CHAPTER XXX.

"They are," assented Clive, with a laugh. "Come round the corner and have a drink."

He led the way to the public house and called for a small whisky and a large soda. The cabman stared at him with tipsy surprise.

"If you was to order a sponge and a piece of soap as well, gunvor, I might have a bath," he said derisively.

He took a gulp of the sobering mixture and Clive waited, with a brain on fire, until it was finished, then he said slowly and gravely:

"Pull yourself together, my man. I want to know where you took that young lady." The cabman set down his glass and stared resentfully at Clive; but his gaze softened as Clive drew a five-pound note from his pocket and laid it on the counter.

"Pick it up and put it in your pocket," he said; "and take me to the place at which you left your fare. I'll discharge you there and you can drive away as if the business no further concerned you. Refuse, and you'll find yourself in serious trouble."

The man stretched his brows and shook himself as if with an effort to throw off the fumes of liquor, and, taking the note, carefully folded it and put it in his pocket.

"Dashed if I didn't think there was something wrong about it!" he said. "Jump in, gunvor. I'll take you there right enough. Your a 'tec, I suppose? But mind! I don't take no hand in this. I drives you to the place and I drives orf again; no questions asked, no questions answered. Is that straight?"

"That's straight," said Clive. "I'll be ready in less than one minute."

He ran up to Tibby's room, white and breathless.

"I have found out where they have taken her, Tibby!" he said. "No; I can't wait to tell you! There's not a moment to lose. Remain here. I'll bring her back to you, please God."

As he got into the cab, he gave the man a sovereign and told him to drive quickly. They went eastward. To Clive the way seemed interminable, and his heart sank lower and lower as they left the large and respectable thoroughfares and began to pierce the dingy slums of the far east. They were approaching the river, he knew that by the character of the shops and the occasional sight of a sailor and longshoreman.

The night had grown dark and wet, and the faint and murky lights from the street lamps and the wretched houses partially revealed the squalor of the neighborhood; there was a smell of tar and of bilge-water in a thick atmosphere; and, late as it was, Clive could hear the clang of hammers proceeding from some of the blockmakers' shops where the men were working overtime.

Presently he heard the dull lapping of water against the slips which led down to the river; and as he leaned over the apron of the cab and looked about him, the misery of the narrow streets and alleys, the noisomeness of the whole place, smote him with a nameless dread.

The cabman pulled up, and Clive leaped out and looked round. They had stopped in a place close by the river, almost devoid of houses and so badly lighted that it was almost pitch dark. The cabman nodded toward a low, half-ruined shed which looked as if it had been deserted by some bankrupt blockmaker or mast-builder.

"They went in there," he said gruffly. "Queer kind o' place, ain't it, gunvor? The young lady, she didn't seem to fancy it, an' she drew back-like, but the gentleman that come out to meet her he says something to her—I didn't catch what it was—and they went in together. He come out again an' give me a drink—two or three drinks it was, for the matter o' that—an' I drove away. An' that's wot I'm goin' to do now. Don't catch me mixing meself up with anything queer. Good night, gunvor."

"I'll give you another five-pound note to remain," said Clive hurriedly.

But the cabman winked and shook his head. "One fiver in the 'and is worth two in the bush, sir," he said; "specially when there might be a beak and quod at the end of 'em," he added over his shoulder, as he drove off.

Clive went to the ruined shed and found a door. It seemed to be the only means of entrance; for he examined the side of the building that ran down to the water, and he went back to the door and knocked. The silence was so profound that it seemed impossible that any living thing could be within it; but he knocked again and his heart leaped as he heard footsteps approaching the door. A voice from behind it muttered cautiously:

"Is that you?"

Clive knew the voice, it was Koshki's. Almost by an inspiration Clive thought of Sara and, imitating her voice, replied, "Yes, quick!" The door was opened and Clive sprang in, thrust it to with his foot, and seized Koshki. There was a dim light burning somewhere in the shattered building, and Clive caught the gleam of a revolver in Koshki's hand. He struck him a blow on the arm, then gripped him by the throat; but he was not quick enough to prevent Koshki calling out.

There came a response from several voices and the hurrying of footsteps, and Clive knew that he would have to fight against odds. His grip on the scoundrel's throat tightened, Koshki, nearly choking, staggered; with a twist of the leg Clive hurled him to the floor. Koshki's head must have fallen on a stone, for he gasped and became unconscious. Clive sprang to his feet and saw two figures coming toward him from the opening of the passage; a portion of the rough boarding that lined it had fallen away, and Clive pressed himself into the space thus made, and waited.

One of the men held aloft a ship's lantern, and Clive saw that the two coming assailants were foreigners; they looked like Poles or half-breed Russians, and scoundrels of even a lower class than Koshki. One of them had caught up an iron bar and he held this ready to strike as he rushed forward. They had passed Clive before they caught sight of Koshki lying by the door, and as they stopped Clive sprang onto the man with the bar, struck him between the eyes, and tore the bar from his hand.

Startled by his sudden onslaught, both men drew back, and Clive, seizing the moment of hesitation, felled one of the men with his own weapon. The other looked from right to left like a rat at bay, and Clive, with the bar raised, said thickly:

"Stand back, let me pass! There is a lady here—take me to her and I'll give you money, more money than you've got for this job." The man hesitated a moment then he said in broken English, and unintelligibly:

"I no understand. Are you see peered. We working-men—no lady here."

"Mina!" shouted Clive. There was a moment or two of silence, then he heard a faint cry, a cry that tore his heart in twain. It stopped suddenly, abruptly. Half-mad with dread, with fury, he struck the man down, caught up the lantern and rushed along the passage. It opened into a blockmaker's loft, a loft long since deserted and empty save for a few rotting pieces of timber, broken spars, and ends of rope; and, there, lying in the corner, with her arms bound to her sides, was Mina.

Mingling with the odor of rotting wood and bilge-water was a faint, heavy scent which clung to the thick, dank atmosphere. Clive knew it at once; it was chloroform. With her name on his lips, he sprang to her side and knelt over her.

"Mina, Mina!" he called to her, trying to keep the horror from his voice. "It is I—Clive! You are safe, quite safe!"

He knew that she was unconscious. He searched for his knife with which to cut the rope that bound her; and he actually got the edge of the knife against the rope when he felt a sharp pain in his side, followed by a heavy blow on the back of his head.

He managed to rise, and swung round upon Koshki, who gripped him and flung him heavily to the ground.

CHAPTER XXXI.

