CHAPTER XIX.
ON THE TRAIL OF THE ANTELOPE

To business we love we rise betimes
And go to't with delight.—ANTONY and CLEOPATRA.

The morning broke with a thousand hues that lighted up the flower bedecked prairie as a cathedral pavement is lighted up by the reflection of the stained windows.

At six o'clock Laurence and Cecil had started.

The boy looked well enough this morning, with a bright flush on his soft cheeks and a joyous look in his deep, dark eyes.

Laurence seemed as grave as usual, and with the exception of a cold nod when Cecil ventured up to him he had taken no notice of him.

Laurence was not a man to waste words even in asking after another's health. He could see that the youth was better and spared himself the inquiry.

Cecil was silent, too; but happy, wonderfully and mysteriously happy, and his head was thrown back with that peculiar air of freedom which one unconsciously wears when the heart is light and the blood properly circulating through the veins.

Cecil was young, though not so young as he looked, and whatever troubles he may have had affected him lightly.

With his companion it was different.

The edge of the high hills was reached before he spoke, and then Laurence broke the silence.

"Why do you not ride oftener, Cecil?" he asked, in his grave, deep tones, looking approvingly at the fearless, graceful bearing of the youth so firmly seated upon his horse.

He colored and cast his eyes down.

"I—I haven't overmuch time for riding, Laury," he said, in his sweet, feminine voice, inexpressively sweet after the full, ringing tones of the man. "My books require keeping, not playing with."

"You keep them too much," replied Laury, curtly. "Give them and yourself a holiday now and then."

Cecil shook his hair, which had been short when he came to the Corner, but had grown with marvelous rapidity and hung in natural half ringlets beneath his collar.

"What would become of the Corner if the books were neglected? You forget I have the past to catch up with. I do bother with 'em in my mind sometimes; but I must do my duty. You told me that you know?" And he looked up at his companion's face inquiringly.

"True; yet I did not tell you it was your duty to work your face sad and your heart heavy," replied Laurence.

"Never fear," replied the youth;

"I've done neither. 'Look at me!' he exclaimed, with a silvery laugh. 'Do I look white-faced or heavy-hearted?'" Laurence half turned and looked at him, and was struck by his beauty—for it was nothing more or less.

"You are a good-looking boy," he said, quietly, and with his sad smile, "but dreadfully green. Come, use your spurs—we have far to ride," and he urged his black with a word into a swifter pace.

Cecil, who had cowered and shrank back under the gaze and the speech, obeyed and they flew forward.

"What are we going for this morning?" he asked, presently.

"Deer," replied Laurence.

"Oh, is that all?" said Cecil. "I thought Mr. Stewart said we were to hunt."

Laurence smiled faintly.

"And is not antelope-stalking hunting?" he asked; "or do you want larger and fiercer game? Why, lad, what can such a wee morsel of humanity care for rougher sport?"

"Wee morsels are no less brave than you great, hulking fellows are, let me tell you, Mr. Laury," he said, with a defiant laugh. "Antelope, indeed! Why, I'd as soon follow the Dale hounds!"

Laurence pulled up his horse with a sudden jerk. The clatter of the horses' hoofs must have given the lad's words the wrong sound, surely.

"What hounds did you say?" he asked, almost sternly.

"What hounds? Why, any hounds," retorted the lady, quickly, but with an averted face. "I said I would as soon follow hare-hounds as gallop down antelope. I wanted an elephant, a lion, or a tiger, with a skin like the one you were kind enough to give me."

Laurence, who had again put spurs to his horse, smiled grimly.

"You have a big heart for such a small body," he said, with easy good nature. "Keep that beast of yours to it, and if we come across the game you seem so anxious for, lad, we will try our hands at it."

They rode on in silence for some little time, when suddenly Laurence stopped and, flinging himself from the saddle, commenced scanning the ground.

"What is it?" asked Cecil.

Laurence held up his hand.

"No talking now," he said. "The herd have passed this way; they have gone to a well, down south yonder, to drink. We must go round," and he leaped into the saddle again.

Cecil's eyes flashed and his breath came fast, but mindful of the injunction, he kept his lips closed and followed Laurence, who was now making in a circuitous way for the place he had indicated with his finger.

After a quarter of an hour's ride they came upon a patch of forest. Laurence held up his finger to enforce silence and checked his steed. Cecil, following him, did the same and, obeying a gesture, came to his side.

Laurence took the spare gun he had brought and held it out to the lad.

But Cecil turned rather pale and shook his head.

The cattle-runner smiled grimly, as if he would say "Where is your courage now?" and was about to take it back; but the youth flushed up at the hint and caught the rifle.

Laurence nodded curtly and, with his own in his right hand, went on again.

When they had got within the wondrously beautiful forest of trees and creeping plants that laced and interlaced each other with fairy-like grace and color, he dismounted, and, throwing the bridles over the horses' neck—they required no other securing—he dropped on his hands and knees and crawled with the swiftness and noiselessness of an Indian toward the pool of silvery-like water at which he knew he should find his game.

Cecil, more slowly but with a faster-beating heart, followed in like manner.

Presently, after a few yards, Laurence stopped and, pulling away some drooping branches, pointed with his finger.

Cecil approached, and looking through the cleared space felt that delicious sensation of delight which only those have experienced who have crept upon their first herd of antelopes.

There they were, a herd of a hundred or more, splendid, noble creatures, graceful and fleet of foot, drinking with that cautious, watchful air native to their species.

Cecil almost fancied they would hear and take flight at the beating of his heart. It seemed to him to click with the noise and regularity of a clock.

Laurence bent his lips to the youth's ear.

"Who's to have the first shot?" he asked, carelessly.

Cecil's lips trembled.

"Me, please!" he murmured, disregarding grammar.

Laurence nodded and smiled.

"You must not miss," he whispered "Wait here, and I will drive them for you," and he crept away noiselessly.

Presently Cecil heard the whizz of a stone and saw it fall behind the herd.

Never guessing that the stone could have come from any direction save the one in which it had dropped at their backs, they raised their heads with a startled gaze and sniffing—of course, Laurence and Cecil were to windward of them—led to the forest and to the muzzle of the deadly rifle.

Cecil waited, half blind with excitement, until the foremost antelope had passed his ambush, then fired; but he could not see with what success. Before the smoke had cleared away the sharp crack of Laurence's rifle rang in the air and a noble buck leaped in the air and then dropped dead.

Cecil sprang to his feet; but Laurence's warning voice caused him to drop again, and the next moment there came another crack of the rifle and another buck bit the dust.

Then Laurence came from out his hiding-place and called the lad.

"Well," he said, mockingly, "where's your game?"

Cecil colored.

"I don't know," he said; "I didn't see—Here, take your nasty gun!" and gave it to him with a vexed pout.

Laurence smiled again.

"But," he said, "don't be discouraged, Cecil, lad; it was your first shot, I know. Come, own it—you never had a gun in your hands before?"

The youth looked up with a sharp glance.

"You're wrong, you see—I have," he said, and with a sudden change of color, this time almost to a pallor, knelt down to look at the slain bucks.

Laurence secured the skins and cut some steaks. The rest of the carcasses were left to the bird scavengers, who were already darkening the air.

They found the horses where they had left them and, after disposing of the skins behind Laurence's saddle, they mounted and rode on.

"Where are we going now?" asked Cecil.

"To the hut that lies three miles further on, to dine and stow the skins," said Laurence.

They skirted the forest and made for the prairie again, riding on until

The new flavour

Wouldn't it be worth your while to try the one and only H.P. Sauce?

they came to a low range of barren hills, where at the foot of it, half sheltered by a few trees and commanding a fine view of the immense flowered slope, stood a small rough, wooden hut.

They stopped here, and Laurence, unfastening the door, told Cecil to alight.

The youth, with eager curiosity, jumped to the ground and ran to the door.

Looking in he saw that the interior of the hut contained a rough deal table, a block of wood for a chair, some tin and iron cooking pans, and a lantern. Several pegs were driven round the walls for guns and clothing, and in a corner a heap of dry underbrush and hay were thrown.

Laurence stowed the skins in a corner and then said:

"Come in, lad, and sit down; the lions will take their rest."

The youth came in and still looked round him.

"What a romantic, queer little place!" he said. "It is like Robinson Crusoe's cave. Who does it belong to—who occupies it?"

"Yes," said Laurence. "This I call my den. It is too good a one for such a 'bear' as I am—eh, lad?"

Cecil turned away with a vexed air.

"You will never forget that foolish word of mine, Laury, he said, almost sorrowfully.

"Tut, tut, Cecil!" retorted Laurence, with a smile; "I did not mean to vex you. Here, come and help me turn the steaks, and I'll get you some water. I suppose you haven't got over your dislike to strong liquor yet?"

Cecil shook his head with a merry laugh.

"No," he said, turning the steak; "I can't a-bear your nasty brandy. Get me the water, there's a good Laury."

Laury rose and, can in hand, left the hut.

No sooner had he gone than the youth sprang from his knees and gazed devoutly round at every inch of the hut.

"His house, his home—poor, sad Laury!" he murmured. "And yet I—I would give something to share it with him," he added, with a blush, and fell to the steaks again.

Laurence returned.

"Here's the water, and as clear as crystal. And the steaks, lad—are they done? Tush, you have burned one! 'Twould serve thee right to make thee eat it."

