COUNSEL FINISH ARGUMENT IN LIBEL ACTION

Case Adjoined to Today for Charge of Judge and Finding.

Fredericton, Oct. 6.—In the Hanson-Gleaner libel case here on Saturday afternoon, Dr. Baxter ending his plea at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The jury were asked if they wished to go on or have an adjournment and they adjourned in favor of having the case go over. His Honor then set the time for his charge at 10 o'clock this morning. On Saturday Hon. W. P. Jones, counsel for the Gleaner, continued his address to the jury as follows:

Bert Lint paid Hanson $25 in connection with that case, and the Crown also paid him. He swears Lint did not pay him anything nine years ago, but could not remember Merrifield paying him $5 only four years ago.

Coming to the Harris case, Mr. Jones said a struggle was made to keep out evidence.

The charge is that Mr. Hanson changed his opinion in that case. Mr. Lisnerick swears he saw in the city clerk's office, a letter from Hanson, which has not been produced, but which told the City Council they had better settle the matter. He had before adjudge that Mr. Harris had no case. Mr. Lisnerick swears he saw that letter, which is now missing.

Was the case settled before or after the election? Mr. Hughes, acting for Mr. Harris, says it was settled before the election. Mr. Hanson says not. Surely Mr. Hughes as counsel, would know. Mr. Hanson was dropped as city solicitor. He was not re-appointed for some time.

Mr. Jones contended justification of the Gleaner article had been shown by proving they were substantially true, and the comment was fair in the public interest and in good faith. No comment or a change in a decree in the Supreme Court could be too strong if the fact were proven. It was in the public interest to keep the barristers straight.

The story was current. It was a scandal heard throughout the province. It was for the jury to decide and in giving a verdict do what they thought right regardless of any considerations.

That was all the defence asked.

Address for Plaintiff.

Hon. Dr. Baxter next addressed the jury. He said they must have in mind that upon their shoulders and his rested one of the gravest responsibilities. But if, instead of seven there were twelve men on the jury and Mr. Hanson were on trial for forgery, it might result in sending him to the penitentiary and that was practically the charge. In this case if they found for the defence they would send Mr. Hanson out with his reputation destroyed. He had hitherto had an unblemished record.

They would now have to declare that he is a forger and a perjurer if they did what Mr. Jones asked. He would have to live his life under the shadow of that verdict. If they let the Gleaner article go then they would brand Mr. Hanson as a forger. Mr. Jones had said a paper had a right to publish the news. That was true but it should take care the news is true. After discussing the make-up of the newspaper Dr. Baxter referred to the editorial as distinct from the news column.

In the former it was proper to make fair comment on news that was true. The article concerning Mr. Hanson was not put in the Gleaner as ordinary news, but in the editorial column. If a paper whose managing editor when brought into court and interrogated said over and over again, I decline to answer, I decline to answer, I decline to answer, I decline to answer, I decline to answer. That is a libel. In law a slander is not a crime. No man has a right to assert that it was made deliberately. Assuming that all the facts are as the Gleaner puts them, the editorial comment is not justified. Here Dr. Baxter quoted from the article and declared the language was not fair comment. What was the motive behind it?

Public Morals.

Mr. Jones says it is left for the Gleaner to espouse the cause of public morals and decency. It was for the jury to decide whether the Gleaner article was not published to destroy R. B. Hanson body and soul. Should the game of politics be played with a club and a dagger? Mr. Jones had referred to the Barristers' Society. Who was talking? No less than the President of that society, whose inaction caused this trial. As president of the society he has not seen any cause to act but he comes here to do it in defence of the Gleaner. Dr. Allen is a barrister and registrar of the Supreme Court. If he felt a forgery, a willful attempt to deceive him had been made by Mr. Hanson he would have acted. So would Judge White. If the latter thought there was forgery or willful misrepresentation he would have acted. The truth is there is inextricable confusion in this matter, but no deliberate intention to falsify the facts. The character of a man is not a subject of sudden production. There is a slow, patient growth. Is it reasonable or thinkable that Mr. Hanson, up to this time had never been charged with forgery or stealing or perjury, would suddenly for no possible gain turn in a few minutes into a forger and liar. He is here on trial for his honesty and integrity, not for violence of temperament.

