CHAPTER VII.

Meanwhile Dulcie has been listening to Lady Falconer's questions, and replying to them—when she likes. They are generally harmless ones. Does she like fancy needlework? Can she do the new crewel stitch? Does Mrs. Fernor knit? What is the present fashion of dress on the Continent?

All these questions Lady Falconer puts in her clear, thin voice, her eyes—they are gray, like Hugh's, but keener and darker—are fixed on the flushed, beautiful face.

"I can't do any fancy work," Dulcie admits; "I don't know the crewel stitch, and the dress—oh, they dress just as we do," and she looks round helplessly, like a strange, wild, beautiful animal caught and immured in a cage with tame ones. Is this the sort of thing that is to go on for six months? If so, certainly she will die of ennui, or scream, or do something dreadful.

Fortunately, Sir Hugh does not take long "to clean" himself, and appears in proper evening costume—Dulcie will never see him in evening clothes without remembering that evening when she met and told him the story of the will in the salon of the Hotel de Vincennes—and eager for his dinner.

A bell is rung, though for what reason, seeing that all who intend to dine are there together in the drawing-room, no one knows, and Sir Hugh offers his arm to his mother.

"They cross the hall and enter another long, low-roofed room, paneled in oak, and hung at intervals with tapestry—as old as the house itself. It is more like a cathedral than ever, and Dulcie feels that it would be no

Scientific Cure for Eczema

New Discovery—Thousands Find Relief.

No scientific discovery in recent years has attracted such wide-spread attention among physicians in this country and throughout Canada as the wonderful D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

After years of debate, medical authorities are now agreed that eczema and other skin diseases are not seated in the blood but are caused by myriads of microscopic germs gnawing the flesh just below the epidermis. The patient is perfectly healthy, it is only the skin that is diseased.

Hence, scientists are now agreed that you must cure the skin through the skin. The medicine must be in liquid form in order to penetrate pro-meet the duchess?" Then she stops and almost blushes at the slip, but Dulcie is not abashed.

"The duchess?" she says, in her clear voice, that seems actually loud in comparison with those of the others. "No, I was not in the way of meeting anything so high and grand. Aunt and I stayed at an hotel where most of the people were plain misters and missesses. Oh! we had one baronet, though, but he didn't come until just as we left—Sir Archibald Hope," and she smiles as she thinks of the golden hair and blue eyes of poor smitten Sir Archie.

"Archibald Hope," says Lady Falconer. "Oh, he is an old friend of ours. And you met him?"

Dulcie nods, and as she looks up she beholds Sir Hugh's eye fixed on her, and to her great annoyance the color persists upon coming to her cheeks. The vision of that struggle in the streets, upon Sir Archie's arm, and what these precise people would think of it all, rises before her.

"Yes," she says. "We saw—something of him!" Oh, Dulcie, when he was at your heels and sitting in your pocket all day! "He was very nice."

Lady Falconer smiles indulgently. "Oh, yes, Sir Archibald was always a great favorite of ours. Did you see him, Hugh?"

Sir Hugh nods.

"Yes," he says, curtly.

Lady Falconer laughs tartly. "And what is he doing in Rome? Falling in love, I suppose, as usual?"

Sir Hugh makes some kind of inarticulate sound, and carefully avoids Dulcie's eyes, which are fixed on the cloth, her face crimson.

"Poor Sir Archie!" goes on Lady Falconer. "You must know," she adds, looking at Dulcie, who has mastered her color by this time, "he is one of the most impressionable of men. It is said of him that he falls in love regularly every week."

Dulcie looks up with a sudden flash.

"Does it hurt him very much?" she asks, quoting from a popular song.

Lady Falconer, never having heard the song, is, naturally, a little startled, but she is too well-bred to look even confused, though Miss Maud's placid eyes open a little wider than usual.

"No," she says; "that is the best of it. It doesn't seem to 'hurt' him at all. If he falls in love on Monday he falls out of it on Saturday, and is quite ready to begin on Monday again."

"Taking Sunday as a rest," says Dulcie.

Lady Falconer looks rather taken aback.

"Y—es," she says, and touches her lips with her lace pocket-handkerchief. "When is he coming home, Hugh? Perhaps we could persuade him to pay us a visit."

"I don't know," says Sir Hugh.

"Oh!" says Dulcie, with a smile, as she remembers Sir Archie's plaintive appeal. "He won't require much persuasion. He was saying when we left that he hoped you would ask him."

There is a moment's silence at this candid statement, but Lady Falconer recovers herself, and smiles calmly. "That was very nice of him. We shall be very glad indeed. I will write to him."

"Oh, no, no! it was very interesting," says Dulcie, remorsefully; "it was indeed; I like it very much—when some one else is doing it! I always sympathize with the gentleman who declared that the most exquisite pleasure in life was to sit on a sunny bank by the road-side and watch another man break stones."

At this appalling confession there, falls an intense silence, broken suddenly by Hugh's rare laugh.

Eddie's classical performance comes to an end at this moment, and Lady Falconer's voice is heard in the distance.

"Are you too tired to play for us, Miss Dorrimore?"

Gin Pills

FOR THE KIDNEYS
Succeeded Where Operation Failed!

"During August last I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder. He had decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush and they could not take it out. I was recommended by a friend to try Gin Pills. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I did not expect that they would relieve me of the stone, but to my great joy I passed the stone on October 3rd and am now a well man and very happy."

BRITISH STILL HOLDING IMPORTANT POSITIONS.

British Front in France and Belgium, Sept. 21.—This morning found British still holding strongly the vital positions which they had taken from the Germans. The continuing process is effective, and the preventing the Germans from using up their reserves is going on. Importance of the new ground lines in the fact that it was high ground, taking in the ridge in which Anzac' flag now flies and extending southward and constituting the stone of the German defences. Over this the onrushing British yesterday swept with irresistible force. Aside from a local operation southwest of Gheluvelt, the situation south of the Anzac stronghold was unchanged. The Germans shelled the left of this front during the night, showed considerable activity, immediately to the north and north of St. Julien the enemy forced evening for a counter attack, but British turned heavy rifle and machine gun fire into their ranks and dispersed them with heavy losses. Fighting yesterday was very bitter in places. The enemy settled determinedly to hold this position, and once once forced from the lines they are defending, continued to return the attack in an effort to oust the British. During the day no less than 10 counter attacks were delivered on the front north of Anzac, but in each case the assaulting troops were repulsed. Throughout this time British continued to improve their position, reaching out here and there to occupy a position which would give them a stronger hold. In the day's success many parts of the Empire was represented. Australia, South Africa, England, Scotland all gave their magnificent troops who pushed out across the marsh lands and battled their way through concrete machine gun emplacements and redoubts. The whole operation was a remarkable demonstration of what organization, backed with plenty of big guns, can accomplish.

