send off to a number of Dawson's leading members of society who intend leaving shortly for the outside. The affair was a very successful one and thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Death of J. Collins. Mr. J. Collins died at St. Mary's hospital yesterday after a six days' illness from typhoid pneumonia. Mr. Collins was a man of 40 years of age who came to Dawson from the state of Texas. He has been engaged in mining on the various creeks.

DAWSONITES BIG LUCK

Party of Five Strike It Rich in Tanana.

About the 1st of June, says the Alaska Traveler's Guide of August 23d, a party of five old Skagwayans, Robert Kirby, Phil Keith, Geo. Bounds, Mr. Springer and "Old Dad Wright," came here from Dawson, bought some pack horses, supplies, etc., and started in a hurry over the Dalton trail for White river in the Tanana district.

Yesterday a letter was received which says they struck it without any doubt and had a fortune in their hands.

While they have been on the ground but a short time they have taken out considerable gold which they will bring out in October. Two of the party, Messrs. Kirby and Keith, have families in this city, whom they will take East to spend the winter when they come out.

The locality in which the strike was made was on the Katrina river, near the head. The White river, Copper river and Tanana all head together near the international boundary line.

Where Is It? News of a rich discovery of copper near Dawson was brought out on last night's train, but nothing yet is definitely known of the find.

It is reported that the discoveries are connected in some way with a rich English syndicate and the find is being kept very quiet.

Copper cannot be recorded in the Yukon, as copper can be held but as gold quartz until a regular grant can be produced from Ottawa.—Alaskan, Aug. 28.

BEEN HERE 3 YEARS

Today Marks the Third Anniversary of Official Party's Arrival

WAS COMPOSED OF EIGHTEEN MEN

Only Six of Whom are Now in the Yukon.

BROWNE AND LITHGOW ONLY

Have Not Since Been Outside—They Slept on the Floor for Want of Bunks.

Today marks the anniversary of the arrival in Dawson of ex-Commissioner Ogilvie and the governmental party numbering 18 in all and including the following well known officials: Wm. Ogilvie, commissioner; J. T. Lithgow, comptroller; J. E. Girouard, registrar of land titles; Dr. J. N. E. Brown, territorial secretary; W. H. Lynch, T. Buchanan, D. A. McRae, Geo. Layfield, Robert Conklin, W. H. Montgomery, O. S. Finnie, Norman McLeod, Tommy Reilly, Thos. Hardy, Thos. Byrnell, Archie Cameron, B. Craig and Wm. Madden.

The party arrived in Dawson on the steamer Flora at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of September 5, 1898. During the past three years many changes have occurred in the personnel of the staffs in the various governmental offices and of the original party of 18 who arrived on the date above mentioned but six remain at the present time. They are: Dr. J. N. E. Brown, J. T. Lithgow, J. E. Girouard, O. S. Finnie, B. Craig and D. A. McRae.

Of the six remaining only two have never been to the outside during their three years of service. They are Dr. Brown and J. T. Lithgow. The balance of those in service have made one or more trips to their homes while those who are not connected with the government have scattered in different directions, some of them having left the country for good while others are still in Dawson and vicinity.

When the party first arrived they all messed together in a cabin next to the commissioner's office and eight of them slept on the floor for six weeks before they could get a bunk to occupy. Things have materially changed since then and now nearly all are living in their own homes and enjoying the comforts and conveniences of life.

PREPARE A SCHEDULE.

The statement published elsewhere in this paper of a Dawson-merchant to the effect that if the W. P. & Y. R. has sufficient business next year to justify it in attempting to hold its charter it must lose no time in issuing its next year's schedule of freight charges is significant of the fact that not again will the company be enabled to delude and betray its former patrons with empty promises that it had no thought of fulfilling at the time they were made. Juggery which is made possible by the score or more of classifications which the company created last spring will no longer be possible for the very good reason that its patrons will no longer submit to such chicanery. Hereafter the shippers of Dawson and the Klondike will, by taking time by the forelock, provide for defending themselves against the vampire that is sucking the life blood from the country by constructing and operating transportation lines of their own.

