Bootlegger's Appeal For Tax Exemption Is Dismissed

LONDONER IS GIVEN LONG PRISON TERM FOR ROBBERY

John "Casey" John Sentenced to Marquette For 20 To 40 Years.

MADE FINAL PLEA

Judge Bartlett Refuses To Grant Leniency in the Detroit Court.

Special to The Advertiser. Detroit, Mich., June 2.—Jack "Casey" John, alias John Downey of London, Ont., was today sentenced from 20 to 40 years in Marquette Prison, by Judge Charles L. Bartlett, in recorder's court, for robbery while armed, last fall.

"Casey" John is a native of London, and was implicated in the Wyndom bank robbery in September, 1922, but was freed by the jury. He was previously tried on a charge of murder in Detroit, but acquitted. The young man's mother was expected to come to Detroit to again ask for mercy towards her son.

Before sentence was pronounced, the prisoner, who appeared to be on the verge of a breakdown, asked the court to show him leniency. Judge Bartlett answered that the circumstances in the case were such that any degree of leniency was impossible.

While the term given seemed to overwhelm him for an instant, John regained a striking attitude of composure that did not alter even when he was led away to the cells.

John was convicted last week of robbing George Campbell, 3435 Brush street, garage attendant, on the evening of the 27th of August last, when he and George Saville, alias Harris, alias Samtinger, made a haul of $100.

The case has come before Judge Bartlett in recorder's court on several occasions, but his counsel, R. McCredie, has always found some reason to ask for postponement of sentence. Last week his honor declared that John had received sufficient postponement, and that the prisoner would be sentenced without fall this morning.

Tried To Gain Delay.

"It's the same old story," the judge told the attorney. "No more will I remand this case."

McCredie took advantage of every legal procedure in his efforts to gain a light term for his client, but the attitude of the court was so determined that court attaches were not surprised when the long sentence was pronounced on the Ontario man fifteen years at the Inna Reformatory for the Criminal Insane.

M'GAUGHEY GIVEN PRELIMINARY TRIAL

Defence Council Protests the Crown's Questions Regarding Sanity of Prisoner.

Canadian Press Despatch. Lindsay, June 2.—The courtroom was crowded this morning when Fred McGaughey, found guilty by a coroner's jury of shooting, killing and murdering his fiancée, Beatrice Fee, the 19-year-old Ontario girl, on the evening of Sunday, May 25, came up for preliminary hearing. By 9 o'clock there was seating room in the courtroom, and an hour later, standing room was at a premium. Evidence as taken at the inquest was again heard and Defence Counsel Frost repeatedly objected to the questions asked witnesses by the Crown Attorney Anderson regarding the mental condition of McGaughey. Dr. Rich, when cross-examined by Mr. Frost, said he would swear McGaughey was drunk, but could not judge regarding his mental condition. The case is proceeding.

MATRON DIED IN EFFORT TO SAVE SUB-NORMALS

Victims of California Holocaust Will Be Buried at Venice.

Associated Press Despatch. Los Angeles, Calif., June 2.—A mortuary and hospital today housed all of the 48 sub-normals who were in the care of the Hope Development School at Playa Del Rey, southwest of here, when that institution was razed by fire Saturday night. Most of the children, twisted forms of what had been children less than ten years of age, girls in their teens, of young women in their twenties, still children in mentality, were being prepared for burial at a Venice mortuary near the scene of the blaze. Eighteen of the charges, most of them suffering from minor burns, were at St. Catherine's Hospital, Santa Monica. Also in the mortuary were the bodies of Mrs. D. Thomas, 43, head matron of the school, who sacrificed her life in a vain effort to lead her girl charges from the flame-swift structure, and Wilfred Binger, 14, adopted son of Mrs. Mary Jacobs, operator of the school.

Other reports in the press agree that nothing is altered, but the discussion is said to have been upped because it enabled Premier MacDonald to learn at first hand the real difficulties of the situation.

VILLAGE IN QUEBEC SUFFERS BIG BLAZE

Five Families Made Homeless and $100,000 Loss Caused On Sunday.

Canadian Press Despatch. Beauceville, Que., June 2.—Five families have been rendered homeless and damage to the extent of $100,000 was caused yesterday by a fire which destroyed part of the village of Valley Junction near here. Fourteen buildings were destroyed, including dwelling houses, stables and barns. There was no loss of life. The fire raged for six hours and help had to be summoned from Lewis, St. Joseph de Beauce and other surrounding places. Hundreds of volunteers from St. Maxime de Scott and St. Marie assisted to fight the flames, which, however, fanned by a strong wind, spread rapidly through the village. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it started in the barn of Joseph Chamberlain, when some straw and hay caught fire. At one time the church was endangered and all efforts were centered towards preventing it from falling a prey to the flames. They were successful after a strenuous fight.

Chicago Millionaire Suggests "Fixing" Jury To Save His Son From Gallows

LEGAL FIGHT OPENS TO SAVE YOUTHS

Chicago Lawyers Demand the Release of Loeb and Leopold Under Habeas Corpus.

WOULD FIX JURY

Associated Press Despatch. Chicago, June 2.—State's Attorney Crowe announced today as attorneys began their battle on behalf of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, confessed kidnapers and slayers of 14-year-old Robert Franks, that they would seek two grand jury indictments against them tomorrow. Indictments charging kidnapping for ransom and for murder, punishable by death, will be asked, Mr. Crowe said.

Associated Press Despatch. Chicago, June 2.—The first skirmish in what is expected to be one of the hardest-fought battles in the history of Illinois jurisprudence took place today when attorneys for Nathan Leopold Jun. and Richard Loeb, sons of millionaire Chicago families and confessed kidnapers and slayers of 14-year-old Robert Franks, also a millionaire's son, demanded their release on writs of habeas corpus. The defense attorneys pleaded that the youthful defendants have not been allowed to discuss their predicament with counsel chosen by the Leopold and Loeb families, and that the state has had alliemts examine the boys in an effort to forestall a possible plea of insanity.

The inquest into the death of the Franks lad also was opened today. Through confessions made public by Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, and newspapers, it has been established that the child was enticed into an automobile occupied by Leopold and Loeb on the afternoon of Wednesday, May 21, struck on the head with a tape-wrapped cold chisel, rolled into a heavy blanket with a gas rammed down his throat, and left to die.

Would Fix Jury. His body, some five hours later, according to confessions by Leopold and Loeb, was stripped and jammed into a culvert in a wild, isolated spot on the far south side, where it accidentally was found the next morning by a passing laborer.

Young Leopold, whose father is a manufacturer and lake shipping magnate, is sure, according to Mr. Crowe and newspapermen who heard the conversation, that money can do anything and through use of it he hopes to avoid the gallows.

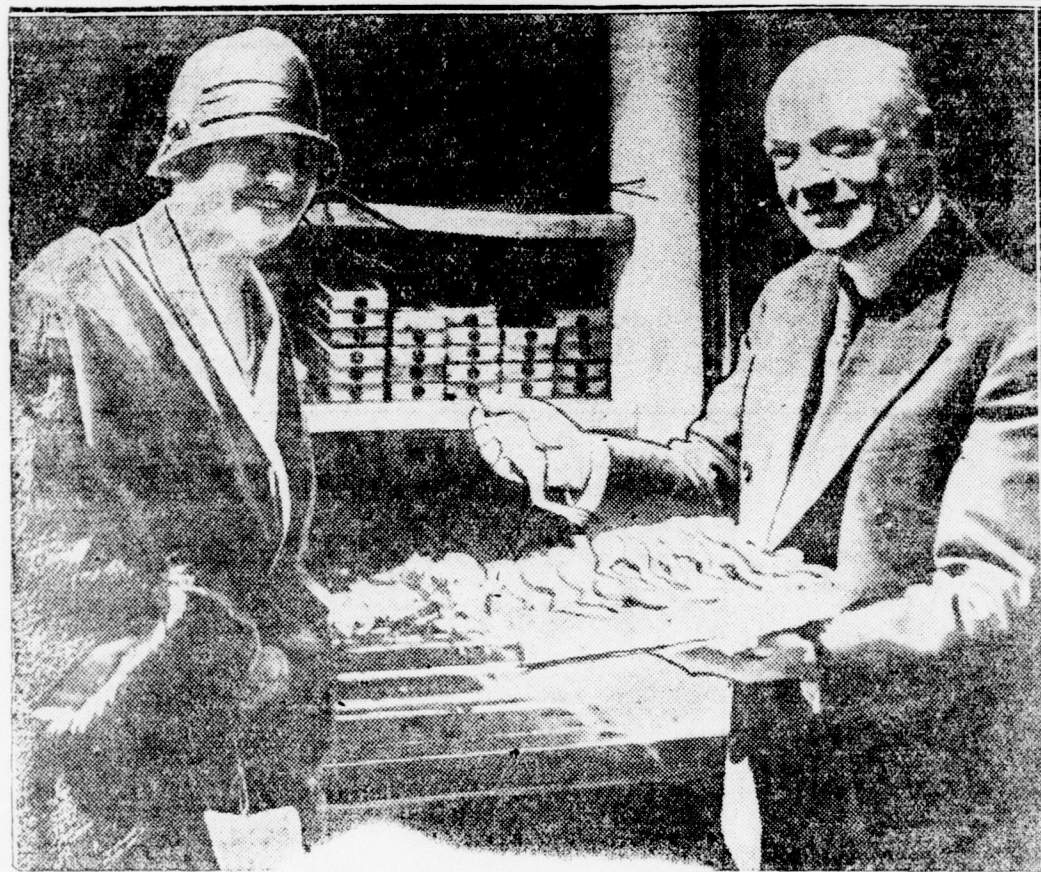

"You know," he said, "we have got a lot of dough. I don't know how many millions. How about fixing this thing up by getting to a few jurors?"

Mr. Crowe merely smiled in reply. Officers told today how Richard Loeb broke down and confessed, having displayed perfect coolness for many hours. His confession was even a greater surprise, for they had not connected him with the crime except for a letter written by Leopold, which had hinted at a sinister connection between the two.