The Gleaner does not deny publication. The only question is as to what may have taken place between Dr. Allen and Mr. Hanson and the latter and Judge White. The latter had no possible gain in turning a violent man determined to have his own way? Judge White wrote that he would not change the order without first discussing it with Dr. Allen. Mr. Hanson might naturally assume from this there was still some chance of the judge changing his mind. The judge himself suggested it. In his letter to Mr. Regan, Mr. Hanson asked that the bond be returned to the registrar or to himself. There was here no concealment. He was willing it should go to the registrar. If he had lied to Dr. Allen and forced a decree, would he not after hearing from Mr. Regan have declared there was a mistake and asked Mr. Regan to change it? Instead of that he wrote back declaring Dr. Allen authorized it, and asking that the bond be completed. If he were guilty of altering the decree he would have sought to prevent it going to Mr. Regan at all. In the letter to Mr. Regan in which Mr. Hanson said he appeared to have got into a "hellish hole," he again declared Dr. Allen had made the change, adding that he must have done it under a misapprehension. They say he deliberately did this thing, was represented, and that he foolishly misled the registrar to put in the words "and corpus." But he knew it must go back to Mr. Regan, the very man who would know he was wrong. Would he do that if he were a criminal? He wrote to Mr. Regan and told him the registrar had informed him that the thing was to be done in that way. He had nothing to gain and everything to lose, and he is not a fool, and he would not have pursued this course and run this risk just to have his own way. In a letter to Mrs. Nevins on Oct. 30 he said he had the decree of the court and explained it to her and said that a new bond must be made out. This new decree gave the matter more than Hanson had ever asked for.

Mr. Hanson was under the impression he got the bond after he returned from Montreal. The stenographer's notes showed that this was a wrong impression. Is a mistake a crime? The Chief Justice on the stand discovered that his memory of the date of a certain event was wholly wrong. Did anybody denounce him? The managing director of the Gleaner was asked many questions, but his only answer was: "I decline to answer."

Trial by Newspapers.

"What we are asked to endorse," said Dr. Baxter, "is a trial by newspaper, only one side heard—trial by malice in the heart. Who went from the Gleaner to Mr. Hanson to ask him if these rumors going abroad were true? No one. But the wheels turned, the sheets went out, with the story to all the readers of that paper that Hanson had altered a decree of the Supreme Court. And all for the sake of a few cents. There was no regard for a man's reputation or life, but he was to be branded with infamy for the sake of a few dollars. How many men have been tried by the same newspaper and held up to execration?"

Dr. Baxter said he knew of a newspaper man in a city not very far away conducting a paper where men's reputations were virulently assailed, and when the man died there were found in his desk, the evidences of a moral leprosy. It would be impossible to take out of all the people's minds the sting left there by this Gleaner libel. It would be heard of years and years hence.

Mr. Hanson said to his stenographer, and she says he was surprised and pleased, that they had given him what he did not believe they would give. If he were a criminal, would he have discussed it at all with her or anybody else? In the Nevins case the mother would have to go out to work. Was it unreasonable to spend the children's money to keep their mother with them? Dr. Allen said he would have allowed more than the income. Was it unreasonable to press for it? In this class of business it was not necessary to present all the facts to Judge White. The responsibility is on the lawyer. He must be sure of what he is doing, and Mr. Hanson was right when he said the family arrangement could not be carried out in law. He tried to get every dollar possible for the mother, and yet, after this was over, Judge White reduced the amount the infants were to get from the estate because Parker Nevins had gone back on his bargain. Mr. Hanson made the appeal and Mr. Hanson was right when he said he had heard him again if he regarded him as a criminal? Mr. Hanson had also done business since with Dr. Allen. But the jury are asked to (Continued on page 5, third column.)

How to Safeguard The Future

When you think of possible deprivation of income for your family, you perhaps consider only the possibility of your death from natural causes.

But there are three other possible "routes to poverty" for your loved ones—and it is well to provide against them all.

There's the Accident—which removes so many in the prime of life.

There's the loss of earning-power, caused by disability of the bread-winner, either through illness or accident.