For the present season the W. P. & Y. R. will probably handle one-third of the volume of the Klondike shipment, but with the same attitude toward its former patrons it will next year handle not over one-fifth of the same volume of business. Already arrangements for protection against the vampire are being made and the company must show not by empty promises but by deeds and actions, that liberal concessions will be made next season or the vampire will die for want of blood.

If the railroad company has any intentions of doing the fair thing in the future its rate schedule for next season should be in the hands of the shippers at once, and it should, it must, be a document more easily understood than the present schedule which is a veritable Chinese puzzle.

BRITAIN AND IMPERIALISM.

British Columbia is not the only part of his majesty's dominions in which the opposition in parliament appears to have "abrogated its functions." Every paper, every person and every party in Great Britain, born, bred or converted into opposition to the government, have expressed the opinion that the latest measure proposed to end the war in South Africa will have no effect whatever. To be sure, says the Victoria Times, they are not in a position to formulate any plans, the embodiment of the wisdom betrayed in their looks and hinted at in their words, but they might at least refrain from puerile criticism calculated to encourage the Boers in a resistance which is proving ruinous to themselves and costly in life and money to the British. The time for criticism will come and with it the opportunity of the Liberal party, its leaders do not put it beyond redemption by their present ill-advised course. The duty of all patriots at present is by word and deed to end the war. All who have eyes to see know that an overwhelming majority of the people at home and abroad think the government was forced into the conflict and that the ambition of Kruger and his allies was to drive the British from South Africa. What other conclusion can be arrived at when we consider the extent of the preparations that were made, as exemplified in the number of guns, great and small, and ammunition that have been captured and destroyed? The Boer resources in that respect are by no means exhausted yet. In the face of these things and the sentiment of the people, what is the use of asking how the Boers are to be informed of the latest ultimatum, and by what process is the property of the enemy to be levied upon for the benefit and support of his women and children? The penny post and the telegraph are not the only means of communication, although these have been of great service to the Boers from the beginning of the war, and there is plenty of property in South Africa belonging to the men still in the field. The government may be weak, but it is strong in its cause, and its weakness will become manifest only when the first portion of its work in South Africa is completed. Not one part of Christendom can be convinced in its heart that the war has not been conducted with exceptional humanity and that it would have been over long ago if the tactics which were employed in all previous conflicts of a like character had been initiated. Because Joseph Chamberlain, who was once a Liberal, is at the head of the department which is chiefly concerned is no reason why his former colleagues should flout the sentiment of the country and ruin the prospects of the party of whose fortunes they have been placed in charge. The Liberal party must be baptised with a triple measure of the spirit of Chamberlain and become a colonial party before it can ever again become the power it has been. There are no Gladstones left, and it is a policy and not a personality that will win. Only imperialism can give the empire in the face of the antagonism of the whole world. Rosebery and Chamberlain, though now in hostile political camps, perceive this. The eyes of all other statesmen are either closed or they have not the courage to speak the words which will awaken the populace to the true condition of affairs. Some theorists or faddists would carry their doctrines to the limit. They advocate the release of the colonies from even their present slender connection with the mother country and the latter working out her destiny alone. Under such a policy the fleet could be greatly reduced and there would be no necessity for a standing army. The advocates of this policy are for the most part in the Liberal party, and they justify their attitude by pointing out that it would mean the end of war. There is a possibility that such a consummation would result in endless strife. Other nations are eager to extend their spheres of influence—is it not possible that only the dominance of Great Britain restrains them? Are the colonies inhabited by people who would submit to even the most powerful of the nations without a struggle? It would be a dangerous thing to upset the equilibrium which has been so long established. That at least is clear. In the millennium days, when all national disputes are settled by international arbitration, it may be different. Even then some national freebooter will arise and upset all the decrees of the courts.

WAY DOWN IN OLD KENTUCKY

They Play for Higher Stakes Than in the West.

Governor Blackburn Said Gentlemen Should Play Without Molestation From Police.

Through the famous old Kentucky Association track has been closed down for several seasons now, and the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association furnishes but a limited period of racing during its fall meet in October, Lexington continues to be one of the greatest gambling places in the United States, not expecting the wide-open western towns.

