Military Outrages in Germany.

BERLIN, May 29.—Some military outrages upon civilians are reported from Saxony. An infantry officer of the gendarmes, there, who was probably excited by drink,
interfered in a dispute which had arisen
among a party of civilians, and drawing his sword, slashed right and left, wounding several persons. The crowd who witnessed the affair became very excited, and the interference of the police alone prevented

The Emperor has issued a private order commanding the military authorities to investigate the matter, and to severely punish all offenders against civilians.

in the fetes attendant upon the celebra-

Christian and Queen Louise. All the diplomats and members of the Danish nobility were present. Over 100,000 citizens and Province visitors marched to the Amalienborg Castle. There were 117 different associations represented. A procession of the students' section of the procession carried a branch of a beech tree, giving that part of the appearance of a moving forest. The street decorations are striking, and the march past occupied three hours, and was viewed by the whole royal party.

WESTERN ONTARIO.

BRANT.

Two Brantford young men threw a fall of cold water on the head of a citizen when the latter answered their rap at his door. Then the citizen gave chase to the fellows, and was set upon and beaten severely. The youths were fined $5 each with costs.

Lawrence McCuskey, G. T. Brantford, was struck by a gravel train near the R. C. P. station, on Friday, and severely injured. He was removed to St. Thomas.

A winery mill is to be opened in Brantford at an early date. The information is given by an invitation from Rev. W. S. Johnston, of New York, to occupy his pulpit during October. The invitation will probably be accepted.

Alden, 10-year-old son of Oliver Hopkinson, was following after one of the bears which appeared at the Opera House, St. Thomas, in the production of "Uncle Sam's Darling," by Hettie Bernard Chase, when the animal caught the lad by the hand and tore it badly.

St. Thomas Journal: An information has been laid by J. McCausland, J. P., charging John Denley, proprietor of the Penwarden House, with the seduction of Frances Wamsley, a child at the time under the age of 18 years. The information is laid under the provisions of the Charities Act. A warrant was issued Friday afternoon, but the officer to whom it was intrusted has not been able to execute it.

ESSEX.

The body of a man was found on the bank below Malden on Wednesday. From the description it is believed to be that of Theodore Cicotte, who was drowned in the river about ten days ago.

The estimated cost of the alterations to the Windsor court house and jail amount to $18,000. The matter will come up at the June sitting of the county council.

D. Sparkhall, Windsor, died suddenly Friday morning. While walking along the streets of Detroit a few days ago he slipped upon a banana peel and falling on the sidewalk cut his head badly. Blood poisoning set in with the above result.

Ouellette Bros., of Windsor, on Thursday, sold to Charles S. Tolson, of Detroit, the Jannesse farm of 117 acres on the Tecumseh road. The consideration was $17,000.

Amherstburg Echo: "About three years ago Thos. Heald, of London, gave his brother-in-law, C. M. S. Thomas, of Amherstburg, four carp (goldfish), which he had obtained from Mr. Saunders, of London. Mr. Thomas put the fish in a jar, but in a very short time two of them died. Thinking they might thrive better in a pond or running stream, he gave the other two to his father, C. W. Thomas, who put them into the pond near his mill, on the 2nd concession of Amherstburg, where they flourished and multiplied, until to-day there are thousands of the little creatures in the pond. After the recent heavy rains the small streams flowing into the pond were swollen considerably, and, as is customary with such fish, they started to swim towards the source. When the water went down, large numbers were found lying on the ground, some having gone as far as the 6th concession. On a sunny day the whole pond glitters like gold from the glistening scales of the fish."

HURON.

Samuel Nay, of Lakelet, has met with a serious accident which will lay him up for some time to come. He was assisting to place the binding pole on a load of hay, when it broke, precipitating him to the floor. The fall was a heavy one, and he sustained serious bruises besides having his arms broken at the wrists.

While William, son of Mr. David Richard, of Exeter, was engaged putting the harness on a horse belonging to John Hunter, of Exeter, the animal bit a portion of one of his ears and dropped it on the floor. The horse was never considered cross, and the reason assigned for this occurrence is unknown. The injured part has been properly cared for by medical skill.

HALTON.

Dr. Freeman, Milton, visited the farm of Stephen Cox, of Newmarket, to examine the skeleton which the latter had unearthed with his plow and which was supposed to be that of a murdered man. Dr. Freeman found that the skeleton was that of a small man about 5 feet 4 inches in height and that it had lain where it was found for a long time, perhaps 100 years. It is thought to have been that of an Indian.

The contract for building the new Methodist Church at Bethel has been awarded to Henry Hume, of Watford, the contract price being $3,650. This does not include seating, furnishing, etc., which will bring the cost of the building up to the neighborhood of $5,000.

The Farmer.

The king may rule over land and sea, The lord may live right royally, The soldier ride in pomp and pride, The sailor roam o'er ocean wide; But this or that, whatever befall, The tolling farmer feeds them all.

The writer thinks, the poet sings, The craftsman fashions wondrous things, The doctor heals, the lawyer pleads, The miner follows the precious veins; But this or that, whatever befall, The tolling farmer feeds them all.