And finally, there is the retirement from life's activities when overtaken by old age, often without any savings.

Do you know that you can protect yourself and your family against all four of these contingencies, in one complete policy.

Such a policy is now issued by the North American Life Assurance Company.

A Policy That Pays 4 Ways

1. Death
2. Accident
3. Total Disability
4. Old Age

This, the fullest insurance covering available, would pay your beneficiary on a $10,000 contract—

At your death, $10,000.
If death be accidental, $20,000.
If you become totally disabled through accident or sickness, this $10,000 contract pays—

(2) All future premiums on your Policy as they fall due.

MR. JUSTICE BYRNE

There will be many to congratulate Hon. James P. Byrne upon his elevation to the Supreme Court, a body of high traditions and generally admirable personnel, and those who best know his ability, his high sense of responsibility and his love for his profession will be confident that his future work will in every sense justify his promotion.

Liberal ranks; in others the reverse will be true, particularly if, as now seems likely, Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George present a hard and fast alliance. Mr. Churchill's addition to the Conservatives is a distinct gain, but it means little as reflecting public sentiment. Had Mr. MacDonald been more radical in office Mr. Churchill's warning against Socialism would have much more effect.

IN BRITAIN

If Ramsay MacDonald were out of the Labor party today in Great Britain the divided army he has led and contrived to hold together would probably split into factions. His moderate course in domestic policy and his wisdom in connection with foreign affairs, with the exception of his Russian treaty, have combined to extend the ever precarious existence of the government, strengthening his own party and, at the same time, increasing the reluctance of the by no means united Liberals to force the ministry to the country.

Mr. MacDonald has some able lieutenants, but none approaches his stature; there is none to-day to be found in Labor's ranks who could succeed him with the reasonable hope of keeping the Labor machine working as he has done. The country does not know—no one can know—what Mr. MacDonald would have done if Labor had obtained a majority over all other parties. In theory at least, even by platform utterances, he is committed to radical policies which have been kept in the background, and which, if he had attempted to carry them into practice, would have sent his government to the country at short notice by an uprising of opponents who by their numbers hold the ministry at their mercy.

But though the present Prime Minister is physically feeling the strain of overwork and anxiety, he is expected to be able to lead the forces of Labor in the next election, which cannot be very long postponed if predictions regarding Parliament's attitude toward the Russian loan and some pending domestic legislation are reasonably accurate. Labor does not want a general election, though some of the more radical of Mr. MacDonald's supporters profess to desire one and declare their belief that an appeal would give Labor a clear majority. The Premier in all probability has no such idea. He would prefer a longer term, in the hope that moderation in domestic policies and success in foreign relations would greatly strengthen public confidence in his party.

The Liberals, while they fear that Labor may gain by delay, are themselves anxious for time to compose their own difficulties; yet they are held responsible for prolonging the government's life and they may at any time and themselves compelled to join the Conservatives in opposing some radical proposal, with the result of precipitating an election, for which none of the parties is really prepared. Should an election come soon, say because of an upset in the House over the government's Russian loan policy, there is little likelihood that any of the parties would win a clear majority over the others. In some parts of the Labor will gain from the

THE U. S. WELCOME TO THE PRINCE

(Manitoba Free Press.) H. R. H. the Prince of Wales appears to have had a most enjoyable visit to the United States and the welcome he received was spontaneous and sincere. This was in no small part due to his own personality but also in part to the unique historical interest which attaches to his title, running back as it does to "Prince Hal" and beyond him to the almost legendary days of Edward I. It is not strange that a people who are familiar with many periods of English history through their fondness for the plays of Shakespeare and the essays of Macaulay should feel a romantic interest in the heir to the British throne.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe, and sure way that does not fall to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this, get two ounces of peroxide powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and sebums that form in the pores of the skin.

Avoid That Fall Cold

Chilly mornings, chillier evenings. Now's the time, if you remember, when that fall cold gets its grip on you and refuses to be shaken off when winter comes. Just getting into thicker clothes does not make you chill-proof. Your freedom from disease and illness depends chiefly on the clearness and virility of your blood. This fall cold of yours is a small enough thing in itself, but it goes to show that your blood stream is at fault.

