Prince Roland Bonaparte and Dr. George Hamilton Griffin Among the Visitors to St. John this Season—Interesting Details of Dr. Griffin and His Ways.

St. John has had visits from a number of distinguished literary people this season, and it they all write books about the country, the board of trade will have no more story about making the world understand the advantages of the place as a winter port and summer resort. There was Miss Shaw, of the London Times, who appears to be on a mission around the world, to learn something about the places regarding which the Times in its ignorance has made sad blunders in the past. She was a woman of business, from all accounts, after facts; and when it is remembered that she had such reservoirs of information as Senator Boyd, Mayor Peters and Mr. S. Dunn Scott, to draw upon, there is no doubt that, speaking in the vernacular, she "got an earful."

Then there was Prince Roland Poland Boland Bonaparte, who writes for the fun of the thing, because he has no need to follow literature as an occupation. He is like a farmer, who makes money while he sleeps, only his crop is the crop that never fails, the fools that buck against luck in his resort at Monaco. He visited St. John, and was well entertained by the bigwigs. He stated that he intended to write a book about America, and it may be that he will do so, referring to his St. John friends as fully as did Rev. H. A. S. Hartley, B. A., etc., in a volume of personal mention which was produced by his facile pen. Sad to say, however, when the Prince was interviewed on his return to New York, he talked of his travels, but did not mention the fact that he had been in the Maritime Provinces. So there is not likely to be much of a notice of St. John in his book, when he writes it.

Still more recently, another distinguished literarian has been visiting St. John, and he too like Prince Bonaparte, appears to be following journalism for the fun of the thing. According to his own story, he is wealthy, and that he has some means cannot be denied by those who realize the enormous amount of perfume which he lavishes upon his person every day. His name is Dr. G. Hamilton Griffin, and he represents the Montreal Journal of Commerce.

Dr. Griffin would pass for a journalist anywhere, for he has all the earmarks of one, including the capital in his command. When he struck St. John recently, he was taken for the great Oronhyatekha, as like him he is a shade dark in complexion. This he attributes to the fact that his mother was French, and he avers there is no negro blood in him. The colored people of St. John say there is, however, and are rather down on him for putting on airs and ignoring them.

Dr. Griffin is an imposing looking figure, and wears a lilac suit, with gloves to match. He used to wear a moustache, but he does not do so now, for good and sufficient reasons. He claims to be an intimate friend of Senator Lewin, and says he used to drive around with the late James Harris behind a pair of ponies. This was when he was here seven or eight years ago. He is obtaining information as to the trade and finance of the country, it appears, and the way he is going to work to do it, is by soliciting subscriptions and advertisements for the Journal of Commerce.

There is no need for him to do so as a livelihood, it appears, as he is president of a great vineyard concern in California, and he is now the controlling owner of mines in British Columbia, in which he has invested the princely sum of $600,000. As the capitalist of the company is only a million, he thus has a controlling interest, and yet to show that he is not proud, he is quite willing to work as a journalist. He has also a journalist's craving for passes, and struck the C. P. R. for one to St. Stephen, where he wanted to interview the bank presidents. He failed to work a pass, however, and so he went by the Shore Line.

He had been more lucky with the World's Fair, for he had a season ticket for it, embellished with his photograph. He also had a photograph of himself, taken some years ago, when he wore a moustache and a diamond, and was a regular lady-killer in his get up. He does not wear the diamond now, he explains. His wife carries that, but he carries the purse.

Dr. Griffin praised his wife to everybody he met. He told, too, how he had gone to a great sacrifice to please her. When he was studying surgery he had to spend weary days and nights at the dissecting table, and contracted the habit of heavy smoking. His average was eighteen cigars a day, but the smell of smoke made him objectionable for kissing purposes, and he therefore reduced the number until he got down to three. Even that small number left an odor antagonistic to the fine art of kissing, and so he dropped the habit altogether. Then, deluged with perfume as he was, nobody more kissable could be desired.

The doctor called on one of the city job printers, and got some fancy cards printed, deadhead, on the strength of being in the profession. These cards were a pledge for a certain person to abstain from liquor for the remainder of her natural life. She did not drink, he said, but the cards were a nice thing to have.

The doctor while here was a guest at the Ottawa Hotel, King Square. He was on his way to the World's Fair when he left. It is not often that so stylish a journalist visits St. John, and when he writes a book about the place it ought to have a ready sale.

WHERE ARE YOU GOING?

Some of the Excursion Chances for the First of July.

A good many readers of PROGRESS will go out of town Dominion day, and all of them it is safe to say will be hunting after leisure and pleasure. Perhaps Canada's birthday is the first and only real public holiday in the summer season. Of course there is the 24th of May, but the holiday feeling does not seem to be very general at that early date. The weather cannot be counted upon to be surely warm,—indeed such uncommon things as snow and hail storms have in former years settled upon the Queen's birthday to remind the natives during the preceding winter months. But the first of July is far different. With everything surrounding us in the full bloom of summer the longing to escape from the asphalt and brick comes over city residents and it they lead busy lives the first real opportunity to enjoy a day in the country comes with the opening of July. This year it falls on Saturday and there is not much doubt but that many of the excursionists or all who can will include Sunday in their brief holiday. But where to go and what to do? A good many excursions of one sort and another are promised, and the inducements for a number of them are set forth by both poster and advertisement. Among them is the excursion to Digby and Annapolis conducted by the Hawker Medicine Company, which has chartered the good steamer, City of Monticello for the trip. The trip is one of the favorites of the people, and the inducements put forth by the manager of the Hawker Medicine Company this year, will make it doubly attractive. A band will be in attendance, and when the people land at Annapolis, there will be plenty of sports going on to interest all. In fact, the enjoyment will be kept up all the time from start to finish. If any readers of this have not decided upon where they will go for the holiday, the Hawker Medicine Excursion presents many inducements for them to join it.

Then the orangemen go to Partridge island—a short trip but pleasant, and more suitable to lots of people who are so situated that they cannot leave home for more than a short time. The boats will leave at stated hours, the full particulars of which can be gained from any member of the order. There is sure to be a large crowd.

Clan McKenzie O. S. C. go up the river and members have planned to make this their first outing, a most agreeable one. A string band will be in attendance and sports will be one of the features of the day. The steamer Star leaves Indian town at 8.30 a. m., and 1 p. m.

The Young Men's Society of St. Joseph go to St. Stephen and Calais, but PROGRESS is unable to furnish particulars in regard to trains &c.

Then there is the excursion by steamer Clifton to Hampton, a pleasant enticing sail on the beautiful Kennebecasis. So many stops are made at the different wharves along the river that they afford splendid opportunities for spending all day in some pleasant spot such as Clifton or Reed's Point, and returning late in the afternoon.

With all these trips to be chosen from, and excursion rates on the railways and river boats as well, the people should be able to devote themselves to their pleasure and comfort.

Cycle Versus The Horse.

The lively stable proprietors have found a formidable rival in that silent steed, the bicycle, and report that their business is much affected by their popularity. This can be more readily understood if one walks along the Marsh road any fine night and counts the number of cyclists who pass. This has been a great year for the wheels, which appear to be selling as fast now as ever.

Correct as Usual.

Those people who read PROGRESS regularly will remember what it had to say about the Crisp—Currie case. The recent action of the Conference in finding the evidence given "does seriously effect his ministerial reputation" would indicate that PROGRESS was as usual about correct.

Christian Endeavor Convention.

The Canadian Pacific Ry., will sell excursion tickets, St. John to Montreal and return for the above at $13.50 each. On sale July 3rd to 5th, good going until July 6th, and returning until July 8th 1893.

LAW AND ORDER IDEAS.

HOW THE HALIFAX POLICE TRY TO MAKE MATTERS HUM.

Men Who Rise Cycles Must Keep in the Middle of the Road—Mackenzie and the Liquor Law—An Alderman Who Hits from the Shoulder When Annoyed.

HALIFAX, June 28.—PROGRESS article on Chief O'Sullivan and Inspector Mackenzie caused considerable talk when it had been read and re-read by people who know both men and have watched the events described. Chief O'Sullivan told stipendiary Motton, at the close of a liquor case some days ago, that the Inspector was not only not enforcing the law himself, but that he was doing all he could to prevent the police being successful in their attempts to do so.

O'Sullivan's attentions to liquor dealers will not close on that account, however, he does so from a professional or a political standpoint. His latest is the story of the Howe-Pitts libel case, in which he represents Mr. Pitts as giving Mr. Blair's legal reputation a knock and blow. Those people who are acquainted with Mr. Blair and Mr. Pitts will smile at the statement and wonder why, if that were so, such a level-headed jury should have found a verdict for Major Howe, who, it is said, is bound to fight the matter to the end. If Mr. Blair had not undertaken the case some other lawyer would, and then Mr. Pitts would have been deprived of apparently his only defense—political conspiracy!

FREE AND VINDICATED.

END OF THE MANSLAUGHTER CASE AT BARRINGTON.

The Jury Very Speedily Acquits Mrs. Wrayton—She Is Congratulated by the Chief Justice—Thrilling Scene in Court—The Message to a Dying Son.

