CHAPTER XXXI.

"Chut, chut!" "If I am contented, so will he be. "Give me a pen!" whispered Mr. Morecombe-Wood, with the harsh, hard breathing of a man at bay.

kick this cosener, "there is something else I must speak of to you. Suppose we step out together for half an hour." "Oh, treason!" murmured Leonora to her pale face.

Even with his precious-draft safe, Richard Drayton hesitated, knowing the man a liar, whose mere acquaintance boded ill to Mrs. Alwyn and her daughter. While he scurried Miss Villiers fung down her paper, crying out:

Ushered again to her salon, the lady was doubly surprised to receive him alone. Tantalized more when he begged a private interview, and Leonora, in bewildered annoyance, having swept away in through folding-doors, to throw herself on a couch in the next room, and listen attentively to every sentence uttered in the one she had left—beyond expression started at what he had then to say.

with, Mr. Drayton had to take back to England this unsatisfactory reply as the corner-stone of his—in so many ways—most unsatisfactory expedition. (To be continued)

POOR OLD NEBRASKA. Nebraska's eyes were a red, tearful, there's sorrow in her marts; her sona, p r e t e n d e d they're cheerful but they have aching hearts. Oh still her hope may fatten, her steers do passing well, from Broken Bow to Hastings to Odell; she still may harvest glory through fresh and salted meat, and live in song and story by raising corn and wheat; her birds may gain the beech, her healers bring back health, but Bryan has forsaken that sad-eyed commonwealth. There other living wonders may dance around and sing, and with their verbal thunders make all the welkina ring; the state may always nourish strong men whose aims are high; boy writers may flourish and fade away and die; and Warwick oft may ramble by athwart the pleasant scene, and commoners may gamble upon the Lincoln green; the future is uncharted, we know not what may be, but Bryan has departed, alas and hully chee! No home's so well defended it has no vacant chair, no flock so well attended, but one dead lamb is there. From York to Weeping Water, Nebraska feels forsaken, and every son and daughter is sore and deeply pained; man drink the bitter mixture and say the fact's a crime, for William seemed a fixture, a landmark for all time. The altars all are shaken, and rent the temple's dome, for Bryan has forsaken his old Nebraska home.

Household Notes. Little children enjoy playing with small tiles more than with blocks. An excess of sugar is unhealthful, and most housewives use it too freely. When beef is cooked in a fireless cooker it should not be salted until it is done.

When "breaking in" new shoes sprinkle them inside with talcum powder. The juice from pickled fruit is nice added to the water in which you boil ham. Left-over unseasoned suet upstapling may be toasted and served with molasses.

"Laugh and grow fat" is an old axiom. We advise the use of a good tonic. "BRICK'S TASTELESS" is a wonderful tonic and will certainly improve your health. The selection of a tonic is a matter of great importance, as your health depends upon it. To fight disease successfully during the changeable autumn months the system should receive a tonic up. The facts we state about Brick's Tasteless attest all criticism. Weigh yourself the day you commence to take Brick's Tasteless, then weigh yourself two (2) weeks later and note the increase.

DOES IT PAY TO RETAIL SUGAR?

FIGURE IT UP YOURSELF. STOP LOSING MONEY. STOP GUESSING AT YOUR PROFIT. BUY LANTIC AND KNOW YOUR PROFIT.

Understand now, you would only have to pay your clerks 1/2 cent per pound on all sugar put up. For this half cent your clerks would supply everything required and in addition would pay you for any shortage of sugar. Whilst your clerks would be doing this work they wouldn't be getting any pay other than the half cent per pound on sugar. You WOULD accept a proposition of this sort, wouldn't you? Should shay show.

If your clerks agreed to work in your shop on holidays putting up sugar in bags for you to retail and further agreed to supply the bags, the twine and to pay you for all lost weight if you would pay them one-half cent for every pound of sugar put up, you would consider such a deal a good one for you.

