How the Canadian Expeditionary Force Crossed the Atlantic

The Stupendous Work of the Navy in Conveying the Fleet of Troopships from Gaspé to Plymouth. Graphic Story of the Voyage

STORY OF THE JOURNEY

PLYMOUTH, England, Oct. 14.—Canada's striking force was landed at Plymouth today without the loss of a single man. It was the last stroke of success given by the finished workmanship of the Royal Navy to the stupendous undertaking of conveying across the Atlantic Ocean the largest single force that ever crossed these waters. We who have been under the care of Britain's sea power during this long and arduous voyage of fifteen full days carry away for her navy's efficiency a respect that shall never fade. At no time during the voyage were more than six warships of moderate speed and effectiveness within sight simultaneously, but from such information as leaked out it was apparent that there were within reach an overwhelming force of magnificent British ships sufficient to adequately account for the strongest fleet which Germany could possibly put into these waters. From first to last there was aboard the troopship an air of ease and even gaiety which told its own tale—that every man had complete confidence that Britain's naval power would see them through.

SLIPPED DOWN THE ST. LAWRENCE

October had just dawned when the headquarters ship of the Canadian transport fleet slipped from her mooring at Quebec and silently stole down the St. Lawrence. Most of the ships had left the night before, and the Franconia was among the last to go. When she cast off the docks were almost entirely deserted, and the scenes which usually mark the departure of an ocean liner were lacking. When the Canadian contingent left for South Africa many glistening eyes followed the prow of the troopships. But it was different in this case. There was no one to weep. Some longshoremen called "Good-bye" and "Bon voyage." Most of those on board had gone to bed hours before. None had the faintest idea what time the voyage would commence but all had returned with the ardent desire that when they awoke they would be on their way. Some were impatient. They had wearied of the daily round and common task at Valcartier, and there was great joy among the men when they found themselves aboard the transports.

ASSEMBLING AT GASPE

After an uneventful trip down the river the flagship dropped anchor in Gaspé Bay, which had been chosen as the rendezvous. This was one of the places visited by Jacques Cartier in the sixteenth century. Here all the ships had been ordered to assemble preparatory to the epoch-making trip across the Atlantic, and it was at that point that Admiral Weymss took control of the expedition. When the Franconia rounded the cape and took up her position in the midst of the fleet, some thirty troopships were already anchored in the beautiful bay, and everything combined to make a scene of grandeur, the like of which has never been witnessed in Canada before and probably never will be again. Indeed, so much of beauty and magnificence was crowded into the picture that one would have to journey a long way before it could be surpassed. In some respects the spectacle reminded the onlookers of the visit of King George to Liverpool some years ago, when the stately of Britain's merchant ships, lined up in the Mersey, were viewed by His Majesty. Alongside the troopships, looking grim and businesslike, lay four British cruisers. Just outside the bay larger warships patrolled the gulf. In the background stretched the picturesque countryside, dotted with quaint churches and the pretty cottages of the fisherfolk. Away in the distance could be seen the shores of desolate Anticosti. There was scarcely a ripple on the beautiful blue water of Gaspé Basin, and a more peaceful-looking place surely does not exist. It would be interesting to know what were the emotions of those lonely fisherfolk as they beheld the sight presented to their view that morning. It was indeed enchanting, and one could gaze all day upon the picture without tiring of it.

During the day a farewell message was received from H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, and the great fleet was reviewed by the Minister of Militia, Colonel Hughes did not board any of the ships, but waved a "Good-bye" to the troops from the deck of the steam yacht which had brought him to Gaspé. Copies of an appropriate message from the Minister to the men were distributed on each of the transports.

The Canadian force joined at Gaspé by the steamer Canada, with the Lincolnshires, an English regiment on board. The Lincolnshires had been on garrison duty in Bermuda, where they were relieved by the Royal Canadian Regiment. They da, where they were relieved by the Canadian forces assembled at Gaspé, messages of welcome being conveyed to them by signalers stationed on the top decks of the troopships.

THE LAST MAIL DELIVERED

One of the unique features in connection with the stay at Gaspé, was the distribution of mails by the post office with the contingent. Over 40,000 letters were delivered to the troops on board the various ships. It was the last opportunity Canada's soldiers had to receive news from home until they reached England.

PRECAUTIONS AT NIGHT

All sorts of precautions were taken at night. All windows were blanketed and the ships sailed along with only sidelights and sternlights showing. While the wireless apparatus was not dismantled, the wireless operators were not allowed to send or receive messages, and were ordered to do so by the Admiral. The only messages received by the transports were transmitted by means of flag by day and Morse lamps by night. The wireless men were at their posts during the whole of the voyage, but not once were they called upon.

SAILED ON OCTOBER THIRD

It was on the afternoon of Saturday, October 3, that the great fleet sailed out of the harbor of Gaspé and headed toward Britain. Night fell soon afterwards, and Canada's soldiers got a farewell glimpse of their country as the ships ploughed into the darkness. The historic voyage had commenced. Not since the days of Christopher Columbus has the old Atlantic seen a voyage of such significance. Never has a larger single force been moved across any ocean in one convoy. Cher after-cher burst from the men as the sigher patriotic airs and there was happiness everywhere. The grandeur of the scene was far more impressive than was the mobilization of the fleet at Gaspé. Fifteen miles of ships figured between forty and fifty thousand men on board, counting the crews of the warships and the transports. In addition to the Lincolnshire Regiment, the Canadian soldiers, numbering some 31,000, were joined at sea by the Newfoundland contingent, about 850 strong. These were on board the Florizel. The total tonnage of the whole fleet was officially estimated at half a million tons. Immediately after leaving the rendezvous the ships formed into three columns, as follows:

FORMATION OF CONVOY

Column Z.—H. M. S. Eclipse, transports Megantic, Ruthenia, Ber-mudian, Albatross, Ivernia, Scandinav-ian, Sicilian, Montezuma, Lapland, Cassandra, Florizel.
Column Y.—H. M. S. Diana, transports Caribbean, Athena, Royal Ed-ward, Franconia, Canada, Mon-taigne, Manitou, Tyroljan, Laurentic, Tunisian.
Column X.—H. M. S. Clorphydia, (flagship), transports Scotia, Ar-cadian, Zealand, Corinthian, Virgin-ian, Andania, H. M. S. Gloria, Stran-der, Saxonian, Grampian, Lacomia, Montreal, Royal George, H. M. S. Scotia.
This formation was kept until the fleet was within a few hundred miles of Britain. In lines one and a half miles apart the transports were half a mile apart of each other, so that the area occupied by the convoy was over fifteen miles square in extent. Before Newfoundland was sighted larger warships joined the convoy, these including the Suffolk, the Glory and the Niobe. The Suffolk was several miles in front, and was not seen by the soldiers until mid-ocean was reached, when the war-ship returned to American waters. "Good-bye, good luck," signalled Rear-Admiral Craddock of the Suffolk, as his ship steamed past the lines of transports. The Niobe of Canada had already returned. The day after the Suffolk left the Queen Mary, one of the latest battle cruisers, appeared, and took up a position several miles to the north of the fleet of troopships, where she remained for several days. Before departure she passed through the lines, and the soldiers had a good opportunity of seeing her at close range. The Glory, which accompanied the ships all the way across, occupied a position several miles distant on the starboard side, while two armed cruisers sailed ahead of the convoy to keep the coast clear. In addition to these, the Royal George and the Niobe, two of the fastest of the troopships were used as scout ships.

THE FIRST SCOUTS

When the fleet was within easy reach of England, two of the ships bearing the Army Service Corps and allied units were allowed to push ahead, in order that those on board might disembark first and make preparations for the fighting forces. They were escorted by the cruiser Diana, which placed at the head of the "Y" line was taken by the battleship Majestic.

The greatest possible secrecy was maintained with regard to the location of the fleet of transports as they stole across the Atlantic. No ships were allowed to pass near their course. There was considerable excitement on Wednesday, October 7, when two military stragglers were chased by the British cruisers leading the con-voys. These were quickly laid by the heels and ordered to follow the con-voys for a good part of the way, which they did. They were given their freedom when it was too late for them to divulge information that might have been of interest to the assistance, to the enemy. Some days later two of the bank steamers, the Iroquois and the Navahoe, broke through the lines. One of the cruisers was quickly on their tracks, but what happened to them no one was able to learn.

