THE SITUATION

The British advance continues with steady relentlessness. They have pushed back the Huns four miles from the original Tonten trenches, and are consolidating the ground thus gained. Preparations are now in progress to make still another big thrust at the third line of the foe. A feature has been the use of British cavalry for the first time since the war started, and apparently with excellent results. The Cossacks, of course, have from the first been doing good work on the Eastern front, but they are always part and parcel of any active Russian equipment. Two thousand Germans were taken prisoner on Saturday, making a total of ten thousand since General Haig started this particular operation. The Germans yesterday, by surprise attacks, retook a couple of villages recently lost by them, but the French ejected the Huns with such promptness as to demonstrate how well they have matters in hand.

The Verdun fighting has latterly been somewhat obliterated by other events, but the struggle still proceeds, and the latest reports indicate French success.

Grand Duke Nicholas announces that he has taken Balbut, an important strategic point in the Caucasus.

DESPICABLE WORK.

If there is one thing more than another which a certain class of Brit papers would rather see at this time than anything else, it is a breakdown in Canada's military service, which would reflect upon Sir Sam Hughes in particular and the Borden Government in general.

This unpatriotic desire is to their deep shame, but it exists nevertheless.

Take Camp Borden as an illustration. To all intents and purposes, men have been goaded to resent going to it; there has been the remark that they had enlisted to fight the Huns and should not be kept from the front, and a lot more incentive stuff of a like nature.

The one object has been to stir resentment in the ranks. Why?

For the lowest and most contemptible of political reasons.

When the men were drenched to the skin week after week, on Salisbury Plains, were there any British papers of supposed self-respect egging the men to revolt?

There are bound to be disabilities in connection with all camps, and these have to be overcome, or borne as the case may be. True soldiers are not cry babies, or apron string ninny, and the few who have been cutting up are not in any sense characteristic of the vast rank and file. Camp Borden as a sandy spot, is dusty just now, but when the rains come the men would rather have it than any clay site ever heard of.

Meanwhile the general public have formed their own views of the class of newspaper which, for party ends, would seek to lead men to disgrace the uniform which it was their honor to first accept.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

July has evidently made up its mind to make sure that all the ice is out of the Grand River.

It is announced that the Kaiser has decided to retire seven of his generals from commands at the front. In melancholy tones they will be able to exclaim, "Hear, rear."

While William of Hohenzollern was in the firing game with regard to his Generalissimo's it's a pity, he didn't draw a head on the Crown Prince.

Toronto had a French tag day and the result was over $25,000. There can be no doubt that the Queen Cityites are just about as good givers as they are takers.

Sir Sam Hughes, speaking in connection with the establishment of an arsenal in Lindsay said: "And with due regard to the province of Quebec in this great war, it has not done its duty."

The Minister of Militia would have been equally justified in stating that it had most arrantly and contemptibly shirked a plain duty.

IRISH AGITATORS

That Ireland suffered a good many wrongs in the past is a matter of history; that in the latter years she has been largely the spoiled child of the British Isles is equally true.

Recently Mr. Annesley Burrows, a well known Detroit newspaper man, was sent an article from another newspaper, in sympathy with the Sinn Feiners and in which figures were given to show that England is continually robbing the Emerald Isle—the kind of stuff which inflamed the rebels who wrecked Dublin and sent hundreds of innocent people to their death.

The sender of the extract above spoken of, to Mr. Burrows, made the taunt that he would be a "wonder" if he could answer it. That gentleman has done so in the Detroit Journal in a most conclusive manner. He shows that the taxes of England, Ireland and Scotland are levied under precisely the same laws with the exception that the Englishman pays a tax on his horse, and a tax on his land, whereas the average Irishman does not.

The taxes collected go into one Treasury to be used in England, Ireland and Scotland respectively, and what is left over becomes used for federal purposes—the Army, the Navy, and so forth.

In the last recorded year, England yielded $772,000,000 in taxes. About half a billion of that was used for Federal purposes.

Scotland yielded $100,000,000 and over half went for Federal purposes.

Ireland yielded $53,000,000, and not a dollar of it went to the support of the Navy, the Army, the King or anything else of that nature. In addition from the British taxes each year millions are taken to help in the running of the Emerald Isle. Per example, the year before war every English person, men, women and babies, paid $13 for Federal purposes, every Scotch person $11, in the same regard, and the Irish not a sou, or a red cent. As a matter of fact, the poor Irishman to-day practically does not pay any taxes—nothing on his income, nothing on his land, nothing on his house.

If Ireland could be freed from a lot of paid agitators, both at home and in the United States, it would be the best day's work which ever happened her. These are the vampires who are feeding on "woes" which they have conjured up, the better to line their own pockets.

SHORT RESPIRE IN BATTLE LINE

to-day was fully expected here, as it is realized that several days must be taken up for the movement of the artillery to its new positions and preliminary bombardments before fresh infantry attacks can begin. The frank admissions by the French of the extraordinary obstacles which the British troops have had to surmount in the recent fighting, have given great satisfaction here, while the comparatively light casualties suffered by General Haig's forces are hailed as an indication of the splendid artillery preparation along the whole line held by the British.

Hard to Mount Guns

Both the British and the French are confronted with almost insuperable difficulties in moving their systems of communication with the advancing troops. The biggest guns of the Allies are too huge to be handled either by horses or motors, but require freight trucks for their transportation.

The Real Thing Will Be Insisted Upon in Future in Vienna

By Special Wire to the Courier.

Vienna, July 17.—Meatless days hereafter will be meatless in reality. Previously, on account of various kinds of meat exempted from the prohibition, the issuance of meat rations has been only partially restricted, but a new decree which is to be immediately effective, prohibits the sale or consumption of all kinds of meats, including tinned or smoked meats and of poultry and wild game on meatless days.

TRY DIVERSION IN LORRAINE

By Special Wire to the Courier.

Paris, July 17.—The Germans made two attacks in Lorraine last night. The war office report of to-day says both assaults were repulsed.

The attacks in Lorraine were delivered at a point southeast of Nancy.

West of the Fleury, the French made some progress, taking three machine guns.

A raid on a trench in the Champagne occupied by Russian troops was met successfully by a counter attack, causing heavy losses to the Germans.

On the Verdun front the night was comparatively calm, except in the vicinity of Hill 304, where rifle firing was brisk.

YES," said the dominating woman with the determined eyes and the voice of cold assurance, "Yes, there are three in the family and we have five servants, but I never can get one thing done as I should like, unless I watch every move that every servant makes."

Her husband is a real estate man, rather successful in a small way, but that woman makes everybody believe he's making a fortune and people think: "So-and-so is a wonder—he must be look at the number of servants his wife keeps—and he only went into business for himself 10 years ago."

Take for instance the elaborate coiffure for evening, which is becoming to many women these days. It is a beautiful thing, but it is very difficult to dress the hair in the manner shown.

"Side-Part" with Ringlets. The hair is no longer tolerated as it used to be—straight down the middle. The hair is parted on the side and curled in ringlets.

Elaborate Coiffure for Evening. The hair is styled in an elaborate fashion for evening wear, with curls and waves.

Curls Become Youthful Faces. Side-part is a becoming way to dress the hair for the woman with a not too high forehead. This manner of combing the hair gives it a certain symmetry.