Well that's the Lantic Sugar proposition, we shall supply you with the finest and cleanest and best sugar in 2 pound and 5 pound packages, guaranteed full weight, at one-half cent (50 cents per 100 lbs.) over the price of sugar in barrels. The usual difference is 75 cents, but we're doing it now for 50 cents.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.
QUEBEC, Sept. 21.
 The Court of Sessions this afternoon after a preliminary investigation in the case of the King vs. Chow Tong, accused of the murder of five of his compatriots on the steamship Maskinonge, on the morning of Aug. 27, came to an end, when the Chinaman was committed to stand his trial at the coming term of Criminal Assizes, which will open on Oct. 10. The case was that of a man who ran amok about 4.30 on Saturday morning, Aug. 27, firing a revolver on the ship. Four of the dead men were killed in their bunks, while a fifth succumbed to his injuries a week later.

RESCUE WORK PROCEEDING.
LONDON, Sept. 21.
 (Canadian Press Cable).—Thirty-five bodies have now been recovered from the pits of the Mount Mulligan collieries in Queensland, Australia, following the recent explosion in the mines, according to a Reuter despatch from Brisbane. Relatives of the victims have received messages of sympathy from King George, Viscount Curzon and Premier Hughes. A Brisbane despatch says that another death from bubonic plague has occurred.

ONE THOUSAND DEAD.
MAYENCE, Sept. 21.
 The great explosion to-day at the Chemical Products Plant of the Badische Anilin- und Fabrik Company at Oppau-Rhine, wrecked the town and spread death and destruction on every side. The number of killed is variously estimated at from 1,000 to 1,500 and the injured close to the thousand. One report says that there were 3,000 men on the spot at the moment of the explosion, and it is believed that about half of these were killed. The town of Oppau is the scene of utter desolation, more than a third of the houses having been completely destroyed, while the roofs of others were swept off as if by a whirlwind. The explosion is attributed by some to excess pressure in two adjoining gasometers, the whole of this part of the works being literally pulverised. Where the gasometers stood is now a funnel shaped hole 130 yards wide and forty-five deep. The directorate of the company is quoted as saying that the explosion occurred in a store house, containing four thousand tons of nitrous sulphates. At Hambrim, on the opposite side of the river, thirty persons were seriously wounded, and two hundred or more slightly injured. Lumlighafen reports say that three workmen's trains were buried under the wreckage, and many children, on their way to school, in that town were injured. Heartrending scenes were witnessed on all sides. At a little cemetery on the outskirts of Oppau there are already more than 200 bodies laid out on the grass. Numerous tombstones were lifted and hurled in various directions by the force of the explosion. There was not a door or window left intact in a radius of three miles. French medical units are aiding in the rescue work.

A Double Fine.
 The following message was received from the Sub-Collector at Harbor Grace:—"William Day, Master of the schooner Silver Star was to-day fined in the court $100.00 for having liquor in his possession and $100.00 for selling same."

Lobelia Being Put in Readiness.
 The work of getting the warship Lobelia in readiness for a voyage to Labrador is progressing and the firemen and crew are being selected. MEAT PRICES IN CANADA.
 According to a recent issue of the Family Herald the live stock industry of Canada is in for a trying time, partly due to a shortage in fodder crops and the poor demand for cattle already. A correspondent of the paper writing from Tavergham, Manitoba, furnishes an example of the prices realized by farmers for their cattle. He says that he shipped two cows on July 25th to a Commission Agent, the weight of one animal was 1,200 pounds and she was sold for $1.25 per hundred. The other weighing 1,150 pounds, brought $1.40 per hundred. After paying the expenses the net returns for the two cows was $3.75. He adds that four years ago the same animals would have fetched $160 a piece. The Herald's market report gives the following market prices for cattle, which look rather small in comparison to meat prices in this country. A few odd loads of good quality steers weighing 1,025 lbs. each sold at $5 to $5.50 medium choice butchers' cows at $4.25 to $4.50; good at $3.50 to $4; medium at $2.75 to $3.25; common at $2 to $2.50; common bulls at $2 to $3; cutters at $1.50 to $2.25, and canners at $1 per 100 lbs.

