Disordered Vision
Often the immediate cause of headache in the morning, especially the chronic of both sexes. Relaxation of the eye muscles in reading and writing is a serious thing, and should be discouraged in boys and girls. If the youthful heads proceed from this cause, good eye glasses are the only cure. Adjust them to suit vision, and give immediate relief to all headaches. We have the latest to the age requirements.

TRUE ATTITUDE OF GERMANY TOWARD RUSSIA IS REVEALED

Bitter Attack on Advocates of a Compromise and a Separate Peace Made by Teuton Paper; Autonomy of Poland is not Sufficient

Amsterdam, via London, April 20.—A bitter attack on the advocates of a compromise with Russia and other peace propagandists is made by the Chauvinistic-Hamburger Nachrichten. In an editorial which is headed "Masshalten," which may be translated as "Easy There," the Nachrichten declaims against the discovery of what it terms the first sign of flabbiness.

After referring to mysterious Vienna despatches about peace and Count Czernin's statement with reference to a peace conference of belligerents, the paper asks:

"What is the world's opinion regarding the government at Petrograd? What is this talk about the identity of Russian and German aims; no annexations, nations living together in a peace honorable to both sides and the possibility about the excuse offered to Petrograd by the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, over our victory on the Stokhod."

The Nachrichten adds: "These sentimental utterances are bound to be a source of annoyance to the German people. Our war aims are very clearly defined in the east. An autonomous Poland is insufficient. Count Czernin must never return under Russian away. The German people

ROMANONES, PREMIER OF SPAIN, QUILTS

Governmental Policy Inadequate to Protect Lives of Spanish People

Madrid, via Paris, April 20.—Count Romanones, in tendering his resignation to King Alfonso, said he was convinced that the defence of the lives and interests of Spaniards could not be assured if the government policy continued bound by the limitation hitherto existing. The premier declared that he felt compelled by his conscience to resign.

He added that he was influenced by the consideration that Spain would lose its position as a moral leader if she and the races issued from her appeared to be divided at a time decisive for the future.

Mexico City, April 20.—In answer to reports that Germany was endeavoring to influence members of the Mexican congress to oppose General Carranza's neutrality proclamation, General Carranza, in a statement of the lower house, has issued the following statement:

"I have no knowledge of German influence on members of Congress or of pressure for opposition to plans of neutrality. I acknowledge that in the galleries of Congress on Sunday there was a manifestation of sympathy for the German minister, but I immediately called the manifest-

ALLIANCE OF AMERICA WITH ENTENTE CELEBRATED IN BRITAIN

Religious Service Conducted Today in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, in Commemoration of Entry of United States Into War as a Partner of the Allies

London, April 20.—The British people and Americans in this country, celebrated America's partnership in the world war by a religious service to-day in St. Paul's Cathedral, attended by the official heads of the nation and a great congregation, which included hundreds of Americans and many prominent British men and women. There was a great display of American flags in London and all other English towns and a popular demonstration by the crowds which surrounded the cathedral. The Stars and Stripes floated from the highest tower of the parliament buildings at Westminster—the first time a foreign flag was ever displayed on that eminence—and flew above all government buildings in the British capital.

The service in the historic cathedral, where the most momentous occasions of national rejoicing and mourning have been solemnized for centuries, was unprecedented in being the commemoration of an act and decision of another nation. Overhead in the dim arches hung the dust weighted and battle torn flags of famous British regiments.

The cathedral seats nearly 4,000 people, and was filled to its furthermost recesses with hundreds looking down from the balconies and niches high in the vault. All seats were occupied when King George and Queen Mary entered, followed by the mayors and aldermen of the twenty-six boroughs of London, who formed a

HUNGARY DEMANDS PUBLIC STATEMENT OF TEUTON PEACE

Socialists Insist Upon Open Declaration of Central Powers' Aims in the War; More Freedom for People Demanded

Berne, via Paris, April 20.—The Hungarian Socialists have adopted resolutions at a secret convention demanding that the Central Powers make public their peace conditions, excluding all forcible annexations, according to the Tsagwacht, the official organ of the Swiss Social Democracy. The convention was the first to be held since 1915 and several resolutions of a drastic and even revolutionary character were adopted.

The convention called upon the Hungarian Government to abolish all restrictions on public gatherings to restore the freedom of the press and to furnish genuine proof of the honorableness and sincerity of the desire for peace. The resolutions declare that peace terms should provide for the obligatory reference of all disputes to an international tribunal, gradual disarmament of the nations, means for the free economic, national and cultural development of

Commander of Russian Forces on West Front Frowns Upon Practice ORDERS IT STOPPED Seven Men in Hundred Eligible to Furlough

Petrograd, April 20.—via London.—General Gurko, commander on the western front, has issued a proclamation to the soldiers declaring that the election, arrest and dismissal of officers of various ranks, by soldiers' councils is an undesirable practice and threatens serious consequences. General Gurko declares that the right to appoint officers is accorded only to soldiers in Petrograd and Moscow, who are directly responsible for the revolution and that even the council of soldiers and deputies admits this principle.

