Hair Tonic. A beautiful head of hair is a precious gift, and one upon which too much care and attention cannot be expended. Nature has been most generous to many women, but there are those who, having been denied this crown of beauty, are anxiously seeking the means to remedy this defect. The hair is entirely dependent upon the nerve supply, and the perfect circulation of the scalp; therefore, whatever in the nature of a wash stimulates the nutritive quality of the hair roots, aids it in keeping it in a healthy condition. Oriental Rum and Quinine Hair Tonic brings back beauty to the solft, silky and luxuriant. It is not a dye, but feeds and nourishes the roots of the hair, cleans the scalp, removes and cures dandruff. This tonic is a dainty and re-

THE POST-MORTEM.

Mr. Riddell asked leave to put in the report of the post-mortem on the body of Joseph Sifton by Dr. Hadley Wilcams, assisted by Drs. Eccles and Waugh, of London. It was admitted on his undertaking to later put in the box the doctors making the examination. The report was as follows:

the head a number of times, what effect would that have upon the skull?" "I would expect it would smash the skull." answered the witness. A skull was produced, owned by Dr Williams, who performed the post-mortem. On it he had marked in red the wounds found on Joseph Sifton's head, while black lines indicated the fractures, and a circular blue line the separation. This skull was used by counsel, and by both the medical witnesses, for purpose of demonstration. Mr. Johnston made FREQUENT USE OF THE SKULL and the blood-stained bricks, placing them in various relative positions to illustrate his questions as to the possible cause of all the injuries. The blow of an axe, said Dr. Anderson, would not create the abrasions behind the ear, but dragging the body along the floor might do so. The small wound on top of the head might have been caused by a blow from the sharp edge of an axe or by contact with the corner of a brick or board. The boggy wound on top of the head would prob-

After falling a distance of 25 feet and receiving such injuries as were found in this case the man could not change his position; therefore as the body was found lying with the left side down, the wounds would probably be on the left and not on the right side. Falling such a distance, sand and dirt would probably be found in the hair. With blows given would probably be fractured. With the first two series of blows given with the body lying on its face, chaif need not necessarily be found in the hair. With the body laid on the hay, hay might be found in the hair. Mr. Johnston then took the witness. After pointing out that the prisone as a tall, active man, and after reading Herbert's evidence as to the blows administered, Mr. Johnston asked witness to consider the post-mortem and the evidence of Dr. McNeil, and then say whether it was true. "It depends on the strength of the blows," answered witness. "In the first place, the blows were struck with the side of the axe, which is not the way blows are struck when splitting or chopping. In the second place, from the injuries, the scatp wounds and fractures were not produced by blows struck on the same spot on the head. As to the real force that was used, that is impossible for me to actually estimate. The description of the blows and how they were struck, and the idea. I got from the evidence submitted, and the conditions as found in the skull at the post-mortem, I should say was QUITE CONSISTENT with the story Herbert told." "I have read to you what Herbert id," continued Mr. Johnston. "Take these blows, intended to kill, given by a man as though splitting or chopping wood, swinging an axe viciously, and apparently as hard as he could strike. Will you go thus far-that, after eleven to fourteen blows, you would not find the fracture across the top of the skull and the man's head practically knock-

"I will not go so far as to say that." answered the witness. When do you say that the fracture t the side was caused?"

To many of Mr. Johnston's questions the witness could only answer "IT MIGHT, AND IT MIGHT NOT." Taking a fall of 30 feet, witness would not expect to find the injuries sustained. Alighting on the head, witness would expect a fracture of the base of the skull. To Mr. Riddell, witness that that if bacilli could get into the scalp and cause gas, the gas could escape. DR. GEORGE A. BINGHAM, a practicing physician in Toronto, and professor of surgical anatomy in Trinty Medical College, said that for three or four years he had performed post-mortems for Toronto General Hospital, doing 50 to 100 a year. Witness heard evidence of Dr. McNeil and Walter Herbert. To witness the injuries to the skull and scalp did not appear to be consistent with a fall of 25 or 30 Asked for his reasons, witness.

said:
"The fractures probably could have been produced by a fall, but I am at a loss entirely to explain the injuries to the soft tissues by a single fall. In the first place, these injuries to the soft tissues were separated. We have THREE SEPARATE INJURIES to the soft tissues, separated from each other by considerable space. We have one described at the right side of the scalp, one being nearer the base line. Then we have the injuries to the scalp described by Dr. McNeil; then two smaller wounds behind each ear."

The nature of the injuries produced by a strong man striking blows with an axe, using all his force, would dean axe, using all his force, would depend upon the thickness of the skull, second, upon the location of the skull; third, upon the nature of the weapon; fourth, upon the degree of violence used, and lastly upon the shape of the skull.

The injuries in the present case could all be produced by BLOWS FROM AN AXE, and the conditions found were consist-

When the arteries in the scalp are injured, the flow of blood is spurting, free, rapid. With a contused wound, the bleeding would be of an oczing, dripping nature, possibly of a profuse character.

With the body in the positions described by Herbert, chaff would not get in the hair unless there was a large quantity of chaff on the floor. Hay might or might not get in the wounds

"You think, in your judgment, that the injuries were not caused by a fall?" asked counsel.

"One wants to be extremely careful about a statement of that kind, because there are so many varying fractures," was the reply. A man may fall from a tremendous height, and have very little injury, and he may fall a short distance and have many frac Considering all the facts of the case. I am satisfied that all the fractures might fairly readily be produced by the fall described, with the excep-tion of the traverse fracture above, but I AM NOT SATISFIED

Witness gave as his reason for believing that the transverse fracture was not caused by a fall, the fact that it extended across the frontal entire, a condition never seen by him except where there had been a separate point

The abrasions behind the ear were not consistent with a fall. To the jury witness explained that an abrasion of the skin was the separation of Riddell. the skin was the separation or removal of the epidermis, or first layer of the skin, from the inner layer. Witness could not see how a celluloid collar could produce the abrasions.

The doctor admitted that given the skull alone, without hearing the evidence, it would be easier to form an opinion of the cause of the injuries. It had been difficult, he admitted, to form a theory after taking into consideration the evidence of Dr. McNeil and Herbert, the post-mortem, the of the crown and the theory of

To Mr. Riddell witness said that much when delivered in the manner described, because the head would be pivot and much of the force of the blow would be exhausted .. If the head were in a fixed position, such as against a wall, the skull would be completely smashed. While the first fracture would weaken the skull, it would not do so so seriously as if there was a depression existing.

Dr. Bingham's examination finished the name of Dr. Gustin, of St. Thomas, was called, but it being within a few minutes of adjournment, the court decided to adjourn till 9:30 a.m. Satur-

Saturday Morning.

Promptly at 9:30 this morning the doors of the court house were thrown open, and as many of the waiting crowd entered as could squeeze in before the constables barred the entrance. The courtroom filled, Sheriff Cameron called "Silence!" Judge MacMahon entered and another day of the Sifton murder trial had begun.