Wedding Bells.
 A quiet but pretty wedding took place on the 20th inst., at the home of the bride's parents, Dick's Square, when Hazel Dawson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Miller was united in bonds of holy matrimony to Hubert James, youngest son of Mrs. and the late Arthur James Lafosse, surgeon of Jersey, Channel Islands. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Fairbairn, Pastor of George St. Methodist Church. The bride, who handsomely gowned, was attended by Miss Flo Leseman, while the groom was supported by Mr. Eric R. Miller. The groom's present to the bride was a necklace of pearls and to the bridesmaid and best man a gold bracelet and gold and pearl tie pins, respectively. After the ceremony refreshments were partaken of, when all present wished the young couple a bright and happy future. A large number of presents were received attesting to the popularity of both.

Would any man or woman in this city refuse to give some small help to a little orphan child who has neither father or mother to provide for him? Not One!

On SUNDAY NEXT the unselfish Sisters of Belvidere Orphanage are asking the Catholic people of St. John's to help a little in the upkeep of

who must have food to eat and clothes to wear--the bare necessities of life. But a few close friends of the Institution who know of the reticence of those good ladies and their dislike of publicity, have jointly arranged to extend this appeal to no matter what class or creed, who would deem it a pleasure to do something for those helpless little orphans!

Could any father or mother, remembering the sheltering care given to their own dear ones, refuse to give an extra dollar to the upkeep of these little ones?

If he who "gives to the poor, lends to the Lord," won't you fathers and mothers who love your own dear little tots, please remember kindly the BELVIDERE ORPHANS on Sunday next.

Three Persons Hanged by Mistake.

On September 22, 1821, William Harrison, who held the responsible position of steward to Viscountess Campden, of Campden House, Gloucestershire, started out to collect rents from the tenants. Being a man of regular habits, and perfectly trustworthy, having been fifty years in the service of the Campden family, much alarm was felt for his safety when he did not return in the evening. In those days highwaymen and footpads infested most of the main roads, hence his employer's anxiety, and a servant was sent in search of him, whose name was Perry. This man did not return until next morning, looking tired, dishevelled, and dirty, and stating that he had been unsuccessful in his search. A few days later a blood-stained hat, which was thought to have belonged to Harrison, also some few articles, were found on the road, which it was thought Harrison might have travelled. The whole countryside now joined in the search for the body of the man, whom everybody believed to have been murdered. Rivers and ponds were dragged, commons and thickets searched, but all in vain. Meanwhile, suspicion fell upon Perry, who defended himself with a story which was found to be false, and he was arrested. The affair created a great sensation, and events crowded quickly upon each other. Perry was so strongly suspected by the authorities and harassed with questions that he began to concoct stories, afterwards found untrue. He became so scared as to confess to the murder of Harrison, at the same time implicating his wife and son. At the next Assizes they were tried, and although they retracted their plea of guilty, and averred their innocence, they were found guilty and hanged. Three years later, when the affair had become a thing of the past, Harrison, alive and well, walked into the entrance hall of Campden House, and reported himself for duty to the Viscountess. It was found, therefore, that three persons had been hanged for a murder which they never committed. Harrison told a plausible tale of being kidnapped, and kept as a prisoner in Turkey, to account for his disappearance and long absence. The whole series of happenings was most difficult to explain, and it appeared as if Perry must have accused himself, wife, and son, of a crime of which they were innocent, out of sheer fright, coupled perhaps with some vague idea of regaining his own liberty.

HOW IT'S DONE.
He sought for recognition, he was hungry for renown. He wanted folks to know him as he walked about the town. He wanted folks to point him out and whisper: "There he goes. The man who's doing wonders and whom everybody knows." At every public meeting he was sure to take the floor. But all the people's whispering was "Good Heavens, what a bore!" He sought for recognition and his voice was never still. But the people only snickered, and I think they always will. He dressed in swaggy clothing and he lined up with the cracks. He wanted men to whisper: "Now the voice of wisdom speaks!" But the people only chuckled when he shouted "Fellowmen!" And all they ever whispered was: "Oh, gee, that pest again!" Now a quiet little fellow who had not a quid to say. But kept plugging at his labors through the busy hours of day. Works to fame one sunny morning, with the whole world on the run. To congratulate and cheer him for the splendid work he'd done.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