Furlough Duty.
The general points out that the application of the practice to the active army leads to disorganization and puts the responsibility for military operations on the men in the ranks. In a supplementary order General Gurko increases the number of men eligible to furlough to seven in each hundred, the soldiers to determine themselves who shall be given the privilege.

He added:

"But we cannot suppress our deep apprehension that owing to urgent reasons, pre-emptory necessities of state which concern the whole of Austria have been relegated to the background."

BRITISH ON ADVANCE IN MESOPOTAMIA

London, April 20.—General Maude, commanding the British forces in Mesopotamia, has forced a passage of the Shatt-el-Adheim, attacked the Turkish main positions and completely routed the Turkish forces, says an official statement issued to-day by the British war department. So far 1,244 Turks have been taken prisoner.

London, April 20.—The general officer commanding the British forces in Egypt reports in an official statement to the war office that on April 17, the British advanced north of Wadi Ghuzze, in southern Palestine, and captured the Turkish advanced positions along a front of 6-12 miles. The attack, the British statement says, was assisted by the fire of warships and the position gained was consolidated. Fighting was still proceeding at the time the report was sent.

Damage to Cathedral Interior The aged Archbishop of Rheims now lives in a tiny house facing the battered skeleton of his bishopric. He is almost prostrated by the long months of agony of his beloved cathedral, and because in the ancient church the presence of women, a sign of joy, has been forbidden.

THE SITUATION

The main feature of the war news consists of the fact that German resistance of any moment continues to break down in front of the valorous French. They continue to take strong positions and prisoners, and now have over seventeen thousand of the latter, together with many guns. The British have also made progress around Lens and Monchy.

THE VIEWS OF A FAR SEEMING MAN.

The Toronto Globe, in giving a sketch of the career of the late Sir Melvin Jones, said:—

"The fact brings in, the tie of Sir L. M. Jones with Liberalism and his later break. After his Winnipeg experience he had been closely in touch with the party, and was known as a leading business man politician. It is needless to recall his long career of usefulness, but the story of how and why he broke was given in The Globe on March 30, 1914, as follows:—

"I am unalterably out of the Liberal party because I feel that the policy they are supporting is detrimental to the interests of a business in which I am not only deeply concerned, but in which I have a great human interest. I have stated the policy that I believe to be fair and just, not only to the concern in which myself and others are interested, but to the people of Canada. I intend to adhere to it, whatever other people do. I feel that the Liberal party has deserted me.

"I have never requested or desired a high protective tariff. I am not a free trader, and I do not approve of Canada raising its revenue by direct taxation. My opposition to such a policy is due to the fact that, taking into consideration the existing relations between Canada and the United States, such an innovation would be impossible. I feel that if I adhered to the policy advocated by the Liberal Opposition it would ultimately prove disastrous to one of the greatest industries in Canada."

The feelings of the late magnate are shared by thousands of other Liberals throughout the Dominion. They realize as he did, that protection is absolutely essential for the welfare of Canada, unless we want to be made a dumping ground and slaughter market for Uncle Sam's manufactured goods. And with factories and workmen thus affected the farmer in turn would see his home market largely go to the dogs.

BAGDAD.

In a general way most of us have recognized the importance of the capture of Bagdad, mainly, perhaps, because of its association with the Caliphs, the title applied to the successors of Mohammed. Of the material advantages of the place an evidently well informed writer in the "New Statesman" London, gives some very interesting particulars. Bagdad is the fourth largest city in the Ottoman Empire only Constantinople, Damascus, and Smyrna exceeding it. It is as it has been for over eleven centuries, the commercial capital of Mesopotamia, situated at the intersection of the most important trade-routes in the Middle East. It has a unique prestige all over the Arab world as the capital of the great Arab empire created and ruled by the Abbasid Caliphs. It is the centre of a highly cultivated alluvial district, which remains populous and rich, in spite of the poverty and depopulation which have overtaken Mesopotamia generally under the blight of Turkish rule. Lastly, it has developed a new importance within the last quarter of a century as the objective of the Bagdad Railway and the seat of a growing trade with Europe.

It is 400 miles up the Tigris from Basra but there is good water communication all the way for suitably constructed river boats. On the other hand the communication with distant Syria and still more distant Constantinople, left nearly everything to be desired and hence the Berlin to Bagdad railway conception which still remains unbuilt for a distance of some three hundred miles. The reason that Townshend's expedition finally came to grief was that a sufficiency of river craft had not been assembled nor had Basra been adapted for its new role as a great port of transhipment from sea-going to river going vessels. Consequently the number of troops enabled to be supplied for the fighting front was inferior to the number which the Turks, using the Bagdad district as their immediate base, were able to pit against the British.

That was why they were enabled to encircle and eventually capture Kut. The blow inflicted on British prestige by the fall of the latter place compelled the effort to try again. This could only be done successfully by patient work with regard to communications.

