Lambton's 149 I. O. D. E. Bazaar

The Bazaar given in the Armory last Friday and Saturday by Lambton's 149 Chapter of the I.O.D.E. attracted a good Chapter of the I.O.D.E. attracted a good crowd and was in every way a grand success. The ladies of the Chapter were kept busy all the time attending to the wants of their patrons. The different booths were tastefully arranged and decorated, flags and bunting predominating in the decoration scheme. There was one for ice cream which was a great attraction for the young people as was attraction for the young people as was also the home-made candy booth. The also the home-made candy booth. The stock-in-trade of the latter was sold out the first day and replaced Saturday with home-made cooking. There was also a fancy work booth and a garden craft booth, a Japanese tea room and a fortune teller, all of which were wellspatronized. An almost continuous program of music was given which helped to give brightness and vim to the affair. A most attractive feature was the "white elephant" booth, where many useful and valuable articles were offered and disvaluable articles were offered and disvariable articles were offered and dis-posed of for a mere song. By 10 o'clock Saturday night nearly everything was sold and the ladies had added $210 to their patriotic fund. The Chapter is to be congratulated on providing an inter-esting and attractive entertainment and at the same time doing their bit to help win the war. win the war.

The Position of Newspapers

(Guelph Mercury)

There are many phrases that have come into use lately, and some of them have a great deal of meaning that is hard to express in any other way.5Among these latter-day phrases there is one, "Have a heart," that can well be applied to a situation that every newspaper publisher in the Dominion is facing, and has been facing for months past.

The demand for free notices in connection with almost every move in connection with the carrying on of the war, and the raising of battalions and of funds, has come to a point now where it is not fair to expect the papers to accede to all requests. It is doubtful if there is any class of trade that has donated so openly of its stock-in-trade as the newspapers The only thing they have to sell is the white space in their paper, and almost every day there is a certain amount of this given to patriotic and Red Cross purposes absolutely free. In the aggregate, this amounts to a very great deal.

A newspaper, although having a quasi-public nature is, in so far as its financing is concerned, a private concern, and as such is feeling the excessive cost of material, the increaswages and other burdens that fall on the financial end of the

It might be well for the public to keep this in mind, that a newspaper has to pay its way like any other concern, and that there is a limit to what it can give away. And be sides that there is no reason why advance notices of anything, no matter whether the object is to raise money or to have a good time, should not be paid for, and reckoned as a legitimate expense.

Warts are unsightly blemishes, and corns are painful growths. Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them.

Semi-centennial Celebration

There will be a special issue of postage stamps for the confederation semi-centennial. It was also decided that there shall be a celebration at Ottawa, which will include the dedication of a memorial tablet by the Governor-General. This will be erected upon the Parliament Buildbe ings, now under constructions. Each of the provincial governments have been asked to hold a celebration at the capital. The birthday of the Dominion falls on Sunday and the people of Canada are directed to celebrate generally on Monday. There is a request to the churches that they conduct special confederation services on Sunday, and arrangements are being made for services in London and Paris to be attended by Canadian soldiers and other Canadians in these capitals. A pamphlet has been prepared showing the growth of the country since the provinces were brought together.

Will Grow Sugar Cane

Owing to the prevailing high prices of sugar this season will see a revival of the growth by the farmers in this part of the country of sugar Years ago there used to be a lot of this plant grown and a mill here did a thriving business in the fall, manufacturing it into a heavy sugar, called sorghum. In recent years there has been little of it used but a local seed dealer reports that for this season's growth he has sold more seed for the cane than he has disposed of altogether during the past 15 years. The old plant here is not now in operation, but a firm at Ridgetown has machinery and will be ready for manafacturing it this fall.—Blenheim Tribune.

The Home Paper

When the evening shades have fallen, At the ending of the day, And a fellow rests from labor

Smoking at his pipe of clay;
There is nothing pleases better,
Be his fortune up or down,
Than the little country paper,
From his own home town.