But he took it on his own iron plate, and picked out the tenderest and best for Cecil who, after an unheeded remonstrance, fell to heartily.

Supreme Court Judgment.

Bay-de-Verde Election Petition Case.

In the matter of the Election Act 1918 and the amendments thereof; and in the matter of an Election of two Members for the House of Assembly for the Electoral District of Bay de Verde holden on the 3rd day of November, 1919 and in the matter of the Election Petition for the said District.

Between Albert E. Hickman, Petitioner and William H. Cave, Respondent.

The petition herein sets forth "that the petitioner was one of the candidates for election in the House of Assembly at the election for two members for the House of Assembly for the Electoral District of Bay de Verde holden on the 3rd day of November, 1919. That he was duly qualified as candidate for the said Electoral District of Bay de Verde and entitled to be elected a member of the House of Assembly for the said district. That on the 4th day of November, the ballots cast at the said election were counted at Western Bay in the aforesaid district by Isaac King the returning officer and the said Isaac King upon counting the said votes found the following votes cast for the following candidates:—

Fred P. LeGrow 1207
William H. Cave 1198
Albert E. Hickman 1193
and thereupon declared the said Fred P. LeGrow and William H. Cave duly elected members for the House of Assembly for the said district and endorsed a return to that effect on the election writ and returned the said writ to H. M. Colonial Secretary. The petitioner complains that the said return is an undue return upon the grounds set forth in the petition and claims that certain votes objected to by him should be excluded in the computation and that a majority of the valid votes was cast in his favor. He therefore prays that the return be set aside, that a scrutiny be allowed of the votes given and that he be declared a duly elected member for the said district. Six grounds of objection are set forth in the petition, the first being that certain persons not competent to vote voted and that their votes were counted, whose names were not on the list of electors entitled to vote at the said election, nor upon the supplementary list of electors. Section 68 of the Election Act provides that:

"Any duly qualified voter whose name has been omitted from the list of registered voters may attend at the booth and claim the right to vote. Upon his answering upon oath such questions touching his qualification to vote as may be prescribed by rules to be made by the Governor-in-Council and published in the Royal Gazette, and put to him by the Deputy Returning Officer that the applicant is qualified he shall be admitted to vote and his name entered on a separate list and his qualifications to vote shall be subject to enquiry and determination by the Court in the event of a trial of a controverted election."

A number of persons presented themselves at the polling booth for the district of Bay de Verde held at the King George V Institute at St. John's and claimed to be duly qualified electors entitled to vote for the district of Bay de Verde. As their names were not upon the register it was the duty of the returning officer to swear them as to qualification and put to them the questions appointed for that purpose. He explains that in cases where he knew the person and had no doubt as to his being a duly qualified elector he admitted him to vote without swearing him as to qualification and without asking the prescribed questions. This constitutes a serious neglect of duty on the part of the officer, but the question we are here concerned with is whether the neglect of the officer to do what the statute directed him to do invalidates the vote of the elector. As the officer by the fact of claiming a vote must be taken to have offered himself to be sworn, he is in no way culpable. Had the officer refused to take his vote it is clear that he could have enforced his right to vote if he was a duly qualified elector. This he would have done by notifying the returning officer of the candidate for whom he desired to vote, and having done this he would have been entitled to have his vote subsequently recorded as it had then been given. It would appear that as the law affords this remedy to a voter where there has been a wrongful refusal by the returning officer, and as it would be unreasonable for him to be put in a worse position by the officer's neglect than he would have been by refusal, he ought not to be deprived of the right which was admitted by the returning officer although admitted before proper preliminaries had been complied with by the officer, he having properly concluded that they were unnecessary because he believed himself qualified from personal knowledge to certify the bona fides of the voter. We have read the section as directory and have admitted evidence as to the voters qualification. The result of the evidence has been that we are satisfied that of the twenty-eight votes attacked by the petitioner on the ground that the voter was not upon the electors list nor upon any supplementary list of qualified electors, viz.—John Whalen, John G. Reynolds, Silas Thistle, Samuel Butt, James B. Evans, George Cooper, William Thistle, R. J. Crum-mev, George Keats, James Mulley, George Budden, Henry T. King, Thomas King of James, Emanuel Butt, Douglas Wicks, Walter LeGrow, Elsie B. Day.

Of the remaining voters in this class eight have not been identified, namely:—William K. King, Henry J. King, John K. King, William J. King, Willis Whalen, Thomas Cave, William J. King, Vickers Riddies, and three votes are from persons non-resident in the district, namely:—Charles Moore, Eli Wheeler, Walter Turner. Therefore these eleven ballots must be looked at. One voter named in this class George Keats will be presently referred to by twenty-six of the petitioners these eleven ballots must be dealt with class 5.

The second ground of objection charges infamy at the time of the election. The petitioner has shown that three voters were permitted to vote, namely:—Willy M. Hudson, Adam Flight, George W. Parsons.

These votes must be taken out. The third objection touches the question of mental competency, and only one voter is affected by it. After hearing medical testimony we ordered the striking out of the vote of Aaron Moore.

The fourth class objected to comprises persons who had not resided in Newfoundland for two years preceding the election. We found that the following were duly qualified, namely:—James S. Crummen, John J. Moore, George W. Davis. Of the remaining nine Eli Wheeler, Walter Turner and Charles Moore have already been dealt with in class 1. We also disallow the votes of William T. Whalen, Ernest Whalen, Simeon James Tilley, Robert Hudson, Wilfred Hudson, Henry Evans.

The fifth ground of objection affects six votes because the voters were not actually and bona fide residents in the district at the time of the election. We find Simeon James Tilley a duly qualified elector, but we allow the objection to the votes of Apollis Taylor, Fred B. Parsons, James Barrett, James B. Evans, George Keats. Although the respondent's objections to the petitioner's challenges are allowed and view by the trial Judges of their ballots and the counterfoils is necessary.

In exercise of the right allowed in the petition praying that the respondent brought in a recriminatory list consisting of four classes. The first of these contains the names of Adam Flight, Willy M. Hudson and Daniel McCann, all of whom are objected to because each voter was under the age of twenty-one years. The votes of Adam Flight and Willy M. Hudson have already been declared void on the petitioner's case and the evidence before us shows Daniel McCann to be of full age and a duly qualified elector.

The second class contains the names of voters who the respondent claims were not for the two years preceding the election resident in this Colony and were not actually and bona fide residents in the district of Bay de Verde at the time of the preparation of the list of electors. Five names appear on this list. The respondent's objection is sustained in the case of Robert Murray of Lower Small Point, Charles Murray of Adam's Cove and Ebenezer Green, Jr. of Old Perlican. William T. Whalen has already been dealt with as a member of the respondent's class and Joseph Joyce is a duly qualified elector.

In the third class are the names of two voters: John M. Murray, Adams Cove, Abram Sapp, Lower Adam's Cove, objected to as aliens. John M. Murray is a British subject and duly qualified elector; Abram Sapp, who is of foreign birth and has not been naturalized, was a member of the Newfoundland Regiment and served overseas. By the Act, Sec. 1 Cap 15 of 1919 it is provided "that notwithstanding anything in the Election Act, 1918, or in any other Act, every volunteer as defined by this Act shall be competent to vote at any poll taken during the present year for the election of members of the House of Assembly in and for the district within which he resided at the time of his enlistment and if he did not reside at any place within the Island at the time of his enlistment then in and for the district within which he resides at the day of polling." Volunteer is defined as any person who has served outside of this Colony during the present year as a member of the Newfoundland or Royal Naval Regiment and who was either born in this Colony or was a resident thereof at the time of his enlistment.

The words of the statute are comprehensive neither alienage nor infamy disqualifies a member of the Regiment who has served overseas. Sapp resided in the district at the time of his enlistment and also at the time of the election. His vote is therefore valid.

In class 4 the respondent gives the names of persons whose votes are objected to on the ground that they are void because the voters were guilty of bribery. It is not necessary to recite the names of all the voters mentioned in this list, because in a number of cases no evidence whatever has been produced and therefore the votes must stand unimpeached. Four persons are named as having travelled on railway passes, but the evidence does not satisfy us that they were guilty of bribery" or that their votes are affected. Amongst those charged with bribery is Martin White. It appears that Thomas Rose of Perry's Cove, was promised by Mr. Whiteway, a candidate and colleague of the petitioner, that his house would be hired as a polling booth. Another booth was subsequently taken and Rose, who was aware of this and had not prepared his house, deposes that before polling day Martin White, a neighbor, gave him $5.00 in place of the $5.00 which he would have been paid for the hire of his house as a booth. White, who was called as a witness, says that he is a poor man, but that he gave this money out of his own pocket and does not expect anybody to reimburse him. Rose proves that before polling day he had a visit at a late hour of the night from Samuel A. Case, who offered him a few dollars in place of the booth taken from him and that he refused to accept the money; that Case then asked him if Martin White had seen him and upon his replying in the affirmative, Case said, "I suppose that is all right." Case denies offering Rose money but admits visiting Rose on the Thursday night before the election. Case is an employee of the petitioner, spent several days before polling day in the district and had been active in promoting the petitioner's interest; he was charged by one voter with intimidation. The circumstances are extraordinary and stood unexplained. The promise of the booth, both by Whiteway, the payment of the $5.00 by White for the non-fulfillment of that promise, and the interference of Case taken together convince us that the whole transaction is tainted with illegality. The giving of the money affects White's vote and its acceptance by Rose has the like effect upon his. (The Boston Case 1 Peck, 434, 435.) The petitioner gave Stewart Parsons a voter of Freshwater, an allocation of $20.00 against the special grant to be expended on a road from the main line to his house. The land between the main road and the house was Parsons' property. This allocation delivered at Freshwater in October before nomination day was forwarded by Parsons to the Public Works Department, which issued the cheque for $20.00, and posted it to Stewart Parsons. Parsons deposes that it did not reach his hands.

