The purchasing company has only recently been incorporated, and the directors intend to use the steamer in towing business on Puget Sound.

Owing to a large advertising patronage, we are compelled to set our local and telegraphic news in smaller type than usual. The type in which Sunday and to day's Colonier is printed is somewhat smaller than desirable for reading, but this will be obvisted in the course of a couple of weeks, a larger and clearer faced type having been telegraphed for. In the meantime, in order to furnish the news, the present type will have to be used, and we trust our readers will bear with the sinconvenience until the improvement can be effected.

The Charges Against the Walls Walls.

The steamship Walls Walls reached San Francisco on Saturday after a pessage from Victoris of sixty hours. Immediately upon arrival Capt. Blackburn was interviewed with reference to the charge against the steamer for smuggling. The captain makes light of the charge. He says it was simply a clerical error. The barrels of grease, alleged to contain opinim, were marked on the San Francisco manifest and was not copied to the coastwise one. If the barrels while they lay on the wharf at Tacoma.

The people of this Province would, without much ceremony, tell the meddling Ontarions to mind their own business; and if the Federal Government was so weak as to submit to the dictation of the Ontario busybodies British Columbians would feel deeply and right-couly indignant. The cases are precisely parallel. The Quebec Legislature settled a purely provincial dispute in the way it considered best. Some of the people of that settlement and they are applying to the Dominion Government to have the Quebec law disallowed. "But the Jesuits get the money," it is objected. That makes no difference whatever. The question to be decided is, had the people of the power to make the settlement? If they had, the Ontario people had no right to object to its terms or with when it was made. As the Dominion Columbia, with the full consent of the

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF B. C. HUNTING THE COON.

HUNTING THE COON.

Exhiliarating Sport Which Flourished in the Days Preceding the War.

Among the animals which may be said to have become extinct is the coon dog of our fathers, says the Bangor Industrial Journal. He was of no particular strain of blood, but he united the keen scent of the deer-hound with the intelligence of the shepherd dog, and the tenacity of the build dog with the steath of the panther. With less accomplishments than these he might have been good on a fox or deer trail; the lowing herd would have probably been safe in his keeping; he might have been able to hold his own in a fight, or have stood a chance of succeeding as a sheep stealer, but he couldn't have been a coon dog.

For your coon is a cute and tricky customer, and crammed with patience. Moreover, he leaves behind him the coldest, most scentless trail of any animal that runs. He leads you through the tangled swamps and deep, stony hollows. He crosses and recrosses swift running streams. He frisks along the top of rough stone walls as silent and swift as a shadow. He stops within a dozen feet of some convenient wall, clears the intervening space at a bound, strikes a tree and glides up the longest limb, runs to its extremity, and leaps a dozen feet beyond it to the ground again, breaking his trail abruptly on one side and beginning it as confusingly on the other. He invents tactics for emergencies, and brings to every consideration of his welfare and that of his family a large and level head. He plays his cards well and the dog that would beat him must needs hold both bowers and ace, with strong cards to back them. These the coon dogs of our fathers again to defendant; and McLeod & Stavenson, garnishees.

Drake, Jackson & Helmeken for plaintiffs. The quarterly meeting of the board of trade will be held on Friday, 5th April, at 3 p. m. A miner named William Harding, aged 28, was killed at the Banff anthracite mines on the 13th March.

Marcus Johnson, in the provincial court, yesterday, was sentenced to one month's imprisonment for years and the provincial court, yes mant for years and the provincial court, yes tenday, was sentenced to one month's imprisonment for years and the provincial court, years and the provincial court is the provincial court of the provincial court

There were, twenty-five years ago, the still-hunting coon dog and the coon dog who let you know at every step that he was getting there. There was mixed up with the methods of the still-hunter an element of greater certainty that you would get your coon than there was with the more meloding system of the dog that mouthed his coon than there was with the more menon-ous system of the dog that mouthed his presence in the shadowy chase; but the style of the latter put more tingle mo your blood and buoyed you up with sweeter ex-pectancy. There was something weird and uncanny in all the turnings and windings of the terms through the glowny words at of the former through the gloomy woods at

of the former through the gloomy woods at night.

It was different with the dog that gave tongue as he hunted. He made music in the night—not the silvery treble of the foxbound, floating down from the hills on the frosty air and drawn out in sweet cadenza by every willing echo, nor yet the mellow bass of the deer hound, swelling over the ridges, clear and far-sounding as a buglencie, but pleasant though staccate song of his own, half bark, half bay, a cheerful mingling of melody with business.

Once in the rare old days of coon hunting a new preacher was settled in the backwoods district of Pike County, fill. He was not wise in the way of the woods. Early in his first autumn on his charge he began the usual protracted meeting season. By and by he noticed that on monlight and starlit nights his congregation was made up of by he noticed that on monlight and starlit nights his congregation was made up of women only. Finally he asked the reason of this. A sister arose and said:

"It's 'cause the coonin's bett'n 'tis in the dark' of the moon, Dominie. Soon ez the moon darks the men'll jine ye."