After General Maude took command Indian labor was imported on a large scale, and by dredging, embanking, and wharf-building Basra was converted into a satisfactory port. Enough river-craft were collected, and organized into a highly efficient service. Extensive railways were built, both to supplement the river-service and to enable the impregnable Turkish front below Kut to be turned. These preparations enabled General Maude, when the time came, to bring to bear very superior forces. He used them well; the Turks hung on to their positions too long; and in the end a brilliant pursuit annihilated the enemy's Kut army.

The fall of Bagdad strikes the German imagination chiefly as a blow to the Berlin-Bagdad conception. It will strike that of the Ottomans themselves as lopping off the Mesopotamian end of their empire, which they had set their hearts on linking up.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Toronto ball fans are not very hilarious up to date for the reason that their team is very much cellarous. Lajoie is the captain and Le Miserere the club song.

The incident that Berlin workmen were able to win the strike on their own terms is one more evidence of the fact that the Prussian authorities are commencing to fear the populace.

The splendid reports which Stewart Lyon, Canadian correspondent at the front is sending, constitutes full justification for the expense the Associated Press papers, the Courier included, have shouldered in sending him there.

THE PROVINCIAL HIGHWAY

The communities which are seeking to have the above road run via Kitchener instead of by the direct and natural route via Brantford, are leaving no stone unturned to accomplish their object. Over two hundred delegates in this behalf waited on the Ontario Cabinet yesterday and when the case had been presented, Premier Hearst told them that he had been impressed with the arguments, advanced, adding, however, that "he still had an open mind as to the route which would best serve the public."

The Mayor of London went along to help with his influence.

Brantford and kindred municipalities will have to get exceedingly busy to offset what the "other fellows" are doing.

In this regard The Courier once more wishes to emphasize the necessity of concerted action. Mayor Bowdler is a man of much energy—remarkably so for his years—and he can do much good for the help of the cause if he will only get into harness with the rest instead of writing sarcastic letters to the Mayors of other Municipalities. Surely he can take this observation in the proper spirit and act accordingly.

British are Now at the Gates of Jerusalem

Dragged From Cement Dugouts by Victorious French Forces, They Were Too Weak to Eat; French Advance Continues

Is the dream of the ages to come true? Is Jerusalem to fall into the hands of the Christians after having been held by the Turks these many centuries? Is the object of the crusades to be attained as one of the results of the present war?

The indications are that the British army now in Palestine will soon reach the Holy City, and that streets made sacred by the feet of the Savior may respond to the tread of soldiers from the west.

Wise men from the east journeyed thither 20 centuries ago. For two centuries at the dawning of modern history it became the place sought by Christians from the west, moved by a holy fervor to take from the Moslem hands the sacred tomb and the region roundabout, hallowed to them by association with the brief story of the Man of Sorrows.

But crusades after crusades beat itself to death on the perils, toil and pains of the desert, and thousands of impetuously religious men, women and children lost their lives in what appeared to be ill-starred attempts to wrest the holy place from the vandal.

If Jerusalem falls into Christian hands as a result of this war; if the British arms push their way through the oldest of civilized lands to Palestine, the consummation of the pious hopes of Christendom for the ages will have been accomplished, and the ultimate aim of the crusades will have been attained.

Crusades that Made History. But the crusades from 1096 to 1272 were productive of so many side issues whose influence has been felt through the ages that, although they failed at the time of their original purpose, they have exerted an influence on history and on the destiny of mankind so potent that it is doubtful if ever expeditions were attempted which were so pregnant with events.

Such things as the discovery of America directly resulted from the crusades. No armies from France, Germany and all western Europe could march thence today even to the innermost of their journey overland to the gates of Jerusalem without coming into contact with luxuries of the vast older civilization of the far east. Coming back home, war-scarred Crusaders brought, with them touches of the Orient. They brought bits of silk, brilliant gems, bold, flavors of spicery and wines which the east produced. The luxuries of the other nations, China, India and the lands of antiquity, aroused in the peoples of Europe, just bursting from barbarism and susceptible to the cultural value of these luxuries, a great desire for those commodities, and trading became profitable.

No band of pilgrims under the banner of the Cross, plowing the blue Mediterranean of the eastern port of Jaffa to land and help capture the Holy City from the Saracens, could be unmindful of the ease with which ships of trade could bring to their southern European ports the products of the east.

Trade That Made Cities. Thence arose the commerce which built up Genoa and Venice and Marseilles and the other great ports of medieval times.

Then arose the desire to find an all-sea route to the Orient. And this you remember from the first pages of your history you used to thumb in school, gave rise to the wonderment among navigators if there did not exist a northwest passage.

Pondering on the problem, one Christopher Columbus, who as a boy used to hang about the redolent wharves of old Genoa, conceived the idea of going to India by the western route.

They called him crazy, of course; they always call men crazy who start radical ideas; they refused to give him ships, until the Queen of Spain became interested and financed the expedition, but he sailed and sailed and fetched up against a continent where has grown the world's greatest republic.