The judge announced that it was the intention to adjourn court at 1 p.m. and not resume until 9:30 a.m. Monday. In the meantime the jury wished to have another view of the premises in order to clear up certain points. His lordship asked counsel if they were both agreed as to the advisability of letting the jury go to the spot this afternoon. On receiving their answer, his lordship directed that the jury visit the spot again in charge of Col. Macbeth, and accompanied by representa tives of both the crown and the de-

The taking of medical evidence was then proceeded with. The first witness called was Dr. Charles P. Jento, of London, a graduate of McGill Colege, Montreal, who has practiced eigh years in London and three on the Pacific coast. Witness had heard the evidence given by Walter Herbert, Dr McNell, and those who saw the body lying on the ground, and had examined the post-mortem report. It was very possible that the injuries describ-

Mr. Riddell, he said, must take Herbert's evidence as given. To Mr. Johnston the witness said that a man of the size and strength

Gerald Sifton striking eleven to fourteen blows, would produce very severe fractures of the skull. The only way to account for the condition of the skull as found was to discount the force of the blows as described by Herbert. [From Mr. Bryan's Commoner.] One of the many striking and touching incidents occurring at Buffalo was the meeting between the president and Mrs. McKinley for the first time after the assault. The dispatches report that Mrs. McKinley took a seat at the bedside and held the president's hand. The distinguished sufferer looked into the face of his good wife, and said in a low tone: "We must bear up; it will be better for us both." With tears streaming down her cheeks, Mrs. Mc-Kinley nodded assent. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. That

There is a depth of pathos in this little incident that must appeal forcefully to those who appreciate the strength of the ties that bind a good husband to a good wife. There may be some people who have no idea of the thoughts that were passing through the minds of this couple at that moment. There are, however, many others who can imagine what these thoughts were. There, on the bed of pain, lay the strong, powerful man. By his side sat the frail woman, whose physical weakness has been, for so many years, the subject of this husband's tender solicitude. It matters not to what extent othe men and women may have grieved; it matters not how many tears other men and women may have shed, and how much other hearts may have ached All of this grief and wee could have been so acute as was the grief and woe which this man and woman suppressed in compliance with the suggestion, "It will be better for us both There is nothing in all this world more beautiful than a happy marriage. He carries on an extensive plumbing business at 610 Tenth avenue. He is Post Duty of Grand Knights of Reigna Ceila Council, Knights of Columbus of New York. Those who read the criticisms of the Toronto papers of the opening performance cannot but agree that the opera will create one of the best hits of any similar production in recent years. It has been most sumptuously staged and costumed. Mr. Roote, through his long connection with theatrical affairs in this city, guarantees that those who witness the performance will see one of the best comic operas, including the cast, which has appeared in London in many years. The opera will appear at the New Grand two nights, Oct. 11 and 12, and Saturday matinee. As the latter day is the date upon which the Duke and Duchess of York visit London, without doubt the theater will be crowded with strangers. *Canadian Cattle at the Pan.

Judged by the success of the Canad-Yan exhibit of live stock at the Pan-American Exhibition, Canada has become justly entitled to be regarded as the greatest agricultural and live stock country on this continent. The United States contains a population fourteen times as large as ours, yet when we compare the prize-taking capabilities of the two countries we find something more like an inverse ratio in Canada's fovor. Canadian cattle at the Pan-American won sixty per cent of the prizes given! This is a remarkable showing, considering that Canadian cattle formed but thirty-five or forty per cent of the total entries. In Shorthorn cattle, Canadians won $1,000 in prizes, as against $418 by the United States; in Ayrshires $430, as against $130; In French - Canadians, $402, as against $157; in fat cattle, $300, as stood early in 1896 that Mr. Justice against 0; in Herefords, $355, as against $749; in Aberdeen Angus, $72, as against $480; in Galloways $197, as against $247; in Guernseys, $130, as seems to have reconsidered his deteragainst $710, and in Holsteins, $412 as mination, as he still holds on to office, against $930.

A New Suit of Clothes.

Mr. Sidney Webb, in the Nineteenth Century and After, tells us that Lord Rosebery has escaped from Hounsditch; that is, he has put off his old clothes; but, according to this authority, he does not seem to have put on the new clothes, so that politically he seems to be in a rather naked condition. This writer comes down heavily on ordinary Liberals. They are in a bad plight. "It is not 'little Englandism' that is the matter with them; it is, as Huxley and Mathew 'Arnold correctly diagnosed it, administrative Nihilism." Speaking of the leader of the Liberal party, he says: "Not that I have any right to reproach these eminent ones for standing by their principles. The principles were fresh once-in the last quarter of the eighteenth century; their experimental minds were fresh, tooabout the middle of the nineteenth century. But Adam Smith is dead; and Queen Anne; and even Sir Robert Peel; while as to Gladstone, he is by far the deadest of them all." There is much more of this dreadfully clever sarcasm, with which we have only slight sympathy. But we can agree with the writer when he comes to give his idea of what the of that patriotic spirit which is inspirnew political suit of clothes must be. It is to be of the national efficiency type, and will have to deal with important social problems. Something must be done to face the great evils under which the nation is staggering. The education of the democracy—the housing of the poor—the lessening of the drink evil—these are just as vital of that patriotic spirit which is inspiring as an example to the rising generation. Would to God that Canada could produce more men of the Principal Grant stamp." The Freeman then joins most respectfully with the rest of the community in thanking Almighty God for the apparent recovery of the best-known of the elder humorists, including "Petroleum V. Philander Doesticks," "Sam mighty God for the apparent recovery of Principal Grant, praying that he may be spared many years of activity new political suit of clothes must be. ing as an example to the rising gen-

The nation must prove that it can care for its people and give to all of them a chance of making something out of their lives. Along these lines a new Liberalism will work ere long with something of the old enthusiasm and effect.

Mr. Justice MacMahon's Suggestion Respecting Criminal Justice.

Before the last session of the Ontario Legislature we published several suggestions for the consideration of the Provincial House. One of these suggestions was that there should be officer whose duty it would be to investigate all criminal charges before the accused was put on frial or arrested, and that bureau magis-Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, but trates should not be allowed to try and that county magistrates, with legal experience, should be appointed to try or investigate cases; and that reasons we gave was that in many cases it was almost as disastrous to be accused as it would be to be convicted. We pointed out the Scotch system as one that might be adopted with advantage.

Mr. Justice MacMahon, at Brockupon the Scottish system, but for oth-He pointed out the inconvenience and expense in the northern, unsettled instances jurors, without regard to other engagements, were brought 200 miles, to find practically no business to attend to when they arrived. Our belief is that if we want pure administration of justice, it is just as necessary to have competent, conscientious magistrates, as to have competent Superior Court judges, and crown officers would result in good. The importance of the subject demands its consideration by the Legislature, and we hope before long to see the law amended on the lines sug-

It seems odd to ordinary Canadian travelers to see it recorded in the press dispatches that the royal train, carrying the Duke and Duchess west, stops an hour in the morning to enable them to put their clothes on.

The trouble that afflicted the Duchess of Cornwall and York, prior to and for some days after she arrived in Canada, we learn on reliable authority, was neuralgia. The Duchess suffered much for a time, but how well she concealed it while in public.

EMERSON REMEMBRANCES. A very delightful little volume is "Remembrances of Emerson," which comes from the press of Robert G. Cooke, 70 Fifth avenue, New York. It is far out of the way of what are ordinarily put forth as "reminiscences" of great men. Instead of being a mere collation of trivialities and personalities, in which the narrator and personalities, in which the narrator is even more conspicuous that his subject, it is truly a marvelously interesting study of the noble characteristics of the great teacher as manifested in his life and writings, and a clear exposition of the causes and extent of his mighty influence upon the thought of his day. The impress of that influence upon the mind of the author is curiously vivid. Not only is the work dignified by the elevated purpose and intellectuality of Emerson, but its style, naturally and evidently without any trace of mere imitative effort, is markedly Emersonian, so that it seems rather a reflex of him than a book about him. All who appreciate and revere "the Sage of Concord" should possess and cherish John Albee's "Remembrances."

