Mr. FROUDE'S CLOSING LECTURE. James Anthony Froude, the English historian, delivered the fifth and last of his series of lectures on "The Relations between England and Ireland," in New York, on Friday evening. The more important parts of his lecture we give below:—

WHAT CONSTITUTES GOOD GOVERNMENT. I say above all questions of forms of government lies the higher question of what is right and what is wrong? Let men fix their minds on a wrong to be redressed, or a right to be asserted, the chances are that if they are resolute in demanding justice, justice will not long be delayed. If the Government, whatever it be, determinedly persists in a false course, and not until then, it is time to attack the constitution. A constitution is evil, not when it is democratical, or when it is oligarchical, but when it upholds iniquity. A revolution is beneficial when it is undertaken as a last resort for a definite object. A wrong committed will then be redressed, and the wrong which maintained it is overthrown. But reverse the process; begin with political agitation, with no clear idea why a change is desired, to transfer the power from kings to nobles, from nobles to the middle classes, and from the middle classes to the people, and the result is nothing but aimless confusion of power, wasted in beating the air, and a multiplication of practical misery from confusion and anarchy. In this position you have the key to the failure of so many efforts to obtain what has been called "Justice to Ireland." No sooner has a wrong been admitted and a beginning made towards redress, than the Irish have kindled up into a blaze, they have left the road of practical reform for political agitation. From agitation they have fallen into conspiracy, and from conspiracy into rebellion; the fire burns out, the rebellion collapses, resentment follows, ill-will; then, perhaps, fresh tyranny. The stone of Sisyphus has rebounded to the bottom of the hill; the reformer is taken in hand; freedom is restored; the laws against the Catholics were relaxed; they were admitted to suffrage; Maynooth was established and endowed for the education of Catholic priests; Trinity College opened its doors to the Catholics; the Irish are now conducted in England as free men, and as free men in England they are treated as Irish.

IRELAND'S REAL ENEMY. Ireland's real enemy was the landlord. An Englishman or a Scotchman would buy an estate, seeing the capabilities of the soil, if properly cultivated and managed; would establish large farms, build barns, cattle sheds, put his capital into the ground, plant a water plant, and so on. Finding his property the first year littered with paupers, he would clear them away. Then the next year bringing in a new English tenant, he would cultivate his farm scientifically, which might be well for the property but was injurious to the mob, until the remainder might be cleared away. But this was harsh treatment after all, for human beings, with their families, had lived for centuries on the same spot; it was their home. They adhered to it; they knew no other desire.

LAWLESSNESS AND RELIGIOUS FEUDS. Next a more effective police was wanted. The grand rudimentary elements of civilization are incompatible with the private use of the gun and pistol. No country could stand by a mob, and no mob could stand by a country. The rights of the poor, when they were unable to protect themselves, England had taken the land from the old Irish holders in order to better the relations for themselves by substituting for the nation's chiefs an emigrant population from England and Scotland. The object was to clear the land of the Irish tenantry, and to have the power of the Irish tenantry had to be revised, or the power which they had abused be taken away from them.

Lastly, there was the religious difficulty. After the Reformation, the Episcopal church had been established in Ireland, and had been endowed like its sister in England with the tithes and property that belonged to the Catholics, in the hope that it would be accepted in the other country, as it had been in England, by the people. That hope had been disappointed. Four-fifths of the people were Catholics, and likely to remain so, and the Protestants little more than half belonged to the Establishment, and the rest were Presbyterians. Yet a handful of Churchmen monopolized everything. If I attach less importance to the last grievance than is usually assigned it, it is not that I do not know how deeply divisions in religion have created trouble all over England and Ireland. It is because I have searched the points in which England has been unjust, and because I think there is less ground to complain of the treatment of Roman Catholics. The enormous power for good which has been exerted in Ireland by the modern Catholic priest, I would not slur over. Ireland is one of the poorest countries in Europe, yet there is less theft, less housebreaking and robbery of all kinds than in any other country in the world. In the wild districts, where I lived in Ireland, we slept with unlooked doors, with as much security as if all precautions had been taken. This was in their favor in comparison with the Cities of London and New-York, for I would be extremely sorry to have tried the experiment in either place. (Laughter and applause.)