Sure enough, when the "moon darked" the brethren were all in their places in the meeting-house, joining heartily in the proceedings. The pastor remonstrated with them publicly.

"While you have been idling after coons," said he, "there may have been those in this district who do not hunt coons, and whom ez don't hunt coons his soul hain's with savin'."

Coon hunting as a pastime went out of fashion with the war, and the old race of trained coon dogs gradually became extinct. Why the coon has come to be despised by the sportsmen in these days is one of those things about which the remark has once or twice been made that no fellow can find out. He is as cunning as the fox and more difficult to trail. He is, moreover, the leanest of animals, and eats only the most wholesome food. He should not be despised, surely, because he can be hunted only at night, for in threading the woods in the darkness, following dogs that you can not see and whose baying alone breaks the stillness, there is a most singular enchantment.

woods in the darkness, following dogs that you can not see and whose baying alone breaks the stillness, there is a most singular enchantment.

Even when coons are most abundant, nine out of ten of the present generation never see one, and few people know any thing about them or their habits. Although the coon prefers the vicinity of civilization as his habitat, he plans to keep aloof from the eyes of men, and his habits render this an easy task. By day he lies close in out-of-the-way retreats, in the depths of hollow trees or isolated crevices and holes in the rocks. He wanders forth only at night, and although his foraging expeditions may bring him to the very doors of the farmers, and even within the boundary lines of villages, he never betrays his presence. If more than one coon is brought to bay in a tree they will invariably be females or a mother coon with her offspring. The rocks. He wanders forth only at night, and although his foraging expeditions may bring him to the very doors of the farmers, and even within the boundary lines of villages, he never betrays his presence. If more than one coon is brought to bay in a tree they will invariably be females or a mother coon with her offspring. The female brings forth her litter only once in two years, and from the coming of the litter to the arrival of another she and her young as are never separated. She keeps her little family together until they are two years of did, and in protecting them will fight the attacking dog or hunter until she dies.

While the female coon is social and domestic, the male is the reverse. He is solitary, ranges entirely alone and gives no one care or attention to family matters. If two males meet in the woods or fields they fight furiously and not infrequently to the death. The male makes his range for forage much wider than the female does, and having no one to look after but himself more frequently escapes the hunter. In spring and summer the margin of brooks and ponds and the soft much in swamps and bays are thickly indiented with the graceful footprints of the coon, for in these months he spends his nights in catching frogs, fish, lizards, grubs said must be seen and feasts on the fruit.

When he milk comes in the corn is the coon's gala time, for he loves the tender succulent grains, as a farmer knows to his sorrow, and great are the risks he will take to forage in the fields. It is not until the berries are gone and the corn grown tough in the ear that the coon begins to look about for his winter stores. Then he lays up plentiful from the look processing it, but, like all old functors, old coon hunters say a great many things that it would bother them to prove.

Vanders of the coon begins to look about for his winter stores. Then he lays on the firm of the coon depth of the firm of the coon when he is at his best. During the nutting season he is fat, solid and wide awake, providing there are plenty

DOGS IN WARFARE. How They Are Taught to Detect the

Among the various uses to which the in-telligence of dogs has been put is that of scouts in military affairs, says Black-wood's Magazine. Here the well-trained dog does such services as to become well dog does such services as to become well nigh invaluable.

That Napoleon fully realized how importants role might be assigned to dogs is well known. In 1799 he wrote to Marmont:

"There should be at Alexandria a large number of dogs, which you ought to be able to employ by massing them in groups at a short distance from the walls." The marvel is that, after so plain an expression on the subject town such an authority in the art of

is that, after so plain an expression on the subject from such an authority in the art of war, the employment of dogs should not have become a matter of course, instead of which, eighty-nine years later, it is still regarded as a tentative measure.

Recent experiments prove that the weltrained dog will give notice of the presence of a man, dressed in the uniform of a foe, at a distance of one thousand feet. And just as the custom-house dog passes quietly by honest peasants and only calls the attention of their masters to law-breakers, so these wise regimental dogs ignore the movements of unattached civilians, but seem to develop a strong personal antipathy to any person whom they intuitively recognize as being in the service of the enemy. Probably, however, no dog has ever to any person whom they intuitively recognize as being in the service of the enemy. Probably, however, no dog has ever rendered such signal military service, or has been so honorably recognized as the celebrated poodle Mustache, who shared the victorious fortunes of the French army through most of the wars of the Consulate and the French empire. He won special honor at Marengo, and was decorated on the battlefield of Austerlitz by Marshal Lannes as a reward for having rescued his regimental standard from an Austran soldier when in the act of snatching it from the grasp of the standard-bearer as he fell mortally wounded. The plucky poodle drove off the assailant, and then seizing the tattered colors in his teeth, dragged them triumphantly till he reached his own company.