It's not a thing of beauty,
And it's print's not always clear,
But it straighens out his temper,
When a fellow's feeling queer;
It takes the wrinkle off his face,
And brushes off the frown,
That little country paper,
From his own home town.

Now I like to read the dailies, And the story paper, too, And at times the yellow novel,

And some other trash, don't you?
But when I want some reading,
That will brush away a frown,
I want that little paper
From my own home town.

Pills That Have Benefited Thousands. Known far and near as a sure remedy in the treatment of indigestion and all derangements of the stomach, liver and derangements of the stomach, liver and kidneys, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have brought relief to thousands when other specifics have failed. Innumerable testimonial can be produced to establish the truth of this assertion. Once tried they will be found superior to all other pills in treatment of the ailments for which they are prescribed.

SHOD WITH SILENCE.

Bull Moose Can Traverse a Thick Forest Without a Sound.

Although taller than an ordinary norse, weighing more than half a ton and adorned with wide spreading antlers, the bull moose stalks with ghostly silence through thickset forests where man can scarcely move without being betrayed by the loud crackling of dry twigs. In summer it loves low lying, swampy forests interspersed with shallow lakes and sluggish streams. In such places it often wades up to its neck in a lake to feed on succulent water plants and when reaching to the bottom becomes entirely submerged. These visits to the water are some times by day, but usually at night, especially during the season when the calves are young and the horns of the bulls are but partly grown.

Late in the fall, with full grown antlers, the bulls wander through the forest looking for their mates, at times uttering farreaching calls of defiance to all rivals and occasionally clashing their horns against the saplings in exuberance of masterful vigor. Other bulls at times accept the challenge and hasten to meet the rival for a battle royal. At this season the call of the cow moose quickly attracts the bulls. Hunters take advantage of this and by imitating the call through a birch bark trumpet bring the most aggressive bulls to their doom.-National Geographic Magazine.

FLIES FLEE FROM BLUE.

The Germ Laden Pests Either Fear or

Hate That Color. The Arabs have long known that flies fear or hate the color blue, and that is why the houses in many of their towns are calcimined in a light blue tint. Be fore the French Academy of Sciences recently Messrs. Galaine and Houl-beert described the results of their observations on the eyesight of flies. The only light that these insects see really well is white; their eyes do not see vio let and indigo at all; the vibrations of the blue and green rays are disagree able to them, and red has the effect of darkness. Yellow alone of all the colored rays is tolerated as well as white

The solar spectrum as seen by the eyes of a fly begins at green and ends at bright orange. The practical con-clusion to be drawn from this is that when a room has bine window panes the flies therein become as inactive as opened to let in a ray of white light the flies will rush toward it and go out through the blind.

In Japan they hang curtains made of beads of blue glass mixed with tubes of painted bamboo at the entrances to butchers' and pastry cooks' shops These let the air in, and the flies go out through the interstices between the beads, but do not re-enter.

Equine Pedometers

The whorls of hair on the coats of horses and other animals are natural pedometers, inasmuch as they register the locomotive activities of the animals on whose bodies they are found. The best examples and the greatest number of these hairy whorls and crests are found on the horse. A notable instance is the grace ful feathering that extends along the hollow of the flank, dividing the trunk of the animal from the hind quarters. There are also crests and whorls on the horse's chest and other parts of its body. A study of the action of the underlying muscles explains the origin of these peculiarities in the lay of the hair and furnishes the justification for calling them pedometers, although the analogy is, of course, merely superficial.—St. Louis Republic.

Asking Too Much.

George is employed in his father's clothing emporium. On his return from lunch a few days ago his father called him into the office and said: "While you were at lunch your tailor called to collect a bill. I am surprised and pained, sir, to learn that you are in arrears. Isn't it possible for you to live on your salary?"

"Certainly it is, sir," replied George coolly, "but you don't expect me to support my creditors too?"-Exchange.