Admits Murder to Mother. Both boys were allowed to telephone to their homes last night. Loeb talked to his mother, insisting that he had committed the murder, doing his utmost to convince his mother that he could and did do such a deed. His parents have consistently refused to believe his story since the crime since his detention.

Leopold assumed a business-like conversation. His father is ill, his mother dead. "Send me a change of clothes," and "Isn't it about time you employed an attorney for me?" he was reported as saying.

"Yes, I did it. We've got to face it and make the best of it."

May, 1924, Has Record Fall Of Rain For Flower Month

The month of May this year was neither as cold nor as warm as the corresponding month last year, according to official figures given out last night. The lowest temperature for May last year was 26, on the 24th of the month, which was two degrees colder than the coldest day last month, which was the 21st, when the thermometer registered 28 degrees. May, 1923, made another high mark that last month was unable to overcome. The warmest day in May of this year was the 28th. The temperature this day was 71, while in the preceding May the thermometer went to 82 degrees on the 24th. The citizens of London were treated to something last month that they did not get in May, 1923. There was a light snowfall on the 19th. More rain fell last month than in the preceding May, 2.98 inches falling compared with 2.29 inches in May, 1923.

APPEAL WILL BE MADE FOR SMALL FAIR PRICE

Mayor Urges Support of City—Splendid Means of Advertising.

The mayor will make a plea for a 25-cent admission to the Western Fair tonight at the council meeting. This was a question that was scheduled to come up at the last meeting when owing to the long agenda which included the street railway question and the high school problem it was overlooked.

The mayor believes it is not logical to expect the Western Fair to stand entirely on its own financial feet, and that some measure of money backing should be forthcoming from the city, and perhaps inducing them to buy at a later time. In any case he wants to see the Fair succeed that it should be, and will ask for the grant as an aid to its fuller achievement.

BRUNER IS FINED $25 ON IMMORALITY CHARGE

Woman Allowed To Go On Suspended Sentence—The Magistrate Gives Warning.

After carefully considering their case, Magistrate Graydon fined Harry Bruner $25 and costs and allowed Mrs. Mamie Rae to go on suspended sentence, when they appeared for sentence on immorality charges this morning. Mr. Graydon gave the pair a severe lecture, and told Bruner he was imposing a light penalty, partly on account of his youth, and partly because he was the sole support of his mother and six brothers and sisters. The court warned Mrs. Rae's husband that he should be more careful in the future about having men at the house.

A young girl, charged with disorderly conduct, was put in charge of Mrs. Harrison of the W. C. T. U., and will report to the court again in a month's time.

Dr. Joshee has had a remarkable experience in missionary work in his native land, while Dr. D'Praisier's work as a medical missionary is one of the outstanding achievements of a woman in this work. She leaves London on Wednesday morning on her return trip to India. Dr. John McLaurin is a son of the founder of the Canadian missionary work in India, and is devoting his life to work begun by his father.

CITY MOTORISTS ESCAPE IN HIGHWAY MISHAP

A slight accident occurred about a half a mile beyond Pottersburg yesterday afternoon. A car driven by G. W. Stephenson of this city was going east on the highway when a car proceeding west attempted to pass another motorist. When the driver saw that he could not pass without crashing into Mr. Stephenson's car he stopped suddenly, causing the driver behind him to pull out in the middle of the road. This blocked the highway and to avoid smashing headlong into the other cars Mr. Stephenson had to go into the ditch. No one was injured.

IT'S A "FOOL" PLAN, SAYS ASHPLANT

City Auditor Answers Philip Pocock in Criticism of Financial Report.

JOB IS HARD ONE

City Auditor Ashplant, replying to the action of the public utilities commissioners in dealing with his criticism of their annual financial report at their board meeting, answers Commissioner Pocock in some detail in the following statement:

"Commissioner Philip Pocock is a shrewd businessman. He is one of our level-headed citizens in public office. As a rule, he knows what he is talking about, and does not often put his foot in it so badly as he has done this time in his press controversy with the city auditor. "My Appendix E, quoted in a recent issue of the local press, is related entirely to the insufficient reserve for depreciation and obsolescence of the waterworks plant and equipment. The ledger value of that plant at cost of installation, is around $2,000,000. Commissioner Pocock has given evidence to show that to bring that original cost up to present-day replacement values (on the figures supplied by himself in a hasty criticism) would call for a physical inventory of around $6,500,000 on today's currency valuation. In my judgment he cannot produce the goods. "What is a proper depreciation reserve to take care of the requirements of such a plant? That is exactly the point raised by myself, and which in this case is correctly shown by Commissioner Pocock he cannot produce the goods listed on his ledgers. Part of the original plant has wholly disappeared and has never been written off the ledgers in the same way that the downtown overhead distribution electric system has disappeared, and never been wiped off the ledgers as it should be. The city auditor drew attention to this situation.

"If Commissioner Pocock thinks that a nominal $100,000, today, as 20 years ago, takes proper care of obsolescence and present-day depreciation of a $6,500,000 outfit, I do not hesitate to call it a 'fool proposition.' "As a city auditor, it is my proper business to call the attention of the utilities commissioners to the need for consulting men more practical as themselves on depreciation requirements. In other words, it is up to me to see to it that Commissioner Pocock does his duty as a commissioner, and I fully realize what a job I have on my hands.

"I took no such ridiculous position in my official report as outlined by the last clause of Appendix E from its content and never mentioned depreciation in his press interview. "It was very unfair and quite the improper thing to do. Commissioner Pocock, having led the way in a press controversy, must not complain."

DISEASE HAS FINE NAME, BUT DOES LITTLE DAMAGE. According to the city health officer London has now at least one well-established case of "erythema nodosum," the first for some time. It is not really half as bad as it seems, for he explains that it is simply a matter of small red blotches on the arms and legs, accompanied by more or less headache, and that it is not communicable and does not last long. The origin of this euphonic disease is apparently not plain. A small girl is the patient, and she is reported to be "getting along nicely."

Measles is having quite an innings in Ontario this year. Hamilton and Toronto have a fine crop of spots, and even London has some two thousand cases. Measles seems to be a sporadic disease, and this is one of the years when it thrives exceptionally well.

SMALL IN STATURE, BUT, OH, WHAT A CAPACITY

Inebriated One Warned On Fourth Appearance Since January.

Making his appearance in police court for the fourth time since January on charges of intoxication, a small citizen as far as stature is concerned, but with a large capacity for liquor, faced Magistrate Graydon once more today. Although the magistrate threatened him with a jail term after his third introduction to police cells, the usual $10 fine was imposed.

Constable Elliott told of arresting the man at Central avenue and Richmond street at 10 o'clock Saturday night. He saw the citizen staggering and saw him enter a drug store. "Didn't you say if I hadn't kicked you, you wouldn't have taken me?" demanded the prisoner.

"That makes no difference," declared the court. Constable Ayres, who assisted Constable Elliott, said the prisoner refused to give his name at the station and staggered and yelled. An unopened bottle of rubbing alcohol was found on him when searched. "What's the use of saying you were not drunk?" demanded the magistrate. "Every time you take liquor you make a fool of yourself."

"My sister was waiting for me at the grocer's. I was going home," replied the accused. "He's been here four times since January," snort Chief Birrell. "I'll let you off with a fine this time, but you better spend the next ten days in jail and get sobered up," advised Mr. Graydon.

ANXIETY IS FELT OVER JAP MOVE

English Diplomatic Expert Sees Crisis Over U. S. Immigration Bill.

THREATENS PARLEY

Associated Press Despatch. London, June 2.—Japan's protest against the exclusion provisions of the American immigration law is regarded in some quarters here as justifying anxiety. The diplomatic expert of the Daily Telegraph this morning writes:

"The demand that the legislation against Japanese immigrants should be revoked is undoubtedly a serious one and one is left to wonder what further diplomatic demarche will follow in the event of the almost inevitable American refusal."

The writer asserts that information from competent observers in Japan shows that while the government is most reluctant to take any drastic step, it being irresistibly impelled to defend the national interests by popular pressure and its position is difficult.

The Morning Post expects that the Japanese irritation will jeopardize the success of the diplomatic conference, if one is called after the elections, and surmises that it may also re-awaken the Singapore naval base issue in Great Britain.

Passage of the exclusion provision, the paper says, is virtually an admission that, on certain lines, like that of race, the ordinary machinery of diplomacy breaks down, the deciding factor being the passionate instincts and prejudice of the people.

Recalling that the British Empire is also faced with the racial issue in South Africa, Kenya Colony, Canada and Australia, it adds: "The world is still a very unsafe place and many of the political movements simmering today are almost as difficult to control as an earthquake, one of these being that of race."

Not drunk?" demanded the magistrate. "Every time you take liquor you make a fool of yourself."

"That makes no difference," declared the court. Constable Ayres, who assisted Constable Elliott, said the prisoner refused to give his name at the station and staggered and yelled. An unopened bottle of rubbing alcohol was found on him when searched. "What's the use of saying you were not drunk?" demanded the magistrate. "Every time you take liquor you make a fool of yourself."

"My sister was waiting for me at the grocer's. I was going home," replied the accused. "He's been here four times since January," snort Chief Birrell. "I'll let you off with a fine this time, but you better spend the next ten days in jail and get sobered up," advised Mr. Graydon.

SELLING CHARGE

If a movie director had been on the job Saturday afternoon at the farm of Frank Nelson, north of Pottersburg, he would have taken at least three "surprise" close-ups that would have been worth while of Mr. Nelson, License Inspector Walter Bolton, and Provincial Constable T. Y. Stratton.

The officials, it is stated, had a search warrant and it is alleged were looking for a still. They found 60 bottles of whiskey in the pantry and 2,375 bottles of beer in a shed, neatly wrapped up in 39 cartons which are now reposing at the police station.