Thus does the cycle of events turn from a crusade to take the holy sepulchre at Jerusalem rises a new land to the west, whose spirit dominates today even to the innermost of Russia and topples a Czar

BRANTFORD CHORAL SOCIETY SCORES A BIG SUCCESS AT FIRST PUBLIC APPEARANCE

Work Under Baton of Mr. J. T. Schofield Was Most Notable; Three Brilliant Assisting Artists Added Still Further to the Enjoyment; Names of the Members

The members of the Brantford Choral Society and their conductor, Mr. John T. Schofield, not only deserve to be heartily congratulated upon the tremendous success of the first annual concert, because of their own work, but also for the reason that without any doubt they introduced to Brantford the three most delightful artists ever heard on one program in this city—Miss Myrna Sharlow, Mr. Pierre Henrotte and Mr. Charles Lurvey.

The program last evening was as follows: Part One National Anthem "O Canada" Lavalee Chorus "O Father Whose Almighty Power" Maccabeus, Handel. Group of Songs: (a) L'Heure Delicieuse Staub (b) Absence Bertiz (c) Bonjour Suzon Pessard (d) Slumber Song Gretchenhoff (e) Summer-time Ward-Stephens

Members of the Society Sopranos—Mesdames Davis, Gale, Lister, Schofield, Trotter, McClure, Clarke, Bilette, Babcock, Cutmore, Burke, Packham, Misses Darwin, Spencer, Tipper, McIntosh, Lister, Gardner, Burrill, Wood, McGrover, M. Powell.

After the concert last evening the choir and artists were entertained to an informal cup of coffee in the Wellington St. Methodist Sunday school room. A very enjoyable social hour was spent, and if the enthusiasm which was shown last evening is followed up, Brantford will have an Oratorio Society of which it will be proud.

Mr. Henrotte, Concertmeister of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, is a violinist of exceptional power and execution. His bowing, demonstrated the skill of a true master and his phrasing and tonal efforts were throughout of admirable evenness. The Caprice and Andante were perhaps his best numbers, although all of his selections were most satisfying and the recalls he earned constituted a genuine tribute.

Mr. Lurvey, the accompanist, did most admirable and sympathetic work, adding in no small measure to the triumphs of his associates. It is

CONFER
(By James)

When at Royston, Ga., on December 14, 1916. So far as I have information, no comet blazed out the times to the solar system and a number of 101 guns announced themselves to the people of my native town. At the age of seven years I was in school; and from that moment dates my baseball playing, with the other youngsters of my native town. I used to make crude bats out of rubber and cotton, and we had many a good game of town ball with these rude implements. As I remember it, I always was the last man out when we played town ball. My first chance really to distinguish myself came when a member of our team tried to hold the manager for money to play, and the manager, refusing to be bluffed, began to look around for a substitute. Finally as there wasn't anybody else available, he decided on me, though I was in kindergarten at the time and most of the other boys were from eighteen to twenty-five years of age. There was a storm of protest when the leader announced that I was to appear in the lineup, but he was game and told the critics to wait and see what I would do before condemning me utterly.

Well, I happened to have a good day at a stop on the occasion of my first appearance, making a number of the runs and hitting the ball safely several times. I wasn't strong enough to drive the sphere to the outfield, but was fairly fast and managed to beat out some infield hits. Soon the "fans" were with me to a man, and from that day until I left Boston, I always played with the first team. I wouldn't take any money for playing, as I expected to go to college when I got older and knew that if I were found out receiving cash for my services I would be barred from college athletics. My first professional appearance was with the Augusta club of the South Atlantic League, to which I reported in the spring of 1914. "Doc" Struthers was the manager at that time, and he is the man who has been claiming credit for "discovering" me, when as a matter of ment places and picture to me the easy and pleasant life of a big leaguer, with all the luxurious toys and things. My ambition to see all these wonders for myself was aroused, and my work began to improve at once.

Leidy finally became manager of the club, and under his tutelage, I continued to learn rapidly. In the latter part of the season of 1915 I was sold to Detroit for $500, of which sum $200 was for immediate delivery and the balance later. When Leidy learned that I was going to the big show he gave me a lot of advice that was very useful to me at the time, and I found the American League very much as he had predicted.

I didn't get what you would call a brass-band welcome from the players on the Detroit club, but I suppose I was treated as well as any youngster could expect to be when he came up at the age of eighteen to make a name for himself. Manager Armour looked after me and helped me along, and I found his advice very valuable.

When Hughie Jennings was appointed manager of the club and reported for the spring training trip of 1917, I was surprised to find him a pleasant, likeable gentleman, and—at least so I think—an ideal leader. I really found myself, as you might say, that season—and I think the rest is baseball history.