We are Fighting the Whole German Nation

We should disabuse our minds of any lingering notion that we are fighting only the German Emperor and a little clique of militarists that stands around him. We are fighting the German people. At the beginning of the war the world found it hard to understand that the poison of Kultur had permeated the whole German nation. An honest effort was made to differentiate between the official advocates of "Right through Might" and the rank and file of the population. But this is no longer possible. The taint and aggressive militarism is in the German blood. Despite all its veneer of effective social organization, German society is at heart barbarian. There is, indeed, a certain realization of this fact even in Germany. Thus Alfred Weber in "Thoughts on the German Mission" (Berlin, 1915), says: 'Measured by certain standards of civilization we are in fact barbarians, but in only because it is in our nature to see and act with so strong and complete a sense of reality that we break through all the bands of convention." What Herr Weber calls the bands of convention are, of What Herr Weber decency. The German people have become arrogant almost beyond belief. Their deliberate utterances, the studied statements of their authors, students and clergymen as well as their military leaders offer the most remarkable testimony to this. They are politically and morally perverted.

course, the bounds of humanity and

Along with this national arrogance goes a startling frankness of brutality. In imposing Kultur on the world, any kind of credulity is permissible. General von Hartmann says that "when a national war is in progress terrorism becomes a necessary military principle." Rev. Fritz Haun declares: "Let all that human hands have wrought perish; man is greater than his works." The Kolnische Volkzeitung exclaimed, three lays after the Lusitania went down, With joyful pride we contemplate this latest deed of our navy.'

The German people are saturated through and through with a self-conceit and an immoral philosophy that shocks humanity. We are making war upon them, upon the whole German nation, in behalf of the sacred cause of freedom and righteousness

Let no pussy-footing chicanery or maze of words becloud the issue. We are at war with Germany-including the Kaiser, his Prussian military cabinet and the vast majority of the German people. They are poison which spread throughout the spite of their cleverness, betrayed world, would spell death to civic lib-

Swindlers' Ways

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

Successful criminals nearly always specialize in their work, and it is owing to this fact that detectives in many cases are able to track them down. Not only do criminals make a practice of committing one particular style of crime, but the methods professional crooks employ are practically always on the same plan.

One burglar, for instance, will always enter through the fanlight over the front door of a shop, another by breaking in at the back. Most burglars, too, will continually repeat a burglary in the same neighborhood. It is by carefully observing and noting the special systems notorious crooks adopt that detectives can often effect their arrests. Many a time a burglary has occurred and the criminal vanished, leaving apparently no marks by which he can be traced, and police officials have been able to produce him in court within a few days, to the utter astonishment of all concerned.

One special trick of a well-known crook was eventually his undoing. Rushing with his hat in his hand to a grocer's shop, he would shout: "I bet a man outside that his hat wouldn't hold three quarts of molasses, and he bet me it would.

"Now let's see," he would add. Of course, the hat would not hold three quarts, but the grocer was interested. Thinking he would get paid, the grocer filled the hat, whereupon the crook jammed it over his victim's head, eyes and face, snatched his watch, ransacked his till and

A specialist of another sort was convicted about twenty times, usually for the same offence-stealing a block of tar.

Another man's extraordinary whim was to smash the plate-glass windows of taverns. He would go around from one to another, drinking, and would refuse to leave at closing time. The proprietor would then have him ejected and, presumably as a revenge the man would pick up a stone and hurl it through the window.

'How is it you always do thisthing in exactly the same way?" he was asked the last time he appeared in court.

"I don't know," was the reply. "I can't help it. I feel that I just have to do it."

It does not matter how subtle or careful a criminal may be, he always leaves some betraving sign behind for the well-informed detective to act upon. There is one case in which two men of unusual brains and daring, and of no small skill in conall filled with the same poison, a cealing their methods of work, in

These men started a number of fraudulent get-rich-quick establishments, all under different names But the one was very fond of oil paintings with large trees in them and these he had hung in offices under his control. The other also had developed a liking for carpets with a particular pattern in them, and selected them for the different rooms in which he worked. Knowing these two men's extraordinary tastes, a detective, after visiting the offices, obtained this clue, which subsequently led to the arrest of both criminals.