AN IMMORTAL POEM. The most widely known and oftenest quoted verse in the English language is "Thirty days hath November, April, June and September, February hath XXVIII. alone,

And all the rest have XXXI." It is the one thing learned at school that nobody forgets, the one aid to memory that really helps remembrance. Yet probably not one person in a hundred thousand who habitually use it in every-day life recollects or has ever known the name of its author. Richard Grafton, who wrote this immortal poem, was one who wrote this immortal poem, was one of the earliest and most distinguished of English publishers. He embarked in the business only about 60 years later than Caxton, "the father of English printing," and, between 1539 and 1553, brought out "The Great Bible" (Matthew's), Coverdale's Translation of the New Testament, "Actes of Parliament," and other books. The name of Grafton has lately been rescued from an undeserved obscurity, and made familiar to the reading public at least, by a well-known firm of New York publishers, who have established "The Grafton Press," thereby reviving a title henored 350 years ago. mored 350 years ago.

> "JUELL DEMMING," by Albert L. Lawrence, is the story of a young Canadian who is an ardent believer in the brotherhood of the Anglo-Saxon race. These theories govern his career and take him from his Canadian home to live in a small country town near the great lakes. His enthusiasm leads him into the Spanish-American war, and fininto the Spanish-American war, and finally into the English army during the struggle in South Africa. The earlier scenes of the book form an accurate portrayal of one phase of American life, and Demmnig's later adventures as a soldier are described with much spirit. Representatives of Large Religious Bodies Were Left Out.

When Invitations to the Function at Ottawa Were Distributed—A Sort of Explanation.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.-With the departure of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall from Ottawa a chorus of complaint is raised by clergymen, not of the Roman Catholic or Anglican churches, that ministers of other deplatform upon which the addresses of welcome to the royal visitors were presented. Rev. Dr. Moore, of the Bank Street Presbyterian Church, writes to the papers to say that he went to the place reserved for delegates as a representative of the Band of Mercy, but noticing clergy of the Roman Catholic Church upon the platform, and learning that Bishop Hamilton of the Anglican Church was also there, he retired to the point near the main entrance. Dr. Moore states that if any Presbyterian minister had received an Moore) would not have withdrawn, and, continuing, says: "If anybody can plead for the recognition of his church on the score of establishment in the old country, I can plead the same right for mine. I do nothing of the sort. There is no established church in this country; all denominations here are on an equal footing, and the government, which is bound by every consideration of righteousness and peace, as well as self-interest, to treat all the great religious bodies of this country with equal respect, has, I humbly submit, no right to create invidious distinctions by showing favors to one religious body which they with-hold from another. Manifestly some-body has blundered. Some may think this a small matter. I cannot regard it as such, because, in my judgment, the question of religious equality is distinctly involved. If in this matter I have made a mistake I hereby apologize to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cornwall and York and all others to whom amends are due. If, however, esteem it an honor to deserve the continued confidence of my friends." Interviews of similar tenor are published by the local press. "There's a

> The sole consolation which the viperous brood of anarchists have upon an occasion such as the present is that their crime sets the various governments of the civilized world in a ferment as to how to check the pest. The crimes of anarchy are so futile, so stupid, and withal so easy to carry out, that their terror consists in the impossibility of foreseeing when they will happen. Any complacency that the anarchist leaders may feel in the trouble that they have created will, we hope, be removed by drastic concerted measures against them. United States will lead the way with

But in the meantime the assassins, whether they are the actual perpetrators or the instigators of murder, must be taught that punishment swift and terrible awaits them. It is impossible to legislate for the removal of motive in an apparently motiveless crime, and where an assassin is willing to lay down his life to accomplish a crime it is well-nigh impossible to prevent him carrying his design into execution. Whether an attack be successful or not, death, and that carried out in private after a private trial, should inevitably follow. The insensate vanity of the anarchist's mind revels in the glorification of a public execution and the world-wide reports of his trial, and these gratifications should be taken away from him. But the head and front of the evil is the propagandist, the man of culture and education who scatters his glib vaporings about property and the rights of man broadcast by means of the press. Authors and publishers of incendiary and seditious prints should be punished as severely and in as uninteresting manner as though it be the educated brain which conceives inflammatory articles, and the hand which has never done an honest day's work which writes them, yet the miserable beings who translate these theories into acts are the poor who are bred in misery and nurtured in hopelessness. Their own misery, and what they do or cannot do, assume a disproportionate importance in their eyes, and in the vaporings of anarchist writers they see revelations of a Utopia.

The remedy is to shut off the stream of violent ideas at the fountain head.

At Quebec business in wholesale circles has been fairly active. Travelers are reported taking some very fair orders for the fall sorting trade. There is a good feeling of confidence in trade circles, and payments are very fair for this season. Retailers, particularly drygoods, appear satisfied with the volume of business, and report a good trade for seasonable goods.

Trade in "oronto has displayed a fair amount of otivity in fall goods. There has been a good inquiry for various lines of staple goods from the retailer to sort stocks. The increase in the farmers' delivery of grain at country markets has had the effect not only of enlarging the sales, but also of improving the payments.

Business at Hamilton continues quite active. Travelers' orders are very numerous, and all of the liberal supplies of seasonable lines to sort stock. Large shipments are being made to various parts of the country. Country remittances are fairly good, and will

Over the Line. DUN'S REVIEW.

New York Sept 27 - Dun's review: Normal conditions have been fully restored in the distribution of merchandise, the placing of delayed orders stimulating the few lines that appeared to halt. One of the most gratifying features of the business situation is the pronounced preference for the better grades of goods, clearly indicating the improved financial condition of consumers. Resumption of work has progressed rapidly in the steel industry since the settlement of the labor controversy, and there is little discord between employer and employed in Auburn, Sept. 28.—Czolgosz is in nor-other lines. Steel production is now mal condition today, and seems to have progressing at nearly the average rate. Higher prices are quoted for both steel and iron bars, steel billets and some other shapes. The market for footwear is still on a strong basis. In a few cases prices are higher, while in other grades small lots are sold at better figures, but not sufficient business is recorded to warrant a change in list prices. The print cloth situation at Fall River is a peculiar one. A month ago talk was heard of possible strikes, due to the reductions of wages. The finances for the current year are as follows: Receipts, $248 65; disbursements, $233 24; leaving a balance on hand of $15 41.

MR. BISHOP'S ADDRESS. Rev. J. G. Bishop, pastor of the First Methodist Church, delivered the first address, on a subject pertaining to the work of the alliance. He stated that substantial progress had been made in ecutive committee of the Synod of the accomplishment of the objects for which the organization stood, and more aim of the alliance, he stated, has been the promotion and fostering of a healbeen in a large measure successful. In conclusion the speaker enjoined on people in regard to the matter of Sab-bath observance, and of transferring indifference into zeal. Not only is the welfare of the state bound up in the observance of this Holy Day, but family life depends upon it as well.