At certain periods during the day physical culture courses were given, and many forms of amusement were indulged in by the troops. For hours each day the men marched around the decks to the strains of the bagpipes and mouth-organs, and at intervals these exercises were varied by others of a not less strenuous character. On Monday a series of boxing bouts were arranged on the after deck, and by various contests were witnessed by an enthusiastic throng of soldiers and nurses. The evenings were spent in various ways, and some interesting concerts which took place in the sergeants' mess attracted greatly to the enjoyment of large audiences. Many of the officers were much impressed in a useful series of military lectures given largely by Imperial officers, and the nurses attended seven lectures delivered for their particular benefit and instruction during the voyage.

VETERAN NURSES ON BOARD

It is a matter of interest to mention that five of the twelve Canadian nurses who went through the South African war are here with the Canadian contingent, namely, Miss Macdonald of Nova Scotia, Miss Margaret Smith of Ontario, Miss Marcella Richardson of Woodstock, Ont., a daughter of Judge Richardson, who exchanged Nova Scotia, and Miss Victoria Nesbitt of Ottawa.

Religious services were conducted every Sunday on board the various troopships. Those officiating on board the headquarters ship were the Divisional Chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Steacy of Ottawa, the Rev. W. Woods of Winnipeg, both Anglicans while Major the Rev. Father Jolicoeur of Valcartier and Capt. the Rev. Father Workman of Montreal ministered to the Roman Catholics.

THE WEEK'S WAR NEWS

Turkey Offers Apologies to Powers of Triple Entente

LONDON, Nov. 2 (10.05 p.m.)—The Grand Visier of Turkey has apologized on behalf of his Government for the warlike operations of the Turkish fleet under German commanders in the Black Sea, but it was stated authoritatively this evening that the Porte will have to go very much further than this before the Powers of the Triple Entente will agree to resume friendly relations with the Ottoman Government.

It was disclosed in a statement issued by the French Government this evening that Turkey, in reply to a note presented by Great Britain, Russia and France, on Friday last, agreed to recall her fleet from the North Sea, but refused to dismiss the German officers from her ships, and that, as it was believed she could not maintain a passive attitude without doing this, the Ambassador of the Entente Powers demanded their passports and left Turkey.

Bulgaria Mobilizing Second Line of Troops

LONDON, November—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Rome says: "A message received here from Bulgaria has ordered the mobilization of her second line of troops." The first line of troops already have been mobilized.

WAR BRIEFS

There is a consensus of civilized feeling against Germany such as the world has seldom, if ever experienced before. There was never any such world-wide sentiment against Napoleon.—New Statesman.

After the fall of Liege, the Germans again tried to bribe Belgium, through the Dutch Foreign Minister. The highest compliments were paid to Belgian valor, and an assurance given of Germany's willingness to make with Belgium any agreement that could be reconciled with the conflict in France. A defiant answer was the reply.

The false report has been circulated by Germans that the Indian troops were invited to England to take part merely in a great parade. His Highness Aga Khan in a meeting in London said, "All Indians know that if Britain were ever weakened, India's aspirations, India's whole future would go to pieces."

Mr. Asquith says two years ago, Germany asked the British Cabinet to pledge themselves to neutrality in the event of Germany's being engaged in war.

The richest shipping haul the British have yet made is the capture by the Cumberland of nine German liners off the Cameroon river, Africa, together with a German gunboat. The tonnage of the liners is 30,915. Large quantities of coal in their cargoes.

The German paper Vorwaerts, suspended Sept. 27th, has reappeared, the publisher agreeing to say nothing about the war, or upon class questions.

An Englishman, a prisoner of war in Berlin, now released because he is over 55 years of age, says that he saw in a German paper that only 2000 enlisted in Great Britain.

A letter found on a German prisoner reads, "With us officers and soldiers are becoming scarce. Everybody is being taken. It is Germany's last hope. Have you bread enough? Many complain they do not have enough."

Two Austrians were found, Oct. 17th, with drawings and plans at Martinere fort, Quebec. They are held at the Citadel. The British losses between Aug. 12th, and Oct. 8th, were 12,980 men and 561 Officers.

The bayonet used by the Germans has nine inches of teeth and is capable of inflicting a terrible wound.

The following articles were found in the room of a German in Toronto.—One automatic revolver, two clips of cartridges, a box of cartridges, two dirks, one clasp knife with a long blade, a set of pointed knuckle-dusters, and one electric torch. Under the Alien enemy's Act, he was fined $300.00 or three months imprisonment.

Montreal has 10,000 Germans, Poles and Austrians. The civic Authorities have a job on their hands in interning these Alien enemies. About half the men needed for the second contingent have volunteered.

Great Britain has prohibited the importation of sugar. It has been found that German or Austrian sugar has been sent to a neutral nation and then reshipped to Great Britain.

Rev. Dr. Chawn has sent to Sir Robert Borden a strong protest against the order of General Alderson, authorizing a wet canteen for the Canadian troops in England, and urges him to appeal to the Home Government to remove it.

Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht, Erin, took about twenty Red Cross nurses to land at Havre, France, for service in the war. The Dutchess of Westminster went with them.

Canadian airmen has started to practice on Salisbury Plains. Asiatic cholera is spreading in Austria, Hungary and Galicia, to an alarming extent, chiefly among soldiers, being rapidly fatal in a few hours. The Austrian government is severely criticized for the neglect of precautions. This disease will cause more mortality than the war, besides crippling the army.

Sir Hiram Maxim, of Maxim gun fame, has invented a new bullet which can be used in an ordinary gun. It is intended principally to be used against Zeppelins and dirigibles and as soon as it strikes the gas bag it will set it on fire.

"Is Mickey in condition, Mrs. Doolan?" "He's as fine as silk, Mickey's a fine boy. He's got something up his sleeve that'll astonish all them other fighters." "What is it, Mrs. Doolan?" "It's his ar-r-r-m."

An Appeal to the Men of Annapolis County

To the Editor of the Monitor.

Dear Sir:—With the announcement in the press that recruiting for Nova Scotia's battalion of the Second Expeditionary Force commences to-day (Tuesday, 3rd inst.), the challenge has again come to men of suitable age to seriously consider that, wherever possible, they should offer themselves in the service of their country. The story of why we are at war has been so often told that it would be superfluous to repeat it here. But whether we sufficiently realize all that is at stake, and that this war is just as much Canada's as the British Isles; that upon the success of the Allies depends our national existence, is not altogether apparent.

In a letter from an army chaplain at the front, published in the London Morning Post, he says (referring to the Germans) "if the way they carry on here is any criterion of how they would carry on if they get to England, God help us, for no one else could. England is waking up, I see, but the full extent of the need cannot be driven home too deeply."

Now for England let us substitute Canada in this excerpt, and in its light read the following from a member of the First Canadian Expeditionary Force after landing in England:

"The spirit in Canada seemed to be that England is so powerful that she would win without difficulty, that she did not need help; but here there is no such spirit. They know well they have their hands full; that they are fighting with their backs to the wall. All the papers speak of what is before us—hard work. . . . When we realize our duty is to give our all to save England and the Empire, we shall win if that help is not given too late. . . . I wish I could do something to show that the spirit of 'all is well' is false. All will not be well till Germany is beaten. I have never for a moment been sorry I took the step I did; in fact, the more I see, the more I feel it was the right step, and only wish I could do more to help out."

I believe I am right in saying that Nova Scotia's contribution to the First Contingent was somewhat disappointing. Perhaps we were not altogether blame-worthy. Anyhow, we are going to make a determined effort to give no reason for complaint on this occasion.

But what is Annapolis County going to do? It should be a source of pride to us that the Officer Commanding the Nova Scotia Battalion is to be Lt. Col. LeCain of Roundhill, and one of the Lieutenants is also from this County, viz.: J. H. Tupper, Bridgetown. Could we not give them at least 100 men?

Here is the challenge: 1st, to every man of suitable age to offer himself; 2nd, to parents and guardians to place no bar in the way, but rather to do their part.

As a writer in the Toronto Globe points out: "In this conflict there is all the difference between the right hand and the left. Freedom, Justice, Peace, these supreme interests of civilization are at stake for all the world," not only the British Empire. They are assailed by the German army. They are being defended by the British army.

When his country stands in need, the true Patriot rises above all the detaining and narrowing influences of ordinary life, and sees clearly the way of his duty.

Who then, will offer himself in this glorious cause?

Truly yours,
ERNEST UNDERWOOD,
The Rectory, Bridgetown.

