

CONDITIONS IN THE OLD LAND TOLD IN INTERESTING LETTER TO BRANTFORD LADY RESIDENT

The following letter has been received by a lady in Brantford from a niece, resident in the Isle of Man. Extracts of the letter, with personal references eliminated, appear below as giving an interesting phase of certain conditions in respect to the war in which the empire is engaged at the present time:

"I applied to the Navy League to go as a typhoid nurse. They seek woefully short of nurses, as the hospitals cannot spare any more as such a lot of wounded are being sent to them. My husband is quite keen on my going if I am needed to do my little bit for the empire, so was at home in the morning. I was at the hospital when you left, and I let him and Annie have the newspaper cutting, which I am returning with many thanks. It is an exciting time we are living in. Harry Jones, taking two of our officers training corps as soon as the war broke out and on Monday before I met him, he had been given a commission in the 13th Hussars. On Tuesday, he was told that his commission was cancelled, and he was to go up and see Lord Haldane on Wednesday I had - and him to Haldane and he just seen Lord Haldane asked him if he was the man who was putting the new petrol on the market. Harry said he was, so it was thought that he was too valuable a man to let out of England. He could have a commission for Home Service, which Harry had to accept. I had a most interesting time in England. I took (a daughter) over to school, and the Mersey is most awfully thickly mined, boats can only go up one at a time, and as we had the bad luck to get in behind the Adriatic, we were taking two hours. This made it impossible for us to get through to Bath in the day, so we spent the night in Hereford. It is a lovely city, and the cathedral is grand. Nell (my son) of all funny people, was born in one of the houses in the Cathedral Close. We saw 600 of Kitchener's new army drilling there. All the railway lines and bridges are guarded closely, by Territorials to prevent German spies doing any damage, and in country parts, away from towns, the poor men evidently get bored when not on duty, as they had written up in chalk on bridges, "Books and papers and magazines, please." From Bath I went on to Bournehead to stay with - and his wife. I had a very pleasant time there, seeing numbers of old friends. The train full of wounded men. They waved, and out of the dozen people about, on the platform, I was the only one that waved back. The stupid owls just grinned. The train was going very slowly, so I jumped up and ran down the platform, waving and calling good luck, and shaking hands with all I could get hold of at the windows. One day I was in Aldwych. It was very interesting, seeing the poor things come in, and watching how they are sorted, and drafted to various homes. There are two homes in Ealing, one for the peasant people and one for the gentle people. Last night, I was at a lecture given by one of our old boys, who is about the only man of military age who has managed to escape from Germany, since the war began. He had the most thrilling adventures."

"I went up to Uncle - and saw a military biplane settle down in a field just by the train. It was so quiet and graceful - like a bird. The naval airships are over London every night. They go up about 4 p.m. They come down so close, that you can see the men in the car. It is a wonderful sight to see the aeroplanes. They are different from an aeroplane, being so silent. They have been experimenting to see what London would look like to a Zeppelin. All night long now to be out all over London, at 4.30, except the few street lamps which are necessary, and they are shaded with a sort of a fat, so that the rays are thrown down very low only. No motors may have headlights, only the dim side lights. All private houses have to have shuttered windows, to keep their lights invisible. People, however, are all cheery and hopeful, and prices are quite low. Sugar is the only dear thing. I saw some wounded officers, friends of mine, in India, who are in a nursing home in London. They are all very cheerful and longing to be back at the war again. One poor man, who had his right foot blown away, at Mons, is only anxious because he is afraid that the War Office won't take him back to the front with a cork foot. I met a Capt. Trelawney, who had a bullet go in at his "tummy" and come out at his back. He was walking in a fortnight, and he said it was extraordinary that the only people who gave him anything were the Germans. He was wounded on his birthday, and he had a very good nurse, who received a letter from General French saying he was recommended for the D. S. O. We have a boy at home now, with his left forefinger blown away, and all he says is: "I am jolly lucky. It might have been the right, and then I could not have gone back." I was dining at the Criterion "one night when two wounded Belgian officers came in, one with his head bandaged, and the other with his arm in a sling. The people at once started cheering, and the orchestra played the Belgian national anthem, and we all stood up. The streets are full of men on crutches, and with bandages and slings. I saw a train go by, while I was sitting in the Hampstead Heath station, and found that it was red with crutches full of wounded men. They waved, and out of the dozen people about, on the platform, I was the only one that waved back. The stupid owls just grinned. The train was going very slowly, so I jumped up and ran down the platform, waving and calling good luck, and shaking hands with all I could get hold of at the windows. One day I was in Aldwych. It was very interesting, seeing the poor things come in, and watching how they are sorted, and drafted to various homes. There are two homes in Ealing, one for the peasant people and one for the gentle people. Last night, I was at a lecture given by one of our old boys, who is about the only man of military age who has managed to escape from Germany, since the war began. THEIR APPRECIATION

Public School Board Grants Three Months' Salary to Lieut. Dickson.

At a special meeting of the public school board last evening, the following resolution was passed, on motion of Trustees Lane and Clement: "That this board while greatly regretting losing temporarily the services of Principal F. Dickson of King Edward school, it desires to place on record its appreciation of his fine patriotic spirit in going forward to defend the Empire, and the members of this board hereby make it understood to Lieut. Dickson that his position awaits him on his return. In further testimony of appreciation the board hereby grants Lieut. Dickson three months salary in full."

EAGLE PLACE LADIES BUSY

At the call of Mrs. J. E. Waterous, there was a large gathering of Eagle Place ladies yesterday at Bonnythorpe relative to taking up some branch of city relief work during the winter. It was proposed to act as a unit, but through the medium of the patriotic league, and as a branch of the social service department. Acting on the suggestion of Mrs. Waterous, it was decided to make quilts as a specialty, securing the material from the patriotic league and from private individuals. Work will commence immediately, and all Eagle Place ladies are invited to assist. There will be no membership fee. Mrs. Waterous very kindly placed Bonnythorpe at the disposal of the organization, and meetings will be held every Monday afternoon. Committees and officers were appointed, and everything indicates a busy and active season. Mrs. Waterous was named as convener, Mrs. W. McHutchison, secretary and Miss Van Norman will act as corresponding secretary and press correspondent. Any material which can be sent, such as woollens or cottons for quilts, will be gratefully received at 163 Eagle Avenue.