In one club alone in Lexington there is one of the biggest card games played anywhere, and the men who sit at the tables have money behind them. In this game the ante is heavy and the limit is the skies. In the course of a year thousands of dollars change hands in this well society organization. Of late years, though the authorities have taken a fall out of the smaller games from time to time this club has not been molested. In the early '80s it was raided and the swell players humiliated by a police court, the old docket of which shows that a fine was assessed against each and every player. The fine, however, was never collected by the city, since Hon. J. P. Blackburn, then governor, upon application, ordered all the fines remitted, and in a note said it was a pity that gentlemen could not participate in a social game of cards without being molested by the police. Since then card playing for large stakes has been the rule and not the exception at this club and the seductive game of draw and stuff poker flourish nightly. More than one prominent member of society has parted with his property and has been forced by such circumstances to give up the position he once held in the social world simply because he became infatuated with the enticing game.

A bluegrass farm a few weeks ago changed hands better than that of the opponent. At times champagne flows like water, and during such a period not long since a tragedy was narrowly averted over the same card table which in the last few years fortunes have so frequently changed hands. A coal merchant won $500 in a thirty-six hours' play, during which the participants never closed an eye for sleep. There is no denying that Kentuckians are in many instances natural gamblers. No law has yet been framed by the legislature strong enough to break up gambling in Lexington. At times it is suppressed in certain quarters, but like a lion it soon shakes its mane again and stalks forth boldly from its lair. In Riley Grannan's famous hotel venture here, The Navarre, which the plunger fitted up on a magnificent scale not many years ago on the principal thoroughfare in this city, was held sitings at cards which were the talk of the country. The checks were $25 apiece and the ante $50, and there was no limit. It was nothing out of the ordinary to see $500 bet and called on a hand, and there was one pot in one of the games when the winner raked down $5600. Gamblers flocked here from all over the country and sure thing men were staked and sent here to beat the game. Today no doubt Grannan, shorn of his locks as a plunger.

From the number of "hard hitters" and "good men" coming to the front in Dawson these times there is no danger of a famine in the way of pugilistic carnivals this winter. Every man is a "terror" in his class.

The temperance move which from now on for perhaps a month or six weeks will pervade steamers running to Skagway from lower ports will likely be seriously left by saloon men of the former place.

er, would be glad to have a stack of yellow chips with which to begin again his startling operations on the turf.

So strong has the card playing been entrenched in the lives of many Kentuckians that a wag here once took issue with a party on the question of the smartest man Kentucky ever produced. One inclined to the opinion that the honor belonged to the great commoner, the Hon. Henry Clay. Another claimed Gen. John C. Breckinridge and others picked President Lincoln and Tom Marshall, but the wag said he would have to stack up with a gambler named Tom Bell, who always knew when to lay down a hand. This same Bell was playing a single handed game once and in the show down lost. As he arose from the table, having played his last, he said to his lucky competitor, "Stranger, I bear no malice, but I'd like to know how you got that hand; for I'm damned if it was the hand I dealt you."

Millionaires TRAVELING

Enjoy Benefits of Wealth More Than Any Other Time.

It is perhaps when he is traveling that the millionaire is most envied. At this season of the year, when railway traffic being at its heaviest, second and third-class passengers are huddled together and scarcely able to breathe, the man of millions reclines luxuriously in his special saloon. When millionaires are on a tour they have curious ways—ways very little known to the general public—of adding to the pleasantness of the trip. There is one modern Croesus who has a unique. His mania takes the form of having pictures of every place he visits abroad. For this purpose he engages the services of an artist who accompanies him wherever he goes. The gentleman in question has recently returned from a tour in the East, and during his wanderings some 200 scenes were depicted by the painter. When the millionaire comes across a scene that pleases him he says, "I'll have a picture of that," and the artist straightway makes a rough sketch of it, finishing the picture on his return home. Another individual of colossal wealth never dreams of stirring an inch from England unless a medical attendant is by his side. He enjoys perfectly good health himself, but on the principle that "one never knows what may happen" he prefers to retain an English doctor day in and day out than to run the risk of contracting an illness abroad and being treated by a foreign physician. Equally singular is the fad of a certain celebrity of untold riches, who owns one of the largest and most beautiful yachts in the world. This individual will cross the Atlantic in one of the crack lines, settle down in a fashionable spot, and then instruct the captain of his vessel to follow him. As a rule he remains in the same place for several months, but one of his distin-

A POLITICAL SUGGESTION.