Mr. Nelson was surprised at the visit and no doubt the officers were startled to find such a quantity of the thirst quenchers valued at $2,000. However, no time was lost in en-gaging trucks to carry the 2,000-pound load to headquarters.

Nelson appeared in police court this morning and was bailed for a week at the request of his counsel, J. G. Gillanders. The charge laid was one of having liquor for sale.

"There are some facts that I want to clear up for your worship," said Mr. Gillanders, "and that is why I ask for an adjournment."

"It is a serious offence and I think we should have security of at least $2,000," declared the court. "There is $500 cash up now. This man owns 17 acres worth $5,000," replied counsel.

"What is the difficulty in going on today?" queried the court. "I want to get more facts," said Mr. Gillanders. "I would like to have it adjourned too," stated Crown-Attorney Albert M. Judd. "I'd like to look into some of those facts myself."

Nelson finally put up $1,000 cash bail and went to jail for another $1,000. Mr. Gillanders pointed out that his client had been bailed on Saturday night for $500 and had he desired to skip out would have done so before this morning.

"Set Thine House in Order"

A KING of old, it is recorded, received in the midst of a busy reign this injunction: "Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live!"

The declining shadow upon the royal sun dial found him unprepared.

The modern equivalent for setting one's house in order is to make a Will. A man who is too busy to make a Will exposes his loved ones to serious inconvenience, to say nothing of heavy loss.

Why not make your Will to-day? The Canada Trust Company as your Executor will protect the interests of your loved ones. Their problems will receive our utmost consideration.

Upon the business-like management of estates in its care depends the future progress and reputation of The Canada Trust Company, which has a clean record extending over twenty years.

If your Will is already made, a Codicil naming this Company your Executor is the work of but a few moments.

Our Officers will welcome the opportunity to assist you in planning your Will.

Special County Council Committee Will Recommend 11-Mill Tax Rate

COUNTY COUNCIL OPENS MEETING

Bone of Contention Promises To Be Tax Rate—11 Mills Recommended.

WILL ASK GRANT

The county council session, which opened at the county buildings this afternoon at 2 o'clock, promises to be just as warm as the weather, if not more so. The bone of contention between the county daddies promises to be the tax rate, which a special committee will recommend as being placed at 11 mills, 2 mills more than last year.

Councillor Tom Elliott of West McGillivray, who provided most of the excitement at the January session by calling the councillors a bunch of rebels, has not made good his threat of resigning, should the ratepayers of his township so desire, and he will likely be heard from before the week is far advanced.

Col. W. J. Brown and Arthur Little of the University of Western Ontario board of governors are inviting the council to visit Western and decide on the location of the memorial to county soldiers who fell in the war.

The London P. U. C. is asking for a grant towards the upkeep of Springbank Park, but in view of the county's financial burdens, the grant, if it is made, will likely be a small one.

Wednesday afternoon the council will combine business with pleasure at Strathtoy. The members will inspect the House of Refuge and also attend the ceremonies in connection with the opening of a new wing to Strathtoy Hospital.

Warden C. C. Henry was in the chair when the council met at 2 o'clock.

W. S. BREWSTER TO ACT AT TRIAL OF HEWITT

Brantford Attorney Will Prosecute Charge Against Londoner.

Crown Attorney Albert M. Judd has received a telegram from the attorney-general's department stating that W. S. Brewster, K.C., of Brantford, will prosecute the criminal charge against Allan Hewitt at the county court sitting, which opens tomorrow at 1 o'clock before County Judge Taibot Macbeth.

In the ordinary course of events, the case for the crown, but before he was appointed crown attorney, was retained by Mr. Hewitt to act for him.

Mr. Judd, however, prosecute Hewitt into a sealed railroad car at Strathtoy in April, 1922, and is also charged with receiving stolen goods. The grand jury in June, 1923, brought in a true bill against Hewitt, who was too ill to stand trial at that time and in December.

Mr. Judd will, however, prosecute against Hector Swick, who is charged with procuring a young girl for immoral purposes. W. B. Henderson is defending Swick, who asked for trial by judge and jury, when he appeared before Magistrate Graydon several weeks ago.

PARK IS FAST RESEMBLING PARADISE OF FLOWERLAND

Tulips Now at Their Best in Victoria—Over Forty Flower Beds.

65,000 PLANTS

Superintendent E. E. Graham Enthusiastic Over Prospects This Year.

June, month of house flies and screen doors, of straw hats and examinations, of picnics and mosquitoes, of roses and nuptials, but historic for its days of rarity, was ushered in on Sunday with an atmosphere fit for the king's taste. Even as May smiled at parting, so did folks smile at the coming of June.

Superintendent of Parks Ernest E. Graham had a contentment wreathed in smiles this morning. After a wearisome spring in getting over a hundred thousand new plants ready for the annual beautification scheme at Victoria Park and Springbank, fine weather was a sight for sore eyes.

At Victoria Park today tulips, which have reigned supreme among the flowers during May, were bidding a prolonged adieu. Wet weather has lengthened the season a good bit and the later varieties are still in good color and condition. There are tens of thousands of Dutch bulb plants in the flower beds in civic parks year by year, and the color schemes at Victoria have been pleasing to thousands of citizens who find the big avenue near the center of the city a refreshing "breathing place."

Over 40 Flower Beds.

At Victoria Park there are over 40 flower beds, set among the lovely walks that have been laid out among the Canadian maples and other native trees. With the trees now in full leaf, the tulips at their best, and flowers coming along, late but with much promise, the park is on its way to becoming a paradise of flowerland.

Here there are 65,000 plants, outside of the bulbous early season varieties, being planted this year by the corps of skilled gardeners in the parks department. Early tulips have come and gone and beds are now being prepared for later blooming flowers.

Of the later tulips there is a good assortment, mostly from new bulbs. Some of the good strength of growth with stems over two feet in height, while the smaller shoots show good contrast. There is plenty of color and the shading is remarkably good.

Delight of horticulturists are the all-season flower beds, of which there are several at Victoria. There are blooms in these big gardens all the year round. There is a strong background of bushes and tiny plants, and more luxuriant and stronger ones are in good condition. The frost has done little damage except to early tulips, and even that was slight.

Pansies Beautiful.

Pansies have been set out in an amazing range of color combinations. Some beds of smaller plants take painstaking care in planting as there are thousands of plants to be set out.

French lilacs, set out a few years, are reaching good proportions already and are flowering this week. There are bushes of both natural and white flowers, and they all appear fresh and sturdy. Roses are on their way, and so are flags and a wealth of smaller plants.

Parks have not been troubled quite so much this season as in former years by vandalism, though there still appears to be some malicious people who find a queer form of entertainment in destroying plants. Stealing of flowers has not been common and Superintendent Graham is an optimist who looks for an increase in the ranks of flower lovers who appreciate efforts of the city in parks beautification.

DRURY TO SPEAK AT POND MILLS

Grange and U. F. O. Arrange Great Celebration—Prominent Farmers To Attend.

LARGE PROGRAM

Special to The Advertiser. Middlemarch, June 2—E. C. Drury, former premier of Ontario, is billed as the leading speaker at a monster celebration commemorating the 50th anniversary of the memory of those men who organized the first Dominion Grange will be honored.

Mr. Drury, along with other noted workers in political and fraternal Agrarian movements, will help to round out the program which marks the semi-centennial of the Dominion Grange in London. Members of the East Middlesex U. F. O. and Grange have also secured J. C. Lethbridge, M.L.A., whose papers were among the founders of the Grange 50 years ago, and who has occupied the positions of master and secretary.

Mr. Smith, present lecturer of the Dominion Grange, editor of the Weekly Sun, when it was the official organ of the Grange; W. L. Fisher, Burlington, one of the oldest master masters living; A. J. Hodgins, M.P., and J. Freeborn, M.L.A., will both be included in the list to give addresses. President A. S. Angus, president of the provincial executive of the U. F. O., and Howard Bertram, Midhurst, master of the Dominion Grange, will also address the gathering.

Became Reality.

In the Grange rooms at London on June 2 and 3, the first Dominion Grange became a reality. From all parts of Canada came delegates, numbering 25. Only two of the founders are still living, Mr. J. W. Weld, member of the family of William Weld, founder of The Farmer's Advocate, and one of the first officers who did much to bring the Grange to the then young organization. Miss Weld was elected to an office at the first meeting.

The Grange is the only farmers' fraternity in the world. It owes its origin to investigation of conditions in the south following the Civil War in the United States. It was first sent by a commission to Washington to report on conditions in the southern states, and the idea was conceived that a fraternal organization would help to cement the states better. He enthused William Saunders, the noted agriculturist, and a host of others, and a trial was worked out, all bearing on farm life.

Women's Equal Rights.

Kelly's niece, Miss Carrie Hall, of given equal rights, and the Grange is believed to have been the first organization to stand out for the franchise for women. It was opened at the "Tech" in September. It was stated today that the department had approved of the expenditure and plans would go ahead without a hitch.

From fifteen tenders which have been received by the advisory technical committee contract for the installing of the new printing plant will be awarded tonight. The committee meets at the Technical School to choose one of the tenders submitted.

While a sub-committee meeting was held last week to discuss the tenders, no official recommendations have been made public. It is stated in some circles that the expenditure on the printing plant will be around $8,000.

NOTICE OF TAXES SHOULD BE KEPT

Assessment Commissioner Points Out Importance of First Notices.

PROCEDURE IS TOLD

The importance of retaining one's assessment notice until the tax notice comes along is emphasized by Assessment Commissioner Bennett, who points out that many people destroy the assessment notice at the time it is received and that when the tax notice comes along they have forgotten all about the assessment on which their taxes are based and then proceed to pay the amount made by the commissioner or the tax collector, which is out of the question.

"Any complaints as to the assessment should be made," says the commissioner, "to the court of revision on the date named on the back of the assessment notice for each ward. This is the only place constituted by law to receive these complaints. There is, of course, the final appeal to the county assessor which may be made after the court of revision has registered a decision in favor of the assessment."