Every day the white corpuscles of your blood are fighting a pitched battle with invading germs; this in addition to their other function of keeping your system sweet and clean. Every day millions of them "go under." Every day millions of them must be recruited. If your system is not provided with sufficient of the vital salts that strengthen the white corpuscles the invading germs will triumph, and you'll fall ill.

BANGOR SECTION AFLAME OVER MURDER OF YOUNG WIDOW OF 22

Bangor, Oct. 6.—Ivan Drenoff, 24, shot and killed his sweetheart, Lena Tuttle Gurney, a widow of 22, as they sat together on the doorstep of her home at 8 Patrick street. There had been keeping company for nearly two years, or since Drenoff came to Bangor, but there was jealousy on his part because she had encouraged the advances of one Jim Clark, and they quarrelled.

"There was a party in the house, attended by Mrs. Gurney's two sisters and some young friends, and at the height of the festivities they were startled by the sound of shots.

James Maroon and some other young men of the party ran out and found Mrs. Gurney stretched on the ground. They brought her into the house, where she died within a few minutes.

Foley Pursues.

Patrolman Frank Foley, who was on his beat in Hancock street, just around the corner, also heard the shots and ran into Patrick street. He saw a man running up the hill toward York street and gave chase, firing four times in the air as he ran and calling to a passerby to stop him. But the fugitive was waving a gun, and no one dared stop him.

He said that he came to America in 1914 and to Bangor in 1922. He has been employed in the Maine Central repair shop as a boiler maker's assistant.

"What was the trouble between you and the girl?" asked the reporter, to which the prisoner replied with another of his reflective smiles: "Oh, I guess she fooled around too much."

And that was all he had to say as to his motive for slaying Lena Gurney. It was said, however, that the dead woman had encouraged the advances of a man known as Jim Clark, a woods-

Tunic Frock Fall Fad

By HEDDA HOYT

(Fashion Editor of the United Press)

New York, N. Y., Oct. 6.—"Tuning in with the tunic" is the latest Fashion broadcast that has taken the feminine world by storm. Styles have been running to straight and slender lines for several years and the introduction of the tunic frock continues the slender-lined idea and at the same time offers a newness and youthfulness which was necessary to bring about a silhouette change.

There is something extremely youthful in the tunic frock. One appears to be wearing a child's dress with a longer under-slip beneath it. So many of the fall blouses are made on tunic lines that one can't distinguish the tunic frock from the blouse skirt combination, as in each case the blouse portion is of contrasting color from the under-slip which extends from four to eight inches beneath it. At present women are wearing brilliantly colored silk tunic frocks which extend to the early fall street dress. Bright red, henna, russet brown, green and other lovely shades are frequently worn over black foundations.

The majority of tunics are belted and the white most of them follow straight, slender lines, there are a few which terminate with circular flare at the hem. In all cases the under-slip is extremely scant and moderately short. While silk crepe in bright colors worn over dark slips form most of the simpler tunics, we see gorgeous broades combining bold and brilliant shades posed over heavy silk crepe foundations. These are beautiful enough to be worn at the most formal afternoon function. Often the hem of these more ornate-motifed tunics is bordered with a six inch band of some soft fur.

Frocks of tunic type seem to be increasing when the skirt reaches a lengthening sleeve or a mere shoulder-cap or elongated shoulder as intermediate sleeve lengths appear unsuited to tunic lines.

Evening frocks are seldom made on tunic lines and, if so made, there is no contrast between the color of the under-slip and the tunic bodice.

For Home Dressmaker.

The tunic dress offers wonderful possibilities to the home dressmaker who delights in making over frocks of last season. First, because length is not a thing to be considered. A tunic may be as long as you please. Some of them extend between hip-line and the waistline others reach within an inch of the under-slip. Sometimes lovely remnants of material can be purchased at pennant counters in two yard and a half lengths at a great reduction in price. These short lengths can be made into beautiful tunic frocks by adding under-slips of contrasting material and color. The under-slip may be of some inexpensive material such as crepe, or border where a band of better material can be added.