Annapolis Spector.—The Grant Warehouse is being repaired and put in order for the Annapolis Royal Fruit Company, Limited. The packing room is a fine size being 30 x 60. The upper floor space is 160 x 80 with a cellar below of same size with a 10 foot ceiling. There is storing capacity in the cellar for ten thousand barrels so that in the ordinary season a pack of fifteen or twenty thousand barrels could be handled in the warehouse. It is most conveniently situated, having a railway siding direct and being on the water front, consequently apples can be shipped either by rail or by water. Mr. Arthur Harris, one of our most up-to-date farmers and a well known apple packer, has charge and is now receiving and packing apples for export. Members of the Association in Granville have made arrangements with the Ferry boat to bring apples over and deliver them at the warehouse.

Sheer Madness

To license a man to sell intoxicants is just as rational as to license a man to spit on the sidewalk or to license a man with the smallpox to walk down the street—not a bit more.

Some say that it is an infringement of personal liberty but it is not an infringement on our personal liberty to compel us to pay taxes to take care of the mischief that is wrought by the whiskey people in the form of crime bills, maintaining extra police, prisons, poorhouses, madhouses and in caring for neglected families.

Listen to this pathetic incident. Recently two thirds of the inmates of the Eastern State Penitentiary which has a population of 1500, petitioned the State Legislature to prohibit the use of intoxicating beverages. Poor fellows they knew that only for alcohol they would not be there. We talk about the cruelty of the Germans in this dreadful war but are we not just as cruel to compel our young men to run the gauntlet of the saloon knowing well that, while many will escape, that every man will be ruined and not a few killed by it every year? Its ravages are more insidious than war but none the less real.

Listen also to this. Prohibition went into effect in West Virginia, July 1st. Before that time there was an average of twenty cases in the Wheeling Police Court every day. Since then two a day has been the average. There are now just one-third as many inmates in the county jail as formerly and the Board of Control plan to do with one-half the number of prisoners.

When we hear of such cases and when we think how we are burdened with taxes to keep up this dreadful business it makes one wonder if we are not a race of lunatics.

A Model School Fair

A feature of the Nova Scotia Rural Science School, held in Truro during the month of July, was the holding of a model school fair. The teachers played the part of children, providing the exhibits and arranging them in order. The Horticulturist at the Agricultural College provided flowers, which the teachers arranged in bouquets for the decoration of the fair. The exhibits consisted of products of nature and of commerce and included collections of ferns, mosses, grasses, weeds and wild flowers, also insects mounted and displayed in other effective ways. Samples of chemical elements necessary to plant growth were exhibited and properly labelled. A home canning outfit was displayed. Samples of butter from the Agricultural College was shown, as well as the model of a milk pail and strainer recommended for use on the farm, in addition to a Babcock milk tester and a card showing the analysis of milk.

Domestic science pupils displayed axes, cushions, collars, etc., made by themselves. The Manual Training Department furnished games, picture frames, paper racks, and cardboard and brush work. Locally grown garden vegetables and fruits, as well as specimens of poultry were also displayed.

Additional exhibits consisted of samples of Russian hemp grown on the steppes of Russia and rope manufactured therefrom; jute fibre produced in India and twine manufactured from it; raw and manufactured Manila hemp from the Philippine Islands, and samples of sugar in various stages of manufacture. Products of Nova Scotia fisheries and many other articles of interest were also on exhibition.

The fair, which occupied an afternoon, was concluded by a public meeting, addressed by the Superintendent of Education for the Province, the Principal of the Agricultural College, the Principal of the Summer School of Science, and a number of other educationists.

The Dominion Fruit Growers Conference

(Agricultural Gazette.)

The fourth Dominion Conference of the Fruit Growers was held at Grimsby, Ontario, on September 2, 3, and 4th. Some fifty delegates, representing all the Provinces of Canada, were in attendance. The proceedings were directed by Mr. Dan Johnson, Dominion Fruit Commissioner, and under his guidance many important matters pertaining to the welfare of the fruit industry from the Atlantic to the Pacific were thoroughly discussed.

The first day was devoted to a discussion of Transportation as applied to Fruit, which was led by Mr. Geo. E. McIntosh, Traffic Expert of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association; to an examination of the cold storage warehouse, recently erected by the Dominion Government; and to a discussion of the Pre-cooling of Fruit, led by Mr. J. A. Ruidick, the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner. Mr. Ruidick gave an explanation of the Gravity Brine and Mechanical systems of refrigeration, pointing out the more important features of each system. In referring to the Cold Storage Warehouse at Grimsby, the Commissioner stated that the objects in view were to illustrate the Gravity Brine system of Refrigeration; to illustrate and demonstrate the value of pre-cooling of fruit, and that the Cold Storage Branch was now given an opportunity to conduct experiments in the storage, packing and shipping of fruits.

A motor trip through the Niagara Belt provided the programme for the second day of the conference. In this the delegates were joined at St. Catharines by the Honourable Mr. Burrell, the Federal Minister of Agriculture, who evinced a keen appreciation in, and sympathy with, all the problems confronting the fruit grower. A short session was held on the return to Grimsby at which Mr. Burrell delivered an address relative to the fruit-growing industry and the duties devolving upon Canadians in this, the hour of trial, for the Mother Country.

The inspection and Sales Act and the Standardization of packages formed the subjects of discussion on the closing day.

At the conclusion of the conference a number of recommendations were made and resolutions adopted. The following resolutions were passed by the conference.

RESOLUTIONS

That we would recommend that the Dominion Fruit Commissioner make enquiries with a view to suggesting a standard apple box for domestic use.

Whereas the amendments to the Inspection and Sale Act, recently passed, require that all shipments of imported apples should be marked in accordance with the amendments of the Inspection and Sale Act, Part IX, and that other marks inconsistent with the mark specified by the Act shall be erased; and whereas the designation "C" is allowed by the inspectors to be retained on boxes marked by the importers "No. 2," such apples subsequently being sold as "C," which is recognized as equivalent to "Choice;" Be It Therefore Resolved, That we respectfully request the Honourable the Federal Minister of Agriculture to take such steps as are necessary to have this mark, and all marks on imported fruit inconsistent with the provisions of the Act, removed by the importer at point of destination.

Whereas the steamship companies carrying Canadian fruit to the English markets have greatly increased ocean freight rates, and whereas some at least of such companies are subsidized by the Federal Government, and their schedule of freight rates may be controlled by the Government; Be It Therefore Resolved that a committee be appointed at this Conference to confer with the Minister of Trade and Commerce in relation thereto.

Resolved that we respectfully petition our Government that such legal requirements as to size or capacity of fruit packages for Canadian fruit shall apply equally and as rigidly to fruit imported into Canada.

Resolved that all forms used in the manufacture of the standard eleven and six quart baskets shall be inspected by an officer of the Fruit Branch appointed for that purpose, and when conforming with the requirements of the Inspection and Sale Act, Part IX, shall be stamped with a Government stamp, and further that the Inspection and Sale Act, Part IX, shall be amended to make it a legal offence to manufacture from other than stamped forms on and after January the 1st, 1915.

Resolved that this Conference respectfully asks the Department to consider the transportation conditions as explained in Mr. McIntosh's paper, with a view to having the shipping difficulties with which fruit shippers have to contend removed.

Whereas certain countries require, either by law or custom, that fruit imported be contained in packages of stamped "inspected" on each side of various sizes, thereby preventing our exporting in packages other than those they demand; Be It Therefore Resolved that we respectfully ask our Government to legalize exporting in such packages as meet the requirements of the countries with whom we wish to trade.

Resolved that the Department of Agriculture should take the necessary steps to keep Canadian growers closer touch with the importers of fruit, if necessary, by the appointment of special commissioners in Great Britain, Europe, South America, Australia and South Africa; and that the Department should set aside a sum of money for trial shipments on a commercial scale for the development of additional markets.

Resolved that fruit districts in the different provinces shall be divided into sections.

Resolved that a sufficient number of inspectors shall be appointed so that each inspector shall have a certain section under his charge, so that he may be enabled to make at least weekly visits, and when instruction is required to either impart such instruction himself or, when time does not permit, that he be authorized to employ for such purpose and such time as may be required, a competent assistant.

Resolved that in all cases when the pack is not consistent with the Fruit Marks Act, the offender, after receiving not more than one warning, or when it may be deemed advisable by the inspector to allow the offender to grade his fruit down, that on every occasion when the warning is not heeded the full penalty of the law be inflicted, and for every additional offence the fines be inflicted in accordance with the law.

Resolved that all packers and shippers of fruit be compelled to register with the Chief Inspector of the Division in which they reside.