ADVANCING UNDER DIFFICULTIES

British Headquarters in France, Sept. 21.—The scene of the present British offensive includes one of the most important and strongest parts of the German line in this section, and has been marked by some of the most bitter fighting of the war, since the Allies seven weeks ago began their drive, which has become known as the Battle of Flanders. The wooded elevations east and southeast of Ypres among which are such dominating positions as Glencosse Wood and Inverness Copse, were the vital points and the Germans had made their defence here as nearly impregnable as they were able, being determined to retain them without regard to cost. The battle of the last few weeks bears witness to the strength of the defences at these points. The crucial sector may be said to be the ridge known as Anzac, which lies about a mile southwest of Zonnebeke. Southwest of Anzac is Nuns Wood, and just east of this is the famous forest known as Polygon Wood. When the British, in August, fought their way forward to Polygon Wood they found Nuns Wood so flooded that they were forced to go around it, and the ground here still presents great difficulties to the movement of troops because of its swampy condition. Between Glencosse Wood and Inverness Copse is one stretch of solid ground of some 400 yards, and here on the FitzClarence farms the Germans had built great steel and concrete redoubts whose machine guns dominated the southern part of Glencosse Wood and the northern section of Inverness. Below Inverness are Dumbarto Lakes, and the ground about them is pitted with shell craters, which are filled with water. The paths and trenches here were wiped out by artillery fire, and shell holes are so close together that there is no space to walk around them. In most places mud and water are knee deep. Still further south is Shrewsbury Forest, through which the British line ran, and the ground in front of the British trenches is a mass of tangled barbed wire. Just below is Nuns Wood; it merges into Glencosse Wood on the south, and a little further down and astride the Ypres-Menin highway is Inverness Copse, of undying fame. Between Hollebeke and the River Lys the country is more or less open and it is dominated by Messines. North of the Ypres-Roulers railway the country presents the same difficulties from marshy ground, although there are a few stretches of woods. The British began an intense artillery preparation with guns of all calibre about a week ago and continued with unabated fury until today. The artillery work resulted in a number of German guns being silenced, and many enemy ammunition dumps near batteries were blown up by shell fire. The entire front over which the attack was to be made, was searched out by high explosives, and as an additional precaution the British gunners kept putting down heavy barrage fire, first in one place and then in another, and sweeping the whole country before them. The German guns, of course, have not been silent, but their fire was comparatively weak. All this artillery preparation by the British was vital if there was to be hope of success, for they had tested the strength of this front before and knew that their infantry faced a task that would try their mettle to the fullest. In previous attacks by the Germans in this region was proved a great embarrassment, and it was only by bombardment such as was conducted that could wipe out these concealed positions. It was impossible the Germans should not have known that an offensive was being prepared, but it appears from statements by prisoners that there was much doubt as to the exact place where the British would strike. For the last fortnight the policy of the Germans has been one of inaction, although they undoubtedly made every effort to improve their positions since the offensive in August.

LOOKING FOR PEACE.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 21. The Hølliken to-day prints an interview with Herr Leube, Liberal member of the German Reichstag, in which he says he is convinced that the German reply to the peace note of Pope Benedict which was unanimously adopted with the peace resolution passed by the Reichstag majority on July 19. He declares the most of the German Liberals and Socialists consider that the annexation of Belgium and the exercise of control over it would be stupid. If we took Belgium, he continued, we would have to give it twenty-five representatives in the Reichstag, and it is not difficult to imagine what trouble those twenty-five Belgians would cause the government. The German reply to the Pope, Herr Leube believes, will promote and bring about peace. "I am convinced that Christmas bells will be peace bells," he declares.

WAR OFFICE BULLETIN.

LONDON, Sept. 21. The War Office, after the receipt of General Haig's report to-day issued this bulletin: More detailed accounts of yesterday's battle confirm the completeness of our success. During the evening local attacks delivered by us in the neighbourhood of Tower Hamlets and northeast of Langemarck cleared up a number of strong points and completed the capture of our objectives in these localities. It is now established that in the many counter-attacks delivered by considerable forces of the enemy during the afternoon and evening his casualties were unusually great. The clear light of the latter part of the day enabled our troops to obtain warning of impending attacks and in every case the advancing lines of German infantry were destroyed by the concentrated fire of our rifles and machine guns and artillery. The obstinacy with which the enemy constantly repeated his attacks only added to his losses without recovering for him and of the valuable ground which we had won. Exhausted by his previous efforts the enemy made no counter attacks during the night, and our troops were able to consolidate the positions undisturbed.

PEACE.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 21. The German Government, in its reply to the peace note of Pope Benedict, a copy of which has been received here, cherishes a lively desire that the appeal may meet with success. Emperor William, the German note says, has been following the efforts of the Pope towards peace for a considerable time with high officials. The reply of Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary, to the peace note of Pope Benedict, says a despatch from Vienna, was handed to Monsignor Valtried Bonzo, Papal Nuncio, at Vienna, Thursday.

GERMANY'S MOTIVES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. In voicing the general resentment in Congress over the disclosures in Count Von Bernstorff's message, Vice-President Marshall to-day gave out a statement declaring that the disclosures were proof of the German Government's effort to divide America into factions by corrupt means, if necessary. This ought to end forever any and every doubt in the minds of any Americans as to the justice of and the necessity for this war. It proves that the German Government was seeking all along to split us into factions by corrupt means, if necessary, possibly hoping in time to win the war in Europe, and then to humiliate and subjugate us. He who is not now whole-heartedly for war runs great risk of being suspected of getting part of the fifty thousand. This is an honest Congress, and all its members will resent this insult to its intelligence and honor.

WILL PROBABLY SEVER RELATIONS.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 21. Argentina will probably sever relations with Germany to-morrow as the result of new developments to-day, the Associated Press learns from a high official source.

AN EXPLANATION.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. As a probable explanation of the detention of the Swedish diplomatic mail pouches at Halifax, it was stated at the British Embassy to-day that the Swedish economic mission before leaving Stockholm asked permission to open in the course of their voyage a filled bag containing confidential documents and to reveal it before passing the inspection of officers. Such a procedure, the officials of the Embassy said, would clearly invalidate all principles hitherto observed in accordance with international law, and the British Government accordingly replied that they would give no such undertaking that such bags would be exempted from examination by the British authorities. This bag, it is assumed, is to be one of four to be held for examination at Halifax and concerning which the Swedish Legation here is understood to have made informal representations to the State Department.

NEW U.S. CHIEF OF STAFF.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. Major General Taskerless was named Chief of Staff of the United States Army to succeed Major General Hugh Scott who retires.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. The British steamer Vienna, 4,000 tons, chartered by a French line, has been sunk while on a voyage from Brest to New York, it was learned at the French line office to-day. No details of the ship's loss were obtainable.

SWEDISH MAIL HELD UP.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. Four diplomatic mail pouches sent by the Swedish Foreign Office to the Legation in Washington are being detained at Halifax by the British authorities. They were taken from steamers on which were Dr. H. Jallmar Lundholm, who is coming to the States as a special envoy, and the First Secretary of the Swedish Foreign Office. No reason for the detention of the mail could be obtained here, the British Embassy being without information on the subject. Baron Aikerhielm, the Swedish Charge, called at the State Department yesterday and was understood to have taken up the matter with officials there in an effort to have the mail quickly forwarded to its destination.

WILL PROCEED WITH TRIAL.

PARIS, Sept. 21. The report of a special committee approving the authorization of legal proceedings against Deputy Lewis Turmel was adopted by the deputies last night by a raising of hands without discussion and in deepest silence. The report expressed astonishment at the delay shown in taking up the case. A resolution authorizing the suspension of Parliamentary immunity was read by the President of the Chamber, Paul Deschane.

BIG ARMY WANTED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. Dr. Benjamin Rand, of Harvard University, who just returned from the western front, where he watched the operations of the British army, said yesterday that in his opinion the United States should send an army of two million men abroad to help wage the fight, if the war with Germany is to be won. A small expeditionary force, said Dr. Rand, would mean an undue sacrifice of man-power, which experience England went through early in the war, because she could

STARVATION AND RIOTING IN WARSAW.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. Starvation and rioting in Warsaw and other sections in Poland occupied by the Germans, have so increased that Germany has authorized relief workers to seek funds wherever they may be found. The Red Cross headquarters at Geneva and agents of the Rockefeller fund have been called upon for help.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ON HIS WAY TO SOFIA.

LONDON, Sept. 21. A despatch from Berne received to-day by the British Admiralty, says Emperor William has passed through Budapest, Hungary, on his way to Sofia, the Bulgarian capital. It is believed to be the Emperor's intention to try to smoothen over the difficulties which have arisen between Bulgaria and Germany. Germany and Austria have demanded military aid which Bulgaria has refused. On the other hand Bulgaria has asked similar aid which the Central Powers have refused.