HOW LITTLE WE REALLY NEED.
Did you ever stop to think what an intricate, almost inconceivable elaboration on the simple primitive needs of men, our modern way of living represents. Man's original needs were for food to keep him warm, shelter to keep him from the storm, robes and belts. See Man Ate Roots and Berries. Take the first of these--food. I suppose the earliest primitive man had on roots and berries, plucked up and put into his mouth as fast as he could gather them. Later came the meat and then the simplest forms of roasting. On that diet man could sustain life. Now take the very simplest meal in your home to-day and think what it represents in elaboration over the original eat-to-keep-alive diet. Suppose you ate only bread and butter and a cup of tea. Think of the preparation of the flour, the growing of the tea, the ships to carry it, the churning of the butter, how much elaborate preparation these represent. And then think of all that an ordinary meal, with soup and bread and potatoes and meat and vegetables and sauces and gravies and desserts, means in amplification and elaboration of that primitive need. Since Man Killed For Fur to Keep From Freezing. Next, take clothing. Go out and look at a big shop given over to the selling of blouses, coats, shoes, buttons, corsets, derby hats, scarfs, linen collars, and all the infinite detail of men's and women's clothing. Or read a page of a newspaper devoted to the advertising of clothing which you are called to buy, not because it will keep you warm, but because it is made on some special new line or out of some specially lovely material. Then just try to vision the almost unbelievable step-by-step elaboration of clothing-to-keep-warm which has come about since man killed an animal with a stone and ripped off the fur to keep himself from freezing. Since Man Crept Into Caves. Lastly, shelter. Men crept into caves because they wanted shelter from wind and snow and rain. Then when there were not enough caves to go round, they built shelters out of boughs and limbs of trees. Go into a simple, comparatively inexpensive modern house; observe the chairs, the bathtubs, the kitchen stove, the carpets, the window curtains, the cushions, but I need not go on with my enumeration; all you need to do is look about you just as I am doing. Are you not almost aghast at the complexities which are now the bare necessities? How much of this is good and how much is ban? Who can say when before such infinite changes even the words "good" and "bad" lose their definiteness of outline. I did not write this to point a moral, but only to pass a line of thought which interested me.

Nevertheless, when one feels as if life were not worth living because one cannot have some improvement in the house or some new style of garment, or when one is in danger of selling all one's energies to keep up with this elaboration, it isn't a bad thing to remember how little of it all is absolutely necessary to life. Is it

Lightning Authors.
The man who lives by his pen can possess no greater gift than that of being able to write easily. Some can sit down at their desks and rattle off stories or articles at the rate of a thousand words an hour; others toil desperately, turning and re-turning every sentence, and think themselves lucky if they can produce a thousand words of satisfactory copy within the working day. The average novelist produces two books a year, each of about eighty thousand words. But there are others--for example, the late Miss Beatrice Harraden--who took two years to produce one book. To go to the other extreme, there are exceptional writers to whom the speed of a thousand words an hour is nothing. Mr. William Le Queux is reported as having recently completed a whole novel in the space of three weeks. This is the story of the big Italian film "The Power of the Borgias." The late Mr. Marion Crawford, whose work certainly never showed any signs of slowness, beat this record by writing "A Tale of a Lonely Parish" in the space of twenty-four days. This novel, considerably longer than Mr. Le Queux, contains one hundred and twenty thousand words. Written Entirely by Hand. Another amazingly rapid writer was Mr. Guy Boothby, who published twenty-six books in less than eight years, and a number of short stories into the bargain. He sometimes turned out eight thousand words at a sitting. This is a big feat from the physical point of view, let alone the strain of composition. The elder Dumas was not the most prolific, but also the most rapid of authors. On one occasion he made a bet that he would write the first volume of a new novel within three days, the number of words being about thirty thousand. He won his wager easily, with half a day to spare. Remember, too, that Dumas wrote everything with a pen. He had none of the modern assistance of typewriter or dictaphone. Working with a good stenographer, there are writers whose output averages thirty thousand words a week. Out of these, who makes a speciality of juvenile fiction, keeps five and sometimes six serial stories going at the same time. And the instalments average five thousand words each. Some writers of newspaper feuilletons are extraordinarily speedy. An author of this type, has been known to complete a story of the kind within a week. It was one hundred thousand words in length, and he received for it a cheque for £200.