Whereas ever since the coming into force of the Fruit Marks Act there has been a growing desire of some kind of report of the result of inspection which could be used as an assurance to the purchaser that the fruit in that shipment which had been inspected was up to the standard of the Fruit Marks Act; Be It Therefore Resolved that so far as the plan can be worked out without injury to the work of inspection such certificates of inspection be given to shippers requesting same; such certificates to be plainly stamped or printed in such a way to indicate that it only applies to the particular inspected, which may, if found desirable, be stamped "inspected" on each side of various sizes, as seem likely to best serve as an indication that such package has been inspected.

Resolved that this Fourth Dominion Conference desire to express its appreciation of the admirable services rendered the fruit growers of Canada by the late Alexander McNeill, Chief of the Fruit Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, whose untimely passing and capable administration of his office it is desired to record.

Resolved that the Department of Agriculture should take the necessary steps to keep Canadian growers closer touch with the importers of fruit, if necessary, by the appointment of special commissioners in Great Britain, Europe, South America, Australia and South Africa; and that the Department should set aside a sum of money for trial shipments on a commercial scale for the development of additional markets.

Through Europe on the Eve of War

A Record of Personal Experience
LONDON IN WAR TIME

After Mr. Dickinson had sat down Mr. Baker, the British Secretary of the Constance Conference, arose and addressed parliament as follows:

Mr. Allen Baker: I should like to say that I heartily endorse the remarks which have been made by the last two or three speakers. My Hon. friends, the member for York (Mr. Rowntree) has raised a point of very great importance, and it is one which came under my notice little more than an hour ago, when I was addressing a number of workmen whom I employ. I said to them in regard to reservists who had already gone to do what they believed to be their duty, that they would have their positions safeguarded till they returned from performing that duty. Any of them who may be required by the government for service as engineers, as well as others, I stated, would be treated in the same way. I want entirely and heartily to endorse the words of my hon. friend, the member for Cokermouth (Sir Wilfrid Lawson). He has deplored, as I am sure we must all deplore, that the country has been, I suppose, dragged into or forced into this unhappy position, and that in the past might have prevented this war. We have had offers and offers, again and again, from the great nation of Germany, saying that they want to be close friends with us, that they wanted to cultivate our friendship. In supporting the ideas and sentiments expressed by my hon. friends, the member for North St. Pancras (Mr. Dickinson), I believe heartily, from intimate knowledge of the people of Germany, that the mass of them, including many in high station and positions, have been entirely against this war. They have been, and are, friendly to us in this country, but they have been overborne by the military class who are dominating the position, and who have caused this war. They fear, and they fear not without reason, the great Slav population, who are double the number of the Germans and who have been arming and preparing for this conflict for years. To Germany, with enemies right and left, east and west, it is a matter of life and death. They feel that they are in a desperate position, and, if you could realize their position, I think you would see that there is very much to be said for the hasty action they have taken. (Hon. Members: "No, no!") They felt that the only opportunity they possessed was by striking quickly. (Hon. Members: "Oh, oh!") I say that they have been forced into this position. (Hon. Members: "No!") I believe they are entering into this war with deep regret, and certainly, on the part of the masses of the people, with great friendship towards us. I have been pained, most deeply pained, to hear the almost laudatory cheers and to hear sentiments of gladness—almost of joy—that have been expressed by Members on both sides of the House—(Hon. Members: "No, no!")—

The Chairman: I am sure the Hon. Member would not like to make any reflection on the motives of his colleagues in this House.

Mr. A. Baker: If the House will permit me to say so, the impression I gathered was—(Hon. Members: "Withdraw!") I certainly withdraw any imputation against any individual member, but I gathered from the cheers that went up, and they also gave me the impression that many in this House were going into this awful business with a satisfaction. (An Hon. Member: "We are as sorry as you are!")

The Chairman: If aspersions of that kind were made, they might have to be made from two points of view, and that is most undesirable.

Mr. A. Baker: Perhaps I may be permitted to put it this way. In the enthusiasm of loyalty there are expressions often used that make one almost weep with sadness to see with what alacrity we are ready to go and slay—(Hon. Members: "No, no!" and "Sit down!")

The Chairman: I must appeal to the Hon. Member to give other Members of the House the same credit for sincerity which the whole House has always accorded to him.

Mr. A. Baker: I entirely withdraw anything against any Hon. Member, but, having just passed during the last thirty hours through the country where war is about to be waged, and then coming to this country and finding the same thing in our streets, and already almost we see the spirit of "Maffeking." (Hon. Members: "No, no!" "Withdraw!" "Sit down!") That is the impression I have gained, and the point I wish to make is this, that we are entering on one of the most important horrible acts in this and other countries of Europe that will have effects and results that we can in no way at the present moment estimate, war is of such a horrible character with the present weapons and with the machinery of slaughter to mow down men. I do not intend to vote against this war. In entering on this war it should be with feelings of the deepest sadness, and with the prayer that it may soon come to an end, and with the desire that a generous and lasting peace may soon be agreed to.

It was interesting to note the fact that, at the very moment when England was entering upon the war, from many sources came the appeal to Englishmen to be both calm and just.

A specially convened meeting of the National Council of Evangelical Free Churches, held at the Memorial Hall, August 5, adopted the following resolution:

"The crime and horror of a universal war has fallen upon European civilization. It is useless to seek merely to apportion blame. Our first duty is to humble ourselves before God and to wait upon him.

"It is a matter for thankfulness that the efforts of Britain, though unhappily unsuccessful, were put forth strenuously and to the last moment on behalf of peace, and that our intervention has been determined by regard for weaker nations, and for the sanctity of the treaties which safeguard them.

"In these conditions the Council appeals to the Free Churches of this country to realize their high responsibilities and to discharge them faithfully.

"The churches should arrange a service of daily united prayer that the nation may be divinely guided and that peace may speedily be restored.

"The duty rests upon the churches steadily to foster those more generous and humane sentiments which war so ruthlessly destroys.

"The churches should steadily inculcate the duties of self-restraint and mutual consideration. In particular, they must denounce all endeavors to snatch selfish advantages through either greed or panic, and, above all, must emphasize the importance of general sacrifice in the interests of the poor, upon whom the worst hardships of the war threaten to fall.

"The churches must be prepared to co-operate at once with the government and with the civic authorities, in administering to any distress that may arise.

"They must be continually on the watch in order that they may offer, as occasion may arise, counsels of wisdom and moderation."

The following directions for Englishmen appeared in the London papers of August 6 and attracted much attention:

First and foremost.—Keep your heads. Be calm. Go about your ordinary business quietly and soberly. Do not indulge in excitement or foolish demonstrations.

Secondly.—Think of others more than you are wont to do. Think of your duty to your neighbor. Think of the common weal.

Try to contribute your share by doing your duty in your own place and your own sphere. Be abstemious and economical. Avoid waste.

Do not store goods and create an artificial scarcity to the hurt of others. Remember that it is an act of mean and selfish cowardice.

Do not hoard gold. Let it circulate. Try to make things easier, not more difficult.

you owe, especially to your poorest creditors, such as washerwomen and charwomen.

If you are an employer think of your employed. Give them work and wages as long as you can, and work short time rather than close down.

If you are employed remember the difficulties of your employer. Instead of dwelling on your own privations, think of the infinitely worst state of those who live at the seat of war and are not only known out of work but deprived of all they possess.

Do what you can to cheer and encourage our soldiers. Gladly help any organization for their comfort and welfare.

Explain to the young and ignorant what war is, and why we have been forced to wage it.

One of the finest utterances on peace we have ever seen was the Message of Friends "to men and women of good-will," which has already been printed in The Christian Work. FREDERICK LYNCH.

The Seven Wonders of the Modern World

The contest which the Scientific American conducted about a year ago, with the object of ascertaining what are the ten greatest inventions of our time—inventions, in other words, which have been commercially introduced within the last twenty-five years, seems to have inspired the European press with the idea of conducting similar inquiries. The Berliner Lokalanzeiger recently asked its readers "What are the seven wonders of the modern world?" thereby bringing down upon itself a veritable avalanche of replies. No less than 151,764 readers of the paper were heard from, each having promptly reacted with seven answers.

The result of the contest is illuminating, not because it definitely establishes what are the seven wonders of the modern world, but how great is the power of publicity, how representative is the general public to the influence of the press. For example 17,148 votes were cast for wireless telegraphy; 16,259 for the Panama Canal; 12,828 for the flying machine; 11,428 for applications of radium; 11,296 for the moving picture machine; and 6,276 for the steamship "Imperator." All of these have received much publicity. Wireless telegraphy is placed in the first rank by less than one eighth of all the votes. Apparently 134,616 contestants either never heard of Marconi and his achievements, or did not consider wireless of much importance.