The merchant may both buy and sell, The teacher do his duty well; But men may toil through busy days, Or men may stray through pleasant ways, From king to beggar, what'er befall, The tolling farmer feeds them all.

The farmer's trade is one of worth, He's partner with the sky and earth, He's partner with the sun and rain, And no man loses for his gain; And men may rise, and men may fall, But the tolling farmer feeds them all.

God bless the milk and fruit and meat, May his purse be heavy, his heart be light, His cattle and corn and all go right; God bless the seeds his hands let fall, For the farmer must provide for all.

At the time of closing this report last week (four days before the date of publication) the extent of the southwestern drought was not known. Since then also rains have continued to fall in many wheat-growing sections to such an extent that the effect of the "rise and fall" of water is now said to be the loss of at least 10 per cent. of the expected season's crop in the United States.

In Dakota many counties will have only half the usual acreage owing to the inability of farmers to get the seed in the ground. The flooded bottoms in Iowa, Nebraska and in some parts of Wisconsin, cover a very large acreage.

The Canadian farmer has been hindered considerably in the field operations by the continued rains, and many will be compelled to alter some of the plans made in the early spring for cropping. Corn planting will be delayed in many sections, and probably entirely prevented by the over-abundance of rain and an insufficiency of heat.

In spite of wet weather spring grains are growing rapidly in places where seeding was done on dry soil. Some farmers, however, made the mistake of seeding in wet soil, whose heaviness now retards the crop's growth. On the whole, the prospects are favorable.

The State of Illinois is credited with being the first in the Union to establish an efficient bureau of entomology.

A man was recently convicted in New Hampshire for selling artificial honey, and sentenced to pay a fine of $100.

According to a recent estimate there are under ditch in the west 18,533,107 acres. Of this Colorado has 3,009,050.

Good machinery and sharp tools all in good repair, are most necessary to accomplish farm work in the most effective manner and with the least outlay of labor.

One objection to depending upon our own experience is that, in many cases, it comes too late in order for us to be able to derive the full benefit of the knowledge.

Farmers are advised by the large wool dealers not to use binder twine for tying up fleeces of wool, as it is not only difficult to untie and remove from fleeces without breaking them up, but it also causes serious inconvenience and loss, should any of it remain in the wool and find its way into the machinery while in process of manufacture. Another point strongly insisted on is a more thorough cleansing of the wool. The man who has wool well washed gets the best price for it.

The next United States lands to be opened to settlement will be in southeastern Utah. These lands belonged to the southern Utes. After the agreement with these has been finally ratified, the land will be sold to settlers at the price of $10 per acre. Then there will be one more boomers' rush, almost the last one in the history of the country. After the public lands in the west have all been taken up by the boomers it will be time to develop and occupy some of the neglected land in the older States. There is enough of it to sustain many millions more people than inhabit these localities at present.

Measurement of weight by the "stone" arose from the old custom farmers had of weighing wool with a stone. Every farmer kept a large stone at his farm for this purpose. When a dealer came to buy the wool, he placed a plank on the top of a wall and put the stone on one end of it and bags of wool on the other end until the weights were equal.

"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in and lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees.

The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much like the same, and enter the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens the places they leave, and so nourishes and soothes that, in a short time well-sustained become germ-proof and well.

NEWSPAPERS INJURED BY RESTRICTED TRADE.

At a recent meeting of the Canadian Press Association it was pointed out that high taxes on imports from the United States not only curtail healthy competition in trade but materially reduce the income of every legitimate newspaper in Canada. This view is not combated by the Manufacturer, a paper maintained to advocate the interests of the Red Parlor, but those who hold it are denounced as sordid and selfish. The Manufacturer also calls upon its friends the monopolists to boycott all those newspapers which favor greater freedom to trade between the two countries, and a consequent improved revenue from advertising patronage.

We are at a loss to see why the newspapers of Canada should be boycotted for working not only for their own interests, but for those of the great consuming public which they represent. No one can deny that if, under freedom to trade between these adjacent countries, there was an increase of business, it would result from the belief entertained by the people on both sides of the line that they were benefited thereby. Canadians do not buy foreign goods if they can be better suited by their home products. They are, indeed, patriotic enough to patronize home dealers in preference to those of other countries, all things being equal. But when they are prevented, by international taxation, from selling to advantage and from buying as they see that it profits them, then are they injured. The immense profits that a few millionaire combine manipulators accumulate do not go to the people.

The newspapers, without regard to politics, are also losers by restricted trade. High or prohibitory taxation prevents importation, or so reduces the profits of merchants that they have little or nothing to spend in bringing their products before the Canadian public. In this way the Canadian newspapers lose a large sum every year that would come to them of a certainty if there were as much competition among the manufacturers as there is, for example, among the drygoods merchants.