BARRINGTON, N. S., June 27.—The case of Mrs. Wrayton, charged with manslaughter in the instance of William Thurston, came to a speedy termination last week by the triumphant acquittal of the accused. The case has excited the community for months past, and all the time the conviction has prevailed that Mrs. Wrayton was suffering an injustice in being subjected to the accusation, and the proceedings consequent thereon. Last Friday the accused emerged triumphant from the ordeal.

While little doubt was felt as to what the result would be, intense excitement prevailed as the case came to a close, and an eager, expectant throng listened with almost breathless interest to the words of counsel and judge. Never has a more exciting scene been witnessed in our courts and never has there been a decision more thoroughly endorsed as just and right in the sight of God and man.

The trial was finished last Friday. In handing the case to the jury, His Lordship, Chief Justice MacDonald, stated that the evidence taken at the time of committal was so irrelevant that he had not given much attention to wading through its confused statements and it was a surprise to many that a verdict of manslaughter was brought in, but Mrs. Wrayton's friends stood firmly by her and were confident that she would be proved innocent.

Mr. Bulmer, the leading attorney for the defence, showed in his able and feeling address to the jury that he had a good case, and was followed by Mr. Congden, the attorney for the Crown, with one of his well known fair play addresses.

Then came his lordship's able and impartial address to the jury and in a few moments he laid bare all the malicious evidence of prejudiced witnesses which had been brought forward to try and convict an innocent woman, and made plain to every fair minded person in the large audience that there had not been the slightest evidence which could be in any way construed to connect Mrs. Wrayton with the death of William Thurston.

It was generally believed that the jury would not leave the box without declaring her innocent, but, though they did so they returned after an absence of a few minutes and amid the profound stillness pervading the court room the foreman of the jury proclaimed Mrs. Wrayton innocent of all the charges brought against her.

As soon as the verdict was announced, Chief Justice MacDonald's face showed that it was wholly in accord with his judgment as to what was just, and he was the first to congratulate her heartily she could leave court not only a free woman, but with a character free from all the false imputations that had confronted her from the inception of the case. She was thoroughly vindicated.

Then came a scene never to be forgotten, and without its precedent in a court room in this part of Canada. Mrs. Wrayton, who had bravely stood the ordeal and came out triumphant, became a heroine who was to be honored. Those who had been so firm in their faith now rallied around her with hearty congratulations and tearful joy, while she seemed as one who had awakened from a fearful dream, and realized that it had been but a dream.

Throughout the trial, Mrs. Wrayton had borne herself as one who was innocent would be expected to do. She had, indeed, looked sad and careworn, but her carriage was erect and her step firm, while whenever she was required to speak in answer to the charge her voice was clear and steady. Her manner was not of defiance, but the demeanor of innocence conscious that right would be done.

Yet not alone in this land was the verdict a source of gladness, awe and of comfort. Mrs. Wrayton's son was lying on his death bed in Boston, and the moment she was free the glad message of the acquittal was flashed over the wires to him, that before he breathed his last he might be happy in the knowledge that his mother's innocence had been proven before the world.

VESTA.

Red Cross of Babylon.

The "American" work of the Red Cross of Babylon, was finely exemplified Wednesday evening by a corps of officers from the Encampment of St. John, K. T., at the Masonic temple. The degree was conferred in costume and with full ceremonial, candidates being present from Yarmouth, N. S., Fredericton, Moncton and other parts of the province. The officers taking part were John A. Watson, sovereign master; Dr. Thos. Walker, chancellor; F. Wyng Wisdom, master of palace; W. B. Wallace, prelate; Chas. McCausland, master of cavalry; W. K. Reynolds, master of infantry; A. R. Campbell, master of finance; Frank L.

Tufts, master of despatches; W. A. Ewing, warden; R. L. Smith, standard bearer; John Rubins, sword bearer; Charles F. Harrison, D. Miller Olive and Harold Gilbert, guards. The usual banquet with G. G. Boyne, caterer, was given after the ceremonial, when remarks highly complimentary to the work were made by Sheriff Sturdee, Mayor Peters and others. There was a large attendance of the members of St. John encampment, and among the visitors were leading members of DeMolay Preceptory.

MR. MARCHAND EXPLAINS.

His Methods are Simply What He Represents Them to Be.

Mr. William Marchand, the manager and part owner of the business that is done in this city under the style and name of the Canadian Publishing and Portrait Company, called at PROGRESS office this week and objected to the paragraph relating to portrait concerns that have recently taken up their abode in the city. Mr. Marchand claims that as his company is among the recent arrivals, many people may suppose that he is properly included in the class the public is warned against. He denies that there is the slightest opportunity to suppose this, and asserts that his business has always been carried on in a straightforward fashion, that the people get what they bargain and pay for. His methods, as described by himself, is really a magazine subscription, which carries with it a portrait valued at $9.00. There are sixty numbers of the magazine which contains about 16 pages and they can be delivered all at once or as fast as the customers wish. When they have taken and paid for all the books the picture is delivered, or it may be handed over before if satisfactory arrangements are made for payment.

Mr. Marchand claims that the books are inducements to sell his pictures, or to get orders for his pictures, and that his guarantee of the worth and value of his work stands good at any time. It is always printed on his contract. The portraits that have been shown PROGRESS were good value for the price asked for them, and as the concern stands by its methods and guarantees the completion of their contracts, that would seem to be all that is necessary.

Experimenting on the Marsh.

The repairs to the marsh road are going on slowly; many people think very slowly. The first section, beginning at Ward's and extending a few rods around the turn, was completed some time ago, and the section No. 6, which PROGRESS understands is the last section named in the specification, is now being made by the contractor. Of course Mr. Connell claims that he suffered considerable delay before the work commenced owing to the indecision regarding the construction of the road, and even after the first section was completed it appears that there was some further delay for the same cause. At present that portion of the road that he is building will have a bottom of ashes and slag from the rolling mills, and this will be covered with earth and gravel. According to the contractor's idea this will make a far better piece of road than that which has brush on it, and though it is not in accordance with the specifications of his contract the petition of a number of residents along the road and other representations made to the chief commissioner, induced him to permit the contractor to complete one section in brush and this section with slag, earth and gravel. Then a companion will be made and the remainder of the road constructed with whatever shall be considered the best. Mr. Jordan, however, still sticks to the idea that brush is the best possible foundation for the road, and he advances many arguments in favor of his theory. It is the interests of the people, however, that a good road should be made, no matter what it is composed of.

Davenport School.

The fact that PROGRESS goes to press earlier than usual this week prevents a notice of the annual distribution of prizes and reception of friends of the school, at the grounds, on Thursday afternoon. It will be seen by advertisement in this issue, that the school will be reopened, after vacation, on September 4th., and that there will then be a few vacancies for boarders.

A Day Earlier Than Usual.

Owing to Dominion Day falling on Saturday, PROGRESS went to press a day earlier than usual this week and the omission of some correspondence and advertisements is accounted for by this fact. Newsboys and newspaper employes are as fond of a holiday as other people, and while it is not always possible to give it to them, PROGRESS likes to do so when it is possible.

Business Was Very Poor.

Haystead's company opened in the Mechanics' Institute Monday evening to a house which represented $54 in cash. The attendance the second night was far worse, and Wednesday evening, all the newsboys in the city were invited to fill up the vacant chairs. There is a lesson behind all this which it is not even necessary to point out.

Large assortment New Books at Mr. Arthur's Book Store, 80 King Street.

THIS IS THE BAND STAND.

A week or two ago, PROGRESS described the band stand for which plans had been drawn by G. Ernest Fairweather and towards which the mayor is willing to give $250, if the balance of the amount necessary to complete the work can be raised by the citizens. The cost of the stand will be about $600. It is an octagonal platform, 30 feet in diameter, raised five feet above the ground, with sound board and canopy overhead. The lighting will be by 32 incandescent lamps arranged with a drop light in the centre for the leader. The supports of the canopy will be turned posts of Georgia pine, while the railing of the platform will be of gas pipe filled with crimped wire lattice.

The Mayor's idea is that the stand should be placed at the northern entrance of Queen Square. So far as can be judged the structure seems well designed for its purpose, and can be easily built if the citizens will lend a hand. The summer is passing, however, and if anything is to be done this season a start should be made at once. Who will come to the front and make a beginning for the subscription?

to attend service at the church of The Good Shepherd, Fairville. As the festival fell on Saturday, the Sunday within the octave was chosen, and the interest felt was shown by the large number who composed the procession, despite the indications of rain and the distance to be tramped on a mid-summer afternoon.

The bodies officially taking part were the Encampment of St. John, K. T. with John A. Watson eminent commander, and The Union Lodge of Portland with H. L. Sturdee, high sheriff, worshipful master. A large proportion of those under the banner of this lodge, however, were members of other city lodges. The Artillery band headed the procession, and played excellent music both on the outward march through the North End and on the return by way of Carleton.