In commenting upon the psychological aspects of this contest, a writer in Prometheus, the well-known German scientific periodical, points out that the voters were not able to bring forward the necessary proof that a single one of their selections is a world wonder in the accepted sense. It would not have been too much to ask that all the 151,764 voters should have agreed upon at least one modern wonder. If there is one supreme modern achievement, surely all would have noted it.

Even assuming that seven modern wonders were to be enumerated, and that accordingly there is more than one really great wonder, it may be further assumed that 151,764 voters would be cast for at least two or three achievements. But even wireless telegraphy, which received the most votes, was not elected to its position with the usual majority of votes; only one-eighth of all the votes were cast for wireless.

The writer in Prometheus examined the psychological side of this contest by classifying the wonders according to their nature. He finds that they fall into three classes:

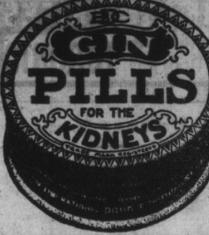

- a. Scientific discoveries, such as wireless telegraphy and the application of radium.
- b. Pure inventions such as the dirigible balloon, the flying machine, and the moving picture machine.
- c. Remarkable structures, such as the Panama Canal and the steamship "Imperator."

How do the 151,764 voters estimate the relative merits of these wonders in their particular classes? The selection of wireless telegraphy by 17,148 people must be at once commended on this basis, despite the paucity of votes. On the other hand, the Panama Canal has received almost as many votes. Conceding that the Panama Canal is really a noteworthy achievement, still it must be admitted that the success of the achievement depended in large measure upon unlimited financial resources. The same applies to the "Imperator." Moreover, the "Imperator" has been exceeded in size by the "Vaterland" will probably be exceeded in the future by still other vessels. Admitting that the Panama Canal and a giant ship are wonderful in their way, they are not world wonders in the true sense of the term. Hence their selection must be attributed to the great publicity which they have received and therefore to a kind of mob suggestion.

What remains? Radio-active investigations in the field of pure science, the airship, the flying machine and the moving picture machine in the field of technology. This would seem to indicate that technology is able to offer more world wonders than any other form of human activity. This again, in view of the publicity given to great inventions and the part they play in daily life, is to be expected. After all, but very few people in the world have anything like a profound knowledge of scientific problems. How little does the average person know of the wonders of the microscope, astronomy, spectroscopic analysis, chemistry, or physics, or for that matter, even of surgery? Surely the work of an investigator like Sir J. J. Thomson, the investigations of a Wasserman or an Ehrlich, deserve to be mentioned with the great work of great inventors. If we are to regard the Panama Canal as a world wonder, simply because it is big, we might also speak with the same fervor of the Key West Railroad, the great suspension bridges that hang over the East River, the Woolworth Building, and similar engineering work.

The contest did not reveal what are the seven wonders of the modern world, but it did reveal that 151,764 persons could not agree upon a single human achievement which deserved to outrank all others.

Stomach Troubles Quickly Cured

People go on suffering from little stomach troubles for years, and imagine they have a serious disease. They overeat or over-drink, and force on the stomach a lot of extra work, but they never think that the stomach needs extra help to do the extra work.

If these people would take Tonoline Tablets regularly they would be a great big help to the stomach in its strain of over-work. No matter what you eat or drink Tonoline Tablets sweetens your sour stomach and stop gas belching in five minutes. The heaviness disappears, and the stomach is greatly aided in its work of digestion.

TONOLINE TABLETS not only promptly relieves all distress, but if taken regularly will absolutely cure indigestion by building up the flabby, overworked walls of the stomach and make them strong enough to digest the most hearty meal in 50 days' treatment. Training Royal Horses

One of the most interesting sights in London is the training of the horses used by the royal household. Every morning at about eleven o'clock a procession, headed by two chestnut horses in charge of grooms, followed by a detachment of guards with their bands playing vigorously, and a strong force of police, leaves St James Palace, proceeding through the park to the guards' headquarters at Buckingham Palace. The two chestnut horses are the chief sources of interest, for this is their daily lesson in fine deportment. Some days they will figure proudly, with their parents and they are being taught to conduct themselves with becoming dignity and quietness. To test them thoroughly and make them accustomed to sounds, chosen drummers from the various guards' bands beat fiercely on their drums, while the pipers pipe their shrillest notes. At first the horses are nervous and rather unruly, but after a few weeks become used to the music and pay no attention to it.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1914

The Canadian Red Cross Society was organized in 1896, and assisted by its benevolent work in the Boer war. In 1905 it was incorporated by Act of Parliament. At present it is promoting branches throughout Canada with a view to the increase of its usefulness in the present war. The President of the Society is Colonel George Sterling Ratersan, and on the roll of membership are many prominent Canadians. Some of these are Life Members by a contribution of $25.00, and others are members by an annual donation of $1.00. Persons wishing to join the Society or to donate necessary materials are requested, where there is no local committee to address the Treasurer, Colonel Hon. James Mason, Senator, 77 King Street East, Toronto.

It is believed that in a short time there will be, on a very conservative estimate, as many as 400,000 sick connected with the armies now in the field. A little consideration will show how much will be needed for their comfort, as they succumb to wounds and disease, or are assisted back to health and vigor. Let us not forget that the sick and wounded men among the allies have been fighting our battles. Duty demands, as well as gratitude, that we take a willing part in this supply work. The efforts of the Society will, however, not be confined to the needs of the allies. All sick and wounded, irrespective of nationality become non-combatants, and are objects of charity and commiseration.

At the least, Canada will send 50,000 men to the front. To provide for sickness, accident and disease, the Government will send with them 2090 beds, medical officers, nurses, orderlies, drivers and cooks to the number of 1100, with the regular and official supplies. In addition, the Canadian Red Cross Society will forward large quantities of reserve and supplementary stores, which will be under the direct control of the officers commanding the Canadian Hospitals. The catalogue enumerates nearly one hundred different kinds of articles, some of which are supplied by the thousand, for the comfort and encouragement of the sick and wounded.

A number of the ladies of the town have constituted themselves into an auxiliary society, and are meeting on Thursdays. They will be glad to have other ladies to join them, and to receive contributions of money or goods.

The Scientific American has been speculating upon the issues of the war, and expresses the opinion that the armies of the allies, together with the reserves upon which they may call, are about twice as many as the Germans and Austrians can summon to their aid. Therefore, unless some very unexpected and unlikely occurrence gives the final victory to the Germans, the allies by the force of their superior numbers must win.

The figures given are as follows: Germany has a standing army of 800,000, trained reservists 3,200,000, and untrained reservists 3,000,000. Austria has a standing army of 473,000, trained reservists 1,347,000, and untrained reservists 2,700,000. This makes a total for Germany and Austria of 5,500,000.

Great Britain has a standing army of 156,000, trained reservists 477,000, and probably, with territorial forces, 3,500,000 untrained reservists. France has a standing army of 727,000, trained reservists 3,151,000, and untrained reservists 1,620,000. Russia has a standing army of 1,284,000, trained reservists 4,678,000, and untrained reservists 5,500,000. This makes a total for the allies of about 10,500,000. It is to be devoutly hoped that all these men will not be called to engage in actual warfare.

To withdraw so many from productive labor would mean certain starvation for multitudes left at home. But, both parties are very determined, and no man is wise enough to foresee what numbers will be called to follow those already in the field. The already unanimous opinion of all the nations outside of Germany and Austria is that military despotism, as represented especially in Germany must cease if the nations are to advance along the lines of liberty and universal brotherhood.

Town Council

The regular monthly meeting of the Town Council of the Town of Bridgetown was called by His Worship the Mayor, and held pursuant to written notice given each councillor by the Clerk at least twenty-four hours before such meeting in the council chamber on Monday evening the 2nd day of November A. D. 1914 at 7.30 o'clock, with Mayor Freeman in the chair and councillors present as follows:—Chas. R. Chipman, J. Harry Hicks, Louis Brooks, E. A. Hicks and S. F. Pratt.

Ordered that the following bills be paid:—Perry Burns on Street and Water account, $11.25; F. O. Harris, services as Poll Clerk; Joseph H. McLean, labor and material on water works, $10.15.

Resolved that the account of Owen Currell for gravel on streets, $28.90, be paid at $25.00.