The high taxes hurt the Canadian newspapers in yet another direction. It is no secret that as soon as the Canadian makers of certain classes of goods get the tariff increased to such a height as to enable them to advance the price of their products without the fear of outside competition, they at once combine, and resolved to pay no more money for the advertising of their goods. Thus restricted trade not only prevents the people of Canada from making the most of their money, but cuts short that competition without which the expenditure for advertising is invariably slim.

If there are to be combinations for the advancement of trade interests, we can see nothing either unjust or immoral about a newspaper combination to bring about that unrestricted trade which is the life of advertising. But we do not advocate a reduction or abolition of vexatious taxes on trade on purely selfish grounds. We hold that competition—free trade, if you will—is just as vitally important to the consumer as it is to the unkept newspaper, and that both should work hand-in-hand to bring it about.

PREMIER GREENAWAY made a big strike when he induced Mr. Watson, M.P., to enter his Cabinet as Minister of Public Works. Mr. Watson is not only an able politician, but a popular, whole-souled citizen. The Liberals in the Dominion Parliament, by his retirement, lose an able coadjutor, and the people of Manitoba an unselfish and unflinching advocate of legislation calculated to advance their interests.

THE NEW LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

The Hamilton people are once more disappointed. The Toronto swells have beaten them in the competition for the Lieutenant-Governor, and Senator Sanford, albeit he could have filled the office to perfection, is left out in the cold. Col. Kirkpatrick, M. P. for Frontenac, ex-Speaker of the House of Commons, is the successful appointee to the office, and he, with Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who is a daughter of Senator Macpherson, will reside at Government House for the next five years and dispense the hospitalities that the people provide for those favored with invitations from "Court." Col. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick, it need scarcely be added, will be fully equal to the task.

THE WHEAT OUTLOOK.

It is believed that at least one-sixth of all the wheat grown in this Province in 1891 still remains in the farmers' hands. This is unfortunate for the holder, for wheat now brings 14 cents a bushel less than last fall, when there was a prospect of scarcity, and wheat brought nearly $1. Those of the ADVERTISER readers who took its advice to sell while the prices were high, must be congratulated. The farmer who followed the counsel of the man who said, "Hold for higher prices" is in the hole. There will, expert students of the markets and the crops say, be no higher prices this summer. It has become evident that there was no "shortage" in the world's crop of food grains in 1891, notwithstanding Russia's inability to export with customary freedom. Either the foreigner has eaten more of rye or some other variety of food than wheat bread, or has gone without, or else the shortage in the wheat and rye crops in Europe were unduly magnified, in the face of an exceptionally large yield in Canada and the United States. The outlook for the future, Bradstreet's points out, gives no great encouragement to higher prices unless the weather becomes more unfavorable to bread crops than it has been. "Prospective yields abroad, on the whole, do not promise to be as unfavorable as they turned out to be last year. The United States produce less wheat, perhaps a good deal less than in 1891, but will carry over larger stocks into the next cereal year than were held on July 1, 1891. Europe, Asia, South America and Australia bid fair to produce wheat in excess of 1891 perhaps to the extent of the probable falling off in the domestic output this year, and importing countries in Europe have taken care to keep well stocked up for months past. These are not bad factors. Yet it would be useless to refuse to recognize the probability of the influence of the theory which is best known for its comparison of the swinging of a pendulum to the price movement.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Witness announces that Mr. L. P. Kribs, one of the editors of the Empire, whose resignation was recently announced, will in future be employed by the manufacturers of intoxicating liquors to prepare statistics favorable to their business, to be presented to the Prohibition Commission. Mr. Kribs being an expert at figures is understood to be well qualified for the job. The significance of this appointment of the chief editorial writer on the organ of the Dominion Government cannot be blinked at. The present Administration is emphatically a whisky Government.

OIL A SUBSTITUTE FOR COAL.

If the coal companies raise the price of that commodity unduly, as by their combination they threaten to do, they may find that the great consuming public will take means to provide a substitute, and thus largely decrease the consumption of coal. There is no reason why manufacturers and railways should not use coal oil or its residues for heating and steam-making purposes, provided the products are sold at a reasonable rate. Manufacturers in this city are already supplied with this species of fuel, and hotels are heated with it. On the Russian railways, naphtha is consumed in increasing quantities year by year. In 1881, these railways used 1,914 tons of this fluid, while ten years later they consumed 291,307 tons of naphtha and residues. In Canada, it is said, 50 tons of petroleum refuse would equal 100 tons of first-class coal, and could be purchased at a price most favorable to the railway companies when compared with the cost of coal. The Petroleum Advertiser urges the railway authorities to make experiments, and reports a conversation with an American locomotive engineer, who said he was very sanguine as to the future use of petroleum on the railways. He said "the engineer of a locomotive using this oil for fuel steps from his engine with a white shirt front, cleaner by far than that of the first-class passenger, who, being behind, catches more or less dust. The fireman's clothes are greasy from the oil he uses on the machinery, but his face needs no washing when he goes to his dinner. The fire roars in the fire box and the steam screams when the throttle is turned and the train rushes at the rate of 30 miles an hour, but the plates in front of the fire box are as clean as my lady's tiled hearth in the parlor. Then again the cost is far from being the only gauge of the superiority of this fuel. There is no smoke from the pipes and no cinders to fill cars and passengers' eyes. Fuel is run into the fuel tank in the locomotive tender as easily as water is, and the stoker keeps up his fires by now and then turning a faucet. The steam can be gotten up before a fire can be got to burn with coal. Stoker labor is saved from feeding the grates, and entirely saved from the labor of changing the ash boxes." In any case, the knowledge that oil can be used as fuel, and profitably used, should prove effective in keeping down the price of coal to a reasonable rate.