Rev. J. C. Titcombe, priest in charge of the Church of The Good Shepherd, is chaplain of the Union Lodge of Portland, and he had a special service arranged for this occasion. The music included Psalm CXXXIII and the anthem from Ecclesiastes XII, the latter being chanted by the "Masonic quartette," with W. A. Ewing acting as organist. The church was completely filled with Masons and their friends, a portion of the Encampment occupying the choir seats in the chancel. The altar was vested as proper for the festival and had a number of lights in addition to those prescribed by ecclesiastical ritual, while the floral decorations were in excellent taste. The acolytes wore red cassocks.

The special service was conducted by Rev. J. C. Titcombe, and was well adapted to meet the views of a mixed congregation, and the hymns were set to tunes familiar to all.

The sermon, by Rev. V. E. Harris, rector of Amherst and grand chaplain of Nova Scotia, was the words of 1st Chronicles, II, 2, "And he set seasons to hew wrought stones to build the house of God." It was interesting and full of instruction from first to last.

After the service the visitors were entertained in the school house with refreshments provided by the ladies of the congregation, a generous donation of summer beverages by Mr. James Ready contributing to the completeness of the entertainment.

AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

Curious Features of the Old Lady of Thread-Needle Street.

One of the first objects of interest upon entering the Bank of England building is the bullion office, where all the gold and silver, that enters or leaves the bank passes through to be checked, says a London paper. On the right is the gold; on the left the silver. The prominent feature of the room is the "Grand Balance," or scales, constructed by the Messrs. Napier. This marvellous instrument is a ponderous and peculiarly-built weighing machine standing nearly seven feet high and weighing about two tons. The whole is under a huge glass case, access being gained thereto by a sliding panel. The scale is worked by hydraulic power, and is the most sensitive weighing-machine in existence. On each side the scales are fitted with weights amounting to 400oz. The gold is made up in 400oz. bars, and the difference of one-thousandth part of an ounce can be detected. By a manipulation of the machine, so tiny a thing as a postage-stamp can be weighed, for on the same being placed upon the scale the index will jump a distance of no less than six inches! It is the only balance of its kind in the world, and cost exactly £23,000. The silver scale is not so finely balanced, and the two are respectively christened "The Lord Chief Justice" and "The Lord High Chancellor."

like a sewing-machine as to its lower half, the whole being completely inclosed in glass. A long feeder, like a tube cut in half down its length, and made of brass, is set at an angle of 45°, and is filled with a long roll of sovereigns. These turn as they slip down on a circular movable plate, slightly larger than a sovereign. If the coin is of the right weight, it slips down a metal tube into a till below. Should, however, it prove to be lighter or heavier than the standard, the delicate machine turns it to the left, and condemns it to the guillotine. These machines weigh coins at the rate of twenty-six per minute, and a day's weighing at the banks amounts to about £100,000.

Another interesting feature is to be found in the vaults containing the defunct paper circulation of the Bank. Some idea can be gained of the quantity when we say that they are over 77,000,000 in number, and that they fill 1,000 boxes, which, if placed side by side, would reach two and a half miles. If the notes were placed in a pile they would reach a height of five and a half miles, or, if joined end to end, would form a ribbon 12,455 miles long. Their superficial extent is a little less than that of Hyde Park; their original value was over £1,750,000,000; and their weight exceeds another for £250 left at the Bank for 111 years, whose accumulated interest raised its value to £60,000.

The printing of the existing paper currency is an interesting process. The notes are struck off two at a time on hand-made paper, which, upon being cut, gives three rough edges and one smooth one to each piece of paper—a distinguishing feature of a Bank of England note. The paper is manufactured at the Bank's own mill, and the production of it entrusted entirely to the members of one family. The ink used in printing the notes is made from the charred stem of the lichen vine, which is believed to produce the richest black of any ink in the world. Each strip of paper has to be strictly accounted for, the whole process being under effective supervision. The Bank can boast of possessing the wealthiest room in the world in the shape of a kind of vault surrounded from floor to ceiling by iron safes containing rows upon rows of gold coin in bags of £2,000 each, and piled upon pile of bank-notes. The amount of specie contained in this room alone is not less than £80,000,000 sterling. Not the least interesting feature in connection with the Bank is the fact that the whole system from beginning to end is under constant police espionage, in addition to military protection, and the electric arrangements are so complete that communication with all parts of the building can be effected at a moment's notice.

THE NUMBER NINE.

Odd Results Following the Manipulation of Some Figures.

Most of us think numbers are of the stupidest things in the world. But there are some rather curious facts and fancies connected with them. The number nine is, perhaps, the first as regards such experiments, although number seven is more prominent in literature and history. The odd thing about number nine is that when you once use it, you can't get rid of it. It will turn up again no matter what you do to put it "down and out." Some wise men once tried all sort of tricks with it, and found out this strange fact in regard to it. All through the multiplication table the product of nines comes nine. No matter what you multiply with, or how many times you repeat or change the figures, the result is always the same. For instance, twice nine—18; add 8 to 1, and you have 9. Three times nine—27; 2 and 7 make 9 again. Go on till you try eleven times nine—99. This seems to bring an exception. But add the digits—9+9 and 9 make 18; and again, 1 and 8 make 9. Go on to an interminable extent, and the thing continues. Take any number at random. For example, 450 times 9—4,050, and the digits added, make 9 once more. Take 6,000 times 9—54,000, and again you have 5 and 4. A French scholar tells us another queer fact about this number nine. Take any row of figures, reverse their order, and subtract the less from the greater—the total will certainly be nine or a multiple of nine. For example, take 5071 minus 1705 equals 3366. Add these digits and you have 18—and 1 plus 8 make the familiar 9. You have the same result no matter how you raise the numbers by squares or cubes. One more way is shown by which number nine shows its strange powers. Write down any number you please, add its digits, and then subtract the sum of said digits from the original numbers. No matter what numbers you start with, the sum of the digits in the answer will be nine.

Why Do You Not Study Shorthand?

The young man or woman who is undecided what calling to follow, should investigate the superior advantages of the Pernin Shorthand. No clerical work is more congenial and remunerative, and none offers such rapid advancement as a knowledge of Shorthand, Typewriting and Bookkeeping, for the reason that such clerks are the confidential assistants of the talented employer in all lines of business. They know the secrets of the business, the costs, expenses, etc.

Next fall, several educational institutions are planning to introduce shorthand and typewriting. They will most likely, introduce the Pernin System because it is much simpler and more easily learned. Why do not more school teachers look into the matter and prepare themselves for teaching shorthand and typewriting. We shall be glad to send information free, or answer any inquiries.

TALK OF THE THEATRE.

Sensation upon sensation! Wife for Wife was the last play presented by the Harkins Company. It was boomed as a sensational piece and so it proved to be. A southern scene, southern characters and southern jealousy, the revengeful mulatto, slaves and masters, pistols and knives—it lacked only the blood hounds and the slave driver to give it the realism of Uncle Tom's Cabin. The play itself amounted to nothing, but it afforded Miss Russell an opportunity to show her weakness and strength as an emotional actress. In the sentimental gush of the honeymoon she is not very natural, which is, perhaps, not to her discredit, while in the more emotional and stronger portions of the part she is thoroughly satisfactory. There were many opportunities for Mr. Whitecar in the character of the revengeful mulatto, of which he made the most. The more one sees of Mr. Whitecar's acting the greater the pleasure. His parts are studied and as perfect as he can make them. Every detail is thought out, every gesture practised, and the result is always a finished and artistic rendering of his part.

All the other members of the company in the cast acquitted themselves creditably. Mr. Handysides and Miss Leigh deserving special mention for their good work. Curiously enough after pointing out last week that the title of Master and Man simply served the purpose of a catch penny, I ran across a book now much advertised bearing the very suggestive title, Six Months in Hades. To my mind there is no ambiguity in that; the title is intended to convey the notion that the book contains something original and startling in the line of description. It does nothing of the kind. The title of the book simply hinges upon the fact that the scene is laid in a house called Hades, and the writer gives his experience of a six months sojourn there. Can anything be more deceptive than this?

Tyrone Power opened his return engagement in the Opera House Monday evening with his new play, The Sun of His Father. The attendance was not up to the mark, the receipts being about $112. Wednesday night Daddy Hardacre was the bill while the attraction for Friday and the holiday is The Texan.

Next week the Crust of Society will be presented. The play is dramatized from a French novel and if I may judge from the extensive advance notices in the daily press there is something exceedingly naughty about it. The men will be there but what about their lady friends?

Talk of the Boston Play Houses.

Things theatrical are quiet enough just now in the Athens of America, and the critics have not much else to do but sharpen their pencils for next season's work, and for the present enjoy what little is offered, which certainly is not of a very high order.

The Columbia, Grand Opera House, Hollis St., Tremont St., Globe and Boston Museums are all closed, so you see the opera houses are few and catch those who are desirous of being amused in a light and summer-like manner.

The Park Theatre is open and has for the past few weeks given us a musical comedy called "The Golden Wedding." Why the authors alone only know, for the title has about as much to do with the piece as it has with municipal politics. It is a bright little thing with several catchy airs and serves its purpose as a summer piece.