Statement First.

"When the assessment notice is sent to a house it is simply the statement of the department, showing why certain taxes are asked from the head of the house, its importance is not generally recognized or appreciated by many people for the taxes is not due until the tax notice is received, yet the assessment notice, showing the reason for the taxes is the more important of the two. It should not be lost or destroyed.

"The essential work in a city which is carried on by the assessment department is shown in a report issued at the last convention in Toronto of Municipal Assessors in Ontario, 85 per cent of the total taxation is levied on land and buildings which should be assessed at actual value.

cause of Unrest.

"The evasion of the assessment law is the cause of a growing feeling of unrest in these days of high taxation. The people's municipal representatives do not appear to be particularly interested in the responsibility placed upon them by the appointment of an assessor, which sometimes turns upon the question of salary.

"The upward tendency of the financial requirements of all municipalities directs special attention to the importance of the work of the assessor, who alone is responsible for the equitable distribution of the levy.

"To assess all lands at actual value and all taxable income in accordance with law, irrespective of what has been included in previous assessment rolls, calls for a courage equal to that expected of the soldier who has to go 'over the top.' The assessor of a municipality is an officer who, for the benefit of the city as a whole, should receive the whole-hearted support of the council and the ratepayers."

UNCLE TOM IS MISSING AND SO YOUTH IS HELD

William Salisbury, a husky young man of 17, was dumped from a motor car on Saturday night, near the Oxford street bridge. Questioned by Constable Loader, he could give no particular account of himself, and being without funds, was locked away in the cells till this morning on a charge of vagrancy.

"I came from Petrolia to see an uncle here, and then I was going to work for a farmer by the name of Montgomery," said Salisbury. "If I could only find my Uncle Tom I'd be an rich."

"If you find your Uncle Tom or anyone else that is interested in you, I'll let you go. Meantime, you better get yourself to jail," declared the magistrate.

BOYS' COUNCIL ELECTIONS PROMISES REAL CONTEST

The boys' council elections will take place June 15-22, and a lively interest is being displayed by the youthful aspirants to the offices of boys' mayor and councillors.

G. Uplshaw, for mayor, has issued his platform, which supports an extension of the school hours, and is doing work in the churches where there is no organization at the present time. The candidate also wants to see all boys wearing the C.S.E.T. pin and would sponsor a C.S.E.T. Sunday.

Geoff Kemp, who runs against him, also favors a C.S.E.T. Sunday, and extension of the work of the body in other churches. He promises a stronger co-operation between the C. S. E. T. groups of the city.

LAW AMBLED ALONG WHILE MIKE SLEPT

Petrolia Man Fined $10 For Space On Saturday Night.

Mike Boca of Petrolia was too drunk on Saturday night to know the chances he was running by having a comfortable snooze on the Sarnia road late Saturday night in a motor car parked in the center of the road with all lights out.

High Constable Wharton happened along and brought Mike into the city. According to the evidence given in court before Magistrate Hawshaw this morning, Boca, who is a Rumanian, created a disturbance in Lobo village earlier in the evening. He was fined $5 and costs for being drunk and an extra $5 for being disorderly. The fines were paid by friends.

The prisoner could not state where he got the liquor. "Just dropped from a tree," opined Magistrate Hawshaw. "You might have been charged with driving a car while drunk, which would mean seven days in jail."

The Transient Executor

When appointed as executor your trusted friend may be in the prime of life, mentally alert and physically capable of any task.

But with the passing of twenty or thirty years, what then? Human life is transitory. Age is no respecter of the personal executor.

But there is a continuity of action possible with a trust company, because while a sequence of individual officers may handle its affairs, the life of one dovetails into the other. Many of the estates we are handling have been in charge of our company for a long term of years. Consult us as to the permanency of our service before making your will.

The House of Five Swords

A Romance of Old Virginia.

By TRISTRAM TUPPER.

INSTALLMENT VII.
EDMUND CARTWRIGHT, heir to Colonial House, is expelled from West Point and as a result is exiled from home. He disappears.

COL. CARTWRIGHT, his father, who had expected his son's sword to be the sixth to hang on the library wall, is broken-hearted at the latter's disgrace, and to help him forget he adopts CRYSTAL MACLAURIN, called the Robin, who had been left an orphan after her father's, a bootmaker, death. The colonel sends Crystal to Boston for several years to study music, and upon her return she finds the family fortune dissolved and the colonel in poverty. Crystal loves Edmund.

LAWYER LIVINGSTON, an old family friend and one of those who advised Robin and the colonel to move to the old boot shop in order to economize.

AARON JETT, a former apprentice of Crystal's father and now a prosperous shopkeeper of Riverport, is courting Crystal. Jett hates

DR. KARL LURGENMILLER, a man of mystery, who suddenly finds himself in Riverport in connection with the vast boom of Powder-town, nearby. Lurgenmiller rents Colonial House from the colonel, and strange stories are told of hilarious and exotic parties which Lurgenmiller and his satellites are said to hold in the mansion. Becoming acquainted with Crystal, Lurgenmiller tells her he loves her and also hints at his obligation to the German army. He adds that he trusts her implicitly.

CHAPTER XIV
A Telephone Call.

Emile von Schoenwolf, who arrived at Colonial House shortly after, was said to be in America to execute important missions. Whether or not this was true, von Schoenwolf was the first man to whom Lurgenmiller had shown deference, and this alone gave him standing at Riverport.

The colonel, who had never been robust, but always been of sturdy frame, became seriously ill. Crystal had never known him to be ill before. No, she told herself, there was nothing to fear.

It was nearing midnight one evening a few days after the colonel had been stricken, when Crystal was aroused from light sleep by the cut in the colonel's room by the hurried movements of the trained nurse. The light was dim. She could hear the hissing noise of oxygen. She arose quickly, went to the nurse and whispered:

"Shall I send for Dr. Lurgenmiller?"

"Yes," the nurse answered, "you had better." Crystal hurried to the telephone and recognized the voice of Lurgenmiller, low, metallic. "Yes, who is it?"

"Will you come at once?" he breathed in the phone. "Father is worse."

Why did he hesitate? Then his voice—harder it seemed, colder, lower than before—was telling her it was impossible for him to come. He could send a physician from Powder-town, but that would take time, perhaps an hour. It is better for you to call the local physician, Dr. Kemp.

"He won't come," gasped the Robin. "I will see that he does. Wait at the telephone until I call you."

"But you must come. You must. Immediately."

"There has been an accident," said Lurgenmiller calmly. "Von Schoenwolf has been severely wounded. Hang up your receiver, Miss Cartwright."

Mechanically she obeyed. Presently the telephone rang. "Dr. Kemp will be there at once," Lurgenmiller's voice was hardly recognizable.

He had led to her. She knew—every one in Riverport knew—he was giving up a famous dinner to Von Schoenwolf, with entertainment imported from the city and covers for 10 other guests—Lurgenmiller's "satellites." "The Council of Ten," as they called themselves.

Leaving the telephone Lurgenmiller passed the closed door of the dining-room without pausing to listen to the laughter. There was music, but this did not lure him, nor was there in his movements any indication of a desire for pleasure. Lurgenmiller, it was work, Von Schoenwolf, his guest, was scheduled to leave in the morning; but it was a matter of major importance that he remain at Riverport.

Lurgenmiller ascended the broad stairway, entered the library, switched on the lights and seated himself at the center table. Here he wrote

You Can Eat Anything You Like And Not Have HEARTBURN

In all cases of heartburn there is a gnawing and burning pain in the stomach attended by a disturbed appetite, as when too much food is taken into the stomach. It is liable to ferment and become extremely sour, vomiting occurs, and what is thrown up is generally sour and bitter. When you are in this condition you will find that Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will give you relief right away.

Mr. Joseph H. MacDonald, Christmas Island, N.S., writes:—"Two years ago I suffered all the time from heartburn. I took one vial of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and have never been troubled since."

"It is very nice to be able to eat anything you like and not have heartburn any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.—Adv.

DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

what might have been intended for a farewell note:

"There are three things, Crystal MacLaurin, that I desired for myself: You are the first; then a place to work, a hospital overlooking this village; and, third, I should like to have an heir. The three comprise all a man can desire: Love, Labor, Immortality."

Glancing from the sheet of paper, Lurgenmiller's eyes fell upon the words hanging from their nails beneath the gallery. He wrote another line, rapidly.

"I seem to see a boy, an infant, no higher than my knee, dragging a toy sword that glistens in the sunlight; I see him nodding over the lawn of Colonial House."

Lurgenmiller left the table and examined the wainscoting under the gallery. Beneath the sixth nail he discovered an oblong button forming part of the woodwork. He pressed this, pushed the panel inward.

Striking a match, he found a sheet of foolscap, yellow with age, gray with dust that had sifted through the crack. As he read, the emotions, the tenderness of a moment past, departed, leaving his face, his eyes, of the unyielding grimness of steel tempered in water. Up the broad stairway came the guests of his guests. He replaced the time-discolored sheet of paper and, moved by a sudden idea, caught up the note from the center table. It also inside the wall and closed the panel.

CHAPTER XV
The Midnight Hunt.

When Lurgenmiller returned to the dining-room the lights had been extinguished and candles brought into the room. There was no one there but Schoenwolf or Lurgenmiller, and in the wavering light it became apparent that a fiat key dangled from each that had been passed through a cord candle.

"The keys," explained Lurgenmiller in a conversational tone, were to the lodge."

"When the candle in front of you burns out and severs the cord, the keys will become yours—tentatively," said Lurgenmiller. "Before dawn, I hope the keys will become permanent."

"You are talking of severing the cord, and your respective abilities as huntsmen. It has been suggested to me that nothing could be more fitting than to open the lodge with a hunt. I think you will agree with this."