Why is it we hear nothing these days about incorporation? Surely the city of Dawson has now reached the point, where with advantage to her citizens she can govern her own affairs without calling upon the Yukon Council for administrative action. That body has enough on its hands to look after the welfare of the territory without dabbling in local matters. There is plenty of good material here for our purpose and leaving out the great good possible to be attained by wise legislation, a city election would give us an interest in our own affairs which is viewed at present with indifference and apathy. Here's to the first mayor of Dawson! May he be honest, efficient and prone to stylish dress.

REGARDING MR. A. CARNEGIE

He Has a Happy Every Day Disposition

Notwithstanding His Life Has Been a Remarkably Busy One—Proud of His Wife.

It was at the private view of the Royal Academy in one of the early sixties, writes a contributor, that I first saw Andrew Carnegie. A friend and I were busy at the pictures, when my companion suddenly left my side, and I turned to see him cordially greeting a short, white-haired man and a very sweet-faced woman. I remember wondering, as in answer to his signal I made my way to the trio, who it could be; but it never occurred to me for a moment that the curious-looking man with the almost shabby clothes and a silk hat was no larger for him than the master of many millions.

Later day pictures of the man who at 66, has proclaimed his veneration of the "giving away" forty millions before he dies, give the public a totally false impression of his face. I have seen no portrait of him in the picture papers which does not give him an air of truculent, of hardness, almost of defiance. In reality the characteristic of the face is its melancholy and, in repose, its somewhat weary gentleness of expression, doubtless due to his very indifferent health. Markedly below the average height, and by no means heavily or strongly built, the great millionaire at first sight looks a man about as unlikely to have fought a tedious and heroic battle with poverty and adverse fate as any you could find. It is only when you have had time to notice the squareness of the head and jaws, and the extraordinary brightness and keenness of the dark eyes, accentuated as they are by the deadly pallor of the skin, that you discover in the features indications of the "grit" which enables the penniless Glasgow emigrant of forty years ago to offer his native land today a gift that has no parallel in the history of munificence.

I have seen Mr. Carnegie under all conditions and upon all occasions; I have spent days in the same house with him, and I never saw him other than badly dressed. And when I say "badly dressed," I mean "badly dressed." Not merely such faults of garb as would attract the attention of your contemporary, Fashion, but a sheer carelessness, and indifference to appearance that must ever be noticeable to all around him. I don't think it arises from pride, as in two or three almost notorious cases, but rather from a sincere contempt for punctilious attention to the more trivial details of life. These must be galling to any man who has brains and money enough to be able to afford to dress badly and comfortably.

And brains Mr. Carnegie has. He is no mere lucky business man, but one whom you will find, in a very short talk, to be possessed of a knowledge of art, of poetry and of literature, which is quite amazing when you must remember that it must indubitably be self-cultured. For there have been no leisure years for him; no period, as in most men's lives, when the acquisition of knowledge was the sole business of life. Ever since childhood he has fought hard for his bread and butter. See him at the head of his luxurious dining-table, loaded with plate and costly fare and hothouse fruits, and hear him—as I have heard him—stretching out his short-fingered, white, lined hand, say: "This hand has wielded the hammer in a smith's forge," and you have the man in a sentence; in the astounding contrast of his "yesterday," and of his "today."

To go back—the first day I met him. My friend and I lunched with him and his wife in the Academy, and a friendly dispute arose as to who should pay. He insisted on paying the host, and produced a purse. The carrying of a purse always seems to me to be indicative of character. Men who carry them are not necessarily mean, but they are always methodical, exact, calculating in money matters, as opposed to the état d'ame of most of us, who pull out a handful of change, gold, silver and copper mixed, when there's anything to pay. I have always remembered Andrew Carnegie's neat purse as indicative of his nature. His every action is methodical. His very generosity and gifts of millions are, I feel convinced, the outcome of a method as rigid and inelastic as a theorem of Euclid. They are rather from the head than the heart. Practical, non-sympathetic, he approaches the problem of the disposal of his terrible wealth in an entirely practical, un sentimental spirit. In "charity," in "benevolence," in any abstraction of unreasoning largeness, Andrew Carnegie believes not.

