On Thursday evening the sergeants of the regiment banquetted him at the mess rooms. The Colonel and Major being out of the city, (the adjutant, Wm. Mowbray, made Sergeant Farnsworth a very complimentary address on his work here and gave him on behalf of the regiment a purse

Sergeant Farnsworth replied saying he was much surprised at receiving the purse. He continued saying he had never been anywhere where he had been treated better ,and that the ergeants were about the smartest and best he ever handled.

Lieutenant Coltart presented the Sergeant on behalf of the awkward squad of 7 a. m., a beautiful pair of gold cuff links.

The Sergeant-Major, George Embrey then invited all to partake of the brilliant repast. Col-Sergeant Lew Reid and Sergeants A. Moffatt, R. Hutchison, and S. A. Mercer, were waiters, while E. Harold Rankin was caterer.

TILL ROBBED

Maple City Creamery was Entered Last Night and Rifled of Small Change.

C. E. Lister, of the Maple City Creamery, had a little surprise awaiting him when he walked down to his office this morning.

As he entered the door he noticed a number of burnt matches lying about on the floor, but was greatly surprised td see a large pile of cigar ashes on his private desk. He next examined the cash drawer, and here the mystery was explained. About $10 in small money was missing.

At the end of each month Mr. Lister pays his customers, who provide him with milk. This month, some of them were a little slow in coming for their. pay, so their money was left for them, wrapped in envelopes, locked up in the cash drawer.

The robbery must have been com mitted by some one who knew when Mr. Lister paid out his money, and who had seen the envelopes in the

COAL FAMINE

Probability That the Maple City Will Experience a Shortage in Fuel.

"Chatham will soon be in the midst of a coal famine," said General Agent Tillson, of the Lake Erie to The Planet this morning. "Soft coal is very scarce, and our company are supplying coal to only those with whom we have contracts. Others desiring to purchase coal will have to take their chances at a considerable increase in price.' The reason of this scarcity of coal is he great coal miners strike. The It is expected that the trouble will will be settled by July 17th. The coal question will be very serious from now till the 17th. If the trouble with the miners is not settled then it will be more serious.

At present it is simply out of the question for any coal dealer to obtain coal. The Lake Erie, however, have a good supply on hand and are thereby able to fill all orders which have been Works and could not see the incoming contracted for. A number of Chatwest-bound express train. The pony's ham's industries will feel the effects head was within a foot and a half of this scarcity of coal. One firm which has a limited amount of coal the track when the train rushed by at on hand, applied to the Lake Erie for full speed, without, as Mrs. Brady a coupl eof carloads, but the latter states, blowing a whistle or ringing were forced to refuse the order. It is indeed a fortunate thing that the Lake Erie were given the contract for furnishing coal for the water works. Had the contract been given to one of him so that he pranced around and the others, the probability is that they would be without coal.

"It is not a question of price," said Mr. Tillson. "It is a question of get-of confinement. The plan adopted to effect his release was by digging another well within a few feet of the other, then penetrating the old well by a cross tunnel. The treacherous quicksand is running almost like water into the cell, and required almost the entire attention of the worker to keep the poor fellow from being smothered.

Nothing whatever is known as to Sandford's terrible experience. He is not in a condition to talk much, and what he does say is, as it naturally would be, in regard to his present condition, and the best methods of procedure to effect his release.

HIS HOLINESS THE POPE.

Now and again there break through the clouds of prejudice and ignorance that hide from the vision of Protestants "the prisoner at Rome," as some bright shining of the sun through a lowering sky, revelations his holiness which are only and altogether lovely. They disclose "a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief," touched with the feeling of our infirmities and bearing in the arms of faith and prayer even those not of his fold. It is related that the Pope, who was deeply affected by the news of the illness of the King, after re- HIS ceiving Cardinal Rampolla and other members of the Sacred college, on Tuesday, said:

"Let us pray God to preserve the precious life of Edward, who so well deserves the thanks of the world in bringing about by his personal it- flock he told of certain parents and fluence and benevolent intervention sponsors coming to him with a baby peace in South Africa.

CANADA IN FRANCE.

France with 38 millions of people has more money in circulation than Britain with its 40 millions. It has so much money that loans are effected at as low as 1 per cent. Lenders there have lost heavily of late, and have become suspicious. Still Mr. Louis Gosset, of the Canadian capital can be secured for the Dominion, instead of investing it in Russia and other industrial securities, which are "milked" by enormous commissions. Mr. Gosset would like to see the attention of his fellow-countrymen turned toward Canada, in which the field for investment is large and the returns just as sure and a great deal more profitable than in Russia, Norway and other European countries, as well as South Africa, where French capital is also largely interested. He declared, however, that Canada is not at all known as it should be in France, although the extent of the mines and forests of the Dominion is beginning to dawn upon the French mind. Mr., Gosset would like to see men like Laurier and Tarte talking to the French people of Canada's material resources, instead of their own patriotism, and such like twaddle.

NATIVE RUSSIAN INDUSTRIES. New York Tribune.

The National Council of Women of Canada has arranged with the Russian Industries League of this country to co-operate with it in providing a market for the embroidery and drawnwork done by the Doukhobor women. The council started this industry among the Doukhobors when they came to Canada, providing money for materials and teaching them to adapt their native skill to the demands of Canadian markets. They now seem to understand exactly what is wanted, and with its quaint Russian colorings and patterns, their work has found a ready sale. They have now repaid all the money loaned to them by the National Council, and, with the American market open to them, it is believed by their friends that the industry will prove a profitable and permanent one. Heretofore the work has been sold only through the local councils of women, but it has now been decided to open a permanent emporjum for it in Montreal, while the Russian industries committee is making arrangements for exhibits at Atlantic City and other summer resorts.