The New Recruit

The United States having entered the war for reasons of her own makes common cause with the veterans. She makes great preparations. Forty thousand young men are already in training as officers of a force of two millions. Although she has enacted conscription, it is said that voluntary enlistment will fill the ranks for a long time. To do as much as Canada has done in the proportion of numbers, she must send overseas five and a half million soldiers. Her support will be welcome to the French especially, whose lines are said to be wearing thin.

Wisconsin is the first state to use the aeroplane as agency in fighting fire. For the past two years it has employed an aviator for that purpose From a height of fifteen hundred feet a man can detect in clear weather the beginning of a fire sixty miles away. In accordance with the Ontario Temperance Act, as amended at the last session, every railway, express company and other common carrier are required to keep at each agency within the province where goods are consigned to an accurate record of each consignment of liquor received and every consignment of liquor made, so that the Ontario License Board may keep track of sales. The result has been amazing, and the list of shipments of liquor from outside to the Province of Ontario is formidable. "It is quite beyond any-thing we anticipated," remarked a member of the board.

In carrying the new conscription proposals, it is certain that the young men will be called first, the husky, single fellows, who have no dependents, no particular home handicaps and nothing to prevent their enlistment. No distinction will be made favouring those recently married. The next class will be single men who have some responsibility in the line of dependents, but not such as would imterfere parti-cularly with their enlistment. A third class would be married men with no families or dependents. The national service registration returns which are admittedly incomplete show 150,000 men who have no dependents and are not engaged occupations really vital to the State. This is materially in excess of the number required for services.

The Late Mrs. Livingstone

It was with inexpressible sorrow that the many friends of the late Mrs. John Livingstone, of Watford, received news Livingstone, of Watford, received news of her death. As the result of a paralytic stroke she had been suffering for some weeks before the end came, but it was thought that she would again recover. On the 7th inst., however, she contracted a cold which affected the bronchial tubes, and after a hard struggle for life she passed peacefully away on Saturday, June 9th, at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Livingstone will be keenly missed by all who knew her. She was a woman who possessed gifts and qualities of an eminent kind which were best appreciated by those who were most intimate with her. Few women held nobler ideals than Mrs. Livingstone. While her profession of religion was not unduly her profession of religion was not unduly demonstrative, it was genuine in the truest sense. It was based entirely on a deep love and reverence for Jesus Christ, and a sincere regard for His commands respecting His followers. The Bible was her rule of faith and practice; the study her rule of faith and practice; the study of its precepts was her delight; and its blessed promises were her stepping stones to the higher and better life. While her friends and relatives mourn deeply her loss, they are buoyed up and sustained by the fact that in the last hours of lite Mrs. Livingstone's faith in her Lord was bright and clear. On being asked if she feared anything, she replied promptly, "Nothing whatever." Later on when her mind was oblivious of the things around her, and human voices sounded faintly in her ears, at the mensounded faintly in her ears, at the men-tion of the name of "Jesus" her face suddenly brightened up, giving clear evidence that that Name was to her evidence that that Name was to her sweeter than all other names. Mrs. Livingstone was a firm believer in the first resurrection, and it was her greatest hope, as was St. Paul's, that she should have part in it. We know that she will not be disappointed on the glorious day of Christ's appearing. Her wearied body sleeps now for a little season, but when the Master comes "the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." This is the "blessed hope" of the friends of Mrs. Livingstone who remain behind. Mrs. Livingstone's maiden name was Mary Jane Thrower. She was the eldest daughter of Stephen and Mary Thrower of the 2nd line, Adelaide, and was born in 1844. She was married to Mr. John Livingstone in married to Mr. John Livingstone in Hamilton in 1874. There were born to them three sons and two daughters, the eldest of whom, William, died in January, 1916. Those remaining are: Charles of Port Dalhousie; Frank, of Dundurn,

Three New Professors for the Western

Three more new professors of a rank equal to those of any Canadian university have just been appointed by the Western University, London. This with the other notable advancements made at the Western in recent years will guarantee that students can now secure as good courses in Arts and Medicine at the Western as are given anywhere in the Dominion Dominion.

