The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XVIII

"Dear Lady Falconer,—I am sorry to say that I am compelled to bring my visit to a sudden termination. While thanking you for your hospitality, may I say that the object of that visit cannot be fulfilled. Will you also assure Sir Hugh that I can never comply with the terms of the will, and that I yield absolutely and unconditionally all claim to any of Mr. Fennor's money. As I am afraid that I must leave very early in the morning, will you kindly say good-bye for me to Maud and Edie! With kind regards,
Yours very truly,
DULCIE DORRIMORE."

It is a jerky, almost incoherent epistle; but it expresses one thing at least plainly enough—that Hugh is free, free of her, and free to take the money.

And now how is she to get away? If she were but with Aunt Fennor in the little dingy rooms in Caroline Street, where she could hide and nurse her sorrow, and—and try and forget the handsome face and grave, cruel voice.

Suddenly there comes a knock at the door, and she goes and opens it a couple of inches or so, keeping well out of sight.

"Well?" she says.
"A letter, miss," says the maid's voice. "It came by the evening post, but was forgotten. We were all in the hall, miss," apologetically.

Dulcie takes the letter from the salver, and shuts the door. She looks at the envelope apathetically; the address is written in an awkward, illiterate hand, and scrambles from one corner of the envelope to the other. Then she opens it, and the next moment is flying toward the bell and ringing it violently. This is the note:

Premier Gasoline

gets the regular "putt-putt" out of your engine that takes you there and back the same day, a clean, reliable fuel for gasoline-burning boats.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND

"Dere Miss Dulcie,—Will you please cum home, as your pore arnt is much worse. She would not lett me send for you befour. Yures obedently, SARAH."

Sarah is the little maid at Caroline Street, the faithful domestic who is regarded by Mrs. Fennor more as a friend than a servant.

A sudden terror seizes Dulcie; the simple fear and pathos of the ill-spelled, worse-written note strike upon her like a blow, and send from her mind even the thought of Hugh.

The maid comes rushing up and enters with the barest apology for a knock.

"Oh, miss!" she exclaims, for Dulcie is standing, panting, with the letter in her hand, "has anything happened?"

"Yes," says Dulcie, hoarsely, almost impatiently, "my aunt is ill. I must go back at once—at once! What shall I do? Oh, why didn't you bring the—this letter to me before? And I—I have been fooling here while—while she—" a dry sob chokes her utterance.

The girl is aghast for a moment, then she regains her presence of mind.

"I'll fetch her ladyship, Miss," she says.

But Dulcie seizes her arm. She could not bear Lady Falconer's presence at this moment; the cold, half-closed eyes would drive her mad.

"No, no!" she says, "I will write—I have written," and she groans as she thinks how soon and how pitiful an excuse has sprung up for her flight. "I have written to her ladyship. Will you—"
She puts her hand to her head, confused and bewildered.

The girl looks at her sympathetically.

"Is she very ill, miss? To-morrow morning—"

Dulcie laughs—actually laughs. "To-morrow morning!" she says.

"I would go to her to-night if I had to walk every step of the way! I'll—she is dying! I know it by this," and she touches the note, "or she would not have sent for me."

The girl looks at her watch, hidden behind her apron. "There is time to catch the last train, miss."

"I must!" exclaims Dulcie. "Will you tell them to get a brougham or dog-cart—anything ready?"

"There is the carriage, miss," says the maid. "Sir Hugh took the brougham to the station."

Dulcie winces.

"No matter—anything," she says, impatiently. "Only go and get it; every moment you stand there is lost."

The girl hurries away aghast and frightened, and Dulcie tears off her dress, and hurries into another, and her ulster. Almost before she is ready, the girl appears again.

"I have ordered the carriage, miss, and it will be ready in ten minutes; there will be just time, but—"
"Well! but?" says Dulcie, impatiently.

"But you can't travel alone in the night, miss! Lady Falconer would go out of her mind."

Dulcie laughs a hollow, mirthless laugh.

"I think not," she says. "You have

Fall is the Ideal Time to Paint

Unprotected surfaces decay rapidly, so prepare your property for winter by painting this fall. The wood is free from frost and dampness and the pores are more receptive, enabling the paint to penetrate deeper. Summer heat has passed, flies and insects have gone and ideal painting weather has set in.

This is the paint that is giving Canadians from coast to coast entire satisfaction. It is made according to the formula which scientific tests and many years' experience by practical painters prove to be the best for Canadian weather conditions.

It contains 70% Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead and 30% Pure White Zinc—the world's two standard paint materials. These materials, ground and mixed by our special methods, produce a paint that has maximum penetration, works easily, and lasts longest.

not said anything to Lady Falconer? With visible alarm.

"No, miss; I went straight to the stables."

"You are a good girl," says Dulcie, relieved and grateful. "Will you—?" and she takes out her purse. "No, I won't offer you money; take this." And she takes up a bracelet from the table. "Yes, yes"—for the girl naturally hesitates—"you have been always kind and thoughtful; take it, please. You will earn it," she adds, with a wan smile, "for I am going to leave everything behind. You will pack them together and send them after me, will you not?"

"Indeed I will, miss," says the girl, her eyes moist. "And I'm very sorry, miss—truly sorry."

"Yes, yes," says Dulcie, moving to and fro with restless impatience. "Ten minutes, did you say?"

"Yes, miss. And the letter for Lady Falconer?"

"Oh, yes!" says Dulcie, remembering; and she tears open the envelope and incloses Sarah's simple note. "Give that to her ladyship—it will explain everything. And now let us go down; I do not want to see anybody—I cannot!"

The girl nods, hushed by the signs of such grief and consternation; and Dulcie follows her down the back staircase and into the courtyard.

It is a lovely night; all is beautiful and bland—a cruel contrast to the misery and apprehension which rages in her heart.

"Would it were time," she wails, impatiently. "Ten minutes! It has been an hour."

Then the carriage comes up, and a footman, with curiosity staring from every feature, opens the door, and a moment afterward Dulcie, looking out, sees the lighted windows of Holme Castle behind her.

CHAPTER XIX
It is an express train, the night mail, but fast as it is, it seems to drag and crawl to Dulcie. In her short life she has known so little of sorrow and sickness that they come now with all the force of novelty, and she shrinks back in the corner of the first class carriage like one filled with a dread of a strange foe, whose very weapons she is ignorant of.