At the Bowdoin Square, comic opera holds possession, as rendered by the Baker Opera Company and as the people composing the company are well known with you, it only remains for me to say that they give their pieces in fairly good shape and that Irene Murphy and William Wolf have established themselves as favorites.

The Tremont, which has been closed for three weeks, and has been put in summer dress, cane seated chairs, light curtains and all that sort of thing, re-opens on Monday evening with Pauline Hall and her company in the opera "Amorita." The engagement will probably run until the beginning of the regular season, and Miss Hall will also be seen in last season's success "Puritanism."

The "Pops" are on and as a matter of course Music Hall is crowded nightly, for you must know it is considered quite the proper thing to drop in for an hour or so to hear the music, quaff a glass of beer and smoke a cigarette. Everybody goes to the Pops, and they are well worth going to, for Mr. Adamski, the conductor, always furnishes a splendid programme, and one is indeed a stranger in Boston who cannot find an acquaintance during a stroll through Music Hall. There is considerable discussion now as to the site for a new Music Hall, for the march of progress will ere long sweep the old building out of existence; and if Boston is to have its symphony concerts and its symphony orchestra, she will have to provide a home and an abiding place for them. Doubtless they will be provided, for it would be awful to think of this centre of culture to be without the Symphonies. Shades of Mendelssohn, Mozart et al. forbid. Why the dead and gone masters would revisit this earthly scene, filled with surprise and shame, were such a thing to come to pass, as Boston without a home for its Symphony Orchestra; and besides just think how those wicked unmusical New Yorkers would chuckle with fiendish glee should we, right here in Boston, be unable to lead the world in presenting the works of the great musicians. Heaven forbid!

STAGELETS.

I see that Harkins is with you and notice that he carries some well known names with him in his company, notably Whitecar and Handysides. Miss Maud Hoffman, who recently played Juliet here—her first appearance on any stage—has signed with E. S. Willard for next season. This young lady is in great luck.

It is late in the day now to say anything about the death of Edwin Booth, or the difficulty in filling his place. I was very much amused at the curt way in which one of your contemporaries disposed of the dead actor; it was done in seven lines and the writer said he was "not a very great actor" and that "as Hamlet he had won much reputation." I thought as I read these few lines, and also read between the lines, how the writer would have stopped over had Irving died instead of Booth, then nothing would have been said about the death of Booth, then the stage would have lost an actor whose place would never be filled. In the general consensus of opinion, even allowing for the usual feeling that prompts speaking nothing but good of the dead, Booth was the greatest actor of his day, and there is no question that his equal as Hamlet, Richelieu, Richard III, Iago or Belphegor does not live, and in the present state of the drama and public taste it will be long and many a day before a fit and worthy successor does appear. Irving is not a great actor; he is among the best, but as an ex-stage manager of his time, but as an exponent of the Shakespearean plays he is far and away behind the master who has so recently left us.

PROSCENIUM.

Richard Mansfield has joined the colony of California gamblers who includes Modjeska, Salvini, Fanny Davenport, W. M. Wilkinson, M. B. Curtis, Nellie McHenry and Albert Bruning. He has bought twenty acres.

Ellen Terry lives in a brick house at Earl's Court, with her son and daughter. Pretty surroundings are necessities of life to Miss Terry, and her home is full of quaint nooks and corners, soft harmonies of color, and the delicate fragrance of flowers.

"If I played Camille often I think I should die some time—in the closing scene—and they would find me there dead," said Mme. Dase one time to a friend. "She does die," the person said, in repeating the story, "temporarily, of course, but it is so real that I believe some time her imagination will carry her too far and she will not revive."

All records are eclipsed by the stage directions of a seventeenth century opera. Freaschi's "Berenice," which provides for two lions led by Turks, two more lions led by elephants, a stable containing 100 living horses, and a forest filled with bears, deer, and wild boar! In this connection it is worth recording that at Mme. Patti's benefit in Madrid years ago, scores of canaries were let loose in the auditorium by her enthusiastic admirers.

A Detroit paper has discovered how it was that the gallery occupants have come to be known as gods. The Drury Lane theatre many years ago had its ceiling painted to represent a blue sky with clouds, among which were cupids flying in every direction. This ceiling occupied the gallery and consequently the occupants of these higher seats were said to be "among the gods," while the later term "gallery gods" was applied to those occupying the highest tiers in the theatre.

The old way of imitating lightning on the stage by flashing lycopodium powder behind an irregular line cut in the scenery is superseded in Parisian theatres by the use of a long, flexible rod with a brilliant incandescent lamp at the end. The rod is moved quickly down in a zigzag direction at the proper moment. A key controlled by the foot enables the circuit to be made or broken occasionally flashed against the scene through scratches in a smoked glass from a stereopticon. But, after all, the sudden glare of the flame blown through magnesium or lycopodium powder, at the wing, is about as near to lightning as anything. Its effect in the storm of "Julius Cæsar" as played by the Saxo-Meininger company is well remembered.

To Invite the United States.

TORONTO, ONT., June 26.—Another announcement of interest made by The Dodd's Medicine Company, Ltd., of this city, to the effect that they have decided to establish a factory and warehouse at Buffalo, N. Y., in order to supply the growing demand for Dodd's Kidney Pills in the United States. This remedy has never been advertised or placed on sale in the United States, but the popularity of the remedy and the news of its success in Canada quickly reached the people of the neighboring republic, and orders have poured in, unsolicited, from every state in the Union. The capacity of the Toronto factory is taxed to supply the Canadian market and the management feel that they can only do justice to both foreign and home demands by invading the United States and establishing a depot and factory there.

Serenading Himself.

Herr Notel, merchant and burgomaster, who is passionately fond of singing, is the first tenor and president of the S-glee club. The club only consists of a single quartette; but small as is their number, the greater is their enthusiasm for the songs of the Fatherland.

Notel was celebrating his silver wedding, and the club must give him a serenade; there was no help for it. But what was to be done without the first tenor? There was getting a substitute; but, for all that, they would give Notel a surprise.

On the eve of the festival day the three members of the club, armed with lanterns, met at the appointed time before the house of their respected president, and, after some clearing of throats and twanging of tuning-forks the music began.

A small crowd collected in the street, and the windows in the vicinity were lined with appreciative listeners. The Herr Burgomaster and his family also appeared at the windows of their brilliantly illuminated sitting-room.

The first bars of the well-known song, "Silent Night," left much to be desired; but the three voices bravely held on their way amid the surrounding stillness, and in a few moments Herr Notel went down into the street and joined in the quartette. The street and joined in the quartette. He ran upstairs again, appeared at the open window, and, in loud, clear tones, thanked the club for their ovation.

The closing exercises of the Carleton county Grammar school were given in the form of a very attractive concert in the opera house on Friday evening. Mr. R. P. Steeves, has been appointed school inspector and in consequence thereof has resigned his charge in Woodstock, to the benefit of the citizens in general, while here Mr. Steeves raised the standard of excellence of that school to a degree which it had not hitherto held.

Miss Kate Saunders recited, "The Children's Hospital." Miss Gilmore sang sweetly, a song entitled, "At the Ferry." A quartette by Miss Porter, Miss Gilmore, Messrs. Loane and Dibbles was pretty. McCully in the presence only of the relations, a few intimate friends of the family, and the ushers. The bride, who is a tall stately brunette, entered the drawing room, leaning on the arm of the groom, she was followed by her bridesmaids, Miss Jennie Coe and Lieut. McDonald, of Toronto who was in the capacity of best man. Hon. Leavelle Grosvenor Downes, and her brother, Mr. George Downes. She was magnificently attired in a bridal costume of white silk, and profusely richly embroidered with white silk, and also wore a veil of Brussels net, and a coronet of white satin, at her neck a beautiful pendant of pearls and diamonds set in a diamond ring.

The drawing room was magnificently decorated with yellow and white flowers, and was a marvel of loveliness. A bridal party standing in front of a beautiful arrangement of palms, ferns, and white carnations. Immediately after the ceremony and congratulations, supper was announced. The decorations of the supper room, were simply charming, and were due to the exquisite taste of Mrs. Ferdinand Emerson of Boston, aunt of the bride. Over the centre of the table, were arranged a canopy of ferns, from which came streamers of white satin table stood the bride's cake, which was adorned and banked with hundreds of bride's roses. Ferns were sprinkled here and there over the cloth; in the centre of the table was a crystal chalice surrounded with white carnations and ferns. On the side-board, stood an immense punch bowl filled with fruit punch, this was almost hidden in a bower of ferns and roses. The supper lasted more than an hour, and before returning to the reception room, the bride most graciously cut the bride's cake, using a knife decorated and trimmed with white satin. At half past seven o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Hodgins, Hon. L. G. Downes, Mr. George Downes, Miss Jennie Coe, and Lieut. McDonald, stood in a circle, and received some two hundred guests, who came to congratulate the bride and groom, and wish them "bon voyage." Ices, jellies and fruit punch were served throughout the evening. At half past nine o'clock the bride left the reception room to change her bridal robes for her going away gown which was navy blue serge with a lining of black tulle, and a black sailor hat. They then drove to the train followed by hosts of guests and left for Montreal, where they sailed on Saturday for Europe, where they will travel for three months. Before the train left the bride threw her bouquet among her girl friends, and Miss Josephine Moore and Miss Margaret Todd, together shared the honor of catching it. The bride's maid's bouquet was thrown among the gentlemen. Mr. John M. Stevens was the fortunate young man into whose hands it fell. Of the wedding presents, I can say nothing, except they were of the most valuable and costly kind, and it is said more superb than ever given to a bride on the St. Croix. Hon. L. G. Downes gave a gift of five hundred dollars in gold and silver, and Mr. Ferdinand Emerson, of Boston, presented a beautiful Worcester set, with a pair of gold candle-a-bras, which were most unique and beautiful. MONOTON.