Of his sincerity in his democratic views there is no question. I have walked with him in the superb grounds of Lord de la Warr's Samer seat, of which he was a tenant a year or two ago, and talked with him on many of the great social questions. In those magnificent forest lands of feudal times, the far-reaching acres of park, a thousand acres fenced off for one man's use, he might be forgiven if his democracy suffered some shadow of alteration. But he takes his wealth and its privileges simply, quietly, moderately. For him there is no class but that for which men qualify with brains, or with effort and self-reliance. If there is one thing which would make him bend the knee, it is not rank, not wealth, it is intellect. This, and this only, he may be fairly said to worship.

If you are a guest of Mr. Carnegie you have "a good time." He is immensely hospitable and makes an excellent host. In this he is more than helped by charming Mrs. Carnegie. She is indeed charming and very much younger than her husband—a good twenty years or more—is the heart and soul of gaiety, the dancing and games for which the millionaire has little inclination, but which are the natural amusements of the younger members of his big house parties. He is devoted to his wife, and is not above showing it in a pretty way. For example, I remember they had one very pleasant dinner with a black silk bag. In this she had placed little scraps of paper, upon each of which was written the name of some lady of the party. These were drawn by the men, and thus each got a partner. One night the man of millions "drew" his wife, and I shall not easily forget his almost boyish pleasure as he announced the fact standing on a chair like an auctioneer in his rostrum and feigning to offer his prize for bidding among his male guests, and then, with a charming grace, withdrawing his offer, as his "luck was too precarious."

I could tell many other stories of his attachment to his wife, but they are, perhaps, too intimate for publication. He is certainly a perfect husband, and so deserves the married happiness he has. He has all his life "scored delights and lived laborious days." A severe moralist, he has no sympathy with "wild oats," or those lapses from domestic virtues of which a modern world, he thinks, too light.

But in spite of a happy marriage, Andrew Carnegie is not a happy man. I remember as we drove to the station in his four-in-hand coach, I was saying how I envied him his wealth, and he said: "I am not really to be envied. How can my wealth help me? I am

FEAST OF NEW YEAR

Will be Observed by Orthodox Jews of Dawson.

The orthodox Jews of the city are making preparations for observing the Jewish holidays which begin next week. Rosh a Shannah, the feast of the new year, commences on Friday evening at sundown, September 13 and lasts until sundown Sunday evening, it being the custom among the orthodox Jews to observe two days. Ten days later, on the 25th, is Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, it likewise lasting from sundown to sundown. The services this year will probably be held in Pioneer hall the same as they have been in the past three years, though definite arrangements have as yet not been made. The actions of Col. Reichenthal in securing Masonic hall gratis without even consulting other members of the congregation is repudiated by many of the most prominent Jews. They say that the colonel professes adherence to the doctrines of the Reform church, has never affiliated with them before, and that his action in taking such steps was entirely unwarranted. They object to receiving Masonic hall or any other hall gratis and insist they are not objects of charity but on the contrary are abundantly able to pay for their accommodation.

There being no regularly ordained rabbi here the services will consist entirely of the chanting of portions of the psalms and different prayers, the Hebrew language alone being used. Three chanters are required, one of whom will be Charles Goldstein who has performed similar service every year since '98. There are between 75 and 100 followers of the orthodox belief in the Klondike, embracing Jews from Russia, Poland, Austria, Hungary and Germany, as well as many native born Americans and a few Canadians.

Kings on $5 a Week.

It would seem that riches and regal power do not always go together; at any rate, there are several monarchs in receipt of salaries which the average city clerk would despise.

The king of Portugal is probably the poorest sovereign in Europe. He is supposed to receive $28,000 a year, but it is alleged it is some time since he received anything at all, because money is uncommonly "tight" in the national exchequer. Many of the royal creditors pay their tradesmen with credit notes, but no doubt in the future when Portugal, by practicing the strictest economy, rights herself they will be above par.

The sultan is a rich man, but his position is not responsible for his wealth. Were it not that he has enormous private means he could not rule over Turkey, because some years have now elapsed since he drew even a portion of his salary, although the Turks boast that he is paid at the rate of £780,000 per annum for occupying the throne. This is true—on paper; but in reality Abdul Hamid gives his services for nothing, owing to the bankrupt condition of his country.