One moment the thought of Hugh, her lost lover, sweeps over her like a cold wave of dead, numbing pain; the next the vision of Aunt Fennor, lying sick unto death, rises and drives all else from her brain. At last the train winds into the great terminus, a porter calls a cab, and she is whirled towards Caroline Street.

With faltering voice she asks the man his fare, pays the exorbitant demand without a murmur, thereby sending him away wretchedly unhappy because he had not asked another shilling, and then she knocks at the front door.

It is opened by a slipshod girl, who acts as the landlady's maid-of-all-work, and who stares at Dulcie with lack-lustre eyes, which, notwithstanding their dullness, take note of the Parisian hat and ulster.

"My aunt!" gasps Dulcie. The girl scratches her head, but before she can answer the incoherent question, a voice from above says, in hushed accents:
"Is that you, Miss Dulcie?"
And Dulcie springs noiselessly up the stairs and grasps the arm of the writer of the note.
Ever since she can remember, "Sarah" has been an institution in Mrs. Fennor's menage. She is a little round-faced woman, faithful as a Virginian slave of the old days. Ever since she can remember anything, Dulcie can remember worrying and plaguing this commonplace little woman nearly to distraction; but now she clings to her as if she were a tower of strength, and can only pant, breathlessly:
"Oh, Sarah!" so piteously, so frightenedly, that tears come into the woman's eyes.
"Don't take on, miss! I—I didn't mean to frighten you! You don't blame me for writing, miss. She wouldn't let me write to you before."
"Frighten me!" pants Dulcie.
"Then—then she is very ill!"
Sarah looks away, afraid to meet the dark, anxiously questioning eyes.
"Yes, miss," she says; "very, very ill. But," with a little smile, "while there's life, there's hope!"
"This cut and dried little proverb strikes home more surely than the most despairing announcement could do. "While there's life there's hope!" Is it not the formula which the doctor, wary and reserved, always uses when not a vestige of hope is left? Does it not always mean that nothing but despair—blank, dark despair—remains?

In Loving Memory.

Of Philip George Voke, of Dildo, T.B., Killed in Action, October 9th, 1917. I left my mother and friends I love, A cry went up for help, I volunteered to take my part, My duty to fulfill.

Our little hand called out to fight, A hand so brave and gay, But though it was not very long, When I was called away.

No mother to wet my parched lips, No father to say good-bye, None of my friends were standing near, Yet God was very nigh.

God called me to a noble band, A band of pure delight, Where saluts and angels ever sing, Nor weary day or night.

God bore my fainting spirit where He bids the weary rest, On Him who doeth all things well, For God alone gives rest.

Mother, dear, I'm gone with Jesus, Angels waited to bear me home; Leaving you, my darling mother, Leaving you, but not alone.

One little word to mother, dear, You'll not forget your boy, 'Twas for my King and country's sake I gave my life and died.

Sister, you'll find it hard to part From the brother you loved so well; But meet me in that land above, Where saints and angels dwell.

There no tears shall dim the eyes, No more shall say good-bye, Nothing shall mar our peace with God, For we shall dwell on high.

My friends I bid you all adieu, I leave you in God's care; Although we'll meet no more on earth, In heaven I'll meet you there.

But now my work is ended, I have been called to rest, And the cross of my legion of honor Has been pinned by God to my breast.

Pershing Insists on More Use of Rifles.

Criticises Americans in Trench Attacks Their Guns—Three "Positions" Taken—Troops Advance on Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt Trenches Under "Theatrical" Barrages.

(By The Associated Press.)
American Training Quarters in France, Oct. 3 (delayed).—Major Gen. Pershing to-day watched a battalion of Major Gen. Sibert's command as it stormed and took three supposed enemy trenches, which had been named Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt for the occasion. The exercise was part of a programme of battalion problems which is being carried out daily, and will be developed gradually into regimental, brigade and divisional attacks.

Besides General Pershing, several French officers witnessed to-day's manoeuvres, after which they were criticised by American and French observers and by the General himself. He said that in taking the three trenches the soldiers, he noticed, did not discharge their rifles. This he thought was a mistake.

"You must not forget that the rifle is distinctly an American weapon," said the General. "I want to see it employed. There surely will be plenty of it."

Pershing Insists on More Use of Rifles.

Discusses Americans in Trench Attacks for Failure to Discharge Their Guns—Three "Positions" Taken—Troops Advance on Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt Trenches Under "Theoretical" Barrages.

(By The Associated Press.)

American Training Quarters in France, Oct. 3 (delayed).—Major Gen. Pershing to-day watched a battalion of Major Gen. Sibert's command storm and took three supposed enemy trenches, which had been named Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt for the occasion. The exercise was part of a programme of battalion problems which is being carried out daily, and will be developed gradually into regimental, brigade and divisional attacks.

Besides General Pershing, several French officers witnessed to-day's manoeuvres, after which they were criticised by American and French officers and by the General himself. He said that in taking the three trenches the soldiers, he noticed, did not discharge their rifles. This he thought was a mistake.

"You must not forget that the rifle is distinctly an American weapon," said the General. "I want to see it employed. There surely will be plenty

There's a Reason

America can most quickly become a striking force in the war by taking the best of what the British and French have proved to be useful and effective, and basing all building programmes of the near future thereon.

In the matter of tanks, for instance, officers who have made a special study of the subject think there is much to be said in favor of both the giant British tanks and the smaller and faster French tanks. They believe that the American army should adopt both styles as an emergency measure, building them immediately while American engineers are working out what may prove to be a vast improvement over any tank now existing. There has been some disposition on the part of certain critics to belittle tanks because the Germans have made little use of them. The tank, however, is instinctively an offensive weapon, while Germany on the western front is fighting a purely defensive campaign.

Both Great Britain and France seem to be putting every possible facility at the disposition of the Americans, who are studying both styles of fighting tactics. The fact that those styles are changing constantly is one of the fascinations of the great game of war. Airplanes are also largely engaging the attention of the army in France. The real weight of the Americans in airplane construction is expected to be felt eventually in this branch of the service.

Wedding Bells.

BUTT-EDGECOMBE.