Resolved that the Town Clerk be and he is hereby authorized to issue town cheques to Caleb Veinot, at the end of each week, on account of his contract for digging and filling in the water trench at the extension on Granville Street West, until the work is finished.

Resolved that the Clerk be authorized and he is hereby authorized to order from The Mueller Manufacturing Company, of Sarnia, Ontario, one dozen service boxes for water works, according to sample sent.

Resolved that the Clerk be and he is hereby authorized to pay the deficit on hand stand account, amounting to the sum of $12.95, by town cheque.

His Worship the Mayor brought before the Council the matter of a contribution from the town to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and gave a report of the proceedings of the joint committee from the three towns and the County, whereby it had been suggested that the total sum to be given by the Municipalities, should be $7,500.00, and that the County give $4,500.00 and each of the three towns, namely, Annapolis, Middleton and Bridgetown, $1000.00 each.

Moved by Councillor E. A. Hicks and seconded by J. W. Peters that a public meeting of the ratepayers of the Town of Bridgetown be called under section 143 of the Town's Incorporation Act and amendments thereto on Monday the 23rd day of November instant, at 7.30 o'clock, in the Council Chamber, to vote upon the question of a proposed expenditure of a sum of money not to exceed the sum of one thousand dollars, as a contribution from the Town of Bridgetown to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and that the Clerk give the necessary notices required by said act.

Minutes read and approved and the council adjourned.

Hallowe'en Party

Notwithstanding most inclement weather, the Hallowe'en Party on Saturday evening in aid of the Riverside Cemetery, was a very pleasant one. The Grand Central is an ideal place for such an entertainment and with the various Hallowe'en decorations, witches, owls, black cats, etc., draped about windows, walls and ceilings, the whole place presented a most weird and attractive appearance. Contributions of fancy work, home cooking, farm produce, etc., were for sale during the afternoon in the parlors and hall, supper being served later in the dining room.

During the evening an interesting programme was rendered in which owls, spoons and witches played prominent parts. The whole affair was most enjoyable for such as were able to be present and in spite of such unfavorable weather conditions, was a success financially as well, adding some $70 to the fund for current expenses of our cemetery. It was gratifying to learn during the afternoon that the sum of $100 had also been contributed to the "perpetual care fund" by our former townsman, L. S. Morse, Esq., Inspector of Schools, the interest of which goes to the care of his lot in Riverside Cemetery. It would be well were all lot owners, who are in a position to do so, to follow this example. In 1913 the company were able to take up one of our town bonds of $500 with funds contributed in this way and the directors hope to take another $500 before the close of 1914. Could lot owners arrange to put by this amount annually for a few years, we would soon place our cemetery on an independent basis and feel that the care of the place where our dead are laid is assured.

The company wish to thank the Band and all others who so cheerfully helped in making the Hallowe'en party a success, and particularly they are thankful to those who opened for them the doors of the Grand Central.

Public Meeting at Granville Centre re Patriotic Fund

A public meeting to discuss the feasibility of collecting the County share of the Canadian Patriotic Fund by taxation, was held in the hall at Granville Centre on Friday evening, Oct. 23rd.

On the platform with the chairman, Mr. John McCormick and the Secretary Mr. F. R. Troop, were Mayor Atlee, of Annapolis-Royal and Mayor Freeman, of Bridgetown, members of the Provisional Committee, while a large audience including quite a number of ladies occupied the body of the hall.

Mayor Freeman was first called upon and gave briefly, but very clearly, an interesting explanation of the Patriotic Fund, its purpose, etc. Mayor Atlee next addressed the meeting with a further explanation of the proposed plan and his reasons for thinking taxation the best and most equitable method of collection.

Quite a lot of discussion followed. Councillor Withers and a number of other gentlemen spoke in favor of the suggested taxation and a resolution endorsing the scheme, moved by Mr. John Wade and seconded by Mr. H. A. Goodwin, carried unanimously.

Mayor Freeman and Mayor Atlee received from the whole audience a hearty vote of thanks to which each gentleman made a suitable response. The meeting then closed with singing "God Save the King."

It must be added that the speech of Mayor Atlee, apart from its able explanation and argument, was a stirring and eloquent patriotic discourse, giving great pleasure to all present, everyone going from the meeting more eager than ever to do all possible to assist our Empire in defence of national honor, freedom and democracy against armed oppression.

A Million Hides

As an indication of the tremendous size of the automobile industry, it is interesting to note that in one year approximately 1,000,000 hides are used for upholstery purposes. The ordinary roadster body requires more than two complete hides, and the touring body about three hides. The average car, therefore, is two and a half hides. The average area per hide is about fifty square feet, so that 50,000,000 square feet of leather is used. From the time the hide is stripped from the animal it requires from ten weeks to six months completely to prepare it for use, the time varying with the quality of the leather. Each hide is split into four grades, which are known as hand buff, machine buff, deep buff and split. The hand buff is the best and is the part nearest the hair. This is the quality that is most used in the best motor car factories---Scientific American.

PART OF THE TREATMENT.

After being treated by a specialist for a month the stout personage anxious to reduce his bulk received his bill. He gasped; hastened to the doctor and arrived in great perspiration.

"Doctor, doctor!" he exclaimed breathlessly, "this bill is as big as I am. I haven't lost an ounce."

"Tut, tut," replied the specialist slyly; "the bill is part of the treatment. I see it has made you perspire."

VANITY.

There is a stirring of the spirit captive in the worn mesh of the body. People are breaking down under the tyranny of material possessions. There was never a time when woman's intelligence was so eager and inspirational; never a time when men were so weary of metal and meals and miles. It is all clear to a prophetic understanding that we are nearing the end of our lessons in three dimensions and five senses. Will Lovin'eta Comfort.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., June 20th, 1913. "I really believe that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives'. Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old stomach trouble and distressing headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS. "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The Day

(By Henry Chappell, in the "Daily Express.")

(The author of this magnificent poem is Mr. Henry Chappell, a railway porter at Bath, Mr. Chappell is known to his comrades as the "Bath Railway Poet." A poem such as this lifts him to the rank of a national poet.)

You boasted "The Day," and you toasted the Day, And now the Day has come. Blasphemer, bargainer and coward all.

Little you reck of the numbing fall, The blasting shell, or the "white arm's" fall, As they speed poor humans home.

You spied for the Day, you lied for the Day, And woke the Day's red spleen. Monster, who asked God's aid Divine, Then strewed His seas with the ghastly mine;

Not all the waters of the Rhine Can wash thy foul hands clean. You dreamed for the Day, you schemed for the Day;

Watch how the Day will go. Slayer of age and youth and prime (Detectless slain for never a crime) Thou art steeped in blood as in a slime, False friend and cowardly foe.

You have sown for the Day, you have grown for the Day; Yours is the harvest reed. Can you hear the groans and the awful cries? Can you see the heap of slain that And eightless turned to the flame-split skies?

The glassy eyes of the dead? You have wronged for the Day, you have hazed for the Day That lit the awful flame. 'Tis nothing to you that hill and plain Yield swaves of dead men amid the grain;

That wailing mourn for their loved ones slain, But after the Day there's a price to pay And mothers curse their name. But after the Day there's a price to pay For the sleepers under the sod And He who have mocked for many a day—

Listen, and hear what He has to say: "Vengeance is Mine, I Will Repay." What can you say to Go? Britain's Word

'Tis not for land we fight, A mightier domain; 'Tis not for fame we strive, A place in Glory's march; 'Tis not in hate we march, Glutting our souls with pain.

Refrain. 'Tis for our word we stand, The word of Britain given; The East and the West, The North and the South, Till the end of time, 'Tis for our word we stand.

Through terror of the air, Its giant birds of prey; Through terror of the land, Where fateful lightning's play; Through terror of the sea, The battle's pelting spray; 'Tis for our word we stand.

Refrain. Till the land's without a roof, The sea without a sail; Till the strength of man is spent, And the faith of woman fail; Till the sun withdraws his light, And the stars of heaven pale; Refrain. 'Tis for our word we stand.

Are You Run Down?

Nervous, tired, have no self confidence, afraid something is going to happen without any reason for thinking so; don't sleep nights—

ATE AND WAS SAD

Yet It Was a Dish For Which He Had Yearned For Years.

A TRAGEDY IN GASTRONOMY.

Bouillabaisse as Sung by Thackeray and as Served in a Famous Marseilles Resort Proved Very Different Propositions to an English Epicure.