Forty-five shillings a week is the magnificent salary of the kings of Samoa. The Berlin general act of 1889 brought this once powerful monarch face to face with poverty, and settled the allowance mentioned upon him in lieu of the thousands he formerly played with. The most humiliating fact, however, is that his chief justice receives £1000 a year, while his most insignificant subject has an income little below his own.

Lincoln's Wife Pulled His Hair.

Mrs. H. A. Baldwin, an old lady now living in Los Angeles who was a close neighbor of the Lincolns in Springfield, Ill., gives the following personal recollection of Lincoln in Leslie's Monthly:

"While Mr. Lincoln was living in Springfield a judge of the city, who was one of the leading and most influential citizens of the place, had occasion to call upon him." Mr. Lincoln was not over-particular in the manner of dress and was also careless in his manner. The judge was ushered into the parlor, where he found Mr. Lincoln sprawled out across a couple of chairs, reclining at his ease. The judge was asked to be seated, and, without changing his position in the least, Mr. Lincoln entered into conversation with his visitor.

"While the two were talking Mrs. Lincoln entered the room. She was, of course, greatly embarrassed at Mr. Lincoln's off-hand manner of entertaining his caller, and stepping up behind her husband she grasped him by the hair and twitched his head about, at the same time looking at him reprovingly.

"Mr. Lincoln apparently did not notice the rebuke. He simply looked up at his wife, then across to the judge and, without rising, said: "Little Mary, allow me to introduce you to my friend, Judge So-and-so."

"It will be remembered that Mrs. Lincoln's maiden name was Mary Todd, and that she was very short in stature."

The Fuel Supply.

Thousands of cords of wood are being floated to Dawson by both the Yukon and Klondike rivers and first-class fuel can now be purchased delivered at $10 per cord, cheaper than ever before in the history of the city. It is said that a man who owns 1000 cords of four-foot wood which was cut on the upper river for steamboats and for which there is no demand, will raft the supply to Dawson and put it on the market in order to get his money out of it. Many people are now securing their winter's supply of wood at the prevailing price, but, from the amount on hand there is little prospect of a material advance in price during the winter.

AS TO TAKING THE CENSUS

Commissioner Woodside Gives Valuable Information.

Present Force of Enumerators to be Shortly Augmented—List of Questions to be Answered.

The census commissioner, Major Henry J. Woodside, and assistants are hard at work taking the census of the territory, but Major Woodside stated today that considerable time has been lost awaiting instructions from Ottawa which should have been received before this and that the work has not progressed as rapidly as it would have done had the instructions been received. The districts so far covered are the Pelly-McMillan, district; Stewart-McQueen, district, and the Fortymile Sixtymile district.

The men for the Klondike and Indian river districts will be sent out some time this week. After these districts are covered Major Woodside expects to leave for Whitehorse, where the headquarters for the upper river districts will be established. Men will be sent from there to cover the Caribou, Tagish, Dalton and Big Salmon districts. There are now seven men out but this force will be increased shortly. The hardest part of the work will be in getting the census of the steamers which will all have to be covered the same day to avoid conflicting dates. Men will be stationed at various points of the river where they will board the passing steamers and not to make any delay will ride to the next point gathering the information as they go. The following information relative to the census taking was obtained from the census commissioner, Major Woodside:

In taking the census some eleven schedules or books are employed and each of these is ruled to receive answers to from ten to thirty-seven questions.

There are books devoted to schools, churches, mortality, agriculture, real estate, mining, fishing, etc., etc., as well as the first general schedule devoted to the individual. The questions are of the most searching character and are designed to give a basis for the compilation of accurate statistics on all matters affecting the national wealth, product, health, education, wage-earning, etc.

Among the questions asked of the individual are the following: Age, sex, color, single, married, widower, divorced, age at last birthday, place of birth, date of arrival in Canada, when naturalized, present nationality, occupation, value of real estate, value of personal property, racial or tribal origin, education (Can read? Can write?) Can speak English, can speak French, mother tongue if spoken, infirmities, etc.

In dealing with manufacturing establishments the value of real estate, plant, working capital, number of persons employed, salaries, months in operation, goods manufactured, value of product and about twenty other questions are asked. In the "Furs and Gold Product" schedule the questions asked are for furs, kind, number, value, and for gold, quantity in ounces and value in dollars.