There was a very pretty wedding solemnized at Gower St. Church at 2.30 yesterday afternoon when Miss Belle Butt, daughter of Mr. Thos. Butt of the Colonial Secretary's Department, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Capt. Albert J. Edgcombe of the auxiliary battery June, owned by Messrs. Baine, Johnston & Co. The bride, who was beautifully dressed in crepe-de-chene and ninon over taffeta silk and wore a wreath of orange blossoms and veil, entered the church leaning on the arm of her father, while the choir, of which she was a member, sang "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden." Miss F. Moore, who acted as bridesmaid, was attired in pale pink crepe-de-chene, with black hat. The flower girls were Misses Margaret and Millie Butt, daughters of Mr. Herbert Butt, of Carbonar, and niece of the bride. The groom was supported by the bride's brother, Mr. Walter Butt. The officiating clergyman was Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, pastor of the church. At the conclusion of the service Mrs. Hemmeon rendered Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The party then drove to the residence of the bride's parents on Maxse Street where a reception was held, many friends being present. The bride, who was very popular, received numerous presents from friends at home and abroad. Following the wedding feast the bride and groom left for Holyrood, where the honeymoon will be spent. The Telegram wishes Capt. and Mrs. Edgcombe many years of wedded happiness.

Eczema Cured Five Years Ago.

A Treatment Which Has Proven a Wonderful Healer of the Skin—Certified Evidence of Lasting Cure.

Jordan, Ont., October 25th.—The old notion that eczema is a disease of the blood is refuted time and time again by the cures that are daily being effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment. It matters not whether the cause may have been if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment regularly you will obtain relief and cure of eczema. Here is the proof. Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "My brother had a bad case of eczema on his legs. He was troubled nearly all one fall and winter with it, and could not work for days at a time. He tried different salves and ointments, but none cured him. One day he tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it gave almost instant relief. He continued its use, but had not quite finished the second box when he was cured. It is now about five years since then, and it has never returned. We certainly can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and are very grateful for my brother's cure."

(Rev. S. F. Coffman, Vinland, Ont., states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites and the party to whom she refers, and her statements are correct.") Mr. J. E. Jones, 223 University Avenue, Kingston, Ont., writes: "I had eczema in my hand for about five years. I tried a great many remedies, but found that while some of them checked it, none cured it permanently. Finally I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment. In six weeks my hand was completely better. I would not do without a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house if it cost $2 a box. I am giving my name to this firm so that it will go to those who suffer as I did." Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers. Edgcombe, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint you. Insist on getting what you ask for.

"When passing one plate for a second helping, where should the knife and fork be placed?" asked Bob. "The knife and fork should be laid side by side on the plate with the handles together, when sending it back for a second helping," said his mother.

Halg's New Method.

(From the New York Post.)

Now, it is obvious that if Halg has indeed hit upon a new method of obtaining advances, that method consists in a new way of exploiting the artillery, for the guns still open the road for the infantry. Hitherto, therefore, the Allies have found a system of moving up their heavy guns rapidly despite the famous mud of Flanders, or else they have established such an overwhelming superiority in guns as to permit what we may call a phalanx formation, with several lines of guns one behind the other and ranges overlapping one-the other. If on the map we draw the five lines of advance marking the positions taken in the five battles east of Ypres since September 20, we find these lines roughly parallel and at a distance of about a mile apart. Now imagine that before the battle of September 20 there were drawn up behind the British front three lines of gunfire that distance apart. The rearmost line came into play on September 20. The second line came into play on September 28 against the next line of German trenches. The third line of guns came into play on October 4 against the next enemy trench line. By October 4 it is conceivable that the guns which had done their work on September 20 had been brought up and directed against the line which the Allies took on October 3. Similarly, the guns of September 26 were in place by October 2 for the effort of yesterday. It is a method which involves a tremendous superiority in artillery strength, but the Allies may well have achieved that by now.

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.

Some where in France I would like to be fighting, putting in licks for the land of the free; oh, it is woman's work, scribbling a note and writing, when there is scrapping across the blue sea! But I am fat and my whiskers are hoary, and they won't give me the least little chance; others must harvest the laurels and glory, somewhere in France, somewhere in France. When the war's over the boys will be telling, telling of valorous feats they performed; stories of marching and shooting and shelling, barricades taken and cities they stormed. I must be silent; I can't tell a story. I cannot boast of a dauntless advance; I am too fat to be gathering glory, somewhere in France, somewhere in France. Danger appeals to me, deeply I love it, but I must stick to my rusty old lyre; oh, slender soldier, your fortune I covet, here in my slippers, my feet at the fire! Gladly I'd go to the field red and gory, gladly I'd flourish the shotgun or lance; fat men, however, are barred from all glory, somewhere in France, somewhere in France.

Fashions and Fads.

Muffs are increasing in size. Sult coats have high collars of fur. The new tunic is either short or long. Satin is the approved afternoon gown.

Cloth covered buckles are frequent. There is still embroidery on skirts. A great many new blouses are headed. Small hats are very smart this season. Some of the new girdles droop at the back. Coats fall straight from the shoulders. Crepe de Chine is used for handkerchiefs. Long coats of velvet are much favored. Fur is used very sparingly on dresses. Chenille in two colors is used for hat crowns. Any coliffure that is becoming is fashionable. Muffs are made of duvetyne trimmed with fur. Mannish lines are revived in tailored suits.

Harbour Grace and Ships.