It is evident that were military dogs to be exclusively chosen from any special breed, all animals of that race would become targets for the foe, whenever seen, therefore dogs are to be settled on account of individual merit—or rather promise of merit, as it is necessary to begin their tuition in early youth, and canine education should be commenced in good earnest at six months of age. So the degs now to be seen in training at certain German and French military stations are of all sorts and sizes—"danhshunds" and poodles, retrievers and those days people that felt sleepy during the sermon used, as now in Germany, to shake off drowsiness by standing up; but poor human nature made this at times an occasion of display. At Old Monkland a man who had on a rather gaudy vest stood up more than once and threw back his coat, apparently to let his vest be seen. It was to Mr. Bower that the grave-digger once said: "Trade's very dull the noo. I haen a buried a jeevin' cratur for three weeks."

The people seem to have had a dislike to sermons being read. They used to say: "Hoc can we mind the minister's sermon if he canna mind it himsel?"

The Land Grant to Westminster.
The printed bill was laid before the House Wednesday, providing for the giving of lot 757, group 1, N.W. Dist., situated at the head of Lulu Island, to be devoted to railway purposes. The land is granted in consideration of the city of Westminster building and maintaining a general traffic bridge across the North Arm of the Fraser from the city to the island and building a wagon road westward on Lulu Island to connect with the Richmond municipality. The city is also to construct drains and dykes necessary to drain and protect the land granted.

The city of Westminster Act.

The city of Westminster is having numerous amendments made to the charter secured last year. The limits are considerably extended, taking in Sapperton and as far east as the bank of the Brunette river; west a large tract is added, including the grant on Lulu Island, and Poplar Island, a small island lying between the mainland and Lulu Island. An amendment to sec. 178, provides that liquor licenses shall be issued by a licensing boart to consist of five persons, of whom the acting mayor shall be one, two persons to be appointed by the council, and two by the Lieut. Governor-in-Council. Sec. 50 provides that the ferry and workshops bonus by-laws shall be absolutely valid and binding upon the corporation. Various other matters in connection with the $150,000 bonus are provided for. The city is also given power to purchase from a private company any water-warks constructed within the city limits.

In the absence of the mayor, Ald. Vigelius was appointed that the chairman. The plans having been duly examined, on motion the tenders were ordered to be opened. Here a difficulty presented itself, however, for when the clerk tried to open the safe to obtain the tenders, the lock was found to be out of order, and all efforts to open the safe being fruitless, the meeting abruptly terminated.

The Alberni Arson Case.

Frank McQuillan, who a few weeks ago was tried at Nanaimo on a charge of arson and discharged, has been again arrested and was to have been brought before Justice Huff at Alberni yesterday, to answer to the same charge. It is claimed fresh evidence has been secured against him.

Social and Dance.

A very pleasant social and dance was held at Harmony Hall last evening by the B. C. Association for the Investigation of Spiritualism, the occasion being the anniversary of modern spiritualism. An excellent programme of yocal and instrumental music was rendered, after which social dance was held and at midnight a choice supper was served. All procent spent a delightful time, and at the close the guests left well pleased with their evening's entertainment.

The Dungeness Hotel Fire.

At 11:30 c'clock on Tuesday night, fire was discovered in the second story of the Eureka Hotel at lungeness. Owing to the lack of water in a few minutes the flames were beyond control. Everyone then turned attention to the removal of the contents. By hard work nearly everything of value was saved. For some time the store of Jones and Church was in danger of fire from the flying sparks, but the wind changed and the danger was averied. No further damage was done beyond the burning of the hotel and the surrounding fence. The fire was found to have been caused by a defective flue. The property is owned by Mr. Phil Rollins, and is valued at $4,000. The loss is partially covered by insurance, the amount of the policy being $2,500.

The C.P.R. was certainly not an unmixed blessing to his district.

Mr. Nason said that if the company proposing to build this road meant business, he thought a limit of three years was all that was needed. So far as a land grant was concerned, he was wilking to give the company a very liberal one. The land, as now situated, was wive the company a limit of the land, as now situated, was with the company burines or hanyon med. But restrict the time for commencing work.

With the permission of the House Mr. Mason withdrew his amendment, and allowed that of collection of the company and the property of the company and the property of the company in the property of the company and the property of the land wishing was granted, the granting of a secondary consideration. He also would favor, if a land subsidy was granted, the granting of alternate blocks. The granting of a continuous block of land thr ugh the province to the C.P.R. was productive of evils, but for that block they had received $100.000 annually for all time to come, a most valuable consideration and especially to the province at that time. The discussion to-day brought forcibly to his mind the accessive that existed for a provincial railway act. He thought that the principle adopted in the adjoining territories of granting the right of way to the first company that commence onstruction was the fairest way, roud of any property of the company that commence onstruction was the fairest way, will be right of way to the first company that commence onstruction was the fairest way, and the company in every way possible, but at the same time he did not want to see a charter granted that might delay from year to year the construction of the land of the company in every way possible, but at the same time he did not want to see a charter granted that might delay from year to year the construction of the road.

COLONEL BOWIE'S KNIFE.

t is as Popular as Ever, But Not for Jueling Purposes.