Leonard Parsons applied to the Petitioner a few days before the election for $30.00 to dig a well on his own land and received a cheque dated the 24th October from the Public Works Department, which he cashed before polling day. He did not dig the well. Thomas Trickett (of Ellijah) received an allocation for $40.00 which he sent to the Board of Works and in return obtained a cheque for $20.00 which he cashed him on the 24th. of October. He had applied for this money to one Isaac King and obtained this allocation through Hickman from King. The witness says that he promised Isaac King that if he got something for him he would vote for the man who would give it to him. He refers to King as Hickman's man and says he promised him to vote for him. He also says that the petitioner saw him before polling day and enquired if he had received the money. The petitioner gave evidence himself and swore that he had given the money to King with corrupt intent. He admitted that when he went to the district on his election campaign he took with him a quantity of blank forms of the Public Works Department and that he filled out a number of them to be sent to the Department where they would have to be countersigned by the Minister before cheques issued. The petitioner was at the time a member of the Executive Council and had represented the district of Bay de Verde during the last term of the House of Assembly. He had already been concerned in the allocating or appropriating of district moneys until a short time previous to his nomination at the last election.

It has neither been charged nor shown that the petitioner was a party to any corrupt bargain affecting the purchase or sale of a vote such as would have rendered him guilty of bribery at common-law. His conduct, however, has to be judged in relation to the provisions of the statute amendments made to that law. It is provided by our Election Act that:

"(1) Every person who shall directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person on his behalf, give or lend or agree to give, or lend, or shall offer, promise, or promise to procure any money or valuable consideration to or for any voter, or to or for any other person on behalf of any voter, or to or for any other person in order to induce any voter to vote or refrain from voting, or shall corruptly do any such act as aforesaid on account of such voter having voted or refrained from voting at any election.

"(2) Every person who shall directly or indirectly by himself, or by any other person on his behalf, procure or procure, or agree to give, or procure, or offer, promise or promise to procure to procure or endeavor to procure any office, place or employment to or for any voter, or to or for any person on behalf of any voter, or to or for any other person, in order to induce such voter to vote or refrain from voting, or shall corruptly do any such act as aforesaid, on account of any voter having voted or refrained from voting at any election, shall be deemed to be guilty of bribery."

Commenting on this section in the Trinity case, Mr. Justice Little observed that: "It is to be stated that the section draws a distinction between money given or a payment made before and a payment made after the vote has been given."

That judgment dealt with allocations or appropriations of public moneys made by a candidate who, like the petitioner here, had been representative of the district and a member of the Executive Council. "It is not always," said the learned judge, "that such patronage as we find to have been vested in the respondents would have been so fairly exercised. Their honesty has not been impugned, no dollar of the moneys over which they assumed control appears to have been appropriated by them to other than public objects and purposes. Practice and custom it was alleged sanctioned their action in dispensing the moneys of their old district. But it must be remembered it was to be changed the old state and condition of things that our new laws were adopted and that what was the matter of practice or was customary before, must, if opposed to the terms of the statute, cease and determine and be regarded as no longer permissible under the express and prohibitory terms of our laws." "If the act of the candidate affects, or is calculated to affect that freedom and equality which should exist in relation to the votes of the electors, it comes within the operation of the statute notwithstanding the innocency or ignorance of the party by whom or for whom the moneys are apportioned by candidates out of the funds of the district immediately preceding the nomination of the candidates" was in that case as in other cases tried in this Court held to be a breach of the statute.

Conformably to the law laid down in this Court in the several election cases heard and determined since the passing of the Election Act we feel compelled to hold that the allocations made to and accepted by these parties, namely, Stewart Parsons, Leonard Parsons and Thomas Trickett are in contravention of the Act and consequently that their votes must be regarded as bribed votes.

The conclusion we have arrived at upon the recriminatory case of the respondent is that under his second ground of objection (non-residence) three ballots, namely, those of Robert Peach, Charles Murray and Ebenezer Green, Jr., are invalid and that upon his fourth ground of objection, voters "guilty of bribery," five ballots are invalid, namely, those cast by Martin White, Thomas Rose, Stewart Parsons, Leonard Parsons and Thos. Trickett. Further, as the evidence elicited upon this enquiry has disclosed the fact that the bribery with which Stewart Parsons, Leonard Parsons and Thomas Trickett are charged by the recriminatory case was committed by the petitioner himself we shall be prevented if a majority of lawful votes should appear in his favor, from certifying that he was duly elected.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE MAN WHO KEPT HIS TOOLS SHARP.

RUTH CAMERON

A letter friend wants to hear some more about the man who kept his tools sharp. I wrote about him some weeks ago—a man who did not have a remarkable personality or charm of manner to start with but who by developing and keeping in good condition every asset he did have, and strengthening himself at points where he was weak, became a wonderfully self-contained and gracious personality and a successful business man.

My letter friend wants me to tell more about his methods in detail, especially how he overcame his natural shyness "of the kind that alternately talks too much and is tongue tied" and learned to talk just enough and listen just enough.

Developments like that are hard to describe because they are the result of individual self-study and self-improvement, but so far as I can give his methods, here they are:

He Bought a Book of Etiquette.
He got a book of etiquette and studied it thoroughly, so that he should never be embarrassed by not knowing what to do.

He stopped reading just novels and short stories and took to reading articles and biographies, and so forth, which give a man a full background so that he is able both to listen intelligently on many subjects and to contribute something himself.

He made a resolution not to talk about himself unless people happened to be especially interested in something he could tell them, but to draw people out to talk of what they were most interested in. This had the double value of making people enjoy his company—for whose company do we ever enjoy more than that of the person who has shown an intelligent interest in our hobby and given us the feeling that we have talked well—and of giving him still more background of information.

He Never Interrupted.
He never interrupted and tried never to think of what he was going to say next while the other fellow was talking.

He tried to sensitize himself to people's moods (he was a traveling man) so that he could know how to handle prospective customers. He studied people and tried to analyze just what there was in the people of the best breeding that set them apart from the rest and to cultivate their ways.

He Learned to Express Himself.
He went to night school and perfected his handwriting and his ability to express himself well in the written and spoken word.

And lastly, he came to realize and to live more fully the great truth that the only sure way to overcome shyness and awkwardness is to cultivate so much genuine interest in others that you will not be always thinking about yourself and the impression you are making.

Sensitive Soul.

(From the New York Evening Post.)
Every seat in the trolley was occupied, when a woman got in. Going through the car to collect the fares, the conductor noticed a man asleep. Seizing him by the shoulder he proceeded to shake him back into a state of consciousness.

"Wake up!" shouted the conductor. "I wasn't asleep," said the passenger.

"Not asleep!" snapped the conductor. "Then what did you have your eyes closed for?"

"It was because of the crowded condition of the car," explained the passenger. "I just hate to see women standing."

BATTERED KNEE.

Little Buddy Batteredknee! That is what your name should be. Never were a pair of knees such a sorry sight as these.

Cut and bruised and sadly hurt. Red with blood and black with dirt. "Come, I say," and "let me see!" But you stand and grin at me.

Surely you have suffered pain. Scars so ugly to obtain! There's the record, plain as day, You have tumbled on the way; Six or seven places there Carry wounds you've had to bear. Grinning? What is there to please in so sad a pair of knees?

Proud of them? You seem to be! Do they mark some victory? Did you cry or did you not? When you won that fearful spot? What about this cut right here? Did that start a little tear? Not at all! What's that you say? "All the boys' knees look this way!"

Little Buddy Batteredknee, That is what your name should be. Never have I ever seen Knees so battered and unclean, Yet when I would sympathize You display them as a prize. And you proudly tell us now: "They're not girl's knees, anyhow!"

Flirting With Death.

(From The St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

An appalling number of people are killed or injured every year in automobile accidents, most of which are caused by careless driving. The saddest thing about the accidents is that the innocent suffer with the guilty. When a fine stretch feels a strong temptation to "give her the gas," but the wise driver does not follow the impulse to the danger point. Though the road looks safe, the dangers in front of a speeding car may be many. The width of the road, the curves and the traffic must be considered. What is safe speed at one place may be dangerous speed a short distance ahead. A driver ought to have regard for the safety of those riding with him and of others using the road. Otherwise he will sooner or later learn a lesson, perhaps at the expense of life and limb. When someone is killed or maimed, reckless driving becomes a tragedy instead of a joke, and the driver must feel that he is guilty of murder, even though he escapes the penalty of the law.