That persons may have no hesitation in giving correct answers to questions such as the value of real estate, and gold product it is provided by section 23, as follows:

"Every officer or other person employed in any capacity on census work is required to keep inviolate secrecy of the information gathered by the enumerators and entered on the schedules or forms. An enumerator is not permitted to show his schedules to any other person, or to make or keep a copy of them, nor to answer any questions respecting their contents, directly or indirectly; and the same obligation of secrecy is imposed upon the commissioners and other officers or employees of the outside service, as well as upon every officer, clerk or other officer, clerk or other employee of the census office at Ottawa. The facts and statistics of the census may not be used except for statistical compilations, and positive assurance should be given on this point if a fear is entertained by any person that they may be used for taxation or any other object." The penalty for refusing to answer any questions or to fill out any forms supplied by enumerators is a fine not less than one dollar and not more than forty dollars.

Section twenty-two of the census act provides that the production of any written or printed paper purporting to be a form authorized for use in taking the census, shall be presumed to be proper authority for the census enumerator to secure answers to the questions. The use of such forms for that purpose by any person not authorized to use it, is a misdemeanor.

Persons temporarily absent from the territory will be entered in the books, the information regarding them being supplied as far as possible by relatives or friends. Persons having relatives or friends absent from Yukon will confer a favor by mentioning the fact to the enumerator who may call upon them. Information regarding persons absent in remote parts of the territory is also sought from those competent to give it to the enumerator. It is hoped to have the returns all in so as to send them out on one of the last boats this fall.

DISCORDANT MUSICIAN

Drowns Notes of Other Members of Standard Band.

The Standard band has recently added to its membership a musician of national reputation who plays entirely on his vocal chords and yet whose loud and clear bell-like tones, can be heard over and above the balance of the band when they are blowing their loudest. The new member is a novelty and attracts a great deal of attention from the crowds who gather in front of the theater every evening to listen to the band play before the show opens. The illustration on this page shows the new member when playing his favorite section.

BIRCH CREEK LOOKS GOOD

To Captain Griffith Who Just Returned to Dawson.

Captain C. F. Griffith the well-known steambot skipper and mining man, returned two days ago from the locality of Birch Creek on which he has been doing considerable work during the past three months and which is developing beyond the owner's expectations, showing up gold in such quantity as to cause it to rank with some of the best placer fields in the entire Yukon country.

Captain Griffith was also in the Tanana country sufficiently long to do some of assessment work on a claim he secured while there last year and which he is satisfied will develop into very valuable property. He says that on Birch creek and in the Tanana country there are probably 300 miners and prospectors and the country is bound to come to the front as a heavy gold producer. The captain will return to Birchcreek later in the fall prepared for operating his claim all winter. It cannot be truthfully said that Captain Griffith gained flesh as the result of his hard summer's work, but he looks healthy and rugged and in fine condition for the winter's campaign ahead of him.

This is Ladies' Night. Tonight is ladies' night at the Standard theater and all should take advantage of the opportunity to see the dramatization of Mark Twain's great book, "Pudd'head Wilson." The play is excellent in every particular and fully justifies the immense patronage it has been receiving throughout the week. The players are all well adapted to their various parts and the stage settings and scenic effects are admirably fitted to the play and sets it off to the best possible advantage.

Although the play is one of seriousness there is a vein of humor running through it which keeps the audience in a good humor and provokes many a hearty laugh.

Dr. Duncan's Death.

A great deal of surprise is expressed that Dr. John Duncan, who was an athletic man, should have perished in the ice of the steamer. The last seen of him he was standing on the stern of the vessel with Mrs. Ross, and seemed to be taking no steps to save himself. It is quite likely that like others he had no idea that the ship would sink, and was remaining with the vessel in preference to taking chances in the water. He was also influenced in all probability largely by consideration for Mrs. Ross and her child. The latter would certainly not have survived contact with the water. Dr. Duncan was family physician for Mrs. Ross' parents, and on that account would feel specially interested in looking after her welfare.

On the other hand, J. H. Morgan, the insurance man, showed great determination in the course he adopted. Mrs. Whitmore, of Tacoma, was beside him, and notwithstanding the fact that the vessel was about to sink hesitated to jump. Mr. Morgan seized her and dropped her over the side, where she was picked up and saved.—Victoria Times.