When Clive came to, it was to a consciousness of something cold at his feet. He opened his eyes heavily and looked about him, and memory returned with all its anguish. The dim light was still burning and by it he saw the motionless form of Mina lying, bound as he had last seen her, and only a few yards away from him. With a hoarse cry, he tried to move. to go to her; but he, too, was bound at arms and feet, and he could only move his head.

She was lying almost parallel with him, and the water that was lapping at his feet was lapping at hers; and in a flash he understood the significance of their joint positions; the tide was rising slowly but surely; it would rise to the ledge just above their heads; then receding, would suck them out to the dark and filthy river, which would bear them on its mysterious bosom to the sea or wash them up to some muddy bank into which they would sink and be lost forever.

He and Mina were alone in that awful place, and yet not alone; for Death was hovering between them, waiting to strike. It was evident that Koshki had thought Clive already dead, or he would not have left him unengaged; but there was no hope for him in this; for Clive knew that his voice, weakened by exhaustion and loss of blood, could not carry many yards. And even if he could have made himself heard there was little chance of assistance coming to him in that place of ill-repute. Cries for help, even women's screams, were too frequent to attract attention, much less aid.

For himself—ah, well, he could have met death, if not with indifference, with calmness and composure. But Mina, Mina! The perspiration broke out on his forehead and he writhed in his bonds until the ropes cut into his flesh. He was not able even to writhe long, for his wounds were bleeding and he was scarcely able to stir. He lay still trying to summon all his fortitude—not for himself, but for Mina. He could almost hope that she was already dead; for, if so, she would be spared the unspeakable agony of watching and waiting for the death that was slowly approaching.

He began to grow delirious, and he fought against the mist that was creeping over him, but he thought that he had fought in vain, that he was really delirious when he heard something that sounded like a sign. He waited a moment or two, the sound came again, and, as calmly as he could, he said:

"Mina!"

The response he had scarcely dared hope for came back. It was only a breath, a quivering breath, but it made him thrill through all his aching veins. It was one word, breathed with infinite love and despair:

"Clive!"

He could not speak for a moment. The anguish of knowing that she was lying bound so near him and that yet he was powerless to help her, to set her free, to save her life, choked the words back; but presently he managed to control himself.

"Dearest!" he said. "Are you in pain? Have those scoundrels hurt you?"

"No," she replied faintly. "I can scarcely feel; I am drowsy, in a kind of stupor. Ah, but what does it matter about me? It is you, you, Clive, of whom I think! It was my folly, my senseless credulity which has brought you, lured you into their hands. It was Koshki who sent the false message. It was he who sprang on me and bound me when one of the other men brought me into this place. I knew that they had snared me to spite you; and I was terrified, afraid; but I was glad, glad, Clive, that I did not leave word where I was going; the thought that I had not done so and that you could not follow me helped me to fight my fear. And now you are here in their hands!" She panted for breath. "How did you come here? Was it through some folly of mine that you traced me?"

"I found the cab, Mina, he said. "There was no folly on your part; it is I who have been wickedly, criminally foolish—for I did not leave word where I was following you; and no help can come to us! I tell you this, Mina, because I know you, I know that brave heart and soul of yours, and that you would turn from any affection or encouragement of delusive hope."

"Yes," she said, with a touch of loving pride in her voice. "I would not have you tell me anything but the truth. It would make it harder. And, indeed, it would not be hard to die, here so near to you, almost close by your side. If I could die alone, for life is not so precious to me."

A dry sob burst from Clive and he writhed in his bonds.

"There might yet be a chance for us, Mina," he said. "If I could make myself heard. The Thames police might be passing—"

Doctors Use This for Eczema

If you are afflicted with skin disease, the kind that seems to baffle medical treatment, and leaves you wild with itch, do not fail to investigate a prescription that is now recommended by many of the best skin specialists, even in preference to their own prescriptions. This is the simple, soothing, liquid external remedy, D. D. D. Prescription. This liquid stops the itch instantly, and effects a cure that is permanent. In fact, it took thousands of cures, case after case, before the best doctors were convinced of the absolute merit of this remedy.

It is now thoroughly established among medical authorities that eczema is purely a skin disease, due to a germ, and curable only through the skin. It is not a blood disease at all. The effect of D. D. D. Prescription is to penetrate the pores, kill the disease germs and to soothe and heal the skin, restoring it to its healthy condition.

D. D. D. has been found to be especially effective in all forms of Eczema, Bad Leg, Pimples, Dandruff, Ulcers and other skin diseases. Get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold Everywhere.

ENGLISH WOMAN SUSPECTED AS SPY, DODGES GERMANS.

New York, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Malcolm Carter, an English woman, escaped the fate met by Miss Edith Cavell, the executed nurse, by a clever ruse, according to her story told here to-day following her arrival from Liverpool on the White Star liner Adriatic.

Mrs. Carter said her passports were torn up by order of Gen. von Bissing, military commander of Brussels, and that she was suspected of being a spy. Fear that she would be executed, she said, led her to don the clothing of a travelling cheese peddler and with the help of Dutch smugglers escaped from Belgium. She said she had to walk twenty miles through a dense swamp to reach the Dutch frontier.

Gas the Beneficent Spirit.

The nightly hot bath is the children's joy, and a pleasure to their nurse also, provided that its preliminaries do not involve wordy warfare with an indignant cook who requires the kitchen fire for her own purposes. All such trouble is obviated by the installation of a gas water-heater, which solves the hot water problem once for all.

It is as great a boon to the master of the house who wants to shave in a hurry as to the hockey-playing daughter who comes in tired and muddy, or to the nurse whose baby charge shows signs of a threatened chill. Such symptoms often yield before the simple remedies of an immediate hot bath and a night passed in a room well warmed and at the same time ventilated by a gas fire. Where gas is the family friend, there health, peace and contentment should reign supreme.

Our blood is composed of red and white corpuscles—the red to nourish the body, the white to fight disease. In Anæmia, the red corpuscles are more or less deficient. There is nothing so effective in Anæmia as 'Wincarnis.' BOTTOMLEY'S ASSERTION.

LONDON, Nov. 5. In the present week's issue of John Bull which has a circulation of a million and a half, Bottomley, whose popular following is unquestionably the greatest in Great Britain, has an article entitled "All's well." After foretelling the coming break up of Germany he says: "The New York Tribune says we are bleeding Germany white. We are, and we must harden our hearts over the job; we must bleed, bleed, bleed until Germany is just blood, a corpse for all time, and impotent for ever."