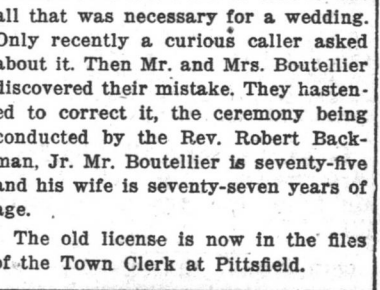

Another Strike.
The cost of ink drives men to drink, or would, if there were liquor; and paper pads demand the seeds till birds grow sick and sicker. I bought some wire to fix my lyre, for it was badly busted; and oh, the price! It must suffice to say that I'm disgusted. And so the song I pass along costs more in its production; and if I fail to draw more kale, I'm facing black destruction. The wreath I wear around my hair, of laurel, you remember, costs twice the sum that wreaths less bum were sold for last September. The cost of feed for my winged steed would break the village banker, and I must raise the price of lays or lose my windward anchor. A fountain pen costs iron men, and makes the wallet lighter; the kopecks fly, for I must buy a ribbon for my 'writer. Ten cents a yard for any bard was fair remuneration before the craze of later days came down upon the nation. But now I hold that lyrics bold should bring a higher figure; I ask you, gents, for fifteen cents, or I shall strike with vigor.

The Humorous Aspect.
(From The Toronto Star.)
There is such an element of humor, for those who know the facts, in Secretary Daniels' revelations before the United States Senate Naval Investigating Committee that it is almost a misfortune that we are a friendly nation. For we are thereby barred by good taste from commenting upon the administration, strategy, and achievements of the navy of our associates. Comment, however, may be safely left to their own professional fighting men, for no group of professionals will endure being made to look ridiculous in the eyes of all the other professional of the world. Also the "helpless and panic" speech of President Wilson, with the advice about destroying the German submarine nests, may be passed over. For it could not be expected that a landsman, and the burdened executive of a great nation, could inform himself of such minor details as the defenses of the Bight of Heligoland, and the impossibility of destroying by a naval force the submarine yards and bases at Heligoland, Emden, Wilhelmshaven, Brunsbuttel, Vagesack, Bremen, Hamburg, and Kiel. Besides, it adds to the gaiety of the nations, for the advice had all the humor of the film in which Charlie Chaplin ends the war by capturing the Kaiser.

Stranger Than Fiction.
Great Barrington, Mass., May 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Peter Boutellier, who have lived happily on a farm near Great Barrington for forty-five years, during which time they reared a family and became grandparents were married last week upon a marriage license issued to them at Pittsfield in 1875.

The license had hung in a gilt frame on the wall of their parlor during the entire period. At the time it was issued he had been in this country only a short time and believed that it was all that was necessary for a wedding. Only recently a curious caller asked about it. Then Mr. and Mrs. Boutellier discovered their mistake. They hastened to correct it, the ceremony being conducted by the Rev. Robert Backman, Jr. Mr. Boutellier is seventy-five and his wife is seventy-seven years of age.

The old license is now in the files of the Town Clerk at Pittsfield.

Extra Postal Taxation.

The first move toward extra taxation on the general public has been made by the introduction of a Bill in the House of Assembly respecting the Postal and Telegraph Services. The main object and purpose of this Bill, which is being put through Committee by Hon. Mr. Halfyard, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, is to impose an extra postal tax on inland registered letters and parcels from abroad containing dutiable merchandise. The sum of the proposed tax is an extra two cents on the registration fee for letters, making five cents to be hereafter paid, instead of the old three cent rate. An estimated additional postal revenue of fifty-five hundred dollars, the Minister suggests, will be raised from this extra tax. This means that roughly two hundred and seventy-five thousand registered letters are handled by the Postal Department throughout the Dominion annually, and as most of these come from and are mailed at outpost post offices, the burden of this extra tax of two cents per letter will fall on the people of the outposts. Thus, of the fifty-five hundred dollars which the proposed increase will produce, the greater part will have to be paid by mailers of letters outside St. John's. The sum per letter is not large, but it is too great a tax to be saddled on people who do all their business by mail. It is also too much to pay for the privilege of registering a letter containing a remittance of money, when there is no protection guaranteed the sender. If the extra two cents to be extorted were of the nature of an insurance premium there would be some advantage in it, but it offers no protection to the sender or guarantee of delivery to the addressee, and is therefore a deliberate mulcting of the public who receive no adequate return whatever for the payment.

The same applies to the extra tax on parcels containing dutiable goods, before receiving which the addressee, in addition to paying the amount of duty assessed, will have to make an additional contribution of five cents, receiving nothing in return. Both these taxes therefore are unfair in principle, and the monies so received will have been deliberately taken out of the pockets of the people, by legal process, without adequate or equivalent return or benefit. And this from a Government, the Manifesto of whose Leader dripped reduction in taxation. The greater part of the revenue collected from the letter and parcel tax will be paid by the people of the outposts, and especially so on the former. The small dealer who orders his goods by mail, the private individuals who have trade connections with city firms: the fishermen who buy much of their outfit by letter, all these will have to bear the extra load, because the mails are their main avenue of trade. It will doubtless be argued that the extra tax will not amount to much per capita, per annum. That is admitted, but the principle is inadmissible. It is too much like a hold-up. It is a clear case of mulcting the populace without reason. When the war was on no person objected to the increased letter postage rate, the stamp tax on telegrams, Bills of Lading, cheques, drafts and customs entries. There was a definite object for these, and they were cheerfully and willingly agreed to, the hope being that after the war they would be removed. Instead of that they are being added to. For what? It is true that the Postal Department is run at a loss. As a Public Utility Service nothing else could be expected. Many reasons could be advanced as to why this is, but the Minister himself supplies the chief one. "Too much party politics," and he might have added, too many officials, underpaid and overpaid. Being a dumping ground for party favorites, appointees to the Post Office, to quote Minister Halfyard, "were not considered from the standpoint of efficiency." Those who had the most pull got the job and consequently the service suffered. But even that is not a good excuse for the imposition of an extra tax on registered letters and dutiable parcels. It is discriminative legislation, and judging from this taxation straw it may be noted how the wind will blow from the Finance Department when Minister Brownrigg introduces his little request for more revenue to meet expenditure.

W. H. Cave Has to Vacate Seat.

GOVERNMENT MEMBER FOR BAY DE VERDE COUNTED OUT.

A. E. Hickman, though elected, not Allowed to Sit.

At yesterday morning's session of the Supreme Court the trial judges in the Hickman vs. Cave Election petition delivered their judgment (published elsewhere to-day) and in accordance with the finding the scrutiny of the disallowed votes began. The boxes containing the ballots from the various booth rooms in the district, (previously assorted) were brought into the Court room, and the work of finding out for which of the candidates the disallowed ballots were cast began. The work was tedious and occupied the whole afternoon. It was found that out of the 34 votes disallowed 21 had been cast for Cave, 9 for Hickman, and 4 for other candidates, thus reducing Caves total vote to 1177 and Hickmans to 1184. In announcing that 21 votes had to come off from Mr. Caves total and 9 from that of Mr. Hickman's, some difference arose between the judges as to the correct figures. Mr. Justice Johnson, found that only eight votes had gone to Hickman. The ballot box with the (disputed) ballot was ordered to be re-opened, and after another scrutiny Justice Johnson satisfied himself that the total was nine. Judgment was delivered as follows: "Mr. Cave is not elected, and for the reason that Mr. Hickman was guilty of bribery, we cannot declare him duly elected."

Serious Drop in Fish.

(Trade Review.)

About fifty schooners arrived here from the northern outposts since Wednesday and many of them brought cargoes and part cargoes of dry codfish that had been held over since last fall. The owners of their cargoes found it very difficult to sell their fish at anything like the prices they expected. The owner of a cargo from Trinity Bay reported yesterday after searching the town that the best offer he could get was $2.50 per quintal. The only fault in the fish was that it was a little damp. Several others who had much better fish were offered only $4 to $5. We do not think that had as the condition of the foreign markets it, it warrants so low a price.

Drowning Fatalities.

The following message has been received from Magistrate Miffen from Glovertown by the Justice Dept.: "Lemuel Waterman, aged 50, of Fair Island, accidentally capsized a boat in Trinity Beach yesterday and was drowned. The body has not been recovered." The Justice Dept. had the following message yesterday from Mr. A. S. Dubordieu, J.P.: "A man named Adolph Simon, of Cape George, was drowned last evening by the capsizing of his dory, while overhauling lobster traps near his home. The body was recovered."

The last chance to see "DOROTHY" to-night.

A Marvellous Success.