How Wine Judges Keep Sober. If you have ever gone into a wine nerchant's office and sampled different vintages, says the Philadelphia Ledger you will have observed that the dealer never swallows the wine he puts into his mouth, but holds it there for a time while he lightly breathes through his nose. His palate tells him whether the wine is rough or smooth, but his sense of smell detects its aroma and is largely depended on to determine its quality. Of course it is the brain to which the smell is communicated that is really instrumental in fixing values, and as the effect on the brain is only momentary a great deal of wine may be sampled in this way without ill effects, but when the wine is permitted to pass into the stomach the which arise from it continue to assail the brain as long as the liquor remains there in its original state and if taken in large quantities results in muddli the brain.

There are many imitations. These rings were helrlooms with the people of the Claddagh, a distinct gypsylike race of fishermen, and were handed down from mother to daughter as a wedding ring, a marriage beng scarcely considered legal if an orlinary ring were substituted. They were made of massive gold, decorated with a heart, bearing a crown supported by two clasped hands, signifyng loyalty, love, friendship.

Timely Words to Young People on Graduation Day.

"THE LORD BLESS THEE."

In the Battle of Life It Is Absolutely Necessary for a Young Man to Have a Righer Education-Heroic Sacrifices Made by Parents-The Diploma Taken From the Lamb's Book of Life.

Entered According to Act of Parliament of Can-ada: in the year 1902, by William Baily, of To-ronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Chicago, June 22.-Timely words of advice and encouragement to young men and women who in these mmer days are graduating from college are given by Rev. Frank De Witt Talmage in this discourse on the text, Numbers vi, 24, "The Lord

Last week I received an invitation. It came from one of the large col-leges of the east. That invitation attracted me because it was sent by one of my old Sunday school scholars. As I held the square card in my hand I seemed to be standing again in the sacred room of the dear old Second Presbyterian church in Pittsburg. I could see this young man, then a little boy in short trousers, sitting at the feet of his teacher. I could hear the sweet young voices singing the old songs we always loved to sing. As I read be-tween the lines of that invitation I soliloquized: "How time does slip away! My Sunday school scholar is now a grown man. Willie's name has been changed to William. He is no longer a child. Graduating from one of the greatest universities of the world, he is about to step forth to the battle of life a fully equipped recruit. He is about to take his position by my side in the ranks. We must hereafter look upon each other as brothers." Then as I still read that invitation my study room changed again. I seemed to be a thousand miles away. I was walking through the long corridors of memory. It seemed to me as though I had gone back to the time when I myself, gowned and cap-ped, was marching with the senior class to participate in the scenes attending my fown graduation. classmates who were then seated by my side have all scattered. Some are ministers, some lawyers, some doctors, some electricians, some merchants and some soldiers. They are living in the north and the south, the east and the west. Some are dead. That graduation scene was a sad time for many of us. College affections are very strong. We young men knew that we should never be to each other the same again.

Then, as I sat in the quietude of my study with the hopes and anxieties of my own graduation day passing in review before me, I said to myself, "I wonder if some of the ng people whom I know and love who are graduating from school or college this June month would not like me to come and sit by their side and tell them what the commencement exercises truly mean in their lives." I wondered as I sat there nolding that invitation in my hand if I could not at this critical time of their lives say something to inspire them, to nerve them and to encourage them not only with faith in themselves, but also with faith in God, and I bowed my head over that white invitation and made this simple, earnest prayer: "O God, help me to say something that may be helpful to the young people who are graduating this spring and about to buckle on the armor of life. O Christ, may I be able to bring my young friends nearer to thee, so thou shalt bless them. May this plea be answered in the noble lives of these young men and women, which shall be consecrated to thee and thy service. For Jesus' sake I ask it

I congratulate the young men and women who are graduating from the different higher institutions this June because now the financial struggle which many have undergone for the sake of an education is practically over. Here and there a young man who receives a college diploma may be the son of a rich father. He may have had during his scholastic career no ambition; he may have gone through school and college merely because his rich parents compelled him to go; he may have spent most of his time in idleness and only worked enough to just slip through the different examinations by what is known in college as "cramming" with the aid of a tutor. But such a young man does not represent the great mass of college graduates. For most young men and women the ac-quiring of a higher education has heen a struggle, an awful financial struggle. Most of the college graduates come from humble homes, and the education of these young men and women represents intense sacrifice lasting through many years not only on their own part, but also on the part of their loved ones.

One day a classmate was looking very blue and depressed. I said to him: "What is the matter? Has anything gone wrong?" "Yes," he answered, "something has gone wrong, and awfully wrong. You know fa-ther and mother do not dress very well. As I went around in the homes of the different boys and saw how well their parents dressed I began to be ashamed of my parents' ward-robe. Lately I have been upbraiding for wearing such shabby Last night I again asked him to get a new suit. 'Why, fa-ther,' I said, 'you have not bought a new suit for three years, and mother's dress is so old and has been made over so many times that the needle marks make the cloth look like a wire netting all full of holes. With that my father turned and looked at me. Tears came into his eyes as he said: 'Harry, I am sorry you are ashamed of the way your mother and I dress; but my hoy. I have not get along. We do not dress as well as we might because we want you and your younger brother to be able to get an education at college. Hardo not dress poorly from choice. We are doing it for you and Charles.' Why, Talmage," added my classmate, "I felt so bad when I re-alized all that my father and mother were doing for me that I wept and sobbed lie a little child."