Dominion.
Professor William Sherwood Fox, Ph.
D. of Johns Hopkins University, a Canadian who spent years in the best universities of the United States and Europe to equip himself in the very best manner possible and who has for the last six years been a prominent profes-sor of Princeton University, now supposed to have the strongest classical faculty in the United States, is the new Professor of classics. Besides his dis-tinguished scholarship and excellent uccess as a teacher, he is an author of note. He has written many scholarly articles in the classical magazines and his recent six dollar volume on Roman and Greek Mythology is one of the most notable contributions to that subject. In research he has been especially success-ful, deciphering certain texts that were given up by the noted German scholar given up by the noted German scholar Hulsen.

Professor Arthur A. Livingston, Ph. D., now Professor of Romance Languages at Columbia University, New York, is an unusual "find." With the single exception of Gustave Lanson, the very distinguished French critic, he is considered the ablest of the large Romance foculty at this one of the strongest American faculty at this, one of the strongest Am-erican universities. Though a young man under thirty-five, he has become known as one of the best American scholars, largely through his voluminous writings, being the author of two or three important books and several score scholarly articles. He is also the most scholarly articles. He is also the most active of the editors of the sell-known Romanic Review. Dr. Livingston has studied and traveled extensively in Europe and no superior teacher of French, Spanish and Italian can be found anywhere.

The third of the appointments just made is that of Professor Walter B. Ford, Ph. D., as Professor of Mathematics. Dr. Ford is considered on the atics. Dr. Ford is considered on the highest authority one of the two ablest men on the mathematical staff of the University of Michigan. He also has studied in Europe and in American universities, taking his Ph. D. from Harvard. Like the other two, he has proved to be a very productive scholar, two books and many scholarly articles in the best methamatical programs of Europe books and many scholarly articles in the best mathematical magazines of Europe and the United States being to his credit, some of them written in French. He is chairman of the Chicago section of the American Mathematical Society and is considered among the leading mathematicisns of the United States.

With a staff made up of men of this stamp, it would seem unnecessary for our Western Ontario pupils to go beyond London to secure a university education of the highest rank. The special efforts put forth by the Board of Governors of Western University to bring these superior scholars to this district should be taken advantage of by our young people. people.

My First Valentine

Having Treasured It, I Came Upon It In Middle Life.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I remember the first valentine I ever received. I have good cause to remember it, for it marked an important feature in my life. But this is not the reason for my remembering it. The true cause was the impression made upon me at the time, and that impression has remained with me and will remain with me so long as I live.

In childhood one feels keenly little things that would be of trifling importance in maturity. Child loves are evanescent, but while they last they are of paramount importance. And disappointments! I can remember one day when I was a boy that I was to have been taken to a show. I was away from home at the time and delayed going back till it was too late. I locked myself in my room and bawled so loud that I could be heard all over the house.

But as to my valentine. I was past the age when children are interested in getting a great number of these missives, but not old enough to discard them. At any rate, I received a valentine and was very much affected by it. The filigree work, the bleeding hearts, the attachment, within which was a beautiful Cupid with a bow and a quiver full of arrows, all conspired to thrill me with a delight that I had never felt before. And I took it for a certainty that the little girl who sent it to me loved me as she said she did in the printed verses it contained.