Last night the Christian Brothers, boys drew another record house on the fifth production of their most popular opera—Dorothy. Not one leaving the crowded auditorium of the Casino but felt grateful to the youthful performers who gave an entertainment which for culture and finish has rarely if ever been witnessed in our city. In the past Mr. Hutton has had many reasons to be proud of the entertainments with which he has been associated but we venture to say that never before has he had so much room for elation than over the success of last night's performance. If anything, the tenuous and wonderfully well-balanced choruses surpassed the efforts of even the boys' previous records, and the unanimous verdict of the keenly appreciative audience was that the beautiful fresh voices of their pupils, trained with a care that does honour to their establishment, and is in keeping with the high standard of efficiency that is aimed at in the daily routine of their school. The public have learned to expect almost too much from the St. Patrick's Hall and the Holy Cross boys' entertainments. Seven times last May the "Mikado" took the town by storm and now Dorothy has become a whirlwind. Were it possible to secure the Casino for another week, we feel assured that crowded houses would greet each performance. Messrs. Jardine, Wallace, Dobbin, O'Leary, Hickey and Lawlor; Messrs. Ryan, Galley, Carey, Kennedy and Warren are to be congratulated on their almost professional rendering of the different difficult roles of their charming opera, and they can be assured that the exceedingly high standard of their portrayal of their parts was appreciated to the full by a grateful audience. The eight "little boys" who so daintily and perfectly took girls' parts in the ballet dance drew from all present the applause they deserved and won new laurels for themselves and Mrs. Cleary who trained them. The orchestra added immensely to make the success of the opera complete. Many of the most beautiful costumes used last night were the handiwork of the fingers of Mrs. J. Warren, Mrs. C. Cox and Miss E. Murphy. Mr. Pippy and his staff are to be congratulated on the placing of such an immense gathering of the hundreds who were unable to procure tickets during the week will rejoice to know that the opera will be repeated to-night.

Expert Meets the Government.

Vocational Officer Introduces Occupational Instructor.

On Friday afternoon at a special meeting of the Executive Council, Dr. W. W. Blackall attended at the request of the Prime Minister, and presented to them Miss Evelyn Smith, who has just arrived from Toronto to undertake the work of occupational training for our returned veterans, who are confined to bed in the various hospitals in the city. Miss Smith carefully explained the system and organization of the work in Canada and presented many specimens of the industry of the Canadian soldier patients. Miss Smith, who is very highly recommended by the Soldiers' Re-Establishment Committee of Ottawa, now begins this new form of training with the approval of the Government, and a local staff will shortly be organized with Messrs. J. Browning, C.B.E., R. A. Squires, Eric Ayre, V. P. Burke and H. A. Outerbridge, as an Advisory Committee.

THRIFT.

We have been taught to appreciate the value of thrift. The mere saving of food, clothing, time or energy, may be economy, but not necessarily thrift. Saving money for selfish purposes alone is the act of a miser. Going without necessary things is not thrift, it sometimes results in sickness. Thrift is an expenditure of the income in such a way that there is an ever-increasing capital that you can call upon in an emergency. Not alone in the expenditure of your income but in fostering good health, saving physical strength, avoiding mental fatigue and helping others that they in turn may help you, also largely contribute toward thrift. One of the greatest lessons the late war has taught us is the care and wisdom in the management of one's resources—Thrift. The same economic laws necessary to best promote the welfare of the individual also govern the promotion and successful management of any business enterprise. The principles of thrift have always existed, it is only their application to modern living and modern business that has changed. Julius Caesar might have crossed the Alps in an airship. Marc Antony's orations might have been heard to-day on a "Victrola." The principles from which the airship and phonograph were evolved have always existed. It is the application of those principles that had to be discovered. So it is with the principles of modern store keeping. They have always existed. Their application to the principle of thrift is daily evidenced by the dealings of this store. Service—Quality—Value—these abstract ideals have become concrete principles of thrift in the policy of The Royal Stores, by its service, in its quality, and through its value-giving. By doing your shopping here you are participating with us in Mutual Thrift. THE GLEANER.

NOTES OF TRAVEL:

And Reminiscences of a Pleasant Tour.

L. C. MORRIS.

CHAPTER IX.

THE WOOLWORTH AND OTHER BUILDINGS.

In the erection of the Woolworth Building, the sky-scrapers have evidently reached their climax; and from what we could gather, it is not likely that any one will attempt to over-top this structure. The building itself is a wonder, and it has been well named "The Cathedral of Commerce," and it is the largest building in the world, then the Woolworth building has first and full claim to it; for whether it be surveyed from within or from without, there is but one opinion left the spectator, and it is this, that he beholds a masterpiece, and enters a palace. From the street below we looked up at the towering pinnacles, and then we ascended these pinnacles and reversed the view. It was all a wonder, and all beyond description. The height is eight hundred feet, and this altitude is reached in a moment by the elevators. The fee is fifty cents, with the usual war tax of ten per cent. We noticed that while soldiers and ex-soldiers are exempt from the regular fee, they are required by the state to contribute the war-tax; and considering the great number of people who visit this building for the sole purpose of ascending its turrets, the revenue from this source alone must be very large. The number of people who occupy the building is over twelve thousand. This number is representative of every class of trade, and of many professions; and so great is the volume of business transacted that fully seventy thousand letters and packages of mail, are dispatched daily, and the phone calls are more than thirty thousand. But our chief interest lay in the street beneath us, though the sixty stories of the building lay between us and the scene. The time was about 4 p. m., an hour when the streets of large cities are densely thronged. From our eminence we beheld the people in thousands, and taxies and vans in crowds. There was a moving crowd in panoramic order. Men and women looked like little children, and the huge expresses and splendid taxies seemed small, tiny, and insignificant. The view afforded a study well worth while, and the more we looked, the more there seemed still left to see; for at our feet lay the great city of New York, and within its radius beat eight million hearts. What a study! What a thought! What a city! Yonder lay the stately ships, and along the river from the piers and freight sheds, the puffing tug-boats popped in and out. Besides these there were the ferry boats crossing and re-crossing the harbour, and then we saw the splendid bridges which span the river, and then the trains and streets cars which dash along. To look at all these agencies from such a height as we occupied, was to be impressed with the great ingenuity of men, and with the skill of their craftsmanship. What planning! What calculation! What Queer Friendships Among Animals.

You could hardly find two animals more different than a squirrel monkey and a golden agouti. One is, of course, a tree climber. The other belongs to the rat or rodent family. Yet a monkey and an agouti live in the same cage together at the Zoo, and have chummed up so that they both share the same hay bed together. In the New York Zoo there was a similar case. A small African monkey made great friends with an American raccoon, and the two could not bear to be separated.

There are, of course, plenty of instances of cats taking care of rabbits, but in such cases the young rabbits have been substituted for the cat's kittens. Sometimes a dog will adopt another animal in the oddest fashion. There was a case where a female Bob-tailed sheep dog made friends with an old hen which shared its kennel. When the animal had puppies the bird brooded over them and kept them warm during their mother's absence.

Ants, as most people are aware, keep green fly or aphids as their milch cows, and seem to stable them and attend to them in a most thorough fashion. All-through wild life the naturalist finds the most curious instances of friendship between the most unlikely creatures. The shark and the pilot fish is an instance in point. The greedy shark, which devours everything living or dead, never touches the beautiful pilot fish which is always in its company. Equally odd is the companionship between the hideous and venomous rattler and the "white-oak snake." There does not seem any explanation for this friendship.

The giant clam or tridacna, the biggest shellfish in the world which, when full grown, will weigh a quarter of a ton, gives shelter in its folds to numbers of small crabs, while the sea-cucumber actually allows a small fish to make its home in its hollow interior.

When Tin Coins Were Legal.

Nickel coins, which the Government is credited with thinking of introducing, have never passed current officially in England, though Charles II. with a view to encouraging the Cornish tin industry, at one time started to mint coins of this latter metal. He made a beginning with the farthings, which, however, had a small stud of copper through the centre to prevent their being counterfeited. They were rather pretty coins, but the public did not take to them, and they were withdrawn. James II. afterwards coined half-pennies, as well as farthings, of tin; and a very large number of similar coins were put into circulation in the reign of William and Mary, owing to the scarcity and consequent high price of copper.

They bore the inscription "Nummorum Fannulus"—the servant of the coinage—to show that they were intended as merely temporary pieces.

By the way, we still speak of "coppers," although sixty years have elapsed since the last copper coin was minted. Up to 1860 the penny actually was a copper coin, and a very large and cumbersome one at that; but in the year following bronze was substituted for copper, with great profit to the Mint, for the life of a bronze penny is ten times that of one made of copper.

By the way, we still speak of "coppers," although sixty years have elapsed since the last copper coin was minted. Up to 1860 the penny actual-

PROFITTEERING.—One dollar was the price asked this morning for a fresh codfish that would hardly make a meal for a small family, by a woman from one of the eastern settlements. The gentleman to whom the offer was made did not buy, but later procured a salmon of about the same weight for $1.20.

FISH DROPPED $1.00.—During this week the price paid for last fall's codfish, has dropped $1.00 per quintal. Last week dry fish fetched $11 and damp $9; this week it is $10 and $8. Fishermen who have parcels unsold are wondering if the dollar was dropped to pay the increase granted to the fish handlers.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH

Remarkable Statement of Woman Who Was Nothing but Skin and Bones.

You have heard the old adage, "Laugh and Grow Fat" but this woman tells of a more reliable method. She says: "I was nothing but skin and bones—was weak, nervous, run-down—could not sleep, and was unfit for work. Three doctors had failed to help me. One day I saw VINOL advertised and commenced to take it, and I really believe it saved my life. I have regained my strength, flesh and health, and everyone is so surprised to see such a change in me in such a short time."

The reason VINOL was so successful in this case is because it contains the tissue building and medicinal elements of cod liver, aided by the blood making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, beef peptone and hypophosphites. Thus in a natural manner it increases the appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood with thousands of red corpuscles, and imparts strength, health and vitality to every organ, muscle and tissue of the body. Physicians recommend it and druggists guarantee it.