BRILLIANT FIELDING Aided Giants to Win Over Dodgers

Boston, April 20.—Boston won all four games of the opening series with Philadelphia by winning yesterday in the morning and afternoon 7 to 3 and 4 to 2. Philadelphia's defeat in the second game was due to errors, which nullified the good pitching of Oeschger. He allowed but five hits. Each of Boston's runs was caused by a misplay. Stock's poor throw on Masse's bounder in the eighth allowing Gowdy and Maraville to score, breaking a 2 to 2 tie. The score:—

TREATED AS SINGLE And Are as Liable for Enlistment

By Courier Leased Wire.
Washington, April 19.—Men of military age, who have married since a state of war against Germany was declared will not escape their obligations of military service under a war department policy formally announced to-day. The department's statement follows: "The War department announces that all men married since the outbreak of the war, will be treated upon the same basis as married men insofar as their military obligations are concerned. It is desired that the utmost publicity be given by the press to this announcement." "The department was moved to take this action in order that all men should understand exactly what is contemplated in the organization of an army to fight Germany. It was desired that there should arise no question of slackers upon the score of marriages contracted since the outbreak of war with the possible construction that the marriage in any case was entered into in order that military duty might be avoided."

SIDELIGHTS ON THE STAGE AND SCREEN

CYCLONE HEREDITY
Smith's Center, Kansas, proudly claims the distinction of being the birthplace of Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, which fact may explain why the rotund comedian, soon to be seen in his first Paramount Arbuckle Comedy, "The Butcher Boy," has been referred to film reviewers as a "cyclone of comedy," or a "tornado of laughter," due homage thus being paid to his native state's most popular outdoor sport. A creation of such environment, it would appear that "Fatty" comes honestly by his whirlwind comedy methods.

SPAGHETTI CEASES
Robert G. Vignola, Famous Players director, the city of Albany's most valient defender and spaghetti dinner purveyor extraordinary, has indefinitely postponed all activities along the last mentioned line until the end of the war. It seems that the spaghetti served upon the Vignola table has always been imported right from the director's old family spaghetti farm in sunny Italy. But now that the U-boats have put an end to his importing activities and completely cut off his supply, rather than feed his guests the common variety out of the mere carbohydate boxes, Vignola has shut down the spaghetti distribution until further notice.

THE BRIANT
Petite, fascinating, winsome Marguerite Clark, probably the daintiest motion picture star upon the screen to-day and enjoying perhaps greater popularity than any other, is seen at her best in "The Fortunes of Fifi," heading the week-end bill at the Brant Theatre. The story of a charming little French maiden, "The Fortunes of Fifi," is one of those pictures which go so far toward winning for the Brant theatre the reputation it bears as being among the foremost of amusement houses in the province. The third episode of "Patria," the thrilling serial of diplomacy and intrigue, featuring Irene Vernon Castle, a series of Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons and a showing of the Pathe Gazette complete a high class motion picture offering. Wm. De Holtis and Company present the clever comedy skit, "The Admiral's Reception," while Gaffney and Dale appear in a refined singing and musical offering of extraordinary merit.

"CAMILLE"
Exhibitors and the motion picture public all over the nation will see Clara Kimball Young in the forthcoming World Film Corporation release "Camille," which will be shown at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 24-25. In this picture Miss Young puts forth what she herself has said is to be the effort of her career, so far under the World Film banner. Her "Trilby," which was released by the Equitable, was judged to be a very beautiful piece of work. It has delighted millions by its pathos, beauty and sentiment.

MAY ROBSON
An artistic performance, leavened with the kindly philosophy of life and its walks and its talks, is to be seen upon the local stage, shortly, when May Robson presents her great comedy vehicle, "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt," from the pen of that versatile author, James Forbes, of "The Selling Season" and "The Chorus Lady" renown. In this play, Miss Robson, her personality and her finished company, will give to the theatre a comedy that fairly scintillates with flashes of wit, breezy persiflage and the keenest and wittiest satire, as well as showing the homolies of life as they exist in a family of "newly rich" with love as an underlying motive, sentiment as the mainstay of the family, and truth and honor as the embodiment of everything that is pure and good in American life. At the Grand Opera House, Monday, April 23rd.

"MILLION DOLLAR DOLL"
A jingling, joyful comedy, with sparkling music and pretty girls, is what is promised all who see the Million Dollar Doll at the Grand, matinee and night, Saturday, April 21, when she makes her appearance in this city. A company of recognized musical stars, and a "Real Beauty Chorus" which sings haunting tunes, with pretty sensational dances in costumes of great beauty, which present a riot of color, will present this new musical comedy. There has never been a show which has received more flattering press notices, and the unanimous approval of the public, and the verdict wherever this comedy has been presented, is always the most favorable. The new Twentieth Century play will be the attraction at the Grand, matinee and night, and you cannot afford to miss it. A real bargain matinee will be given at bargain prices, and all seats will be reserved.

THE PRICE OF ART
Marie Doro is running up a large assortment of taxi cab bills since her return to the Famous Players studio from Jacksonville, Florida, where she went to work on the Paramount picture "Heart's Desire." After spending several weeks clumping about Jacksonville in the wooden shoes which are typical of the peasants of Brittany, Miss Doro found high heeled shoes and city pavements extremely trying.