It was a good idea on the part of the Harbour Grace Shipbuilding Company to invite the visitors from St. John's who yesterday saw at first hand the work it is pushing along so energetically, and were able to obtain some idea of its extent and value. The best way to win encouragement to any deserving enterprise is to make it known. And there is no doubt of the deserving nature of this particular enterprise, or of the wisdom of giving it every possible support, even if it be no more than tactful approbation. "Shipbuilding" to-day is a magic word. The shipbuilder sits enthroned among patriots, whether his patriotism be profitable to himself or not. The Allies may be said to need three things only to ensure victory. The first is ships; the second is ships; the third is ships. The epigram is not ours, it is Lloyd George's, and Lloyd George does not waste time saying things that mean nothing. It is not far-fetched to read together yesterday's visit and the shipping losses reported to-day, which it will be seen have materially increased again. There is a direct connection between them. We here in Newfoundland can do nothing to prevent these losses, but we can do our bit, small as it is, to replace them. Every keel launched, it does not matter how small, helps towards that replacing. It is the greatest of mistakes to think that only those who do so which can directly take the place of those sunk, for the merchant fleets that are the life of the Allies to-day levy contributions upon every possible source, and if those sources are depleted by demands from other directions the fleets we speak of feel the loss in proportion. Thus, we have been congratulating ourselves upon being able to secure the services of a couple of steamers to transport our fish. It would be better to deplore the necessity, for it is likely that the ships in question have thereby been withdrawn, directly or indirectly, from functions more essential to the Allies. Every vessel launched at Harbour Grace will supply a need and help to supply a surplus in some direction, of which the benefit will be immediately felt. In this we are merely emphasizing the patriotic and paramount aspect of the matter, which relates to the present and to the near future. The benefits contained in the undertaking to the Colony itself, now and after the war, are too many and obvious to need mention. Both considerations will induce the hope in every mind that the many obstacles the Company has had to contend with will be happily surmounted, the work pushed to a speedy completion and the first keel soon glide down the ways of what we trust will be a large and valuable fleet.

GEO. M. BARR, Agt.

Dear Sir, although I am living in my 54th year I have a good healthy body and a real patriotic spirit and don't want to be denied the privilege either. This is no sham battle we are after; we have a foe to face and a hard one at that. If this foe is to be conquered, it's time we realised it and got to work. I am now at Trepassy where we have a splendid type of young men. And all that is wanting is the patriotic spirit infused in them. I have lived with these young men and I know them, men with good morals and strictly religious and very lovingly attached to their parents. Then there is the Peters River, St. Vincent and St. Mary's men, and lots of them too. My opinion of these young men after living with them and knowing them is there is not a better class to be found in our island home. I would like to see these men with their khaki suits on parading the streets of St. John's. Then we would all have to admit that all the good men have not left Newfoundland yet, and wherever these men would have a chance to pitch something would surely happen. Now, Sir, I have explained to you my intentions, I know what I am talking about and don't want to be shut down. I will call at your office when I reach town. Yours in the fight, GEO. BEST, H.M.C.

Alleged Violations of Prohibition Act.

Head Constable Noseworthy has issued a summons against the captain of a local vessel, charging him with bringing two cases of whiskey into this port, contrary to the Prohibition Law. Constable Wheelan has also taken action against a man of the Bay Bulls road for selling hop beer said to contain a greater percentage of alcohol than that allowed by law. He did not appear in court to-day, although he was supposed to. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Italy's Trial.

The news from the Austro-Italian front is but another commentary on the deplorable condition of Russia. It is only that condition which makes possible the large reinforcing of the Austrians which is reported and which we can readily believe. The German policy towards Russia has for long been obvious enough. It has consisted of pushing forward the battlefront, and there, far enough to secure big tactical advantages to Germany but not far enough to exasperate the Russians into reaction. Hence the cessation of their advance into Volhynia and of the drive from Riga. It is likely, also, that having secured possession of Oesel and Dago Islands, they will attempt nothing more in the Baltic than the firm establishment of their arms along the Gulf of Riga. This done, they can divert their forces with perfect confidence to the Italian theatre, where a menace confronts them which they appreciate thoroughly. There is no fear of Russia stabilizing them from behind; Russia's business at present is talking, not fighting.

The Telegram wishes them every success in their new field of labor.

PIKE-KNIGHT. The marriage of Rev. S. J. Pike, of Chelsea, Que., who was formerly of the N.B. Conference, and Miss G. M. Knight, this city, took place yesterday afternoon at Cochrane St. Church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Bond, assisted by Rev. P. R. Matthews of Carbonar. The full choir was in attendance and Mr. Spry presided at the organ. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Knight, William Street. Miss Edith Knight and Miss Florence Pike, cousin of the groom, were bridesmaids. The bride, whilst Mr. Josiah Marshall supported the groom as best man. The little Misses Corbett and Hodder acted the part of flower girls. The bride flew to six years ago when she left for a course at the Children's Hospital, Montreal, was a Sunday School teacher and member of the choir of the former Cochrane Street Church. Since her graduation three years ago she has had two patients, one succeeding the other, in the home of Dr. Evans, one of the best known medical practitioners of Montreal. Miss Knight also made a tour through Europe and Egypt with Lady Allan, who was lost on the Lusitania. The Rev. S. J. Pike, during his probation in the Newfoundland Conference, was stationed at Bay Bulls Arm and Port Blandford, and was most successful in the work. Mr. Pike was ordained in the Conference of June last after graduating in Theology from the Wesleyan College, Montreal. During the college course the groom was pastor of the Methodist Church at Tremholmeville, Que., where his ministry was effective to a very high degree.

Casino Theatre.

The Gladys Clark Co. won new laurels with "A Pair of Sixes" which they staged at the Casino last night before a large and appreciative audience. The piece was entirely rollicking, without a single serious moment, and kept the audience in roars of laughter throughout. The various performers ably sustained their parts, particularly Miss Hall, who made her first appearance and gave a faithful portrayal of a difficult role. The stage settings were perfect, the scenery exquisite and the specialties very entertaining. To-night the bill will be repeated and should attract another full house. To-morrow and Saturday nights "Inside the Lines" will be produced.

Digging Up Lost Friends.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A friend of mine who lives in one of the suburbs of a large city was not able to go to the country this summer, as usual. Naturally she missed the change of scene but she is one of those courageous, determined people who do not brood over disappointments, and she immediately set out to find some substitutes for the lost pleasure.

And this is one of those she found. She set out systematically to dig up some of her lost friends.

Most of us have several sets of friends.

There are a few people, of course, who live all their lives in one place and have but one set of friends. But the average person has several places, passes through different associations, and in passing through all these phases makes different sets of friends.

And then he loses them—or most of them. Perhaps they move away to some other city, or perhaps they only live across the city in some other suburb, but there is no longer any association of schooling or business to draw them together, both are busy and they never meet.

She Actually Made Out A List.

There were the sort of lost friends this woman made up her mind to dig up. Being a systematic person she actually made the list of those she cared the most about seeing again. She took them in order as they appeared in her life. There were first two or three school and college friends whom she had lost track of.