In the sixteenth century the Irish were notoriously profligate, and what is technically called morality had no existence among them, and purity was almost unknown. But in the last hundred years all this vulgar crime has been exceptional, and the credit is due alike to the orders and influence of the Catholic clergy. I don't know that they were called on to use the power of the confessional to put down agrarian conspiracy, for they had not been politically loyal to Ireland. They regarded their duty to the faith and re-

THIS MORNING'S DESPATCHES

The Liverpool License Act.

Fire in Northampton.

McBride Murder Case.

Inundation of the Po.

London, Oct. 28.—The Licensing Act, requiring the drinking saloons in Liverpool to close at nine o'clock on Sunday nights, was enforced for the first time yesterday, and gave rise to considerable excitement among the frequenters of those places. Crowds collected in various portions of the city and were addressed by persons (several of whom were under the influence of liquor) in opposition to the act. The gathering finally became so noisy that the police were compelled to interfere and arrest the most prominent malcontents. In some of the streets of the city the people opposed to the Act manifested their indignation at its enforcement by lighting colored fires in the streets and hooting at the police officers when they appeared.

Northampton, Mass., Oct. 29.—Emery Wheel Company's mill at Leeds was almost destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon.

Philadelphia, Oct. 29.—The jury in the case of Andrew Quinn charged with murder of Rosa McBride, have rendered a verdict of guilty of manslaughter.

Turin, Oct. 28.—The damages caused by the inundation of the Po, especially in the Provinces of Mantua and Ferrara, are immense. Several hundred kilometers of the most fertile land in Italy are covered by water. Whole towns and villages have been submerged, and many houses have been undermined and have fallen. In some places the water reaches the roofs of the highest buildings. Thousands of people are homeless, and others are fleeing from their dwellings which are threatened with destruction. The towns of Casat, Maggiore, and Ostigias, on the River Po, are in great danger, and the inhabitants are panic-stricken. The suffering is wide-spread and intense, but relief is going forward from all parts of Italy.

Local and Other Items.

The epixotic is abating in New York. It has broken out in Halifax.

There is the unprecedented number of nineteen sea-going steamers now in the port of Montreal.

MONTREAL has just been visited by the first Italian steamer that ever ascended the St. Lawrence.

COMPLAINTS are again being made of the manner in which the Toronto narrow gauge railways do the wood carrying business.

MR. STANLEY will leave for America early in November. Preparations are being made by the members of the press to give him a public reception.

The tracklayers on the Canada Air Line arrived at Simcoe on Monday. There was great excitement on the arrival of the iron horse.

The Governor-General left for Ottawa on Monday in a Directors' car and special train. He was attended by the Governor-General's body guard.

A widow woman named Meadows, with a large family, committed suicide at St. Catharines by severing the jugular vein. Poverty is the supposed cause.

The propeller Bruno, with a cargo of flour, whilst proceeding down the Gallop rapids, on Sunday, struck on a bar at the head of the Williamsburg canal and sank.

The statement going the rounds of the press, that the Rev. W. M. Punshon had left Canada, is incorrect. We learn that he will remain in the country until the latter end of April or the beginning of May.

THREE of the children of Lord and Lady Dufferin—Lord Clandeboy, Lady Helen Blackwood, and the Honourable Terence Temple Blackwood—arrived in the Prussian, at Quebec, on Monday night, and went directly to Ottawa to meet their parents.

The schooner New Dominion left Kincairdine for Chicago on Monday with 364 tons of salt in bulk, shipped from the Bruce Salt Works. The three blocks there are working to their utmost capacity day and night, manufacturers being unable to meet the excessive demands.

The merchants of Kincairdine held a meeting on Friday night about the unsatisfactory state of the market arising from the bad commodity which is brought to the local dealers by producers. It is proposed to have all butter brought into that market next season inspected by a competent person employed for that purpose.

The first application in Eastern Ontario of the lash, as a means of correction for criminal convictions, took place at Belleville gaol on Wednesday last. Andrew Townley, who was convicted last spring of an attempt upon the person of a small girl, received twenty lashes, which he bore without a groan, though suffering great pain. He admitted that he deserved twice as much punishment, but whisky, he said, got it for him.