The beneficence of nature and the inventive genius of man make a pretty good combination with which to combat the greed of monopolists of the bounties of the Creator. But it should not be possible for corporations enjoying valuable privileges at the hands of society to run up the price of a great natural production at their sweet will, and to keep the price unduly high until such time as the people who granted them a franchise devise means to bring it down.

ADMIRAL MAYNE, M. P. for Pembroke, is dead. If an Imperial general election is to take place within the next two months, it is not probable that the vacancy will be filled till then. If there is a bye-election, there will be a close and exciting contest, as in 1886 the late member was chosen by a majority of less than 300. As the bye-elections have been going, the Liberals will in all probability win the next contest.

TOPICS OF TO-DAY.

THE coming out of the powerful London Chronicle in favor of Mr. Gladstone at this stage shows how the political wind is blowing in Britain. The Chronicle has been strongly opposed to Gladstone in recent years.

Princess Marie of Edinburgh, the eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, is by far the prettiest of the Queen's descendants with the exception of Princess Maud of Wales.

The date of the installation of Lord Dufferin as Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports and Governor of Dover Castle has now been definitely settled for June 22, and preparations will be made accordingly.

A man who stops his paper because there is something in it he does not like, should, to be consistent, get up and leave the hotel table if he happens to discover on the bill of fare something that does not suit his taste. He would be just as consistent in one act as in the other.

Some Burns manuscripts were among the collections of the late Dr. Webster, M.P. for Aberdeen, sold at Sotheby's, London, the other day. The poem beginning "O life will venture in where it daurna weel be seen," brought £40. "What Burns himself calls a 'painful, disagreeable letter,' asking the loan of three or four guineas, was thought to be worth £40; and another, written to Mrs. Dunlop, £24.

The Republican party has nominated its president in the following places, barring the slip in 1884, when the candidate did not become the president: Fremont, Philadelphia, 1856; Lincoln, Chicago, 1860; Lincoln, Baltimore, 1864; Grant, Chicago, 1868; Grant, Philadelphia, 1872; Hayes, Cincinnati, 1876; Garfield, Chicago, 1880; Blaine, Chicago, 1884; Harrison, Chicago, 1888.

Still another African traveler, Captain Binger, has gone through the savage regions of the west coast of the Niger without an escort and in safety. This Frenchman says that the natives were everywhere peacefully inclined toward him, and he was surprised at their honesty. At one place he found five or six sheds filled with merchandise, and nobody was willing to guard them, as there were no thieves among the people.

A public meeting was held at Logierait, Ballinlough, the other day, Sir Alexander Muir Mackenzie, Bart., of Delvino, Dundee, presiding, to take into consideration the proposal of erecting a memorial to the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, ex-Premier of Canada, a native of the parish of Logierait, Perthshire. After discussion, it was resolved to erect a memorial, and a committee to collect subscriptions was appointed. Sir Alexander M. Mackenzie, Bart., convener.

We do not seem to know in this country exactly what to do with our fat men. In France, where nothing is wasted, the entree of a customer of avoidupois is hailed with great joy in the Turkish baths. When his kneading, pomeling, pinching, punching and pulling are over the smiling attendant deals the plethoric patient three heavy and sonorous blows with the flat of the hand. "Mille tonnerres!" the victim cries; "what do you strike me for?" "Ah, monsieur, don't let that trouble you," is the reply. "It is only to let the other man know that I have done with you, and that he is to send me the next customer. You see we haven't a bell in this room."

The experiment of frightening a man to death has again been tried, with perfect success. Joseph Hardin, of Wellington, Kan., was the victim and practical joker condemned him to death, blindfolded him, placed him on what they called his coffin, gave the command to fire, fired in the air while one of their number tapped him on the head with a small stick. Hardin died instantly. The bullet did not strike him, but the idea of the bullet was just as successful and stopped the heart beats. There is nothing new in such shocks, but it is something of an argument in favor of influencing the mind when the body is diseased. If a man is killed by the idea that he has been shot, why should he not be helped to get well by the idea that he will get well? One is as reasonable as the other.

Suffering Children

Our girl was a beautiful baby, fair and plump and healthy. But when she was two years old, sores broke out behind her ears and spread rapidly over her head and forehead down to her eyes, and into her neck. We consulted one of the best physicians in Brooklyn, but nothing did her any good. The doctor said it was caused by a scrofula humor in the blood. Her head became offensive to the smell and dreadful to look at.