To show what a struggle a higher education might mean, the president of Hampden-Sidney college once told this incident: Many years ago a wife four or five fatherless little children to support. The dead father's wish was to have his eldest son follow his footsteps into the pulpit and be a gospel minister. The mother was left penniless, with a large family upon her hands. The wish of the dead father seemed hopeless, but the mother went to work. She scrub bed, she sewed, she struggled. made her boy study night and day. She pushed him through the preparatory school. She fitted him for After awhile this boy was able to help himself a little, but the mother still had to bear the brunt of the battle. The young man enter-ed college. He passed through his four years of study and came to graduation. He went to the president of the institution and asked if his mother could sit by his side when he graduated. The president, who knew of her noble life, gladly consented. When the day of graduation came, the wealth and fame of some of the noblest families about the region of the college town were gathered within the college walls. The exercises went on until they reached the climax. The valedictorian was about to make his address. This young man, the son of the poor widow, stepped forward. He was not only a brilliant scholar, who had captured every first prize in his class, but he was a natural born orator. With his first word a hush fell upon the assembled audience. At times his voice was as low and sweet as the singing birds making love to each other in the harvest fields. Again that voice rolled and swelled as though the storm-clouds were crashing together after

of the tongue of denunciation cut and slashed; then the message of love would sob and plead. When the peroration was finished, the bouquets of flowers began to fall as the apple blossoms tumble at the shaking of the winds. The young man gathered up the bouquets and piled them into the lap of the little old woman, pre-maturely aged by overwork, who sat there in her faded gown. As he threw those flowers into her lap he said: "Mother, they are yours. I have said: "Mother, they are yours. I have done but little; you have done every-thing." Then, when the president of But from now on young graduates, thing." the college came forward and pre-sented the valedictorian with a gold upon you as boys and girls. You medal which had been voted to him by the faculty because he had gradu ated with the highest average ever held by a Hampden-Sidney student, the young man turned and pinned medal upon the bosom of the faded dress of the little old woman

Again I congratulate you, young graduates, because, while your intellect has been trained and molded by your hearts have been spiritually in fluenced and helped during all these years by the prayers and the encoun agement of godly parents. In this age for the specialization of talent it is absolutely necessary for a young man to have a higher educa-The land is so filled with colleges and high schools and institutes of technology and schools of all sorts that the young man who has no education or a sadly defective one is mightily handicapped in the race

But, my young friend, a man who is limited merely to a mental educa-tion is only half educated. The man whose intellectually developed brain is not ballasted by a morally developed heart is heading toward certain shipwreck. The sharper the knife that is placed in the hand of a little child the easier it is for that child to do itself injury. Aaron Burr was an intellectual giant, but Aaron Burr's wasted life was caused by a heart that was morally bedwarfed by sin. Thomas Paine had one of the greatest brains ever placed within the skull of a man; but Thomas Paine's heart was so diseased by sin that he was a drunkard, a reprobate and a practical outcast. Lord Byron drank every cup of fame, drank early — deeply drank — drank drafts which might have quenched the died of throats of millions, and then died of wretchedness" because his heart was morally diseased. It is absolutely necessary for every young man and woman in order to lead a happy and successful life to have a truly developed Christian heart, yoked to a truy developed intellectual brain.

Now, young people, while the university teachers have been developing your brain, in all probability the moral teachers, like your Christian father and mother and sisters and loved ones, have been developing your heart. By your training and your past religious life you know what is right and what is wrong. On the day when a young man, James Harper left the home of his birth in Newtown, L.I., his mother placed her hand upon his head and said: "Jimmy, you are now about to go into the great, wide world to make a success or failure. Remember my boy, you go from a Christian home and do not disgrace it. If you disgrace this home, remember that on the great day of judgment before God, I shall witness against you and tell God that you were brought up right and dedicated by our prayers to his service, and that you went to destruction of your own acrord." You know just as much what you morally ought to do as James Harper knew what he morally

So the young student who works at his studies is sometimes willing to slight them because graduation day, like death, seems to be far away at

"The square peg in the round hole" figuratively expresses the use of means unsuited to the desired end. A great many people who have been cured of dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery say: "We tried many medicines with only temporary benefit. It was not until we began the use of 'Golden Medical Discovery' that we found a complete and lasting cure."

It is undoubtedly true that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery holds the record for the perfect and permanent cure of indigestion and other diseases of the stomach and associated organs of digestion and nutrition. It is not a palliative. It cures the cause of disease and builds up the body with solid healthy flesh, not flabby fat.