ALONG THE WATER FRONT.

The cargo for the Koynuk is being taken aboard the Gold Star this afternoon. She leaves this evening. The Ora left last night with 28 passengers for Whitehorse and way points. The Nora is expected in this evening with two scows of hay and grain. The Columbian on her up trip last night took 144 passengers, one of the largest of the season. Both the Canadian and Victorian are due to arrive this afternoon, having passed Selwyn this morning.

W. P. & Y. R. SCHEDULE

For Next Year Should Be Prepared and Issued At Once.

"If the railroad company expects to do even half as much business next year as it has done the present season it should lose no time in announcing its next season's schedule, and in order to do any business worth mentioning it will be necessary to make sweeping reductions in its schedule."

The above was remarked by a Dawson merchant yesterday who has been forced to ship by the railroad this year but who says he will never again be cornered as he has been this year. Continuing the merchant said:

"The company can not again hoodwink the people of Dawson with promises of reduced rates as was the case last spring. The confidence of the people has been betrayed and from now on they will have to be shown before they will be convinced. A schedule in black and white without from 25 to 40 different classifications must be in the hands of the shippers before they will again consign their goods to the care of the W. P. & Y. R. We can build a steamer and pay for it the first year with what we will save by shipping by the lower river in preference to paying the present railroad charges. If rates are to be reduced for next year no time should be lost in making the fact known as arrangements are now being perfected for the construction of steamers for operation on the lower river. The railroad company has us where the hair is short now but next year the conditions will be reversed. It is a long lane that has no turn."

Dan Davies' Bass.

Dr. Shoff who lately heard of Justice Dugas on a fishing and hunting trip up Stewart river, supplies the following poetry and intimates that the experience of Dan Davies was duplicated by his honor:

A fisherman on Lak San Claire
"Bout six mile off from shore,
Fished hard for one, two, three, four hours
By an' by he fished some more.
Some time he fish with old dry bait,
Some time he fish with wet—
He give the dry bait to the fish,
The wet bait—sift! you bet.
Long time some fish did never come.
Then one, two, three passed by;
They smell that old dead, dry bait
And wink the other eye.
By an' by one great big bass come 'long,
'Bout five, six, seven pound weight,
So old he neither smell nor see,
And ate that old dry bait.
The fisher man stood very still
And looked out yards of line—
He worked that poor old blind black bass
So very, very fine.
By an' by the fish began to pull,
By an' by he pull some more,
And then was fun in Lak San Claire,
'Bout six miles out from shore.
The fish he plunge like one of a horse,
And then he pulled like ten—
He towed that boat nine miles on hour—
Big boat and four big men.
He pulled like bass 'bout six feet long,
May be he be 'bout seven,
May be, if he pulled out right quick,
He'll grow to be 'bout 'leven.
By an' by they pull that bass half out,
By an' by he pull him more,
And Lak San Claire fell four, five feet,
'Bout six miles off from shore.
The Lime Kiln Crossing got so low
The boats they could not pass—
And Dan he say the river fell
When he pulled out that bass!

MR. LAURIER MAKES REPLY

To R. L. Richardson Who Says Premier Should Help Him.

Ottawa, Aug. 22.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has replied to R. L. Richardson's open letter. The Premier takes up the point of Richardson's letter, where the latter said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, by lifting his finger, could have intervened to stop the prosecution against him. The Premier in reply to this says: "From all this it appears that you were accused of having been elected through bribery, corruption and a violation of the law; that for this you were brought to account before the courts; that the charges were found to be true and that as a consequence you were deprived of your seat in parliament by sentence of the judicial authorities.

"It likewise appears that according to your construction of those principles of morality of which you have been the loud champion, it was your duty to raise my hand to interfere in your behalf and allow crime against the positive law of the land, by which you had obtained your seat, to remain undetected and unpunished, and this refusal on my part you call a crime. "You were charged with having been elected by fraud and assistance from some of those public corporations which you so often denounce with apparent indignation, and you say was a crime on my part to allow the law to take its course. Sir Wilfrid Laurier adds that the public has now an exact measure of what is Richardson's conception of a blow's ruck at the moral standards of the people. "People will now understand," he added, "your attitude against political debauchery."
