"My blade buried itself in the side of the basket."

THE HELMET OF NAVARRE

A fascinating tale of love and adventure. Now appearing in one of the great metropolitan dailies. The story that "caught" the city of New York.

With a cry Monsieur sprang toward me. "You lie you cur!"

The Helmet of Navarre

Will Be Published in This Territory Exclusively By THE EVENING TIMES.
The Opening Chapters Will Be Given

SATURDAY,
MAY 5.

"Well Caught!" cried Vigo.

This narrative deals with the strenuous time of France during the fifteenth century, and is of exciting interest from start to finish. You will applaud the courage and determination of the young nobleman Etienne de Mar who strives to retain the love of his sweetheart Lorraine and yet remain true to his cause.

You will cheer the efforts of the plucky lad Felix who risks his life in numerous adventures for the sake of his master.

You will sympathize with the charming Lorraine, sorrowful in the enemy's camp, separated by fate from the one she loves.

You will despise the traitor Lucas and hiss at his cowardly efforts to kill the Count de Mar and press his suit upon the unhappy lady.

To miss this story is to throw away the literary treat of a lifetime. Not a story in years has met with such popular favor, nor touched the heart strings of so many thousands.

Don't fail to absorb the opening installment of this famous story, commencing Saturday, May 5th.

"I dared not deny him further!"

THE YACHTSMEN

When the ice goes out of the river, and the trees along the road to Millidgeville begin to thrust new buds into the May sunshine, thoughts of yachting days come to those who love the smiling waters and the lovely shores of the St. John and its tributary lakes.

The Royal Kamboocan Yacht Club has named its racing dates for the season, and soon the pleasant headquarters in Massey Hall will lose their charm, and give place to the lure of the river. There is promise of quite a number of new boats at Millidgeville, and the most interesting season in the club's history.

BRAINS AND BEER

There appears to be some danger that Germany will relapse into barbarism. This is to be regretted, for the world owes much to Germany. Her splendid educational institutions have attracted students from all parts of the world.

And then there is the Kaiser. The world would not be the same world without that striking figure and that oracular voice, throwing tautness into panic by the magic of a phrase or the splendor of a warlike conception.

Nevertheless, Germany is threatened with decadence. Her educational system has been the real source of her greatness among the nations, and it is at this source she is now attacked, not by a foreign foe, but by a grasping parliament.

IS NOT DISCOURAGED

The Business Men's Tariff Reform League of Massachusetts, which has over 1,000 members, leading business men, with Ex-Gov. Douglas as president, is still hopeful of reciprocity, or lower duties.

The situation of our industries that have to pay duty on raw materials, or buy them of domestic producers who will sell only at tariff-made prices, demands a change. This is the evil the Business Men's Tariff Reform League intends to make understood and to have corrected.

THE TAKING OF JIM CRYSTAL

The Romantic Story of a Desperate Outlaw, and a Sheriff Who Was in Love, and Who Won in More Ways Than One.

His words went off into a mumble, then he relaxed into dead silence. The doctor mounted behind and held the wraying figure for a time, which to him was an eternity. It was not long before the feeling had gone from his hands and feet. The horse drifted south before the blast, his hoofs crashing through the mud that formed on the stiffened grass. The wet mud struck, and became a mat of ice and hair. When at last the animal stopped, the physician cursed until he made out the roof line of a house and marked the ghostly glimmer of its white walls; then he leaped a short and drifted into dreamland. When he came to himself he was sitting on the ground with the head of the unconscious sheriff in his lap, while over him stood Steinhardt swinging a lantern in his face. "By daylight the storm was terrific, but the doctor had recovered from his exposure, though he was dazedly tired. He had brought to the sheriff a chance for life, though the wounded man was yet unconscious.

But the conditions were far from hopeless. The man was dressed; he was sitting in a chair. The physician was attending to his unconscious patient, with Steinhardt looking on his shoulder and Lester opened his eyes. They wandered wonderingly between the two faces for a moment, then to the doctor's countenance the man smiled.

"Don't talk," said Ellerbe. "You've had a close call but we'll pull you through."

The doctor made a motion and Steinhardt disappeared for a moment, coming back with a book in his hand. "Here's the old lady's sky chart, Bob, but you ain't in need of it yet. What next?"

"Lift me up," said the sheriff, his voice sinking to a whisper. Steinhardt lifted him on the pillow and the doctor, "I don't believe either of you have overmuch religion," said the sheriff, slowly and with ease that reassured the doctor, "but you have your share of honor. Let it of you have got to swear to my being knocked out. Not one word to a living soul, so help you God. My head is straight enough! Swear by all that's holy, I've got my reasons. Now swear, both of you, that you will pretend to know nothing about me."

"He's hushed," and he took the oath.

"Same here," said Steinhardt, reverently. "But I don't see what bug is bothering you, Bob."

"It's because I'm camped on Jim Crystal's trail," said the sheriff, "I've got him dead to rights! Now I won't talk again."

There was plenty of public indignation and a vast amount of curiosity, but rather than in action a wonder which increased when it was discovered that Mr. Crystal had confided his operations to the taking of two officers of the law, and then had disappeared, apparently into thin air. Nothing was done—this, nothing practical. A few strong parties scoured the country for a matter of twenty miles about, but no track of the outlaw could be discovered, neither was there a trace of the body of Sheriff Lester. Steinhardt's home—well picked by the burglar—was found near the trail, but that was all. In a month the little community had settled into its normal state of monotony. It was not until the genial Bob; many heads were shaken, out the prominent interest lay in the probable successor of the presumably murdered sheriff and his positively murdered deputy.

But try as he would Steinhardt could not get the sheriff to open his mouth regarding his plans. The manager was more than mystified. He had never known a downed and presumably ruined man to be in such high spirits. When the doctor received a characteristic letter from Mrs. Ellerbe, she was safe enough—Ellerbe? Have you your money with you? "I have," said the doctor, opening his medicine case, "but"— "He was hardly necessary, doctor, I could have collected in Boerne tonight. You were in hiding it, however."

The Colonel had drawn a wallet from his pocket and was counting out twenty one-hundred-dollar bills. The doctor took two new one-hundred-dollar bank notes from the lining of his case, but instead of passing them over he held them in his hand.

"It is a matter of course, Mr. Meredith," he said, with a smile, "that you have looked after our interests. I understand that you have now over the land in question, although the deed is in your name. Of course, you will give me the receipt for this, and as a matter of formality allow me to look at the deed itself. I know something of these things. And, by the way, how do I obtain a recognized interest in the matter?"

SIFTON, BACK IN HOUSE, DENIES ACCUSATIONS

Ottawa, May 2.—(Special)—Hon. Clifford Sifton was in his seat in the house today. He was at the Bahamas along with Mr. Sifton and arrived home this morning. He took the first opportunity of giving an emphatic, positive and clear denial to the insinuations and innuendoes which Mr. Foster had directed toward him.

When Mr. Sifton made the following explanation, amid the cheers of the Liberals, the opposition had little to say in reply.