A reporter of the New York Evening cost was taiking with one of the properture of a big down-town cutlery-house when a customer entered and said he visited to see some bowie-knives. A varied wished to see some bowie-knives. A varied assortment was shown to him, and he selected one, paid for it, and went out. "What on earth is he going to do with that?" asked the reporter, as the customer disappeared through the doorway. "Fight a duel or what?" "Scarcely," laughed the proprietor, as he took up one of the keen blades and ran his thumb-nail over it. "Men don't fight duels with bowie-knives now-adays. He will probably use that knife in hunting."

"Are there many bowies sold for that purpose?"

"Lots of them. The bowie is one of the most useful articles that a sportsman who is going for big game can carry, for it serves a number of purposes. With it a hunter can kill and skin his game, as well as cut wood for his camp fire. The bowie-buile of to-day is little used as a weapon of offense or defense, as it "has no show" when pitted against the self-cocking revolver or repeating rifle. The knives we sell are well made in both blade and handle. The finest steel is used and great care is taken in finishing them. The handles most used are buckhorn, but some sportsmen prefer deer's-foot or ivory, silver mounted, and for such they pay a fancy price, often as high as fifteen or sixteen dollars."

"Mostly in England, although they are made to some extent in Connecticut. The Yankee knives are fully the equal of their English competitors. Several firms in the city import bowie-knives, but no one house maics an exclusive business of it, as it wouldn't pay. Most of the knives that are sent out of the city go to the West and South. Since stringent laws were passed in the South, however, making the carrying of a bowie a criminal offense, the trade in that region has fallen off considerably. A great many are sent to Cuba and South America, although in those countries the America, although in those countries the machete, a larger and heavier knife, is more popular."

"Is the present bowie-knife of the same shipe as the first on 's made!"

"The genuine bowie has but one shape, which has never changed. The famous Colonel Bowie, you know, from whom the knife received its name, invented it by accident, his sword breaking off in a fight. He was so pleased with the shape and size of the fragment which remained in his hand that he had a knife made precisely like it. Lots of people will call any large, straight-bladed knife a bowie, but the genuine article always has a 'cilp' point, which extends about one-third the length of the blade. When bowie-knives first became popular, their blades were made from twelve to fifteen inches long, two inches broad and thick in proportion. Now the blades vary in length from five to twelve inches, rarely exceeding the latter."

"What is the cost of bowie-knives?"

"What is the cost of bowie-knives?"

"The five-meh knife sells at $1.50 retail and $13 a dozen wholesale. The twelve-inch knives are about $23 a dozen wholesale, and a good one at retail will cost about $4. The intermediate sizes bring prices in proportion. The figures given include the sheaths, which are made of strong leather, tipped with steel and furnished with a loop by which they may be suspended from the waist. Bowie-knives not used for hunting are carried in various ways, the most popular, because the handlest in case of emergency, being to suspend the knife under the left arm, securing the sheath to the edge of the armhole of the vest by a spring

According to Goethe the Two Are Very Closely United.

"The chapter of accidents," it has been well and forcibly said, "is the Bible of the fool," remarks the author of the Way to Fortune. This is one of those sayings which are apt only to seem smart and striking, but are really deeper than they look. If the world and all its affairs proced according to purpose and moral law, then it is clear that causation and not accident obtains in the smallest thing as well as in the greatest, only we are purblind and

The Debate on the Jesuits Act

When W. H. Harvey was placed in the dock of Jesuits Act is over and the government sustained by a tremendous majority, 175. The following thirteen members voted for the disallowance bill: Cockburn, Denison, McCarthy, MoNell, O'Brien, Tywhit and Wallace, Conservatives; Barron, Charlton, Macdonald (Huron), Sutherland and Scriver, Liberals, The division is the largest ever recorded in the Canadian parliament.

The most noticeable speeches in to-day's debate were Laurier's and Sir John's. Laurier's speech was of a historical character, showing if not the Jesuits, the Church was entitled to the estate. He made an eloquent appeal for toleration among all classes of the Dominion.

THE MISSIONARY DELEGATION.

The delegation representing the Methodist and Missionary Society, interviewed the Premier this atternoon. They combatted the charges made by departmental officials that the Methodist ministers of British, Columbia, had incited the Indians of the Pacific Coast to claim certain land rights in the province to which they were not entitled. The official records and reports of the different governors and commissioners were cited to show that the Ind ans claimed the lands in question long before the first Methodist missionary commenced operations in British Columbia, the was also charged that the departmental officials had shown open party favor to Bishop Hidley against the Methodists at certain points. Delay with the title of the Methodist in the provincial Government, although the British Columbia Government and trecognize the indian title to lands mentioned, he said that was a matter resting under the recent decision of the Provincial Government, although the British Columbia Government and trecognize the indian title at all. He promised to have the different points carefully looked into with a view to having the difficulty removed.