THE GREATEST VICTORY.

LONDON, Sept. 21. From the newly acquired enemy stronghold known as Anzac, southwest of Zonnebeke, flutters the Australian banner, symbol of the greatest victory which has marked the British operations in the western theatre in the past year, not excluding that of Messines. Southwest of Cheluvet the Germans still are holding a position which the British desired, and to-day at 9.40 o'clock Field Marshal Haig began an attack here.

GERMAN ATTACKS FAIL.

PARIS, Sept. 21. The troops of the German Crown Prince last night attacked the French positions on Mont Haut in the Champagne region, but to-day they were repulsed with serious losses, the war office says.

EXPLOSION IN IRELAND.

LONDON, Sept. 21. An explosion has occurred in a munition factory in Ireland, it was officially announced to-day by the British war office. Nine persons were killed. The number of injured has not yet been ascertained.

NEW LINE CONSOLIDATED.

BRITISH FRONT, Sept. 21. During the night the British forces, with comparatively little opposition, consolidated and considerably improved the new line which they had won in their offensive against the Germans to the east of Ypres.

Agent for Government Fined $100 for Breaking Law.

It is with the greatest pleasure that we learn of the appointment of a Government Agent at North Sydney, and especially so because the appointment has been given to a most deserving and efficient official in the person of Mr. Arthur W. Shano, the present clerk in charge of the Nfld. Postal Department at the place mentioned. Mr. Shano has been attached to the postal service for over a quarter of a century ten years of which have been spent at the little post office on the terminal wharf at North Sydney, where with two assistants he attends to all mails passing through to Nfld. Since being stationed at the mining town he has acted in the capacity of relieving officer and general adviser to the Nfld. Government, and countrymen of Mr. Shano's while travelling to and from the great dominion have met in him an obliging and sincere friend. Mr. Shano has received a letter from the Government thanking him for his services and a notice to the effect that in future he would be known as the Agent of the Nfld. Government, which duties he will perform in addition to his regular postal work. Congratulations.

The master of a schooner, which arrived here a few days ago from a southern outpost, was convicted of a breach of the Prohibition Law by Judge Morris to-day and fined $100 and costs. The story in brief is that the defendant left his home port on August 1st for Sydney and while en route called at St. Pierre and purchased and took on board four gallons of rum. Half of the liquor he kept for his own use and the other half, on his return home, he divided amongst the crew of another schooner. One of the crew of the latter schooner and the result was that the defendant was brought to book by the authorities. He pleaded guilty to-day and was ordered to pay the amount mentioned or as an alternative spend a month in jail.

Flowers of the Arctic.

In the brief bright nights summer the Arctic is a paradise of flowers. It would seem to be a compensation of Dame Nature for the long winter during which the sun never shows his jolly face once.

A great many of these plants have of late years become familiar to garden lovers because they are much used in rock gardens, and every flower lover knows their delicacy of structure, their brightness of colour, and their hardihood.

But nothing can beat their original environment. These patches of yellow and blue and rose and purple, cheek by jowl with great beds and banks of snow or some stranded and long unmelting berg, look lovely. It is the setting they were made for.

Strangely enough, when brought south and coaxed to grow in our gardens, these Arctic and Alpine plants lose both a part of their great vitality and their lovely tint. They pine for the Arctic like the Eskimo does.

Nansen tells of delicate bluebells nodding in the breeze, saxifraga with large blossoms, pale yellow mountain poppies, white cloudberry flowers, and blue forget-me-nots in countless millions in the neighbourhood of the North Pole. So it is not all desolation and death. A flower-seed is one of the most difficult things in nature to kill. Give it half a chance and it will show up smiling, and do its "bit" in making the world a brighter place to live in.

SATURDAY, September 22nd, 1917.

The Allies' Answer.

The Allies are growing tired of peace notes and have evolved a convincing form of answer to them when they come. President Wilson's answer was certainly convincing enough and of the nature which America finds most effective—as yet, leaving him to do the talking of the other nations give their reply in slightly different fashion, substituting deeds for words. The Italians take San Gabriele; the Russians rally everywhere; the French retake the last remnant of real victory won by Germany at Verdun, and the British score their greatest victory of the year! For the present the last feat holds the centre of the stage.

The British attack has been made in a well defined section, extending from a point a little south of Langemarck (where our men distinguished themselves) southward to Gheluvelt, on the Ypres-Menin road. It has so far been pushed to the furthest point near Zonnebeke and begins to project a salient towards the Roulers-Menin line. There is nothing in the map to indicate the paramount importance of its success, and it is probably because of the nature of the fighting, the almost insuperable difficulties overcome, that it is spoken of in official circles with such gratification. It has the appearance of the latest and greatest triumph of the artillery, so terribly overwhelming that it raked every inch of the broken and marshy ground which is in every way so apt for defence and made possible an advance over it. But apart from that some more invaluable high ground has been won. The line now runs well east of historic Ypres and a bulge is developing in the German front which will cause them grave concern. It is the Somme attack once again, on a far greater scale and with far greater issues hanging upon it.

Despite the emphasis of this reply, the peace talk grows louder. If any proof were lacking of the source of inspiration of the Pope's message, it is supplied by the announcement that he is likely to make another attempt and issue another note before winter. No independent arbiter, however sincere his motives or exalted his position, would persist in such an endeavour after such a reception of his first proposals. It is the enemy that speaks through him, and no one will be surprised at his speaking. The winter will silence many of the Allies' guns but it will use forces of its own as potent to prepare the way for their victory. Austria nearly starving, barely holding off Italy, seething with disaffection and rebellious against Germany, Germany herself in almost as bad case, short of food, short of oils and fats, short of leather, short of coal or the labour to mine it, short even of cannon-fodder, no prospect of offering of military victory and her last hope proving a delusion—it is no wonder they want to talk peace. There will be more notes before Christmas, more overtures, possibly a definite offer. They will be of interest to the Allies merely in so far as they exhibit the degree to which they are influenced by the Allies' own arguments, presented by their iron spokesmen on the battlefield. If Germany finds it hard to make up her mind whether to retain Belgium or not, she may be helped to a solution by the discovery some day that there is no Belgium left to retain.

GERMANY TRIED TO BRIBE AMERICAN CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, To-day. The American Government's publicity spotlight, revealing German intrigue in neutral lands, turned to-day upon the expenditure of money by the Berlin Foreign Office in an effort to influence Congress at the eve of the ruthless submarine campaign which drove the United States to war. Secretary of State Lansing made public without comment the text of a message sent by Count Von Bernstorff to Berlin last January asking authority to use $50,000 to influence Congress through an organization which, the Foreign Office was reminded, had performed a similar service before.

To supplement this move, Von Bernstorff suggested an official declaration in favor of Ireland for its effect here. The organization to be employed was not named in the message and Lansing did not discuss its identity. It was freely suggested among other officials, however, that it was one of the various societies which flooded the members of the House and Senate with peace messages when President Wilson was asking that a state of war be recognized. This disclosure adds another chapter to the amazing story begun with the publication of the famous Zimmermann note in which Germany proposed an alliance with Mexico and Japan against the United States and which has included German and Swedish breaches of neutrality Argentina and Mexico. It connects the German Government and Count Von Bernstorff directly and conclusively with the machinations which the American public had assumed was part of a world wide Teutonic intrigue, but which many people firmly believed were carried on or financed in this country by German agents without actual authority from Berlin. Little surprise was occasioned either in official circles or at the Capitol, although members of the Congress were highly indignant. There was some talk at the Capitol of demanding an investigation and Senator Overman, Chairman of the Senate Lobby Committee, and Representative Flood, Chairman of the House of Foreign Affairs Committee, arranged to go to the State Department to-morrow and ask for further information. On the floor of the House of Representatives, Heflin, of Alabama, asserted that he could name thirteen or fourteen members of the two branches of Congress who had acted suspiciously, and expressed the opinion that they should be investigated. Generally, however, the disposition was to regard as absurd any suggestion that any part of the $50,000 sought by Von Bernstorff was intended for members of Congress. Von Bernstorff's message was dated January 22nd. It was sent nine days before the German Government proclaimed its unrestricted submarine warfare. When he wrote it Count Von Bernstorff was assuring the American Government and press that under no circumstances would Germany violate her pledges of the Sussex case or do anything that might draw the United States into the list of her enemies. With the Lusitania and all other cases in abeyance, the American Government had made no move since the Sussex pledge and there was nothing on the surface to foreshadow impending trouble. Two weeks later, when Bernstorff was handed his passports, he professed ignorance of prior knowledge of his Government's intentions to throw its promises to the winds.