Music and Drama

At the Brant. There is an excellent series of war pictures now running at the Brant Theatre and during the present week their intense interest is not one of imagination. Mademoiselle Vortex, performs wonderfully daring feats with the aid of her powerful conveyor. She swings out above the heads of the audience, suspended only by her teeth grip upon a rope. She is an aerial novelty. A little of everything is splendidly incorporated in the act of White Goldie and White, a variety three of pretty good calibre who entertain this week. They dance sing and talk well. For a great farce, the Red Ice sketch has anything eclipsed that has been shown at the Brant. The tale of the West is finely told and the story is good throughout, combining fun and real dramatic effect excellently.

Women's Institute

The Terrace Hill and Grand View Women's Institute held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Geo. Alderson, Sr., George street, with fifty-two in attendance. After the opening exercises, a number of government communications were brought before the meeting. Mrs. Kinney was appointed delegate to the convention at Toronto. Miss Arnold favored us with a piano solo. Mr. R. Walter Brooks of the Horticultural Society, gave a very interesting talk on the planting of bulbs and many other interesting subjects regarding plant life. Mrs. Savage sang Tipperary, after which God Save the King and Rule Britannia, and motto brought a very pleasant meeting to a close, to meet next month with Mrs. Hayes, Terrace Hill street. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Alderson at the close of the meeting.

Young People's Societies Meet

Grace A. Y. P. A. The meeting of Grace Church A. Y. P. A. last evening was in the hands of Rev. C. Paterson-Smyth, the popular young curate of the church. The members met first in the church for intercessory prayers on behalf of the soldiers and sailors, and afterwards adjourned to the school room, where Mr. Paterson-Smyth gave a most interesting and instructive talk on the book "How we got our bible," which was written by his father, Archdeacon Paterson-Smyth of Montreal. This is the first of a series of lectures on this subject which will be given once a month throughout the season, some of which will be illustrated by lantern slides.

Baker, formerly Miss Elsie Cockshutt, received for the first time. She wore her bridal robe of ivory satin and Carrickmacross lace, with a touch of orange blossoms and white bride's roses for a bouquet. Her mother, Mrs. Cockshutt, who received with her in lavender brocade, with a corsage bouquet of mauve orchids and white diamonds ornaments. In the tea room were the groom's mother, Mrs. Baker, and the bride's aunt, Mrs. A. A. Allan, pouring tea and coffee at a table decked with sunset roses and mauve chrysanthemums, set about with lavender tulle. The four bridesmaids were there, wearing their lovely wedding frocks: Miss Lillian Allan and Miss Anne Brown, in tulle and mauve chrysanthemums, set about with lavender tulle. The groom's bridesmaid, Miss Beth Fudge, in peach tulle, also lace-trimmed, and all wearing Tuscan hats trimmed with mauve ribbon and white feathers. GERMANS AS THEY WERE IN AUGUST

(By Special Wire to the Courier) LONDON, Oct. 27.—On a miniature scale the status of the opposing armies in Upper Belgium ran parallel to-day to the conditions which prevailed when the German "rush" toward Paris was checked. In other words, the German forward movement has been characterized by an even greater prodigality of men than was shown in the march in the direction of Paris. The invaders succeeded for days in battering their way on and then suddenly came to something which caused them to pause. Since Saturday no German advance has been recorded, and it is apparent that the allies have either brought up such reinforcements or entrenched themselves so well or both, that the Germans must sacrifice man after man for every foot of ground. The flat country in West Flanders permits no such entrenched positions as made the area of hostilities in France famous, but the British and Belgians, with their ships at their backs, have dug themselves in wherever possible, while throwing out every obstacle possible to impede the enemy.

MARCHED TO MOHAWK. The active service volunteers marched out to the Mohawk Church this afternoon, and there were put through their drills by Capt. Newman, who was in command.

Maritz Was Wounded in Recent Fight

(By Special Wire to the Courier) LONDON, Oct. 27.—An official despatch from Col. Wylie at Up-hampton, Cape province, describing Col. Brits attack on Lieut. Col. Maritz's force north of Kamas on October 24, forwarded from Pretoria, to London by Reuters' Telegraph Company, says that Maritz only defended the town about an hour and then retreated. The losses sustained by the followers of Maritz are not known, but the number of wounded, captured and surrendered men is large. Lieut-Col. Maritz was wounded in the leg, though not dangerously. His forces retreated hurriedly. They left their tents standing and they abandoned large quantities of stores and a wagonload of ammunition. The horses of the Union of

A WOMAN'S WAY

Who says a woman's part is only "watch and wait"?

True, a woman cannot shoulder a rifle and go to the front, but there is a way in which she can help and which is just as important. That way is in supporting the prosperity of Canada.

Women do the buying. A million of them in Canada are buying every day, most of the necessities and luxuries for eight million people, expending and influencing the expenditure of perhaps a billion dollars every year.

At present much of that expenditure goes for imported products. Suppose it were all switched to Canadian-made goods. Think how many Canadian workmen would be kept busy supplying this enormous demand! Think what it would mean to Canadian industries! Think what an era of prosperity it would create!

This is a woman's way to help. To create prosperity for Canada, to lay forever the spectre of unemployment, to create resources to carry on the war.

ALLIES FORCED (Continued from Page 1) it is apparent that the concentration of the Franco-Belgo-British troops in the southwest corner of Flanders is as strong numerically and in equipment and leadership as is that of the Germans.

The necessity of this vast shifting of combatants which is in response to the will of the allied general staff, who forced the Germans to accept the north as the principal zone of contact. The result is the stripping of other portions of the battle front, which at many points has ceased to become more than two lines of entrenchments, containing scattered forces of infantry and artillery, neither of which are of sufficient strength to assume the offensive.

Two potent facts take shape, therefore from the bewildering series of operations of the last few days. The first is that inasmuch as retreat for the allies under extreme left flank would be a grave setback and costly strategically and in men and war material, the allied general staff is confident that they can hold their ground.

The second fact is that the Germans were forced by the allies to throw their greatest force into the north. The Germans do not control as perfect a system of railroads as that behind the allied line, and the sudden shifting of the offensive to another zone by the allies would, therefore, find their adversary at a permanent disadvantage. We may look, therefore, for important developments in the rugged and wooded region between the Meuse and Moselle Valleys within the next few days.

THE SITUATION.

The present position of affairs at the front may be regarded as good. Kitchener says "satisfactory," but then that man never did exaggerate, and the art of coloring is not in his make-up.