Lurgenmiller then continued to outline his scheme for the evening's entertainment. He told his guests that there would be a race to the lodge and a bear hunt to follow, and if during the latter each man did not bring in a pair of tusks he would be barred from future hunting. Each of them must wait until the key in front of them struck the table, added Lurgenmiller, before starting for the lodge.

Shortly after his announcement the cords began to sever, and as each key struck the table there was a rush for the door—until at last Von Schoenwolf and Lurgenmiller were left alone. Outside there was a great roaring and coughing of high-powered motors as the guests clambered in their cars and raced off through the night.

Von Schoenwolf was on his feet. "My doctor friend, you have given me no candle, but I insist on joining the others," he said, almost without emotion.

Lurgenmiller dropped his voice. "You will arrive ahead of the others if you desire to do so," said he, "but you are taking a needless risk. They are carrying their wire well. You have work of importance—particularly, I surmise, in Mexico."

Von Schoenwolf swept the key from the table. "What car shall I use?" Lurgenmiller led the way out a side door. Drawn up to the veranda was the physician's high-powered car. The huge back man was behind the wheel.

"Take the upper road to the lodge," directed Lurgenmiller. "See that no one passes you, and that no one stays ahead of you."

Re-entering the house, Lurgenmiller summoned Robert and told him he was retiring to his room and did not wish to be disturbed on any account. Then he carried the wire well. You have work of importance—particularly, I surmise, in Mexico."

SUMMER FASHIONS WILL BE STRIPPED OF FURBELOWS

American Women Attending Conventions Indicate Trend of the Mode.

WARDROBE'S READY

Simplicity and Charm Marks All Afternoon and Dinner Frocks.

By AILEEN LAMONT. Copyright, 1924.

New York, May 31.—Feminine influence has never been so potent in the past as it will be during the convention month of June. The women whose charm and personality not only will have a voice in the nation's political affairs but they will go far toward dominating the type and kind of clothes their sisters throughout the country will wear this summer and fall.

Preparations already made by the women who lead genuine thought indicate that fashions for the next six months will be stripped of many of the furbelows and will be marked by a charming, but none the less expensive, simplicity.

The trend can readily be estimated by the wardrobe selected by one of the leading delegates to a New York convention whose charm and personality, as well as her political acumen, make her a factor to be reckoned with. These are some of the clothes she has selected for convention week:

(1) A sport suit of sand-colored English worsted with a box coat, single-breasted of medium length, with the skirt extremely plain and straight, falling within ten inches of the ground. With this is worn white silk broadcloth blouse, a small close-fitting collar of laquer red, a scarf of the same tint, flesh-colored stockings and black pumps.

(2) A morning dress of taffeta in a gray and black Scotch design, also of slim lines with long waist, finished with a dainty white organza collar and short sleeves which consist of little more than a ruffle from the shoulder. To complete this costume is a small white felt hat, a white crepe scarf, a pair of slippers with long white silk fringe, gray silk hose and white pumps.

(3) A navy blue frock of crepe satin, with a straight line, rather tightly fitting, with snug long sleeves coming well down over the hand. The only fullness visible is a slight flare from the knee to the hem of the skirt. With this ensemble is to be worn a small black hat of close turban design, relieved by a touch of white, a small, tight, single skin necklace and a pair of slippers of the same shade as the frock, and black patent leather pumps.

(4) An afternoon frock of salmon-colored chiffon over cloth of silver, with loose, graceful bishop sleeves. The skirt of the dress is absolutely plain, but draped slightly at the left hip where the material is caught by a rosette of crystal beads. To accompany this is a large hat of horsehair, the brim turned sharply up at one side and lined with silver, gray stockings and gray suede slippers.

(5) A dinner dress of white satin, covered in unusual geometrical designs in silver beads, with a cape effect diagonally across, the back from right shoulder to left arm pit, the end falling almost to the skirt edge. Silver stockings and slippers added to the costume, which is completed by a wrap of gray chiffon trimmed with mole.

(6) In case of cold or unpleasant weather and for motoring, a top coat of soft Scotch tweed, in an invisible plaid, is included.

The noise didn't stop Skimmer and his mate continued to flutter about the entrance, scolding and threatening and pleading. The other feathered folk hung around for a while with a great clatter of tongues. Drummer the Woodpecker thumped four times on the side of the house. But it was no use. Timmy the Flying Squirrel refused to so much as poke his nose out again. Finally Skimmer and Swallow were the only ones remaining. The other feathered folk had grown tired of the excitement and returned to their regular haunts. They were sorry for the Swallows, but after all, what Timmy the Flying Squirrel said was true. After all, it was no business of theirs anyway. Finally Skimmer and Mrs. Swallow flew over to Farmer Brown's barn and sat on the ridge to talk things over. Their joy in getting back home had been spoiled.

WEDDINGS

McLEOD—NORSWORTHY.

An interesting wedding took place at St. Andrew's Church, Windsor, Thursday evening, May 29, at 7 o'clock, when Helen Marie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Norsworthy, 587 Waterloo street, was married to James Bruce McLeod of Windsor, a Patrol officer.

The young bride, who wore a graceful gown of white satin and carried a shower bouquet of roses, was attended by Raymond E. Ashton, Esq., of American Beauty crepe and carried a bouquet of roses. Little Miss Geraldine McKinnon acted as flower girl and wore a frock of white organza, and carried a basket filled with sweet peas. Dr. D. S. McKinnon acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. McKinnon arrived in town on Friday evening and a reception was held in their honor at the home of the bride's parents. Out-of-town guests who were included were: Mrs. C. Hales, Miss Margaret Hales, Miss Helena Norsworthy, Miss Barbara Clarke and Miss Vera Hill, all of St. Thomas. The groom was a former resident of St. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. McLeod will reside in Windsor.

ASHTON—TALBOT.

A quiet wedding took place Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Talbot, Cynthia street, when their daughter, Mabel Elizabeth, was married to Rev. J. T. Ashton, also of this city. Rev. J. T. C. Morris performed the ceremony. The house was decorated with quantities of tulips and snapdragons, and the bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of powder blue Canton crepe and carried a shower of roses. The wedding music was played by the bride's sister, Miss Elsie Talbot, and during the signing of the register Miss M. Hutchings of Ingersoll sang delightfully, accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Elliott, also of Ingersoll. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Ashton left on a honeymoon, which will be spent in Detroit and upon their return they will reside in this city. Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gunning of Granton, Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. M. Timmy Causes Excitement in Orchard By Taking Skimmer's House

TIMMY REFUSES TO GIVE UP.

The Old Orchard dearly loves excitement. It is getting it now. Skimmer the Swallow and Mrs. Swallow were making a great fuss in front of the little house which they claimed belonged to them. In the doorway, Timmy the Flying Squirrel, all the other feathered folk in the Old Orchard were urging Skimmer and Mrs. Swallow to drive Timmy out.

"It is our house!" screamed Skimmer. "You have no right in it!"

"Then put me out," retorted Timmy with a mischievous grin, "I dare you to put me out. You say it is your house. What you mean is that it was your house. It is my house now. You know the rule of the Green Forest, the Green Meadow and the Old Orchard just as well as I do. You know that an empty house belongs to me. Anyone who wants to have a right to my house, he must live in it early this spring. I suits me. It suits me very well, indeed. I don't quit Mrs. Timmy. Now, fly away and look for another house."

But the Swallows wouldn't fly. They begged and pleaded. They said that all the other houses in the Old Orchard had been taken, and unless they could have that house they would have to leave the Old Orchard altogether.

"That's too bad," replied Timmy. "But, you know, this is my house now. I shall stay."

"Tut, tut, tut," scolded Jenny Wren, jerking her tail in that funny way of hers. "Tut, tut, tut! You don't belong in the Old Orchard, Timmy, and you know it! You belong over in the Green Forest! Give Skimmer his house and go back where you belong. We don't want you over here."

"No one asked you for your opinion, Jenny Wren," retorted Timmy. "I may have belonged in the Green Forest once, but now I belong right here. Such a fuss! Such a fuss to make over such a small matter! I'm tired of listening to such a racket."

With this Timmy disappeared inside the little house.

The noise didn't stop Skimmer and his mate continued to flutter about the entrance, scolding and threatening and pleading. The other feathered folk hung around for a while with a great clatter of tongues. Drummer the Woodpecker thumped four times on the side of the house. But it was no use. Timmy the Flying Squirrel refused to so much as poke his nose out again. Finally Skimmer and Swallow were the only ones remaining. The other feathered folk had grown tired of the excitement and returned to their regular haunts. They were sorry for the Swallows, but after all, what Timmy the Flying Squirrel said was true. After all, it was no business of theirs anyway. Finally Skimmer and Mrs. Swallow flew over to Farmer Brown's barn and sat on the ridge to talk things over. Their joy in getting back home had been spoiled.

Light Weight Stage Scenery.

Stage scenery made of aluminum is used in some parts of Europe where wood is costly. The metal sheets, besides being light and easily moved, can be readily cleaned as new scenes are to be painted on.

Includes Them All and Warns Danger Signal

Watch Out for the "Misunderstood" Married Man, the "Love-at-First-Sight" Artist, the Sinner Who Craves To Be Reformed, and the Platonic Lover—Believe in No Man's Love-Making Unless It's Backed Up With a Marriage Proposal.

A young girl wishes to know how to distinguish genuine love from spurious; how to tell whether a man is merely flirting or means it when he tells you that you are the only girl, and that he never loved before.

Alas, daughter, there is no Solomon who can answer your question. Men are deceivers ever, and there is no acid test that you can apply to either their words or deeds that will infallibly enable you to know the gold from the pinchbeck.

There are men who go to see a girl six times a week, who feed, and ride her, and take her to shows, who attentions are without intention, and who merely hang around her because her living-room is a good camping place and she is agreeable company. Also there are men whose wooing would charm the very birds out of the trees, who do not mean a word they say and who merely make love because they enjoy enacting the Romeo role.