THE SUFFRAGETTES.

LONDON, Nov. 5. The "Suffragette-Anyhow" group, controlled by Mrs. Pankhurst, have decided to break the truce, which has lasted since the beginning of the war, and again, to attack the Government instead of supporting it. At last night's meeting Mrs. Pankhurst said they came to this decision last week, and then only on account of the general ineptitude of the Cabinet, especially regarding Serbia, which they had pledged themselves to aid. Miss Annie Kenney was even more emphatic. Although the meeting was billed as "patriotic," she remarked, "We must rid the Foreign Office of Asquith, Grey and Haldane, which is not they will betray not only Serbia but London."

OFFICIAL DENIAL.

LONDON, Nov. 5. Official denial was made today of a report that Earl Kitchener, Secretary of War, had resigned. The announcement follows: During Lord Kitchener's temporary absence on public duty, the Prime Minister is carrying on his work at the War Office. There is no truth in the statement that Kitchener has resigned. Earl Kitchener was in London last week at the time of General Joffre's visit. Since then no reports have been received concerning his absence from the War Office, and until today there has been no intimation that he might resign. In fact according to the general understanding in London, he is to be made a member of the small cabinet committee, which is charged with the direction of the war.

DEARER BREAD.

LONDON, Nov. 5. Bread in England will cost 17 cents a loaf four pounds after next Monday, an advance of six cents since July, 1914.

RAPID PROMOTION.

LONDON, Nov. 5. The promotion of the son of Lord George to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, has aroused a good deal of criticism from the press. He is only 26 years of age, and enlisted in the Army only 2 year ago with the Carnarvonshire Territorials for active service.

German troops, yesterday, after having attempted to surprise the forces in the French trenches, directed a very violent, but futile, bombardment against our positions in Champagne district. French forces have checked two fresh German attacks against French trenches at LaCourtine. This information was contained in an announcement given out this afternoon by the French War Office.

IN THE CARNIC ALPS.

GENEVA, Nov. 5. Owing to heavy snow avalanches, military operations in the Carnic Alps, except for encounters between patrols, are at a standstill for the present. Both Austrian and Italian soldiers in this region are suffering greatly as the result of cold and snow in the trenches.

ITALY AND GERMANY.

ROME, Nov. 5. Existing relations between Italy and Germany are again an object of interest among Italian political observers, owing to the lack of a declaration of war upon either side, because both countries are seemingly avoiding anything which might embitter their intercourse. Reports from Berlin say that several thousand Italians are working and still living in Germany unmolested. Indeed they are enjoying the protection of the authorities there, while many Germans continue to reside in Italy, without suffering any injury. What is more remarkable in the opinion of prominent Italians, is that negotiations are actually taking place with a view to exchanging between the countries of certain products which do not bear directly on the war. In some well informed quarters it is thought that when Italy denounced the Triple Entente that her participation in the war was limited to fighting Austria-Hungary, with the object of conquering the Italian provinces still subject to Austrian rule, at the same time stating that she did not wish to extend hostilities to Germany. This situation, it is pointed out, might enable the two countries to help each other in given circumstances.

BRITISH TROOPS IN SERBIA.

LONDON, Nov. 5. A despatch from Athens says that in the fighting in Babuna Pass the Bulgarians were defeated after three severe battles. The correspondent also reports that the British Legation at Athens has issued a statement to the effect that two British divisions are now approaching the Bulgarian front and that other units are following.

IN GREECE'S PARLIAMENT.

PARIS, Nov. 5. "I would have preferred to omit the name of the King in this discussion, but since you ask this question, I shall answer it as I should. Under the constitutional regime the King can have no responsibility." So said ex-Premier Venizelos, adding that he did not mean to throw upon the King responsibility for the present situation of Greece. He blamed those who had failed to advise His Majesty as he ought. He said the Crown could not refuse to recognize the vote of confidence accorded by the Chamber of Deputies to the preceding cabinet. Gounaris, Minister of the Interior, interrupting, said he thought the policy of Venizelos would lead the country to ruin, by taking a position against the Central Powers, which would be disastrous for Greece and Serbia. When Gounaris had concluded, the Minister of Communications addressed the House. He examined the foreign policy of Venizelos, and asserted that the latter last February, would have led the Greek fleet and army to complete ruin. Developments which had followed justified the opinion of the Minister, he contended, that armed neutrality had saved Greece from catastrophe, and that if the country had not maintained neutrality it would have been lost without saving Serbia.

Resuming his speech, Venizelos apologized for his policy last February, and discussed the benefits which Greece might have realized if her neutrality had not been maintained. Continuing, he said: "Your policy has rendered our national ideals impossible. In serving involuntarily the German political group, we are exposed to the danger of aiding Bulgarian aspirations and the growth of Turkish power. Why not take part to-day in a war which, tomorrow, will be inevitable? He terminated his address by urging the Government not to let pass the occasion which is presented to the people, only once in a thousand years. His speech was frequently applauded.

FRENCH FORCES REPORTED DEFEATED.

BERLIN, Nov. 5. It is officially reported that the Bulgarians completely defeated, at a point northeast of Philip, the French forces which landed at Salonika. Part of the French contingent was routed, and others were made prisoners. The first French prisoners have arrived at Kustendil.

ORDUNA ARRIVES SAFELY.

OTTAWA, Nov. 5. The arrival of the steamer Orduna at a port in England, with Canadian troops, is officially announced.

DYNAMITE FOUND.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 5. A sensation was created today when a teamster for the Forest City Foundry Company found near the plant of that concern nineteen sticks of dynamite with a fuse attached which had been lighted, but gone out. The dynamite was only a short distance from several buildings of the plant of the Theodore Kautz Company, which has been manufacturing bodies of Automobiles for war orders, where a strike is now in progress.

TOKIO'S CORONATION.

TOKIO, Nov. 5. Tokio to-night is ablaze with light in honor of the coronation of Emperor Yoshihito which takes place on November 10th. The display on the Ginza, the Broadway of Tokio outdid that of the brightest parts of its occidental counterpart. Its most festive array of oriental color was given by long rows of paper lanterns and sun flags, together with floral arches surmounted by golden phoenix-like plants. A feature of the display was the appearance of a multitude of children attired in brightest gimonos. The climax of the decorative scheme was a triumphal arch in front of the palace with a floral pagoda, and ornamental towers lighted by ancient torches.

How to Prevent Acid Stomach and Food Fermentation

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is acid in the stomach, usually due to, or aggravated by, food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by the foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases, and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.—J. G.