After crossing the river Yser at tremendous loss, the road through the flat country to Dunkirk and Calais looked like mighty good going to the Kaiser and his war lords. But it isn't, not by a large majority it isn't. The German troops find themselves faced by a solid stone wall in the shape of the Allies, and are not only being held, but in addition forced back.

Meanwhile the Russians are keeping up the good work in their section of the fierce game in most excellent fashion. They have the Germans on the run; there can be no doubt at all about that. In their fight against Japan they were indifferently officered, and vodka, that deadly drink, was freely distributed in the ranks. This time they are well officered, and there is no vodka—been banished ever since hostilities commenced.

Speaking generally, it may be safely affirmed that the initial onslaught of the Germans has been broken. They have been hammering away since August, but the opposing forces have held true, and from now on until they have been forced out of France and Belgium they will be on the defensive. May be a spurt here and there, but not, unless all indications fail, generally so.

From New York the World of that city gives the merry "Ha-Ha" to the claim of the German ambassador at Washington that Uncle Sam should stand idly by if the Kaiser managed to send troops to Canada. As to that, he will need all that he has, and then some, right where he is. Canadians can fight, and in addition our neighbors know right well what such a landing might mean to them. The whole thing is a huge joke, anyway.

THE GERMAN CREED.

Here are two quotations from the writings of Nietzsche, the philosopher who inspired the political creed now current in Germany:

(1) "The dream is dispelled which made the State begin with a contract. What has he to do with contracts who can command, who is master by nature, who comes on the scene with violence in deed and demeanor?"

(2) "The essential thing in a good healthy aristocracy is that it should feel itself to be not a function but the end and justification, be it of royalty or of commonwealth—that it should therefore, with a good conscience, suffer the sacrifice of a countless number of men, who, for its sake, must be humbled and reduced to imperfect beings, to slaves, to instruments."

Such views have an interesting sound on this continent.

THE OTTAWA TRIP.

That was a splendid idea to have a joint deputation of business men go from Brantford and Paris to Ottawa in the interests of securing all the work possible for firms in these two places.

Both Mr. W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., and Mr. J. H. Fisher, M.P., had already been very successful in this regard, but the visit of the heads of factories who could talk matters firsthand was a timely action.

It was also a non-political deputation, received in a non-political way. That also was good.

We are all together in this time of Empire stress, and partisanship in that regard has, and should, take a far back seat.

The reception accorded the delegates at the Capital by the Government representatives was also all that could be desired. As far as the Courier has noticed, there has only been one paper to make the "yawn" but contracts would go to Conservative concerns and the Liberal ditto be left out in the cold. That has not been true in the case of Brantford or in that of any other place. The Administration has taken from the first a broad-minded and non-partisan course with regard to the matter, and will very properly continue to do so.

"IT IS NOT THE ENGLISH CUSTOM."

Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood told some interesting stories at a meeting which he addressed in London recently. Referring to the charges of brutality made against the Germans, he said:

"We need not fear that the British soldier will ever descend to making reprisals. Thirty-five years ago I was commanding 18,000 men, who fought against 23,000 brave Zulus for five hours and a half. They attacked with the undaunted courage of savages who did not realize the effect of modern rifles, and the following morning we buried, besides a vast number elsewhere, 884 close up to one face of the laagered wagons behind which our men had stood. When the fight was over I desired a few friendly Zulus who were attached to the companies under my command to collect men of every regiment, promising for each uninjured man a 'stick of tobacco. Next morning there was a group outside my tent of magnificent specimens of humanity. When I got all the information I required I said: 'Two months ago, when after a skirmish our doctors cared for your wounded, and a few days later you overwhelmed our camp, killing 1,500 of our men, you did not spare those who had been attending on your own brothers. Will one of you say why I should not kill you?' Said a young giant, 'May I speak, O Master? You ask why you should not kill us. I answer, because it is not the English custom.

"This is the character our race bears in the North, South, East and West Africa, and I hope it may ever continue, for reprisals are not only useless, but would sensibly lessen the amount of fighting value of our soldiers. The troops at the assault of Delhi in 1857, when embittered by horrible stories, many exaggerated, and at Jhansi in 1858, were seen deliberately slitting women and little children out of the line of fire. Such conduct is a part of our national inheritance."

Sir Evelyn said this war would test Britons and deepen the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to duty. Our people were realizing now that the first duty of a citizen was to fit himself to defend his country. That we had yet time to repair our refusal to admit the accuracy of this truism was due to the unceasing watch of our seamen in mine-strewn waters.

"In June, 1889, when the German Emperor saw the Aldershot division carrying out tactical operations, pointing to some cavalry in the distance, he asked me: 'How many squadrons have you got in the field to-day?' I replied: 'Sixteen, your Majesty,' when he said: 'If you will come and see my manoeuvres in September I will show you 64 squadrons.'

"We admit the Germans are brave, but so far they have not ridden over our regiments. Their horses are trained for two years before they are passed into the ranks, and while it is impossible for one man to fight three or four with a certainty of success, I have always believed that individually our cavalry are better horsemen, and will certainly attack without hesitation twice their number of Germans."

Sir Evelyn told a good story of Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien:

"In 1882 I was left 12 miles outside Alexandria with six battalions to cover a frontage of over five miles, which in the previous week had been penetrated by the enemy. I sent an order into Alexandria for a smart subaltern, who was to go to the Khedive's stable and all the saddlers' shops and produce in one day some mounted infantry. Smith-Dorrien received the order at 1.30 p.m., and at 6.30, with 81 horses, three mules and a donkey, carrying three men, the Sherwood Foresters, few of whom had ridden before, he passed me at Razhah, went out into the desert, engaged an Egyptian outpost, killed its commander, and never let them inside our line again."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Wonder what the Kaiser thinks now of French's "contemptible little army."

Thank goodness that Xypwvji place is not figuring these days in the despatches.

Getting over the Yser river has turned out to prove a lemon instead of a plum.

The Allies are doing very well, thank you. As for much of the stuff coming from Germany, it is likewise allies.

Premier Borden has taken another much-needed holiday. No Canadian First Minister has ever stuck more closely to public duty or ever been placed under such a strain as that of the last few weeks touching Canada's part relative to Empire needs.

When an official report is sent out from Berlin that beyond the Yser river "the hostile positions are obstinately defended," it may be taken for granted that your Johnny Bull and the Marseillaise chaps are putting up some fight.