STRIKE AT INSANE ASYLUM.—Yesterday afternoon the keepers at the Insane Asylum went on strike and last evening the institution was without permanent wardens. The strike was caused by the dismissal of three keepers who refused to wash and handle clothes of inmates who were suffering from smallpox. The remainder of the keepers walked out, out of sympathy, as the matter is one which concerns all of them. The matter was reported to the Board of Commissioners which now has it under consideration.

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all.

Your druggist gladly will give you the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" because genuine Aspirin now is made by Americans and owned by an American Company.

There is not a cent's worth of German interest in Aspirin, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. But now you can get genuine Aspirin, plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross,"—Aspirin proved safe by millions for Headache, Toothache, Earache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Colds, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monocetacidester of Salicylic acid.

The gathering will be addressed by two Professors of Columbia University—Drs. Engelhardt and Hart, who are well known in the realm of education in the States and other parts of the world. The visit of these gentlemen to our country promises to improve our educational facilities in no small degree, and as the subject is a very live one it is hoped that a large body of men will be present to hear them. Men of all churches are invited to attend.

House of Assembly.

FRIDAY, May 28. The House met at 3 p.m.

Mr. Gosse (Hr. Grace), presented a petition asking for Modification of the Prohibition Act.

Mr. Sullivan (Placentia and St. Mary's), presented a petition asking for a road.

QUESTIONS. Mr. Bennett asked the Hon. Colonial Secretary in the absence of the Minister of Militia to lay on the Table of the House a statement of all monies paid through the Militia Department to the Board of Review on Separation Allowances from the 15th November, 1919, to the present date, giving the names of those comprising said Board and the amount paid to each member, also number of claims considered during the above period.

ORDER OF THE DAY: The Legislative Council's amendments to the Standardization of Fish Bill were accepted. The "Debiture Bonds" and "Exportation of Salt Codfish" Bills were given a third reading, and the "Business Profits Tax" Bill and "Montreal Trust Co." Bill passed the committee stage.

Hon. W. F. Coaker moved the second reading of the Bill respecting Beavers. This provides that beavers, the killing of which had, for some years been banned, would be open for hunting in certain areas, under the supervision of the Game Board.

Sir John Crosbie (Port de Grave), brought up the matter of salt and wished to ask the Prime Minister if anything had been done.

Messrs. Halfyard and Coaker replied to Sir John Crosbie, pointing out that it was his duty to help rather than to criticize the Government. Mr. Coaker claimed that both salt and coal had been receiving the attention of the Government for months past. He said the same arrangements were made with the salt importers as were made by the late Government in 1919 as regards importations and prices and if Sir John would privately give him the names of the parties he would make them live up to their agreement with the Government and refund the money overcharged.

The House adjourned until Monday.

Removed Ornaments Presented by Workmen

PETERBOROUGH, England, May 20.—Great indignation was caused here when it was discovered that the altar, cross and candlestick given by 3,000 railwaymen to Canon Donaldson for his church at Paston (a suburb of Peterborough), in remembrance of the strike last year, had disappeared from their place on the altar, and others substituted in their place.

Canon Donaldson was away when the discovery was made by his son, who is acting as curate to his father. A hurried search was made, and as the ornaments could not be found the Canon was telegraphed for. In the meantime a more thorough search of the church was made, and the missing articles were at length discovered under the Communion table.

Canon Donaldson, in an interview, stated that no damage was done to the cross. He regarded the act as a symbolism of the fact that a small group of people resented the claim of the masses of the people to the church.

Class Prejudice.

"If the cross and candlesticks," he said, "had been presented by a millionaire, they would have been left untouched, but because they were presented by 3,000 railwaymen of the district, this unwarrantable act had been committed."

"There is a certain set of people who have been so accustomed to monopolizing the church that they cannot bear the thought that the masses are at last claiming their own. This putting of the cross and candlesticks under the altar was not an anti-ritualistic proceeding, but an anti-democratic demonstration."

The cross and candlesticks were presented to Canon Donaldson at a great railwaymen's demonstration in February, to mark their appreciation of his sympathy and help to them during the strike in September, 1919. The inscription on the cross reads:

Presented to the Parish Church of All Saints, Paston, by the railwaymen of Peterborough, to the glory of God, and in remembrance of the great strike of 1919, and in thanksgiving for the settlement of 1920, and the progress of the railwaymen towards a fuller and happier human life."

Don't Try This.

A medical journal recently discussed the curious case of a footballer who, after a particularly gruelling match, refreshed himself with a long drink of meat extract, and had to be treated by a doctor for alcoholic poisoning. He showed all the symptoms of ordinary intoxication.

To some people, particularly when they are in an abnormal physical state, certain things are intoxicating which other people would find quite harmless. There is a case of a cricketer who, after abstaining from tea for two years, drank three strong cups after a hard day's fielding, and then during the two-hour railway journey home grew so excited that the train was stopped and a doctor summoned. The rest of the team, who knew that he had touched nothing alcoholic, were afraid that he had gone mad. Next morning the player had no recollection of the matter.

Beef-tea has sometimes a similar, though milder effect on convalescents, and there are many cases on record of convalescent patients who have shown signs of being over-excited after being allowed a hearty meat meal too soon after a long spell of low diet.

On people in low health or overtired—and it is always in such circumstances that these puzzling cases of intoxication occur—the stimulating effect of nitrogenous or highly-nourishing food has at times shown itself very strangely.

Cancelled Check is Not a Receipt.

A correspondent of the New York Sun calls attention to a custom being employed by shopkeepers and tradesmen in printing on their bills a notice: "Your check is your receipt." The matter is made still worse in some cases by a further notice, which reads substantially, "Tear off this portion of the bill and return with your check." This means that the customer is left with a memorandum of items with prices and footings usually partially undated and containing no inkling of the name of the shopkeeper or any other data which could be identified.

Such a paper is likely to be mislaid or destroyed after a short time as worthless by the average man or woman and cannot be properly filed. If a "bill rendered" comes in a month or two later the purchaser is put to the task of showing how his check paid that particular bill.

Then should the bank fail to return the cancelled checks, of course there is the check stub, but that is far from final, because the tradesman might assert that the original check never reached him, and proof that it did not, had been cashed or deposited is not always easy.

Every prudent person should insist upon receiving a receipt. Bank managers should point this out to customers. A cancelled check bearing the payee's endorsement is evidence that the payee has received the amount of the check, but there is nothing thereon to associate that payment with any particular debt which the drawer of the check may have owed the payee and the onus would be on the drawer to associate the payment with the debt.—J.W.T., in the Financial Post.

With the Rod.

The first salmon that we have heard of taken for the season, with the rod, was caught Sunday weeks by Wallace Farnell at the mouth of Harry's Brook. The fish weighed ten pounds.

There is good sea trout fishing at Grand Bay Brook, and daily catches are being taken. On Friday one party caught six, which totalled 24 pounds in weight, being an average of 4 pounds each.—Western Star.

Restoring Nerve Power.
In many people the tissues of the nerves have suffered from the strain of War and from the shortage of fats. You can restore your nerves in a natural way by eating "Skippers." The pure olive oil in which they are packed is worth its weight in gold to those who suffer from "fat-starved" nerves. "Skippers" are especially valuable for children. They are very easily digested, and contain certain vital elements which assist the growing body, nerves and brain. Your retailer will supply you with a tin of Skippers Are Brisking with good points.

Travel and Growth of Salmon.

(Western Star.)
Various opinions have been expressed from time to time as to whether salmon and other fishes frequent the same waters year after year, and only the other day we were in conversation with a man who has had considerable experience in our fisheries, who expressed strong opinion that salmon go back yearly to the locality where they were hatched. It will be remembered, however, that in our issue of 18th of June last year we announced that a salmon had been taken in a net at Channel Head, with a silver tag attached to its dorsal fin. We have recently learned further details of that fish, which are as follows: The salmon was caught at Western Baldwin's, half a mile from Channel Head, by Louis Sheaves, of Channel, on June 6, 1919; the silver tag attached to its dorsal fin was marked A1124. The fish when caught measured 40 inches in length, 23 inches in girth, was fat and weighed 26 pounds. R. Mosdell, stationmaster of Reid Nfd. Co. at Port aux Basques, obtained the fin and tag and submitted same to the Game and Inland Fisheries Board for enquiry as to where the fish had been liberated. And on 16th July he received a message from the Game Board stating that the salmon was liberated from the salmon hatchery at Margerie, Nova Scotia, November, 1917; at the time it weighed 12 pounds and measured 34 inches in length.

This, to our mind, is a valuable piece of information in fishology. It not only dislodges the theory that salmon frequent the same haunts yearly, and that the waters in which they are hatched, but also shows the remarkable growth within a given period. This fish in nineteen months grew in length 6 inches, being an average of almost an inch every three months, and gained an average of three-quarters of a pound in weight per month for the same period.

There is no more pathetic incident in the annals of the sea than the last glimpse of Mr. Laurence Irving and his wife (nee Miss Mabel Hackney) clasped in each other's arms on the deck of the Empress of Ireland as she was going down beneath the waves on May 29, 1914, after her collision with the Storstad. Miss Mabel Hackney first came into prominence at the Lyceum in 1901, when, with Sir Henry Irving, she appeared as Virginia in "Coriolanus," Marie in "Robespierre," La Rousotte in "Madame Sans-Gene," Julie in the "Lyons Mall," Annette in "The Bells," Nora Brewster in "Waterloo," the Dauphin in "Louis I," and Jessica in "The Merchant of Venice." After her marriage she played with her husband, and in 1908 toured with him the large music-halls, playing in "Peg Woffington" and "The Ballad-Monger." Laurence Irving did not at Matrimonial Mix-Up.