We all know that famous poem of Thackeray which begins, "A street there is in Paris famous For which no rhyme our language yields, and goes on to tell of the tavern where the genial Timarsh in the days when he was a Paris correspondent "ate and drank the bouillabaisse."

My opportunity came not long ago when I visited Marseilles. It was nearly half past 9 when I sat down in the dining room of the hotel.

"There is no bouillabaisse on the menu," I said severely to the maitre d'hotel. "I have come to Marseilles specially to eat it." He replied that it was not a specialty of the house, but that it could always be prepared. How long would it take? "Twenty-five minutes, perhaps a little longer."

"But I think monsieur would find it rather heavy at such a late hour." He was not encouraging, this maitre d'hotel. I did not accept for a moment his suggestion that bouillabaisse was too heavy a dish for half past 9 at night. Thackeray had not talked about heaviness. But twenty-five minutes I ordered an omelet.

At midnight, walking down the famous boulevards, back to the hotel, I was hailed by a familiar voice. It was that of a friend whom I had not seen for a long time. Gratefully I grasped his hand and told him that I intended to eat bouillabaisse as soon as possible. And my respect for him was considerably enhanced when he told me that he had eaten some that very afternoon, an hour after his arrival in Marseilles.

There are, as everybody knows, two places at Marseilles for bouillabaisse—Pascals and Basso's, on the Vieux Port. We decided on Basso's.

"That's bouillabaisse," he said, "but it's not mine." I started. This bouillabaisse, this curious looking stuff, with indigestible looking lumps of fish floating in a bilious and oily saffron liquid! I know not what I had expected bouillabaisse to be, but it certainly was not this. There was a piece of fish which I recognized as eel, and I loathe eels.

The broad tail of another and unknown fish stuck up out of the opaque liquid. But it was the yellow liquid itself which repelled. It shouted biliousness, and the smell of saffron that rose with the steam made me feel ill. Oh, Thackeray!

I pecked at the eel—or it may have been a lamprey—explored the various other fish, tasted gingerly of the thick saffron liquid on one of the pieces of toast that floated in it. But mine was the waiter, take the mess away and bring lamb cutlets.

But I had tasted of bouillabaisse and was not to forget it. All day long the terrible taste of saffron remained with me. Nothing would shift it; not Marseilles tea, nor many golden loaves, nor dinner. In fact, the bouillabaisse of lunch spoiled the dinner. And at midnight, in a cafe on the Cannebiere, my friend confided a secret to me. "When we fell in with each other just twenty-four hours ago," he said, "I was suffering just as you are now. The horrible taste of saffron had remained obstinately with me ever since lunch and has not quite gone even yet. But you told me you had come to Marseilles to eat bouillabaisse, and I knew nothing I could say would dissuade you. But no doubt the bitterness of this moment will fade away, and as time passes you will tell your friends in England how excellent is the real bouillabaisse if only you have it in Marseilles."

"Never! I would die first!" I exclaimed firmly.—London Standard.

Africa's Pygmy Antelope. The pygmy antelope of the Gold Coast of Africa is the smallest of end chewing animals. It stands about ten inches high at the withers—that is about as high as a fox terrier. The antelope has minute horns that run straight back in the line of the forehead. The pygmy antelope was described in 1705 by the Dutch traveler Bosman, who, in his "Description of Guinea," says that it is called the "king of the harts" by the natives. By English writers it is often called the "royal antelope."

War Crapules College Work. Work in several departments of the university will be seriously held up because it is impossible to secure shipments of goods from Germany. Prof. Squair said the other night that practically the entire supply of chemicals and other equipment used in the departments of chemistry and physical science are obtained from Germany, and, as these had not arrived before the outbreak of war, it will now be impossible to secure them this year. It is possible that American firms can provide substitutes for these materials and equipment, but all the American colleges will be affected.

AN UNLUCKY BRIG.

Once Abandoned, the Marie Celeste Came to a Bad End.

There are few people who have not heard of the case of the American brig Marie Celeste, which in 1872 was inexplicably abandoned in calm weather off the Azores by a crew never after heard from. Few, however, know that it ended its career many years later at the hands of the hurricane.

On its last voyage it cleared from Boston for Port au Prince, Haiti, ostensibly with a cargo of valuable general merchandise, insured for $30,000. When within a few miles of its destination it went ashore near Miragoane and became a total wreck. The captain, Parker, promptly sold the cargo, eight unseen, to American Consul Mitchell for $500. Mitchell saved it at some trouble, but lived to wish he hadn't.

When the underwriters' agent arrived on the scene he investigated, he found several funny things about the cargo. One case shipped as cutlery and insured for $1,000 contained dog collars worth $50. Barrels supposed to contain expensive liquors were full of worthless dregs, a consignment of salt fish insured for $5,000 was rotten, and other articles mentioned in the bill of lading proved to be nothing.

Consul Mitchell, I am sure, was duped, but going to the order of his pack. The captain of the brig was tried in the United States district court in Boston, convicted and sentenced to a long term in prison, where he died three months later.—David A. Wasson in Outing Magazine.

PRIDE OF THE UGLY CLUB. He Was the Prize Member of an Old New York Organization. In the New York Evening Post of May 11, 1914, appeared the following notice:

UGLY CLUB. Ugly brothers, hither fly. With you bring the varying eye—Bring here cock eyes and eyes askew That cannot pass one tender glance. Bring glasses, eyes and piercers, too; Bring eyes green, white, red, black and blue. Bring with you the eagle's sight. Be sure your heart and keep it right. But more that's in your brother's eye. The members of the Ugly club are directed to attend a special meeting at Ugly hall, 4 Wall street, on Thursday evening, the 12th inst., at 7 o'clock, to take into consideration the propriety of bestowing some suitable mark of distinction on a member who lately while viewing himself in the secretary's ugly mirror was so much pleased with his own ugly phiz that he involuntarily let fall the glass, which was dashed to pieces, and exclaimed, "I shall yet be president of the club!"

The attorney for a street railroad company in a Kentucky town was examining a skinny sixteen-year-old negro boy who had sued for injuries ostensibly incurred in a collision on the highway.

"You say," he asked, "that when this street car hit that wagon you were riding on the front seat of the wagon?" "That's what I said," answered the little darty.

"And you say the force of the blow knocked you up in the air?" "Yas, sub—way up in de air."

"Well, how long did you stay up there?" demanded the attorney. "Not no longer dan it tuck me to get down!" answered the truthful complainant promptly.—Saturday Evening Post.

Rays From a Searchlight. The paths traversed by rays from a searchlight depend on the form of curvature of the mirror. If flat, the paths of reflected rays would be the same as those of the rays received; if the arc of a circle, the rays will be reflected to one bright focus. To have a band of parallel rays leave the mirror it must be the arc of a parabola. The straight rays will be reflected all parallel to each other. In air, the intensity of this beam of light would diminish, but in absolute vacuum would be as intense as any distance.—New York American.

The Right Word. "Why do you speak of him as a finished artist?" "Because he said he was utterly discouraged and was going to quit the profession. If that doesn't show that he's finished I don't know what does."—Chicago Post.

A Hint to the Least of Us. The smallest bird cannot light upon the greatest tree without sending a shock to its most distant leaf. Every mind is at times no less sensitive to the most trifling words.—Law Wallace.

Many In Crop Competitions. Ontario farmers have little to fear from war-time depression, according to the annual report of the agricultural societies. The outlook for the year is considered especially good and conditions of agricultural progress are referred to frequently. One of the foremost features of the present year will be the standing field crop competitions in which more than 3,500 farmers are participating, and which require 100 judges to supervise. Already prize money to the extent of $1,200 has been arranged for awards at the larger provincial shows.

Superintendent J. Lockie Wilson stated the other day as an example of the improvement in quality of the grain and how it was working to the advantage of the grower, the case of a farmer who had carried off several prizes. He wrote the department to say that out of his bonus money had the increased price received for his product he was trying to get a new brick house. The department considers this a vindication of their policy. The floor space asked at the large provincial exhibitions this fall is an large acre as that of 1913.

MANY TRAGEDIES EVERY YEAR DUE TO ANIMALS.

Ninety Per Cent, However, Are Only Indirectly Due to the Rapacity of the Wolves — Scared Settler Climbs a Tree and the Cold Gets Him — How Woodsman Saved Foreigners.

Almost every winter wolf-tragedies of some sort or another take place in various parts of Canada, though the details concerning them do not generally become known far beyond the locality where they occur, says H. Mortimer Batten in The Montreal Standard. The report that the wolf is sufficient for the reader of the daily newspapers in Toronto or Montreal or Winnipeg, and woodsmen are usually somewhat reticent in filling in lurid details concerning the fate of a brother pioneer.