BERLIN VIA SAYVILLE.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—(By wireless to Sayville, Long Island, Oct. 27)—An official Austrian war bulletin given out in Berlin to-day, says that combined Austrian and German forces hold strong positions in the long and almost continuous battle line from Stary and Sambor in Galicia, thence to a point east of Przemysl and along the San River in a straight line to Plozk, in Russian Poland. The main Russian army is being engaged. The Austrian offensive beyond the Carpathians has compelled the Russians to send reinforcements into this territory. The battle is still raging in central Galicia, Austrian troops have been successful on the lower San River, to the southeast of Przemysl. Vigorous encounters are proceeding between Ivangorod and Warsaw.

OFFICIAL BUREAU

(Continued from Page 1) ized scheme of defence had been executed, some of the bridges being a state of repair. Others merely barricaded, while one was not even defended or broken. The resistance offered our advance on the 15th was of a most determined character. The fighting consisted of fiercely contested encounters, infantry attacks on the villages being unavailing until our howitzers reduced the houses to ruins. Other villages were taken and retaken three times before they were finally secured.

The French cavalry here gave welcome support, and on the evening of the 16th the resistance was overcome, the enemy retiring five miles to the eastward."

BLEW UP BARRICADE

Describing an incident of the fighting on this night, the narrative says that the important crossing of the Lys at Warneton was strongly held by the Germans with a barricade loop-holed at the bottom, to enable the men to fire while they lay down.

"Our cavalry, with the artillery, blew the barricade to pieces and scattered the defenders," the narrative continues. "Advancing three quarters of a mile, our troops reached the square when one of the buildings appeared to leap skywards. A sheet of flame and a shower of star shells at the same time, made the place as light as day, and enabled the enemy, enscathed in surrounding houses to pour a devastating fire from rifles and machine guns. Our cavalry extricated themselves with the loss of one officer wounded and nine men killed and wounded, but a party of volunteers went back and carried off their wounded comrades from the inferno."

"During the 17th, 18th and 19th of October, our right encountered strong opposition from the enemy about La Basse, where they had established themselves behind emplacements. On the center and left, we made better progress, although the Germans were everywhere entrenched, and, in spite of the bombardment had some will-lags on the Lys. At the close of each day a night counter stroke was delivered against one or another part of our line, but they were all repulsed."

GERMAN DEAD

"Tuesday, October 20, a determined but unsuccessful attempt was made against virtually the whole of our line. At one point, where one of our brigades made counter attack, 1,100 German dead were found in a trench, and forty prisoners were taken."

WEATHER BAD

Continuing the narrative points out that the advance of the allies counter attack, 1,100 German dead were found in a trench, and forty prisoners were taken. The recital continues: while another in the same line will continue to resist for a considerable time. In some villages the inhabitants meet our cyclists with kisses, while at the next one the roads, and the probability have been cut across them and blocked with barricades and machine guns. Under these circumstances, an incautious advance is severely punished and it is impossible for large bodies of troops to push on until the front has been thoroughly reconnoitered. This work requires the highest qualities from our cavalry, our cyclists and our advance guards."

ARMORED MOTOR CARS

"Armored motor cars are equipped with machine guns, and are now playing a part in the war and have been most successful in dealing with small parties of German mounted troops. In their employment, our allies, the Belgians, who are now fighting with us and acquitting themselves nobly, have shown themselves to be experts. They appear to regard Uhlans hunting as a form of sport. The crews may be of the utmost skill in this form of warfare, often going out several miles ahead of their own advanced troops, seldom failing to return loaded with spoils in the shape of lancer caps, busbes, helmets, lances, rifles and other trophies, which they distribute as souvenirs to the crowds in the market places of the frontier towns. Although the struggle in the northern area naturally attracts more attention than the fight in the Aisne, the fighting in this region still continues. Although there has been alterations in the general situation, the enemy has made certain changes in the positions of his heavy artillery, with the result that one or two places which formerly were safe, are now subject to bombardment, while others which were approachable only at night, or by crawling on hands and knees, now serve as recreation grounds. At one point even a marquee tent has been erected."

GOOD USE FOR CRATERS

A story from this quarter illustrates a new use for the craters made by the explosions of the "Black Marias," the name given by the men to the projectiles of the big German howitzers. An officer on patrol stumbled in the dark on the German trenches. He turned and made for the British lines, but the fire directed at him was so heavy, that he had to throw himself on the ground and crawl. There was no cover at hand and his chances looked desperate when he saw close by an enormous hole in the ground made by one of these large shells. Into this he scrambled and remained there for a night and a day. When night again came he succeeded in reaching our lines in safety.

Official casualty lists of recent date, which have been captured, show that the losses of the Germans continue to be heavy. One single list shows that a company of German infantry had 130 men killed and wounded, or more than half of its war establishment. Other companies suffered almost as heavily. It further appears that the number of men reported as missing, that is those who have fallen into the hands of the enemy or who have become marauders, is much greater in the reserve battalions, than in the first line units. This is evidence of the inferior quality of some of the reserves now being brought up to reinforce the enemy's field army, and it is all the more encouraging, since every day adds to our first line strength. The arrival of the Indian contingents caused everyone to realize that while the enemy was filling his depleted ranks with immature levies, we have large reserves of perfectly fresh and thoroughly trained troops to draw upon."

were just as they had been when the Chinamen went to bed. Had there been any struggle, they say, surely some of these articles would have been disarranged. Besides after retiring in peace it is not likely that these Chinamen were going to get up at three o'clock in the morning to engage in mortal combat.

If the two Chinamen had fought because themselves the whole apartment would have been disturbed in the struggle and blood would have been spattered in almost every direction. It would have given an idea of the immensity of the struggle. Also it would not have been likely that one apartment. The blood stains do not support the theory of a fight between the men. The beds were literally covered with the blood stains. The Chinamen's heads had been merely covered with blood spots, but this was not apparent all over the room. Neither Chinamen stirred from the bed after being struck. There is no trail of blood more likely than fore, it is almost proof conclusive that both men were assaulted in bed by a third party. Detective Chapman had a very practical solution of the crime as it was perpetrated.

A Theory.

The place is known as a gambling den, therefore, what is more likely than that the murderer had spent the evening there with comrades in the gambling den. He lost heavily and sought to regain his money. After the games what is more likely than that he hid behind the shop's counter and was not suspected. He knew the habits of his countrymen and bided his time. Firstly, he went to the domestic pantry and found the meat cleaver and tin opener. The case box was speedily ripped open and the disappointment of the intruder can be imagined when he found little therein. What is more likely than that he decided to rob from the person and taking with him the cleaver in case of emergencies, proceeded to rob his compatriot, Duck, and had succeeded, only to silence him forever with one deadly blow when he showed signs of life. The noise aroused you, who was immediately attacked and fearing discovery, the attacker fled from the scene too anxious to search for you's money. That he was a man who knew the house is apparent by the fact that he locked the door after him. You's silence supports the contention that he knows the assailant to be one of his countrymen.