[Progress is for sale in Monoton at the Monoton Book Store, Main street, A. H. Jones, and by J. E. McCoy.]

June 25.—The meeting of the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Methodist conference which has been held in Monoton during the past week, and is still in progress. The services in connection with the meeting have been very impressive. In the Wesley Memorial church the floral decorations were very beautiful, and the music, under the direction of Miss Baird, and Mr. J. H. Wetmore was especially fine.

The Dolls' Carnival came of Thursday evening, and if those who were not quite certain what they expected, anticipating a good deal, were disappointed, I do not know if anyone was to blame if the entertainment failed to come up to their expectations. Of course all public entertainments are open to legitimate criticism, and the present writer would not be telling the truth if he said that the presence of a full brass band in a comparatively small hall, added to the enjoyment of either the visitors or those in charge of the carnival.

Of the decorations of the hall, as the general management of the entertainment, it would be difficult to speak too highly in praise. The decorations were chiefly in white and green, the prettiest booth being the flower and candy stall which occupied the centre of the hall and was decorated in a most artistic manner by Mrs. George Daniel, who had charge of it; pressed ferns against a white background formed the leading design. With Mrs. Daniel, assisted by a bevy of attendant maidens in white dresses with painted butterflies as head-dresses dispensed confectionary and sold flowers. The assistants were Misses Gertrude, Fannie, Annie Cooke, Grace Buxby, Edith Evans, Jane Harris, Hattie Whitely, Jessie Dowe, Dottie and Sadie Borden, Maggie Willett. The fancy table was in charge of Mrs. H. A. Price, Mrs. E. B. Hooper, and Mrs. George Willett, while the refreshment table was cared for by Mrs. Buxby, Mrs. Weeks, and Mrs. E. W. Givray. The Misses Ada Williams, Lucy Whitney and Alice McEwen, had charge of the "Doll's Carnival" and were very beautiful fancy costumes. Mrs. J. E. McEwen, Miss Crookall, and Miss Holstead, dispensed the cool and strictly temperate lemonade from a sort of old Mother Hubbard's cupboard, and were of quiet and pretty costumes. The ice cream room which was fitted up in an unusually comfortable and sensible manner with a number of small tables, and was a shining example to the misery of the average bazaar ice cream booth, was presided over by Miss Cooke, Miss Harris, Miss Foster, and Miss Marks, who sold the ice cream from a charming little bower apparently composed of frosted snow, which really was a skilful combination of cotton wool and diamond dust. Mrs. T. V. Cooke who was the originator and prime mover in the entertainment has reason to feel much pleased at the success of her efforts. I believe something over a hundred dollars was realized in aid of the fund for the home teaching of the blind.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ramsay of Canis, are spending a fortnight in the city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay, formerly in the train despassengers office at Canis. He was married last week at Boston to Miss Kate White, also a former resident of Monoton and a sister of Mrs. Murray Fleming. Mrs. Ramsay's many friends in Monoton joined in wishing them every happiness.

Monoton people heard with very deep regret on Thursday morning of the death of Mr. W. J. Robinson, one of the most influential and respected citizens of Monoton. Mr. Robinson's death was unexpected, as he had been an invalid for some years, and confined to his bed for the past five weeks. His illness originated in a throat trouble which developed into consumption, and finally caused his death at the comparatively early age of 54. Mr. Robinson left a widow, and three sons, Mr. F. C. Robinson. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon at the residence on Alma street, and was very largely attended, the hearse being preceded by five hundred school children, who marched four abreast under the direction of their teachers. Mr. Robinson having been chairman of the board of school trustees, who followed immediately after the children. The pall bearers were the three sons of the deceased and Dr. G. T. Talbot. The services were conducted by Rev. John Reed. The casket bore a beautiful floral spray of roses, carnations and lilies.

Miss Annie Cooke left town last week to spend a fortnight with friends in Windsor, Nova Scotia. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fenety returned from their wedding trip on Wednesday last. Mrs. Grant Hall left town last week to spend some weeks at her home in Montreal. CECIL GWYNNE.

QUAINT ENGLISH INNS.

PLACES THAT EVERYBODY HAS READ ABOUT IN NOVELS.

The Unicorn at Bowes—Where Dickens went to investigate Squeers and His School—The Odd Construction and Arrangements of Old Time Hostelties.

LONDON, JUNE 19.—Dead old Bowes, in northern Yorkshire, alongside what in former times was called the Great North Road, possesses one of the finest specimens of the simple roadside inns of the olden coaching days to be found in all England.

The village and this inn have always had for me the weirdest fascination of any provincial spot in Britain, though both hamlet and inn are now dreary and desolate beyond description.

He had letters to a yeoman of the place, soon to shine as one of the immortals of fiction as honest "John Browdie." He represented himself as agent of a poor widow desirous of placing her only boy in a quiet country school.

Investigations showed that the horrible picture drawn was not an exaggeration, and bore out Dickens' own statement in the original preface that "Mr. Squeers and his school are faint and feeble pictures of an existing reality, purposely subdued and kept down lest they should be deemed impossible."

In this quadrangle are also many open stone sheds, with tiled roofs, stone feed-beds and neat, stabled cobblestone floors, where private vehicles and wagons could find temporary shelter in great numbers.

The quadrangle behind the inn-yard is formed by what remains of the ancient stone stables, where scores of pairs of post-horses could have found comfortable quarters and many more carters' and packers' cattle had good shelter and care.

There are tons and tons of lead in the roof-gutters, above the window-frames, and still firmly holding the ancient tiny panes of glass.

It has low oaken settles built stationary into wall or floor. Its huge fire-place is full of tiny cranes for steaming kettles. In one corner is an oaken bed, enclosed in a closet-like frame, where landlord or barman could not only retire at night completely from sight, but also lock himself in against uproar and disturbance.

A wonderful old curio in the Unicorn at Bowes, all unknown to the people of England themselves. Like the village it is dead in its shell. Its oaken timbers, as those in Raleigh's old home at Youghal, seem everlasting; but its moaning belfry, its empty stables, its trembling chimneys, its forlorn brew-house, its empty tap-rooms, its grass-grown inn-yard, and even its present occupancy by a strange creature half houghman and half schoolmaster, who stares listlessly up and down the Great North Road for occasional victim in wandering bicyclist, less frequent literary tramp, or yokel from the near fields, all serve to emphasize by contrast the cheer and stirring days that once were here.

EDGAR L. WAKEMAN.

It is difficult not to wander away from a description of the old Unicorn Inn, at Bowes, among the literary and antiquarian things of interest in its neighborhood. The inn itself must not be confounded, even under its old name of the George, with the George inn of Greta bridge, six miles nearer York, now used as a corn mill.

Continuation of the Story of an Old Timer—Sir Charles Hotham's Visit to Bendigo—The Chinese Question and How It Was Settled.

Strangers when visiting the Victorian diggings always take in Ballarat and Bendigo. They are what London and Paris are to the American tourist.

Mr. J. rode the historian and Lord Rosebury visited Bendigo a few years ago making themselves acquainted with its "lions" and resources as also did the Marquis of Normandy accompanied by Princes Albert and George of Wales.

The first opportunity that Bendigo had of giving an expression of loyalty to the crown was on the occasion of Sir Charles Hotham's visit in 1854—though I fear their enthusiasm at that time was tinged with a spirit of selfishness.

POISONS IN PHOTOGRAPHY. Mr. Givan answers the questions of a "Progress" correspondent.

TO THE EDITOR OF PROGRESS:—In your last issue I noticed a number of questions by a correspondent signing himself a North Shore Amateur. I will answer them to the best of my ability and further, will be only too happy to give any information that I am able, on this subject which is so interesting to us.

1. Bi-chloride of mercury is intensely poisonous, I grain being fatal. A solution of it entering a cut or sore on the hands is very apt to cause death. The following chemicals, largely used in photography are also very poisonous, cyanide potassium, the salts of lead, and nearly all the acids.

2. It is decidedly injurious to open the printing frame in direct sunlight. They must be examined in a very subdued light.

3. When the print is removed from the dark until the necessary number has been completed. In warm weather albumen paper will not keep more than two days. The high surface papers will keep two or three months.

4. The object of washing prints in acetic acid is to counteract the alkaline effect of the ammonia used in fixing. It also renders them making them tone slower and much more evenly.