Although the Globe is very far from occupying the position in the esteem of the Liberal party of the Dominien that it did in George Brown's time, and for a few years after, it has not lost all its prestige. It continued to be regarded as, in a certain sense, the organ of the Ontario Reformers, and though it had wofully degenerated it still exercised some influence. When it turned around on the disallowance question people were somewhat When it turned around on the disallow-ance question people were somewhat anxious to see whether it would be fol-lowed by any members of the Liberal party. Did it merely speak for itself, or did it express the views of any consider-able section of that party in Ontario and other parts of the Dominion? was a ques-tion the answer to which was looked for with some interest. It was not long in Commenting on the threat of the newly converted journal to excommunicate any member of the Liberal party, either prominent or obscure, who should contend that the Quebec Law is constitutional,

The opinions expressed by the Ottawa Free Press on this particular question, at this particular time, may, we think be safely taken for those of the leading Liberals from all the provinces, Protesant and Catholic. It is more than likely that the editor found means of ascertaining the views of the principal men of the party before he put pen to paper. We were confirmed in this opinion when we read a letter that appeared in the Globe of the 18th, from Mr. J. D. Edgar. Mr. Edgar, no doubt, writes as a representative of his party. He says: "Unless some much stronger arguments can be produced in the House of Commons than are supplied by those anonymous and irresponsible writers, I shall certainly, for one, remain of my present opinion, that the act was within the powers of the Quebec Legislature, and will vote against disallowance." It is not hard to see from this letter what the position of the Liberal members will be when the question comes before the House of commons.

petersburg government to take this step.

The course of the Liberal members, says Mr. Edgar, is a simple one. They are not legislating upon the question of the Jesuit estates, is not for them to consider whether the Act was a just one or an unjust one, whether the Act was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or the safe was a just one or an unjust one or an unjust o

AN OUTSIDE OPINION.

High-minded Americans see the need of a proper extradition treaty between Canada and the United States. They do not approve of the action of the majority of the Senate in screening violators of the law from punishment, and thus becoming participators in their guilt. They dislike seeing Canada made an asylum for their evildoers, and they do not want to harbor Canadian thieves and scoundrels generally in their cities and towns. Mr. Weldon's extradition bill, therefore, has their cordial approbation. They are glad to see the Parliament of the Dominion prepared to do its duty, though their own Congress, from political motives of the meanest and most despicable kind, refuse to do what justice and the welfare of the Republic demand. This is what the St. Paul Pioneer-Press says on this important subject:

"We have become so accustomed to extradition by treaties that we usually think it can tainty to all the calculations. Work will in a few weeks be commenced on the Atlantic side. Bradstreets reports that "offers have been already received from bookers for the entire proposed issue of bonds on terms which cannot be called high, if not so good as is desired, and the prospect could hardly be better for the early beginning of work on the canal proper."

proper."

The projectors are sanguine as to the success of their undertaking. They be lieve that it will pay from the start. They calculate that from six to seven millions of shipping are now waiting to use the canal and that the revenue will be $8,000,000 a year. The cost of maintenance they calculate to be $1,000,000. There can be no doubt that the canal which will enable ships to pass from the Atlantic to the Pacific quickly and safely will be an immense boon to the commerce of the world. It will in fact create a commercial coalition the consequences a commercial coalition the consequences of which it is difficult to overestimate. Such a canal will give new life to trade on this side of the continent, and the ad-

How Ruby Howard Was Taugh a Severe But Valuable Lesson.

"How absurdly disagreeable you can make yourself, Jack. But there—I'm not going to quarrel with you. How much longer are you going to keep me up to abuse me?" and Ruby laughed aloud in her usual saucy, tantalizing manner. Jack looked at her, its face-as black has a thunder-cloud, on which was written a stern determination; but she was in no way appalled by it. On the contrary, she looked at him gayly and carelessly, as if she were perfectly indifferent to him or his moods.

"Miss Howard," she mimicked, mockingly; "since when, pray! How ceremoniously we grow, to be sure."

He resumed, as if she had not interrupted him: "I will not detain you but a moment longer. While I am convinced that at the present time you are perfectly heartless, owing more to the unhappy way of your-bringing up and to the influences and fashion of society than to natural hardness of heart"—

"Oh! thanks, thanks awfully, you are too good," she broke in again, laughingly. It was all as good as a burlesque to her. acustomed as she was to lovers' rantings.

"I am as firmly convinced," he went on in see calm a tone that it should have warned her that this meant more than an ordinary tiff, "that you love me, but, with your attract perversences, will neither acknowledge it to yourself nor me."

As he said this—with an air of a judge pronouncing sentence on some unhappy prisoner—with his gray eyes fixed on her face with the sternest gaze they were capable of—in spite of herself the bloom on her and for an instant her saucy, mocking eyes fell before his. A transient smile passed over his gloomy face at this evidence of his power, and left it even gloomier than before. As he regarded the lovely, half-shy face before him he commenced again bitterily: "And why will you not yield to that love and make us both happy! I will tell you. You do not wish to be tied to one; to receive the love and homage of one is not to your taste. Oh, no, not for years to come. If I would wait patiently and in the meantime be always ready to dance attendanco all your whims much as I love you, I am going to leave you forever."

"Ha, ha!" and her sweet, low laugh rang out like a chime of silvery bells. "The plot thickens. Please go on; it is as lovely as a play."