Some hold that one man attacked the other and inflicted the injuries themselves. The nature of the wounds upon both men was much too severe for this. It has been known where one man apparently mortally wounded, rallied, and gaining the only weapon of the fight, inflicted a death blow to their antagonist. Had this been so in this case the signs of a struggle would have been apparent.

The great blood stains upon the beds prove that the victims were attacked as they lay asleep. There is no doubt whatever said a police authority that a third party committed the crime, but whether he got in from without or was already in, is not known. The crime is typically Chinese in its brutality and slaughter.

The 38th Dufferin Rifles of Canada paraded last night at 201—a somewhat reduced muster. The evening was occupied with company training and battalion drill in Armouries and on immediate streets. While many companies were somewhat under strength their keenness cannot for a moment be under-rated and accentuated thoroughness is quite noticeable.

A large proportion also are drilling now with the active-service contingent which has made a considerable inroad on nominal strength of battalion.

Active Service Notes. Many of those now in Capt. E. Newman's company are men who have soldiered all over the globe and hail from many lands. One "a lad of Devon" by regimental adoption was through the first Boxer rising as a boy and served through the Boer war, has been in India on service and is still as fit as ever. His father is at present with the British expeditionary force in France as a chaplain, and incidentally this Briton was born in Australia. Others have served in various portions of the "red splash," and a few have interesting souvenir scars for days or tented fields, and battle's smoke. The local men, not a whit less gallant in their undoubted eagerness to serve have never been outside the limits of home scenes and leavened with material from the above will go far. The comment which comes from those best qualified to give it is "splendid material and that is the ground work of any unit of service."

Inspection. The annual inspection of the 38th Dufferin Rifles will take place next Monday night in the armoury at 8 p. m. Major-General Lessard, C.B., of Toronto, will be the inspecting officer. A good strong parade is hoped for and under the spur of such conditions as are at present is to be expected.

Provisional School. The provisional N.C.O.'s class is about to lose many of its keenest participants by enlistments in the active service company. To-night a lecture on "Outpost Duties" will be given by Sergt. Coleman of the R. C. Regiment, G. Company.

20TH ANNIVERSARY WAS DULY OBSERVED

Balfour Street Presbyterian Church Celebrated Sunday and Monday.

The 20th anniversary of Balfour St. Presbyterian Church was fittingly celebrated Sunday and Monday, Oct. 25th and 26th.

Sunday morning the pulpit was occupied by Rev. W. E. Gordon of St. Andrews Church, and the evening service was taken by Rev. D. T. McClintock of Alex. St. Church. Both services were well attended and special music of a creditable nature was rendered by the choir.

On Monday evening a jubilee concert was held under the auspices of the Willing Workers S. S. class. The teachers, officers and members of the class deserve praise for their efforts in making the concert such a prominent success. The talent was practically all supplied by the members of this organization.

The special feature of the evening was an address by Miss Sarah Brown on the early history of the church. Miss Brown's years of service made the talk especially interesting.

Mr. William Robertson, the treasurer, who has been an officer of the church since its inception, gave the report of the anniversary offerings, and he thanked the members for their generosity.

Rev. Mr. Carpenter, a former superintendent of the S. S., spoke briefly, thanking the Willing Workers for the excellent programme. A pleasing feature was the presence of Rev. A. Marshall of Oxford St. Methodist church. The cordial feeling between the two congregations and their respective pastors was feelingly referred to.

Jubilee year will long be remembered by the members and friends of Balfour Street Church as a landmark in the church's history.

Proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Allies Will Soon Be Back at Ostend An Unceasing Flow of German Wounded to Several Belgian Towns. Ostend, like Bruges and Ghent, is overflowing with wounded and Antwerp itself is now filling up. This unceasing flow of wounded men, is calculated to destroy the morale of the German troops in Ostend. HOW ENGLAND IS TAKING PRECAUTIONS AGAINST SPYING

(By Archibald Hurd with the Daily Telegraph)

Everyone is talking of German and Austrian spies being in London and in particular on the East Coast; it is even reported that some places signal have been removed from houses ashore to ships and that this information has been conveyed to the movements of men-of-war.

This is not a matter to be taken lightly. I have devoted the day to this matter—talking over the danger of spies with persons of official and unofficial ranks. Spying is a military art—one that concerns those who minister the navy and the army. These secret service agents and spies exist in order that they may know the secrets about the fleet and our forces and communicate them to the enemy—to our undoing. There is a supreme degree, any remedy the evil—whatever the remedy—must rest ultimately in the hands of men—Mr. Winston Churchill Lord Kitchener, the two war ministers.

What has been done? For several years German in this country aroused suspicion had his secretly opened; he did not know he was being watched. This was the result of foresight. Years ago a department under a highly intelligent army officer was set up to deal with the business. The whole ramifications of this country were gradually referred to the spies themselves, who became known to the police.

Rounding Up Suspects

Before the outbreak of the war machine was broken; its agents in the country were arrested—quietly and unobtrusively. Then the Allied restriction act was passed, and hundreds of enemy aliens who were to suspicion—although they were part of the machine—were laid by heels and are now in confinement. Innocent enemy aliens had to regard all of them were warned that this was an offence, bringing with it the punishment of three months in one of the prohibited areas, consisting of all the military and naval areas of the United Kingdom, giving the correct interpretation to the phrase. I have the patriotic feeling that they ought to assist in seeing that these restrictions were enforced against enemy aliens, suspicious or otherwise. Has the loyal and patriotic population done its duty?

So much for this aspect of the matter. All letters—not some, but an entire route to any neighboring country which the enemy are opened and one lady, whose husband, now service, is rather given to discussing the war, received not his letter the day, but the day after. This contained a word, "a dear," which bore a word, "my husband is too comical," but he is quite well.

Letters may be sent, of course, way of Italy, but they take a few days to reach Italy, and when they get to Germany, goodness knows. There is no telegraphic communication open to spies. The means of getting out of every even neutral fishing boats may use east coast ports—is by messenger. It takes some time for a letter to get through an inspection. It is a big military authority discussing with me the attitude of newspapers towards our war aims; comments, once remarked, "Give us at least twenty thousand men in the case of the expeditionary force the men were fighting before the war." The man knew they had left this country.