5. I cannot imagine how you can get the toning and fixing baths confused, if you use ordinary care. If you keep them both in bottles label them. You will find it much more convenient to keep the Hypo in a shallow tray, and the toning bath return to its bottle when you are through using it. C. F. GIVAN.

OLD GABE IN ENGLAND.

FREDERICTON'S FAMOUS INDIAN APPEARS IN AN EXHIBITION.

Boyton is Astonishing the London People by a Water Show—The Nautical Toboggan—Wallace Ross Also Represents New Brunswick as a Champion.

A representative of London "Tit-Bits" was in one of the first boats to descend Captain Boyton's remarkable nautical toboggan slide, and the delightful sensation which he experienced as he rolled down an incline from a height of 60ft. into the water suggested that he should at once get his note-book and pencil and endeavor to find out something about the World's Water Show, which is to be the big thing of the coming season.

Some 200 people are employed in the entertainment given here. Scores of darkeys have been brought over from America and the West Indies. Half-a-dozen Indians—including a Canadian-Indian hunter, named Gabe, who is 96 years of age—make their first appearance in any show. On the day of our visit they were busily engaged making furniture for their tents.

A quartette of log-rollers has been brought from America; all champions of that very popular sport across the Herring Pond. The logs they walk on are 15 ft. long, 12 in. in diameter, and hollowed out.

The "Chute" strikes you immediately you enter the vast arena. It has taken something like four months to complete, and about 100 tons of timber has been used in its construction. It is 275ft. long, will carry a weight of 20 tons at any part, is 36ft. wide and 60ft. high, with an inclination of descent of about 1 in 4. Even above this immense height the scenery painted to represent the Niagara Falls gives another 15ft. in fact, a word with Signor Tondi brings the scenery stretching round that part of the arena used for the performance is 11,000 yards long.

It would take ten artists a month to paint. Signor Tondi pointed out a square piece of painted canvas on which was laid no less than 700 lb. of white paint alone—to say nothing of size and other colors. Below the chute is a huge lake, which required 2,000,000 gallons of water to fill it, and 2,500 cubic yards of concrete were used in lining it, and upon this concrete a layer of asphalt has been placed. Mr. Gordon Hunter assured us that more than 2,500 cubic yards of soil had been excavated during the course of operations. The extreme width of the arena is about 400ft., the area of the lake being about 4 1/2 acres.

The performance which takes place here is as enjoyable as it is unique. It requires considerable lighting up at night. It may be judged from the fact that scattered about and around the arena is an electric searchlight of 20,000 candle-power. There are 10 projecting arc lamps of 10,000 candle-power, 20 of 2,000 candle-power, and 500 incandescent lamps of 16 candle-power; and there will shortly be seen at the World's Water Show an arc lamp brought from America by Captain Boyton, the biggest and brightest of its kind ever known. The bill for electric light for this one corner of the arena amounts to £100 a week.

A little chat with Wallace Ross, the champion sculler of America, and George Bubebar, the champion sculler of England, elicited many interesting facts. They are both splendid specimens of manhood. Whilst Ross is dark-skinned, with black hair and moustache, Bubebar is equally as fair, though his face is as bronzed as that of his friendly rival. It was Wallace Ross who led the water-walkers on the trip on the Thames from Chelsea to London Bridge a few weeks ago. "I am an old-timer with the shoes," he said, with a decided Yankee twang. "I have been off and on them for over ten years. I have done thousands of miles of water-walking. Of course, you can get along much better with the tide, but the worst water I ever stepped upon was in New York Bay, which is terribly rough at times. The boats are worth £10 a pair, weigh 10 lb. each, are pneumatic, and made of rubber. I think they will be a big success as a sport. The Prince of Wales suggested that they ought to come in very useful for fishing purposes."

Visitors to the World's Water Show will see a race between Wallace Ross and Geo. Bubebar on the lake. They race in sectional boats, made in three pieces, and are capable of being carried in a trunk; but their most remarkable and novel race is that done on road-scullers. "I have done many a day's race on them," said George Bubebar, as he was just examining the wheels of his machine preparatory to giving an exhibition. "I once rode in a race at Wolverhampton, and did 20 miles in little over an hour."

"You see your feet fit in a sort of pair of slippers; you steer with these and pull with your hands. You have to be very careful, and when you get forward you must catch your strokes, so to speak, very quick. You see, they are made with sliding seats, only in this case you have to go forward, instead of backward as in a boat. Have I been long in the business? Well, it is thirteen years since I won my first professional race against Harry Hawkins, of Putney, and since then I have rowed some forty-four matches."

Here, 60ft. above the ground, the boats are in waiting. They are capable of seating some six or eight persons, two on each seat. The rails down which the boats are run are well greased, and we look a little anxiously at the water 60ft. below. A "darky" sounds a bugle to clear the way. "Let her go!" and with a shout we are rolling down. It is a most curious sensation. Nearer and nearer the water comes; you hold on to the side, wondering whatever is going to happen, when the next type-setters came in from the composing room, and planting himself before the editor, said: "Well, Mr. Warner, I've decided to enlist in the army." With mingled sensations of pride and responsibility, Mr. Warner replied encouragingly, that he was glad to see that the man in the call of duty. "Oh, it isn't that," said the truthful compositor, "but I'd rather be shot than try to set any more of your copy."

The Marquess of Salisbury has an old fashioned weakness for huge fires of wood, and at Hatfield house there is a species of trolley for the conveyance of the logs—which are deposited in a great bin placed at the top of the Adam and Eve staircase—the gigantic grates in the drawing-rooms, long gallery, and library.

A BRUCE COUNTY MIRACLE.

THE ALMOST FATAL RESULTS OF A FOOTBALL MATCH.

Allan J. Blair's Terrible Suffering—Helpless Upward of Two Years—The Best Physicians Could Hold Out No Hope of Recovery—His Health Fully Restored as the Result of Taking Friendly Advice—A Story That Hundreds Can Vouch For.

(From The Eleventh News.) Many of the readers of the News have seen and conversed with a gentlemanly young fellow who acts as canvasser for the well-known tea firm of G. Marshall & Co., London, and during the past year and a half he has become well known and is highly liked by a large number of people in all the towns and villages of the West. From his personal appearance it would scarcely be believed that two years ago he was subjected to the most excruciating pains that ever tortured a human individual, and was daily growing weaker and weaker, so that only a few months appeared to stand between him and the grave. Yet such was the case. He is to-day a living witness to the power of the Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, a fact which he takes pleasure in relating, but always with the qualifying statement that he took them "according to directions," a matter which many neglect.

Mr. Blair's home is in Huron Township, near the shore of Lake Huron, and the whole family of father, mother and seven sons are respected wherever known. As an old acquaintance the editor of The News can cheerfully testify to their sterling character. All the sons passed through the Kincardine High School and all hold positions in society, one being a Methodist clergyman in Southern Michigan, another being an employe of the London Chemical Works, and one a British Columbian merchant. Allan, of whose integrity all who know him have the highest opinion, has been the most fortunate of all his brothers, he was eventually placed in a condition, in which he often thought death preferable; fortunate in that after giving up all hope he was enabled to recover even robust health again. His story is so wonderful that at first it seems incredible, it is to be believed, however, that there is no room for doubt in the minds of his hearers, and is more-over vouched for by hundreds of old friends. We will now enter into details, as the following statement by Mr. Blair, given freely over his own signature, will make the case quite plain:

"While taking part in a football game at Point Clarke on the Queen's Birthday, 1887, I received a kick on the shin which at first had no serious result, for I worked on the farm the nine following days. Then pains began where I had been kicked, particularly in the morning, and in about two weeks I was forced to seek medical advice. Dr. Walden, of Kincardine, whom I first consulted, said the periosteum was injured, and that serious results might follow. About a month later, as I was not getting better, but the bone swelling and the foot getting black, I went to Dr. Secord; his medicine seemed to do no good, though under his treatment for nearly a month. He said the trouble was with the nerves, and that I could not walk across the room, and vomited everything I ate. I then went to Dr. McCrimmon; he believed it to be chronic inflammation of the bone, and that the nerves were affected from it. I still continued to get worse, and was soon in such a condition that every night I was almost jamped out of bed. The doctor then directed me to go to Toronto. I went to a leading specialist there (Dr. Aitken) on the 25th of May, just a year after the accident. He said that an operation would have to be performed, to take out a portion of the bone. This operation was performed by Dr. Gunn of Clinton, who had previously recommended it. For some time after this I seemed to get better, but soon again commenced to grow worse. The pain left the leg and became a general disease, and so weakened the eyes that I could not read. Next spring I got so bad that I could not even ride in a buggy. The pain would come on suddenly with such violence that I lost all control of myself. The muscles would contract; I would start and laugh immoderately, and this would be followed by a violent shaking, so great that if in bed I would fall out. No person can have any idea of my sufferings at that time. In August, 1891, I was taken into London, but none of the eminent physicians there would hold out any hope of recovery, though one thought he might be able to help me somewhat. I went to the city hospital and had a consultation with the staff, who examined my sight and diagnosed my case. They said there would be no use in coming there, for the treatment would do no good, while the nearness of other patients would have a prejudicial effect. At this time a friend, who had been reading the accounts of the Marshall case at Hamilton, advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At first I declined but urged I consented to try them, with no faith whatever that beneficial results would follow. It was not long before I saw they were helping me, and I continued to take them according to directions, accompanied by the baths, and continued to get steadily better. In four weeks was able to get around, and was able to walk into London every evening, a distance of two miles. I continued taking the pills; went home, but found I was not strong enough for the farm, so I determined to try some light occupation. About Oct. 1 I began to work for George Marshall & Co., selling their teas all over the country. I am now able to get around at all times, in good or bad weather, jumping in and out of a buggy with no effort, and can honestly say that I enjoy health. Thus I have been raised from a bed of perpetual invalidism, with prospects of an early death and continued torture until the end came, to a condition of perfect health, the advantage of which can only be realized by one who has received it back as I have. Hundreds of people can testify to the state I was in. This whole result I attribute to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which I took strictly according to the directions, and without any faith when first I began to take them. I make this statement as a matter of gratitude for my wonderful cure, and trust it may be the means of others receiving as great benefit.