Three doctors attended me—one said I had dyspepsia, two said catarrh of the stomach and bowels. They attended me one at a time) for one year. I Mopped taking their medicine and tried other patent medicine; got no better, and I grew so weak and nervous my heart would flutter. I could not do any kind of work. Now I can do my house work very well; am gaining in flesh and strength, and can eat anything I want."

the battle of life. An aged writer once figuratively de-"The longest half of a man's earthly life is that in which he lives before twenty years of age is reach-I think that statement is true. No matter whether a man lives to be seventy, eighty, ninety or even a hundred years old, the longest half of life is that which he passes during the first twenty years. When we were young, time seemed to have leaden feet. Time, like a snail, would crawl. It never walked or ran or flew. To a little boy the last week before Christmas is endless. gle to get an education. At times you were almost in despair. But in answer to your mother's and father's prayers, and also to your own, God always came to your rescue. You were able to get through some-how. Here you are at graduation day. So, in the latter part of your life, if you trust God and do your he will surely see you safely through. You are going to have trou-bles. You are going to stumble ov-er the hillocks of new made graves. You are going to have injustices practiced upon you. But if you will place your hand in the Divine Father's hand, He will never let you go.
He is able to deliver as well as guide. To illustrate this truth Newton, the noted English divine, used to tell a wonderful story of vicarious suffering. The scene was laid in the little German village of Ragenbach. One day a number of people were gathered in the /large room of the village inn. As the par ty was merry-making, suddenly huge dog appeared at the open door, the only door which afforded egress from the room. The monster's eyes were bloodshot; his long red tongue was protruding from the mouth; his lips were covered with a mass of white foam. At a glance every one saw that the dog was mad. Some of the guests were too frightened to even pray. From every lip went the cry: "Mad dog! Mad dog! My God, what shall we do?" With that the swarthy blacksmith rose. His arms were a mass of knotted muscles. "Stand back, men!" he cried, "There is need only of one man daying here. If necessary I will be that man." So, while the village blacksmith leaped forward and clutched the mad dog by the throat and bore the strug-gling beast to the floor, the assembled people made their escape. The mad dog buried his teeth in the arms of the blacksmith, but he would not let go until all his friends were sav-Then he flung the mad dog into the room, where the brute was afterwards shot. The brave blacksmith then went to his shop and took a long, strong chain. He riv-eted one end of that chain about his body and the other end about the anvil. Then he turned to his friends and said: "Now I am safe and can do no harm. me food and water while I Keep out of my reach when I am The rest I leave with God." mad. Soon the awful paroxysm of hydrophobia was clutching at his throat. In nine days the brave blacksmith's agony was ended. God has made it possible for us all to live right for time and for eternity by sacrificing his only begotten Son for us. the village blacksmith died in the own body, so Christ died for upon the cross which he himself carried to Calvary.

Now, my young friends, about to graduate, I commit your earthly and heavenly life into protecting care of your Divine Father. And as your days of learning are not closed, but have just commenced, as you go from college into the great school of life, I bid you perform your tasks well. If you will do this by the power of the Holy Spirit, there shall come a day when you shall be participants in another graduation scene. Then you shall have a diploma taken from the Lamb's book of life. That distorna shall be written in the blood of Jesus Christ. That diploma shall low you to graduate from an earthly preparatory school into the great university of heaven, where higher lessons and nobler service await you and where you shall never cease to learn about the goodness of God and to sing the praises of Christ and his redecing love.

The Sage and the Peddler Who Lost His Voice. [Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.] Traveling along the highway one day, the Sage came upon a Dejected Man who was making preparations to hang himself from the limb of a tree. "I know you not," said the Sage,

"but you must be in a great distress of mind to drive you to this."

"I surely am," replied the Dejected. "I am called 'John the Roarer.' I am in the street peddling business, and strawberries are my specialty. When I yell 'Strawberries!' I can be heard a

UPSET THEIR PLANS.

A young physician tells an amusing experience of the days of his ambulance service. A hurry call was received one day, and he with the ambulance was dispatched with great haste to a tenement in one of the poor er parts of the city. He climbed several flights of stairs and found at the top a family gathered in a dismantled room, surrounded by their goods and chattels, evidently ready to move.

The patient had been burned, the doctor knew, but he failed to discover signs of one until the mother of the family explained that she was the victim and amiably volunteered the information that she was ready to go to the hospital at any time. She was a remarkably healthy accident case, and the young physician explained that he would have to make an examination and learn the true nature of her inju ries before taking her off. She demurred somewhat wrathfully at this, but finally uncovered one arm, where was to be seen a bad but not serious burn of a week before. It was not a burn requiring hospital treatment, and the doctor departed, a severe tongue lashing from the would be patient following him as he hurried down the stair, glad to get off with nothing more serious. The woman's wrath had good cause he found upon inquiry. The family had been dispossessed, and it had been decided that the husband and children should go for a time to one of his relatives, while the wife would seek refuge in the hospital. In this way they would tide over their troubles, but the doctor's unforeseen refusal to play his part had upset their plans seriously

HELPING OUT THE HERO.

A Realistic Scene That Was No Down on the Playbill. In the old days, when a certain Texas city was not exactly the charming place it is now, I was playing in "Mon te-Christo" to a crowded house. All afternoon the cowboy of his type of the day had been coming into town for the performance. I could see him well in evidence in the front row of the balcony, his skin jacket shining and his pistols glistening in his belt. The arch villain was facing his fate in the final act, and I spoke my Fnes, "Your time has come." Suddenly a cowboy stood up in the front rank in the balcony, drew his pistol and draw a bead on the villain of the piece. 'If you don't fix him." rang out his voice. "I will!" There he stood ready to put the threat into execution. "Kill me quick! Kill me quick!" cried my fellow actor under his breath, alistic end from the sentleman in the balcony. But the joke was too good a one for that. I prolonged the duel as much as possible, but presently the arch villain took his first plausible opportunity to expire at my feet. "That's right; served him right. If you hadn't done it, I would!" came approvingly from the voice in the bal-

But that circumstance lessened my chances to get any one to play the part later. Actors would come to me for an engagement in the villain's role and ask, "Are you going to play in Texas next year, Mr. O'Neill?"