Her general health waned and she would lay in a large chair all day without any life or energy. The sores caused great itching and burning, so that at times we had to restrain her hands to prevent scratching. For 8 years with this terrible humor. Being urged to try Hood's Sarsaparilla we did so. We soon noticed that she had more life and appetite.

The medicine seemed to drive out more of the humor for a short time, but it soon began to subside, the itching and burning ceased, and in a few months her head became entirely clear of the sores. She is now perfectly well, has no evidence of the humor, and her skin is clear and healthy. In the light of

The Canadian Military Rifle League matches commenced Saturday, and the teams of the Seventh Battalion and "D" Company, I. S. C., blazed away at the targets in the Cove ranges. The weather was superb, the only drawback being a rather stiff breeze, which had something to do with the smallness of the scores. The targets were at 200, 400 and 500 yards
distance, seven shots being allowed at each.
The highest attainable individual score was 100 for a team 1,050. "D" Company

THE ENGLISH DERBY PROSPECTS.

A cablegram from London says: The Derby, which will be run on next Wednesday, is regarded as an open race, although La Fleche still maintains her position as the favorite. The bookmakers, however, are always ready to make the odds against the mare, and this steady opposition is disquieting to many sportsmen who would otherwise back her freely. Many good judges are backing Bonavista, and it is certain that he will make a horse of the race. He certainly has stamina to last the course, and his heart is good,
though some object to his build as being unsuitable to the Epsom course. Bonavista's stable companion, St. Damien, is still backed by his owner, who believes him superior to La Fleche, but the public are scarcely of the same mind, and prefer public form to private trials. The Frenchmen are backing M. Camille Blanche's colt Eucataure, who ran fourth in the French Two Thousand.
He has never proved himself a horse of the first class, and Frenchmen are probably backing him more from sentiment than from any conviction that his chances for the great English race are reasonably good. Some money has been invested on Lanthony this week, and the Col. North party have been plunging on El Diablo, whose chances are not regarded favorably generally. On the other hand, Flyaway and The Lover have been struck out this week, their respective owners realizing the hopelessness of their chances. The latest betting quotations are:
2 to 1 against La Fleche, 7 to 1 against Bonavista, 8 to 1 against St. Damien, 10 to 1 against Thessalian and Lanthony, 100 to 1 against El Diablo and St. Angelo, 25 to 1 against Eucataure and 55 to 1 against Sir Hugo.

leaves for England in a short time to receive $30,000 left her by an uncle who died
a few months ago.

Harness, the pitcher of the University of Michigan Baseball Club, is at St. Joseph's Hospital, Philadelphia, suffering with temporary insanity, caused by overwork. Harness and other members of the ball team arrived in Philadelphia a few days ago. Along the trip sent the other members of the team noticed how strangely Harness was acting, and when they arrived they had him taken to the hospital. Next morning at 5 o'clock he arose, and, putting on only his undershirt, jumped from the window of his room to the ground and ran a distance of two miles through the streets.
Then he recovered his senses and gave himself up to a policeman. He is 28 years of age. But little is known of him, except that he lost all his family in a very short while.

If pitchers would only stop to think that there are eight other players besides themselves on the team, and have a little confidence in them by not trying to strike out every batter, more games would be won by certain clubs.

FOOTBALL.

Toronto's champion football team met the Chicago Thistles Saturday and kicked their way to victory by a score of 4 to 2.
The conditions for play were execrable.
The grounds were covered with long grass,
the ground beneath was muddy, and much of the game was played in rain. The victories were banqueted by the vanquished
and left for Detroit on Sunday.

The golf championship of England has been won this year by Mr. John Ball, jun.,
a winner on several former occasions.

THE WHEEL.

For the detection of the wretch who stretched a piece of barbed wire across a road over in Ohio during the progress of the relay ride to New York Col. Pope offers a reward of $500. It was a lucky thing that a horseman picking his way through the villainous road saw the wire, else the message might have been still further delayed, for the riders over that particular relay were mounted on pneumatic-tired wheels.

ATHLETICS.

In the Louisiana Legislature Mr. O'Neill, editor of the New Orleans Critic, gave notice that he would introduce a bill to repeal the act granting charters to prize fights in that city.

PEDESTRIANISM.

Isaac Holden, the British M.P., has just returned from a trip to Africa, the age of 81. He attributes his remarkable physical vigor chiefly to careful pedestrianism.

LACROSSE.

The Cornwals and Shamrocks crossed sticks on Saturday at Montreal. The match was a draw, each team winning three games.

LIVELY CHASE.

After a Quartet of Chicken Thieves—
Detectives Crawford and Mason
Make Good Time.