WHAT DID YOU EXPECT!

BUENOS AIRES, To-day. News to the effect that Emperor William had expressed his approval of the loyalty displayed by Count Von Luxburg, the dismissed German Minister of War, was received here just before the opening of the debate in the Chamber of Deputies to-day.

NOT GUILTY.

NEW YORK, To-day. John D. Moore, Secretary of the Friends of Irish Freedom, made the following statement to-day in connection with the letter of Count Von Bernstorff made public by Secretary of State Lansing: "The Friends of Irish Freedom is not the organization referred to by Count Von Bernstorff. We have not now, and never did have, any German tinge. Our membership is restricted to those of Irish blood and we are entirely supported by our members."

MASTERY TACTICS.

LONDON, To-day. Telegraphing from British Headquarters in Flanders, Reuter's correspondent says the more one hears about yesterday's great fight the more one admires the mastery tactics and indomitable gallantry displayed. Never has the British Army had to tackle a tougher proposition than that set by the attack by a defensive area of great depth held so densely that it may be estimated that there was an average of over four Germans to every yard of front to the Ansacs and some of the British troops which served General Plumer so well at Messines. I watched late into the night the lurid palpitation of the sky and wondered what the undulating thunder might be recording.

But this morning we are holding on to our gains just as at Vimy and Messines and aided by beneficent weather we are consolidating them, so that every hour lessens the chances of the success of the most desperate efforts the enemy can make. The strategic significance of yesterday's victory must eventually manifest itself unmistakably. The value of this gain cannot be measured by the mere acreage of recovered territory though that is substantial. It was a battle for a commanding position and we have won a victory which leaves the enemy in this wide tract of Flanders at a serious disadvantage.

Steel Shield to Protect Advancing Soldiers.

No single instrument of destruction is playing a more vital role in the present war than the machine gun. To deprive Germany of this weapon by offsetting its effect is the purpose of an inventor who has developed a bullet-proof fighting shield that is perhaps worthy of study. The device is a wedge-shaped steel shelter mounted on one front and two rear wheels and intended to accommodate 10 infantrymen. The shield is designed to be folded flat and carried through the communication trenches to the firing line, where it could be assembled quickly under cover of darkness, ready to protect Sammies, Tommies, and Pollus during an early morning advance across "No Man's Land." The October number of Popular Mechanics Magazine contains further details of this interesting contrivance.

Riots Throught out Austria-Hungary.

(Special Star Cable by United Press). Rome, Sept. 17.—Austria-Hungary is reported finding it increasingly difficult to keep in agreement with Germany. Diplomatic advances received here to-day told of an epidemic of riots throughout the Dual Empire and political differences as to Prussianism that indicates a growing breach between the two Teutonic powers.

Austria is suffering from lack of food, according to reports here. Most of the disorders, detailed news of which has been suppressed, have been due to this cause. Thousands of the people are making pilgrimages to various shrines imploring Divine intercession for peace. Prussian officers it is asserted are frequently insulted on the streets of various Austrian cities.

Italy's successful drive east of Gorizia is likewise reported as causing widespread apprehension throughout Emperor Carl's dominions.

Utilized Waste.

The utilization of waste in the battle wrecked parts of France has been reduced to a science. All the pieces of shell, causes, unexploded bombs, haversacks, helmets, canteens and even old rags are picked up and sent down to the base to be utilized in some form or another. At one spot 50,000 old shoes were being repaired when a war correspondent visited it. The upper part of an old shoe is being converted into shoe laces by an ingenious machine invented by an Irish shoemaker. One thousand five hundred French girls are employed at one salvage shop converting overcoats picked up on the field.

London Daily Express: In the old days light cavalry were the eyes and the right hand of a commander. Hannibal won all his battles with them, and lost Zama when the Numidian horse fought for Rome. In our Civil War, Prince Rupert swept everything before him until the genius of Cromwell invented the Ironsides. As late as the Franco-German war the Uhlands did wonders for Moltke. Circling clouds of Cossack cavalry used to be the chief weapon of Russia. In the conditions of modern war cavalry are useless until the enemy is broken. The pioneers of observation and offence are now the airmen. They soar above the advancing line. They detect and report every movement of the enemy. They note his formation. Sweeping down to mingle with the attack, they disorganize and harass his defence. They have become a really vital arm. No emphasis can exaggerate their importance.

Was in Last Drive.

Mrs. John Clarke, of the Goulds, St. John's West, has received an interesting letter from her son, 3311 Pte. T. Clarke, who took part in the big drive on Aug. 18th, from which we take the following extracts:

"Just a word to let you know I am quite well after the advance we were in a few days ago. We did great work. Jim Walsh and Wes. Williams were wounded; tell their friends that they are all right, as their wounds are not serious. I was with Wes when he was wounded. We had a hard time in the advance as it was raining and mud to your eyebrows. We captured a lot of concrete block-houses and several machine guns. The Germans tried to counter attack but they could not succeed. It was great fun to see the Germans surrendering. I got several for my hand. The night before the advance we were holding a strong point with Mr. Rendell in front of our lines. They were crawling around us everywhere and opened up a machine gun on us, but we put it out of action and killed quite a few of them.

"Percy Howlett is still at Ayr; I was speaking to Jack McCarthy, he was wounded in the shoulder on April 14, but is now as well as ever. We left Ayr about the 10th June, but I had a great time while there."

At the regular weekly meeting of the Industrial Workers last night a lively debate took place on certain sections of the Constitution calling for a division of the members present. It is hoped to finish drafting the Constitution at the next meeting, and when it is completed the Association will settle down to business.

The Joy of Grumbling.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

How we do enjoy grumbling about unimportant things. I was waiting for a telephone call to be put through at a little country store, where I spent the summer. Two or three other people were also waiting for calls. We all had difficulty in getting the operator and then we had long waits and heartrending disappointments when we were called to the phone, only to be told "the party does not answer. Shall I try them again?"

Some Of Our Telephone Experiences.

We took turns relating exasperating experiences. One woman had failed to get a message about guests who were coming until an hour after the guests arrived. Another had been called to the phone twice and then assured that there was no record of any call. A third had spent the morning trying to get her husband, being assured after each call that no one answered. When he came down that afternoon he informed her that he had not left the office all the morning because he knew she was going to call.

"Such miserable service," groaned one. "I never was anywhere where it took so long to get a call," said another, and then a third opened for telling the new fields for grumbling by telling of a place she had been two summers ago where the service was even worse. And then we all told of places to which we had been where the service was even worse.

We Quite Enjoyed The Hour's Wait. On the whole I think we all quite enjoyed the hour we waited.

There is just one thing that is more valuable as a grumble outlet than the public service corporation and that is the weather. What should we do without it? Even the most terrible hot spell has this compensation. And the worse one has suffered, the higher one's thermometer ran, the more joy one gets in the telling. Of course, one does not crave a heat prostration in the family, but if it has to come what a chance for holding the centre of any weather discussion.