MR. PATTERSON. Mr. John Patterson, K. C., barrister, of Toronto, then addressed the meeting, emphasizing the legal side of the situation He claimed to be "a plain. blunt man, with a plain, blunt message." He stated that formerly the question was: "In what way can we spend the Sabbath Day to the best advantage?" , cday the question is, shall we retain the Sabbath, which has survived the ages down to the present time?" How shall we preserve it from desecration and destruction? This is the question arousing the minds of qualities which it possesses are valued plous men and holy women. He refer-red to the British North America act, showing how the matter of Sabbath Day observance was originally left, and supposed to be, in the jurisdiction of the several provinces. He recounted the efforts of the Lord's Day Alliance towards insisting on having the ques-tion of jurisdiction settled, so as to definitely whether to go for amendments to the provincial legislatures or to the Dominion Parliament. That question of jurisdiction was still undecided. Mr. Patterson emphasized the statements of the previous speak-er on the importance of co-operating preserve the rest day with the labor unions. The speaker had no faith in "making men moral by act of parlia-ment," but he did believe it was not only in the power, but that it was the duty of parliament to make it as easy as possible for men to do right, and as hard as possible for them to do wrong. In conclusion, he dwelt upon the importance of creating a public sentiment favorable to strict observance of the to legislation rests with the people. Votes of thanks were tendered the principal speakers and the proceedings terminated.

It is at such times that noble minds give all the reins to their good nature. They indulge their genius even to intemperance, in kindness to the afflicted, in generosity to the conquered; forbearing insults, forgiving injuries, overpaying benefits. Full of dignity themselves, they respect dignity in all, but they feel it sacred in the unhappy. But it is then, and basking in the sunshine of unmerited fortune, that low, sordid, ungenerous, and reptile souls with their hoarded poisons; it is then that they display their odious splendor and shine out in the full luster of their native villainy and baseness. It is in that season that no man of sense or honor can be mistaken for one of them.

ken you are! Anybody can exchange idle gossip. Anybody can recapitulate the troubles of the kitchen, the cost of the last new dress, and the probable doings of the neighbors. But to talk wisely, instructively, freshly and delightfully is an immense accomplishment. It implies exertion, observation, study of books and people, and receptivity of impression." Plato banished the musicians from his feasts that the charms of conversation might have no interference, but in our later fashions many prefer music rather than the gossip of the hour, which often degeneretes into trivialities, wearisome and commonplace. As a mirror reflects the face, so conversation reveals the mind, and Dr. Johnson said he could tell just how much a man knew if he could hear him talk for a while.

The ballad was sent to Mr. Unwin, who said in reply that it self said in one of his letters: 'If trifle, and merely trifle, it is because am reduced to it by necessity; a melancholy, that nothing else so effectually disperses, engages me sometimes in the arduous task of being merry by force. "Hear. Hear."

What is the origin of the parliamentary expression, "Hear, hear"? According to Macaulay, the phrase came into ordinary use towards the close of the seventeenth century, and was the successor of the deep hum with which Englishmen were wont to express approval not only of a speaker, but also of a preacher. In describing the par-llament prorogued by William III. in 1689, the historian writes: "In the commons the debates were warm. The house resolved itself into a committee, and so great was the excitement that ! when the authority of the speaker was withdrawn it was hardly possible to preserve order. Tragedy in Daily Life.

Very few of us have the power to see the element of tragedy behind the commonplace facts of our daily life. There are few eyes so keen that they can see through the veil of contention and custom that hides from the world ing to the discussion, had during some the play of our own lives. It is very years been gradually becoming what it difficult for the cleverest of us to see, now is; that is to say, a cry indicative, far less to believe, that heroism, crime and tyranny may clothe themselves in common garb, and walk the same pavements with ourselves. It is very difficult for you and me to pehold, far less to believe, that men and women whom we know perfectly well, and meet every day of our lives, and think commonplace enough, are living or have lived through experiences the bare truth of which, could you but guess it, were infinitely more strange than any fable that ever provoked your laughter or your tears. Hearts, human hearts, are throbbing close to the most of us at least with an anguish of remorse, and guilt, and shame, it may be, of which we never dream. ENGLISH JOKE MURDERERS.

The remarkable ease with which an Englishman can murder a good American joke was illustrated a few days ago in a railroad station in Washington.

A big, good-natured farmer was awaiting the suburban train for Rockville, accompanied by a handsome Gordon setter. Two sons of Briton, evidently sightseers, who had been visiting the capital, stood near him, The dog strayed away from his owner, who was reading a newspaper, and with canine curiosity was poking his nose into an old negro woman's basket, much to her annoyance.

"Hey!" called the farmer, on notic-ing the setter's actions, "Come here, Locksmith," and the dog immediately ran to his feet. One of the Englishmen left his companion and approached the

'May I ask," he said, "what you called that dog?"
"Locksmith," said the farmer.

'And why, pray?" Because every time I kick him he makes a bolt for the door."
There was a general laugh, in which the Englishman good naturedly joined. When he returned to his companion, he remarked: "Most extraordinary name that man over there calls his dog."

"What?" asked his friend. "Locksmith," replied the first Briton.

"And why such a name?" Because, he says, every time he kicks 'im he bolts for the door!'

THE KING WHO CARED FOR THE COW. King Victor and the King of Italy were walking a few days ago near the Chauteau de Racconigi, and, the after-noon being warm, her majesty became thirsty, and said she would like to get a glass of milk or water some-An old woman was taking care of a cow nearby, and the king went and asked her for a little milk. Fancying that the young man was an ordinary tourist, the old peasant answered that her cow had no milk. "But you have some water at home?" asked the king.

"Of course, I have," was the reply.
"Will you be good enough to fetch me continued the king. "Yes, if you will take care of my cow until I come back," answered the "All right," said Victor Emmanuel, and from that moment, he kept his eye on the cow. Ten minutes later the old woman came back with a bowl of fresh water.

"How is it," asked the king, "that chauteau to see the king, queen and little princess," was the reply. "Only old women like me have been left at home, and so we'll never have the luck to see the king and his family."
"Your are mistaken, my good woman," answered the king, as he handed her a new gold piece, "I am the king, and this lady is the queen." For some moments the old peasant woman was too surprised that she could not speak; then in a faltering voice she cried: 'Pardon me, your majesty, but I really had no notion that you were the king."

The royal couple tried hard to calm her, and at length succeeded, but even as they were strolling away she was still reproaching herself, and saying over and over again:

"How crazy I must have been to ask the king to take care of my cow."

sink back into the shadow as they watch her pure face. Through them she helped to undo the horrible souldestroying work of brutal civilization. Mysteriously, diversely the work of the world is done.

The incident was significant, because this is the way Mrs. Roosevelt has always gone about. She has had a talent for avoiding public notice. However, when it becomes necessary for her to face and meet the public she does it with the tact and savoir faire of one to whom the obligation is both pleasant good deal of information in natural history which often leads up wonderfully to other things. The information she gives second place, and this is explained by one o her cardinal beliefs about the training

"Keep them fanciful and imaginative and teach them to be so," she has said.
"It may turn the world to gold for them some day."

Another of Mrs. Roosevelt's teachings to her children has been in what she once called "the art of being fond of people." She has always wanted her children to love as many as possible of the people with whom they have come in contact. They are very affectionate children, all of them, so this teaching has not been difficult to inculcate. It was only recently that stranger, sitting on the veranda at Oyster Bay, felt a little touch on he arm and found Ethel, Mrs. Roosevelt's only little daughter, slipping a hand i accompanies Mrs. Roosevelt when she walks in the woods at Oyster Bay or drives to town. The animal Mrs. Roosevelt really cares most about, however, is her horse Yagenka. The mare is a Kentucky thoroughbred, named character in one of the books of Sienkiewicz, of whose works Mrs. Roosewelt is very fond. Every morning when she is at Oyster Bay her horse is at the door after an early breakfast, and she gallops down the mile of winding road, under great trees, that leads to the two miles of hard, firm road skirting the bay.