Fashions and Fads.
Wool embroidery and gay metal ornaments are used on autumn hats. Black, blue and coppery browns are favorite shades in fall millinery. The October bride will wear her veil longer than the bride of June did. Braid, iridescent beading and fine stitching are used on autumn gowns. A smart coat of a double-faced fabric has the plaid in brilliant colors. A stunning cape costume of blue serge is embroidered in white beads. Dinner gowns of black chiffon are embroidered in faded shades of silk. A gown of black Canton crepe is trimmed with novelty black-and-white braid. An excellent street costume is the sleeveless dress and tailored suit jacket. Metal and composition novelty girdles are worn with the one-piece dresses. Marine blue crepe de chine and ochre-colored lace make a charming costume. Many loosely belted gowns hang in straight seams breadths from the shoulders.

What the Maritime Merchant Says About Codfish.

The Maritime Merchant of Sept. 15, commenting on the fish situation says, things are never so bad, but that they might be worse. The price of dried codfish is not as high as Lunenburg would like to see it. The article estimates that the Lunenburg Banking fleet will total 190,000 qtls. for the voyage, or an increase of 40,000 qtls. over last year, so that with a decreased price from that paid last year the fishermen could be considered to have done very well. Commenting on the Markets the Maritime Merchant says, "The most hopeful sign is not that prices are higher, but that the world as a whole is eating more fish. Spain is eating more and so are Portugal and Italy. The only market in which no improvement is noticeable, and in which we fear none can be expected for some time is Northern Brazil. In normal times Northern Brazil would buy more dried codfish from Newfoundland than the average total catch of the Lunenburg fleet. Now things are very quiet down there; the price of Brazil rubber is away below the cost of production; sugar, too, is unprofitable, and these, with tobacco are three of the great staples of the country. The tobacco trade is bad because Southeast Brazil, which is the large market for tobacco, is affected by the low price of coffee in Europe. The German workmen to-day need 800 Paulo coffee, but he hasn't the money to buy it, and so the man who grows the coffee cannot buy tobacco from the Northern Brazilian, who would like to sell him, so that he in turn could buy codfish in Newfoundland and Canada." Speaking of Newfoundland the article says: "What little news is from there is encouraging as far as the catch of dried fish is concerned, but with the cost of living in that colony where it is to-day, one cannot but feel sorry for the fishermen. Fancy his having to pay $15.50 a barrel for flour, while only getting about $5.00 a quintal for his fish. However, there is no use in rethinking, and the only thing for the Newfoundland fishermen these days is to stick it out and try to be cheerful. It is when you hear what the net re-

The Russian Famine.

Bolshevism has reduced Russia to utter helplessness in the face of a disaster for which it is mainly responsible. The failure of the harvest is due to the drought; the famine to the criminal self-sufficiency of the Communists. It is an object lesson which will not be lost on sane people—fortunately in a heavy majority—in every other country. According to Kallin, President of the Central Soviet Executive, the famine area covers 400,000 square miles, and estimates of the numbers affected vary from 10,000,000 to 35,000,000. The latter figure is given by the British representative in Moscow. "Under the Imperial regime," says Kallin, "the failure of the harvest was no great disaster. In view of large 'reserve' stocks." Was ever incompetence more completely exposed out of its own mouth than by this confession? An appeal for relief has gone forth from Moscow, and Europe and America are ready to organize whatever measures humanity may dictate. But the world is not prepared to hand over supplies to the Soviet authorities for the benefit of the Red Army and the bolstering up of a Government which will set the first opportunity of sending the benefactor. On the other hand Lenin and his friends see danger to themselves in allowing Capitalist philanthropy to be the good Samaritan to their victims. They would prefer to make the starvation general by robbing the districts where food is obtainable in order to throw a crust to those where none exists. At the best, relief measures will be hampered by the dislocation of Russia's transport system under Bolshevism, and the extreme view is that by the time Bolshevism

