Roumanian Queen Has Hobby.

The Queen of Roumania is a daughter of the late Duke of Edinburgh, favorite niece of King Edward, and a first cousin to King George, and it is only natural that her sympathies are with the English. As a child Queen Marie was the pet of Queen Victoria, who had her portrait painted by Millais when she was about five or six. Queen Marie introduced a distinctly English tone into court circles when she arrived in Bucharest as Crown Princess, and so strong has been her influence in the Roumanian capital, that English is now practically the language of the aristocracy. It has become almost a proverb in Bucharest that it is only the "women who wear kerchiefs"—that is, the laboring classes—who cannot speak English.

There is a story told of Princess Ileana, the third and seven-year-old daughter of Queen Marie and King Ferdinand, which illustrates the feeling for the English in Roumania. When teased by a foreign diplomat about her nationality, the little girl replied with dignity: "I am a little Roumanian, a little German, but mostly English."

Queen Marie, by the way, has a queer hobby. It is the collection of scent bottles, and she now has some 8,000. I hear, too, that she is head of the Society of Goddesses of Roumania, but I cannot say for certain, as I have not been invited to join it.

No Chance for the Germs

Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

Kidney Disease Overcome

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Sheho, Sask., writes:—"For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease, at times I was bed with backache, and derangement of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills."

The Recruit.

He put the khaki on today. He's but a child—my brother—You did not plead with him to stay. You're not regretting, mother? He dropped his lessons and his play. The little, fair-haired brother! 'Tis not so very long ago He came—that baby brother. In that drear night of ice and snow—You're not forgetting, mother? And I have always loved him so! My little one, my brother! He said to me: 'they need more men. Good-bye to you, my brother!' I must be brave, for mother! So soon you pass beyond our ken, God keep you safe, my brother! — Nina Moore Jamieson.

Household Hints.

For the Outgrown Shirt.—Every mother knows how soon the little babies' arms grow too large for the shirt sleeves, while the body of the shirt is still large enough. This can be remedied by purchasing a pair of infants' white cashmere hose. Cut the feet off and overcast neatly into the armholes, putting in a little gusset under the arm if necessary to enlarge armhole. The leg of the stocking makes the sleeve and the top fits nicely around the little wrist.—Spare Moments.

To Keep Beds From Bleeding.—An easy way to stop a bed without bedding it and causing it to lose color is to put it in cold water as soon as it is cooked. Then draw the bed gently down the bed and the skin will drop off without trouble.

Making One Egg Do For Two.—When scrambling eggs for breakfast, add one tablespoonful of fine bread crumbs and one tablespoonful of milk to every beaten egg. Season with pepper and salt and cook in the usual way. By this means stale bread may be used, and one egg will go as far as two.

When Making Comforts, put the cotton first into mosquito netting, tacking closely, then put on the outside covering, using fewer stitches. Comfort tops put on in this manner may be removed with very little trouble and washed or renewed.—Holland's.

To Clean Dishcloths.—Fill them with water and let stand in it for three days, when the slugs will ferment. Turn out and rinse. The bottles should be as bright and clean after this as when new.

Lancashire Lad's Story.

This is the story of Pie James Hutchinson, a Lancashire lad, of an attack on the German trenches. After describing the terrible rush over the bullet-torn No Man's Land, he says:—

"Somewhere I reached the German trenches, a quip Britisher, I was soon through a gap in the wire, which our artillery had cut for us. The first thing I saw was a big German firing down the trench and knocking chalk off the side. When he had finished his little game I rushed around the traverse and put my bayonet through him.

"There was another Biche there, and when he saw me he commenced to run toward a dugout, but seemed to slip back a step, so I promptly got him through the head. Another was resting on one knee, and started shouting for mercy, but he paid the same penalty. I next went around the trench, I trawled, and found three more, either with the bayonet or rifle bullet. Hurrying around the next traverse I saw about seven Huns throwing hand grenades at the lads who had not got in the trenches, but were fighting along the top.

"There was one German left to guard the traverse, and he tried to throw a hand grenade at me, but could not get it ready in time, so I fired at him and hit him. I was dazed for a second and did not know whether to rush him or not, so I shouted to my party to get round the traverse. I then reloaded and kept guard while the officer and men behind their bombs at the enemy. A little later we got word to retire, so I kept guard while my party got clear of the trenches and then mounted the ladder and made my way back, covering the enemy, while the lads got the wounded in. Of the 63 men in the whole raid 21 were reported missing, 21 got back wounded, and 11 answered the roll-call. After the shelling had subsided I was able to get back to the village, and the next day had an interview with the Major-General in charge of the division. An officer took my name and number and said that I would soon have something to wear on my breast."