When she has reached this road she has come to the confines of her hus-band's estate; but there is no stately iron gate, and, in fact, no gate at all, to mark the entrance. Incidentally it may be noted that there is not a "No trespassing" sign about the whole place. Any horseman is just as free to canter up the drive-way as the mistress of the beautiful place is herself

For riding Mrs. Roosevelt wears usually a black habit and white stock and tie, with a little low, stiff hat and tan riding gloves. She rides exceptionally well, and she is seen on the suburban roads about Washington, though not so frequently as she was in Albany. She often rides with Miss Alice, who is also an expert horse-

The vagaries of the owners must be aken into account and the picture hanger has to be something of a dipomat at all times. TAKING A COURSE IN COLLEGE!

The Kind of Boys That Should Not Go.

Adelbert College, Chicago.]

"My boy shall go to college even if he cannot enter until he is 40 years old," said a mother whom I knew well and whose son I knew well.

That boy is now more.

whose son I knew well.

That boy is now more than 50 years old, and he has not entered college. The reason that he did not go to college is the reason which is usually sufficient to keep anyone from going, viz., the lack of intellectual interests. A boy may readily have intellectual interests and yet give to the ordinary observer slight evidence. reason which is usually sufficient to keep anyone from going, viz., the lack of intellectual interests. A boy may readily have intellectual interests and yet give to the ordinary observer slight evidence that he does have them. Some boys develop late. But parents with knowledge more intimate may believe, despite the evidence that their son has such intellectual, the two things to be said by the sum of the sum of the latter of the sum of the sum of the latter of the sum of the latter of good intellect, who has the knack of helping himself, should turn away from the college gate hopeless. But, after all, the two things to be said absolutely are those. The how who leaded absolutely are those. ntellectual accomplishments that should be entered. Happy the parent who has such a true prevision of his son's future! Happy the son who has so true a prophet in his father!

TWO TYPES. There are two types of boys who usually lack intellectual interest to such an extent that they should not think of going to college. They are what I shall going to college. They are what I shall call the vain boy and the executive boy. The vain boy is the boy of the empty brain, but thinks that his brain is full. He is the boy who is so ignorant that he es not know he is ignorant. He is the by who said, when his father tole e could not go to college: "Well, will have a new suit of clothes." xecutive boy is of quite a different type. He is the boy who likes to do things. Elessings on him! He will be of far greater value to the world than many a thinker. But he would find the life of thought and of learning of the college exceedingly dull, tedious, irksome. He should not enter the door of that life. He should be content with sitting down upon its doorstep. ANOTHER THAT SHOULD NOT GO. 'I am not going to send my son to college till he can say no and stick to it," said a father. The remark suggested the truth interpretive of the boy of another type who should not go to college. It is the boy who lacks strength of will. wills, like steel beams, have a breaking point. I also know that the will may yield once, or twice, or even thrice, and retain its permanent tension and tenac-ity. But the boy who enters college should have the power to hold firmly the decisions made wisely. For the freshman of today finds fewer helps in rules and regulations for reinforcing the strength of his will than his father and grandof his will than his latter and grandfather found. It is possible also he may find less help in the personal associations of his teacher. He is flung into a new world. It is a world of equals and superiors. Being a freshman he will not be ined to believe it is a world also of riors! It is a condition of mera temptations; but it is also a condition of general testing. He is his own man and master as he has not been. His time is his own; he can transmute time into treasures more precious than rubies. He can also transmute it into pestiferous evils. His strength of mind and heart is also his own—either to use worthily and to increase it, or to use unworthing and to diminish its sum and to degrade its possibilities. Into this condition of moral ireedom, so akin to the world of freedom nto which God puts every soul, is put he college student. If he be a man who needs restraint, supervision, penalties, he should not enter it. If he be at all the should not enter it. If he be at all the type of a man who once had an interview with Dr. Ballou, the founder of Universalism in America, he should not go to college. "If I believe as you believe," said the man to Dr. Ballou, "I should lie, steal, murder." "Yes," replied Dr. Ballou, "I think you would; you look it." The man who cannot do right without fear of penalty should not be in college.

STRONG WILL-POWER NEEDED. The appetites are, of course, the source of peculiar temptations to the young man in college as they are to all young men. These temptations there is to be strength of will sufficient to overcome. If there be not sufficient strength of will to over-come, then, in the condition of freedom, the candidate for college should remain in his home, where he may have the special advantages of loving personalities and strong atmosphere to support his will. The temptation to lie is also a and strong atmosphere to support his will. The temptation to lie is also a temptation of the college, as of all men. It is a temptation which usually arises from cowardice. The tendency to yield to it is among the hardest of all the inclinations of the college men to eliminate. The man whose will is weak, whose heart is so craven, that he lies easily, should not go to college. Where should he go? perhaps some anxious parent may ask. The answer to the question would carry us too far afield, even if any answer at all could be given.

At this point one should not fail to notice that there are colleges and that there are colleges. One boy may have a will so weak that to enter him at a college in which freedom prevalis would be to invite moral suicide. Another boy may enter the same college and find in it a condition which creates the strongest manhood. The first boy may enter annother college in which, through gentle.

and wise ministries, he may be nourished from characteristic weakness into ethical worthiness. The second-named boy, en-tering this college, might find his innate strength disintegrating and the ideals of maniy achievement depraved. It would be trying to grow oaks in a hothouse. The question, therefore, of whether a boy should or should not go to college is in no small degree a question of whether he should go or not go to a particular college. Colleges are not alike, as are spades and pass' colleges differentiates.

It is sometimes said that the lack of money is sufficient to keep a boy from going to college. Lack of money may keep a boy from going to college, but it need not. Colleges are made for boys of write of grace of grantion and of power. absolutely are these: The boy who lacks intellectual interest or the boy who lacks strong will should not go he attempt of a mother or send such a boy to college constitutes a grave peril for the boy. The receiving of such a boy by the college constitutes a grave peril for the college lest its fair name as a healthful, intellectual and moral force be tarnished.

BAD COUGH CURED

It is absolutely necessary in treating lung trouble to get to the seat of the trouble. Generally speaking, lung trouble of any kind, if it hangs on is due to system weakness. Put the system right—make the body healthy and you will get rid of the disease. Powley's Liquified Ozone makes the system healthy; forms healthy flesh and gives you an enjoyment of the food you eat. But more than that its antiseptic effect destroys the germs of disease. Mme. Cherrier suffered for years from a most obstinate cough and bronchitis. This is her story:

THE OZONE COMPANY, Ltd., TORONTO, ONT. Gentlemen: There suffered for the past four years with Bronchitis; sometimes very bad. I could not sleep at nights and my cough was very severe. I tried many remedies, but to no effect, when about the 1st of June, I procured a bottle of "Powley's Liquided Ozone," and from the first I began to get relief. When I had taken nearly three bottles my cough was entirely cured and I was able to sleep all night. I can say I am now completely cured and feel like a new person.

I take pleasure in recommending your "Ozone" to all who suffer from Bronchitis as I did. (Signed) MRS. RIOUNALD CHERRIER, 61 St. James St., Montreal, P. Q. That is where some people feel weak all the time.

They are likely to be despondent and it is not unusual to find them borrowing trouble as if they hadn't enough already.

The fact is their kidneys are weak, either naturally or because of sickness, exposure, worry or other influences.

"I was taken ill with a kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Thomas Innis, of Wallaceburg, Out., "and became so weak I could scarcely get around. I had headache, and cramps in my stomach, and my food did not digest. I took medicine without benefit, and finally decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the first bottle I felt so much better I continued its use and six bottles made me a new woman."