Getting The Grumble Out Of Our Systems.

The Greeks had a theory about tragedies on the stage. That it was healthy to attend them because they were an outlet to one's emotions of fear and horror, etc., a sort of spiritual cathartic.

Doubleless these pleasant little sessions of community grumbling over the weather, the mails, the telephone, etc., are invaluable since they get some of the grumble out of our systems. Who knows how much unhappiness they may save our families?

LEATHER.

Leather is a tough, hardy substance which at one time was used in the manufacture of shoes. For years the people of this country wore large, bunion-producing shoes of pure leather which could be put on in May and worn until death without showing the least sign of exhaustion, but they cannot do so to-day.

It appears that one day an irate author, who considered that he had been badly treated in regard to the always thorny subject of royalties, called at the firm's office and insisted on seeing one of the principals, with neither of whom was he personally acquainted.

His request was granted, and after dilating on his grievances and obtaining no redress, the angry man turned on his heel, saying as he departed:

"Sir, if you are Smith, then damn Robinson; if you are Robinson, then damn Smith; but if you are the company, then you are welcome to the double reversion!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Shoes of pure leather which could be put on in May and worn until death.

Owing to the European war and the inexorable law of supply and demand, which also controls the price of steel rails, genuine, hand-buffed leather is getting harder to find than a pure politician. This has caused the price of shoes to leap straight up, describe a graceful parabola and fall on the neck of the ultimate consumer with a sickening plunk. One of the greatest disappointments a married man can have is to lead a family of nine children into a shoe store and try to surround their feet with shoes, at the present market price. A pair of vicid kid shoes which a year ago could have been bought for $2.95 will now look a $5 bill in the face with a stony stare. And yet people continue to wear shoes, instead of going bare-footed and saving the price of corn cures.

Leather used to be grown on the person of the milch cow, but it is now produced by mixing wood pulp with graphite. This brings forth a pleasing material which cannot be told from real leather until the owner has stepped into a rain storm without his rubbers on, in a blithe and fearless manner. The old-fashioned, all-leather shoe could be thoroughly soaked in rain water without being affected except in the complexion, which could be at once completely restored by a thick coating of tallow, this treatment taking out all of the blemishes except the squeak. The scarcity of leather, however, has ushered in the blotting paper sole, which is one of the most melancholy devices that ever sprang from the brain of man.

One reason why leather is scarce is because the milch cow is allowed to live longer than she used to. This causes one to ask why some Luther Burbank does not produce a dog that will grow leather instead of hydrophobia and fleas. There are thousands of dogs that apparently have no mission in life and could be spared as easily as the male gossip, and yet man struggles to perfect the seedless cucumber instead of grafting the canine family onto a horseshoe trunk. Sometimes it seems as if American inventive genius is running into the ground.

A Comprehensive Curse.

Dipping into Mr. J. F. Fuller's recently-published "Autobiography of an Irish Octogenarian." I came across an amusing anecdote concerning a well-known firm of publishers, which, for the purpose of the story, we will designate Smith, Robinson, and Co.

It appears that one day an irate author, who considered that he had been badly treated in regard to the always thorny subject of royalties, called at the firm's office and insisted on seeing one of the principals, with neither of whom was he personally acquainted.

His request was granted, and after dilating on his grievances and obtaining no redress, the angry man turned on his heel, saying as he departed:

"Sir, if you are Smith, then damn Robinson; if you are Robinson, then damn Smith; but if you are the company, then you are welcome to the double reversion!"—Pearson's Weekly.

He Arrested the Tsar.

The Peasant's Son Who is Now a Commander-in-Chief.

A great scholar, speaking no fewer than fifteen languages, and a highly scientific soldier to boot, General Korniloff, the new Russian Commander-in-Chief, is a self-made man, if ever there was one.

At the age of thirteen he was a shepherd boy on the Siberian Steppes. He could neither read nor write. But a political exile in his father's village taught him the alphabet, and after working practically alone for three years at the task of educating himself, he was received at the age of sixteen into the Siberian School of Cadets.

Thence he went to the Petrograd Military Academy, where he had a brilliant career, passing all his examinations at the head of his class, and finally graduating at the famous Michailovsk School of Gunnery as a full-fledged artillery officer.

A Model Regiment.

Korniloff's military genius was first displayed during the Russo-Japanese war, when he earned the coveted St. George's Cross for covering the retreat from Mukden of one of General Kurapatkin's beaten armies.

At the outbreak of the present war he was given command of a division—the 48th—and he set to work forthwith to make it a model unit for the whole Russian army.

So well did he succeed that in the course of a few months his command owing to their bravery and dash, was unofficially dubbed the "Terrible Division." Unfortunately, however, their gallant leader was badly wounded at the disastrous Battle of Gorlice, fought on May 3rd, 1915, and after lying for five days in the woods, feeding on roots and berries hunger compelled him to surrender to the Austrians.

He Escaped.

There followed fifteen months rigorous captivity, but in August, 1916, Korniloff escaped by night from his prison camp, and eventually, after many exciting adventures and hair-breadth escapes, he reached Russia.

Reporting himself at headquarters, he was made Military Commandant of Petrograd. He was one of the leaders of the Revolution, and all through he has been a staunch upholder of the Provisional Government.

It was Korniloff, it will be remembered, who personally arrested the Tsar and Tsarina. Later on he asked to be relieved of his command at the capital and sent back to the front. "I am a fighting General," he said, "accustomed to act and not to talk. In Petrograd most of the time is spent in talking."—Pearson's Weekly.

A little kerosene is good for white smeared woodwork. After washing the woodwork in the usual way, put a little kerosene on a cloth and rub over the woodwork.

There is no necessity for a pot to boil furiously in order to cook the contents. It will cook just as well if it just boils, and this can be done over a very small flame.

The white knit sweater will clean easily in the following way: Put into a flour bag equal parts of flour and salt, then put the sweater in and shake well. No ironing will be necessary after the process.

Italy is Now Ready to Crush Austria

AND INSURE THE EXTENT'S TRIUMPH IF ALLIES WILL BACK HER WITH GUNS.

Has 4,500,000 Fighters—Holds That Reversal of Battle Are on Western Front Will Win War—But Calorina Must Have Cannon, Coal, and Air-Planes to Carry Out His Plan.

With the Supreme Command of the Italian Armies, Tuesday, Sept. 11.—Despite Russia, the hour has struck when the world must rivet its attention on the Italian front in Austria. Austria and Germany are doing it. If Italy's allies don't—well, if I may be permitted to cable an inadequate expression, "it's a pity."

Here we had the longest and best survey of the battlefield that any correspondent had had since the beginning of the war. I have seen the Italian war in Austria from the mountain peaks to the sea level. I have seen things so tremendous and heard things so important, yet so badly stultified in their truth, that I have had a conversion of mind and soul about this war. I have asked the question, "Why are these Italian armies, their leaders, and their offensive program in Austria just being really discovered?" I know the answer, but I am unable to print it.

Here we are in the fourth year of the war that threatens to obliterate civilization. Here we are at the vital moment with only a few ways to win it, that is if we intend to end with victory, so it need not be fought all over again. I believe we can end this war comparatively soon on the Italian front in Austria. That is a large statement—we can end this war comparatively soon on the Italian front in Austria.

Wait, now! I have not said that Italy can win this war alone. I do not intimate that our last field of glory shall echo to the cry, "Avanti Savoia!" and the death wail of Austria. What I mean is that if we—by we I mean the other allies who count, namely, England, France and America—will agree quickly on the present possibilities of that front we will immediately impose our military conditions upon Germany instead of continuing to fight a war of Trieste, and if she gets it her aim in entering the war is accomplished." Quite true, and Italy will get Trieste; but, even so, she understands that at Trieste the Austrian armies are not necessarily finished. The loss of Trieste would be a tremendous blow to Austria, but its Italian capture would be more a sentimental victory than a real one. Austria would suffer chiefly in loss of morale.