That something is the 'Victoria Cross' with its inscription, 'For Valor.'

Away With the Dogs.

An exchange says: 'Undoubtedly the question of cost of fencing and shelter is the greatest objection to sheep raising on the average farm. To this we would add raids by wild dogs. While covering with a prominent sheep breeder in the vicinity of Sussex, a day or two ago, one who, by the way, brought in the most wool to the local wool growers centre last spring, he told us that he had disposed of his entire flock owing to the ravages of dogs during the fall and summer months. Discouraged? Yes, discouraged by seeing his best ewes and lambs torn bleeding and dead and the profits expected and in sight, wiped away by the ravages of worthless dogs that are so safely entrenched behind a worthless dog act. Like Lincoln's immortal 'Are slave owners the best lawgivers on slavery?' It seems that the dog owners are the lawgivers for the protection of the sheep industry, and consequently the sheep industry is languishing while the many curs are rolling in luxury. The situation is critical and calls for an immediate remedy. Save the producing industry by doing away with the blasted dogs.—Maritime Farmer.

A Daring Feat.

Snooks was one of those conceited, make believe bold hunters who was always spinning his yarns about his experiences in Africa, and he generally wound up by saying he never yet saw a lion he feared. One night after he had finished yarning he was a little taken aback by one of his audience who said:—

'That's nothing; I have lain down and actually slept among lions in their natural state.'

'I don't believe that; I'm no fool,' said the bold hunter.

'It's the truth, though.'

'You actually slept among lions in their wild, natural state?'

'Yes, I certainly did.'

'Can you prove it? Were they African lions?'

'Well, not exactly African lions. They were dandelions.'

The Guilt of Germany.

Why was it, Viscount Grey, inquired, that when England proposed the conference in July, 1914, Germany alone refused to enter into it? The four Powers offer a conference and one Power refuses it, is it the powers who are offering the conference which are forcing the war, or the power which refuses it? The Emperor of Russia offered The Hague Tribunal. Our Sovereign left the Hague Tribunal and another ignores it. All the Sovereign who offers it is to The Hague who is forced. On the very eve of war he would have her pride to respect the neutrality of Belgium if Germany would not violate it. We asked for such a pledge. Was it the Power which asked for the pledge and the Power which gave the pledge which were responsible for the violation of the neutrality of Belgium, or the Power which refused to give the pledge? Belgium knows, as well as every Frenchman and Englishman that never at any time was there a suggestion that French or English soldiers should enter Belgium unless it were to defend Belgium from the violation of her neutrality, which had first been undertaken by Germany.—Record.

Potatoes 1000 Bushels to the Acre.

There was much interest in the recent potato demonstration on the farm of E. P. Prentiss at Mt Hope farm in Williamstown, Mass. Mr. Prentiss has been devoting 4 years of experimental work to growing of potatoes, largely with the object of securing better yields. That he has been unusually successful is attested by the fact that one plot, dug a few days ago in the presence of agricultural men from Massachusetts, Vermont, New York and many local farmers, yielded at the rate of 1015 bushels to the acre. The variety was Rural New York. Another variety which Mr. Prentiss has dubbed Mount Hope made 8.0 bushels to the acre.

It is the belief at Mount Hope farm that potatoes should not be dug less than 13 weeks from the time of blossoming. One plot dug 10 weeks from the blossoming period yielded 800

War-Time Organist.

Our women have nobly taken the places of men who have been called to the colors and are doing work formerly regarded as outside their sphere. We have now gone a step farther, and have the war-time organist. The honor falls to Edward Wheeler, aged 14, who has been appointed at the temple, Great Yarmouth, which has a five two manual organ. He passed an Advance Grade examination at the age of 12 and is now, it is believed, the youngest organist in the country.

Insomnia

WE can live without food, but not without sleep. Many will recall Dr. Tanner's 40 days without food, but who could live a single week without sleep and retain their reason.

It is during sleep that the nervous system is restored, and the nerve force, consumed by the activities of the day, is replaced.

Sleeplessness is one of the first and one of the most torturing symptoms of nervous exhaustion.