And how my imagination pictured her in the flesh! She had mild blue eyes and golden hair that hung in shining wavelets down her back. likened her to fairies I had seen in picture books dressed in spangles and holding a rod with a star on one end. There was nothing beautiful that I did not liken her to. And to think that this fair being loved me—not only loved me, but had sent this dainty missive to tell me sol

There was nothing in the valentine to indicate who sent it. Indeed, I think if I had known from whom it came it would have destroyed this vi-sion of loveliness I created. Perhaps was a boy of more than ordinary ideality. I needed a subject for my Whether it occurred to me to endeavor to discover my valentine I don't now remember. What I do remember is dwelling upon her as an imaginary creature.

Time did not cure me of my love. I grew to manhood, but I treasured my image, though it gradually faded into a fainter form, the whole leaving a delightful memory.

When I became a man I met a girl to whom I was drawn, not only on account of her physical attractions, but because she was one of those wom. en possessing that which we call character. There is no other word that expresses what I mean, but what it stands for is a great deal.

Margaret Stanford and I became fast friends. Friendship-platonic friendship-is what I felt for her. There was another girl of my acquaintance who affected me very differently. Indeed, she was a very different girl. She was piquant, being also a bit of a flirt, and had brought her fascinations to bear upon me. I do not mean that she was to be blamed for that. It is a woman's province to flatter men, and there are times with every man, no matter how strong, when he needs

Lucy Tisdale's methods were very innocent. She was lovable, not only from a certain native feminine delicacy there was about her, but she had in her a certain romance. She loved poetry and pictures. The voice in a oman is an important factor, and Lucy Tisdale had a very feminine voice. My friend Margaret's voice was rich; Lucy's was like a child's. Another difference between the two girls was that when Margaret was dis-pleased she showed her displeasure with a quiet dignity. Lucy, on the contrary, would cast down her eyes and seem rather burt than offended.

Why I know not, but I sometimes associated Lucy with my imaginary valentine. I suppose it was that she was childlike. My valentine, being a creature of the imagination and perfect, had a great advantage over Lucy. was a real being in the flesh. But, being now a man, a great deal of the reverence for the opposite sex that I had when a boy had dwindled. Alas, now that I am an old man, though it not died out, it has greatly chang-A woman is not a creature to be

She is to be valued in proportion as she fills the position in which Provi-dence has placed her.

Margaret and Lucy did not belong to the same social set and did not know each other. This enabled me to keep them apart and enjoy the companionship of each as I wanted it. I confess that I wanted Lucy's more than Margaret's. After a hard day's work I usually sought Lucy in the evening. Her sprightliness took the tired feeling out of me. When anything troubled me I turned to Margaret. I have given a reason why when tired I wanted Lucy, but I am unable to say why when troubled I wanted Margaret. I can only say that needed each for what she supplied.

The world is becoming more strenuous every day. Lucy's disposition became more and more a necessity with me as time went on and care increased with me. The day came when I felt it essential to have her with me all the while, and I married her. She was by no means loath to accept me, and I was very happy with her. But missed that stimulating influence I and drawn from Margaret. When I was simply tired I got from my wife what I wanted; when I wished for some one to consult, to thrash out plans by talking them over, she failed She would talk with me about them, but her suggestions did not tend to put me on the right track or draw ne off a wrong one.

On this account I gradually refrained from consulting her about my affairs. Whether or not she noticed the change, she never took me to task for it. I rather fancied that such matters bored her. After my marriage my old friend Margaret became quite chummy with my wife. I think Margaret found in her that which acted as a sedative with me, a faculty for driving dull care away. Margaret was a frequent visitor at our house, and at times when she was with us and I needed some one with whom to thrash out a knotty question I would do so with our guest.

I think that Lucy realized that Margaret was a help to me in this way. At any rate, when she heard us talking over some matter of importance to me she had the good sense to leave us to-gether without interruption. And I doubt if she was ever jealous. Indeed, I had strong proof that she was not as I am about to relate.

Lucy was delicate from a girl. When we had been married ten years a want of vitality set in, and after many trips and a surfeit of medicine I made up my mind that her health could not be restored. From this time on she sank Shortly before her death she told me that she had not long to live and that there was a matter of importance on which she wished to speak to me. I assented, and she said:

"Frank, why did you not marry Margaret Stanford instead of me?" "Because I loved you and did not

"Why was that?" "Because—well, because you appeal-ed to me as she did not."