"I know and feel," said Jack, earnestly, "that we are especially suited to each other, and I believe that in time you will realize the truth of what I say and will regret me, even as I regret you now—but no more. I've already said too much—more than I intended; good-bye," and with a deep bow haturned and left.

"Well, of all things!" she murmured. "Forever! Fudge! I'll see him to-morrow on the promenade the same as usual. He is delicious. I do like him the best when he asserts himself. He is grand when he gets enraged. He looks so stern and glares so, and is so unapproachable that I am almost afraid of him—the darling. If I don't look out he will end in making me marry him before the season is over. Of course I shan't marry any one else, but I'm not go-afraid of him—the darling. If I don't look out he will end in making me marry him before the season is over. Of course I shan't marry any one else, but I'm not going to hurry myself; there's pienty of time." After which sage conclusion she went up to her room in gay spirits, thinking of the good time she would have in making up with Jack as she had done a number of times before.

The next day Miss Ruby failed to meet Jack as usual. In fact a week passed, and in all that time he had not called. She had missed his presence from ball and epera, and every place that she had graced with her bright presence. At last, making a few inquiries, she found that Jack was out somewhere on the broad-ocean on his way to China to join his brother, a tea merchant, and was likely to be absent a term of years.

Although outwardly Ruby managed to conceal the shock she had received, she could not conceal from her own heart that something had gone from her that she missed and longed for with an indescribable longing and a wild regret. It was all the more maddening that no one was to blame for her sorrow but herself. The old places had loat their charm. Every thing and every body was inspid, flat and monotonous. Ah! if he would only return, how gladly would she marry him at the earlies date he might mention. Had she known his address at that time she would have written to tell him of her love and penitence.

Four years after Jack had gone Ruby was at a fashionable watering place. She was still as lovely as ever, but in her big, brown eyes there was a shade of sadness, and a slightly absent look which gave a touch of soul to a face that had heretofore sparkled with wit, and glowed with gay-sty and high spirits, but had lacked feeling. Now it was perfect. If Jack could only see her now.

One day she was taking her morning stroll, and feeling an unaocountable depression of spirits. Her great eyes were wearing their most absent look, and as heey wandered over the crowd, that was ever coming and going, she started violently, and her delica throat. She fixed an absorbed gase on a vehicle that was alowly passing. The occupants were a broad-shouldered, grand-looking man dressed in gray. His shapely head was crowned with a white straw hat, a pair of large, disfiguring spectacles of colored glass completely hid his eyes; his firm mouth was shaded with a long brown mustache, and between his lips was the inevitable cigar. No whiskers hid his firm chin and fine rounded throat. A footman at his side was driving a span of spirited blacks. In an instant the equipage was hidden by the crowd, but Ruby's eyes would have known that face, that form, if it had been a far more fleeting glimpse. She drew a long breath, and by the time she reached her hotel and looked at herself in her room, she was startled at the joyons brightness that sparkled in her eyes and beamed from every feature. All day her face wore an eager, expectant look, her eyes were ever searching for something. At the hop that night it was still the same. She withdrew early and sought her room, face wore an eager, expectant look, her eyes were ever searching for something. At the hop that night it was still the same. She withdrew early and sought her room, weary and heartsick.

"Oh," she said aloud, in a troubled voice, "does he know I am here, and still remain aloof!"

She sat there alone, white and sad; her face wet with tears; her heart torn with conflicting emotions, and a terrible fear that he had forgotten her. The next morning, after a sleepless night, she started out alone, her cheeks pale, her spirits drooping. She shaped her course for a hidden retreat behind the rocks, where she had often dreamed away hours uninterrupted. As she neared the places she saw that her favorite rocky seat was already occupied by an intruder. He sat in a desponding attitude, with his head resting on his hand and his gaze directed toward the sea. Occupied with her own thoughts, Ruby was about to turn away without taking any notice of him, when he changed his position, removed a cigar from his mouth, blew forth a cloud of smoke, and Ruby, saw who it was.

Her footsteps had given no sound on the soft sand. He had not heard her. She stood perfectly still, trembling so that she could scarcely stand. Here was the man for whose presence she had longed for all those sad years, and now she dared not speak to him. He might receive her penitence with scorn, and he might be married! Terrible, cruel thought! While this was passing through her mind, she was startled by hearing some one coming that way whistling. Not wishing to be seen, she sprang behind a convenient bowlder, justin time to escape the eyes of the new-comer, who was the same up and stopped beside Jack, who said, impatiently: "Why did you come for me so soon!"

"I don't believe it's up," Jack cried, violently, "but because I sm a poor, blind stick you think you can fool me. But you can't, Go away and let me be in peace if you can, and don't dare to come near me again under an hour from now, a whole hour.

you can, and don't dare to come near mo again under an hour from now. Do you understand! An hour from now, a whole hour.

"Yes, sir, I understand," replied poor Peter, deprecatingly, preparing to move off, after casting a glance at the watch he wore to make sure of the time.

"Stay," called Jack, irritably. "First tell me if any one is anywhere in sight. I don't want to sit here as a show for any one if I can help it."

"Not a soul, sir, to be seen," responded Peter, cheerily.