Venizelos's Reminder

NEARLY CAUSES CRISIS IN GREEK CABINET.

Athens, Oct. 25.—Another Cabinet crisis has been narrowly averted. During a debate in the Chamber of Deputies, a difference of opinion developed between Stephen Dragoumis, Minister of Finance, and Eleutherios Venizelos, ex-Premier and leader of the majority party. The debate was on the subject of Turkish properties in Macedonia, which were confiscated after the Balkan War. Heated remarks were exchanged and there were constant interruptions from the government side.

M. Venizelos tartly reminded the government that its control of the chamber depended entirely on the votes of his party. The chamber was thrown into confusion and the sitting was suspended. The Cabinet assembled hastily, and as a result of its consultation M. Dragoumis made conciliatory explanations which brought about a settlement of the dispute.

NO CONSPIRACY IN CAVELL CASE, PRINCE PROTESTS.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Prince Reginald de Croix authorizes the Daily Sketch to deny the German allegations of the existence of any organization to assist soldiers to escape from Belgium, of which he and Miss Cavell, as alleged, were the leaders. He says that so far from there being such an organization, some of the prisoners tried at Brussels did not even know the others. He himself did not counsel soldiers to escape, but when he found that they were determined to escape, he assisted them, as did Miss Cavell, from humanitarian motives.

Fears German Spies in Japan.

London, Nov. 2.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Tokio cables that the military review which was to be held in the Japanese capital on Sunday was abandoned. Ostensibly this action was taken on account of the rain. It is suspected, however, that the real reason was uneasiness in connection with an attempt to blow up the powder magazine at Uji, which act is supposed to have been instigated by Germany. The police in Japan are now stricter towards the Germans and will not allow them to travel without permits.

Wilson on Trial Of Hyphenates

President Expected to Assail German-Americans in Speech Here To-Morrow.

Washington, Oct. 26.—An attack on the hyphen in American politics much more direct and definite than any he has heretofore made is expected to be the feature of President Wilson speech before the Manhattan Club in New York next Thursday. Explanation and advocacy of the national defence programme will also be dealt with at length, but will be subordinated to the President's assault on what he has come to believe one of the greatest evils threatening the country. Administration officials for some time have been restive under the constant heckling of the German-Americans, the latest instances of which came from the Bay State societies under the leadership of a Harvard professor. Some of the President's advisers, it is understood, have urged that measures be taken to soften this criticism, while others have wished to avoid making an issue, and have told the President that he was taking grave risks in accepting the challenge. The President, however, believes that no greater calamity could overtake Americans than a division along national lines, and the formation of strong nationalist groups, not only of German-Americans, but of Italians, French, Slavs or any other. Such growths, he believes, would threaten the whole structure of American institutions and lead to untold evils. It is against this danger, as well as against the German propaganda, which is the immediate symptom, that his speech will be directed. While this will not be the first attack by the President on hyphenism, it is understood to be the opening gun of a campaign which will be far more vigorous and definite than any previous action of his. The attempt to use America as a catspaw for any European interest will be followed and fought, not only when it appears in such manifestation as the action of the German societies, but even inside Congress.

Ladies' Costumes

Fall---1915---Styles.

Was there ever a more fickle lady than Dame Fashion? She is always making changes, and this season has surely surpassed herself.

There is a more decided change in this Fall's styles than has been known for many seasons. While materials are similar, Serges, Gabardines, Tweeds, Cord, etc., the designs are absolutely unlike any of their predecessors. Coats are of many styles, chiefly a la militaire, with high collars, snug-fitting sleeves, and the entire coat in some instances is beautifully braided. Skirts are much fuller, both pleated and gored, and are worn very short.

As descriptions are quite impossible, we can only say that we carry the largest and smartest line of Ladies' Costumes in the city.

The Plebiscite.

Early this morning all the districts between Re-nuws and Old Perlican had been heard from. This covers about two fifths of the electorate, and the voting in favor of prohibition amounted to 9,188 on a list of 24,300. This part of the electorate gave a vote of 38 per cent. in favor of Prohibition, being about 480 votes short of 40 per cent. A very large percentage of this electorate did not vote, but votes cast in favor of Prohibition were overwhelmingly in the majority. The figures being 9,188 against 1,805. The poll was as follows:-

Dist.	For Prohibition.	Against.
Ferryland	305	381
Port de Grave	331	136
Carbonear	590	49
Harbor Main	383	236
Harbor Grace	1176	181
Bay de Verde	1464	97
St. John's West	2153	262
St. John's East	2291	463

We are informed that the total vote cast in the Trinity District was 3,114. The first count gave 1,000 to S. The poll is expected to be declared before press hour, and if the same rate is maintained at the end of the count it will about make up for the shortage in the poll already referred to, and bring up the affirmative vote between Cape Race and Cape Bonavista to about 40 per cent.

We are informed that Burin count is delayed for the St. John's box, and that the total vote polled is about 1200.

NICKEL PICTURES DRAW LARGE CROWDS.

The programme presented at the Nickel Theatre yesterday was a splendid one and it attracted large audiences during the afternoon and evening. "The Trey O' Hearts" was highly interesting and was closely followed. The final episode will be shown on Monday next. "The Hazards of Helen," "The Conflict Janet of the Chorus" were also fine subjects and had the attention of all throughout. This evening the whole programme will be repeated. Next week the serial, "The Exploits of Elaine" in which Pearl White and Arnold Daly star will begin. This is one of the best pictures ever produced and it is certain to please our Nickel goers.

BRITISH THEATRE.

Large audiences attended both performances at the British last night. The feature drama "Opened Shutters" was thoroughly enjoyed and will be repeated to-night. The ayre singing needs no special mention as lovers of music will readily understand why her renditions of last night won so much applause. On Monday evening next she will sing "The Four Leaf Clover." To-night Mr. Harry A. Chaplin will sing "Here's to the Day," and this afternoon's matinee promises to be more enjoyable than ever.

CHILDREN'S SOUVENIR MATINEE.

The children will have the treat of their lives to-day. Mr. Donald Fisk will show his great mechanical novelty to the little ones. TO-DAY'S Messages.

NOON.

MORNING POST DEFIANT.

LONDON, To-day. Political circles were exercised today by the Morning Post's rejoinder to the Lord Chancellor, who thinks the Press should be prevented from criticising individuals. The Post refuses to cease its attacks, and declares if it said all it could say, some ministers might be swept from office. The Post goes on to say if fair comment is indeed suppressed then we shall go down like the blinded Sampson. The dead which he slew in his death were more than they which he slew in his life.