Homings Pigeons and Wireless. "Ah, but what about carrier birds?" it may be asked. Any of the birds to be used from this country must have been brought here in Germany before the war, and kept in captivity since, for the customer has seen to it that none has entered since the beginning of August last. The birds have been in progress for several months. A few pigeons have been seen and shot; they were birds belonging to the Admiralty. As to the birds generally, they cannot now be kept without a police permit, and 1,500 branches of the Pigeon Association are patriotically taking every possible step to see that there is no infringement.

Again, there is the possibility of wireless being employed. Well, person who uses a wireless installation commits a punishable offence. Now we are to know that spies are not communicating by means of stations of which the authorities know nothing? It may be inquired. The answer is, by "listening." A person who has been affixed in a modicum of wire is aware of the fact that the approximate distance over which a signal has travelled can be ascertained by an expert. Trained experts are engaged in listening for signals in one place, but in many, and tracking down any "chattering" wire is unauthorized. You follow wireless messages, learn exactly what information you are to follow the man voice.

The Precautions—and Yet. So much for the precautions which have been taken against spying, which the naval and military authorities, the post office, the home office, the police throughout the country and the customs have all been concerned. This sketch of the steps adopted is worth giving if only as a reminder that the government, through the Churchill admitted the other day, that spying was going on, watched the development of the system, because possessed of the spies' names and addresses, learnt exactly what information they were sending, and then secured the spies. In all their cunning and innocence they had revealed the easy processes of their work, and the features of Germany's war plans as these facts were no doubt of no slight value to the admiralty and the police. And yet, in spite of all the precautions adopted, there are many stories

SECOND BASEMEN GOT THE PRIZES

Evers and Collins Were Most Valuable Players on Their Respective Teams.

Johnny Evers, captain and second baseman of the champion Boston Braves is winner of the Chalmers Trophy in the National League for 1914, with 50 out of a possible 64 points. Eddie Collins, second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, was winner of the trophy in the American League, with 63 out of a possible 64 points.

These two second basemen are declared the most useful players in their respective teams and each received his Chalmers car at a world's series game played in his city. Better choices could not have been made. Evers should have received even more votes than he did. It is the universal opinion among ball play players and professional critics that Evers has been the making of the Boston Braves. He received a bonus of $25,000 for signing a three year contract with them last winter, after he was named by Charley Murphy, of Chicago, and he has been worth every cent of it. Drooping from manager of a possible pennant contender to field captain of what for nearly three months proved to be one of the worst tail ends imaginable, made no difference whatever to Evers. He played ball every minute, and talked and thought baseball off the field.

After they became thoroughly acquainted his steady influence upon Shortstop Maranville, and the other Boston youngsters was phenomenal, while his baseball sense, long experience and keen observation made him invaluable in plays with which he has no direct influence. Few men shunted from the management of a team like the Cubs to the ranks of the players of a tail end have ever shown such a clean-cut sporting disposition as Evers, and no player, fan or critic would begrudge him two automobiles, much less one.

Eddie Collins Also Worthy.

Eddie Collins also earned his buzz buggy by hard, conscientious work with his brains as well as with his hands and feet. The circumstances surrounding his case were not so appealing or so spectacular as in the case of Evers. He had to force himself upon the attention of the Chalmers Trophy commission by unceasing effort, and the nobly succeeded. Collins has been declared by so great an authority as John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants the greatest ball player of the day. He is one player without a weakness. In batting, brains, speed on the bases, fielding, quick perception and thorough knowledge of inside baseball. Collins had no superior, and he employed those attributes to the full in every game he plays, whether the Athletics are battling for a pennant and a share of the world's series money, or whether they have been left in the ruck as they were in 1912.

Many critics believe that because of their highly specialized work and comparatively infrequent appearances pitchers should be barred from the Chalmers Trophy competition, and it should have a trophy of their own. Walter Johnson won in the American League last year because of his wonderful performance in keeping Washington well up to the front, but Collins was the choice then of a very large element of baseball followers, and it was no more than right that he should attain such a sweeping victory in 1914.

SIR NIGEL

BY A. CONAN DOYLE

"God preserve us from the wench, Sunkin! But indeed I think that if there is money to be gathered you are as likely to get your fist full as any man who goes to the war. But hasten, lad, hasten! Already your young master is over the brow." "I will guard them," cried the lady. "Pommers is not so easily held. Do you bid here, Aylward, until you hear from me. Sir, not, I command you!" So saying, Nigel, with the light of adventure gleaming in his joyous eyes, drew his sword and plunged swiftly into the forest.

"Far and fast he ran, from glade to glade, brooking through the bushes, springing over the brambles, light as a young deer, peering this way and that, straining his ears for a sound, and catching only the cry of the wood-pigeons. Still on he went, with the constant thought of the weeping woman behind and the captured man in front. It was not until he was some time and out of breath that he stopped with his hand to his side, and considered that his own business had still to be done, and that it was time once more to seek the road to Guildford. Meantime Aylward had found his own rough means of consoling the woman in the road, who stood sobbing and weeping against the side of Pommers' saddle.

"Nay, weep not, my pretty one," said he. "It brings the tears to my eyes to see them stream from thine." "Alas! good archer, he was the best of fathers, so gentle and so kind! Had you but seen him, you must have loved him." "Tut, tut! he will suffer no scathe. Squire Nigel will bring him back to you, no, I shall never see him more. Hold me, archer, or I fall!" Aylward pressed his ready arm round the supple waist. The fainting woman leaned with her hand upon his shoulder. Her pale face looked past him, and it was some new light in her eyes, a flash of expectancy, of triumph, of wicked joy, which gave her the sudden impulse to spring upon him. He shook her off and sprang to one side, but only just in time to avoid a crashing blow from a great club in the hands of a man even taller and stronger than himself. He had one quick vision of great white teeth clenched in grim ferocity, a wild flying beard and blazing wild-beast eyes, but the instant he had closed, ducking his head beneath another swing of that murderous cudgel.

Nigel sprang from his horse and tossed the rein to Aylward. "Nay, let us go together. How many robbers were there, lady?" "Two stout fellows." "Then I come also." "Nay, it is not possible," said Nigel. "The wood is too thick for horses, and we cannot leave them in the road."