"Then clear out," was the gentle reply.

"After Peter's retreating form was lost to Ruby stole forth pale and trembling—cheeks moist with tears of pity. How wretched he looked—how sad—how she pitied him. She forgot every thing except her love for him and wished to comfort him. On the impulse of the moment she wont to him and put both soft, round arms around his neck and laid her cheek against his. Her sudden embrace aroused him effectnaily from the gloomy thoughts he was induging in, and gave him a little shock. But as soon as he could collect his scattered senses he became aware that it was a woman! Yes, a woman! A mad woman, no doubt! Did she intend to strangle him, or what! The novelty of it pleased him. He remained perfectly still and awaited developments like a philosopher.

"Jack—Jack Hunter, don't you know me!" said a tearful voice in his ear.

"Heavens! That voice! Ruby!" he cried, doubting!y, but nevertheless throwing both arms about her and drawing her to him while he rained kisses on her face. At last he drew her gently down on the rock beside him and said: "My darling, words are not needed to tell me it is Ruby, or that you love me. But tell me—you are still free as I am!"

He did not ask how, or why she happened to be there. He did not care. That she was there, was the one supreme thought of that happy moment.

"I am still Ruby Howard," she murmured in reply.

"Thank God!" he said, reverently, "and for this hour. And now, will you, can you—

"Yes, Jack, gladly, if you will have me. I have longed for you ever since you left me," she whispered.

"My treasure!" he cried. "It was crue! of me. We will never part again; we will get married at once—within the week," he went on, in the eager, overmastering way that she well remembered. "Your people will not object, I fondly imagine, for I am rich, you know, and all that, besides I am only blind for a season. My blindness is the result of an accident, happy accident—that brought me home to consult a specialist. He tells me if I be patient and very careful I will see in six months, and perhaps sooner. Oh, if I could but only see now! But I can wait and I would not exchange places with any one on earth."—"Oliver Ju," in Albany Journal.

American Weapons of War.

The Fiji Shimpo strongly advises Japan to go to America for weapons of war. "While the people of Europe on the one side are crouching ready to spring at each other's throats, and on the other the nations of Asia are barely maintaining their independence, the United States," itsays, "continues moving forward in a steady, unvarying line of progress and prosperity. Their people seem heedless of what occurs in other parts of the world; but they are not so in reality, for they do not fail to turn to good account the prevailing combative mood of other cirilized nations. Full of inventive genius and rich in capital, they have been enabled to take practically the lead in the manufacture of torpedo-boats and torpedoes."

Wealth in Wives or Dogs.

In some parts of Africa a man's wealth is judged by the number of his wives. A man with sixty wives is looked upon as a sort of bonanza king. His wives probably go out washing at fifty cents a day, or make shirts at forty cents a dozen. In this country a man's wealth is judged by the number of dogs he owns. The possessor of eight dogs is generally too poor to pay school tax, and his wife takes in washing.

THE RESTAURANT BEAT.

How He Sometimes Manages to Get a Good Meal for a Dime.

"There are many ways of beating a restaurant," remarked a Pittsburgh man who has had much experience as a caterer, to a Dispatch reporter. "Pve learned a good many things in this business, at no slight cost to myself."

"What is the modus operandi of the sharper?"

many things in this business, at no slight cost to myself."

"What is the modus operandi of the sharper?"

"Well, it is simple, yet it works well—for him. The larger the restaurant, the easier it is to get a meal for almost nothing. Suppose you have only a dime and your appetite demands a 75-cent dinner. You enter a place which is already crowded and seat yourself at the further end of the lunch counter. You then order a sandwich or something else that will cost you but a dime. When you have devoured the provision the waiter hands you a check calling for 10 cents. You take it and saunter towards the door. The cashier is busy making change, and doesn't see you. You seat yourself at the counter near him, another waiter hands you a bill of fare and you order a substantial dinner. When you have finished you receive a second check, marked 75 cents. Put that in your pocket, take the other one and hand it to the cashier with your dime. See! It's an old game, but it is often worked by men who live by their wits.

"Then there is another scheme, which requires the aid of a confederate. One of the beats comes into the dining-room, seats himself at a table and orders a good square meal. A few minutes later his companion enters and takes a seat at the same table. They do not speak and the waiter thinks them perfect strangers. Number 2 orders a light lunch, costing 15 cents, and is given a check for that amount. The other gets his dollar dinner and departs, taking (by mistake apparently) the 15 cent check, which he cashes at the desk. When the second man has finished he picks up the remaining check, looks surprised, calls the waiter, and says:

"Here, what do you mean by this? I got but 15 cents worth, yet this check calls for a dollar,' and he raises a kick.

"The proprietor is called and matters explained to him. The fellow puts on a bold front and maintains that he doesn't know the other man from Adam. Because you let him swindle you is no reason why I should pay for his dinner. I owe you only its cents, and that is all I

They all lay down behind the log and waited for Brazleton. By and by he rode out of a thicket into an open space and came slowly toward the unsuspected ambush. He carried his pistol in his hand as if suspecting that things were not all right. When within thirty yards of the log the whole party rose and fired, killing the horse and rider in an instant. It was one of the most dramatic incidents that ever occurred about Tucson in those troublesome days. Brazelton's body was riddled with balls. He was brought to town and the next morning he was propped up against the adobe wall and his photograph taken, and the local photographer has to-day in his showcase a ghastly illustration of the triumph of his art."