There is no sure way of judging the sincerity of a man's love-making; but, generally speaking, the worse he does it the better it is from a matrimonial standpoint. Distrust too glib love-making. If a man quotes poetry and says lovely, soulful things you may know he is flirting. But if he gets red in the face and looks as if he were about to choke on his Adam's apple while he blurts out a bald statement of the state of his affections, you may let your thoughts dwell with the problem of whether you will have a church wedding or be married under a floral bell at home.

It is also useful for a young girl to remember that there are just as many varieties of masculine flirts as there are of feminine vamps, and that it behooves her to be on her guard against these.

The most common of these is the masher—the varnished-haired, pinched-in-waisted, over-dressed Lotharios that you may see lounging against store windows and hanging around the lobbies of theatres, ogling everything in skirts that passes.

The masher's methods are simple to the verge of childishness. He does not exert himself to charm the fair sex. He does not have to. He has merely to "give them the eye," and the treat of looking at him, and the trick is done.

It is sometimes said that the masher is dangerous. This is rank flattery. No woman is so plain as to be pleased by his notice; no one so unadmired as to be flattered by his attentions. Don't worry about him. The masher is no menace to your happiness.

Next in point of numbers is the universal flirt. He makes love to everything between the cradle and the grave. He starts on the primitive principle that the only way to entertain a woman is by talking, sentiment to her, as one would shake a rattle to amuse a baby.

This is a good theory, but it fails in the application because the "business" of love-making too well—just where to take your reputation makes him too expert. Beware of the man who knows hands, just when to drive your hand down his shoulder and tell you "my own," and whose kiss flutters down on your lips instead of hitting the back of your head or the end of your nose. He is not an amateur, he is a professional.

The universal flirt's twin brother is the "love-at-first-sight" man. Five minutes after you have met him he tells you that he was thrilled by a strange presentation of fate the minute he saw you. In ten minutes he is confiding to you that you are the ideal for whom he has been searching for many years. In thirty minutes, you are hearing the sad story of his life that he has never confided to a human being before; and within the hour, you are aware that you have inspired a deathless passion.

Shut your ears to the "love-at-first-sight" flirt. No affidavit goes with his love-making and no mention of the altar.

Another male flirt who is very dangerous, especially to young girls, is the man whose strong suit is his sins. He talks darkly of a lurid past. He never had a mother, but if some angel woman would only put her little white hand in his she could lead him up to the higher life.

Goodness only knows why, but the temptation to make a reformation of herself is almost irresistibly fascinating to young girls, so walk wide of the man who shows symptoms of making you his mother confessor. There is a regiment of other flappers praying for him, too.

Equally dangerous is the serious flirt, who never compliments a woman about her face. He brings her books instead of bouquets. He has long talks with her about her soul and the problems of life, but he never asks any woman to discuss with him the problem of the high cost of living and how two can live as cheaply as one.

Watch out for the married flirt. Especially if you are a business girl, get out your life-preserver when your boss or some fellow employee confides to you that he has a secret sorrow and is married to a woman who does not understand him. The trouble with him is that generally his wife understands him too well, but that's none of your affair. You don't hold the job of public confessor, and, anyway, there is no use in wasting your time, your youth and your beauty on a man who is already taken.

The most dangerous of all flirts is the platonic flirt. He is a hard-boiled proposition, who goes into the game fortified at every possible point against matrimony.

He serves notice at the beginning that there is nothing doing in wedding bells, and then he feels he can go as far as he likes. If a woman is foolish enough to let him monopolize her and keep other men away, it is her own risk.

The platonic flirt is great fun because he is past master of love-making, but don't play around the fire with him unless you have an asbestos heart.

But the proof of the pudding is in the eating, daughter. Never believe in a man's love-making unless he backs it up with a bona fide proposal of marriage.

MONDAY, JUNE 2, 1924.

The Senate Fighting the People.

The senators actually staged the promised spectacle of having competing railway lines appear at Ottawa to criticize the proposed extensions to the Canadian National Railways.

The exhibition provided, that of representatives of competing lines being consulted about the program of the railways owned and financed by the people of Canada, constitutes a piece of unparalleled political stupidity on the part of the senate.

Not only that, but it is poorly-concealed opposition to this same road.

The people of Canada have well over a billion dollars worth of property at stake. They are year after year putting up all the deficits from their pockets. Sir Henry Thornton and those associated with him are making a splendid effort to get the property to a position where it will at least take care of itself, and prevent a private railway monopoly in Canada.

While all this is going on Canada is called upon to witness this road being put through a form of impertinent, unfair questioning that looks more like an inquisition than anything else.

The senators staging this performance are always ready to preface each remark with the assurance that they have the interests of the National Railways at heart. They have not otherwise they would not sponsor such a humiliating and damaging ordeal on officials of these lines.

The National Railways must succeed, and they must be allowed to reach out after new business. There is a degree of urgency in the matter that the senators refuse to recognize. Every million dollars that the National Railways can add to its earnings is a million dollars less for the people of the Dominion to put up in the way of a direct tax levy.

Every move made by the senate that makes it impossible to increase the earnings of the road constitutes a further direct tax on the people of Canada.

The present guerilla warfare staged by the senators against the people's property increases the regret that senatorial appointment is permanent and beyond the reach of the ballot box. It increases the now very general opinion that the time is due for a sweeping measure of senate reform.

When the senate deliberately seeks to add to the burden of the taxpayer by thwarting the progress of the National Railways, it is time for the people to demand action that will curb the powers of the senate and cut its membership by at least two-thirds of its present enrollment.

Board of Education in Control.

Dr. Merchant of the Ontario department of education intimated during his stay in London that there was no intention on the part of Toronto to settle the collegiate tangle in London. The matter was one to be dealt with by the board of education in this city, and not the city council.

This is as it should be. It has been a mistake all through to put the school question in a position where it could be tossed back and forth from council to board of education. It has only served to muddle and confuse a situation that called for only one thing—straight dealing based on the needs of the situation and the ability of the people to meet them.

The prices mentioned for new colleges in this city have been too high. The first estimate of $700,000 must have been a wild guess. The revised figure of $275,000 for one school is still out of proportion.

The board of education is building a school in West London to replace the old Empress avenue structure. It is a good building and a commodious one. There are 15 standard classrooms, domestic science and manual training, which are equal in size to four class-rooms. Then there is a good-sized auditorium, rooms for nurses, teachers, principal's office, etc. It will have accommodation for over 600 pupils. Nothing is being skimped, and the finished building will be a splendid three-story structure, for $180,000 or perhaps a little less.

The new collegiate unit now contemplated would not require one-half the accommodation provided at Empress avenue. There is no call or reason for a better class of building than is being erected there. It should be possible to build a collegiate of some eight to ten rooms at a very decided reduction on the price of the much larger school in London West. If it cannot be done, then it is time we revised our views as to what a high school or a collegiate is in the way of architectural requirements.

The board of education should now proceed on the assumption that they are in charge of the situation, absolutely and without any doubt in the matter. There is no good reason why they should continue any longer the policy of allowing the matter to be dragged through committee stages. They should formulate a definite plan, with the cost placed on a basis that will compare favorably with the school being built in London West. It should be possible to secure a site and build the school inside the $200,000 mark. Such a plan would convince the ratepayers that the board of education has decided to meet the secondary school situation in an adequate way with a minimum of expenditure for an adequate building.

Once they have a definite proposal of this nature the next step is to take it to the people. They would be prepared to favorably consider such a question. Once they had given their answer that would end all the controversy. It is the one clear way out of a situation that has dragged along for too great a length of time.

One Thing Or the Other.

President Coolidge does not make many addresses, but when he does break the presidential silence he generally says something.

In his Memorial Day address he touched on the attitude of United States toward the League of Nations; in fact he more than touched on it because he put the case so bluntly that United States cannot dodge what he said.

President Coolidge believes that United States should do one of two things: (1) Go wholeheartedly into the League and make all necessary sacrifices to do so, or (2) state definitely that the country is not going in.

His stand is a nicely-turned rebuke to the unctuous suggestions made for the remodelling of the whole League of Nations so that United States might participate in its activities. It is leveled with equal deliberation at the annoying aloofness that many U. S. politicians assume toward the whole organization.

It is time United States abandoned its position of being neither lukewarm nor cold. President Coolidge has expressed a view held by a great many people in United States and outside of it. It is high time that the republic declared its intention of wholeheartedly and unreservedly supporting the league.

Taxes in London and Toronto.

The finance commissioner of Toronto wants to change the method of collecting taxes in that city. Apparently the present system of collecting arrears is not producing results.

London's system differs from that of Toronto in several ways. Take a case of arrears in the two places. In London 5 per cent is added as each unpaid installment falls due. The same thing is done in Toronto. When it starts on the second year London adds another 5 per cent, making a 10 per cent addition, and this process is kept up. Toronto, at the end of the first year, charges interest "at the rate of 6 per cent." There is no particular damage done, because money could not be borrowed by the average ratepayer at that figure. That is the plan that Toronto wants to get away from.

It is now proposed to give Toronto power to sell property for unpaid taxes six months after the close of the fiscal year, a plan that is too extreme, and one that the legislature would hardly sanction.

London cannot proceed with a tax sale for three years, and it has not been the policy here to push tax sales. It has been found to be a better plan to use every other means to get the taxes, and the addition of an extra 5 per cent penalty for each unpaid year has provided an incentive to pay that has been lacking in Toronto.

As proof of the fact that the London plan works, there has not been a tax sale here in ten years, although this record will be broken this year on some lots where the charges for local improvements have been so high as to force some vacant property on the market. Toronto could well afford to look over London's plan. It has been tried and found to produce results, and it avoids the extremes to which Toronto's proposed plan proposes to go.

The Position of Mr. Asquith.

Mr. Asquith, leader of the Liberal party in the British Commons, declined to throw the Liberal votes against the Labor government on a division planned by the Conservatives with the idea of bringing about its defeat.

The Liberal leader's reason for his attitude was that he desired to see fair play, and if the Labor party had any contribution to make in the way of useful legislation to settle the problems of Britain, it should have the opportunity of going ahead and doing it.