"Well, your sentiment fitted in with mine. Margaret is not an especially sentimental woman."

"I'm not so sure of that. You made a mistake, Frank. You should have married Margaret. She would have been a better helpmeet for you than I." I confess I was astonished to hear my wife tell me this. I was impressed with her nobility in thus putting another woman above herself. I took her in my arms, but gave no verbal expression of my reverence for her.

"When I am gone," she said, "I want you to correct this mistake. I want you to marry Margaret."

"Oh, Lucy!" was all I could say. "I always believed that you needed a stronger woman than I, both physically and mentally, but I could not give you up. Now that I must give you up you must let me choose a companion for you for what remains of your life." I told her that I had no reason to suppose that Margaret would mar-

"She has always loved you," said "How, then, is it," I said astonished,

"that you have permitted me to see so much of her?"

"Because I knew you loved me and that she would never try to take you away from me." My wife died, and in time I married Margaret. I was but thirty-three years old and had the prospect of as much again of life as I had already lived. Contrary to my expectation, I did not miss the sentiment that I had thought she lacked so much as I expected. As time wore on I found her companion-very satisfying, and from the time of our marriage our joint judgment guided our affairs.

One day Margaret said to me that she had, according to my wishes, been getting rid of a lot of accumulations of letters and papers that pertained to the past and were now only an encumbrance. She had brought down some of these to show me before burning them. Looking them over, I came upon a valentine. As I continued to look at it I became impressed with the fact that it was my first valentine, the one that had affected me so deeply. I had treasured it as a boy, but when I grew older had forgotten it

"Here is something." I said, showing tt to my wife, "that gave me a sensa tion which can never be repeated. The image I conjured up of the child who sent it to me remained with me when I had outgrown the valentine age.' "What was your imaginary sweet beart like?" asked Margaret. I smiled and said I did not remember; it had faded twenty years agone. "Was it anything like me?" she asked, looking at me with a quizzical ex-

"You? Oh, dear, no! It was a child, a fairylike little thing, with blue eyes and golden hair." "More like Lucy?"

"Come," I said, putting the valentine "Let us not bring up the past." Turning from the valentine to Margaret, I noticed a curious expression "Why did you ask that?" I said.

"Because I was the fairylike child who sent it to you." I stood looking at her in a bewildered condition of mind for some time with out speaking. Was she in earnest? Something in her expression told me that she was, I folded her in my arms, There were no words to express my

German Place Names in United States

Comment by members of the British and French war commissions on the number of towns in America with Ger-man names has resulted in an unofficial-investigation revealing that Uncle Sam's map bristles with Kaisers, Kaiservilles, map bristles with Kaisers, Kaiservilles, Berlins, Germanyvilles, Leipsics, Krupps- and places with Teutonic monickers. There are fifty-two towns in the United States named Berlin. Only eleven of the forty-eight States in the Union are without at least one. Ohio leads the list with seven. There are in the forty-eight States exactly forty-eight Germanys, Germantowns, Germanyvilles and Germans. There are twenty-three Kais-Germans. There are twenty-three Kaisers, five Leipsics and three Krupps.

May 10, 1917.

To Mr. Francis Emerson Livingstone and Mrs. Livingstone.

Dear Friends,

It is naturally with feeling of regret that we are assembled here to-night on the eve of your leaving Dundurn, a departure occasioned by the health of Mr. Livingstone, the latter a matter in which he has the sympathy of all his friends.