"Thank you!" That would be the end of it, for each would say, "Good day!"-James O'Neill in Saturday Evening Post.

A True Poem. How hard it is to tell what makes a true poem, a lasting poem! When one asks himself what it is, how many things arise, how hard to narrow the list down to a few things! Is it beauty? Then what is beauty? One meets with beautiful poems every day that he never thinks of or recurs to again. It is certain that without one thing there is no real poetry—genuine passion. The fire came down out of heaven and consumed Elisha's offering because Elisha was sincere. Plan and build your poem never so deftly, mankind will not per manently care for it unless it has genuine feeling. It must be impassioned -John Burroughs in Century. the largest score, Pt. the stranger. Without another word the railway man made out the permit.

The Way Out. "How did you ever manage to get out of buying your wife that opera closk that she wanted so much?" "Say, Bill, that was easy. I told her that I would buy it for her on her thirty-fifth birthday and asked her to let me know the time."

The officers of the law and a few assistants soon made ready and proceeded to the scene of the strange occurrence. They were well provided with lights, and, on investigation, the hurried surmises of Anthony Saybrook in regard to the cause of Leb's death were fully confirmed. He had evidently made an attempt to break in the old vault, but, failing in his first efforts, had drilled holes in the massive door had drilled holes in the massive door and attempted to blow it out with a blast of powder. The only result had been to jar the heavy masonry, and loosen a huge stone that rested as a sort of projecting cap above the door of the vault, and, as he had approached and man make his occupied in the ed and was probably occupied in ob-serving the effects of the blast, the stone had given way from its position and fallen upon him, forcing him backward and crushing him beneath its

The corpse was carried away, an inquest held upon it, resulting in the usual verdict of accidental death. So the would-be robber had been caught in his own trap. To the general public, however, Leb.'s tragic ending was proof positive that Rolff House was possessed" by evil spirits, and that the tradition that the old vault was protected by the Evil One was the sober truth. His recklessness in risking himself in such a foolhardy contest with the powers of evil was commented on with many sober shakes of the head, and all the old, well-worn stories in regard to strange occurrences at the old mansion were revived and retailed with impressive earnestness to groups of interested listeners.

As he had surmised, Anthony Saybrook could secure no one to take the place made vacant by the death of Leb. Sackett. He would not have old Carl Crum; so, trusting in the protection which the popular belief that the house was the abode of evil spirits would af-ford, he had it carefully closed up and left to only such occasional inspection as he and Ralph should together make.

CHAPTER XVIII. Events drifted along a few weeks without any event to startle the community in regard to Rolff House.

The old place remained locked up and deserted, but it was better protected by the superstitious dread in which it was held than it if had a score of guards. Mr. Saybrook had sent off letters to Claude explaining and smoothing over the late events, and also taking occasion to drop him certain hints that would lead him to infer that to him continue and that he had used his influence to prejudice Rosa against him. He did not say this directly; in fact, he was careful not to let Claude suspect that he took any interest whatever in his love affairs; but he deftly managed to weave certain facts and hints in his letter, as if by the merest inadvertance, which the young man could not well help interpreting so as to arouse his suspicions that Rosa's love for him was already becoming sold. The wily lawyer argued that if he could arouse in the young man a feeling that he had been slighted, his naturally high spirit would probably lead him to express his resent ment by affecting coolness and reserve himself. He knew that he must be anxious by this time on account of the neglect with which his letters had been treated, and full of fancies as to the reasons for it; and, by skillfully misleading him, he hoped to so arouse his sense of injured pride as to incline him to dismiss all thought of Rosa from his mind. Amid the novelty and excitement of his new life, he inferred that Claude, like most young men, would easily forget past impressions, and that, could his thoughts and feelings be turned into a new channel, his pas-sion; for the old farmer's daughted would soon be so far erased from his mind that Ralph would be left a clear, field to woo and win her, no matter what turn events might take.

But Anthony Saybrook had no opportunity to learn the effect of his letter upon Claude, or whether, in fact, the young man received it at all. It was a period when the mail service between this country and Europe was particularly irregular and slow. The world was being shaken by the throes of the gigantic contest between Eng-land and the France of Napoleon, which had involved nearly all Europe, and the consequences of which were slowly but inevitably dragging the young New World republic into war. The seas were harried by the hostile fleets of the belligerents, and commerce was practically interdicted by the de-crees the proud hostile nations hurled at each other, commanding the world to cease from commercial intercourse with their enemies under threat of the capture and confiscation of all ships venturing to do so. The spirit of the aspiring young Western nation illy, brooked this arrogant dictation, which was destroying its growing commerce; and it had long been evident to care-ful observers that the outrages committed against American commerce particularly by British cruisers would particularly by British cruisers would sooner or later result in hostilities. In fact, the spirit of the people was already aroused to the highest pitch, and was pushing a peace-loving administration forward to the bold course of recommending the young republic to unsheath its sword as the champion of the rights of commerce. We have seen that Anthony Saybrook had anticipated the outbreak of war. So certain was he of it, that his plans and schemes for months past had been almost entirely governed by the antici-pation of its speedy occurrence. Po-litically, he belonged to the party that litically, he belonged to the party that opposed such an extreme course as war, and sneered at its advocates as "French sympathizers." Personally, however, Mr. Saybrook was not a man to let his political prejudices interfere with his interests in any way. With the young heir of Rolff House away in Europe, and himself holding mortgages on portions of the estate, and with fraudulent deeds in his hands covering the most valuable parts of the property, a war would furnish an opportunity to carry, out his schemes at his leisure and with the utmost chance of safety. There-are simply kidney disorders. The kidneys filter the blood of all that shouldn't be there. The blood passes through the kidneys every three minutes. If the kidneys do their work no impurity or cause of disorder can remain in the circulation longer than that time. Therefore if your blood is out of order your kidneys have failed in their work. and in his letters to Claude, the law, had deprecated war and affected to doubt its probability, at heart he was eager to have it occur, and strongly convinced that its outbreak was inevitable.