There is no age limit to the tunic dress and there is no size limit, as the straight, unbelted lines of the tunic make it become almost every one. If one is extremely short, however, one should beware of a dress which divides its color scheme by using a slip of contrasting shade to the tunic. To obtain the effect of the height of the body portion of the frock should be to one color, letting sleeves or trimming add the desired contrast.

Many of the younger girls are making the mistake of trying to adapt the short-waisted vogue to the tunic mode, by tying a tight string belt about the normal waist-line of the tunic. This is not only ugly, but is entirely out of line with the tunic idea. If one must wear a belt with the tunic, place it at a low waistline.

Fashion Notes.

Brown is one of the most favored of fall colors, and runs the gamut of colors from furs to shoes and hosiery. The smartest of hats are extremely man, and that this enraged Drenoff. On Monday last he bought the revolver, telling a friend that he wanted one to "use in the woods."

The murder set the Hancock street section all aflame, and hundreds of the polyglot populace swarmed around the little house in Patrick street, where the body of Lena Gurney lay, pierced by four bullets, while her aged mother and her sisters wept hysterically and would not be comforted.

numbers. Few smartly gowned women are wearing them except for actual sports wear.

Brown and black suede shoes are among the Fall collections and suede will undoubtedly be a Fall fashion leader. Shoes with one strap over the instep or plain pumps are preferable this season to more elaborate sandal models. Black patent pumps are selling well in New York.

Prisoner Calm as He Awaits Trial—Came to U. S. in Year 1914.

Bangor, Oct. 6.—Ivan Drenoff, 24, shot and killed his sweetheart, Lena Tuttle Gurney, a widow of 22, as they sat together on the doorstep of her home at 8 Patrick street. There had been keeping company for nearly two years, or since Drenoff came to Bangor, but there was jealousy on his part because she had encouraged the advances of one Jim Clark, and they quarrelled.

"Get up, Shorty," commanded Patrolman Foley, and Drenoff jumped out of bed.

"Well, Shorty, you did a clean job this time," said Capt. Phillips, to which the prisoner's only response was the inquiry, in very casual manner and tone: "Is she dead?"

Admits He Made Threats To Kill.

Never was there a more nonchalant off-looker known as Shorty, is five feet off, locally known as Shorty, is five feet two inches, weight about 140, and looks like a north Italian. Women would call him handsome. He chewed gum calmly and smiled softly as he conversed with a reporter in his cell, and laboriously wrote out the name of his native village in Bulgaria—Popovsko, in the province of Okalika.

He said that he came to America in 1914 and to Bangor in 1922. He has been employed in the Maine Central repair shop as a boiler maker's assistant.

"What was the trouble between you and the girl?" asked the reporter, to which the prisoner replied with another of his reflective smiles: "Oh, I guess she fooled around too much."

PACIFIC AUTHOR CHARGED WITH BIG EMBEZZLEMENT

(New York Times.) Mrs. William von Phul, Jr., New York, claims the world's cross-word puzzle championship. She won a New York tournament.

The impression produced by these talks remained with him, he said, like a thought that never faded.

He had written a pamphlet book, but found that no publisher was willing to accept it except on condition that the author agreed to pay all the expenses of publication.

He presented to the committee a means for the salvation of the world and they rejected it. He lacked the necessary means to publish his book, but eventually, on a publisher having agreed to issue it for $5,000 francs, Fernandez took a further 10,000 francs to pay the expenses of advertising, his work, but his enterprise proved a pure loss, for when his book appeared on the morrow of the signature of the armistice no one took the least notice of it.

Realizing that he could not hope to repay by ordinary means the sums he had taken from his firm, he "borrowed" more in the hope of recovering his losses by operations on the Bourse.

These went from bad to worse, until he became in the position of a desperate gambler who, if he could not make a big win, would be utterly ruined.

In horse-racing his luck was as bad as in finance, a fact which he explained by saying that he had the best tips, but that some of his enemies conspired with the jockeys to ensure that the horses he backed were beaten.

He then took a further 10,000 francs to pay the expenses of advertising, his work, but his enterprise proved a pure loss, for when his book appeared on the morrow of the signature of the armistice no one took the least notice of it.