We are desirous of conveying to you, Mr. Livingstone, a measure of the sense of appreciation possesses us, of work well done, truly placed energy and public spiritedness, which you have consistently shown during the past 10½ years you have been resident with us. Your work in connection with the Rural Municipality of Dundurn, No. 314, from the early days of the former Local Improvement District to the days of the present systematized municipality procedure has been invaluable to the ratepayers of that rural municipal authority. Other offices that you have held with credit to yourself are those of Secretary to the Urban municipality of the Village of Dundurn, and the Dundurn S. D. No. 344, and in mentioning the latter it must be a pleasure to you to see the handsome school building recently erected in town where our children can receive instruction along lines that are up-to-date and in ion along lines that are up-to-date and in keeping with the progressive spirit of the times.

As a professional man you have shown that you are capable and have a thorough grasp of modern business methods. The town of Dundurn has several residences and places of business built through your efforts, which are standing monuments of your foresightedness and faith in the future of the place which has been for so long your western home. Your wife has been the helpful partner of your joys, your sorrows and your successes, and of her it can be said that she has shown the same spirit of energy in connection with your own work and that of any church, social or other matters with any church, social or other matters with

In conclusion, Mr. Livingstone it is hoped by all present tonight on behalf of your many Dundurn friends that the change of scene and climate may be the means of entirely restoring you to your old health and strength and after you have enjoyed a well carried rest you will old health and strength and after you have enjoyed a well earned rest you will be enabled to once more enter the field of business, where again, we trust, successes will be yours.

As a token of our esteem and regard we ask you both to accept this cabinet of Community Plate as a remembrance from your friends resident in this community.

Reeve Hokanson then formally made Reeve Hokanson then formally made the presentation, adding his own personal testimony to the valuable service rendered the district by Mr. Livingstone in both his public and private capacity. He referred to Mr. Livingstone's long connection with town as a druggist and predicted that the town in the East where he decides to locate would obtain a valuable citizen. Mr. Livingstone responded in feeling terms, thanked the donors for their beautiful gift and asked all to give him a call if at any time they were within 100 miles of his future home. Warwick S. S. Convention

The Warwick Township Sunday School Convention, which met in the Zion Congregational Church on Friday, June 15th, was one of the most interesting and inspiring ever held in the township. The addresses given by Revs. Moorehouse, Cornish, Simpson and Mr. Smith were full of practical thoughts and suggestions which can be used by S. S. workers to good advantage in the work of the S. S. in the coming year. The following resolutions were passed:—"Resolved—that we, the members of the S. S. association, desire to express our deep sympathy with the soldiers, who are fighting and sacrificing their lives for the rights and liberties of our Empire, and would further extend our sympathy to the bereaved relatives, who are mourning the loss of dear ones. We trust that the sacrifices made may, under the divine guidance, result in a glorious victory. Resolved—that we desire to express our appreciation of the kindly way the good people of this neighborhood have received us and the kind hospitality and love so generously extended to us.

LITTLE WORRIES

IN THE HOME

These Bring the Wrinkles and Pallid Faces That Make Women Look Prematurely Old

Almost every woman at the head of a home meets daily many little worries in her household affairs. The care of her little ones, the work about the house all contribute to these worries. Most of them may be too small to notice an hour afterwards, but they constitute a con-stant strain that affects the blood and the nerves and make women look prematurely old. The effect of these little worries may be noticed in sick or ner-vous headaches, fickle appetite, tiredness after slight exertion, and the coming of wrinkles which every woman dreads. To these thus afflicted Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer a speedy cure; a restoration of color to the cheeks, brightness to the eye, a hearty appetite and access of freedy. a hearty appetite and a sense of freedom from weariness. Among the many thousands of Canadian women who have found new health and strength through these pills is Mrs. G. Strasser, Acton, West, Ont., who says:—"I am the mother of three children and after each birth I became terribly run down, I had weak, thin, blood, always felt tired, and unable to do my household work. After the birth of my third child I seemed to be worse, and was badly run down. I found the greatest benefit from the Pills and soon gained my old strength. Indeed after taking them I felt as well as in my girlhood, and could take pleasure in my work. I also used Baby's Own Tablets for my little ones and have found them a splendid medicine for childhood ailments.