So joy was brought to the household of the Saybrooks, when, with the early days of summer, the tardy mail brought the news of the actual declaration of war against England.

"You see, Ralph," remarked the elder Saybrook, after they had carefully read every word referring to the all-important topic contained in the modest news letter which brought the good news, "that my throw has been a successful one; even if it was risky, and we have won our game. Ah, my dear boy, I never did a finer piece of work in my life. This news clears every obstacle our path, and the extent to which we shall take advantage of our opportunity rests entirely within our own discretion. The war the administration has plunged into will not be a short one, I opine. There is no coubt that it will be continued till the country is pretty well exhausted and the war spirit of the people has evaporated, and that means three or four years, in my opinion, at the least. Look at our chance. Claude is in Europe, and there is no possible chance of his either getting back to this country or communiknow, covering the homestead and adjoining property, all regularly drawn and signed, and nobody to question their validity while he is absent. What prevent our taking adva our good fortune, and coming into possession of the Rolff property? Nothing, that I see, unless it is our own imidity. And why should we be timid? It is not likely that Fortune will ever offer us another such a chance. The isk is comparatively small. I am in avor of taking the fullest advantage of our position, and of acting prompt-

"But what if he should come back?"

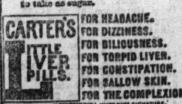

"Well," replied the parent, "I don't think he is very likely to come back at all. Still, the question is a fair one, and will bear consideration. Suppose the comes back to find us in possession of Rolff House. He can bring suit, of course, but what can he prove? The nortgages will have matured, and we shall be the purchasers. As for the leeds, there is no possible ground to challenge their regularity. His only sourse would be a suit to dispossess on the ground of fraud; but with what hance of success? Our defence would be that the deeds were given as collatral security for money furnished, and he has absolutely no testimony to offer against us but his own. Don't you see ow beautifully all my plans have been arranged? I can see no possible chance for failure. The probabilities all are that Claude will soon be left penniless in Europe, and, by the time he is affordan Europe, and, by the thine country, and a chance to return to this country, a thousand things may have happened to take him out of our way. CHAPTER XIX. Wearly passed the days to Rosa Bruyn. Drearily the sun rose in the morning and as drearily set behind the western mountains at eve, She performed her accustomed duties with her usual alacrity, and perhaps with more than her usual conscientious care; but the light of happy content had gone from her sweet face and the buoyancy, from her step. For days and weeks she had wrestled with the doubts and surmises that had thronged continually, upon her, and this mental anxiety and conflict could not but leave its impression. But, through it all, she had not given up her faith in Claude. She was esolved that she would not question his fidelity till she was afforded better evidence than anything that could ome to her through the instrum ntality of Anthony Saybrook. She was strong-ly impelled to the belief that the defamation of Claude and the persistent pressing of Ralph Saybrook's suit were parts of the same plot, and a thousand explanations thronged to her mind to xcuse Claude's strange letter, which, as she recalled its words, seemed to her too ambiguous and too much like the high-flown expressions of one writing in a merry, mischievous mood, to be an acutal confession of falseness and guilt. She flattered her hopes with the thought that the letter had been drawn out by some subterfuge of the wily lawyer, and was evidence only of Claude's light and gay spirit, which she well understood to be prone to a certain recklessness of expression, easily misunderstood. Yet doubts would at times assail her, and the certainty that there was to be a long and perhaps total sepration, and that all chance of explanation was removed from her troubles to weigh most heavily up-

Mrs. Bruyn's watchful eye had detected her daughter's quiet, unconfessed grief, and she was the object of her anxious solicitude. Yet even she was unaware of the real nature and depth of her sorrow. The good lady had in an unwilling and half-hearted way admitted what seemed to her the over-whelming evidence of Claude's falsity. wheiming evidence of Claude's faisity. The absolute convictions of her husband had gradually broken down her last defense of the young man, and she was fain to admit the guilt she could not explain. This belief created a barrier as it was belief created as rier as it were between her and her daughter, and prevented her offering the consolation which would have been admissable had there been a more direct sympathy in their views of the matter. By her very position, Mrs. Bruyn was forced to stand midway between the barbara traces. tween her husband and daughter; and she deemed it best, under the circumstances, to let Rosa's grief quietly wear itself out. She was little aware, indeed, of the real depth of the wound that had been inflicted, so calm and patient was the brave girl's demeanor, but she could note the altered appearance and demeanor, and her anxiety and sympathy were deeply excited. Ralph Saybrook continued his calls at farmer Bruyn's, and his attentions to Rosa. So delicate and circumspect was his conduct, however, that he had really made a quite favorable impres-sion upon Mrs. Bruyn, and even Rosa was forced to treat him with a con-sideration that she would gladly perhaps have accepted the opportunity to withhold. But the fact was, that so well had he ingratiated himself in the old farmer's good opinion, and so careful was he not to allow Rosa any opportunity to take or show offense without doing injustice to her natural good-ness of heart, that he had greatly strengthened his position as a suitor for her hand without her being really for her hand without her being really aware of it. At times the thought of the wrong that had been done to Claude smote her heart, yet she had no ground save her own suspicions to acouse the Saybrooks of a plot to injure her lover, and her nature was too sulleless and and her nature was too guileless and too generous to take the risk of doing injustice upon mere conjecture.