Mr. Thomas A. Bickell, of Woodstock, made the discovery yesterday morning that his poultry coops had been robbed of some twenty valuable game fowls either during Saturday night or early Sunday morning.
Mr. Bickell at once instituted a search for the birds and traced the marauders to Embro, on the C. P. R., where it seems the adventurers had stopped at a section man's house and secured some refreshments. The section man did not know his visitors, but noticed a mysterious crowing that came from some bags in their possession.
Here, however, Mr. Bickell lost the trail, so he came on to London and sought the assistance of County Detectives James Crawford and Wm. Mason, who were attending the Salvation Army meeting. The officers of the law at once started on the chase and drove out to the "Y," and thence to Dreaney's Corners, but failed to find their men. On their way home they went to Squire Jarvis'
and laid an information against Robert Devine, of London township, one of the suspected parties, and also against Joseph Hardy, of London West. On reaching Devine's place the missing birds were found snugly housed in a first-class
hen house and arrested by the officers.
Devine was taken out of bed and gave the names of Joseph Hardy,
and Charles Burleigh, of London
West, and Michael Tierney, of the city, who, he said, had placed the fowls in the coop. The detectives then went to Hardy's house and arrested him. He was taken to jail, they proceeded to Albert street, where Tierney was routed
out of bed and taken to police headquarters, the four men being remanded until 2 p.m. to-day. The detectives naturally had a hard time of it, the celerity with which they did their work, having discovered the booty and lodged the suspected parties in jail in less than five hours and a half after hearing of the robbery.

The prostration after the Grip is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It really does make the weak strong.

London society is somewhat startled by the circumstance that the portrait of Pad-rewski in the Royal Academy is the work of the Marchioness of Lorne, the daughter of the Queen.

The favorite flower in the Princess of Wales' household is the lily of the valley, and the dinner table is rarely without a decoration of these modest and fragrant flowers that grow in great profusion about Sandringham.

TEMPERANCE NEWS.

In an editorial under the heading of "The Sacred Liquor Traffic" the Newark Daily Advertiser makes some pertinent remarks. "Every person," it says, "who lifts up his voice or raises his hand against the sacred liquor traffic is regarded as a public enemy, a nuisance, a crank. Is a liquor-selling law-breaker accused? The witnesses in the case are branded as 'spies,' and every man engaged in the attempt to bring the offender to justice is loaded with opprobrium. This is not true of any other class of offenders who may appeal to public sympathy. A man who violates a law relating to theft, highway robbery, assault, or even misdemeanors, might vainly beg that the community should rise up and defend him against the tyranny of the statute which he has violated. But when one who has sold liquor in defiance of a State law is hauled up, the public peace is disturbed by the denunciations flung at those engaged in this 'unvarnished persecution.'"

The liquor traffic costs the people of this country over $1,000,000,000 a year, which largely comes out of the pockets of the workmen. This $1,000,000,000 is worse than wasted, for it brings nothing but woe, crime, misery, pauperism and death. Every dollar of the billion goes to support the most gigantic monopoly which ever cursed a nation. This $1,000,000,000, if spent for food and clothing and other necessities of life, would do away with three-fourths of the poverty, crime and misery which now desolate the land. [The Issue, Nashville.]

In that wonderful book recently published "Darkness and Daylight in New York," by Helen Campbell, a work which goes down deeper into the vices and miseries of the metropolis than any work ever before written, abundant testimony is given to the fearful results of the drink traffic. Again and again in dwelling upon some special phase of vice and degradation does the writer express her conviction that the liquor habit is at the root of it all. The whole volume is, in fact, a powerful arraignment of the drink traffic. Several chapters are contributed to the work by Colonel Thomas W. Knox, a well-known newspaper writer of New York. Speaking of the saloon in politics, Colonel Knox says: "Nine bar-rooms in ten, we might fairly say nineteen out of twenty, are the property of local politicians or are managed in their interests. Usually the liquor dealers are in the majority in the board of aldermen, or if they appear to be in minority it is in appearance only, as they are sure to be represented by men whom they have elected from the other occupations." Passing from the political aspect of the bar-room to the criminal: "Many of the owners and many more of the assistants in bar-rooms are closely connected with violations of the laws against felony. If justice were done to liquor dealers many of the situations of bar-owner or bartender would be vacant in consequence of the involuntary absence of their present occupants to 'do the State some service' at Sing Sing or other prisons. Numerous bar-rooms throughout the city are well known to the police as haunts of thieves and training schools, where young candidates receive their initiation into crime."

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Increase Your Weight.

If you are losing flesh and blood, commence at once taking Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, which is far ahead of all other preparations of the kind in existence. By taking Miller's Emulsion, people gain from 5 to 10 pounds by the time the first bottle is consumed. It is the greatest blessing of the century to all in delicate health, or who suffer with coughs, colds and ailments that tend to consumption. By taking Miller's Emulsion, you take all the constituents found in wheat. It is used in the hospitals and asylums of the country. In big bottles, 50 cents and $1 at London drug stores.

Cartier's Little Liver Pills must not be confused with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills, as they are entirely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority.

Fifty-eight thousand women belong to the trades unions of England.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Cartier's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her a different person, at least so they all say, and their husbands say so, too.

Feather beds and pillows should be thoroughly aired and the ticks changed, if necessary. But do not hang or lay them in the hot sun, for this will draw out the oil and make them foul rather than pure.

A Cure for Constipation and Headache.

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that, when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick headache in one night. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion, it does wonders. Druggists sell it at 50 cents a package.