BROTHERS CHANGE ABOUT.
TOTNES, England.—One of the most amazing stories of a marriage tangled ever told in a court of law is being disclosed here. It stands adjudged for evidence to substantiate the solicitor's account of a bewildering situation.
The romance hangs on four main points:—
1.—Two brothers are said to be so much alike that neither can be confidently identified unless he is in the presence of the other.
2.—One of the brothers, Lieut. Wilfred Sinclair Hayes, R.N., says that, on returning from leave of absence in 1915, he found that his brother had married a Miss Phillips in his (the Lieutenant's) name.
3.—At a later date the married brother suggested to Lieut. Hayes that he (the Lieutenant) should take his place as the husband. This he did. He lived with the wife of the brother for a time, and she never discovered that he was not her real husband.
4.—This year, on marrying Miss

Edith Hill at Totnes, the Lieutenant took his married brother's name, even things up because the brother had taken his name on marrying in 1915.

Because of this second marriage Lieut. W. S. Hayes was brought before the magistrates here to answer a charge of bigamy. He was accused of marrying Edith Hill on February 14 last, while "his former wife" (Miss Phillips), "whom he married at Portsmouth in 1915," was still alive (with two children).
Formal evidence of the two marriages was given.
For the defence Mr. McGahey asked to have the case adjourned so that he might call evidence from Ireland to show that the prisoner was in the country at the time of the first wedding; that it was the other brother who married Miss Phillips; and that afterwards he left her and went to London.
On this statement the magistrate granted a remand for a week.

Turk's Fateful Time.

On May 29, 1453, after fifty-three days' siege, Mahomet the Second, Sultan or Sovereign of the Mahometan Turks, captured the City of Constantinople, formerly called Byzantium, but by these new possessors named Stamboul, but whose original and living name was derived from Constantine the Great, the first Christian Emperor of Rome, who made it the seat of the Eastern Roman Empire, dedicating it on May 11, A.D. 325. His successor, his last Christian emperor, Constantine Palaeologus, killed when the city was thus captured by the Turks. On May 29, 1821, a treaty of peace was signed between the Turks and their northern neighbors, the Russians, at Bucharest, since then the capital of the new kingdom of Roumania, which was established in 1859. The river Pruth was thereby fixed upon as the boundary between these two countries. Under Mahomet the Second the Turks also conquered Athens, the capital of Greece, and on June 3, 1827, they recaptured it after the successful war to obtain the independence of Greece which had been proclaimed on Jan. 27, 1821, in which Lord Byron, the English poet, had taken a distinguished part, dying there in 1824; but that freedom was not obtained till a sea-fight off Navarino, in 1827, when the combined fleets of Britain, France, and Russia nearly destroyed that of Turkey and Egypt. On May 23, 1864, the Ionian Islands, off the west coast of Greece, were annexed to that kingdom, for which a Danish prince had been chosen as sovereign in the previous year, after they had been taken from the Turks, and been held first by France, and then by Britain. After the Council of Berlin, in 1878, in which Chancellors of Germany, Austria and Russia agreed about a note to Turkey requiring it to make an armistice of two months with neighboring countries, it was not presented at Constantinople because, on May 29, a revolution broke out there, when the Sultan Abdula Aziz, was deposed, and was said to have afterwards committed suicide on June 4. On May 29, his nephew was joyfully proclaimed as Murad the Fifth. But he was deposed next August for ill-health, when his brother, the infamously Abdul Hamid succeeded. He was deposed in 1909 by the Young Turk Party. On May 30, 1878, Cyprus, a large island at the east end of the Mediterranean Sea, a Turkish possession, was taken under control of the British Government, and has continued so ever since, as Egypt, another previous possession of Turkey, also has done. On May 31, 1898, the Turks were obliged to settle with Greece their dividing line.

"THE CUSTOMER MUST BE SATISFIED."

Notes From Brigus.

Were one to judge by the continual passage of motors, to and from, the 24th was celebrated gloriously by those fortunate enough to possess those means of conveyance. Indeed we observed some religiously avoided church on Sunday by speeding round the Bay.

Messrs. Thos. Brien and Jas. Burke of the Cable Office at Bay Roberts, arrived home on Saturday to spend the week-end. Messrs. Percy, Parsons, P. J. Kent and W. French came from the city to spend Empire Day with friends.

What was formerly a potato problem has now become a potato famine. Many persons with sufficient land to grow enough of that staple product for their own use, have none for seed, and what is worse no hope of procuring any. Some of those who were forced to obtain them from the Department of Agriculture are rather disappointed, as to all appearances the quality is not of the highest standard.

We regret to note the serious illness of Mr. Robert Clarke, who has been confined to his room for some weeks. Despite his advanced age his friends hope that with the coming of Summer, he will again recover his health.

We have always understood that the "tunnel," mentioned in Tuesday's Telegram as one of the places worth seeing in this town, was cut there as a means of easy access to a wharf. This wharf and premises was the property of the late Captain Abraham Bartlett, and was the berth at which the steamer "Panther" used to moor. Instead of containing marks of his satanic majesty's footprints, Devil's Hill is said to contain naught less than his arm-chair. In the days of childhood (now but a memory), I have often enjoyed the pleasure of seating myself therein. To obtain a good view of his august footprints one would have to take passage by boat out around Southern Point. Legend tells that he landed there, after

Most of the ailments that may attack your baby arise from improper feeding, and it is important that mothers should understand that baby will thrive best if fed in the natural way—at the breast. This will not be so difficult of accomplishment if the prospective mother includes in her daily food a bowlful of Neave's Health Diet.

But there are very many cases when the baby cannot be breast-fed, and then an important decision has to be made—"Which food shall we give our baby?" It is nearly a century since Neave's Food was first made, and the remarkable way in which delicate and ill-nourished children have thriven on it has caused its fame to extend throughout the world. Neave's Food is widely endorsed by the medical profession as the best alternative to mother's milk.

a strenuous leap, of over a mile, from Collier's Point and then proceeded hastily up over the cliff, leaving his trail indelibly stamped in the surface of the rock.

Empire Day was an enjoyable one for numerous followers of Isaac Walton, some of whom were lucky in securing good catches. One party went in on Saturday, and returned Monday evening, hauling for 35 dozen. Another party is said to have secured 30 dozen at Hodgewater on Monday alone. Those who fished Turk's Gut Pond in the hope of securing "quality" instead of quantity, returned empty handed.

J. W. Hitchcock's schooner "Puritan" arrived yesterday, from Hr. Grace, where she has been practically rebuilt. She will make a splendid addition to our much depleted Labrador fleet.

A professor has been here during the week conducting examinations, in practical music, of the pupils of the Mercy Convent. We understand there were upwards of forty for examination.

Since the first appearance salmon have become plentiful. One man had twenty this morning, one of which weighed 18 lbs. We heard of a sign of oddfish being taken at Collier's Point on Tuesday.

Where the Word Sterling Comes From.

Because of monetary conditions created by the war, suggestions have been made in England that the government change the "sterling" standard. These suggestions have not been followed, at least not yet, but they serve to recall the manner in which that title came to be applied to English gold and silver money. About the time of King Edward I, that monarch who was nicknamed Longshanks, because of his long legs, skilled workmen were brought from Eastphalia (a region that is now a part of Germany) to coin money. These Germans were called easterlings, which meant "workmen from the east." Their coins were so well-made and the silver and gold used by them was so pure that anything especially fine came to be called easterling, and in the course of years the first two letters were dropped, since the general effect of a spoken language is to cut it short. When coins began to be counterfeited, the government had to establish a "standard"; that is, a law was passed prescribing the exact amount of pure silver or pure gold, which must be used. It is also used on silver articles, stamped in fine letters on the back of spoons, etc., that have as much silver in them as appears in silver coins. From this first use, the word sterling is applied to high qualities, as we often say, "He is a man of sterling honesty," or "he showed his sterling worth from early boyhood."

Feeding Ducklings.

Ordinarily ducklings are more easily raised than chickens. If properly fed and cared for they can be put on the market at about 10 weeks of age weighing from five to seven pounds each. If not forced they will get much of their feed from grass and other succulent plants.

Ducklings do not need feed until about 36 hours after hatching after which they may be fed five times daily on a moist mash of equal parts, by measure, of rolled oats and bread crumbs, with about three per cent. grit. After the first week change to three parts, by weight, of bran, one part middlings, one part cornmeal, one part green feed, one-half part meatscraps and about three per cent. grit. After the ducklings are a week old the grit or sand may be fed in a mash of in a hepper, but the common practice is to feed grit in all duck rations. Meat scraps is not usually fed until the ducklings are a week old when about five per cent. is added to the ration and gradually increased to 15 per cent. Gradually increase the proportion of cornmeal and decrease the bran until the ration becomes the fattening ration given below, for those ducks which are to be marketed. Those to be saved for breeders should be fed the first mash mixture. They should be given a good range where grass and running water are available. If confined to yards, considerable green feed and vegetable should be fed.