FINKE FAKING
In "Threads of Fate," Metro-Columbia feature photo drama, with Viola Dana as star, Cameraman John Arnold, at the suggestion of Eugene Bonville, who directed the picture, has accomplished a remarkable feat of photography. There are seven double exposures on one film. Fifteen times the same piece of film went through the camera, and if there had been a variation of a thousandth of an inch in the way Cameraman Arnold fed it through the camera, it would have been ruined, and the interesting effect planned by Director Newland and executed by Arnold would have been spoiled.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.
Just as coal when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of combustible material in the form of ashes so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomain-like poisons are formed feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast and sucked into the blood.
Men and women who can't get each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a tablespoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

East St. Louis, Ill., April 20.—The plant of the Aluminum Ore Co. of America, is closed on account of a decision of 1,000 employees to go on a strike. The company is one of the largest of its kind in the country, employing 2,200 people. An official of the company said the plant probably would be taken over by the government soon for the manufacture of airplane parts and table utensils for the army and navy. The plant is not unionized, but its employees maintained a benefit association. The men now on strike maintained that the company discriminated against members of the association.

THE BRITISH AMBULANCE

Headquarters in some small village behind the lines, an ambulance dressing station, improvised splintered dug-out, under the muzzles of the enemy's machine guns, the British Ambulance men, wounded and dying, weary and unremitted toiling in the thick of enemy fire, a job to every man and every man his job. Such are the conditions posed upon that tireless host of R. R. M. C.—the British Field Ambulance.

The work of the R. R. M. C. is the retreat from Moins, Belgium, of the memorable incidents of the memorable occasion, since that it has maintained the power of reputation throughout all the days of the past two years, growing efforts with the enduring gallantry exhibited in the Somme campaign. A rapid review of the work which the B. F. A. is engaged in, greater No Man's Land, behind British trenches, in action which a fight against the powers of death—will serve to tell, never inadequately, the meaning purpose of the unit which the Geneva Cross and return to the front at home is the Red Cross. It is impossible to picture the various duties and deeds of the anything less than a continuous. This must necessarily be a flashing glance.

As the German line is pushed back, the B. F. A. moves up, the assault, close behind the singing, cheering, dashing fighters, they leap into the enemy trench. The bearers, wearing steel helmets, separate into parties, each with its reserve—for they, too, are much in danger of losing a man a stray bullet or flying shrapnel any of the bayonet men. Each is allotted to a specially designated area. The bearers search, ground, the shell-holes and masses of smaller order, some helpless wounded man may lie. Back to the advanced dressing station, they carry him, lay tenderly down and return to the front up the advance and to push beyond the newly captured trench into the latest assault on to the line.

In the advanced station, relief given to the wounded hurriedly with the tender care, and he guided back to headquarters, a more detailed examination of wounds is conducted; sometimes operation may be needed immediately, and it is performed with dispatch while the shells burst over the head and the temporary hospital shudders with the shock of battle. From the wounded are taken further to the casualty clearing station, where, most generally, the operations are performed under equitable conditions, away from enemy's fire and even out of it.

RUSSIAN REVOLUTION AND MOVEMENTS LEADING TO IT

The Greatest Victory for Allies Since Battle of the Marne, Says Russian Professor in an Interview Shortly After Uprising Took Place

Prof. E. Tartak, Lecturer in Russian at McGill University, in Montreal (Special Staff).
A friend of mine, very familiar with the state of things in Russia, and constantly in touch with that country, through correspondence and the Russian newspapers he received, was asked, before he had read the news: "Do you know a revolution has taken place in Russia?" The answer was: "I do not know, but the Duma, backed by the people and by the army is in full control."

For a moment he remained as if thunderstruck. Then, with the tone of one fearing the news is too good to be true—he muttered, "Impossible." He cast a glance at the headlines in the Star, and said (his voice was trembling): "This had to be expected."
He read a few lines, raised his head, and said, slowly, gravely, almost solemnly: "This is the greatest victory the Allies have won since the days of the Marne." And then, suddenly beaming with joy, he exclaimed: "Did I not tell you all that a couple of weeks ago?"

And so, I testify he did, and more than once.
Thinking of this scene now, I cannot help finding that it represented the thoughts and feelings at the announcement of that sudden news—of everyone conversant with the state of affairs in Russia and entirely in sympathy with the Allies. But what about the public in general? The recent dramatic events and changes in Russia are sure to be of such far-reaching consequences, their importance for the war and for the Allies are so grave and vital, that people are fully justified in their eagerness for information regarding the present Russian crisis and its significance. And inasmuch as it is within my power, this article is meant to meet, partially at least, this demand.

What were the causes and the history of the crisis which led to the recent, second—and we hope last, because successful—Russian revolution? Volumes were written about the subject, and, of course, I cannot here have but a brief survey of it, but let me commence with that element, which practically gives the key to the whole situation, and which brings the reader into "medicinal" touch with the reactionaries of Russia. The reactionaries of Russia were always taking note of the fact that they could not count on the support of the bourgeoisie, and that they were being pushed into a corner by the working class. They were always taking note of the fact that they were being pushed into a corner by the working class. They were always taking note of the fact that they were being pushed into a corner by the working class.