THE EDITOR

The editor is a high-salaried mechanic whose working tools are a textbook on the tariff and a wall map showing how far the Russian army can retreat without jumping off. He is given supreme control over the editorial page, and is obliged to fill it every day with forceful articles on the war which will not cause the advertising manager to throw up both hands and cry for help.

There are two kinds of editors—city and country. The city editor is the limousine variety, being able to buy a new suit every spring and fall and changing neckties with lightning-like rapidity. He is hired for his ability to unwind a long, sinuous vocabulary and wrap it around some subject which is charged up to the neck with dynamite. If the city editor can do this without losing a full page ad, and still maintain the uncompromising attitude of the paper, he is given a life job, with four hours a day off for golf.

A text book on the Tariff and a wall map showing how far the Russian Army can retreat without jumping off.

The country editor is the hardest-working individual in this community, being obliged to run the cylinder press with one hand and the post office with the other. What with hunting down the delinquent subscriber, removing the split infinitives from the country correspondence, placating the advertiser who wants to buy the front page for 8 cents an inch, and dodging the curt form letters of the first assistant postmaster general, the only recreation the country editor gets is in filling the furnace morning and night. However, country editors have more money than formerly, as they no longer accept second-growth pin oak and the Hubbard squash on subscription.

The editor is a great molder of public opinion, although some of his best molds are roughly treated on election day. One of the worst experiences an editor can have is to support some candidate for congress with a double column half-tone cut and a series of human interest editorials about his home life, and then discover two weeks before election that the candidate has two healthy wives living in New Mexico. This is so depressing to the average editor that he will drown his grief in the first bottle of vegetable compound that comes to hand.

The editor is not afraid of anything on earth except the eagle-eyed proof-reader and the educated subscriber who detects a mis-spelled word in the lower left-hand corner of the seventh page and telephones his congratulations. While editors make and unmake congressmen, senators and other public servants, they seldom run for office themselves without returning from the polls full of gaping punctures.

Fads and Fashions.

Some girales are wide and knotted on the side.

There are some very high tam o' shanter crowns.

Vonise lace is better liked than filet on blouses.

Cape effects appear on evening gowns of chiffon.

Serge is as ever the staid by practical dresses.

There are a few filet collars worn with serge frocks.

Tailored frocks appear almost mold-ered to the figure.

Black ott-cloth makes a very attractive walking hat.

Black silk embroidered in blue is a pretty combination.

White silk souches are used on pink Georgettes.

Bands of trimming are composed of narrow velvet ribbons.

One-piece robes are made which have a distinct effect of being wrapped.

Inspection of Shipbuilding

At Harbor Grace Enterprise—Bilities Predicted for the Metropolis—The Newfoundland.

Unquestionably Harbor Grace will come into its own again if the shipbuilding plant, now in course of construction there, is any criterion of its future possibilities.

Yesterday a formal inspection of the shipyard took place and the installation of Captain Annonson, Managing Director of the Newfoundland Shipbuilding Company, a number of St. John's folks as well as many prominent personages in the Secretary attended the function. To say that he appreciated what he saw would be putting it mildly, and it may be mentioned that it is almost inconceivable how the operations going on at this vast enterprise were kept such a secret. The town of Harbor Grace was dressed in holiday attire for the occasion, though the work at the plant went on as usual.

A special train left here yesterday at 10 a.m. with the following party:—Hon. Dr. Lloyd, Acting Premier; Hon. W. F. Coaker; Hon. W. W. Fairbairn; Hon. W. J. Ellis, representing the Executive Government; Mr. J. A. Munn, representing the Board of Trade; Hon. Tasker Cook, Canadian Consul; Mr. E. A. Bowring, of Bowring Bros., Ltd.; Mr. J. W. N. Johnstone, of the Reid Nfld. Co.; Mr. J. Stone, Minister of Marine and Fisheries; Mr. J. Black, Lloyd's Surveyor of Shipping; Mr. F. W. Hayward, R. Boone-C. W. Tesson, Capt. Thorburn, Mr. J. P. Blackwood, Secretary for the Company; and the post, Capt. Annonson. The press was also well represented there being present:—T. J. Moran (Daily News), F. E. Deane (Trade Review), M. J. Kean (Evening Herald), V. J. Parsons (Daily Star) and W. J. Crotty (Evening Telegram).

Harbor Grace was reached at 2:30 p.m. the party from St. John's were given a cordial reception accorded them by the people of the Metropolis who cheered lustily as the train pulled into the station. Included in the gathering assembly there were His Lordship Bishop Moran, Rev. Fr. Walker, Rev. Canon Noel, Rev. Holmes, Rev. Higgitt, Rev. Andrews, Judge Oke, E. Thompson, Mr. J. R. S. Mann, J. Casey, J. P. Duggan, W. Partridge, Jas. Cameron, J. Iron Jas. Cron, R. Chafe, H. Mearns, G. Dickson, G. Simmonds, J. King, F. Archibald, H. H. Archibald and Harry Archibald.

The entire party then proceeded by vehicle to the premises of the plant and were shown through it by Mr. C. Roscher, B.Sc., who explained the work in connection with it in detail. Though having met with many of the advertisements since the work started, some of which were numerous, Captain Annonson is most optimistic as to the future. He said "the most business" and that, on behalf of such a wealthy concern, is something to be considered. As one visitor remarked, "he believed that Harbor Grace

The undertaking is of a magnitude. Thus far over $100,000 have been expended on the work and it is expected that three times the amount will be spent by the time the first keel will be laid in January next. No expense will be spared in completing an up-to-date shipbuilding plant, one of the largest of its kind probably on this side of the Atlantic.

Inspection of Shipbuilding Plant

At Harbor Grace — A Gigantic Enterprise — Big Future Possibilities Predicted for Bay Metropolis — "The Norway of Newfoundland."

Unquestionably Harbor Grace will come into its own again if the mammoth shipbuilding plant, now in course of construction there, is any criterion of its future possibilities.

Yesterday a formal inspection of the shipyard took place and at the invitation of Captain Annonen, Managing Director of the Newfoundland Shipbuilding Company, a number of St. John's folks as well as many prominent personages in the Second City attended the function. To say that one appreciated what he saw would be putting it mildly, and it may be mentioned that it is almost inconceivable how the operations going on at this vast enterprise were kept such a close secret. The town of Harbor Grace was dressed in holiday attire for the occasion, though the work at the plant went on as usual.