Railroad Man Says Wife Needed Help to Get Out of Bed

Nova Scotia Man Says Wife's Restoration to Health is Simply Marvelous.
 "Of all the people who have told about Tanlac none have more reason to be grateful than my wife and myself," said Robert Hubby, Waverly, N.S., employed by the Canadian National Railroad.
 "For three years my wife hadn't been able to even so much as walk about the house, and was absolutely unable to get out of bed without help. Her condition was due to stomach trouble, and just as soon as Tanlac touched her stomach and improved her digestion all her troubles began to disappear."
 "She has only taken three bottles of Tanlac and she gets up without help now, walks about the house and struts about the neighborhood. I have been taking Tanlac, too, as I was all run down as a result of influenza, and it has given me a splendid appetite, built me up so that I feel fine all the time. My wife and I are so enthusiastic about Tanlac that we decided I ought to make a statement to the public about our experience."
 Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

World's Most Wondrous Canal.

ROMANTIC STORY OF THE WEDDING OF OCEANS.
 When the Panama Canal was opened about seven years ago, there seemed little likelihood that it would ever be inadequate for the world's commerce, but experts are agreed now that it will have to be widened or supplemented by another canal.
 The weight of opinion is in favour of cutting another waterway, not at Panama, but along the Nicaraguan route—from Greytown, in the Atlantic, to San Juan del Sur, in the Pacific, via Lake Nicaragua. The total length of the new canal would be one hundred and eighty-three miles. Begun in 1882, and opened in 1914, the Panama Canal consists of about twelve miles of sea level and thirty-one miles of locks and canals. In the sea-level sections the width is 500ft., and in the other portions it ranges at bottom from 300ft. to 1,000ft.
 To cut through from ocean to ocean necessitated the removal of 22,133,000 cubic yards of soil, and the continuous working of one hundred and one steam navies, each of which could lift ten tons of material at a time.
 Huge locks had to be constructed. In all, there are twelve, arranged in pairs, with forty-six gates, containing 60,000 tons of steel. The concrete used in the locks totalled 4,500,000 cubic yards.
 One of the most difficult parts of the work was the Culebra Cut, a great gash, about twelve miles in length, through the Culebra hills. When the cutting was made at the ordinary slope, there were such enormous landslides that the French engineers abandoned the job in despair.
 The Americans, on taking it up, cut a deeper and wider channel, but the slides continued, and fleets of enormous dredgers, each capable of removing 10,000 tons of material a day, could not keep pace with them. Indeed, when the shovels removed more soil than had slipped down, matters were no better, because material began to rise from the bottom of the cutting just as it was being pushed up by hydraulic power.
 In the end the difficulty was overcome, but only temporarily. Since the canal has been opened the cut has filled up frequently, the soil on one occasion rising to a height of sixteen feet above the waterlevel.
 The greatest single work in the canal is the Gatun Dam, which is an enormous barrier one and a half miles in length, half a mile wide at the bottom, and one hundred feet wide at the top, with gates in the middle capable of discharging the overflow at the rate of 187,573 cubic feet per second. This structure contains 32,000,000 cubic yards of material.
 Cost $100,000,000.
 The human side of making the Panama Canal is a romance in itself. At one time forty thousand persons were engaged upon it—enough, if lined up and touching hands, to form a living link between the Atlantic and the Pacific—and among the workers was distributed a large proportion of the cost of construction, which amounted to about $100,000,000.
 One can realize that the new canal will be a stupendous undertaking, and one which will call for brilliant engineering skill as well as an enormous expenditure of time and money.
 But that it will be a commercial success cannot be doubted. "The distance from the ends of the Nicaraguan Canal to San Francisco and New York will be five hundred miles shorter than from the ends of the Panama Canal, and in connection with the facilitation of transport it is good business to spend millions for the sake of saving minutes.
 Brick's Tasteless can be purchased at T. McMurdo & Co.'s, Water Street. Price $1.20 bid. Postage 25c. extra.—sept 15, 21.