Did you know that if you place tough meat in a bath of vinegar water for a little time it will become tender.

A bottle of Angostura Bitters to flavor your lemonade or any other cold drink will keep you free from Dyspepsia, Colic, Diarrhea and all diseases originating from the digestive organs. Be sure to get the genuine Angostura, manufactured by Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons.

Fried onions, if boiled, for a little time previous to frying, in milk, will be comparatively odorless.

News About Town.

It is the current report about town that Kemp's Balsam for the throat and lungs is making some remarkable cures, sore throat, whooping cough, and consumption. Any druggist will give you a trial bottle free of cost. It is guaranteed to relieve and cure. The large bottles are 60c and $1.

To relieve nausea and dyspepsia drink a cup of hot water before meals.

"Kamaikan ascribed it to the magic of the Golden Fleece," said Freeman.

"Well," rejoined the other, "he may have been right; but, for my part, the only magic I can find in it lies in the fact that it is made of pure wool, which has come in possession of remarkable sensitive properties; or maybe the fiery soul of Semiramis was powerful enough to repel all harmful influences."

"The chest was made of some alloy of steel and nickel, impervious to rust, and very hard. It resisted all gentle methods of attack, and it was finally found necessary to force the lock with a charge of powder. Within was found another case, which was piled open with the point of the general's bowie-knife."

It was filled to the brim with precious stones, most of them removed from their settings. But such of the gold-work as remained showed the jewels to be of ancient date and origin. There was value enough in the box to buy and stock a dozen ranches as big as the general's, and leave her heirs enough to support a family larger than Semiramis's.

"I call that quite a respectable dowry," remarked Meschines. "Upon my word, if I had known what you had up your sleeve, I should have thought twice before allowing a 'civil engineer'—do you remember?—to run off with you so easily."

At dawn, they prepared the body of old Kamaikan for its interment. In doing this, the professor noted the peculiar appearance of the corpse.

"The flesh is absolutely withered," said he, "especially those parts which were uncovered. It must have been subjected to the action of some destructive vapor or gas, fatal not only to heat, but to contact with it. I have heard of poisonous emanations proceeding from the ground in these regions, but I never saw an instance of their effects before. That skull that you say you found, Harvey, was probably that of a victim of the same cause. But it is strange that Miriam, who must have remained some time in the very midst of it, should have escaped without a mark, or even any inconvenience."

"We know that the ancient Aztec priests were adepts in magic," observed the professor, "and it's natural that some of their learning should have descended to their posterity. We have been clever in our judgment that Miriam would be what is called a 'good subject,' Kamaikan had called a 'good subject,' and as for what followed, we can only infer it from the results. I was an admirer of Kamaikan; but I say that I am also a better reasoner than he. From the reflection that Miriam will henceforth be undisturbed in the possession of her own individuality," said Meschines, "repeated the general. 'Why I'm not mistaken, there are accounts of an Aztec princess of that name, a successful warrior, who, in some old documents I have in a box at home.'"

"That would only add the marvel of heredity to the other marvels," said Meschines. "Suppose we leave the things we can understand, and come to those we can't."

"I have something to say, General Trednoke," said Freeman.

"I think I have already guessed what it may be, Mr. Freeman," returned the general gravely. "Old people have eyes, and hearts too, as well as young ones."

"Come, Trednoke," interposed the professor with a chuckle, "your eyes might not have seen so much, if I hadn't held the lantern."

"I love your daughter, and I told her so yesterday morning," went on Freeman, after a pause. "I meant to tell you my return. I know I don't appear desirable as a son-in-law. But I came here on a commission."

"Meschines and I have talked it all over," the general said. "When an old West Pointer and a professor of physics get together, they sometimes are able to put two and two together. And, to tell the truth, I received a letter from a member of your society, who is also an acquaintance of mine, which explained your position. Under the circumstances, I consider your course to have been honorable. You and I were both in search of the same thing, and you, I am sure, were not less successful than I. You have achieved such a result as last night's disturbance did; and if that do not prove effective, nothing else will."

"After all," interrupted Meschines, "you found your way to the spot from which the waters broke forth, and may fairly be entitled to the credit of the discovery—Eh, Trednoke?" At any rate, we found nothing.

"Yes, I think they'll have to admit you to partnership, Harvey; and Miriam too—who, by the way, seems to be the only one who actually penetrated into this cave you speak of. Maybe the removal of the chest pulled the plug out of the bung-hole, as it were; the escape of confined vapors such as a vent would be apt to draw water along with it. By the way, let's have a look at this same chest; it looks solid enough to hold some valuable stuff."

"I would like, in the first place, to hear what General Trednoke has to say about this," said Freeman, clearing his throat.

"Miriam," said the general, "do you wish to be married to this young man?"

The old soldier was sitting with her hand on his, and he turned to her and said, "She threw her arms round his neck, and pressed her face against his shoulder. 'He is to me what you are to mamma,' she said, 'and that only he could hear.'"