A Tough Rat Story.

A naval officer says: I have always felt some regard for a rat since my cruise in the Constellation. We were fitting for sea at Norfolk, and taking in water and provisions; a plank was resting on the sill of one of the ports which communicated with the wharf. On a bright moonlight evening we discovered two rats on the plank coming into the ship. The foremost was leading the other by a straw, one end of which each held in his mouth. We managed to capture them both, and found, to our surprise, that the one led by the other was stone blind. His faithful friend was trying to get him on board where he would have comfortable quarters during a three years' cruise. We felt no disposition to kill either, and landed them on the wharf. How many there are in this world to whom the fidelity of thas rat readeth a lesson!

Trailty, Thy Name 18 Woman.

A middle-aged woman went to a prominent physician in San Diego not long ago, and asked him to amputate her two great toes. He examined them, assured her that there was nothing wrong with them, and said that he wouldn't cut them off. She begged him to, saying that if they were off she could wear No. 2 shoes instead of 4's, as then. Her toes were her own, she said to do what she pleased with, and she would give $200 to have them off. The doctor refused and the woman went in quest of some one with less conscience. A San Diego newspaper says that she found someone to do the job successfully, for two weeks later she went to San Francisco wearing the best pair of No. 2 that could be bought in San Diego.

How to Act in Cases of Accident and Sudden Illness.

Sir W. Moore, late Surgeon-General with the Government of Bombay, has a paper in the Hospital on "The Immediate Treatment of Accident and Sudden Illness," in which he state that only the other day he was passing Kensington Gardens, when he observed an old man being supported by two other persons, and encouraged to cling to the railings, so as to maintain an upright posture. A glance showed what was the matter with the old man. He had been struck by cardiac failure, or serious apoplexy, or that variety of the malady in which the face is pale, and the circulation of the blood failing. His pulse was feeble and intermittent, and there was evident paralysis on one side of the body. Now, what ought to have been done in such a case? The poor old man should have been laid on right side full length, his collar should have been opened, he should have been allowed plenty of fresh air, and his legs, feet and hands should have been well rubbed. Then, when the first shock of the malady had passed away, he ought to have been carried, still in the recumbent posture, to the nearest hospital. Again, another instance. Only a few days back, in the Hammersmith road, two boys were knocked down by a cab. One escaped with little injury, the other got concussion of the brain. He was almost senseless, speechless, cold and pallid. The same plan ought to have been pursued as in the case of the old man; but instead of this, the boy was surrounded by a dense crowd of inquisitive people, and one good but mistaken Samaritan was supporting the injured youth in an apright position on his knee. After a time the poor boy was dragged away on his legs, being well shaken and josted in the process. Yet a third mstance. In Hyde Park, one recent Sunday, a person was taken in an epileptic fit. One bystander wisely ran for water; others carried the epileptic to a bench, on which he was seated and held. Had he been placed on the soft grass and left alone he would have injured hin

He Was the First and Greatest Highwayman of Tueson, A. T.

Thirdly, in the "drunken fit," the size of the pupils of the eyes is equal, while in apoplexy one is often larger than the other. By the pupils of the eyes is meant the round space in the center of the dark part of the eye. Fourthly, the person "dead drunk" may generally be roused, when he babbles incoherently, while from apoplexy the person can not be roused. Lastly, if any movements occur in drunk-enness they will be of the limbs, whereas movement is usually restricted to one side of the body in apoplexy. From poisoning by opium apoplexy is best distinguished by the history of the case; by the smell of opium in the breath; by both pupils of the eyes being very small and contracted; by the fact that the patient may be roused, although he does not then babble as in the drunken fit, but immediately goes to sleep again.

If all that has been advanced can not be held in recollection the condensed rules may certainly be remembered, viz.: First, in all cases of accident or sudden illness let the person lis down, and do not assist him to maintain the upright posture; secondly, let him have plenty of fresh air; thirdly, unloses all clothing round the neck and chest; fourthly, convey the patient, still in the recumbent position, to the nearest hospital. Stretchers for this purpose ought to be available at known points, or at least at every police station.

Conscience and Kreutzers.

Maria Thereas, of Austria, was greatly addicted to gambling, and played for exceedingly high stakes. The court functionaries did all in their power to overcome this passion, but to no purpose. They finally appealed to the Empress's confessor, who induced the imperial gamester not to give up cards, but to play for only a copper kreutzer a point. The cunning Empress, however, ordered her jeweler to make her 100 kreutzers in a peculiar manner so that each one could be opened in the middle and a ducat inserted. The two pieces were put together so that only the initiated knew that they were not what they seemed. Thus the Empress kept the letter of the confessor's demand and at the same time encrease in a necessary and and a the same time on fessor's demand and at the same time on f
