The managers of the Institute are endeavoring to raise $10,000 to enlarge and improve the building so as to be able to accom modate all who are seeking admittance We understand that the people of Wolfville will be asked to lend their aid to this worthy undertaking. A committee which has the matter in hand will call upon our people in the near future when it is hoped their call will be generously responded to. The Institute for the Blind has done a good work in the past and should be er couraged. We hope to refer more fully to this subject in a future issue.

The idea seems to prevail among many of our people that all that is needed is for one to leave Nova Scotia in order to gain a fortune at once. It is very often proved to us beyond a doubt however that there are many places where people are much worse off than here. A friend has lately sent us a copy of the Griggs Courier, published at Cooperstown, Griges Co., Dakota, and in looking over its columns we are led to believe that our people would hardly consider Dakota an enjoyable place to live in. In the copy before us we have counted somewhere about forty advertisements of mortgage foreclosure. It does not look as though all the people in that distant state were becoming suddenly rich, does it? It might be a cheap place to buy a farm, as the sheriff does not always get the largest prices for goods sold by him.

CAVALRY TACTICS. the Buglo Call.

beg commenced about the middle of November, 1887, the drills being for four hours daily, two in the morning and two in the afternoon.

The modus operandi was as follows: The horses all appeared fitted with surcingles and watering bridles only, each trooper being provided with two leather straps, one about two feet and the other about two feet and the other about two feet and the other about two feets and fastened the long strap to the horse's and fastened the long strap to the horse's right fore leg, just above the hoof, and carried the end of the strap under the surcingle and over the horse's back, so that the end trailed on the ground of the horse's left side. He then fastened the short strap to the horse's left fore leg, just above the hoof, then raising this hoof the strap was carried over the leg of the horse, above the lene and firmly buckled, thus leaving the astonished animal standing on three legs and wondering what on earth his rider meant. At the next signal the trooper seized the bridle of the animal in his left thand and grasping the long strap close to the horse's back commenced to pull upon this strap, at the same time pressing against the left side of the animal with his right shoulder. The result of this artifice was in all cases, except with the most vicious horses (of which there were not a few), to bring them down with both knees on the ground, as the strap pulled up the right hoof with a jerk.

A firm and sustained pressure with the shoulder then brought the horse over so that he lay at fail length on his right side, whereupon, after quieting him both by the vice and by stroking him, a carbine was held in front of him, rubbed against him makeld so that he could smell it, and then diredarged. With the majority of the horse would lie down at the bugle-call without straps by simply patting the hoof with the hand and teiling them what was wanted. The real work of perseverance and patience lay with the remaining less brilliant horses. There were a least a dozen which had apparently come to the f dozen which had apparently come to the firm conclusion that nothing would ever in luce them to submit to the indignity of lying down at full length in the dust. With these animals force was used, it is true, but it was done in such a way that the horke was not terrified, but was made to understand that his trooper was his master, whom he must in all things obey. It may be said, en passant, that the trooper a certain cases found out this fact only at this drill. With these high-strung and constitues victous horses four men were accessary, using two long straps to throw them, and these were necessarily aided by the lash of the troop commander. In six weeks the horses would allile down, without atraps, at the sound of the bugle, with the exception of possibly six or seven, with which straps were necessary, and one or two which still required the heroic treatment. While lying down single shots and volleys were discharged by the men firing over the horses as rests. Two or three of the most stubborn brutes were conquered by sheer patience and perseverance. One after sorrel bronce, in particular, was so slid and victous that his hind feet had a yer been shed, nor had he ever been ridney while, wolly, and hard to curry." The tendle with this imp in equine form were puting the straps on him in the first place. It was like the mice agreeing that under the circumstances the best thing to be done was to put a bell on a collar and put party Lt was like the mice agreeing that under the circumstances the best thing to be done was to put a bell on a collar and put the collar on the cat's neck. But no volunteers appeared to put the collar on the cat.

To accomplish the strapping strategy was used, and for a long time without success. The strap was laid in a noose on the ground and the horse was led artfully so that one of his fore feet would be in the noose, then with a quick jerk an attempt was made to catch his hoof, but the imp was too quick and would never walk into any such trapagalm willingly. Six powerful men with straps finally threw him one day and held him down. Then his protests commenced. His hind feet flew out, and continued to fly out, with a velocity and power that were wonderful and in the highest degree avail.

was finally apparently quieted and allowed to rise.