A special train left yesterday at 10 a.m., with the following party:—Hon. Dr. Lloyd, Acting Premier; Hon. W. F. Coaker, Hon. W. W. Halfyard, Hon. W. J. Ellis, representing the Executive Government; Mr. W. A. Munn, representing the Board of Trade; Hon. Tasker Cook, Norwegian Consul; Mr. E. A. Bowring, of Bowring Bros., Ltd.; Mr. J. W. N. Johnstone, of the Reid Nfd. Co.; Mr. J. Stone, Minister of Marine and Fisheries; Mr. J. Black, Lloyd's Surveyor of Shipping; Mr. F. W. Hayward, R. Boone, C. W. Tessier, Capt. Thorham, Mr. J. P. Blackwood, Solicitor for the Company; and the host, Capt. Annonen. The press was also well represented there being present: T. J. Poman (Daily News), P. K. Devine (Trade Review), M. J. Kean (Evening Herald), V. J. Parsons (Daily Star) and W. J. Crotty (Evening Telegram).

Harbor Grace was reached at 2.30 p.m. the party from St. John's were given a cordial reception accorded them by the people of the Metropolis who cheered lustily as the train pulled into the station. Included in the gathering assembled there were His Lordship Bishop March, Rev. Fr. Walker, Rev. Canon Noel, Rev. Holmes, Rev. Higgett, Rev. Andrews, Judge Oke, J. Thompson, W. Ward, R. S. Mann, J. Casey, J. P. De Strapp, R. S. Maffitt, Jas. Cameron, Dr. Cron, Jas. Cron, R. Chafe, H. Martin, G. Dickson, G. Simmonds, J. Tapp, F. Archibald, H. H. Archibald and Harry Archibald.

The entire party then proceeded by vehicle to the premises of the plant and were shown through it by Mr. C. Roscher, B.Sc., who explained the work in connection with it. He detailed tactfully what had been accomplished and what the Company proposed doing, though it would be impossible to give more than a meagre description of it.

The undertaking is of surprising magnitude. Thus far over $300,000 have been expended on the work and it is expected that three times that amount will be spent by the time the first keel will be laid in January next. No expense will be spared in completing an up-to-date shipbuilding plant, one of the largest of its kind probably on this side of the Atlantic. Though having met with innumerable adversities since the work started, some of which were enumerated, Captain Annonen is most optimistic as to the future. He said "we mean business" and that, on behalf of such a wealthy concern, is something to be considered. As one visitor remarked, "he believed that Harbor Grace will be the Norway of Newfoundland within a very short time."

The area of the plant is 850 feet by 850 feet and an extension is contemplated if money can purchase the space. Within the above area the Company are planning to put shipyards, staff houses, offices, store rooms, sail lofts, electric foundries, etc., and the excavation work is now going ahead apace. Five berths will be constructed for shipbuilding, each with a capacity for 1100 ton schooners and, if necessary, can be enlarged to a degree whereby 5000 ton steel ships could be turned out and equally quickly. Wooden vessels will be made at a very reasonable cost and all local labor, skilled and unskilled, will be employed. Some time in January next shipbuilding operations are expected to commence. Between five and six hundred men will be engaged turning out at least one ship a month. In addition to this number of workmen so engaged the Company have arranged with a similar complement on the West Coast and other places to work in the forest next winter cutting timber for the lumber yards.

Everything in connection with the plant is being done on most scientific and skilful lines. Piers, stores, etc., will be constructed so as to be easy on the connection from the railroad, station and docks and there will be up-to-date facilities for making the work as light as possible. The standard size ship contemplated to be built will be 450 tons net auxiliary three masted, equipped with two 120 horse power motor engines. The keels will be laid by 14½, floor 9 by 18 and deck 10 by 12. Already the Company have orders for thirteen vessels and it is conjectured that after the keels for these are laid ships of larger dimensions will be in demand. Within the yards also will be erected smithies, machine shops, sail-lofts, etc., all conveniently situated. When the plant is running in full swing the Company cannot be impeded for want of material as they will have all modern appliances for such themselves right at hand, though up to the present they have been greatly hampered in the construction on account of the loss of their new steamer Norvig, which had on board some valuable and useful materials. Amongst other incidental setbacks the Company have had to contend with and are experiencing is the difficulty in acquiring land for their quarters, mainly on account of the rudeness of title deeds, some of which date back to a century ago. Hence it is extremely hard to find the owners of property. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that the Co. are not being accorded the treatment they should be from owners of certain antiquated property within the precincts of the plant surroundings. Immediately east of the shipyard the Company purposes to build a barrel factory for making fish packages, which will also give employment to several hundred men. The Company has now among its stock on hand $20,000 worth of locally made sail cloth, $110,000 lumber, all local product, 800 barrels of cement and a considerable quantity of galvanized stuff. Used in the lumber yard is a locomotive which cost $20,000 with a lifting capacity of over 10 tons. To contend with ice during the winter two breakwaters are being constructed. It is also very worthy of utterance that when the plant is in running order the work of building a ship will be done under cover. In that connection provision is made for the erection of a commodious factory with all kinds of facilities and the construction of it will begin shortly.

After being kindly shown over all the premises the visitors were brought to the office headquarters where they were treated with hospitality and shown plans of ships, the proposed output of the new concern. Then the party drove to "The Head," the home of the Company's staff and the former homestead of Mr. W. A. Munn, who, on behalf of the Nfd. Board of Trade, spoke at length and encouragingly of the big undertaking just inaugurated, which will be so advantageous to Harbor Grace and the whole country generally. He predicted wonderful possibilities and said that our people would be wise to bury the foolish notion that they were not rich enough. They had to keep to the promise they made to these Norwegian capitalists, the promoters of this immense project, and by their co-operation and support make it the success it ought to be and let the Bay Metropolis again enjoy what she did in the sixties. Speeches of a similar character were made by Acting Premier Lloyd, Hon. W. F. Coaker, Hon. W. J. Ellis, Dr. Strapp and Messrs. J. P. Blackwood and E. Parsons, M.H.A.