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—The live stock exports from the port of Montreal for the season to date have been 54.207 cattle and 34,970 sheep. These squres show a decrease of 11,281 head of cattle and an increase af 11,602 sheep, as compared with the same period in 1900. The decrease in the exports of cattle is largely due to the fact that shipments have been and are still being made from Quebec and Portland, and alse via United States ports, owing to the lower rates of freight. The increase in the export of sheep is due to the good markets abroad for them early in the season.

Is Catarrh a Germ Disease?

This interesting question is at last settled. Science, armed by the miscroscope, has established it a fact, and this conclusion renders obsolete the practice of treating Asthma, Catarrh and Bronchitis by Stomach Drugging, or by Sprays. Snuffs, Powders, etc. Such treatments are a complete failure because of their inability to penetrate the delicate air cells of the lungs and permeate the passages of the nose and bronchial tubes, where the germ life causing the disease is located. The remedy most certain to reach the trouble is Catarrhozone, which is enhaled with the air you breathe to every ramification of the breathing organs. Catarrhozone is death to the germs, healing to the inflamed tissues, and convenient to use. It clears the head and throat in two minutes, and cures in a few hours. Nothing so simple, so effective as Catarrhozone. Price, $1; small size, 25 cents; at all druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

At 1 o'clock the royal party were entertained at luncheon at Government House, and at 3 o'clock their royal highnesses again embarked upon their train and proceeded towards Calgary, where they are due to arrive at 8:30 a.m. today, and where the most spectacular events of their western tour will take place. At this place the Northwest Mounted Police will be inspected, medals will be presented, and a great assembly of Indian tribes will welcome the heir apparent and his wife. The day will close with a typical Northwestern celebration, including steer-roping, rough broncho breaking and cowboy races.

The departure of the royal visitors takes place at about 4:15 p.m. for Vancouver. Their royal highnesses since leaving Winnipeg have had an opportunity of seeing the great western wheat field though they have not seen it under the most picturesque conditions, as the waying wheat of a few weeks ago is now either in shock or has been threshed and stored in the elevators. Although the attendance at the Prinas was expected, the citizen's committee, who are endeavoring to raise a substantial fund for the 7th Regiment Band, were not unsatisfied with the the concert in other respects. The rink looked at its best having been specially decorated with flags, buntng, Chinese lanterns and foliage plants, the pleasing effects of which was added to by the brilliant electric illumination.

From the standpoint of excellence the concert was an unqualified success. The 7th Regiment Band contributed a large part of the programme, and so vell were its renditions received that the encores given materially lengthened the programme. Among the num-ber's given were Mendeissohn's Wed-ding March, Rosini's "William Tell" overture, Godfrey's nautical medley, "A Life on the Ocean Wave," Theo Bendix's "The Dawn of Love," and the selections from "The Geisha." Mr. Maurice Poure, the brilliant young violinist from St. Themas, conributed two numbers, and added to the favorable impression made here by him on former appearances. The singing of Miss Dora Taylor, the talented young Londoner, who is meeting with success in New York, was a feature of the evening which added to the artissuccess of the concert. Miss Ina Riddell's Scotch dancing was well received and encored. Misses Raymond and Walker acted acceptably as ac-

RHEUMATIC PAINS TO WINDWARD

CAUSED BY IMPURE CONDI-TION OF THE BLOOD.

If Neglected They Will Grow Worse and Serious Results Will Follow-Rheumatism Can Be Permanently

[From the Telegraph, Quebec.] Rheumatism is one of the most common and at the same time one of the most painful affections from which humanity suffer. It affects the joints and muscles, and is character-ized, even in its simplest form, by a dull constant pain. While it remains in the joints and muscles, it is sufficiently painful and distressing, but as it is liable to attack the vital organs, such as the heart, the disease becomes a source of danger, and in many instances it has proved fatal. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills possess qualities for the cure of this disease which are unequaled by any other medicine. I tried a number of the supposed cures for this disease, but none of them benefited me. I seemed to be constantly growing worse, so I called in a physician, but as his treatment did not give me relief, I sought the as-sistance of two other doctors, but they also failed to help me. My appetite left me; my strength gradually ebbed away; one of my legs was drawn out of shape, and I was never free from pain. I was in despair of ever being well again, when one day a relative brought me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and urged me to take them. He seemed to have such great confidence in the pills that I determined to follow his advice. Today I am happy that I did so, for with the use of less than a dozen boxes of these pills the pain from which I suffered so much is all gone, and I feel stronger and healthier than I did be-This I owe to Dr. Williams' similar sufferers to give them a trial.

Fog and Calm Give Way to a Good Stiff Breeze.

The Shamrock and Columbia Make a Brave Struggle for the "America" Cup.

New York, Sept. 28.-Thick fog and no wind gave a most discouraging outbeen above the horizon many minutes before the fog began to melt. By o'clock it has lifted entirely, while ou of the northeast came a puff of wind that by 8 o'clock had increased to 12 knots. Both the racers started out too early to be bothered by the excursion boats and they were pretty well down toward pleasure fleet. Columbia's bow came out of the water as she moved under sail than did that of the Shamrock. She did not dip in the bigger seas nearly as much as the challenger. Both boats, after running to the north, tacked and ran south. It was a battle royal. Both yachts had sailed four miles, and it was nip and tuck between them, with the Shamrock certainly nearer the turning boat. Wotter—How?

Cholly—Why, when I proposed to her she said she'd rather die than marry. me, so I excused her,

This was the role she had elected to play, and she played it well. Yet somettimes the efforts it cest her to sustain her part from morning till night every day in the week seemed greater than her strength was equal to. Sleep, read, rest—she could do neither. If only the day would break she would dress and steal downstairs and so by way of the conservatories into the grounds; and the frosty merning air might brace her weak nerves, give tone to her frame, and cool the strange fever of her blood.

While she paced the thick carpet of her room she suddenly heard a noise outside her door—somebody creeping about the house in the small hours. Who could it be—a thief?

"And if so, we want that Carew girl to hold him by the collar while I ring and give the alarm," she said to herself, bitterly. "Ah, that girl! what can I do to make this foolish, high-flown countess turn her out of the house at once? Only if she fancied Lord Hammond was worse than he is, and if I made her think that she would speak to him, and then—"Paulline threw out both her arms in a gesture of exaggerated disdain.

Certainly somebody was outside her loor. What o'clock was it? Paulline went to the dressing table and consulted her pretty watch. Half-past six. Good gracious! Why, it was morning after all, though so dark!

"I will bathe and dress," said Pauline, "and brush out my hair, and bind it up, Pauline took about an hour for her Pauline took about an hour for her toilette. It was one of her principles ever to be prepared for emergencies, and the fidea of meeting any of the Charteris guests when en deshabille would have been terrible to her.

At 7:30, then, Miss Bracegirdle left her room attired in a crimson cloth cloak lined with fur, her flaxen plaits dressed high on her head; a small black velvet bonnet of the Marie Stuart order framed her oval face; her hands were exquisite-

As the wintry daylight steamed in through the conservatories she passed out into the gardens, under the gray, cold heavens. She held a private key of one door.

Morning—early morning—has a charm of its own for these who have slept well, and who go out to meet the first fresh and who go out to meet the first fresh breezes and the earliest shining of the sun; but an English December dawn is a dull, and colorless, and chilling period for the most part. blue eyes all night; and now they ached, and her head whirled, as she walked across the park.