Thus ever-recuurring grief and doubt lay at the heart of the unhappy girl; and the fact that there seemed no one in whom she could confide, and that everybody appeared drawn into the plot to thwart her wishes, caused her sorrows to weigh more heavily upon her heart than they otherwise would. It seemed to her continually that if there were only some one to whom she could talk about her sorrows, if she only knew some friend of Claude's of whom she could simply inquire his welfare, even though it were to ask in vain, it would be some relief to the intense strain of anxiety and grief.

SECRETARY GLEASON

Of The Woman's Catholic Order of Forresters, Chicago,

St. Francis Xavier Court No. 174, Endorses Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Some women are tireless in their home work, others in their work in the church or their favorite society or club; they laugh and sing and are happy. But think of the poor one who is left at home, utterly unable to make any effort whatever, broken hearted and despondent.

The horror of female complaints is upon her; she is oppressed by that distressing bearing-down feeling, backache, her nerves are all gone, don't care to move and wants only to be left alone.

O, dear sister, don't you know by this time that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will surely reach the cause of all this trouble and make you well and strong! It certainly will cure you as certainly as the sun Read what Mrs, Gleason says:

MRS. M. GLEASON, Chicago, Ill.

"I want every woman to know that Lydia E. Pinkam's Vegetable Compound has been of untold value to a large number of women of our order. I know positively that it has cured many of the most distressing diseases of the pelvic organs, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles, and painful menstruation. There is no question in the world but that it is superior to any medicine for women. I have used it myself and know whereof I speak. — Yours truly, Mrs. M. Gleason, 554 West Taylor St., Chicago.

Two More Sufferers Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINEHAM: - I was | ick with female weakness. I took all kinds of medicines, you might ay, and was operated on by doctors, but they did me no good. After taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I found willing and am now enjoying. found relief and am now enjoying good health. Since taking your medcine I have become the mother of a little boy. "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM : - I suffered daily from backache and stom-ach ache. Menstruation was suppressed for six months, and then appeared again, but very painful and irregular. Instead of consulting a doctor I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I now feel as well and strong as ever I did, and since taking it I have given birth to a little boy, will advise all sick women to use it.' -MRS. IDA PETTERSON, Box 93, Amasa, Mich. (March 1, 1901.)

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony as we are constantly publishing; only the unquestionable merit of Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine can accomplish so much. Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. if you are Ill. The efficiency of her advice is proven by thousands of letters from wo-men who have been cured of female troubles by her guidance and medicine.

Quaint Notions Still Prevail Among It is a mistake, according to a well nown young navat officer, to suppose that the sailors of one present navy are free from super. In. "I remember," he said, "only five years ago when I was in the training ship that the old salts there were as full of old supertitious beliefs as any of their ance ould have been.

"When at sea in a dead calm, the swaying of the masts in the motionless atmosphere sometimes causes a peculiar wailing sound like distant cries. This, the old seamen assured us, was the moaning of the souls of sailors lost

"Another one of their pet beliefs is that all sailors that die by drowning are at once transformed into Cape Horn pigeons, or, as they are also called, Mother Carey's chickens. Officers are supposed to find their reincarnations in sea gulls and mews, while the big. solitary albatrosses, following the wake of passing vessels, are the souls of captains who have gone down with their ships. These are the reasons why sailors never kill these birds.

"I remember that these tales impressed me a great deal in those days when I was still a mere boy. On one occasion I was sitting in the forecastle on my watch below, chatting with the boatswain's mate, a real old timer, when our conversation was interrupted by a low wail of agony, louder than that usually produced by the wind. We listened in a deep, awed stlence.

" 'Boy,' said the boatswain's mate, 'ye hear that? That's a seaman's call wot's

"Again the wall disturbed the silence. "'Yes,' said the old sailor in an anxious whisper; 'that's some old salt wot's lost his life on board this vessel. Likely he's come for something he's "After awhile I ventured out on deck. The wails were coming from the roof of the forecastle. I climbed up and there found the captain's little son tugging away at the cat's tail, which the poor animal was resenting with the full power of its lungs."

Jeremy Bentham jotted his ideas on upon each other, and this pile of little ers stitched together was the first forms of his manuscripts.

Michael Angelo, Leonardo da Vinci Titian, Rubens, passed from the chisel to the pen or the brush. The change rested them from the preceding work and thus during long life they accomplished marvelous works.

Former Perfumes.