The Little Cottage Organ

In a corner of the attic, I found the other day
 The little cottage organ that mother used to play.
 It stood amid the shadows, closed and silent—yet to me
 It brought a precious vision, still held dear to memory.
 I could see the quaint old parlor, and the loved ones gathered there—
 Hear my father's reverent accents, in the chapter, and the prayer,
 Then the organ, softly blending, with the hush of twilight dim—
 When mother led the singing of some sweet, familiar hymn.
 "Rock of Ages," wondrous promise.
 Hark! the notes triumphant, ring—
 "Aids with Me," "Calvary"—or "Beulah Land," we'd sing.
 We learned both words and music, in the best of ways, I know—
 For mother's voice we followed, in those hours—long, long ago.
 I am sure you can remember—how we children loved so well
 To touch the ivory key-board, finger every stop and swell.
 We'd say "Use this or that one," though perhaps it might be wrong—
 By using flute or tremolo, we often spoiled the song.
 But mother would be patient, she'd just let us try again—
 Until at last we knew the air, and found the notes in strain.
 I think she taught us how to live, attuned to God's own key—
 With tender care, she helped us find—
 Love's perfect harmony.
 The years have passed, and now we have a wonderful machine
 We listen to great artists—who may please a king or queen.
 But you cannot buy a record, like the music, heard to-day;
 When I dreamed of home, and mother—and the songs she used to play.
 Inspirations Born in Sleep.
 It is one of the mysteries of sleep that under its magic influence men are sometimes inspired to do things which are impossible in their wakened moments.
 Robert Louis Stevenson, the famous novelist, did not conceal the fact that much of his inspiration came to him during his hours of slumber. "The Driveway," he said, "do half my work during sleep. I have always been a great dreamer, and many of my dreams have been horrible nightmares. In others I have wandered all over the earth, have explored strange countries and cities, and read more wonderful books than could be found in any library."
 Unearthly Music.
 Of Coleridge and "Kubla Khan" the following strange story is told. The poet had fallen asleep in his chair after reading the following lines in Purchas's "Pilgrimage": "Here the Khan Kubla commanded a palace to be built and a stately garden thereunto; and thus ten miles of fertile ground were enclosed with a wall."
 "In my sleep," he said, "I dreamed two hundred lines of beautiful poetry. The images rose up before me, without any sensation or consciousness on my part. When I awoke the lines were vivid in my memory, and I began to write them."
 As ill-luck would have it, however, a friend called to see him before he had completed his task; and when, an hour later, he sat down to continue his work his memory was a blank. His wonderful dream poem was thus lost to the world.
 Dr. Anna Kingsford, a well known writer of a generation ago, declared that almost every line she published had come to her during sleep. Of one of her books she wrote: "These chronicles are not the result of any conscious effort of imagination. They are records of dreams occurring at intervals during the last few days."
 Curiously enough, these dreams never came to her in her own home, but always during her travels on the Continent.
 It was to dreams that the world owes Dante's immortal "Divine Comedy"; Voltaire's "Henriade," which "occurred to me in spite of myself, and in which I had no part"; and part at least of Campbell's "Lochiel's Warning."
 But the most remarkable of these stories of dream-inspiration is that of Tartarin's world-famous "Devil's Sonata."
 "One night I dreamt that I met the Devil," said the composer. "I handed my violin to him and asked him to play a solo on it. He took the instrument and began to play music of such wonderful, unearthly beauty that I was entranced. When the music ceased, I awoke, jumped out of bed, and reproduced it as accurately as I could."
 Mysteries of Sleep.
 But such stories might be multiplied almost indefinitely—from that of the Bristol mechanic who dreamt that it was raining shot, and thus discovered the secret of making pellets by pouring molten lead from a height, to the late Mr. S. R. Crockett, who once received payment for a story which he had not only written but posted in his sleep.
 Not the least wonderful of these stories is that told a few weeks ago of a Swiss maid-of-all-work who, while awake, does not know a note of music, but in her sleep comes downstairs, sits at the piano, and plays the most difficult works of composers whose names she has never heard.