The wind was bleak and shrewish that morning. Miss Bracegirdle shivered under her fur-lined cloak. Suppose—suppose she were to be iil. and to—to—not to die? That was nensense. People did not difficulties, and could not sleep. Still, she felt that she was ill—very ill.

She is close to the shrubberies now; a few more steps, and the talt, thick evergreen will shelter her from the bitter northeast wind, which she had fancied would do her good, but which semeed to be taking her breath away. The distant glades of the wintry park—the gray, soft hills against the dark heaven—all faded into one confused mass. Pauline was fainting; but she acted with promptitude. She had been subject to these attacks from a child. The only remedy was to lie flat on the ground, and to inhale some strong smelling-salts. She sank on the ground, and lay back while she had an atom of nerve power remaining; then she looked up at the great gray expanse of wintry sky above her head, and she felt as if the whole world were turning round like a boy's spinning too. she with it.

In a moment or two the fit passed; the sky looked steady again, the world ceased to spin. She felt deadly ill; but her senses were clear. Presently, perhaps, she would be able to rise to her feet, and walk back to the house.

"Miss Bracegirdle! is it possible? What has happened? Are you hurt?"
It is Elsic Carew who speaks—Elsic Carew, whose enemy Pauline has constituted herself for sufficient and most business-like reason—Elsic in a plain plack hat and short cloth cloak, a walking costume for the before-breakfast regulation promenades at Coome Hill House—Elsic, who, awaking bright and early, had resolved to dress and refresh herself with a walk before the breakfast hour, as it did not rain. This negative weather she knew was as much as we can expect during an English December.

"Are you hurt, Miss Bracegirdle"
"I have fainted," gasped Pauline.

CHAPTER XIV.

"What can I do for you, Miss Brace-girdle?" asked Elsie. "Must I go to the house for water or sal-volatile. or—" "No, no." replied Pauline: "I have my "No, no." replied Pauline: "I have revisively smelling-salts, if you will hold them to my nostrils. Thank you."

Elsie supported the false, fair face against her honest young heart. She knelt on the damp ground by the side of Pauline, and put her arm round her. Miss Bracegirdle was as white as death. If Flies could have read the thoughts If Elsie could have read the thoughts of this young woman's heart she would have shuddered and trembled; as it was, she felt that there was a mystery here—something quite out of the range of everyday experience. Shakespeare! Elsie know without being told that Miss Bracegirdle had not read a line of him all

You ought to see a doctor," she said, gently.

The wild look of terror and dismay, the speechless rage of the young, handsome face, haunted Elsie for days afterwards. Pauline's eyes seemed starting out of her "I hate doctors! I never consult them!"

"I hate doctors! I never consult them!"
she said. "My father understands medicine better than half the doctors. If—if they send for one, I—I won't see him!"
"Very weil," said Elsie, soothingly,
"you shall doctor yourself; but you will take cold lying on this wet ground. Let me help you up—lean on me, and we will get to the house, and I will bring you some pine warm breakfast to your room." Some nice warm breakfast to your room."
Pauline gave Elsie a cold, glassy stare. She was not touched by this kindness—these offers of service from one whom she was determined to crush. She was annoyed that it had happened so that this hateful girl should see how weak she was in health—should speak of it. Pauline had a desperate courage on occasion; she would have suffered tortures rather than a doctor should examine her faulty chest and discover the sad fact of her diseased nerves, excitable brain, and the pernicious habit she had given way to of taking narcotics to induce sleep. She wanted Lord Hammond to ne nice warm breakfast to your room. sleep. She wanted Lord Hammond to believe her strong as an amazon. One day she had heard him say that he day she had heard him say that would never marry a weakly wife.
"It is only because I have sat up for nights and nights to study Shakespeare."

areaking desperately, "that I nights and nights to study Shakespeare," she said, speaking desperately, "that I have brought myself into this weak state; but I must not again, not while all these fostivities last, and white I have to study the part of Mademoiselle Renee; and then I shall be quite well; but it requires the strength of a Trojan to study night after night as I have been studying: Why don't you answer me?" continued Pauline, crossly. "Why do you stare so? Have I two heads, s'il vous plait?"

Elsie had not yet learned the knack of wearing an impassable face while her heart was in commotion. Here was her enemy telling a string of untruths in a feeble voice, and expecting her to acquiesce in all she said. Elsie knew that it was this young woman's intention to marry Lord Hammond; that he attain the position of Lady Hammond and future Countess of Chase she would do the wickedest and cruellest things; she knew that she was deceived the noble countess day by day, and that all this love for Shakespeare was a lying pretense. She did then, stare in a blank faction at Miss Bracegirdle, and the resolve to be open with her, and tell her all she knew aprang into her mind.

"If she know that I knew, she will be afraid to tell any more deceased." Elsie had not yet learned the knack of

"I will tell you why I look at you so when you have had breakfast and are strenger. I will come to your room then, if you will allow as, because I have something important to say to you."

"very weil. I suppose you mean that it is important to you; it can't be very important to you, Miss Bracegirdle; more so than it is to me."

A faint flush stole into Pauline's white cheeks, but she only laughed.

"Well, Miss Carew," she said. "it is very kind of you to interest yourself about things which are important to me. I did not think that you took such an interest in my studies of Shakespeare."

"I do not," said Elste, stiffly; "not in your studies of Shakespeare."

"I do not," said Elste, stiffly; "not in your studies of Shakespeare."

"Pauline laughed again, but it was a feeble laugh. This girl's frame was weak; she had shot up like a maypole, and outgrown her strength. During those years of her rapid growth she had been badly fed. While her body had lacked sufficient nourishment her young mind had been poisoned by evil French novels and the unscrupuleus counsels of unprincipled parents and acquaintances.

Pauline, young, lovely, gifted, too, with intelligence of a high order, a fine taste for music and the drama, and an aptitude for foreign tongues—Pauline was as sweet bells jangled out of tune, as a clear river into whose course mud had been turned near the fountain head, as a sapling oak twisted and turned into a hideous misshapen form of growth; much evil was inherent in her; she was naturally cruel and sarcastic, greedy of admiration, envious of the advantages of others; but all those bad qualities had been fostered and nourished by the training she had received, so that she was, in plain language, wicked to the core.

She stood leaning on Elsie's slender arm and looking into Elsie's henest eyes. "She stood leaning on Elsie's slender arm and looking into Elsie's honest eyes. "Then what do you take an interest in?" she asked, with a scowl contracting her beautiful arched black eyesbrows.

"In truth and honesty, Miss Bracegirdle. You have been speaking very, very falsely of me to the countess!"
"I" cried Miss Bracegirdle, in a loud, sharp key. "You must be mad! I! why.
I know nothing at all about you! Why

"I know that you are wicked. I know that you tell untruths."

"You are quite fitted for the stage, I think," she said, scoffingly; "you are quite melodramatic; but I can't imagine what you mean. Why should I trouble my head about an ignorant, raw schoolgirl like you?"

"You know that better than I do, Miss Bracegirdle."

By this time they were close to the

By this time they were close to the house. Pauline could not endure suspense.

"Come to my room with me at once. There is plenty of excuse. I have been ill —I do not like to be left alone. They will serve breakfast to us both in my sitting-room. There is a fire there, and I will take some drops I have and lie down, and you shall explain all this."
Elsie by this time was burning with natural curiosity to know what Miss Bracegirdle would say when she learned that her private conversation with Lord Hammond had been overheard. She could not restrain the passionate tide of anger not restrain the passionate tide of anger that welled up in her heart as she thought of the wicked duplicity and cruei falsehoods of this woman.