Our forefathers were great people for scents and perfumes, fragrant herbs and spices, and the astonishing amount of seasoning they put with the simplest dishes prepares one for almost any combination. When to make a cherry tart they found it necessary to make a sirup of cinnamon, ginger and "sawnders" and to add rosewater to the icing, one can imagine how they set to work to cook a cormorant. Perhaps if we remind our readers that many chambers were provided with "drafts' which occasionally required cleaning and that rushes took the place of carpets they will realize one of the reasons for the use of perfumes. "Sweet waters" were occasionally sprinkled under the rushes in great houses or for revels or on the mattresses and bed

Playing Wagner Upside Down. A London paper tells a story of Wagner in the days of his youth and poverty calling upon Rossini in Paris and noticing "a little composition" of his own on the piano rack. The reply of Rossini when it was pointed out to him that the music was upside down was perhaps hardly up to the best form of "the polite Frenchman." "You see, I found it sounded better that way." Elli Nye's compliment to Wagner was in a happier vein. He told the great composer that he had no doubt his music was really much better than it sounded .- London Speaker.

The popular view of the relation of the blood to human character and conduct is marked in many a familiar ex-pression. We speak of there being "bad blood" between people at enmity, of "blue blood" as indicating ancestry, "black blood" as describing treacherous nature, and in many another phrase mark our belief that in the mental moral and physical man, "the blood is the life." The one basis of a healthful, happy and useful life is pure blood. With the blood pure, disease has no permanent lodging place in the system. For this reason the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery rids the body of diseases which have their origin in impurity of the blood. It absolutely purifies the blood, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter, increasing the action of the blood making glands, and building up the body by supplying the blood in quantity and quality such as is essential to a condition of health. It cures ninety-eight people out of every hundred who give it a fair trial.

HAVE WOMEN INTUITION? one Writer Says They Have Never

Literature is the final expression of human thought. If women can lay claim to a special faculty of intuition why do they not manifest it in their writings? Intuition, if it means any-thing, means- the faculty that gets down to the germ of actions and characteristics and focuses external traits into a central verity recognizable to the general public. Now, there are more female writers than male. No woman poet has ever written an in-evitable line, a line that flashes spontaneously out of the unknown and casts an illuminating light upon the abyss. Woman has added practically nothing to our stock of familiar quotations. Take down your Bartlett or your anthology, and you may be surprised to find that from Mrs. Browning to Mrs.

Meynell women have never coined a plirase which has passed into the common currency of speech. Mrs. Browning has indeed written fine lines, but nothing of hers can be said to have become a household word. Nor has any woman novelist created any character that is generally recognized as typical. George Eliot has come closest with her Tito Melema and Mrs. Poyser. You would appeal only to the educated few if you described a person as a Tito or a Poyser. But call a man a Don Quixote, a Micawber, a Dogberry, a Falstaff, a Colonel Newcome, a Bilfil, a Parson Adams or Bob Acres, call a woman a Mrs. Malaprop, a Becky Sharp, a Beatrice, a Diana Vernon, a Meg Merrilles, and even the illiterate will mentally classify the individual as you wish him or her to be classified. "Ah, but," you say, "in real life women are the true intuitions. They size up a man or a woman at a glance. They are never mistaken when they trust to their instincts."

I can only testify to my own experience. I have not found that women's snap judgments of character are imbued with any special verity. They form likes or dislikes quicker than a man does because they are quicker on the trigger of conjecture. They can only be one of two things, right or wrong. If time proves that they are right, as they must be in 50 per cent of cases, the right guess is remembered and treasured up by the slower minded man as an extraordinary instance of intuition. The wrong guess is forgot-ten.-William S. Walsh in Era.

Mrs. J. M. Timbers, of Hawkesbury, Tells How She Obtained Relief After Doctors Had Failed.

From the Post, Hawkesbury, Ont. Mrs. James M. Timbers is well known to nearly everybody in Hawk-esbury, Vankleek Hill and surround ign country. She was born in Van-kleek Hill, but since her marriage, twelve years ago, has lived in Hawkesbury, and is greatly esteemed by all who know her. Mrs. Timbers is one of the many thousands who have proved the very great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and gives her experience for the benefit of other sufferers. She says:-"While nursing my first child I suffered from a nursfirst symptom was a sharp pain followed by a growth, which gradually increased in size until it became as large as an egg. It was exceedingly painful and caused me great suffering. I consulted a doctor, who gave me medicine, but it did me no good. Then I consulted another doctor, who said I would have to undergo an operation. In the meantime, however, the tumor broke, but would not heal, and, as a result, I was feeling very much run down. At this time my attention was directed to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began using these. I soon felt that they were giving me increased strength, and after using a few boxes, the tumor disappeared, and I was as well as ever I had been. He exercised the greatest care possible in his diet and did everything in his power to correct the trouble. but to no purpose.

He used many medicines and treatments, some of which gave him s little temporary relief, but none gave him a permanent cure.

At last, by the advice of friends, he began a treatment of Dodd's Dys-pepsia Tablets, and the results in his case were simply marvelous. The first dose gave him positive and instant relief, and before the first box was completely used he was almost entirely cured. He can now eat anything he cares to without the slightest uni consequences, and his general health is very much improved.

It is not often that such quantity even of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets will make a complete cure of a case of eight years' standing, but Captain Lacey's careful living no doubt very much assisted and facili-tated the treatment.

Captain Lacey's experience is only one of a great many, and it is conspicuous only on account of the ex-ceptional severity of the case, and the remarkable rapidity of his recovery through the use of Dodd's Dyspepsia