Laibach must be, and is, the real objective, even though the military sharp next says: "Well, she cannot get there anyway because the going is impossible. The mountains are too high." Here is the answer: The world at large may have a notion that Italy delayed entering the war nearly a year after the Allies in order to prepare a sudden Austrian invasion. That is partially but not altogether the fact.

Italy, as a member of the Triple Alliance, was an ally of Germany and Austria, yet Austria prepared herself against Italy. That was proved by her frontier defenses and mobilisation barracks along the Italian boundary. So even when Italy entered the war she was in a worse position to attack than Austria. True, her army was splendidly equipped and trained. Her German alliance taught her many military methods with which she has profited. But Austria had the same knowledge, and besides a far greater advantage in physical position.

At the beginning of her advance into Austria, Italy fought in the plain, while Austria had the mountains. She was exactly in the position of a person standing at the bottom of a ladder against a high wall with an enemy at the top. Slowly, painfully, but surely the Italian armies have gone up the rungs of the ladder. They have overcome difficulties that seemed three harder than the job before them to-day, for now her armies have reached the top of the ladder and are on exactly equal ground with the Austrians, with this additional advantage, that Austria is now invaded all along the line. The damage that is being done is happening to Austria.

Ignorance of Some Americans.

It is difficult to write about Italy the way I want to write owing to the deep-seated conviction that my fellow-countrymen will be hard to convince. Americans realize so little about the war in France that writing about any place further off seems rather hopeless. They ask such simple questions to prove their appalling ignorance of anything and everything about it. One said to me a few weeks ago in Paris: "This Verdun—(he pronounced it Verdon)—is it now in the hands of the French or Germans?" That seems incredible, but it is only one question of many. Indeed, the ocean is too wide for a comprehension of the war. Even the Channel was too wide for England immediately to grasp the fact that she was fighting for her life. I hope that the proportions of water and understanding are not carried out so that America understands too late.

If The Italians Get to Laibach.

But to get on to Laibach. Italy is waging a classical war. Her operations are greater than Napoleonic. She imposes every condition on the enemy. And every step that Italy advances hurts Austria to a point where Austria is already beginning to groan. The Italian boot is descending on Austrian ground. If the Italian heel rests on Laibach with the toes pointing to Vienna or Budapest comes naturally the question, How will that end the war?

The answer is that if Austria can resist up to that point it is fairly certain that both her morale will be shaken—with Trieste lost meantime—and her armies will be rather well done. Then at Laibach the mountains end, and the plains, practically unfortified, stretch away across Hungary. But more important is the fact that the fall of Laibach means the smash of Austrian railway communications to the Dalmatian coast. Fiume and Pola will be cut off. Austria's navy would soon be cut of action and there would be an abrupt termination to submarine activity in the Adriatic and Mediterranean. These indications may show in some degree the plight of Austria if the Italians get to Laibach. Voila, the French say.

As to Germany.

What about Germany, is the next question. I have already said that a beaten Austria is a beaten Germany if the Allies impose their will. Of course, if they get sentimental and go and make peace with her, why, then, of course, Germany may struggle on. But if they get to Laibach they have it in their power to dictate terms that will mean beating Germany and an end of the war.

But can't the Germans help Austria in the meantime? Now we come to a bit of strategic reasoning. They might help Austria. They would hope to help her, and, perhaps, if they don't bury themselves too far in Russia, they might try. All right. Let us take our fancy back to that Anglo-French line stretching from Switzerland to the sea. That is the line where the military sharps have all declared final victory must come. That is where America will have her troops. There the Allies have for a long time been sending in heavy right and left hooks on the Teuton body. The effect is as one wants to consider it—these latest, greatest offensives. There the Allies are working on the outside of a long, curved battle line, and the Germans on an interior line of communications. That has been a difficulty for the Allies to overcome ever since the battle of the Marne.

Suppose now in this fourth year of the war we get together and put parochial matters to one side. Suppose all decide that the Anglo-French front without being in the least reduced in importance shall form only the left hook on the Teuton body, while the Italian front forms the right punch on the jaw of Austria. Without much difficulty the rules of the game are automatically reversed against Germany. If that happens seriously Germany will have the awkward line of communication—chasing madly round from France and Belgium to Austria where the roads are almost the worst on earth, while the Allies will be working on the interior of a curved line from France to Italy where the roads are the best on earth.

It is hard to realize that French cannon working on the battlefield of the Somme can in four days be blazing away on the Italian Sarso. Even that time can be bettered. It is forty hours' train ride from the French Grand Quartier General to the Italian Commando Supremo. Germany may feel that she can afford sending men to Austria, but the beauty of the idea is that Italy is not clamoring for men. Then the cheerful critic remarks: "In that case what is all this fuss about? Let Italy go ahead, especially if nobody is able to stop her." Before arriving in Italy I heard of English and French guns on the Carso. I have seen them and counted them. But Italy needs guns by the thousand. What does it matter now in this fourth year of the war where the end comes, if it only comes? Who would object if Portugal finished the job if only she could go ahead and do it?

Coupled with the fact that the Italian front in Austria has only recently been discovered, there is also in America what seems to be a lack of comprehension on the subject of Austria. Austria has not so good an army as Germany, but she has an army that must not be despised. In fact I am inclined to believe that as a purely defensive fighter Austria can carry on about as well as Germany. Italy has plenty of men. She has not even called all her classes. She has an army of four and a half millions in the field—which is something for America to reflect upon in her consideration of Italy. But what she does need is guns. She also needs coal and airplanes, but, above all, she needs cannon. Italy puts her cards upon the table and says frankly what she must have. She asks her allies to give it to her. Cannon, cannon, and more cannon, and Italy will go to Laibach!

"Peace, Peace, Peace"

The so-called Central Powers are, in fact, but a single Power. Serbia is at its mercy should its hand be put for a moment free; Bulgaria consented to its will; Roumania is overrun by the Turkish armies, which the Germans trained into serving Germany, and the guns of the German warships lying in the harbor at Constantinople remind the Turkish statesmen every day that they have no choice but to take their orders from Berlin. From Hamburg to the Persian Gulf, the net is spread. Is it not easy to understand the eagerness for peace which has been manifested by Berlin? Ever since the snare was set and sprung, "Peace, peace, peace," has been the talk of her Foreign Office for a year or more; not peace upon her own initiative, but upon the initiative of the nations over which she now deems herself to hold the advantage. A little of the talk has been public, but most of it has been private, through all sorts of channels. It has come to me in all sorts of guises, but never with the terms disclosed which the German Government would be willing to accept.—President Wilson.

Encourage the Settler.

Dear Sir,—I saw by statistics in the Evening Star of the 13th inst. that, according to figures issued at Immigration Hall, Winnipeg, a total of 15,445 immigrants had been brought into Canada, including settlers and farm-labourers, bringing with them $2,344,489 (two million three hundred and forty-four thousand four hundred and eighty-nine dollars) in cash during the first four months of this year. For the same period 2,126 (two thousand one hundred and twenty-six) homestead entries have been made by immigrants. Why don't our Government invite our American and Canadian cousins to settle on our West Coast where there are millions of acres of the most fertile land, in the Codroy Valley, on the banks of the Humber, at St. George's, Stephenville and Grand Lake, where the land is most fertile and where fruit grows in abundance and the climate general and inviting?