ALLAN J. BLAIR. Blethen, May 9, 1893. The News has every faith in the above statement, which was cheerfully made by Mr. Blair, without solicitation, and we give it publicity both as a matter of news and with the hope that perhaps it may aid another who is suffering similarly, or from some other of the many ailments this great remedy is designed to cure.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. of Brockville, Ontario, and Schenectady, N. Y., a firm of unquestioned reliability.

Pink Pills are not looked on as a patent medicine, but rather as a prescription. An analysis of their properties shows that these pills are an unfailing specific for all diseases arising from an impoverished condition of the blood, or from an impairment of the nervous system, such as loss of appetite, depression of spirits, anemia, chlorosis or green sickness, general muscular weakness, dizziness, loss of memory, locomotor ataxia, paralysis, sciatica, rheumatism, St. Vitus dance, the after-effects of la grippe, all diseases depending upon a vitiated condition of the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to the female system, correcting irregularities, suppressions and all forms of female weakness, building anew the blood, and restoring the glow of health to the pallid cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of any nature. These pills are not a purgative medicine. They contain only life-giving properties, and nothing that could injure the most delicate system. They act directly on the blood, supplying its life-giving qualities by assisting it to absorb oxygen, that great supporter of all organic life. In this way, the blood becoming "built up," and being supplied with its lacking constituents, becomes rich and red, nourishes the various organs, stimulating them to activity in the performance of their functions and thus eliminates diseases from the system.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark and wrapper (printed in red ink.) Bear in mind that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are never sold in bulk, or by the dozen or hundred, and any dealer who offers substitutes in this form is trying to delude you and should be avoided. The public are also cautioned against all other so-called blood builders and nerve tonics, put up in similar form intended to deceive. They are all imitations, whose makers hope to reap a pecuniary advantage from the wonderful reputation achieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Ask your dealer for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and refuse all imitations and substitutes.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company from either address, at 50c. a box, or six boxes for $2.50. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

WOMAN AND HER WORK.

What a touching thing a souvenir is, girls! I don't mean a keepsake, which may mean anything from a friendship ring to a broken ten cent piece...

They can't be expected to know a customer's weak or strong points as well as she should know them herself. All women, except those with hopelessly bad figures and no throats, pay for dressing.

EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN.

In these times when the inclination and the necessity for women to earn their own living are increasing, and the feeling about education has become a mania, it would be a great advantage if more attention were paid to the instruction of girls in special lines of work...

And yet how we cling to them, and lumber up valuable space in order to preserve them. At least I do, or did, until the housecleaning just past; but I had a very inconclusive time of it then, and shattered numerous dusty idols.

I was watching a pretty and rather romantic girl sorting out her upper bureau drawer, the other day, and trying to evolve order out of chaos.

The Queen's idea of giving Princess Victoria May of Teck a white enamel brooch, fashioned as a rose, on her birthday, was a pretty one. Over 100,000 women in New York are working for wages. Three-fifths of them support whole families. In a test case it was found that the single women employed in a certain institution were supporting more people than the married men in the same place.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

The pneumatic tube dates from 1667. London eats 1,600,000 sheep a year. A tobacco plant yields 360,000 seeds. British India licenses 10,147 opium shops. Canadian railroads stretch 15,588 miles. Mice skin is the fabric in a Russian coat. An ocean racer uses $13,400 in coal each trip. Some bricks are made of plaster of paris and cork. It is stated that America has 3,980 miles of electric railway. Workmen in Malaga are said to be allowed a short interval in every hour for smoking. Fully 800,000 domestic animals, valued at £1,500,000, are annually devoured by the wolves in Russia. The largest tomb in the world is the Pyramid of Cheops, 461 ft. high and covering thirteen acres of ground. In Burma it is rather a suspicious thing to give money for a charitable object. It is supposed to mean that the donor has been very wicked, and is desirous to make amends. In parts of Norway and Sweden, where, during the summer, there is almost continuous daylight, barley crops are grown with only from six to eight weeks intervening from seed-time to harvest. Bald heads are rare in China. A Mongolian genius, years ago, discovered a method of sticking in hairs in the bald spots, and his secret was soon learned by his imitative countrymen. Excepting the Death Valley of California, the hottest region on the globe is between the first and second cataracts of the Nile. It never rains there, and many natives do not believe foreigners who tell them that water descends from the sky. The route from England to India is strewn with treasure, owing to the many shipping disasters. An industrious statistician reckons that some hundreds of millions' worth of gold and jewels lie at the bottom of the sea on that frequented way. There are tribes in Africa that cannot count beyond ten. These men refuse to sell animals in any other manner than one at a time, lest the payment for several at once should exceed their mental capabilities and involve them in financial disaster. In a cave in the Pantheon the guide, by striking the flaps of his coat, makes a noise equal to that produced by firing a 13-pound cannon. In the cave of Soudin, near Viborg, Finland, a stone thrown down a certain abyss makes a reverberating echo which sounds like the dying wail of some wild animal. A "photo-corrector" has been invented, and is in practical use, by which the dimensions of any part of a photograph can be altered "and the whole made harmonious." A person five feet and half in height can be made to look five feet or six feet high, as desired, and hands, feet, or any other part, can be similarly corrected. Amber is a resinous mineral solid found abundantly on the shores of the Baltic, and occasionally in Greenland, England, Italy, Spain, Sicily, Siberia and China. It is supposed to be a fossil gum or resin from its constituents and properties, and from containing the bodies of insects included in its mass. It burns the same as resin. There are exactly 88,564 trees in Paris. The Passy quarter possesses the most, 10,000. Afterwards come in order the Champs Elysees, Grenelle, Montparnasse, Les Ternes. The Second Arrondissement has the fewest trees, 739. Experiments are about to be made to cultivate exotic flora in the streets and gardens of the capital. The expression "Vox populi vox Dei" — the voice of the people is the voice of God — has been used only in a political application. Its earliest known use is in the writings of William of Malmesbury, who was born A. D. 1075 or 1095, and died 1142. He quoted the expression as a proverb even in his time sufficiently well known. In Mandargudi there is a large idol temple, and the height of its court is ten or eleven acres. The idol employs a whole retinue of servants—servants to wake him in the morning, to take him to bathe, to cook his breakfast, to wait on him, to grow flowers for him, to fan him, to sing for him and to take him for an airing. In a town of 20,000 inhabitants, the chief events and interests concern the idol. And there are eighty other temples in the town beside.

Kentucky has been called the dark and bloody ground. The name is said to be a translation of the Indian word "Kain-takee," though some authors claim that it signifies "at the head of the river." The epithet was originally bestowed because the region was the scene of many sanguinary conflicts between the red men of northern and southern tribes. Later, the constant feuds between white settlers and the aborigines rendered the phrase peculiarly appropriate to this locality. Blotting-paper is mentioned by Rogers in his history of prices as selling in England as far back as 1465. It was a gray, un-sized paper. Sheets have been found between the leaves of manuscripts, where it had been left after using. Probably, like so many other "inventions," envelopes and colored papers for example—blotting paper was the result of a happy accident. Although blotting-paper is not a new invention, it is not long since it was comparatively little used. Sand was sprinkled on the written paper to absorb the ink, and old desks contain places where the sand-casters or sand-boxes were kept. So far as known the first counterfeiting was done in 1758 by a man named Richard William Vaughn. He was engaged to a young lady in Stafford, England, and, desiring to impress her favorably with an idea of his wealth, he employed a number of artists, each to execute a portion of a Bank of England note. Through one of the engravers the discovery was made known. Vaughn was arrested, and his offense was deemed to come within the scope of the law punishing counterfeiting the King's coin. Vaughn was hanged, but the case with which he demonstrated how counterfeiting could be done soon led to numerous imitations.