On their departure from Harbor Grace at 6 p.m., the St. John's party were again cheered enthusiastically. While en route addresses relative to the shipbuilding plant were made by the Acting Premier, Hon. Tasker Cook, W. J. Ellis, W. F. Coaker, W. W. Halfyard, and Messrs. E. A. Bowring, F. W. Hayward, J. W. N. Johnstone, M. Simmonds and Press representatives. The city was reached at 10 p.m.

A new era has dawned at Harbor Grace, due to Capt. Hannevig and his Norwegian company, which comprises Capt. Annonen, Managing Director; R. Hannevig and O. Ejerntus, Assistant Managers; C. Roosher, B.Sc., Superintendent; C. J. Largen, Mineralogist and Civil Engineer; M. B. Simonsen, Fishing Expert; C. F. Lange, Forest Candidate and H. Mohr, Lumber Expert.

MANY.

LONDON, To-day.

Great Britain's determination to fight until German militarism is crushed was emphasized yesterday by Sir Edward Carson at Portsmouth and by Lieut. Gen. Smuts at Sheffield, who, respectively they addressed meetings under the auspices of the War Aims Committee. Carson said the war had entered upon a phase where the question with Great Britain was whether we are going to prove superior in sticking power to the Germans and our other enemies. He added that Great Britain could not and would not make any peace without the concurrence and consent of her Dominions, neither would Great Britain enter into peace negotiations behind the backs of her Allies. Smuts said that to his mind there was only one great and dominating war aim, the end of militarism and the end of standing armies. Admiral Jellicoe, First Sea Lord, who also spoke at Sheffield, declared the war is all but won; we have only to set our teeth and the war will be won. Referring to the submarine warfare he said that the figures of September were good but the figures for October would not be so good.

PRaise FOR BRITISH AIRMEN.

LONDON, To-day.

In the course of his weekly talk with the Associated Press yesterday Major General F. B. Maurer, Chief Director of Military Operations at the War Office, said: It is no discredit to the British airmen that they did not bring down a single Zeppelin while the French airmen brought down five in the course of the Zeppelin visit a few days ago. No French airmen would think of comparing the task which they had of attacking Zeppelins in broad daylight, when the airships were at the end of a long flight and partially crippled, with that of the British airmen in finding and attacking them in the night while the invaders were still fresh. Incidentally it may be said that the British air service since the beginning of the war has brought down sixteen Zeppelins under conditions far more difficult than those under which the French were so successful the other day. Discussing the work of British airplanes on the west front he said: During September our bombing machines made 228 raids, dropping on the Germans 7,886 bombs, representing 135 tons of explosives. In the same period the Germans dropped almost exactly 1,000 bombs on the British. Now bombing is only part of our air operations. By far the most important work of the airmen is the destruction of the artillery. During September we made 7,694 shoots at enemy batteries under aerial observations and silenced them 1,841 in instances. During the same period the Germans only succeeded in ranging on 743 of our guns. While most of the belligerent armies have certain air heroes whom they advertise immensely and froth time to time announce the total of their victories, the British have never adopted this system. Our airmen agree that although they are in a service which appeals to the imagination of the general public, they are in no more dangerous or more vital work than their comrades in the trenches, and they do not wish their deeds noticed in any different manner from that adopted in the case of any other branch of the service. During September we engaged and brought down 274 enemy planes, and this figure errs on the side of conservatism, for our headquarters never allow airmen credit for victory unless the fall of an enemy is corroborated from either an observer on the ground or another in the air.

MARVELS OF A "Mile of Front."

Probably few of us who read of a "mile of front" have any real conception of the enormous labour and material that go to its making. For a mile of front among the swamps of Flanders, for example, with its first and second lines of trenches, its communications and breastworks, the necessary barbed wire is 900 miles in length—long enough to reach from London to Perth and back—and weighs 110 tons.

The sandbags required for its protection number six and a quarter millions. So many are they, that placed end to end they would stretch across Europe from North Cape, in Norway to Cape Matapan, the southernmost point in Greece; and their weight is more than a thousand tons.

To fill these millions of sandbags and place them in position on parapet, parapets, or dug-out, would keep five hundred industrious men hard at work for twelve months; for the average man cannot fill and place more than twenty-five sandbags in one night.

In addition to these thousands of wire and sandbags, 12,000 six-foot standards are required; 12,000 small pickets; 35,000 running feet of corrugated iron; more than a million feet of timber, and vast quantities of riveting material of various kinds.—Pearson's Weekly.

WAR SUMMARY.

General Petain's troops who made a brilliant dash northeast of Soissons on Tuesday morning, at last accounts were holding all their gains, and were meeting with no resistance except by means of bombardments. Very heavy bombardments continue. In the third sector and in the region of Hill 344 the army of the German Crown Prince delivered a violent attack against the French. The enemy succeeded in capturing a French advanced position but later as a result of a counter attack was forced to relinquish it.

In the Austro-Italian theatre large German forces have reinforced the Austrian line, and apparently a big battle is imminent over a 23-mile front from Monte Rombo, southeast through Fitch and Tolmino and thence southeast to Bainsizza Plateau which lies about ten miles northeast of Gorizia. The Berlin war office reports the capture of the northern sector of this front of positions near Fitch and Tolmino. The Germans began their offensive after intense artillery fire in which specially constructed gas shells were thrown at various places. The Italian war office says bad weather intervened during the attack and the fighting died down to some extent. The Germans obtained large numbers of reinforcements for the Austrians. They have been sent post haste from the northern Russian front where between the Dvina River and the Gulf of Riga there has been a withdrawal by the Germans over a wide front.

THE FRENCH VICTORY.

PARIS, Oct. 24. The sweeping nature of the French victory is shown in the official announcement made to-night. The statement says, north of the Aisne, German artillery was active in the sector of La Rooyes, Bovettes and in the region of Fort de Malmaison on our new front, which extends from Mont des Singes, Monkey Hill, which we have occupied in its entirety to Chavignin. It is confirmed the tanks played an important role in yesterday's attack. The number of prisoners taken since yesterday exceeds 8,000. Of the material left in our hands, which we will not be able to inventory before several days, it has been possible up to the present to count only seventy cannon, thirty-nine mine-throwers and eighty machine guns. In Champagne in the region of Monts, we successfully carried out two surprise attacks, the first northeast of Brunoy, the second at Monthaut, and brought back about 15 prisoners. As a result of a surprise attack in the Struna Valley, British troops brought back six Bulgarian prisoners, one of them an officer. The day was calm along the whole front, because of unfavourable weather.