Thanking you for space, I remain,
Yours respectfully,

Aged Miner Injured

AT BELL ISLAND.
A miner named Penny, of Salmon Cove, C.B., met with a serious accident at Bell Island, on Thursday afternoon while working in one of the slopes. Penny, with a number of workmen, was filling cars when a lump of ore fell from overhead and badly crushed one of his legs. He was picked up in an unconscious condition by his fellow-workmen who immediately got in touch with the Company's doctor, who had the sufferer removed to the hospital. Doctors Lynch and Giovannetti examined the man's injuries and were obliged to amputate the limb. The patient, who is 60 years of age, is doing as well as can be expected. When he regains sufficient strength to stand the journey to St. John's he will be brought over to the General Hospital.

WEEK END

During one of our holiday rambles this season we happened to drop along at an old-time homestead in one of the many hamlets which dot the seaboard of Avalon; and while there we learned a pathetic story which for devotion and constancy would do credit to the memory of the immortalized Evangeline herself.

The homestead in question is one of the few now left of that quaint style of architecture which our forefathers brought with them from the Old Country two centuries ago. To look at it without, or to have seen it within, was to be transported to the days of Baltimore or to the times of Guy. Within its shelter had been born the family of the young Irish couple who in their native county of Cork had plighted their troth and then left to seek their fortune in the New World; and who also made it a choice to come out to Newfoundland as the most likely place to find it. Evidently they did not find any very great material wealth, but they no doubt found that which wealth cannot purchase and which money cannot control, they found the priceless treasure of mutual love, and exercised the higher gift of simple faith. This they transmitted to their children, and in turn it has come down to the present generation, who, though poor in this world's goods, are rich in the faith of their fathers. Of the last generation only one son was left to perpetuate the family name. This son was of stalwart physique, and, like his neighbours, he gained his living from the sea. At summer time he fished from the harbour, and nightly returned to the quiet of his little one-storied cottage and to the embrace of his little flock. At winter time he usually took a foreign voyage and thereby added to the comforts of his home. And so it went on, until some two years ago, when the voyage which proved the last one was taken.

Like many other ships that one in which our hero sailed became long overdue, and when patience became exhausted the inevitable had to be accepted and the mother and her six little children had to realize the stern fact that never again would their bread-winner provide for them, nor would his footsteps be heard as of yore upon the garden walk. The ship had gone down and six homes had been plunged in sorrow, but the last to give up hope was the heroine of whom we write. She knew that at best she was "hoping against hope," and that never again would the familiar voice of her husband greet her; but amid it all she still cherished a faint expectation that there might be some hope of his return. With this faint longing the lonely mother and the wondering children kept their spirits up, and for the long period of six months they put a light in the window of the little cottage, saying to themselves that "if father comes to-night he will see the light and he will know that we have expected him."

And so it was that night after night, and week after week, and month after month, the humble wife trimmed her little lamp and set it in the window which faced the road and left it as a beacon of hope to greet his approach. But the absent one came not, no familiar footstep was heard, no hand raised the latch—there was no return. The sea had gained its prey and the last inheritor of the old-time

WEEK END NOTES.

During one of our holiday rambles this season we happened to drop along at an old-time homestead in one of the many hamlets which dot the seaboard of Avalon; and while there we learned a pathetic story which for devotion and constancy would do credit to the memory of the immortalised Evangeline herself.

The homestead in question is one of the few now left of that quaint style of architecture which our forefathers brought with them from the Old Country two centuries ago. To look at it without, one would have it within, was to be transported to the days of Baltimore or to the times of Guy. Within its shelter had been born the family of the young Irish couple who in their native county of Cork had plighted their troth and then left to seek their fortune in the New World; and who also made it a choice to come out to Newfoundland as the most likely place to find it. Germans Killing Own Soldiers.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Sept. 17.—German guns are becoming so worn that the Kaiser's troops are frequently killed by their own shells, according to prisoners' statements to-day.

Worn guns and lack of sufficient air planes are causing the armies under Crown Prince Rupprecht considerable trouble. The story has been told and amply verified by prisoners to-day that German guns firing big shell fire shot as a rule, and there being no planes to observe the error, the shells have frequently fallen in German trenches.

A gun in good condition can be fired fairly accurately by tabulation. Under given conditions a shell will go exactly so many yards. When the rifling grows worn, however, the shells do not travel as far as they should algebraically. Hence the Germans' trouble.

German prisoners complain of the shelling. Some see in it the usual callousness of the Higher Command who haven't any regard for lives of their men. Diaries show the Germans are calling some of these worn guns "99 1/2 millimetre pieces" explaining this is "short for 100 millimetre" because the guns themselves "are always a little short."

Edison Defeats Subs

Perfected Device to Deflect Torpedoes Fired by Submarines — Invention Has Proven Success—New York Hears Device Already Used by Several Ships.

New York, Sept. 18.—A special despatch from Washington to the New York Tribune says:

Thomas A. Edison has contrived a mechanism to deflect torpedoes from their courses, it was said here to-day. According to report the device has been tried with success on several destroyers and has been installed on some liners.

It is believed here that the extraordinary gyrations of a torpedo which missed a big American liner which arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port were due, not as the passengers and some of the ship's officers seemed to believe to some new wrinkle developed in a German laboratory, but to the genius of Mr. Edison.

Man walks through life with laced tread, and finds the going rough; through all his youth he looks ahead—the future is the stuff. He'll do great things in coming years, when he has half a show; his fame will ring through all the spheres and reach to Broken Bow. He's so impatient for the time when he can hit the spots, that youth, the golden and sublime, is gone before he wots. Youth, youth! It passes like the wind, and cannot be recalled; and man wakes up some day to find he's tired and old and bald. He sees the wreck of noble schemes, and murmurs, through his tears, "The plans of youth are idle dreams that won't outlive the years." Now he is always looking back, as once he gazed ahead; his eyes are on the rugged track that knew his hopeful tread. The future has no charms for him, it smiles for him no more; the past appeals to eyes grown dim, he talks of days of yore. Oh, youth, forevermore your gaze is fixed on things ahead; while age laments the vanished days, and sadly counts its

Harry Lauder Sees it Through.

A writer in The Christian Work (New York) tells of the spiritual rebirth of the great Scotch comedian who has recently lost his only son on the western front. He says: "One day I was taking Harry to see the grave of his only child, Captain John Lauder of the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, as fine a lad as ever wore a kilt and as good and brave a son as ever a father loved." Falling upon the grave of his son the father sobbed pitifully, then rose and started back to the camp to sing to the waiting crowd of soldiers. "On the way down the hill I suggested gently that the stress of such an hour made further song that day impossible. But Lauder's heart is big and British. Turning to me with a flash in his eye he said, 'George, I must be brave; my boy is watching and all the other boys are waiting. I will sing to them this afternoon though my heart break.' When the news came of the lad's death, the comedian's friends were surprised beyond measure at the calmness with which he bore the blow, knowing his fondness for the lad. His explanation was: 'When a man has been hit as I have been, there are only three ways open to him—drink, despair or God; and I am looking to God for the consolation and the courage I now need.' Another Mr. Britling has seen it through.

What Has She Gained.

Three years ago Germany began this war for the conquest of Middle Europe. What has she gained? What has this gain cost her? The New York Outlook sizes it up this way: "She has gained by her arms the territories of Belgium, Luxembourg, Serbia, a small but rich section of northeast France, and parts of Lithuania, Poland and Rumania—a total of a little less than 204,000 square miles. She has lost: Except for an insignificant corner in southern Africa all her colonies, over a million square miles. Practically all her shipping not bottled up in Bremen and Hamburg, a loss estimated in tonnage of 3,800,000. Of the flower of her youth, over 2,000,000. In cash, nearly $20,000,000,000 to be added to her national debt. Despite the war, though unpopular as a people, Germany was honored among all nations for her intellectual scholarship and her industrial efficiency. She has lost irrevocably this respect and won in its place the mingled hatred and contempt of the civilized world. Scarcely a considerable neutral nation is left except those whose safety compels their neutrality. No one thinks Germany can retain her gains. No one imagines that she can recover her losses. It is not strange that some of the German people are seriously discussing among themselves the question whether it is not time to change their business managers."