The ducklings for market should be fattened two weeks before selling on a ration of three parts, by weight, of cornmeal, two parts middlings, one part bran, one part meatscraps, three per cent. grit and about one part green feed. If milk is available with which to mix the mash, cut the meatscraps to one-half part.—The Ohio Farmer.

Should Home Lessons Be Abolished?

(By a Schoolmaster, in Pearson's Weekly.)

As a teacher of a good many years' experience, I have lately given very serious consideration to the question of home lessons.

At the present time I am engaged in a secondary school of nearly two hundred boys, the great majority of whom come from a distance, some of them travelling daily as much as twenty miles each way.

Yet under the present system they leave home quite early in the morning, and after doing a full day's work (9.15 a.m. to 4 p.m.) and facing the long journey home in the evening, they are supposed to do another two hours' preparation work for the next day.

This means that practically the whole day is spent without their having any time which they can really call their own.

Doubtless the case I have quoted is a hard one, but there are many other schools where conditions are very much the same. And whatever the conditions, I think it is very much open to question whether home lessons are desirable.

How many men, whatever their occupation, would care, after a full day at the office or workshop, to sit down in the evening and spend two hours in preparing for the next day's work? Why Children Get Bad Tempered.

Five or six hours a day, properly distributed over the morning and afternoon, is quite as much as the ordinary boy or girl can profitably devote to his or her lessons, and the evenings should be entirely free and devoted to healthy recreation for mind and body.

Nowadays one often reads complaints that we are becoming a bad-tempered nation, and that the sense of humor is dying out amongst us, without doubt these charges are true, but what is the reason for them? I believe it is to be found in the fact that we put too great a strain upon our boys and girls, and expect too much from them. They grow old before their time.

But it may be argued that school hours have not grown longer in recent times. Possibly not, but the amount and standard of the work done in those hours has increased tremendously, and puts a much greater strain upon the pupils. Apart from all that, the severity of the modern examination system involves laborious days for our youngsters.

I believe that home lessons could be abolished without any detriment to the work of our schools. With their evenings free, the boys and girls would come much fresher to their work each morning, and much more would be accomplished during the day than hitherto.

Finally, just as the pupils should have their evenings entirely free, so should the teachers, for a day's teaching puts a tremendous strain upon the nerves.

Many teachers spend their evenings in correcting exercises and preparing lessons for the next day, with the result that they come to school tired and dispirited.

ple are contained in a collection of 300 specimens recently placed on view for the first time in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. The exhibit was only recently brought to its present completeness by the purchase of objects which had been in possession of a noble French family for generations, but which were sold at Paris because the family was impoverished. Gold was used by the Aztecs and Incas only for ornaments, religious emblems and attire. Cortez and others in the 16th and 17th centuries, were melted and coined. This explains the rarity of the original golden objects. A grave recently opened in Columbia proved a rich treasure trove of them. It was apparently the burying place of a princess. Enough golden ornaments were discovered completely to clothe a modern woman for her appearance in a ball-room. There were, besides a crown, a breast-plate, girdle, armlets and various other appendages, aside from a great quantity of jewels. Rings and necklaces of amazing beauty are among the objects.

Shows "By Command."

WHAT IT MEANS TO ORGANIZE A PERFORMANCE BEFORE THE KING.

Although English monarchs have, most of them, visited the theatre from time to time, it is a curious fact that Queen Victoria was the first of modern monarchs to order the theatre to come to the King, or rather the Queen.

Such a command had not been given for nearly three hundred years—not since the days of Good Queen Bess. Plays are given, by command, either at Windsor or Sandringham. The late King Edward several times "commanded" a company to Sandringham.

A command performance means a deal of responsibility for the manager, and much extra work for the company. The stages of the private theatre at Windsor and Sandringham are, of course, much smaller than those of an ordinary London theatre, and special rehearsals are necessary so that the actors may become accustomed to moving in a narrower space.

The play itself has often to be cut, and the dialogue modified. Naturally, too, the scenery has to be adapted for so much smaller space. Special programmes are printed—those for the King and Queen being on white satin.

The company go down by special train. The performance itself is nerve-straining work, for there is not the usual applause. It is not etiquette for the audience to applaud unless the King first sets the example.

Supper is served to the company after the play. The leading people are usually presented to the King, and many well-known actors possess charming little gifts presented to them by Royalty as souvenirs of these special occasions.

When all is over another special train is in waiting, and thus the return to London is made.

Mrs. W. Carberry, South Side, complained of sidewalk in this locality.

COMPLETELY GRIPPED

Terrible Experience of Mr. J. Harrop

It is seldom that anyone who has been continually exposed to every winter condition does not contract some form of Kidney or Rheumatic trouble. In many cases, cold, settling on the kidneys, so weakens these important organs that they are unable to filter the waste and poison out of the blood. The latter is carried throughout the body, causing uric acid to accumulate in the joints, with consequent rheumatism, stiff joints, swollen ankles, sciatica, neuralgia, constipation, torturing pains in back and side of head. These ills can all be made to disappear by the use of GIN PILLS.

GIN PILLS give quick, certain relief. Read what Mr. J. Harrop writes to us—

"I have been crippled up so completely that I could not stand. Work was out of the question. A few doses of GIN PILLS put me right. I cannot praise GIN PILLS too much, and every home should have a box."

GIN PILLS can help you. If you suffer from backache, or have that dreadful feeling of lassitude, with floating spots before the eyes, highly-colored urine, stone in the bladder and general debility, get GIN PILLS at once. At druggists or dealers, 50c. Money refunded if you are not relieved. A large enough to demonstrate its value free on request.

National Drug & Chemical Co., Limited, Toronto, United Kingdom. Address, N. Dr. Co., Inc., 202 N. 3d St., Buffalo, N.Y.

and also requested gully be placed on her property.

F. Moore, Spencer Street, wrote, asking why water and sewerage was not granted him under the Small Homes' Act, he having applied for same some time ago. Plumbing Inspector will inquire.

Wm. Tulk, Burgoyne's Cove, applied for one of the houses recently erected on Quidi Vidi Road. Houses erected have been disposed of.

The following plans were passed, subject to the approval of the City Engineer, viz. Thos. W. Sparks, LeMarchant Road; M. & E. Kennedy, Franklin Avenue; Jas. Fifield, Bond Street; Presbyterian School, Patrick Street; Cornick and Taylor, Circular Road; T. H. Davies, J. C. Crawford, Forest Road.

L. F. Fallon, Church Hill, and A. H. Greaves, Freshwater Road, must submit plan and location of proposed erection of garages before permit will be issued.

Plan of dwelling for Wm. Murrin, Macklin Place, was passed, provided he builds retaining wall to height required by the City Engineer.

The Solicitor is to take immediate proceedings against William Molloy and William Grills, for making repairs to buildings, Water Street West, without having received a permit to do so. The property referred to is within the fire zone.

Several Water Street firms are to be prosecuted, if concrete sidewalks fronting their premises, are not immediately repaired.

Capt. Vallis, Sudbury Street, will be permitted to proceed with erection of dwelling if he undertakes to pay his proportion of making street improvements, extending water and sewerage, etc.

Oiling of streets is to be commenced immediately, on arrival of Road Oil.

Reports of City Engineer, Sanitary Supervisor, and other Departmental Heads were read.

The Medical Health Officer reported eight new cases of diphtheria, one scarlet and four smallpox, in the city during the past week.

A largely signed petition was received asking that certain streets be reserved for pedestrians on Sundays, holidays, etc.

The Petition reads as follows: To His Honor the Mayor and Councillors of the St. John's Municipality:

The memorial of the undersigned citizens of said Municipality sheweth:

1.—That your memorialists have noticed the growth of auto motor cars in this city within the past few years, and have also noticed the increased danger to life and limb and the dust and mud nuisances caused by the same.

2.—That the number of these cars are now over six hundred, and that some of these cars are driven by inexperienced and reckless drivers.

3.—That these six hundred cars afford recreation and amusement to not more than three thousand people out of our civic population of thirty thousand.

4.—That the great body of our citizens not being able to afford the luxury of a car, should be allowed to enjoy God's choicest medicines—"Sunshine and Fresh Air"—without molestation and nuisance of these cars.

PRAYER:

We, therefore, pray Your Council that, at least, one road in the East End, and one road in the West End, leading out of the city, be reserved on Sundays and holidays and after 6 p.m. each day, for the use of pedestrians, and in this connection would respectfully suggest that, in the East End, such road may be declared to be the road leading around Quidi Vidi Lake, from Forest Road to the Old Railway Track at King's Bridge Crossing.

And, in the West End, we would respectfully suggest one of the three roads: Southside Road, Waterford

Development in Light Sixes

Before we began experimental work on our new six-cylinder motor three years ago, we made a very thorough investigation of the light six field.

We found out just what qualities car owners desired in the power plants of their motor cars and then we designed an engine to meet these requirements.

The wisdom of our method is attested by the unanimous approval given our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model. With its first appearance, it immediately won the enthusiastic support of motorists.

And, by its dependable and economical performance, it has so clearly demonstrated its high character as an investment value that our production schedule is already proving unequal to the demand.

The "Glenbrook" is a truly remarkable development in five-passenger cars. Won't you arrange for a demonstration while our dealer is in position to meet your requirements as to delivery?
