Instrated News contains a protrait of Mr. G. W. McMullen, the Pacific Scandal exposer. The face is handsome, frank, intelligent, and determined. intelligent, and determined.

It is said that when the Hon. John Carling was up in Tackersmith, a few eyenings since, advocating L. H. & B. bonuses, an old farmer rather staggered him by talking out in meeting as follows;—"As Mr. Corlin' knows o much o'railways, perhaps he'll tell us something about the Pacine."—Adecties."

The Mitchell Advasale tells of two emigrants who are at present carrying the "hod" in the village. One is an Eng lish barrister and the other a B. A., of St. Andrew' University, Glasgow. They decline to go bock again to the old coun try, as some others have recently done, but have preferred to work and earn their bread by the sweat of their brows until something better turns up.

T. C. Patteson, editorial manager of the Mail, has left for the South. Wonder the Mail, has left for the South. Wonder whether the Pacific Scandal Commission, now sitting his any thing to do with his sudden exit! The interrogatory is just as reasonable as the one propounded a hundred times by the Mail respecting Hon. George Brown. "It makes all the state of the property would be supply to the state of the the difference in the world, you know, whose ox is gored."

A conundrum for the organs: Sir A conundrum for the organs: Sir Hugh Allen never "subscribed" in former elections. At this election, how even according to the admissions of John A's. Commission witnesses, Sir Hugh "subscribed" at least $150,000 in gold. That's a good deal of money—enough for a dozen moderate fortunes. What was the motive of the ordinarily close-fisted Sir Hugh in "subscribing" $150,000 in gold to the Government corruption gold to the Government corruption fund at this parienlar time? If it was fund at this particular time? If it was not on the understanding that he was to eceive the Pacific Charter in return, what was Sir Hugh's motive?

When passing over Graham's hill A pale wan man was seen, Crouching among the thistle's flowers, And angry was his mien. The moment that he heard my step. He turned on me quite bold, And then into my willing ear, Did his sad tale unfold. Did his sad tale unfold.

I bought a pound of Tea, he said,
When I went into Town,
And as I came up Graham's hill,
My Tea it all went down.

I went straight home unto my wife,
My loss she did deplore,
And said that into Town again,
She ne's would trust me more.

She ne'er would trust me more. She said I knew the Tea had strength Through twenty bags 'twould go, And had I the Tea'securely wrap'd, 'Twould not have happened so. He paused, the tears streamed down his face,
His bosom heaved a sigh,
And then he said with a bowed head,
To gather the Tea I'll try.
He tried, he tried and tried again. He tried, he tried and tried again.
Then looked quite sad at me,
And begged that I'd lend him the price
Of another pound of Tea.
I said I'd lend him just the price,
If on me he would call,
He said he guessed he'd rather not,
For he bought his Tea of Ball.
I handed out the cash at once,
When he went on his way.

When he went on his way. I met this sad, yet pleasant man Again on Saturday. I told him that he looked quite spruce, That he had much improved, H. looked, and as he caught my eye, saw he was much moved Dear sir, he said, he took my hand,
You have been good to me,
My wife and I are both content,
We've had our cup of Tea.
A cup of Tea is our delight,
We love it above all, We get the Tea to suit our taste

By giving Ball a call.
His Tea has strength and flavor too,
It makes us feel quite strong:
Then said the thing that charmed their Was the pleasing kettle's song, And now, kind friends, my story's done I ask you one and all, When'er you chance to pass his way,