It may be that Mr. Asquith also had in mind that forcing the downfall of the government would not help his own party fortunes, but, accepting his remarks at their face value, they represent a high standard of political ethics.

It is an attitude not often seen in the heat of parliamentary bitterness. It is generally a battle between the ins and the outs, with seldom any consideration for the welfare of the most interested party, the nation itself. It is this spirit of Asquith, despite the taunts of Conservatives who, seek one thing only, the downfall of the government, that has kept the Liberal leader in the public life of Britain for so long a period. From the standpoint of practical politics it is a questionable venture, but all honor to a leader who is able to look over the head of party advantage and view the welfare of the nation.

Note and Comment.

Communists nominated a pugilist as head of the German Reichstag. They wanted a man who could wave his fists as well as his tongue.

German scientist claims that fish can hear and recognize a familiar sound. Perhaps that's why they always used to come to bite when they heard a cork pop.

It's hard to keep your temper when you want to talk about what the frost did to your tomatoes and the other fellow insists on reciting what the dog did in his tulip bed.

A grand jury report submitted at Philadelphia tells of prison conditions in some states to which the word "barbarous" is applied. There is no reason or excuse for such a condition in that country. It is wealthy and boasts of its advancement in humanitarian lines. There are some rooms in its own house that Washington should renovate.

There is an automobile for sale in New York that can be secured for $32,000. It was once the property of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria. There was nothing in the way of trimmings that had been omitted. Even the door handles contained miniature engravings of the king and queen. The whole thing constitutes such a lavish expenditure of public money as to suggest one reason why there are not as many kings as there used to be.

Dr. Frank Crane

WHAT SHALL ENDURE?

There is a good deal of a tendency in this brutal materialistic age, to worship the great, stupid god, Fact. A hard, gritty, tangible brick is considered much more real than a shimmering, flickering idea. Hence we are building thirty-story office buildings, but we are writing no Hamlets or Iliads.

It seems to be a self-evident truth that the thing which is more real than the thing which is only imagined. However, it is not true at all. Dreams, on the contrary, are more enduring than court testimony. Fancy is more permanent than fact. An airy nothing of the brain will outlive a stone castle.

There are few facts of history that are not questioned, even denied; the statements of legend are not denied. What's the use? They do not pretend to be true. They are saved by their modesty. Pride goeth before a fall; and the insolvent historical date meets the fate of all boasters and is eventually discredited, while the gay and debonair myth, which put on airs of verity, lives on to charm the race.

The works of the imagination stand the storms of centuries, while the works of man's hands fall. The tooth of time which gnaws the temple is powerless against the legend of its god, temple is powerless against the legend of its god. The ancient shrines of India are fallen down and gone, over their scattered stones the lizard creeps and the moss grows; trees have sprung up in the cracks of their monoliths; but the folk tales which Hindu mothers sang in the days when these holy houses were freshly built Hindu mothers still sing to their babies today, when the antiquary is trying to decipher the inscription on the temple fragments.

The Parthenon in Athens is a noble ruin, the crowded statues which Saul of Tarsus saw as he walked up to Mars Hill have been pillaged, broken, scattered; the four winds of heaven have divided among themselves the physical splendors of Greece; but the song a blind old Greek minstrel sang before these mighty houses were set up rings in the ears of the twentieth century. "Moenia aedae thea Pelopides Achilles."

Of "the glory that was Rome," Hadrian's gardens at Tivoli, once the wonder of the world, full of palaces and porticoes, artificial lakes and grottoes, temples and schools and baths and royal seats, are now a place of desolation, only one plant, a species of syringa which the emperor brought from the Orient, still blooming here, fragrant and faithful to his memory. The Roman forum is a hole in the ground, a marble wilderness of destruction, though it was "once and long the center of the universe, whence a mandate, eagle-winged, went to the ends of the earth," but the poems of one Horace, who walked its streets in the days of its prime, are yet learned by school children the world over; rock and bronze have perished; it was the singer who built the "monument more lasting than brass."

The Summer Season

This is the season of the year when every mail brings fresh report of what the boosters have to say about some new-found health resort. So men and women spend the hours and figure out just what they'll do, to spend the summer out of town and get their purses caved in two.

Here is one spot, the folder says, it's full of rocks and nature stuff, it's perched upon a rocky cliff and likewise run upon a bluff.

Ah, we have tasted of the joy of pickin' out them summer homes, a place to go and cease from care and rest our fifteen lazy bones.

There's always flies and flappers, too, there's bathin' suits for fat and thin, there's always some sweet dude about who plays upon a mandolin.

And present in the list is he who earns just eighteen bones a week, he's dressed in flannel and in silk, he's curried like a high-priced sheik.

How does he do it? We say all, he peels the scads from off his roll, and every day he sets the pace he's sinkin' farther in the hole.

He speaks about the cars he's got, of how his eight will snort and roar, while all the time his dad's at work to shoo the balliff from the door.

The heiress, too, she's likewise there, she's swathed in purple and in pink, while all the time her mother's home, a-hobblin' round the kitchen sink.

The flies, the sand, the coat of tan, the dance hall and the soda fizz, they flourish in the summer time, when Elizabeth is not plain Lizz.

Well, let them go and have their fling, and spin their yarns of things that ain't, go dab the powder on your nose and mix anew the pot of paint. For all too soon those days will flee, the camp fire and the soda fizz, and they'll be humpin' round the lot a-nursin' corns and rheumatism.—ARK.

Murdock and Crerar

(From the Chesley Enterprise).
 The Home Bank has been brought to the front again by the charge in parliament against Hon. Jas. Murdock, minister of labor, of having knowledge through his position as a cabinet minister, that the Home Bank was drifting into bankruptcy, withdrawn $4,050 from the Home Bank a few days before it failed. It is a mighty hard thing for a man or woman not to try to save his or her earnings and Hon. James Murdock is a poor man, but he secured his money out of the Home Bank in breach of his obligation as a minister of the crown, and in violation of the honor, dignity, and traditions of parliament. It seems to us that Murdock would be well advised to hand in his resignation as a cabinet member to the premier. Had Mr. Murdock used his money in paying some debt instead of transferring it to another bank, such a strong case could not have been presented against him.

Hon. Thomas Crerar was another who had a hunch the Home Bank was likely to fail, and he disposed of his stock. That will be called business foresight, but the man who bought the stock, especially if held liable for double the amount, will not consider Crerar was straight.

 Each morning on my desk I find
 My mail in neat array,

 Some fascinating thing I see

 A fortune, haply, waits for me,
 At least, that's what I hope.

 And leaves me all forlorn
 Is, when I think I've got a check,
 To read: "You're overdrawn."

Carpentier, Punched and Staggering At Last, Loses Decision To Gibbons

Carp Shows Only Gameness In Running Long-Range Scrap With Phantom Tommy

Frenchman's Rapier Right Was Slow—Gibbons Lacked K. O. Punch.

CARP HURT ANKLE

Associated Press Despatch. Michigan City, Ind., June 1.—That Georges Carpentier is a game fighter and can take punishment, was the agreement of experts who witnessed Saturday's ten-round international bout, won by Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul light heavyweight, the decision being made by referee Arthur Dwyer.

As the Indiana law forbids prize fights and decision bouts, for ten rounds the French air service veteran pugilist, who fought before Champion Jack Dempsey, withstood a battering that only a few men of his class have taken since the time of John L. Sullivan, the writers agree. His much-boasted right, wielding like a rapier, failed to injure his opponent, exciting ones of which were Tommy's flush on the chin, but failed to sound curtains. The St. Paul boxer immediately closed in and battered the Frenchman's

In the opening round, Georges lashed out with his famous sloop producer, but Tommy was under and over the punch before time to slap a bolt into Carpentier's ribs which raised a red welt, marking the point where further attacks were made when fighting was in vogue.

Throughout the fracas Carpentier elected to fight at long range in the hope of outboxing his opponent and save himself from the hammer punches of the St. Paul batter. He was virtually on a continual retreat to escape

Gibbons' big opportunity came in the ninth. After about one minute of boxing Carpentier stepped to the floor and Gibbons stepped back and gave him a chance to recover. When Carpentier arose he pointed to his left leg, indicating with his glove that he had been injured. He yelled to his corner, where Francois Deschamps, the excellent little Frenchman who has been Carpentier's manager during his entire ring career, was waving to him and shrieking in French, asking him to continue boxing. Carpentier rushed away and Gibbons rushed to the attack. He jabbed with right and left and swung a few lefts, Carpentier continuing to beat the time. The Frenchman seemed punched and he was limping badly, but Gibbons did not have enough to topple him.

When Carpentier staggered to his corner he was limping with the right leg and not the left. His face was bleeding from a few cuts and his chin and the forehead were stung by two men frantically rubbed his legs, both of them.

Carpenter staggered out of his corner when the bell rang for the last round. He limped badly. He said something to Gibbons and stood before him smiling and unmarked. Gibbons' smile changed to a loud laugh, and he rushed at the Frenchman.

It was a sorry showing that both made in the tenth round. Carpentier, tired and weary, limped away from the ring, backing away from his Irish adversary, would have been an easy mark for any boxer with a punch. Here was a prizefighter of Gibbons. He tried hard enough to make it win for him with a knock-out. He drove the Frenchman around the ring. He landed the left high. It struck above Carpentier's left eye and made a rash from which the blood trickled into Carpentier's eye. He kept rattling Carpentier with rights and lefts and Carpentier continually fell back before the attack but he kept his feet low and when the groggy Frenchman would make a desperate swing with the right, just as he had made the first round. These swings passed over Gibbons, he always managed to duck under them.

Georges All But Out. Carpentier was all but out when he had bled, ending the tenth and last round. Still, he was not out. He had taken all the punishment offered him and still managed to stand. He staggered to his corner, his face bleeding and his shoulders bent, a strength agent stepped to him and offered him a hand. As the ally of France, the Greek god, fistie idol of a republic, he presented a sad figure.