ZAIMIS REFUSES PREMIERSHIP.

LONDON, To-day. Constantine of Greece again offered Premiership to Zaimis, who had resigned on the defeat of his Ministry in the Chambers, according to a despatch from Athens. Zaimis refused to accept the offer. A council of ministers was called.

THE PUBLIC RELIEVED.

LONDON, To-day. The prompt official denial of the report that Kitchener resigned is welcomed by the public which has pinned its faith to the man who succeeded within a year in turning a purely industrial community into a great war camp. The official announcement of Field Marshal's temporary absence from the War Office is in accordance with public expectation. Asquith who takes charge of departmental work during Earl Kitchener's absence had experience of the War Office shortly before the outbreak of war.

TURKISH ATTACK REPULSED.

LONDON, To-day. The Turkish forces in the Dardanelles took the offensive on Nov. 4th and made four attacks on positions of the Allies. All attacks were repulsed. The official statement says between eight-thirty and nine-thirty p.m. on the night of the 4th instant the Turks attacked four times against our extreme right in Anzac. The enemy advanced with filled sand bags and built small barricades. On each occasion they were repulsed with bomb and rifle fire. By eleven all was quiet, although during the attack there was considerable firing demonstrations by the enemy against different portions of our line; no other attack was attempted. Our casualties are very light.

FIVE AIR FIGHTS.

Opening Day

OF WOOD'S NEW CAFE, CANDY AND FRUIT STORE, AND FANCY BAKERY.

Having leased the Adrain premises, Water Street East, near the Board of Trade Rooms, Mr. Fred B. Wood has fitted them up in an attractive way, and will to-day commence business there in the lines above mentioned. Mr. Harry Godden, who has had considerable experience in these lines in New York, will be manager, and an efficient staff, including an expert fancy baker, has been engaged.

What will doubtless be a popular feature of the Cafe among business people is a Club Lunch, which is really a substantial meal, to be served each week day from 12.30 to 2.30 p.m. In the main, however, QUALITY, not cheapness, will be the prominent feature.

A special feature will be ladies' lunches and five o'clock Teas. For these, dainty dishes will be provided. A handsome soda fountain, made by the American Soda Fountain Co., of Boston, has been installed. It is in every way "up-to-date," and, as pure fruit juices are to be dispensed, it will surely be a business bringer.

To build up a profitable business through providing the best, is the object of all those associated in this venture, and they are confident that their efforts will be appreciated.

ROUMANIAN GRAIN FOR ENEMY.

LONDON, To-day. The Italian steamer Ionio has been sunk, according to an announcement made here to-night. The Ionio is a vessel of 1800 tons, built in 1886 and owned at Palermo by Navigazione Generale Italiana. The Rumanian Government has decided to abolish the prohibition of the export of grain in carloads. The measure is interpreted here as in effect to an opening of navigation on the Danube, which enables Bulgarian grain to compete with Rumanian in Austria and Germany.

NO INTERNATIONAL POLITICS FOR HIM.

LONDON, To-day. Zaimis' refusal to retain office, the Post correspondent states, was on the ground that although he had provisionally accepted the Premiership, he was determined, as he had previously declared, to abstain from taking an active part in international politics.

SCOTT'S MONUMENT UNVEILED.

LONDON, To-day. The statue of the late Capt. Robert E. Scott, Antarctic explorer, was unveiled this afternoon at Waterloo Place by A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty. The statue was executed by Lady Scott, widow of the explorer, who previously had designed the bronze memorial to Dr. Edward Wilson, of Scott's party, who died with Capt. Scott on the return journey from the South Pole.

An Enterprising Firm.

Messrs. T. A. MacNab & Co., who have lately moved into their new office and warehouse in the City Club Building, displayed the count from the various districts in their window last night. Immediately the returns were telegraphed from the various outposts they were thrown on a large screen in their window by means of a magic lantern. The appreciation of the public was shown by the large crowd gathered outside the office until a late hour. Between the counts some interesting slides were thrown on screen. The one of the new "Overland" Car, for which this firm are the dealers for Newfoundland, was very striking and created a considerable amount of favorable comment. We understand that the counts coming in to-night will be announced in the same way.

The Happy Bachelor Girl.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Someone has said that there is no happier person in the world than the old maid who has ceased to struggle. I used to think that was rumor, but the other day I had a new light on it. I came out in the car opposite a woman who is, I suppose, what is called an "old maid. I don't like that term because of the stigma of ridicule and reproach which has attached to it. "Maiden lady" isn't so reproachful, but it has too prim a sound, suggests mitts and haircloth sofas. Suppose, then, we say "bachelor girl."

She has Evidently Ceased to Struggle. This particular girl has evidently ceased to struggle. A few years ago she was unquestionably anxious to get married and acted accordingly. She was not a pretty girl nor a girl who took easily to style and small talk and sprightliness, and all the other tricks by which men are beguiled. But she anxiously and painstakingly tried to fit herself into the mold. She didn't seem happy and I don't think she was.

The First Thing I Noticed Was Her Contented Look. But the other day when I saw her, the first thing I noticed about her was an expression of content and happiness. She was dressed with business-like plainness and very inexpensively in a plain business suit and extremely simple hat. She was reading a novel of Dickens and was deeply interested in her book. She told me subsequently that she never had half the time she wanted to read.

Another Nurse Leaves.

By the S. S. Florizel this evening there leaves Miss Jean Emerson, daughter of Hon. Justice and Mrs. Emerson, en route to England to take up the nursing of wounded soldiers and sailors. She will be attached to the Brighton Hospital, which was formerly a boarding school for young women.

Christmas Gift Fund for Our Soldiers and Sailors.

Lady Davidson wishes to make it clearly understood that owing to the difficulty in landing goods for the troops in the Dardanelles, it is impossible to send the men of our Regiment cakes, or any other bulky gift for Christmas.

It is for that reason that the $1.00 subscription has been started, with the idea of a gift small in size, but of good value, packed according to regulations, should be chosen in London and forwarded through the Regimental Pay Department. This is the one and only sure way of getting some Christmas Gift to our boys of Companies A B C and D.

For the Companies at the Depot at Ayr, and the Newfoundland R.N.R., a suitable gift will also be selected in England.

The W.P.A. does not undertake to forward any cakes anywhere, owing to the expense of freight.