"I would rather not take breakfast with you," she said, coldly. "But if you wish I will come to your sitting-room. You shail lie down and take the drops you speak of, and then, when you are better, I will tell you all I know."

DISAPPOINTMENT IN ENGLAND. London, Sept. 28 .- The morning papers express the keenest disappointment. The Daily Mail, the Daily Graphic, the Morning Post and the Standard, all contend that the weather conditions were too fluky to justify any verdict on the ultimate performances, but even these journals are not very hopeful of the ability of the challenger to "lift" the cup, and they admit that her performance was very disappointing. The other papers virtually abandon hope.

Thomas Lipton yesterday morning cabled his friends here: "Am very opeful." But the feeling is not reflected by public opinion, which fore-sees defeat for the Shamrock II. In her races with the Columbia for the America's cup. The afternoon papers similarly derive scant comfort from the stories of Thursday's contest. As the St. James' Gazette points out, in spite of all suggestions that the conditions prevent accurate judgment of the comparative merits of the two yachts, "the plain fact stands out that under a condition of weather which was the same to both, the American boat got a good bit nearer the winning line than our own."

WILL NOT STAND IT. From an authentic source it was learned yesterday that there was a very strong feeling on the part of Capt. Sycamore and those in charge of the Shamrock at what they term the crowding of the Shamrock at the start Thursday by Captain Barr. "If he is going to continue those tactics there will be serious trouble," said the writer's informant. "What he did Thursday was not to be tolerated for an instant in a race in British waters. He must not expect us to stand it, and we won't. Our relations with the New York Tacht Club and with the principals in this event have been so extremely pleasant that it is to be

i hoped one man's action shall not be permitted to mar them." SIR THOMAS WELL SATISFIED. Sir Thomas said to a press representative yesterday: "While Thurs-day's race was not at all a fair test of the Shamrock's speed, I was very well satisfied with what she did. What we want is a good strong breeze from the northwest, or any other quarter for that matter, but plenty of it, and then I'm sure the Shamrock will give a good account of herself. We are all very pleased at the excellent manner in which the course was kept clear. It could not have been better done, and I hope it will be so through all the races.'

CRICKET. 27 THE ENGLISH TEAM AT PHILA-

DELPHIA. Philadelphia, Sept.28.—The first of the test matches between an All-Philadelphia team and B. J. T. Bosanquet's English eleven was started here yesterday in magnificent weather, and at the conclusion of play the visitors looked as though they would prove victorious. Batting first, the Britishers ran up a total of 198, against which the Quakers scored 78 for the loss of 5 wickets. The Englishmen played their best eleven, leaving off Priestly, while the Quakers were selected by the Associated Cricket Club.

THE OAR.

RUMOHR ON TOWNS' TRAIL. Winnipeg, Sept. 28. — "Yes, I am through with rowing for the rest of this season," said Jack Rumohr yesterday, "but I am going after Towns strong next year." "You're going south to train?" "Yes, I will leave for New Orleans just of the Company of leans just after Christmas. There is a good course there, and I will commence 12 to train. When the weather gets warm enough I will return to Winnipeg and finish my training here." "Is it correct that C. J. Smith has taken you up?" asked the newspaper man. "He will if can go fast enough," answered Rumohr, and, with a look of determina tion, "that is all I want, for I intend to train hard for at least six months. Then I believe I will be able to bring the world's championship back to Canada and to Winnipeg."

FISTIC.

FRIENDLY BOUT FATAL. George Johnson, 37 years old, a colored coachman and ex-ugilist, of Fort Hamilton, died Wednesday at the Norwegian hospital, New York, from the effects, it is said, of a blow in the jaw received in a friendly bout with Tommy West, the welter-weight, at the lat ter's training quarters in Bath Beach, on Tuesday. He never regained consciousness after entering the hospital. West was arrested at his home, 37 Wyckoff street, Brooklyn, yesterday morning on a charge of assault. Later, in the Coney Island police court, the charge was changed to homicide he was admitted to bail in $1,000 for examination on Oct. 11. Johnson and West were very friendly, and it had been the custom of Johnson to call at West's Bath Beach training quarters, at the foot of Bay Twenty-second street and spar every day. West is in training for his match with Al. Weinig of Fort Erie, Canada. On Monday, while boxing with West Johnson complained that he had received a couple of "stiff" ones on the jaw that made him sick at the stomach. At the usual hour on Tuesday he appeared again, saying he felt better. After he had been in the ring for a short time he complained of feeling very sick, and was taken to the office of Dr. John A. Voorhees and then to the hospital.

AT THE WOODBINE. Toronto, Sept. 28 .- The Hunt Club neeting was again favored with beautiful weather yesterday, while one of the biggest crowds of the series was present. A number of long shots won in yesterday's events, but none of them were heavily backed, and the bookies breathed more freely after their costly experience in the early part of the week. The fail races of 1901 will go on record as very much the most successful in the history of the Hunt Club. A feature of yesterday's sport was the polo ponies' cup race, which was cleverly won by Murray Hendrie on W. F. Maclean's Wolf Bite. Polo is becoming a very popular sport in Toronto. Following are the details of the day: First race. purse $300, for 3-year-olds and up, selling, 6 furlengs—Sir Vere de Vere 1, Mynheer 2, Midnight Chimes 3. Time, 1:17.

Westminster, Lambeth.....Oct. 1 HIS TROUBLES ENDED

Toronto Man Happy Through the Aid of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

William Carveth, of 179 George street, Toronto, is a happy man. He is a healthy man, which is but another way of saying the same thing. On a man with a perfect digestion and enough to eat, trouble sits lightly. His appetite is good, he relishes his food, and the pure, bounding blood of well digested nourishment that feeds his muscles and nerves, keeps him in a natural state of buoyancy and good spirits. Happy is the man with a good digestion. On the other hand, miserable indeed is the lot of the sufferer from Dyspepsia. He looks at everything with smoked glasses. Life is dark, gloomy, unhappy. Not only is he actually in wretched health, but his mind is affected. He becomes morbid, nervous, sour, irritable, unable to find pleasure in anything, a dissatisfaction to himself and his friends.

To such people this advice is earnestly tendered: Use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets do away with all troubles of digestion. They attend to the duty of digesting the food themselves, thus saving the stomach, which is thus enabled to rest and get well. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets have proved successful wherever introduced, and they are now known all over the world. Here is a letter from Toronto, the place where Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets were first put on the market, and where they have for years been almost universally used: "I have been troubled for a year," writes William Carveth, 179 George street, Torento, "with dyspepsia and headache. I could get nothing to help me. I was told of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets by a friend who persuaded me to try them. I have since used two boxes and I am now cured of this miserable disease. I can eat any kind of food and never feel anything of the disease coming back."

To all these kidney and backache suf-ferers Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets come as a veritable boon and blessing. They clear out the clogged-up kidneys, cure the backache and urinary troubles, roll away the burden of pain, and give health, strength and energy.

Miss Anna Defoe, a young lady whose address is 355 King street west, Toronto, recently wrote as tollows:

"For a number of years I have had kidney trouble and backache, so bad that in the morning I could hardly raise my-self. A severe dragging pain would catch me in the small of my back, and I had no applitte, and often suffered from severe headaches, and a general breaking down of the entire system was the result. But, thanks to Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets, they put new life and energy in me, relieving me of that awful pain and soreness gently and easily, so much so, that I continued to get better, until I was entirely cured.