With sleeplessness you find nervous headaches, tired, worn-out feelings, indigestion, lack of energy and strength. You are nervous and irritable, and cannot compose yourself to rest or sleep.

The nerve force in the body is at low ebb, and the feeble, wasted nerve cells must be nourished back to health and strength by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

You must not confuse this food cure with drugs taken to produce sleep, for it works in an entirely different way. It is not a quick relief, but a restorative, upbuilding treatment. As the nerves are revitalized sleep comes naturally with its soothing influence and hastens recovery.

Sleeplessness

Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmeville, Que., writes:—"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at night and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months, and found that it just suits my needs, and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition, and I am thankful for it."

WOLFVILLE, N. S., DEC. 8, 1916

Editorial Briefings.

A gentleman who is a regular attendant at the services in the various Wolfville churches remarked to THE ACADIAN the other day that he "wished it might become fashionable for the front seats to be occupied. We presume the desire of our friend would find a sympathetic response in the minds of the ministers of the churches. It certainly must be rather disconcerting to be faced by those empty seats. We do not know just how the problem is to be met but are passing along the suggestion with the hope that it may be acted upon.

Mr. McCallum Grant, of the insurance firm of Grant, Oxley & Co., Halifax, has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, succeeding the late Governor MacKeen. The new governor was born in Hants county, is a director of the bank of Nova Scotia and, like the late Governor MacKeen, is a Presbyterian. Wolfville people will be especially interested in the appointment as our new Lieutenant-Governor is a brother-in-law of our townsmen, W. F. Parker, Esq., Mrs. Grant being a daughter of the late Hon. Dr. Parker, M. L. C., of Dartmouth.

Personal Mention.

Miss Margaret Wright spent the week end with relatives in Windsor, Mrs. J. R. Webster, of Kentville, was the guest last week of her sister, Mrs. Randall Hilsley.

Miss Edith Stairs, of Halifax spent last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Stairs.

Miss Lillian Chase, of Church Street, spent the week end with Miss Paige Pines at the home of Mr. Ken Ben Reid.

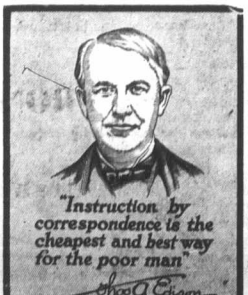

Mrs. Rae Bennett, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Roscoe, has returned to her home in Halls Harbor.

The Late Professor Coldwell.

A PERSONAL APPRECIATION. The town of Wolfville is appreciably poorer by the passing of Professor Albert E. Coldwell. An individual of singularly gentle and kindly personality, of even, well-balanced temperament, he was what might be called an eminently companionable man and his friendship was a privilege not to be lightly esteemed. His wide reading and remarkably retentive memory made him also a very interesting conversationalist. Of late years he has made a very deep study of that subject which is now engrossing the attention of so many thoughtful people, viz., Psychical Research in its relation to the survival of human personality, and he had formed some very definite opinions as to whether it was retained to the last. He will be greatly missed by a circle of warm friends in Wolfville who deeply enjoyed his society, of which the writer of this is proud to number himself as one. R. F. D.

Seeing England's Wonders.

Received by Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Gates from the latter's brother, Pte. Everett E. Fraser, of Greenwich, now training in Witley Camp, Surrey, England. Written while on six days pass, his brother being with him.

Dear Emily and George—This is afternoon, four o'clock. We were just out sight seeing but it commenced to rain so we had to beat it back to our boarding house. It rains in this country about every other hour, I guess.

We were up through the Buckingham stables this afternoon and, believe me, we saw some sights. I thought of you, George. The first thing we had to do was to obtain a pass to go through the place. They have a place on purpose to issue passes and a man in there all the time. We got our pass and gave it to a man dressed in a swell livery and he took us through the stables. We saw all the carriage horses, saddle horses, state horses, etc. The stables are all marble walls. The stalls are all large, open stalls with wooden partitions and fancy brass trimmings. Every stall is kept supplied with fresh, clean straw and behind the stalls there is a straw matting attached to an inch rope running all along the length of the stables. We saw all the horses except the state horses, which are cream colored and are only used for Coronations. They were out at a farm somewhere. There were eight or ten black stallions which are used for the King and Queen's own driving, and they are certainly splendid animals. Altogether we saw about one hundred horses.