"POORER" PICKINGS. Friend—I suppose everything is settled in regard to the marriage of your daughter? Stookley—Well, yes, everything but the bills. He—May I ask you for a dance? She—Certainly; the last one on the list. He—But I'll not be here, then. She—Neither will I. He—I don't believe you'll ever marry me! Why you've already been engaged to some man? She—Yes; but I never married any of them George. She—I hope it isn't my twenty thousand that you're after George? Mr. Grasper—Believe me—no, darling. I'd marry you if you had only nineteen thousand. Lady (on leaving a crowded street car) Well, I'm glad to get out of this crush. I've had to stand on one foot all the way. Voice from the corner—Yes, and that one foot was mine. Riggle—What did Miss Dawson say when you broke off your engagement with her? Teagles—She didn't say anything; she was speechless. Riggle—What a wit she must be! Sawdoff—Did you give that note to my wife? Boy—Yes, Sawdoff—And what did she say? Boy—She never said nothin'. There was two more women there, ah! they all got 'kep' on talking. Great author—Waiter, this steak is as tough as leather. Waiter—I've always heard you was an original character, sir; but I'm hanged if you, don't just say the same as all 'em do! But Emma, how can you prefer the plain and shabby dressed Julius to my elegant and handsome brother? That is quite simple; your brother is in love with himself and Julius with me. Siskman—Now, madam, what can I show you? Lady—I am looking for a cheap dress pattern. Salesman (brusquely)—Other side of the store for cheap dress goods; this is the bargain counter. Inquiring person—What time did the hotel catch fire? Fireman—Midnight. Inquiring person—Everybody got out safe? Fireman—All except the night watchman. They couldn't wake him up in time. If Torkins pays me what he owes me, I shall go to the World's Fair this summer. And if Torkins doesn't pay you what he owes you? Well, it will probably be Torkins that will go to the World's Fair. Lady (leaving a shop)—Ah! I am up to the neck in these people again. I made him come down two shillings on the price. Slopman (to himself)—I am up to the tricks of these lady customers. I put the price up four shillings. Husband—Do you know that every time a woman gets angry she adds a new wrinkle to her face? Wife—No, I did not; but it is so, I presume it is a wise provision of Nature to let the world know what sort of a husband a woman is. Brethren, said a preacher when the collection was being made, "perhaps one of you will be coming made, or put a needle and some thread in the bag, so that I may be enabled to make some use of the buttons with which you are all so liberal." Wife—Why, Charles, what do you mean by burying our old love-letters? Husband—I have been reading them, my dear. And it occurred to me that after I die someone who wished to break my will might get hold of them, and use them to prove I was insane. "What trade are you?" asked his worship. "Sure, now, your honor, 'an I am a tailor." "Mother you ever wear at set in your life." "Be jabbers, now, and does your honor think I came over from Oireland in a waggin'." "You have a lively set of clerks," he said to the proprietor of the establishment. "It must be pleasant and profitable to have employees so full of energy and enthusiasm." "Yes," responded the proprietor; "we close early to-day, and they are getting ready to go home."

Mr. Fitts—What are you smiling at, dear? Mrs. Fitts—I was just thinking how you used to sit and hold my hand for an hour at a time, before we were married, how silly you were! Mr. Fitts—I wasn't silly at all. I held your hand to keep you away from the piano. Mrs. McShantée (triumphantly)—I see you are taking in washin' again, Mrs. McProude. Mrs. McProude (whose husband has just lost a paying job)—Sure it's only to amuse the children. They wants the windies covered with steam, so that they can make pictures on them. "I should like to meet your friend yonder, whom you have introduced to many people this evening." "Sh-h! You don't know what you are saying. I have made him acquainted with a lot of fellows whom I don't like, in order that he may have some one to borrow money of beside myself." Chipmunk—My boy does not seem to care for business at all. All commercial transactions seem to bore him. Can you suggest any business that would be likely to be attractive to him? Underdek—If you mean a business in which he will take a big interest, you might make a pawnbroker of him. Jinks—That fellow Sillipate is the most inexcusable fool I ever saw. Winks—What has been doing to you? Jinks—A few days ago someone invited him to dinner at our boarding-house. Well, sir, that idiot just praised every dish on the table, and complimented the landlady on her cooking, until she raised her terms two pounds a week. "Clara, I love but thee alone." Thus sighed the tender youth. Oh, hear me, then, my passion own. With trembling lips and earnest tone, I swear I speak the truth. He paused—a blush o'erspread her cheek. She let him draw her near. Scarce for emotion could she speak. Yet she did ask, in accents meek, "How much have you a year?" Restaurant Proprietor (to head waiter)—I want you to pay particular attention to the guests from this time out. Head waiter (surprised)—Have I been negligent, sir? Proprietor—You misunderstand me, James I want you to keep your ears open, and if you find the guests have been to the Chicago Exposition, tack about two dollars more on the bill. They'll never notice it.

IN THE CATHEDRAL.

There'll be," said the Honourable Grant Angus, "the deuce to pay if I can't get out."

ed mole on her left temple. I've heard my father say—"Yes," cried Elsie. "It's like as can be to an old stage coach, mother says."

dreamily, smiled and parted her lips to say "Good-night," then as the light fell, her eyelids fell again.

"You really ought to sacrifice yourself in the interests of Art," another would remark. "You'd ruin the professional model, you would, indeed."

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," Jobinard would reply, his hairy, baboon-like face grimacing with delight, "too benevolent Heaven has made me the man I am, and then he struck an attitude."

"What! I'm all cried in a sort of chorus." "Ah, M. Jobinard," I said, pleadingly, "if you would only permit us to photograph your lower extremities."

"Never, gentlemen, never!" replied the infuriated Jobinard. "I care nothing for Art. Besides, it would be almost indecent; I could never look into a print shop without coming face to face with the evidences of my too total beauty."

AN ARTIST'S STORY.

"It's twenty years since that time; I was a light-hearted boy—scarcely twenty. I lived in Paris, and I studied Art. Being an artist, I always spent Art with a capital A. I have other things to think of besides Art now. I have to think of painting what the public will buy. I have to make it pay."

"It is not a bad thing," said I to talk, "to run into Jobinard's for whatever one wanted, and—well, 'stick it up.' You see, you could get an entire meal at Jobinard's of those little sham bonbons—they're quite enough on them for four; tinned provisions in inexhaustible variety; wines from seventy-five centimes upwards; liquors; desserts, even to the shape of cheeses of all sorts, almonds, and raisins, grapes and peaches. It was excessively convenient. When one was hard up, one dealt with Jobinard, and it was put down to the account; when one was in funds, one dined and breakfasted at a restaurant, and left Jobinard's severely alone."

"But now all was changed. Mlle. Amenaide was an uncommonly pretty girl, and we were all desperately head over heels in love with her. By 'we' I mean the Art students; but of all the Art students who were desperately in love with Mlle. Amenaide, the sculptor, was the most demonstrative. Jobinard hated Daburon with a deadly hatred, because Daburon never expended more than ten centimes at a time. It was the society of Mlle. Amenaide that Daburon hungered for, and he got it because he was entitled to it by a purchase."

"Mlle. Amenaide was Jobinard's cashier. It was a large shop, and there were several assistants; but all moneys were paid to Mlle. Amenaide, the cashier, who sat in a glass box underneath the great chiming clock. Daburon, the sculptor, would enter the shop, nod in a cavalier manner to Jobinard, as though he were the very dust beneath his feet; then he would look at Mlle. Amenaide, raise his hat with his right hand, place his left upon his heart, and make her a low bow; then he would pretend to blow her a kiss from the tips of his fingers, as though he were a circus rider; then he would take up a box of matches or some other peculiarly inexpensive article."

"Have the kindness to wrap that up carefully for me in paper," he would remark, in a patronising manner; then he would march up to Mlle. Amenaide with the air of an Alexander—you could almost hear the playing of "See the Conquering Hero Comes" as you saw him do it. He would pay his ten centimes, and whisper some compliment into the ear of Mlle. Amenaide; then he would receive his purchase from the hand of M. Jobinard in a magnificent and condescending manner; then he would strike a ridiculous attitude of exaggerated admiration, and stare at the unhappy grocer as though he were one of the seven wonders of the world. "What arms!" or, "What muscularity!" he would say, and then he would be a sigh and swagger out of the shop."

Jobinard, who was a particularly ugly, thick-set, hairy little man, used at first rather to resent these references to his personal advantages; his four assistants and his cashier would titter, and Jobinard would blush; but at length the poor fellow fell into the snare laid for him by the villain Daburon. He got to believe himself the perfect type of manly beauty. When a Frenchman has once fallen to this conclusion, there is no folly of which he is not ready to be guilty. The fact is, Daburon had passed the word round. The Art students, male and female, invariably stared appreciatively at the little man, and he was treated as the man of the hour; he was the glass of fashion and the mould of form. Jobinard now began to give himself airs; he swaggered about the shop, he exhibited himself in the doorway, he posed and attitudinized all the day long; and then we began to make it rather warm for Jobinard, if you were only a poor man, what a thing it would be for Art! Ah, it was only had you to sit to us for the nude. We are going to do Ajax delving the lightning next week. What an Ajax you would make, Jobinard!"