The splendid sum of $398.00 was received yesterday, but there is still the large balance of $1,903.50 to be subscribed during the next 15 days. For the convenience of those wishing to subscribe and not knowing where to send the money, Miss Mackay will be at Messrs. Ayre and Sons Dry Goods between the hours of 11 and 1 for the next week commencing Monday. If one relative and one friend of each of our 2,900 soldiers and sailors each gave but 50 cents, the fund would soon be closed. Let the subscribing be more general. All small sums gratefully received.

Pleasing Presentation.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Howland, who came here and did such yeoman work on the platform during the prohibition campaign, was presented with a beautiful satchel, made of Newfoundland sealskin, also a gold bar brooch of Labradorite, and a tiny whitecoat. The presentation took place at the home of Mrs. J. Benedict, President of the W. C. T. U., and was made by Mrs. E. G. Hunter, on behalf of W. C. T. U. members. The recipient of the gift made a happy reply, during which she told of some of her experiences in the recent campaign, and takes away with her pleasant memories. Mrs. Howland leaves here by the Florizel this afternoon en route to the States.

Sagona's Report

The s.s. Sagona, Capt. W. Parsons, which arrived in port from the Labrador service yesterday afternoon reports unfavorable weather on the way north. The ship made all ports of call to Hopedale, and the round trip occupied 19 days. Capt. Parsons says that practically all the people have now left the coast and that the winter is fast approaching. On the way south from Indian Harbor weather conditions were favorable and from that port to here the ship made very good time. The Sagona brought a full freight including 550 casks of whale oil from Hawke's Harbor for transmission by the Furness Withy Line. The ship also brought along upwards of ninety passengers for different points along the coast.

Casualty Reports.

MEANING OF TERMS USED.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—As a great deal of anxiety is manifested by the friends of those members of our Regiment who have been reported on the Casualty List, with a view of explaining in some degree the procedure which is followed, I have to-day received a letter from an official of the Record Office, London, in relation to this matter. He says that—
1. Initial casualties come to the War Office in ordinary cases by despatch post; from the War Office they are sent to the Record Office, and from there to His Excellency the Governor. These casualties only state "wounded," "missing," etc., with no detailed report whatever.
2. All serious cases are sent by cable or wire to the War Office and then transmitted to the Record Office, but with no further description of the condition of the man than in case No. 1.
3. Reports as to the condition, etc., of patients come periodically by post from Malta or Alexandria. This may be weeks after the initial report had been sent here.
4. Cases which need a lengthy treatment are sent to England to the "Third General London Hospital," Wandsworth, where a visiting list has been drawn up by the Newfoundland Contingent Committee to visit invalid men at certain specified times, to be regulated by the Hospital, and brings them delicate; and also when convalescent to either take them for motor drives, to parties, or show other kindnesses. The Hospital sends a periodical report of the man's condition to the Record Office, and, if the man so desires, he can send to his relatives an E.F.M. (Expeditionary Force Message) at the rate of 2½d. a word. This message is sent by the Record Office, and the amount charged to his account. This is a big reduction on the ordinary rate of one shilling per word. On the death of a man, his personal effects, his will and any other belongings are sent to the Record Office; his account is made up and sent to the person nominated in his will, or, in the case of there being no will, to his next of kin. A form of will is provided for each man on the back of his field paper issued on leaving for active service.

As to the reports, "wounded" means just an ordinary wound, not by any means dangerous.
"Seriously wounded" or "seriously ill" means that a man is bad, but by no means given up.
"Dangerously wounded" or "dangerously ill" indicates that his condition is dangerous and may be fatal.
These are the interpretations as issued by the War Office.
"Trusting the foregoing may be of interest, I remain
Yours faithfully,

Colonial Secretary.

Mr. John England, 45 Long's Hill, this city, is in receipt of the following communication from Mr. Henry Reeve, Hon. Sec. of The Newfoundland War Contingent Association, relative to his son Private F. England, whose name appeared among the first casualties received from the Dardanelles:—
53 Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W., 20th October, 1915.
Dear Sir,—
I am desired by the Committee of the Association to inform you that your son arrived the day before yesterday at the 3rd London General Hospital, Wandsworth, London, S.W., suffering from gun shots wounds in the right thigh and left hand. The hospital arrangements are excellent, and in addition Private England is being visited by a member of this Association, who will see that he has everything he requires for his comfort while there. You may rest assured that everything will be done to help him to a speedy recovery.
Yours sincerely,

Prize Day at St. Bonaventure's.

The annual distribution of prizes to the pupils of St. Bonaventure's College took place at the Casino Theatre last evening before a large gathering of parents of the students and friends and supporters of the College. The affair was under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor who was present accompanied by Lady Davidson, and His Grace Archbishop Roche who was also present and was accompanied by Very Rev. J. McDermott, Adm., and several of the city clergy. Amongst those present were Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. Morris, J. M. Kent, K.C., Hon. M. P. Cashin, J. D. Ryan, Messrs. T. J. Edens, M. W. Furland, the Christian Brothers of Mount St. Francis, Mount Cashin and St. Bonaventure's and a large number of other prominent citizens.

The programme opened with the comic opera "The Irates of Penzance" in which the principal characters were Masters C. Fox, G. Jackman, J. Daly, J. Carrew, E. Duchaine, C. McDonald, J. Farrell, W. Myler, W. Bertie, B. O'Donnell and W. McGrath. The performance was a most creditable one and to Prof. Hutton, the director, much congratulation is due. The orchestra, Messrs. C. Hutton, A. Bailey and P. W. Bradshaw, rendered excellent music which added much to the success of the entertainment.

Following the opera Rev. Bro. Ryan, the Principal, read the report of the work done by the College during the past year, a report that was indeed gratifying. He reviewed the success of the College in the C. H. E. Examinations and also referred to the success of the St. Bon's Football team in the recent inter-collegiate series, having won the championship again this year. By virtue of winning the cup for three successive years this much coveted trophy now becomes the permanent property of the College. He then referred to the interest taken by the College in her ex-pupils and paid a worthy tribute to the 105 ex-students of St. Bonaventure's who have enlisted in the service of the Empire.