Next we were shown the state harness room. The first was the Coronation harness. The leather was finished in a kind of a dark red color and all gold mounted. It has been in use for Coronations since 1741. Each side of it weighs 145 lbs. The weight is mostly the gold on it. The bridles are certainly handsome—I think they have got "Lord Delmaney's" skinned, George—as they are literally covered with gold mounting. There we saw all kinds of other harnesses and a solid silver saddle and—goodness knows what else.

Next we were shown the carriage house, or at least a small part of it. We saw Coronation carriages, waiting mists' carriages, the late Queen's sleigh, which she used in Scotland, and a whole lot more; but the most important was the state coach, it is beyond imagination. I have seen pictures of it in the movies and so on but could not imagine anything like it. It is one hundred and forty-five years old and it took three and a half years to build it. It is all carved oak covered with gold trim and has a footman's platform on the rear of it. When the King and Queen ride in it there are four footmen, for the Prince of Princes there are two, and so many for Coronations, etc.

Then we saw a large ship where the Princess and Princesses learn to ride. It is about the size of your new barn and the floor is covered with sand about six inches deep, so in case they should fall they would not be hurt.

For each different department we had a different man to show us around, so it cost us something for tips. Still we did not mind this as we certainly got our money's worth. I don't believe they are supposed to take tips but they all took them and bowed and scraped as if we were a part of the Royal Family itself. After leaving there we took a walk up around Buckingham Palace. It is some shack, believe me. All we were allowed to see there was what we could see from the sidewalk. We walked around part of it when it began to rain hard so we came back to our boarding house. We have not yet seen Westminster Abbey, the great London bridge and a lot more.

We were out Saturday to see Mad am somebody's beautiful place of Art where there are wax images of all the noted criminals and war lords, kings and queens of all countries. Then there is a chamber of horrors where there are criminals right in the act of committing their crimes. Then there is the punishment they received, heads cut off or strung up by the neck or stretched by windlasses with ropes attached to their feet and neck. Everything is just as natural as life and one has to watch out or he is liable to make a fool of himself and speak to some of them. It has been done.

Well, I guess that is enough for this time of what we have seen. We have seen all we expected to see and I guess a little more. The city is all in darkness at night except a few shaded street lights. There are always search lights going up the sky as far as the eye can reach. We have not had much drill in this country as yet, but expect to get lots of it when we get back from our passes. It is not much harder here than at home, except physical drill which we get more of and get it harder. We, the Brigade, belong to the 17th Canadian Division and it is expected to go to France in about five weeks, but of course not into the trenches that soon. (A later letter states that they don't expect to leave England so soon.)

Apples over here are not so plentiful as at home. We bought some from an old lady at Milford while waiting for the train to come to London. They were No. 2 Ribstones shipped by George Bishop, of Greenwich, N. S., so we saw the stenciling on the barrel. She was selling them three for a twopenny. Most things are as high here as at home. Of course they try to roset us Canadians but I guess

Canning Items.

The late George Jones Miller who died recently in Montreal at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. M. Slade, is well remembered here by the older residents, being a brother of the late Dr. James W. Miller, father of our Dr. John W. Miller. The body was brought to Canning for burial, the funeral taking place on Sunday last. He was a man well known in educational circles in Nova Scotia, his last work in that line being at Dartmouth where he was principal and supervisor of the schools, in which work he met with great success. He was 62 years of age. His only son, F. W. Miller, is Major of the 95th Battalion, N. S. Highlanders, now in England.

Canning Items.

The town of Canning paid a slight tribute of honor to Lieut. Harry W. Hiltz, of Kingsport, (the late brave hero of Conzelette, who was sincerely wounded at that time) on the day of his return, Nov. 28th. A royal welcome was given him. An address was read by Rev. A. C. Jordan, D.D., on behalf of the citizens and the band gave several excellent selections of music. Sir Frederic and Lady Baden were present in a gaily decorated auto which took the returned hero in charge and motored him to Kingsport, where a warm reception was given him.

Lieut. Hiltz but 19 years old. He received his present commission in the field of battle about two months before his 19th birthday and is the youngest commissioned officer in the British army with the exception of members of the Royal family, and the people of this county may well be proud of him. He with only a small bunch of men was the first to enter and take Conzelette—a brave and noble act. Lieut. Hiltz is a member of the famous fighting Nova Scot. 1. 25th Battalion and is one out of the six remaining officers of that battalion. All honor to our brave boys.