The number of prisoners taken by the French in their attack northeast of Soissons, has reached eight thousand, the war office announces.

The Germans attempted a counter attack on the Aisne battle front during the night. In the Verdun sector the Germans made a violent attack on French positions north of Hill 344 but were beaten back by the French.

It would be hard to exaggerate the enthusiasm through the length and breadth of France yesterday. The splendid achievement of the French Army on the Aisne front, falling on the anniversary of the re-capture of Fort Douaumont by General Petain, apparently fell with all the force of surprise, for it was understood in the spring offensive the French leader would not find it advisable to resume offensive operations before the end of this year. The key to the whole ridge extending to Craonne was captured, and the French from their new positions are now able to enfilade the German positions not only along the Chemin des Dames line, but at Anny le Chateau, and to direct their fire directly along the valley to Laon. According to Marcel Hutin, of the Echo de Paris, yesterday's victory brings out five main points: First, that the enemy nowhere on the West front has been able to take the initiative since February, 1916; second, the enemy continues in a state of inferiority; third, he has been obliged repeatedly to withdraw his lines between St. Quentin and the Alliette; fourth, he has been beaten in Flanders and forced to give ground; fifth, he will be forced to resign himself to another strategic movement rearwards if he wishes to escape disaster. M. Hutin, in this connection, says: French aviators have reported seeing in Laon trees sawed through and villages demolished. The writer concludes that he is convinced the victory just gained is but the prelude to decisive actions which will be carried out with clockwork regularity, characteristic of General Petain's methods.

INCREASE IN SHIPPING LOSSES.
LONDON, Oct. 24. An increase in the loss of British merchantmen through mines and submarines is noted in the Admiralty reports for the current week. Seventeen vessels of over 1,000 tons, and eight under 1,000 tons were sunk. In the previous week 12 British merchant vessels of over 1,000 tons and 6 under, and one fishing vessel was sunk.

ENEMY ATTACKS REPULSED.
LONDON, Oct. 24. The official communication issued

Leon Mellows, Sinn Fein revolutionist leader is under arrest, no announcement was forthcoming as to what their inquiry had brought forth. That other arrests are pending, however, was intimated by high officials of the service. Meanwhile an examination of the papers seized when Baron Dr. Max Von Recklinhausen, a German associate of Mellows, was taken in custody, was being completed to determine more fully Recklinhausen's connection with Irish revolutionary activities in the States. In announcing the German's arrest, W. J. Flynn, Chief of the Secret Service, stated these papers contained information of great value to the American Government. It is believed the papers furnished the secret service men with many new trails to follow.

THE FRENCH CRISIS.

PARIS, Oct. 24. The press receives with anything but enthusiasm the effort of Premier Painleve to escape from his difficulties by a change in the Foreign portfolio. It is not expected that the present Cabinet will remain in power for any great length of time, and on the part of many it is not wished. The Socialists and Radicals have decided to continue to support the Ministry, but united Socialists who also held a meeting were non-committal. The Premier apparently does not intend to appoint another Minister of State in place of J. Louis Barthou, who yesterday was appointed Foreign Minister, so that the ministry will be reduced from 19 to 18 members. The first intention was a drastic readjustment with an increase in the number of ministers. Several of the new members were to have been Socialists. The choice of M. Barthou is welcomed unreservedly only by the most moderate commentators. Public opinion does not grasp the meaning of this, and will seek to find what lies behind it. If no explanation is found, one which is more serious will be imagined.

SHIPS BLOWN UP.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 24. The Danish Foreign Office reports that the Danish steamers Anglodane, 808 tons, and Flynderborg, 1,400 tons, bound from England for Denmark, have been blown up by mines in the North Sea. One man on board the Anglodane was killed.

KERENSKY TO RELINQUISH HIS POST.
PETROGRAD, Oct. 24. The newspapers state that Keren-

THE PATRONAGE LIST.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24. The Government has decided to abolish the patronage list in every department. The announcement is contained in an official memorandum issued to-day.

You're Billious! Let "Cascarets" Liven Liver and Bowels

Don't stay headachy, constipated, sick, with bad breath and stomach sour.

Get a 10-cent box now. You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach or have a bad cold. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

With the Volunteers.

The following recruits signed the roll at the recruiting stations yesterday:
At the West End Station. Jno. M. Sinclair, St. John's. Jno. Johnson, St. John's. Hy. Shaw, St. John's.
At the East End Station. Jas. Blake, Flat Island, B.B. Chas. Johnson, St. John's.
Owing to weather conditions there has been practically no shooting at the South Side Barrage for the past few days, but no time is being lost as the maintenance range at the Highlanders' Armoury is kept busy. Since the recruiting stations have been reopened 20 recruits for the Regiment were signed up at the East End station and 18 at the West End station, while at the latter place eight have enlisted for the Forestry Companies. The percentage of passos of those offering for the Regiment is very satisfactory. A number of young men who were previously rejected for some slight physical defects passed easily the new medical test.

Fighting For Themselves.

New York Sun: Harry Lander, who has put off the matter of the clown to take up the task of rousing American enthusiasm in the way to which he gave the life of his only son, ends one of his speeches thus: "America will know all about the war when the first convoy brings back the men who will never see again, the men who will never walk again, the men who will never speak again. That's when America will realize what she's up against. "Don't think you're coming to fight for Britain, for France, for Belgium. You're coming to fight for yourselves, by God!"

Poser for Mamma.

Little Johnny, aged six, was, like many young gentlemen of his age, wonderfully inquisitive, and this "spirit of inquiry" his mamma did not at all approve of. "Johnny," said mamma one evening, when the young hopeful had completely exhausted her patience, "if you ask me another question I will send you to bed without any supper." This ultimatum was soon disregarded, and Johnny was packed off to bed. Later, his mother repented. After all, she reflected, children obtain most of their knowledge by asking questions. So she tiptoed upstairs, knelt beside his bed, and told him she was sorry. "And now, Johnny, dear," she continued, "if there is anything you would like to ask before you go to sleep I will try to answer it." "Yes, mamma," said the thoughtful young hero; "how far can a cat spit?"—Tit-Bits.