"Two of our most brilliant ex-pupils," said Mr. Ryan, Buchanan Freebairn and John McDonnell have already paid the debt of honor and their memories will be ever kept green by the pupils and teachers of their Alma Mater. Rev. Bro. Ryan, on behalf of the College, then thanked His Excellency and Lady Davidson for honoring the occasion with their presence; His Grace the Archbishop, who had always shown a deep interest in his Alma Mater, and whom the College holds as her most distinguished son; to Mr. J. P. Kiely who had so generously placed the hall at their disposal free of charge, and to the orchestra, who besides assisting so ably at the performance, gave so much of their spare time during the rehearsals. He then invited His Excellency the Governor, His Grace the Archbishop, and the College Board of Directors to come on the platform for the distribution of prizes. After distributing the prizes His Grace addressed the gathering, and paid a well deserved tribute to the work of the teachers and pupils of St. Bonaventure's. He congratulated the college on its high standard of efficiency, intellectually, as shown by the results of the recent examinations, morally, as shown by the excellent tone that always prevails at St. Bonaventure's, physically as shown by the successes in the athletic field, and socially, as shown by the general deportment of the pupils and the excellent entertainment just furnished. He also paid a high tribute to those of the ex-pupils who had enlisted in the service of the Empire and felt confident that they would give a good account of themselves on the battlefield.

His Excellency followed and in a lengthy address congratulated the teachers and pupils of the college, and paid a high tribute to the work done by the Irish Christian Brothers in every land. In this noble organization, said His Excellency, we have men of culture and education who could easily make their mark in the various pathways of life, but instead choose to give their lives solely to the cause of education. He then congratulated the Brothers on their excellent methods of imparting knowledge, which methods were always productive of much success. In referring to the War he took occasion to congratulate the College on the number of her sons who had enlisted, and felt confident that all would acquit themselves with honour and credit to their Alma Mater.

Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. Morris, President of St. Bon's Old Boys' Association, in congratulating the Brothers on their good work, said that he felt it an honour to be one of the early pupils of the College and would wish his Alma Mater a continuance of the successes which have distinguished her in the past.

Mr. J. M. Kent followed and in a pleasing speech endorsed all that the previous speakers had said with reference to the good work of the College. He congratulated the Principal, teachers and pupils of the institution and wished them a continuance of success.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the enjoyable evening to a close.

THRIFTLESS.

It's well to be sunny and frisky and gay, if one has some money in brine put away; if we have the plunder where thieves cannot steal, it's surely no wonder if chippier we feel. But some folks don't borrow an ounce weight of care, they heed not to-morrow, when shelves may be bare. And, not a thought giving to what may befall, "We'll live while we're living," they cheerily call; "eat, drink, and be merry, to-morrow we die, and with his wherry will soon paddle by." And then when to-morrow comes trading along, all loaded with sorrow and things going wrong, the roysterers grumble and murmur and yelp, and send out a humble petition for help. "Oh, come, come a-flying"—you've heard their old tunes—"our children are crying for codfish and prunes! Be good to us, neighbors, we need food and coal, and you, by your labors, have piled up a roll! With hunger we sicken, we languish and die!—Oh bring us fried chicken and pretzels and pie!" Each winter the thriftless send up the old wall, the bedless, the shiftless, the fellows who fall.

Try this! All dandruff disappears and hair-stops coming out.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful. You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Conscription Is Not Being Dodged

Old Country Emigration Figures Conclusive Evidence Allegations are Fiction.

London, October 27.—In consequence of the prominence given them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful. You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Mr. Runciman replied that during that period the number of males of British nationality of twelve years of age and over who had left for permanent residence in non-European countries was 36,594, as compared with 30,683 in the previous twelve months. Those between 18 and 45 did not exceed 31,000, compared with 88,000 in the previous twelve months. During the past three months the number of emigrants over 12 years had been 2,802 in July, 2,196 in August and 2,913 in September.

Commissioner Lamb, of the Salvation Army, also sends a crushing reply to these allegations. "During the past twelve months," he writes, "we have arranged for the transfer of only 33 single men, nearly all of them to the Dominions. Formerly we have directed the emigration of 50 many as 10,000 people in one season, of whom the proportion of single men would be about 45 per cent. Since the outbreak of war the services of our staff have been diverted into other channels, such as Imperial and social work."

EVENTS PORTENDING.

Hope and expectancy pervade the atmosphere. Great events, it is believed, are imminent, if not in progress. At no time since the early days, when the public had not become accustomed to a state of war, has the feeling been so intense. The conditions are highly favorable to the growth and circulation of rumors, and never have these been more abundant—of landings at one place, progress at another, and a reverse somewhere else. It is the best testimony to the calmness of the public mind that these stories are treated with the scepticism which they deserve. The public are determined to believe nothing, either good or bad, until it is announced on official authority. Exactly a week has elapsed since the Allies began their forward movement, and the experience of the last twelve months has shown that rapid decisions are rarely to be expected. The struggle so promisingly begun is far from ended. Unofficial reports agree that the official accounts have stated the position with great caution. The estimate of casualties stands at a high figure, but not so high as was officially expected, and by no means excessive compared to the advantage gained. Moreover, I am told that the proportion of slightly wounded cases is unusually great. The optimism of the Russian official messages taken in conjunction with the successes in the West, has produced a state of feeling which enables the community to face the suspense of the next few days or weeks with patient confidence.

KING EDWARD AND AUSTRIAN PERFDITY.

Much prominence is being given here to a statement by Lord Rededale concerning the deep chagrin felt by the late King Edward at the manner in which he had been deceived by the leading men of Austria-Hungary over their annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the early autumn of 1908. This revelation, however, is no more than a secret de Polchinelle—for the main fact has been known and openly stated again and again from a period very soon after the annexation. His late Majesty, indeed, never sought to disguise from his intimates the resentment he entertained at being "jockeyed" by the Austrians. He had not only seen the Emperor Francis Joseph at Ischl, and had from him the most pacific assurances, but these had in no way been minimized by the Imperial heir, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, six years later murdered at Sarajevo, in the annexed territory, or by Baron Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian Chancellor. He returned to England thoroughly possessed of the belief that all was well with the international situation in Europe, and it was never the aged Emperor whom he blamed, for he believed that Francis Joseph was deliberately kept in ignorance of the whole plot, which had been arranged between the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Kaiser. King Edward perceived at a glance that the "shining armour" episode would be as the letting out of waters, and the Bosnian annexation proved his political prescience by being the fons et origo malorum, out of which the Balkan war and the present world struggle have since sprung.

ENTENTE INTERESTS IN SALONIKA.