A Good Citizen Gone. The death of Prof. Albert E. Coldwell, which took place at his residence, Acadia street, on Thursday evening of last week, removes one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of our town. The deceased was born at Gasperen seventy-five years ago. He received his education at Acadia University, graduating in 1869, after which he entered the teaching profession. In 1885 he received the appointment to the Chair of Geology and Chemistry in his Alma Mater, which position he occupied until 1898. He efficiently filled the office of town clerk of Wolfville from 1894 to 1912. Since the death of Mrs. Coldwell in 1912, he has been travelling in California, Missouri and elsewhere in the United States, returning about six months ago to his home town, making his home with his daughter, Mrs. H. A. Stewart. Besides Mrs. Stewart, two other children survive, viz: Fred A. Coldwell, of the U. S. A. Civil Service, St. Louis, Mo., and Mrs. Oliver Ledford, also of St. Louis. Prof. Coldwell will be greatly missed in the town, where as professor in the university, and later as a town official, his genial presence and his efficient services made for him a host of friends. The funeral was held on Saturday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. H. A. Stewart, Rev. R. P. Dixon, Dr. Cullen, Dr. DeWolfe, Dr. Archibald and Dr. Spidle. The interment was at Willow Bank.

On Sunday evening at the Methodist church the clever young pastor concluded the very interesting series of addresses he has been giving on the hymns of the church. The subject of his address was that favorite hymn by Henry Francis Lyte, 'Abide With Me.' In a most entertaining and instructive manner Rev. Mr. Ambrose described the author of the hymn and reviewed the circumstances under which it was written and its message and teaching. An especially interesting feature of the service was the rendering of the hymn in a favorite setting by Miss Lella Sweet Bailey, teacher of vocal music at Acadia Seminary.

The program given last Tuesday evening, in commemoration of the Shakespeare Tercentenary, was strong, well-balanced and finely presented. Songs were given from 'Romeo and Juliet,' 'The Merry Wives of Windsor,' 'The Merchant of Venice.' In all these the parts were well taken and presented.

The second part of the program consisted in the presentation of a Fantasy, 'The Dream Maker.' It was capably done. Music, much appreciated, was furnished by Miss Hattie, violinist, and small orchestra under her direction.

It is to be regretted that the audience was no larger, though the multiplicity of events this week accounts for the absence of Wolfville citizens. Altogether $1125 have been realized for Red Cross purposes and paid to the Society.

Death of Mrs. Leander A. Huntington.

(Bridgetown Monitor.)
The many friends of Mrs. L. A. Huntington were shocked to learn of her sudden death in Vancouver last week. Nothing had been known of her illness until a few days before she passed away. A slight stroke of paralysis early in the month had been followed by one more severe a week later, the end coming on Friday, November 17th.

Jessie Chipman was born in Bridgetown some sixty-six years ago, and her early years were spent in this town. Of a bright and cheerful disposition and endowed with unusual ability and energy, she took a prominent part in the many enterprises and activities of the young people here in those days. Uniting with the Baptist church at an early age, she threw herself with characteristic enthusiasm into church work, as teacher in the Sunday school, leader in the Mission Band and Aid Society. Her fact in all departments of church work, she gave of her best. At the time of her marriage, by paying the required amount, twenty-five dollars, she made herself a Life Member of the Mission Aid Society here, remarking in her cheery way, "This Life Membership Certificate is my wedding present to myself before I leave you."

How rare are the brides who would spare this sum from a wedding trousseau to add to Mission funds!

In 1883 she married Mr. L. A. Huntington, and they made their home for a few years in Boston. But, alas! their happy married life was all too brief. Mr. Huntington's health failed and they moved to California hoping that a warmer climate might restore it. After a vain search for health, however, he was obliged to give up the struggle and the young wife was left alone with her three little children in far-off California. Picture that sad wife and mother as she gathers her little ones about her, and with all that remains of the husband she had loved so well, and starts on the long, lonely, homeward way, that she may lay the dear body to rest beside their own kindred and friends in the homeland.

A sad and homesome indeed, and one might think that her sorrow and family cares were such as to excuse her from all public work. But no. Having learned the beauty and happiness of service, she could not live a narrow life for herself alone. Almost immediately she took her old place in the church, teaching in Sunday school, busy with Mission work, trying to interest herself in every good work and work.