After a time an attempt was made to throw him again, which was an exact duplicate of the other. This time, after throwing him, the lash was applied with a stinging cut to his legs at every kick, and this finally triumphed. In a half hour he lay quite still, and submitted to patting on every part of his body, including his feet. In ten days he was gentle as any horse in the troop. By the last of January, 1888, every horsein the sommand would lie down at the bugle call, illow firing over him in any position, and rise at the call for rising. The best result of the truining was the exablishment of complete understanding between the orse and his rider, so that the latter and a perfect conflicted in his own ability to ride and manage the former, and he former, while feeling that the rider was is master, was not cowed by cruelty or rutailty. finally apparently quieted and allow

STUDENTS IN GERMANY.

STUDENTS IN GERMANY.

Interesting Statistics Concerning Their Work and Stadies.

The following interesting statistics occur in an article on "Student Lift in Germany," by Iv. F. M. Warren, in the Chautauquan: "We find in the twenty schools of Germany some twenty-six thousand students, of whom over twelve hundred are foreigners, the Russsians leading, closely pressed by the Swiss, Austrians and Americans, in numbers that do not vary far from two hundred for each nation. As might be supposed, the largest towns contain the largest institutions. The modern university, like the mediesval, appears to demand the multiplicity of industrial life. The University of Berlin numbers over five thousand students, those of Leipzig and Munioh more than three thousand each. To resist this tendency toward the distinctively urban foundations, favored to the utmost by states which they peculiarly represent, the institutions of the smaller central powers and those less fostered by the pride of dynasty exert themselves to excel in some one specialty—in which effort they are often aided by tradition and habit. Thus, in 1887, in spite of the greatly superior aggregate of the three universities noted above, certain of the provincial faculties have successfully maintained, not merely a relative, but even an absolute pre-eminence. The order of attendance in theology (both Protestant and Catholic faculties being reckoned together, when in the same institution) was, Berlin (1989), Munich (1,189), followed by Leipzig (738), and Tubingen, abad fourth (348). In medicine, the capitals again lead, but in reversed order: Munich (1,359), Berlin (1,989), Munich (1,189), io In law, the capitals each of the largest two States come first, Berlin (1,989), Munich (1,189), io In law, the capitals each of the largest two States come first, Berlin (1,989), Munich (1,189), io In public order, hunder (1,189), io In medicine, the capitals again lead, but in reversed order: Munich (1,369), Berlin (1,981) and Leipzig (1,040) leave the others far in the rear."

SHE WROTE A POEM.

It Was Real Foetry, Too, Although It Didn't Rhyme,

In attendance at one of the Indianapolis ward schools is a little colored girl nine years old. She is miserable, indeed, for at home she is ill-treated and the shoes she wears, and often the clothes, are supplied by the teacher sor some of her classmates. There is a tender pootic vein in her make-up, and it found vent in a composition. The teacher took a little pansy plant to school one day and told the pupils of the flower. Two days after she asked them to write a poem of it and gave them the privilege of having the pansy talk and tell the story, and this, according to the Indianapolis Journal, is what the little girl wrote, the word pansy in the copy being the only one dignified with a capital:

"I am only a Pansy. My home is in a lit-is what the little girl wrote, the word passy in the copy being the only one dignified with a capital:

"I am only a Pansy. My home is in a little brown house. I sleep in my little brown house all winter, and I am now going to open my eyes and look about. Give me some rain, sky, I want to look out of: my window and see what is going on, I asked, so the sky gave me some water and I began to climb to the window. at last I got up there and I open my eyes. oh what a wonderful world I seen when birds sang songs to me, and grasshoppers kissed me, and dance with me, and creakets smiled at me, and I had a pretty green dress. there was trees that grow over me and the wind faned me, the sun smiled at me, and it little children smelled me one bright morning meand the grasshoppers had a party he would play with me and a naughty boy pick me up and tore me up and I died and that was the last of Pansy."