HOW ENGLAND IS TAKING PRECAUTIONS AGAINST SPYING

(By Archibald Hurd with the London Daily Telegraph.)

Everyone is talking of German spies being in our midst. They are said to be at work in London and in particular on the East Coast; it is even reported that at some places signals have passed from houses ashore to ships at sea, and that this information has been conveyed of the movements of our men-of-war.

This is not a matter to be treated lightly. I have devoted the whole day to this matter—talking over the danger of spies with persons official and unofficial, and persons of many classes. Spying is a military matter—one that concerns those who administer the navy and the army, for these secret service agents and others exist in order that they may discover secrets about the fleet and our land forces and communicate them to the enemy—to our undoing. Therefore, in a supreme degree, any remedy for the evil—whatever its proportions—must rest ultimately in the hands of two men—Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Kitchener, the two war ministers.

What has been done? For several years every German in this country who aroused suspicion had his letters secretly opened; he did not know it was being done. This was the result of foresight years ago, a special department under a highly intelligent army officer was set up to deal with the business. The whole ramifications in this country was gradually revealed by the spies themselves, who thus became known to the police.

Rounding Up Suspects. Before the outbreak of the war the machine was broken; its agents in this country were arrested—quietly and unobtrusively. Then the Alien Restriction act was passed, and hundreds of enemy aliens who were open to suspicion—although they were not part of the machine—were laid by the heels and are now in confinement. Innocent enemy aliens had to register, and all of them were warned that it was an offence, bringing with it heavy punishment, if they remained in any one of the prohibited areas, consisting of all the military and naval areas of the United Kingdom, giving the widest interpretation to the phrase. It became the patriotic duty of every subject to assist in seeing that these restrictions were enforced against all enemy aliens, suspicious or otherwise. Has the loyal and patriotic population done its duty.

So much for this aspect of the matter. All letters—not some, but all—en route to any neighboring foreign country which would find their way to the enemy are opened and read. One lady, whose husband, now on service, is rather given to discursive, received, not his letter the other day, but the envelope containing merely a "chit," which bore these words, "our husband is too communicative, but he is quite well."

Letters may be sent, of course, by way of Italy, but they take several days to reach Italy, and when they get to Germany, goodness only knows. There is no telegraphic communication open to spies. Their only means of getting out their news is by even neutral fishing boats may not use east coast ports—is by messenger. It takes some time for a traveller to get through, and shipping is watched. A high military authority, discussing with me the attitude of the newspapers towards our war arrangements, once remarked, "Give us at least twenty-four hours start." (In the case of the expeditionary force the men were fighting before the Germans knew they had left this country.)

Homing Pigeons and Wireless. "Ah, but what about carrier pigeons?" it may be asked. Any of these birds to be used from this country, must have been brought here from Germany before the war, and kept in captivity since, for the customers have seen to it that none has entered since the beginning of August last. The war has been in progress for over two months. A few pigeons have been seen and shot; they were birds belonging to the Admiralty. As to these birds generally, they cannot now be kept without a police permit, and 1,500 branches of the Homing Pigeon association are patriotically taking every possible step to see that there is no infringement.

Again, there is the possibility of wireless being employed. Well, any person who uses a wireless installation commits a punishable offence. "How are we to know that spies are communicating by means of installations of which the authorities know nothing?" it may be inquired. The answer is, by "listening." Anyone who has been aloft in a modern ship of war is aware of the fact that the approximate distance over which a signal has travelled can be ascertained by an expert. Trained experts are engaged in listening for spies, not in one place, but in many, and in tracking down any "wireless" which is unauthorized. You follow wireless messages much as you follow the human voice.

The Precautions—and Yet. So much for the precautions which have been taken against spying, but the naval and military authorities, the post office, the home office, the police throughout the country, and the customs have all been concerned. This sketch of the steps adopted is worth giving if only as a reminder that the government knew—as Mr. Churchill admitted the other day—that spying was going on, watched the development of the system, because possessed of the spies' names and addresses, learnt exactly what information they were sending, and then secured the spies. In all their cunning and innocence they had revealed by easy processes of deduction, certain features of Germany's war plans and these facts were no doubt of no slight value to the admiralty and the war office.

And yet, in spite of all the precautions adopted, there are many stories in circulation suggesting that spying is still going on and going on extensively. It is said that signals have been made on the east coast to vessels at sea, apparently dealing with the movements of His Majesty's ships, to suspicious characters—Germans or Austrians—have been seen examining with too close attention objects of military importance on our coastline; that from one seaside resort in Kent lights have been flashed to vessels at sea, and that answers have been received; that there are still in London hotels a large number of German waiters in a position to learn all that is said by officers and others in conversation; that lights have been shown from house-tops in the metropolis and elsewhere; that Germans are working in mines in Wales and Kent as they worked in the French quarries—and so on.

A Patriotic Duty. The country is studded with magistrates, and there are scores of chief constables. Every case in which there is first-hand evidence—circumstantial or otherwise—such as would convict a known criminal in ordinary circumstances ought to be brought to the attention either of a magistrate or the superior police authorities in the locality concerned. If either fails to act, then the facts should be laid before the home office.

SECOND CONTINGENT HERE TILL NEW YEAR

Force Will Number 16,000 Instead of 10,000 Men.

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—The second Canadian contingent to go from Canada will, it is now practically assured, consist of 16,000 men, instead of 10,000 men, and will scarcely get before the early part of next year. It was learned to-day that the military authorities do not consider it would be advisable to send the second Canadian contingent to England before the first division has taken the field. It is stated that the first division will have at least three months training, in England before it sees active service, all of which would fix the departure of the second contingent in January of the early part of February.

In all probability the training of this second force will set a new precedent in Canadian military practice, that of winter shooting over rifle ranges. It was stated by an official of the Militia Department to-day that where the weather permitted, rifle ranges would be utilized during the Fall and Winter months in addition to gallery practice in the "Armories." An additional advantage of this would be the hardening of the troops to the hardships of a Winter campaign, which they will in all probability have to face. It is affirmed by the headquarters officials that the second contingent will in the point of training be rather superior, if anything, to the first one. It will be thoroughly trained in squad and company drill at local mobilization points, in bayonet practice and exercised in good physical condition. It can receive its training in larger formations and movements in England.

The necessity of bending all energies on to the nature of the expeditionary forces will, it is understood, result in the cancellation of the usual Summer training of the militia next year. The mobilization of the city militia regiments and the raising of the expeditionary force in Canada itself is realized, and preparations will shortly be commenced to raise in Canada the force of 30,000 which is to be kept always continually under arms, and from which drafts will be sent to the front from time to time. The militia authorities are still awaiting word from the War Office as to the nature of the force wanted before undertaking this.