"Then he to him what she was to me," answered the general, kissing her. "Ah me, little girl, I am old, but perhaps this is the best way for me to grow young again. Well, if you are of the same mind six months hence—"

"Worse! it will be much worse, then," murmured the professor. "Better make it three."

The chest was made of some alloy of steel and nickel, impervious to rust, and very hard. It resisted all gentle methods of attack, and it was finally found necessary to force the lock with a charge of powder. Within was found another case, which was piled open with the point of the general's bowie-knife."

"If it turns out well, I was promised a share in the benefits," said Freeman, "and that would put me in a rather better condition, from a worldly point of view."

"After all," interrupted Meschines, "you found your way to the spot from which the waters broke forth, and may fairly be entitled to the credit of the discovery—Eh, Trednoke?" At any rate, we found nothing.

"Yes, I think they'll have to admit you to partnership, Harvey; and Miriam too—who, by the way, seems to be the only one who actually penetrated into this cave you speak of. Maybe the removal of the chest pulled the plug out of the bung-hole, as it were; the escape of confined vapors such as a vent would be apt to draw water along with it. By the way, let's have a look at this same chest; it looks solid enough to hold some valuable stuff."

"I would like, in the first place, to hear what General Trednoke has to say about this," said Freeman, clearing his throat.

"Miriam," said the general, "do you wish to be married to this young man?"

The old soldier was sitting with her hand on his, and he turned to her and said, "She threw her arms round his neck, and pressed her face against his shoulder. 'He is to me what you are to mamma,' she said, 'and that only he could hear.'"

"Then he to him what she was to me," answered the general, kissing her. "Ah me, little girl, I am old, but perhaps this is the best way for me to grow young again. Well, if you are of the same mind six months hence—"

"Worse! it will be much worse, then," murmured the professor. "Better make it three."

The chest was made of some alloy of steel and nickel, impervious to rust, and very hard. It resisted all gentle methods of attack, and it was finally found necessary to force the lock with a charge of powder. Within was found another case, which was piled open with the point of the general's bowie-knife."

It was filled to the brim with precious stones, most of them removed from their settings. But such of the gold-work as remained showed the jewels to be of ancient date and origin. There was value enough in the box to buy and stock a dozen ranches as big as the general's, and leave her heirs enough to support a family larger than Semiramis's.

"I call that quite a respectable dowry," remarked Meschines. "Upon my word, if I had known what you had up your sleeve, I should have thought twice before allowing a 'civil engineer'—do you remember?—to run off with you so easily."

At dawn, they prepared the body of old Kamaikan for its interment. In doing this, the professor noted the peculiar appearance of the corpse.

"The flesh is absolutely withered," said he, "especially those parts which were uncovered. It must have been subjected to the action of some destructive vapor or gas, fatal not only to heat, but to contact with it. I have heard of poisonous emanations proceeding from the ground in these regions, but I never saw an instance of their effects before. That skull that you say you found, Harvey, was probably that of a victim of the same cause. But it is strange that Miriam, who must have remained some time in the very midst of it, should have escaped without a mark, or even any inconvenience."

"Kamaikan ascribed it to the magic of the Golden Fleece," said Freeman.

"Well," rejoined the other, "he may have been right; but, for my part, the only magic I can find in it lies in the fact that it is made of pure wool, which has come in possession of remarkable sensitive properties; or maybe the fiery soul of Semiramis was powerful enough to repel all harmful influences."

"We know that the ancient Aztec priests were adepts in magic," observed the professor, "and it's natural that some of their learning should have descended to their posterity. We have been clever in our judgment that Miriam would be what is called a 'good subject,' Kamaikan had called a 'good subject,' and as for what followed, we can only infer it from the results. I was an admirer of Kamaikan; but I say that I am also a better reasoner than he. From the reflection that Miriam will henceforth be undisturbed in the possession of her own individuality," said Meschines, "repeated the general. 'Why I'm not mistaken, there are accounts of an Aztec princess of that name, a successful warrior, who, in some old documents I have in a box at home.'"

"That would only add the marvel of heredity to the other marvels," said Meschines. "Suppose we leave the things we can understand, and come to those we can't."

"I have something to say, General Trednoke," said Freeman.

"I think I have already guessed what it may be, Mr. Freeman," returned the general gravely. "Old people have eyes, and hearts too, as well as young ones."

"Come, Trednoke," interposed the professor with a chuckle, "your eyes might not have seen so much, if I hadn't held the lantern."

"I love your daughter, and I told her so yesterday morning," went on Freeman, after a pause. "I meant to tell you my return. I know I don't appear desirable as a son-in-law. But I came here on a commission."

"Meschines and I have talked it all over," the general said. "When an old West Pointer and a professor of physics get together, they sometimes are able to put two and two together. And, to tell the truth, I received a letter from a member of your society, who is also an acquaintance of mine, which explained your position. Under the circumstances, I consider your course to have been honorable. You and I were both in search of the same thing, and you, I am sure, were not less successful than I. You have achieved such a result as last night's disturbance did; and if that do not prove effective, nothing else will."