Rolling in Gold.

"Uncle Sam" has reason to be proud when he looks at his mountain of money-bags, from which he is now so lavishly supplying the "shrews" of the world-war, for no nation on earth even approaches the record of his riches.

Of every £100 of the world's wealth he calls £20 his own. His possessions are greater than those of France and Germany combined, a good 5,000 millions more than the entire wealth of the United Kingdom, three times that of Russia, and fifteen times that of the whole Australian continent.

All the world's mines could not produce in two centuries gold equivalent to his riches, which represent more than 200 times all the gold current in Great Britain and Ireland before the war.

This gold is so colossal in quantity that it would outweigh the entire population of Yorkshire, and the train necessary to transport it would contain 15,700 trucks, each carrying ten tons—a train drawn by 500 locomotives, and long enough to reach from London Bridge to Brighton.

With these 20,000 million sovereigns it would be possible to make a road of solid gold nine feet wide and more than two inches thick linking Westminster Bridge with Dorking, 23 1/2 miles distant, or to girdle the earth at the Equator with a band of gold an inch wide and nearly a quarter of an inch thick.—Pearson's Weekly.

When you make bread, put a quantity of flour in the bread pan and set the sponge in the middle of it. There will be no sticky, doughy pan to clean in the morning, but one which needs very little washing.

Kerensky's Chance.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

Kerensky has won, for the time at least, over Korniloff. If Kerensky is great enough to turn his victory—a victory over a fellow-patriot—into the profit of Russia, he will win a great place in history. It is probable that the representatives of Russia's allies, in withholding their hands from this situation, and in virtually letting Korniloff go to the wall, had some assurance, in their own minds at least, that the triumph of Kerensky over the forces of a counter-revolution would rally all other forces to his side, and consolidate the revolutionary forces into a coherent government. The forces of anarchy certainly ran to cover under Kerensky's wing as soon as Korniloff appeared. The circumstance ought to demonstrate the necessity of keeping them under now. The danger is that as soon as their immediate danger is over, they will resume their destructive foolishness. Only a small measure of restraint over regimental mass meetings and wholesale insubordination is now promised—not enough to secure effective military action. But we shall see what we shall see. Whatever hope there may be in Kerensky's greater consolidation of power we may seize. But the hope is not great.

Trench Tales.

"I was just past the line when a sniper got me in the foot, and I hopped back, hoping that he would not try it again," a Canadian was "explaining" his wound.

"I got into a communication trench and almost fell into a German dug-out. As I stumbled about the entrance, I heard shouts of 'kammerad!' and 'mercy!' There were two Germans down the hole, and I called them out. They would not come at first and I wished that I had a bomb to persuade them—I only had my rifle and bayonet. But they came out at last with their hands up—it is shameful how they surrender—and I made one go in front and the other support me. A digging party were the first to see us coming along and started to laugh as soon as we appeared. I handed over the prisoners to the supports and hopped along to the dressing station. The surgeon told me that my wound was good enough for England, because the bullet had smashed some of the bones in my foot. We found it in my boot. It was quite fattened out."

THE Sunlight enterprise and organization for production, manufacture, and distribution were made complete long before the war. But during the war the difficulties and costs of transport have been multiplied. Therefore, Lever Brothers have purchased a fleet of steamships to convey raw materials direct from their plantations to Port Sunlight.

The Housewife is given the full benefit of this enterprise, and thus, in spite of the difficulties caused in England by the war, Sunlight Soap remains the best soap throughout the world, and gives the fullest value for the housewife's money.

THE SUNLIGHT SERVICE IS THE MOST COMPLETE SOAP SERVICE IN THE WORLD. SUNLIGHT SOAP IS MADE FOR THE HOUSEWIFE'S PROFIT, FOR ONLY THEREBY CAN THE MAKERS HOPE TO PROFIT BY SUNLIGHT SOAP.

Clay, From Feet Up.

(From the New York Evening Post.)

The disclosures now made are certain to shatter the myth of the Kaiser's reputation. By them he will be greatly injured in his own land; abroad, they will make it impossible to put him back on the pedestal where some had placed him. Professor Kuno Francke, for instance, contended a year or so ago that, whatever the world thought of the Kaiser's policies, it must concede that he had displayed great qualities as a ruler. It will be hard to make men believe this longer. In these telegrams of the Kaiser to the Czar we have revealed the real Kaiser, a meddlesome, restless, conceited, unscrupulous man with little grasp of the tremendous forces with which he was playing. He seems an embodiment of the recipe how to bring great empires low by small minds. And what will especially rankle in German hearts to-day is that their own autocrat was secretly urging the Russian autocrat to consult the Duma which, "as it represents the people of Russia, would be the voice of the Russian people." The questions which Germans will ask bitterly is why the Kaiser did not, at the time when he was trying to make an alliance against England, as also when the issue of war arose, consult the representatives of the German people. Was the Duma more to be respected than the Reichstag?

The Vulture's End.

Gripping Nature Sketch Telling of a Tragic Misadventure.

So the big, griffon vulture passed upon her lawful occasions, gliding and wheeling, now this way, now that, in vast circles, a speck merely in the void, across the miles, but always within the league-wide limit of her prescribed "beat." And on her beam, a speck; and on her starboard, a speck; and ahead, astern, a speck; vultures, watching, ever watching, hungry vultures.

Suddenly she banked, and came about.

Beneath her was a burnt grassy plain. And upon the plain a little, scattered group of antelope (hartebeest antelope, officially) feeding. Not that she saw the antelope so much (for they were painted to mimic their surroundings), as their shadows, which they could not colour or hide.

Suddenly from a patch of herbage leapt—a dot. Hop, hop, hop, hop! And—it was upon one of the antelopes.

And the griffon vulture lifted another wing-flange, banked again—rather steeply this time—and began to corkscrew down. And every speck within sight saw her, or saw those that saw her, and followed suit, corkscrewing down wonderfully out of nowhere, with her as the vortex of their swirl.

Always Had Headaches.

Liver Was Torpid and Billous Spells Brought Sick Headaches—Lost Much Time, But is Now Completely Cured.

Newtown, N.B., September 22nd.—Here is convincing evidence that how ever much you may suffer from liver trouble and consequent biliousness there is cure in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Over-eating is the most common cause of sluggish liver action. You lose your appetite, have distressing bilious spells, usually accompanied by headache and vomiting, the bowels become irregular, constipation and looseness alternating, digestion is upset and you get irritable and down-hearted.

No treatment so quickly awakens the action of the liver and bowels as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For this reason this medicine is wonderfully popular and has enormous sales.

Mr. Charles R. Tait, Newtown, N.B., writes: "I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and would often have to stop work for a day or two. I lost many a night's sleep every month with bilious headaches, and although I tried doctors' medicines, it was without success. When I had these headaches I would vomit, and could keep nothing on my stomach.

"I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills from G. M. Fairweather, Druggist, of Sussex, N.B., and after taking one box I was so much relieved that I continued to take them until I am now completely cured. My advice to anyone is to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and be completely cured."

Mr. A. S. Mace, J.P., endorses the above statement and says: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Charles R. Tait, and believe his statement in every way to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint. Insist on getting what you ask for.

Lloyd George "Broke."

COULDN'T PAY CAR FARE.

London, Sept. 14.—The director of a corporation spending more than $30,000,000 a day was flat broke today—did not even have a car fare.

When his automobile broke down he boarded a street car and found he had no fare. A passenger lent him the necessary pennies.

The penniless passenger was Lloyd George.