Smith, C. J. Smith, and the members of the city council and the members of the port committee.

At the council meeting this morning Mayor Potts made this announcement and Commissioner Bullock said he would like, when the delegation comes here to ask that the railway remove the ledge of rock which ran along the face of the Pettengill wharf for a distance of about 10 feet in order that vessels might load full cargoes of grain at this berth.
Mayor Potts said he felt the discussion should be limited to matters concerning the increasing of the freight rate through the port and this should not come up.
Commissioner Prink said that the Government had blasted out a ledge of rock on the West Side and thought they would do the same here if pressed hard enough. The removing of the ledge was not such a tremendous undertaking.

HENRY S. CULVER

GIFT PRESENTED TO H. S. CULVER

Gold Headed Cane is Given Him by U.S. Immigration Officers.

A pleasing presentation occurred in the U.S. immigration office, Union street, when Henry S. Culver, who recently retired from the post of the United States consul here, was made the recipient of a handsomely-bound gold-plated cane as a slight token of the esteem in which you have retired in the public service, which you have spent for so many years. This token, together with our sincere congratulations and the assurance that we will be pleased to have the honor of your return to our country, but such is life. We serve our day and generation and then pass out, but the country still and younger men take up the task where the veteran leaves off. There is something sad about the closing of an officer's career—the severing of personal and official friendships, the absence of familiar faces, and above all, the loss of that sustaining helpfulness when men are engaged in a common cause. But, in my case, the sadness and separation is ameliorated by this most gracious gift, which you have placed in my hands. I see more in this than in the beauty of its intrinsic value. For the sentiment it expresses will be a greater sustaining force for me than any other. I lean upon it. Its beauty appears at once to the eye, but the sentiment it conveys is to the spirit which is everlasting. "I see among you boys some whom I have known many years, and also some newer faces, but as they are new, I recognize all as devoted workers in the common cause that has engaged my whole attention for more than a century—I mean, the interests of our country. It is true that we sometimes think that we receive scant credit for our loyalty and devotion we pay to our common country, but, let us remember that it is the private soldier who wins the battle, and we should feel fully compensated when we stop to consider that, even upon the shoulders of such as we, there rest the burdens of a government servant, and he who serves his country well in whatever capacity is adding to its honor and fame. I need say no more; my heart goes out to you in your arduous tasks, and I shall always be interested in each one of you personally. I shall watch your careers and will always be glad to respond when I can be instrumental in advancing your interests. I thank you again for this gracious gift and will prize it as one of my most valued possessions."

FURTHER CUT IN LIGHT AND POWER RATES MAY COME

Power Co. Manager Makes Announcements on Return From N. Y.

That material reductions in light and power rates may be expected in the near future was a statement made this morning by M. A. Pooler, general manager of the New Brunswick Power Company, when asked by a reporter of the Times-Star regarding a rumor to that effect. He said that the question of rates had been brought up at a conference which he and Messrs. Walter C. Allison and A. P. Paterson of the directors of the Power Company had in New York with the board of directors of the Federal Light and Traction Company. He said that he was not in a position as yet to make any definite statement regarding the reductions. Asked if it was true that there was to be an increase in street car fares, he said the matter was being given consideration, but that nothing definite has been done.

Another matter dealt with was in connection with the placing of motor houses on service to some outlying districts not at present reached by the regular street car lines. This matter has been left in the hands of the local board of directors, who will make a study of conditions and if they decide to take action in this matter the proposed service will be inaugurated early next spring. Mr. Pooler said that while in New York they paid a visit to an exhibit of a closed automobile show in Grand Central Palace, where they looked over various types which would be suitable for this service, and were the most modern constructed today.

With reference to the board of directors of the Federal Light and Traction Company, who are the owners of the New Brunswick Power Company, Mr. Pooler said that he made it very clear to them that they were leaving the question of operation and the policies of the New Brunswick Power Co. to the local board of directors. Their attitude was to go ahead and develop this property. They also expressed themselves as very much pleased with the manner in which the company had been handled since they took it over in 1922.

They plan to spend some time hunting in both Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The time of their arrival is not definitely set as it will depend on the length of their stay in the sister province.