The new silver coins issued by the British mint are so defective in workmanship that the London Times says of some specimens, forwarded by a banker, that they "are of a character that would induce any one to reject them on the ground that they could not possibly have been sent forth from any government establishment."

THE LIVERPOOL LICENSE ACT.

The history of the struggle of religious liberty is written in characters of blood which can never be effaced. So far were the Popes from hoping to get their power back again that no Catholics were allowed to become the subjects of Protestant princes, or in countries that had established spiritual independence and were determined to maintain it. From the state of affairs in the last period of the Catholic Church should be watched carefully in kingdoms where a portion of the subjects were Catholics. Ireland was in the English dominions, and yet she held to the Pope of Rome. The Pope had relieved them of their allegiance to England, and the Irish felt that their duty was to the Pope and not to the English sovereign. Was the English sovereign to stand by and let the enemy walk over the kingdom because it chose to clothe itself in the mantle of religion? It would be as much as if Prince Bismark should be called upon to let the Jesuits control the State power in the name of religion. In the days of the Pope's supremacy, the English princes were not permitted nor obliged to exact from their subjects tribute. In the battle of Aughrim, hundreds of the Protestant gentry would have made complete work of the disaffection in Ireland and have driven the last priest out of the country if they had not been prevented. With the accession of the House of Hanover in England Europe entered upon a new era. The Roman Church changed its tactics, if not its aspirations. She no longer pretended to rule the world, and ceased appointing men to teach the differences of religion in a nation should be a cause for their eternally quarrelling, or that a Catholic should consider his allegiance to the Pope paramount to his allegiance to the country in which he lived. From that moment the Catholics became as French citizens to full citizenship as the members of any other community. From that moment, especially at the close of the eighteenth century, when the dangers of society were no longer from religion, the first desire of our English statesmen was to remedy the last trace of disability to the Catholics in all respects on an equality with other subjects. But for the unity of Irishmen in the rebellion of '98, Catholic emancipation would have formed one of the chief conditions of the active union, when passions had cooled down, and the effects of the wars of Napoleon had died away.

This was the chief political question that came to the front. It was carried by Daniel O'Connell, and if Daniel O'Connell had never been born circumstances would have compelled this act of justice. A great man is great because he discovers the tendency of the age, and has the skill to contrive to place himself at the head of it. The Catholics attained their rights as citizens, and O'Connell's name will be forever deservedly connected with the triumphs of religious toleration. It was a revolution, however, which we cannot leave untouched, the openly and most grievous sore of Ireland.

The Irish peasant believed that after that emancipation he would have a good house over his head, and a good coat upon his back, and good food in his stomach. He remained the same down-trodden, forlorn being, as ill-fed, as ill-clothed as he had ever been, and in some respects he suffered more. Now he was between the hammer and the anvil, between his landlord and his vote. The landlord would tell him, "If you do not vote as I tell you, I will turn you out of your holding;" the priest would come and say, "Vote as I tell you, or it will be the worse for your soul."

THE IRISH PEASANT BELIEVED THAT AFTER THAT EMANCIPATION HE WOULD HAVE A GOOD HOUSE OVER HIS HEAD, AND A GOOD COAT UPON HIS BACK, AND GOOD FOOD IN HIS STOMACH.

Next a more effective police was wanted. The grand rudimentary elements of civilization are incompatible with the private use of the gun and pistol. No country could stand by a mob, and no mob could stand by a country. The rights of the poor, when they were unable to protect themselves, England had taken the land from the old Irish holders in order to better the relations for themselves by substituting for the nation's chiefs an emigrant population from England and Scotland. Sir George has written a letter warmly thanking Riel, the murderer, for allowing him to be elected in Manitoba.

There is every reason to believe that Mr. Thomson will be elected for Welland by a handsome majority.

The Reform banquet at Toronto will, it is understood, take place about the second week in November.

The St. Catharines Journal (a very doubtful authority in matters pertaining to the intended actions of the Government) says it is rumored that the Hon. Stephen Richards is to be elevated to a judgeship.

Sir John Macdonald will be at his wits' end to find a successor to Mr. Mowat in the Vice-Chancellorship, as all the prominent men of the Chancery Bar are Reformers.