A crowd of more than 24,000 fans crowded into the arena here, and reports today were that only 16,000 admissions were paid, many crashing into the gates and others being accounted for by passes. Gibbons received $61,781, including $5,000 for training expenses, while Georges drew down $20,000. The total gate receipts amounted to $227,597, according to revised figures made public today.

Georges, when both boxers were ready for the going, slipped a rubber plate into his mouth to protect his teeth, but Gibbons' second knocked the plate was shown to referee Dickerson, who put it in his pocket.

Gibbons had to remove the tape from his hands prior to the fight. When Manager Deschamps excitedly called attention to a violation of an agreement to have both boxers enter the ring with hands unbound, he made Gibbons unwind the tape, inspected it, and then re-roll it.

"Monstee is the best boxer I ever saw," said Carpentier after the fight. "I am sorry I hurt my ankle, otherwise possibly I could have made it a knockout."

"I believe I have convinced everyone that I am entitled to a return bout with Dempsey," said Gibbons.

CRUISE RECEIVES LAST KNOCK-OUT

So Says Gallant Frenchman After Taking Count At Frush's Hands.

Special to The Advertiser. Paris, June 1.—Denny Frush American boxer today knocked out Eugene Crigul, former world's champion featherweight, in the eighth round of what was to have been a twenty-round bout.

During the seventh Crigul appeared to be a bit fatigued, and his aim was inaccurate. After two minutes of fighting Frush, after landing several jabs, sent over a right to knock his opponent out.

The eighth Frush sailed in to the Frenchman, landing at will on the face and head. He attempted to raise his eyes staring, finally went to the canvas from a hard right to the jaw.

He was all out. He attempted to rise, but was unable to do so. After the referee had counted him out, Frush said the referee was too fast for him.

In the preliminary the French boxer Paolino knocked out Arthur Towney, the English light heavyweight, Paolino did the trick in one minute and 20 seconds, whereas last month in Vienna, it required two rounds for Georges Carpentier to dispose of him.

Crigul's battle with Frush today was considered by the sporting people as the turning point in the former world's featherweight champion's career. It meant his return to oblivion, or a resumption of his standing as one of the foremost fighters of his class.

"You will see me getting knocked out again," Crigul said before the fight. "I have been champion of the world, and that is good enough."

Orients, Knights of Columbus Take One-Sided Engagements

Three Forest City Hurlers Fail To Stop March of K. C.'s To 17-0 Shutout—Errors Costly To London Views.

Topheavy scores were well to the fore in the inter-club League games on Saturday, when the Orientals defeated the London Views 14-1 at Queen's Park, and the Knights of Columbus blanked the Forest City crew 17-0 at Sunshine Park.

Harkling on the part of the Orientals, who gathered 14 safeties, and errors by the London Views account for the result at the east end diamond.

At Sunshine the K. C.'s, playing professional for the entire nine innings, rapped out 16 hits, including one homer, two triples and two doubles, that had the operator running itself ragged.

The Knights had everything their way after the third, when they put one run across. In the next inning they added five more, and then on to it was a runaway. McVicar, who started for the Forest City, surrendered to the heavy gunning of the K. C.'s, and was followed in turn by Hazelgrove and Three-base hits—Mascari, McGuire, Struck out—By Nopper 1, off McVicar 2, off Hazelgrove 1. Passed balls—Hicks 1. Double plays—Nopper 1, Hazelgrove 1.

Nine Hurlers Used in 27-10 Melee At Buffalo.

Associated Press Despatch. Baltimore, June 1.—Jersey City turned on the champion Orioles today and defeated them, 6 to 2. The contest was halted by rain in the first half of the ninth, in which the visitors added two runs to their total, but the score reverted back to the inning previous.

NEWARK WINS, 12 TO 3. Reading, June 1.—Newark defeated Reading here today, 12 to 3. The Bears scored ten runs in the first inning off Turo and Mammaux, a pair of errors helping in the big rally. After that Clark hurled a good ball.

LEAFS VICTORS. Syracuse, June 1.—A sensational batting rally in the seventh inning which netted six runs out of six hits for Syracuse fell just short of the lead which Toronto had set up, and the Leafs won, 7 to 6, here today. Three doubles and three singles, plus two runs, gave the second largest crowd in the season a thrill and made the Stars look good after six innings of ups and downs. The Stars failed to come through in the pinches and left men on bases in a reckless manner.

MOTHER SAW TANLAC BUILD UP DAUGHTER

Mrs. Baker, of Kingston, Gives Medicine Full Credit.

"When I think of the wonderful change that has taken place in Kathleen's health, I just feel like praising Tanlac to everyone," recently said Mrs. G. Baker, 12 Earl St., Kingston, Ont. In describing the benefits her daughter, one of Kingston's most popular young ladies, received from the famous treatment.

"Before taking Tanlac Kathleen was dreadfully weak and nervous, and had such severe headaches she was almost frantic. Her sleep was broken and restless, she had deep circles under her eyes, and would hardly eat anything.

"But Tanlac has built her up until she is bubbling over with health and energy. She eats heartily, sleeps soundly, never seems to get nervous or have a headache, and enjoys life to the limit. Tanlac is indeed a grand medicine."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

FOUR DEFENDANTS FREED OF BLAME

Plaintiffs Lose Decisions Granted in Non-Jury Supreme Court Cases.

LACK OF EVIDENCE

As a rule when a man goes to court as plaintiff in an action, he thinks he has a pretty good case. Saturday afternoon at the courthouse, Mr. Justice Kelly gave judgment in four cases he tried during the week at the non-jury supreme court sittings, and in each case he decided in favor of the defendant.

In the action of Patterson vs. Raynor, in which the plaintiff was suing for $50 a month rent, his lordship stated that the plaintiff had failed to establish his position. The defendant had paid the money on the property involved, and would not have to pay it over again. The funds had been deposited in the Home Bank, just prior to the failure of the bank by the solicitor acting for all parties in the transaction. F. H. Curran appeared for the plaintiff, and T. G. Meredith, K.C., for the defendant.

Going Too Fast

In the case of Stevenson vs. Griffith, a damage action arising over an automobile accident at Piccadilly and Mainland streets, last October, the judge found that the plaintiff had been going at an excessive rate of speed. The defendant's driver, from the evidence, did what he could to get out of the way and avoided a much more serious accident. His lordship could not understand why some person had not been killed in the affair. If the plaintiff had been going as fast as he said, he could have stopped his car without difficulty, the court held.

Damages were assessed at $625 to the plaintiff, and $100 to the defendant.

His lordship dismissed the plaintiff's action with costs, and allowed the defendant's counterclaim of $130 with costs.

W. B. Menzies appeared for the plaintiff, and J. M. McEvoy, K.C., for the defendant.

Case Not Proved

In the case of Branton vs. Goldberg, an action to declare that the defendant had an interest in the London Wrecking Company, although the stock was in his wife's name, the judge declared the plaintiff had not proved his case, although he believed Goldberg could pay if he would. Branton received the court judgment some time ago against Goldberg for $500 over an automobile accident case, but has as yet been unable to collect the money. J. W. G. Winnett appeared for the plaintiff and Howard Cliff for the defendant.

Mr. Cabana of Buffalo claimed that Mr. Morgan of Montreal owed him $1,000 on a real estate deal whereby the defendant was to acquire factory property in the county of Huron.

Money For Nothing

Mr. Justice Kelly declared that the plaintiff had believed he was buying the factory and contents as he had seen them on a visit some four months before the transaction was made by mail. The contents did not belong to the plaintiff, the court held, and the plaintiff was only able to deliver the real estate. His lordship could not see why the plaintiff expected money on something he didn't have to sell.

The defendant counter-claimed for $1,000 that he had paid down, as he could not use the factory without the machinery, and the plaintiff was in the position of paying for the land and buildings, and he thought $700 was a reasonable amount. Any excess over that, the defendant was entitled to get back, the plaintiff to pay the costs.

TWO MEN RELEASED, NEITHER ARE LASHED

Montreal Men Declared Innocent Go Free Pending New Trial.

Canadian Press Despatch. Montreal, June 1.—Louis Wrensky, condemned April 8 last, together with Barney Schukal, to fourteen years in the penitentiary and twelve strokes of the lash, was liberated Saturday on bail of $2,000 pending an appeal for a new trial. Schukal was admitted to bail last week. The men are convicted of having held up the paymaster of the Standard Shirt Company of this city and robbing him of about $1,000.

Crown Prosecutor Calder announced last week that facts had come to his notice during the trial last week of Serafini in the Hochelaga Bank holdup charge that Wrensky and Schukal were innocent of the Standard Shirt holdup, in which Serafini had also been involved, but in respect of which he had been acquitted.

The lash had been inflicted in neither case, since the men on conviction entered an appeal against the sentences.

Great American Actress Comes To Grand This Week

Miss Maude Fealy Stars in "The Man Who Came Back."

LIKES LONDON

Has No Use For Liquor, and Does Not Smoke Cigarettes.

Maude Fealy, whom critics say is one of the most gifted stars on the American stage, arrived in London last night from New York to play Marcelle in William Brady's great success, "The Man Who Came Back," at the Grand this week.

Miss Fealy remarked on the stability of London. It's trees were beautiful, she thought, and Queen's avenue was especially attractive.

Her declaration that she was in sympathy with prohibition was indeed convincing, and she told from her own observations how she had seen many good homes wrecked by liquor.

Comedies Appeal. Reverting to the theatre, Miss Fealy said that people are the same the world over. Comedies are more appealing than serious plays.

Does Not Smoke. "I don't smoke cigarettes," and between laughs she explained that one reason was that they did not taste sweet.

Born in Memphis, Tennessee (with an artful twinkle in her eyes she would not tell the year), Miss Fealy played children roles at three. Her mother was also a leading woman and today conducts a school of dramatic art in Denver.