There did not exist such a thing as one Russia. And when I say so, I say it on the full authority of such men as Turgenev, Tolstoy and, recently Prof. Milukov, the three representing Russia's thought, culture and political wisdom for the last seventy-five years. I shall also illustrate it by instances from English and French history.
Prof. Milukov, one of the leaders in the present revolution, in his remarkable book, (in English) "The Russian Crisis," says: "There exist two Russias, one quite different from the other, and what pleases one is quite sure to displease the other. Were I to label these two Russias, I should designate one a of the court and reactionary party did not cease. Not relying too much on the loyalty of the army to the old regime—the Court looked for assistance abroad. And whether did they turn their longing eyes? Does the English reader know that in the spring of 1909 the Russian court and government were engaged in negotiations with Germany, the aim of which was to secure German assistance to suppress the Russian revolution in case the government troops proved insufficient or disloyal. The evidence of this deal has been produced in the Duma for the last two years, and none of the reactionaries dared to deny it. But the revolution at that time expended its energy, and if the German army did not enter at that time the borders of Russia—it was not through the fault of the Russian government. It was in reference to that incident—that one of the prominent members of the Duma exclaimed in July, 1915—turning to the ministerial benches: "You have called the Germans—before, and now they have come." It was after the fall of Warsaw, Vilno and Kovno.

Since 1905 the die has been cast; there was the democratic Russia deeply in sympathy with France and England—and the autocratic bureaucracy, looking towards Germany for help and protection. Events developed rapidly. Germany assumed a threatening attitude, and the Russian people and press urged their government to join the entente. The reactionaries looked with a sour face at the alliance with the two foremost democracies of the world. Their oracle, Menshikov, declared in an article, that: "A smaller friendship with Germany is better than a big alliance with England."
The war broke out. The country sincerely hoped that the Court and the government, entirely reactionary, would be reconciled with the people and present a united front to the enemy. The people met the war with enthusiasm; everyone believed that this was the end of the sinister influence of the pro-German reactionary party, and that Russia was finally to secure liberty and reforms. And when Shingarov, member of the Duma, one of the leaders of the present revolution, declared in Moscow in 1914, that Russia was fighting for the rights of the oppressed nations and her democratic reforms, he was voicing the opinion of the whole people.

But soon strange news began to arrive from Russia. As early as December, 1914, the Duma pointed out the shortage of munitions, and urged the immediate organization of a fund for the country for the war, of calling out, uniting and co-ordinating all the municipal, co-operative and professional organizations of the country. The government shrank before the proposition and the reason was frankly given by the reactionaries. They declared that to organize the people meant to organize revolution, and as it was evident that the government could not win the war without the country—unbelievable as it appeared, they insisted on a separate peace. Moreover, the enemy seemed to have informed agents in the highest circles, and the reverses of the spring and summer of 1915, the evacuation of Galicia and Poland followed.

The Duma in the name of the country, demanded a responsible, popular Cabinet drawn from the ranks of the majority of the Duma. Instead of that, the country learned with amazement the news of the appointment of Sturmer, a man of German origin, a reactionary to the core, as Prime Minister. He was reputed to be of avowedly pro-German sympathies, and a close friend of Rasputin, the illiterate mystic who exercised an astounding influence over the Court and was accused of being in the pay of the enemy.

The following ousting out of the popular Foreign Secretary, Sazonov, a friend of England,—out of his post, and the appointment of Sturmer this time as Minister of Foreign Affairs—changed the rumor already spread all over the country—of traitors being in Court and in the Cabinet—into a certitude that the Court party was playing foul. The revelations made recently by Prof. Milukov in the Duma of secret pour-pours being carried out with the foe through Sturmer's personal secretary Manasevich—brought the country to the final conclusion, that unless an immediate change took place the pro-German court would push nation into an abyss, which meant the perdition of Russia.

The assassination of Rasputin, the disorders in Petrograd, the revolution carried out by the army and the Duma, the abdication forced on the Czar, and the immediate recognition of the Provisional Government by the Allies' sincerest friends of France and England, vouch for the beneficial consequences the recent revolution is bound to have, on the pushing on of the war.

If I were called upon to sum up the significance of the latest event in Russia in relation to the world situation, I would repeat the words of my Russian friend: "This is the greatest victory for the cause of the Allies and world democracy since the days of the Marne."

Advertisers Are Not Pirates!

Here is a nut for every householder to crack: The price of commodities which are advertised for sale has risen much less than the price of things never advertised. If you haven't a hammer handy, we shall crack that nut for you. When any concern has spent thousands for advertising it cannot afford to throw away business in a species of piratical charges. Not so with the vendor of a head of cabbage or a bag of potatoes. He is restrained by nothing except the contents of your pocket.