One thing, experience most conclusively show Sir John, and that is that his organ, the Mail, is doing his case a vast deal more harm than good.

Hon. Mr. McKellar, Commissioner of Public Works, paid a visit to Muskoka about a week ago, accompanied by Rev. Horrocks Cocks, England, Alderman Dickey and Mr. Molesworth.

Mr. Mowat's successor in the Vice-Chancellorship is not known. The Globe says it is generally believed that Mr. Stephen Richards is the next man on the roster of the Minister of Justice.

Mr. Justice Gwynne was, however, a Chancery lawyer before his elevation to the Bench, and it is whispered that he might be persuaded to take Mr. Mowat's place.

Death of an old Canadian Politician.

The New York papers announce the death of Marshall S. Bidwell, a distinguished lawyer, formerly noted as a politician in Canada.

Mr. Bidwell was born in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, but emigrated to Canada at an early age.

He plunged into politics about the time the difficulties arose in this country from the maladministration of public affairs by the notorious "Family Compact."

He espoused the Liberal cause, was elected to the Canadian Parliament, and became Speaker of the House.

There is difficulty in finding a jury when an Indian comes before an Ontario court. One of the panel being asked if he had any prejudice, replied: "No; only I've been chased by 'em, been in several battles with 'em, and would hang every devil of 'em at sight."

Judge Curtis, of San Francisco, is said to have received $8,000 for his services in securing Mrs. Fair's acquittal.

CAUTION.

The Cornwall Manufacturing Company have pleasure in intimating the complete restoration of their works at Cornwall which are now in full operation, producing large quantities of White and Grey Blankets, and Heavy Medium Class Frowds.

They regret, however, having again to call attention of the public to the continuance of the disreputable practice of importing English Blankets and selling them as Canadian. These Blankets are made largely of Shoddy and Cotton Waste, with a small percentage of pure Wool, and though slightly in appearance, closely imitating the Cornwall Blankets, and ticketed "Canadian Manufacture," have neither warm nor wear, but can be sold at a lower price than the Cornwall Blankets (which are made of Pure Wool) can be produced for.

The public are cautioned against this attempted deception, and respectfully informed that the name of the CORNWALL MANUFACTURING COMPANY is printed on the ticket of every Blanket made by them.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A TERRIBLE INTERVIEW. "Father," he said, "when I left Ardgowan I was little more than a boy. I am a man now—with a man's feelings, with a knowledge of my rights, and a resolution to maintain them. You are my father, and I desire to show you the respect due to our relationship; but insult or bullying I shall not submit to even from you. I am here of set purpose, and I shall not leave till that purpose is effected."

"Ha! you dare to beard me, then. This is the effect of your mother's relations making you independent. You can afford to live without me—hence this insolence."

"My manhood gives me independence," retorted Harry. "You forget, sir, that I am now of an age when I have a brain to think, a heart to feel, and a will to guide me. I claim to stand on my own foundation and to speak and act as a man."

"Go on, sir—go on. You have, I see profited well by the education you have received. You set my authority at naught long ago, and I cannot expect that you will be more inclined to obedience now."

"If by that you mean that I have not been able to see that I was wrong in quitting Ardgowan, you are correct. A sense of wrong and injustice drove me hence, and that sense of wrong has only been deepened by the years that have brought me maturer intelligence."

"Confound it, sir, why do you prate of all this," roared his father, with a burst of rage.

"Merely to let you understand the terms on which we meet," replied Harry. "And now that I have done so, and since you compel me to enter on private matters before a stranger, I begin by giving you the information that—I am married."

"Married!" roared his father, with wrathful astonishment. "Did you say married?"

"Yes, sir, I was married a few months ago."

"Without consulting or acquainting me? Yet why need I wonder? It is of a piece with the rest of your conduct; and why should I be moved to know of it? What is your marriage to me? It affects me not—no more than any that I see announced in the newspapers."

"I should have acquainted you had I had the slightest expectation that the union would have met with your approbation; but, as I had no hope of this, I deemed it better not to enter on a controversy, and therefore made no communication to you on the subject."