It would be difficult to find a city more cosmopolitan than Salonika. Almost every nation is represented in population and in material interests. As regards population, as large a proportion as 60 per cent. is, or was before the Balkan wars, Jewish. Jews have in Salonika, as elsewhere, come to the top in the commercial life of the port, and many of the most important firms are in Jewish hands. Both Great Britain and France are represented by powerful commercial interests. It is estimated that over £20,000,000 of French capital is invested in Salonika, or in enterprises which have their headquarters there. The Bank of Salonika, the harbor, and even the all-important Dedeagatch railway were financed by French money. There were in pre-war days as many as 35 French schools in the city. Britain's interests in the port before the war were hardly less valuable. British shipping predominated even over Austrian, and up to the time of the Balkan Wars, at any rate, British imports were higher in aggregate value than those from any other source. In this respect Austria-Hungary ran us very close, with Germany third, and France fourth. Chief among the goods that in recent years entered Salonika from Great Britain were jute, rope, oilcloth and linoleum, coal, ironware, carpets, machinery, and by far the most important of all, cotton goods, which comprised nearly half of our export trade to Salonika.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S SON.

The death of an unknown boy is mourned by everyone. That is the tribute of the nation to the genius of Rudyard Kipling. "Just-So Stories" were dedicated to this lad. John Kipling's death at the front is one of many deaths of the sons of well-known literary men. A few weeks ago the elder son of Mr. Neil Munro was slain in France. He was an officer in a Gaelic-speaking company of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. This was the lad to whom the novel "John Splendid" was dedicated, a novel about a little battle in Munro's own country of Lorne. One of Sir James Barrie's two adopted sons has been killed, and H. A. Vachell has lost his son.

KING ALBERT'S DECORATION.

The Order of Leopold, which King Albert has conferred upon Major J. L. Baird, D.S.O., of the Scottish Horse, the member for Rugby, and the son of Sir Alexander Baird, is the only important decoration instituted by Belgium during its comparatively brief existence as a separate kingdom. The Order is rather over half a century old, and was created by the first King of the Belgians, Queen Victoria's Uncle and adviser, a few years before his death. King Albert's bestowal of various grades of the Order upon a number of officers of the 5th Dragoon Guards is a sequel to appointment two months ago to be Colonel-in-Chief of this famous cavalry corps. It is interesting to recall that its second title of Princess Charlotte of Wales's Dragoon Guards was given in honor of an English Princess who became the first wife of King Leopold, King Albert's grandfather by a second union. The present King of the Belgians, whose grandfather also held the Honorary Colonelcy of the 5th Dragoon Guards, now joins the Czar, the King of Spain and the King of Denmark in holding honorary rank in the British Army.

THE NO LIGHTS OF LONDON.

The double darkening of London which began on October 2nd has been done so thoroughly that it is now quite an adventure to walk home. The scene in the late Ambassador's revue showing—or rather not showing—Piccadilly Circus at 11 p.m. in a darkness relieved only by taxi-horns and headlights, conversation and collisions, was a humorous exaggeration. Now it would be little better than true. The great excitement about walking home is finding the kerbstone. There are two ways. One is to see it with catlike vision or to sense it by some kind of second sight; the other is to fall over it. A good many people who have good enough vision in ordinary light suffer from a sort of night-blindness, and in London one might know them by the fact that they walk in the middle of the road in considerable numbers, risking the traffic rather than be perpetually falling over the kerbstone. I believe in Margate, which has been thoroughly darkened for some time, and there is some talk of doing it here. There is not only the danger of pedestrians being tripped up, there is also the danger of misguided motor-drivers mounting the kerb by mistake. No doubt it is all necessary and reasonable, but a friend who has just returned from Paris declares that Paris is quite well lighted, though it is a good deal nearer the Zeppelin danger than we are.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES AND MUSICAL COMEDY.

The death of Mr. George Edwardes is a fatal blow to musical comedy in London. His most serious and most intelligent rival, Mr. Robert Courtneidge, is committed to opera for some time to come, and it would not be in the least surprising if the musical comedy founded by Mr. Edwardes were to set just as English opera is beginning to rise. It is not of course, that the two are mutually exclusive.

There is room for serious and for light opera. But musical comedy was a danger to opera in so far as, being a paying and comparatively long-established concern, it had a tendency to draw to itself singers whose right place is the opera stage. Mr. Webster Millar, the Manchester tenor, is an example in point. In musical comedy his fine voice and talent for dramatic expression were utterly thrown away, for the music of Mr. Edwardes's productions was as uninteresting and as little varied as their titles. This was the cause of the Edwardes failure to establish a type of entertainment which will endure. If he had possessed an ear for good music as well as the eye for scenic effects we might have had English light opera to supplement Lecocq and Offenbach. But he had not even the courage to search for the men to give him the kind of music he needed. Most of his musical comedies had music which was trivial without being in the least gay, while the quality of the comedy depended almost entirely on the skill of the performer.

DEARTH OF DYE STUFFS.

A prominent textile warehouseman tells me that the dyestuff difficulty has now reached an acute stage. Certain colors are no longer procurable at any price, and, though there are many forward contracts whose delivery will not be completed before next summer, further contracts cannot for the present be made. This applies with especial emphasis to navy blue serges and fast black fabrics. The enormous demand for blacks, which emanates not only from our own home trade but from France, has put a great strain upon the resources of the available factories for the production of black dyes. Urgent attempts have been made to call American factories to our aid but they, in their turn, are barely able to cope with their own demand, which has turned to black owing to the paucity of imported aniline shades of brighter hues. I am told that a very large trade is now being done in hosiery for men's and women's wear in which the range of tints is limited to slates, greys, and what the draper calls "beige" and "ecru." The possibility of the mal-eyilian having to wear "natural" undyed hose during the winter for lack of a wider choice is a very near one.

MEN'S AUTUMN HEADGEAR.

Grey will be the predominant color in men's caps and soft felt hats this autumn and winter owing to the shortage of dyeing materials, for the supply of which we had come to rely largely on Germany. The newest shapes have the brim edge turned and stitched over, in place of the plain or raw edge, which was apt to lose its shape. The hardy "bowler" will of course be black, and enjoy its usual popularity. No marked changes of style are to be reported. Velours hats, previously imported in large quantities from Austria, are now being made by our home manufacturers at Stockport, who are hard put to it to cope with the demand. Very few silk hats are being sold at present. Stocks of opera hats have been stored carefully away until the return of more peaceful days and the revival of social functions. One important point to note in regard to headgear this autumn is that the manufacturers both of felt hats and caps will not guarantee the fastness of the dye, consequently there is just a possibility of the rain playing tricks with the color if the wearer is caught in a storm. From the same cause the cheap kind of "bowlers" may also turn rusty in appearance after a shorter period of wear.