Probably ninety per cent. of the wolf tragedies that occur in the settlements, however, are only indirectly due to wolves. The belated woodsman hears the howl of a single wolf on the trail behind him, and the sound, enhanced by the echoes, resembles the full chorus of a woodland choir. Possibly no wolves have been heard in the district for some years, and the woodsman becomes frightened by the unaccustomed and eerie sound and climbs a tree. Here the cold takes possession of him before he is aware of this far more potent peril. Finally he becomes dazed and falls. The wolves find his remains, and the marks left behind in the snow furnish the condemning proof.

Now, in a country where wolves are heard regularly, a woodsman is afraid of the wolves. As the country becomes more settled the deer gradually return, and following closely on their heels come the grey prowl of the northern solitudes.

Woodsmen in Quebec and New Brunswick seem to be far more afraid of wolves than their comrades in Central and Western Canada. Probably this is due to nervous superstition on the part of the French Canadians, and, consequently, more wolf tragedies occur in that province. The following narrative goes to prove how easily panic in the face of imagined danger may be followed by disaster.

Five years ago a party of foreigners were traveling along the old Moose Factory trail in broad daylight, when they suddenly heard a pack of wolves bearing down the lake margin straight towards them. The whole party, with the exception of the forest ranger, who was piloting them, at once gave way to panic, four or five men attempting to climb one tree, and tramping each other under foot in their frantic attempts. The ranger, greatly alarmed, stood looking on, watching his rifle ready, and when the wolves appeared he fired into the middle of the bunch and scattered them. It was some time, however, before he could induce the foreigners to return to terra firma, though the cold was so severe that they could not have lived for long in the timber by the wind-swept margin of the lake. Imagine what might have followed had not these ignorant aliens been accompanied by a competent woodsman!

The following year a party of Scandinavians were walking in a single file along the same trail, when the front man, on looking round, was horrified to see a single dog wolf, wagging its tail and seeming like a dog creeping up behind the rear man. The leader at once raised the alarm and hurried his axe, at which the wolf turned sullenly and loped away, apparently not greatly alarmed. One of the men mistook it for a dog which had followed them from camp.

A Labrador missionary told me a curious story which occurred on the Labrador coast some years ago. One night the little daughter of a certain settler accompanied the mother and the child's tracks in the snow, a party of squaws set out to look for her. What was their alarm, when, a little way from the camp, they found that the footprints of a great grey wolf accompanied those of the child. The brute did not appear to have harmed her, but had apparently frisked along ahead, enticing the child farther and farther from camp. In all probability the child mistook it for a dog and followed readily, though the superstitious Indians, of course, believed that the brute had exercised some devilish influence over her. Darkness was creeping on, and, though much afraid, the squaws continued to follow the tracks of the wolf and the child. Night found them far from home, when what was their horror to find that they themselves had been deceived, and were now surrounded by wolves! Only one squaw survived the night of horror that ensued, to return next morning to bear tidings of the calamity to camp.

An Indian of the Fishing Lake Reserve, Saskatchewan, told me that in his boyhood a trader named Cobet was surrounded by wolves within a mile of the Indian encampment, and that the wolves devoured his dogs and dragged the load of caribou meat from his sled. The trader himself barely survived the night of horror that ensued, to return next morning to bear tidings of the calamity to camp.

From Ottawa comes the story of an elderly man who went into a barber shop and asked to have his grayish hair dyed black so that he might be accepted as a volunteer and be sent to the war.

There's a real patriot. He is willing to dye for his country.

Kidneys Wrong? If they are you are in danger. When the kidneys fail to filter the impurities from the blood, troubles come on apace. Backache, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gravel, Diabetes, Gout, Dropsy and the deadly Bright's Disease are some of the results of neglected kidneys. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills contain a most effective diuretic which strengthens and stimulates the kidneys, and stimulates the system thoroughly and well. Try Dr. Morse's.

Bear Attacks Truro Couple. While driving to Clifton, N.S., one evening recently, Mr. C. E. Matallat and his wife, while near the farm of W. D. McCurdy, were started by the carriage wheel striking some object in the roadway, which seemed to be a dog or sheep. They were, however, soon undeceived, when a very badly ruffled young Bruin, who had evidently chosen the centre of the road for his bed, attempted to get into the carriage to get even with the disturbers of his slumbers. It was only after a strenuous use of his whip on the young Bruin's back that he was kept at bay long enough to make a rapid getaway from his vicinity. The occupants of the carriage were considerably scared at their unexpected adventure.

Warped Against Coffee. Once upon a time people wanted state wide prohibition of coffee. In his book, "London to English Literature," Percy E. Boynton says of the old coffee houses: "As the number of them increased broadsides appeared against them. One was entitled 'The Woman's Petition Against Coffee,' and it asserted that coffee drinking encouraged idling and idleness, and led men to trifle away their time, saddle their chops and spend their money, all for a little black, thick, nasty, bitter, nauseous puddle water."

OBITUARY

EVERETT A. HEALEY.
At Denver, Colorado, Oct. 10th, 1914, Everett A. Healey passed peacefully away at the age of 37 years. He was the eldest son of Norman and Helen Healey, of Port Lorne. In early manhood he went to the States and there married Winifred, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Baltzer, of Douglasville. Owing to failing health, six years ago last January with his wife he went to Colorado in the hope that health and strength would be restored, but allwise Providence willed it otherwise. Being a man in the prime of life with prospects of a happy and prosperous career and possessing genius for attainment and achievement, it was not an easy trial to accept the call to leave all. He realized the inevitable result of his long illness with remarkable fortitude and expressed himself as ready and prepared to go. It is a matter of deep joy to know that his acceptance of the true Christian experience was helpful to him in his last moments.

ELLIOTT-HEALEY.
(St. Croix Courier, N. B., Sept. 24.)
A fair young maiden and a manly young man standing before a popular clergyman formed the centre of an interesting group in the home of a leading citizen yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Healey on Elm street at four o'clock and the officiating clergyman was Rev. W. C. Goucher, D. D., pastor of the Union Street Baptist Church. The principals were their daughter, Miss Jean Steadman Healey, and Malcolm Robertson Elliott, M. D., of Wolfville, N. S. They had been students together at Acadia, graduating in the class of '08. The young man entered Harvard Medical School, graduating in 1912. The young lady qualified as a librarian at the Simmonds College in Boston and was afterwards employed as librarian at Acadia College. Then Cupid won in the game that he had been playing with two hearts for some time, and the ceremony on Wednesday afternoon resulted.

Our Seed Supply For 1915

That Canada's supply of seed for turnips and other forage plants which has come from France and Germany will be cut off as a result of the war and that the Maritime Farmers should endeavor to produce a portion of the supply were among the interesting and significant statements recently made to the press by M. O. Malte, who has charge of the Forage Plants Branch of the Dominion Experimental Farms Service. Dr. Malte was recently in the Maritime Provinces on a tour of inspection in connection with his department. He believes that not only to carry on this work, but that it will prove a profitable venture for the farmers. "Canada has been importing seed for forage plants, including field roots, from France and Germany each year to the extent of 900,000 lbs. of mangels and 130,000 lbs. of turnips," said Dr. Malte, "and next year none will be available from those countries. This war therefore will teach a striking lesson in this regard to our farmers; it shows them that they must not be dependent upon Europe for their supply. The Maritime Provinces is the place Canada looks to for their supply of these seeds and as soon as the farmers realize the opportunity that is before them they will take hold of the proposition enthusiastically." "Dr. Malte believes that much good can come from the establishment of Turnip Seed Growers' Associations. The first has just been formed at Yarmouth, N. S., and he has been addressing one of their meetings. In Finland as far back as 1910 there were fifty-two such associations, he pointed out, and these farmers are successfully growing seed under much less favorable conditions than the Maritime Provinces offer." "The Yarmouth Turnip Seed Growers have been most successful in their work. We have personally used some of their 'Corning' turnip seed and found it highly satisfactory. The uniformity of the roots grown from the seed we sowed would lead us to believe that particular care had been exercised in the selection of the roots from which the seed had been grown and further the seed was thoroughly acclimated to Maritime conditions. If the Yarmouth farmers can grow turnip seed so successfully and sell the seed at a price in advance of the current market price on other varieties of turnip seed there is no reason why more of our farmers could not engage in this profitable industry."