"That is to say, that you have formed a low, disreputable connection," said his father, bitterly.

"Scarcely that, sir, since the lady is a relation."

"A relation! By your mother's side of course?"

"No, by yours."

"Mine! How can that be? I know no relations of mine, near or distant, that you could marry."

"I am well aware that you did not know her, though it ought to have been far otherwise, as I doubt not your conscience would tell you, if you allowed it to speak."

"His father looked at him steadily and in a perplexed silence, which sought in vain to understand his meaning."

"Speak plainly," he at length said, "I am in no mood to read riddles."

"Plainly, then," returned Harry, "the lady I have married is Caroline Bruce, the daughter of your cousin, Lucy Morrar. The youth expected that this announcement would produce a strong effect, but he was not prepared for the terrible result which the intimation did actually produce. His father recoiled as from an overwhelming shock, his face grew livid and ghastly and—what was more remarkable still—Nathan Garrett sprang bolt upright in his chair in unmistakable alarm and consternation."

Harry could only look at both in utter wonder.

"What base, damnable lie is this?" burst forth his father, in wildest rage.

"Sir!" cried the astonished Harry.

"Lucy Morrar and the fellow Bruce whom she married are dead years and years ago. How dare you affirm that you have married their daughter?"

"Kenneth Bruce died little more than three years ago," answered Harry. "His poor wife did, indeed, pass to the tomb many years before, but their daughter lived—she lives still—she is, I repeat it, my wife."

"The false—false, I say. We have inquired repeatedly of her, and could obtain no tidings. You have either been imposed upon, or you are imposing upon me."

"Father," said Harry, calmly, yet gravely and even indignantly, "had our intercourse not been entirely broken off you would have understood my character better and know that I am incapable of imposing on you. Besides, even though I were, what object could I have in so doing?"

"To annoy—to anger me. You know how I hate that low, beggarly rascal, Bruce, who enticed Long-Hair into that disgraceful marriage; and you come with this lie to annoy—to enrage me. But I will not listen to you—you have failed in your purpose, sir. They are all dead long ago—dead and forgotten. Now, go; and take with you the knowledge that your pitiful and despicable trick has miserably failed."

"Perhaps Captain Gibson will allow me to suggest that he may be mistaken," cried Garrett, suddenly starting up. "No authentic intelligence was obtained of the death of Kenneth Bruce, and I for one cannot think that Master Harry means to deceive us. Would it not be well, sir, for you to moderate your anger and hear further particulars?"

And as the factor spoke he darted at Stephen a keen, significant look, which made him pause as if staggered.

"But they must be dead," he went on.

"How should we have failed to learn tidings of them? Have we not again and again—have not yourself made every inquiry, and without—"

He was stopped in his impulsive and unguarded utterance by Garrett clenching him by the arm and dragging him into the embrasure of the window.

A Clergyman writing to a friend, says, "My voyage to Europe has been repeatedly postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of Peruvian Syrup have renewed me from the fangs of the fiend, Dyspepsia." Dyspepsia should drink from this fountain.

Anemia, or depravity of blood, is a disease known by the extreme paleness or waxy appearance of the skin, lips and nails. Persons so afflicted always have dyspepsia, and are liable to hysteria, consumption, disease of the heart, convulsions, etc., consequent upon the withdrawal of material in the blood for nutrition of nerve. As Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites will supply the healthy constituents to the blood and endow it with vitality, patients need not suffer from these diseases.

THE REASON WHY

Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calissaya is called a Chemical Food and Nutritive Tonic, because Phosphates constitute more than half the material of the human body, and are absolutely essential to the growth of Bone, Muscle and Nerve, which cannot attain full development without them. They promote a good appetite, perfect digestion, create pure, healthy, vitalizing blood, and supply the waste constantly going on in the system as the result of mental and physical exertion. Being combined with Calissaya, the Peruvian Bark, the only specific for Chills and Fever, and that condition of Nervous Prostration and General Debility arising from low vitality and exhaustive diseases, it forms an elegant and agreeable, invigorating Tonic, purely physiological in its action, that may be taken safely under all circumstances, and all diseased conditions of the body, as it builds up the constitution in the same manner as our daily food.

Sold by all Druggists at 51.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