It pays, therefore, to read advertisements in The Courier.
"Brantford's Better Paper"

John saved the hour and the plan was to go into effect this year on April 2. Opposition has been developed and is organizing. Petitions for and against are being signed and the city council awaits the tally before confirming or rescinding the action of last fall, which would automatically place the sunlight saving scheme in effect again.

The Home of Heroes

WHAT do you think of a city of 50,000 people—secure, serene, rose-tinted by the blue Pacific—that has sent 13,000 soldiers to the war for freedom, fully seventy-five per cent of them her own native citizens? Victoria, British Columbia has given units of every needed variety from grave bespectacled and bearded hospital to her latest unlocked bunch of bearcubs, the 143rd Bantams. But of all the famous regiments in Canada, not accepting even the Montreal Highlanders, nor the Queen's Own of Toronto, not one has outdistanced or can outdistance the record of Victoria's adored 5th Gordon Highlanders, which three months ago had 2,000 of all ranks to its credit.

to appear in actuality the following spring, financed to the tune of $35,000 by their Honorary Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. Coy. We can scarcely imagine the blithe carelessness with which the regiment went into camp three hundred strong, that warless summer of 1914. It looks so "long ago and far away," as we see it through the haze of Ypres and the torn night of the Somme. When the world, as we knew it, came to an end in August, the Gordons volunteered en masse, under their colonel (now Major-General) A. W. Curry, and they went to serve "Somewhere in France."

But the Canadian "Queen of the Pacific" isn't the city to be contented with its last year's battling average. The Bantams have just been sent forward, and everywhere the visitor goes, from the swarming dockside to the lonesome heights where the Dominion Government's Observatory stares at the stars, there is a dash of khaki in the colonel's color scheme. Oak Bay, once sacred to the motorist and the tea basket, now forms part of the regulation route march to harden up the troops. Mt. Baker, down in the State of Washington, frosted against the Italian sky, looks near enough for aeroplane reconnaissance, and sufficiently solid to prefigure benevolent neutrality. The winding drives of Beacon Hill Park are full of jingling motors and hustling sergeants, and at night the great branches of the Douglas firs quiver to "Last Post," that bugle call that plays the dark in from the Pacific and tucks a comrade under in far France.

One night as the Water-sprite sailed on a big wave she gave a shout of joy, for there at her side danced the tiny star, and she was so happy...

Chili Sauce

Eighteen tomatoes (ripe), 6 onions, 2 peppers, 1 1/2 cups vinegar, 1 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoonful nutmeg and cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoonful allspice and cloves. Put all in together and boil two hours.

Lettuce Salad

Two heads lettuce picked to pieces and put into salad bowl. Make dressing of 2 tablespoonfuls melted butter, 1 teaspoonful English mustard, 1 scant teaspoonful salt, 1 tablespoonful sugar. Mix well, then add 5 tablespoonfuls sweet cream, 4 tablespoonfuls vinegar; pepper to taste; turn over lettuce and serve.

Cabbage Salad

Take 1-2 head cabbage, chop fine and season with pepper and salt; take care not to get in too much salt. Let it boil up, then pour on the cabbage and stir well together.

LADIES' BASQUE WAIST. By Anabel Worthington.

The waist shown is a particularly charming one, because it has a softly draped, surplice front instead of the usual plain style, which is rather hard to wear. The right side of the front is drawn down to the left side and forms a sash. The back is perfectly plain and tight fitting. The collar and cuffs are quite unusual in shape and are made double, the outer set being a trifle smaller than the under set. Long, close-fitting sleeves are set in at the normal armhole. This style of waist is suitable for a wide variety of materials; for instance wool taffeta, challis, Henrietta, charmeuse, flowered taffeta, crepe metee or voile or crepe de Chine. The ladies' basque waist pattern No. 8191 is cut in four sizes—36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. To make the 36-inch size will require 3 1/4 yards 27 inch, 2 3/4 yards 26-inch, 2 1/2 yards 25-inch, with 1 1/2 yards 26-inch organdy. All of one material requires 4 3/4 yards 27-inch, 3 yards 26-inch, 2 3/4 yards 25-inch. To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

SIDE TALKS BY RUTH YERGEN CAMERON TOO LITTLE GINGER.

"A certain stenographer that I planned this as thoroughly as I might but it makes me so discouraged and angry that I cannot think how to express my thoughts." One can well understand how the writer (who I suspect is a more than intimate friend of the stenographer she knows) might well feel discouraged. But if she will pardon my saying, there is of course, a chance that some of the new stenographers have more ability. They Take Advantage of a Clerk's Faithfulness.

On the other hand, the firm may know that she is in a position where she cannot afford to risk demanding a raise and they may take advantage of their knowledge of it in the mean way some firms have. They may also be taking advantage of her faithfulness. Plenty of firms will do that. You will find that much of this talk about not looking at the clock and giving more than you are paid for comes from the top. I do not say that that does not often bring a man success, but I do say that many times it is meanly taken advantage of, especially when it is combined with too much humility. The man who makes a doormat of himself will always be walked on. Maybe you need a little more gin along with your work and in your attitude toward your employer. Try both,—if you can afford to.