Troops in Training. There has been evidence of a gratifying desire on the part of Canadian volunteers to engage in voluntary training. It was stated at the Militia Department to-day that the men of two Toronto regiments have been practically under canvas since the selection of the first contingent, and I have been undergoing training to fit themselves for service. The same is true of some places in the West. It was also stated that the roll of the new French-Canadian regiment which is being raised is now complete with 1,100 names, that there were 3,600 in all on the list of volunteers, and that officers have been chosen. As regards the matter of equipment for the second contingent the Militia Department states that such good progress has been made that the second contingent is already on hand.

GERMAN RETREAT. LONDON, Oct. 27.—A Petograd despatch says: "The Army Messenger in summing up the operations on the Russian front says that the German forces in the region of Miawa and Wislawa, disquieted by the situation on the front at Thorn and Cracow, have retreated in the direction of East Prussia, where the population has been ordered to retire into the interior."

The Kimberley Gem

It Was Taken From the Owner, and He Was Obligated to Steal It

BY ARTHUR STANTON

There was but one way out of the situation—I must become a thief, a thief of my own property. Possession is nine points of the law, and possession was with my opponent. He held the gem, and I could fight for it in the courts. I must get possession of it and let him fight for it by law. No; I could not do that, either, for if I stole it the law would convict me of being a thief and restore the diamond to its supposed owner. If either fails to operate and learned, among other things, that the gems were shipped just in time to catch the mail steamer for Europe. If through any delay they did not reach the coast before the vessel sailed they were locked up in the postoffice till the departure of the next ship.

I asked Jim to find out for me when my stone would be shipped, and he tried to do so, but only learned that it was still at Kimberley. I at once started over the route looking for some point where I might lie in wait and catch the convoy napping. I came to a stream where the carriers made a ferried over. It occurred to me that something might be done here, but after racking my brain I could hit upon no plan that seemed feasible. I went on, but as I proceeded I formed a scheme a part of which pertained to this ferry. Reaching the coast, I at once went to the postoffice to look over the ground there.

I had nearly all of Jim Benton's £500 in my pocket and was well dressed. I represented myself as a post-office official, whose duties were to travel about and make reports on different postoffices. But I made no pretense at supervising the postmaster at this point. Instead, I invited him to dinner and treated him sumptuously. This gave me access to his office. I learned where the diamonds were locked when delayed in transportation. One evening after the clerks had gone home I sat with the postmaster in his office. Suddenly I fell over in a pretended faint and on reviving begged him to go for a doctor. He did so, and while he was gone with some was I locked up where I might be found, and an impression of the lock on the safe where diamonds waiting transportation were kept. When he returned with the doctor I was so far recovered that I did not need the latter's services.

The next day I returned to Kimberley and charged Benton to keep a sharp lookout for the shipment of my diamond. It may be wondered that, since I was intending to steal my own property, I was punctilious as to taking this particular stone. It was, firstly, because I should have had to take a good many other stones to make up its value, and secondly, Jim Benton's conscience was so stiff that if he had believed that I intended to take any but the stone I had found he might have swung the other way and peached on me again.

Jim did good work for me in looking out for the shipment of my stone. He was so thoroughly trusted by all those in authority that he could ask questions about it without exciting suspicion. One day he came to me and said that a shipment of diamonds was to be made the next morning, and my stone was among the number. It was considered so valuable that a double convoy would be sent out. Within an hour I started for the coast.

Coming to the stream the party would be obliged to cross, I unclashed the boat, pulled myself over and on reaching the opposite shore sent the boat adrift. As I saw it disappear on the current I felt sure the diamond convoy would be delayed. Then I went back to Kimberley, and soon after their departure I reappeared at the postoffice, where I was heartily greeted by the postmaster, whom I told that I had inspected the postoffice at Kimberley and would await the next steamer for home.

The rest of my work was dead easy. I complained of not feeling well and was invited to lodge with the postmaster, whose rooms were in the same building with his office. In the middle of the night I went down in my stocking feet to the safe, opened it, felt among the stones till I recognized my diamond, unlocked the safe and went back to bed. There was no hurry for my departure, for the diamonds would not be taken out of the safe till put on the steamer. I sailed on the same ship with them and, on reaching Europe, went to Amsterdam, where I had my stone cut and sold it for a fortune. I concluded to forgive Benton. In consideration of his valuable assistance, for peaching on me and offering to give him a part of the proceeds. But he would take nothing and, for aught I know, is still handling a pick in the Kimberley mines.

Ellen Griffith, Toronto, aged six died a few hours after she was struck by an automobile.

"You're crazy. Do you suppose you can ever get possession of a diamond in the hands of the diamond company?" "You do what I say."

Jim was so upset at having acted with such haste that he finally consented to do as I asked. That's the trouble with these frightfully conscientious people. They swing as far in one direction as the other. After all, it isn't the conscience that's bad, it's the judgment, or, more likely, the impulse. Jim, who was in high favor with the company on account of having peached on me, was given £500 for telling on me. He offered me all the money paid him for my forgiveness. I needed money to carry out my plan to get my diamond, so I accepted it as a loan, promising to return it if I succeeded in getting my property. By this time Jim, who was thoroughly repentant, agreed to help me all he could.

One day he came to me and said that diamonds were sent periodically to England. They were taken to the coast, where they were shipped by steamer. I at once made inquiries about the route with a view to finding some point where I might lie in wait and operate and learned, among other things, that the gems were shipped just in time to catch the mail steamer for Europe. If through any delay they did not reach the coast before the vessel sailed they were locked up in the postoffice till the departure of the next ship.

BRITISH CITIZENSHIP (From La Patrie, Montreal) As in the height of the greatness of the Roman Empire, Rome made a citizen glory in being a Roman citizen, so today, as Sir Charles Fitzpatrick has well said, the title of a British citizen satisfies our pride. As we have more reason than ever to be proud of the Empire of which we form a part. At the present hour we see the whole world testifying its admiration for England, which is spending all its wealth of money and all its stock of arms to be true to its pledged faith—Our fate is tied to that of England; her cause is our cause, and to defend it our soldiers have gone, and are going, to fight in Europe and in Asia. The equal of the citizens of the Empire who live in the United Kingdom, we take pride in the fact that we are British citizens.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers. Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.