When a few years later she moved to Wolfville, her family might attend the educational institution there, she at once identified herself with the church work of that place in all matters beneficial to the community in which she lived, she always took an active part. Her last home was in Vancouver, and though of late years her health has been somewhat impaired she has been no less active in the Master's vineyard, and it can truly be said of her: "She hath done what she could." And now this earthly life is ended, those tiny hands are still. But who can estimate the power of such a life, the extent of its influence? She is one of those blessed ones who "Die in the Lord. They may rest from their labors, but their works do follow them."

Three children survive her, Alice, Mrs. W. Whitehead of Vancouver, William of New York, and Aline of Alberta. To these we extend sincere sympathy in the loss of their loved mother. But for her—

"The night is gone
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which she had loved and loved so well,
The remains were brought to Bridgetown on Nov. 25th, and laid to rest in Riverside Cemetery beside her late husband.

Letter from Reg. Black.

Extract from a letter received by Rev. R. F. Dixon, from Reginald Black:

Shoreham-By-The-Sea, Sussex, England.

"Received your letter recently and was indeed very pleased to hear from you.

"Shoreham is only seven miles distant from Brighton which, as you no doubt know, is one of the largest and most popular seaside resorts in England.

"The Highlanders are now at Whiteley Camp, which is about seven miles from Bramshott, and I hope to get away some day and run up and see the boys. I expect Lloyd Black down here on Sunday as his brother is at present at this camp where he is getting into shape to return to France.

"All the troops crossing the ocean are closely guarded and any chance of any disaster taking place is very remote, especially as they change the course entirely each trip.

"Was very sorry to hear about Paul Davidson but rest assured that he will have the very best attendance possible, as once a wounded man gets into a hospital he has proper care and in ninety-nine times out of a hundred his condition improves.

"England is certainly a great deal different from what I imagined, and everything has such a solid appearance and seems built to last. A week before I came down here I took a car and motor from Shoreham direct across England to Bath and return, and greatly enjoyed the trip of four hundred miles.

"As no doubt you know, I am driving a motor ambulance and while at Shoreham I think I motored to every nook and corner in Kent county and found it covered with lovely looking farms. The scenery is very striking. Old Dover is another place that surprises one greatly with its ancient buildings and narrow streets. The new embarkation pier is a fine structure and that is where it was brought home to me and I realized the seriousness and awfulness of this horrible war to the fullest extent. There are always two hospital trains there which hold four hundred patients each, and just outside the imposing white painted hospital ships just in from France with their loads of precious souls. The work of unloading the ships and loading the trains is carrying on continuously, twenty-four hours in each day and seven days in each week. It takes but a few hours to load a train, and when it pulls out another just seems to slide into its place to be filled and everything is very quiet—just the tramp of the stretcher-bearers and an occasional groan of pain from some poor wounded soldier; but on the whole the spirit of the boys is excellent. I used to go there for stretcher-bearers every day for several weeks and it certainly impressed me as to the seriousness of this war and also how little we understand or realize it in Canada and now I little wonder that conscientious objection is necessary in England, as the rights that meet one's eyes every day is surely enough to make any person who is human flinch before they go forth to practically assured wounds, if not death and the worst is that the end is not in sight yet and the general opinion is that it will last at least another year.

"King George was over here today and inspected some of the Imperial troops and he certainly was looking well. It seemed odd at first to see the aeroplanes but now they are a common sight. The winter rains have started here now and we don't seem to have any sunshine at all."

W. M. BLACK,
Clerk and Treasurer,
Wolfville, Nov. 27th, 1916.

Letter From 219th Coy.

No. 2 Stationary Hospital, Boulogne, France.

Dear Mr. Archibald—It is with great pleasure I tell you of the arrival of your August shipment of boxes of preserved fruit. Never was gift more welcome! Yesterday we opened and used one box. Today we have very many casualties from the 4th Canadian Division; so your gift will just come in for them. Is it not a great piece of luck to have it ready for them?

"As most of these patients are very ill they may not be able to express their appreciation by writing, but their appreciation and gratitude are there just the same, perhaps more, than if they had strength to write a letter telling you about it.

"We have lately had two new hats added to our equipment, each holding 84 patients. Today, as often, we have more patients than beds, but no one seems to mind. I say to a man 'I'm sorry we can't do this or that for you, or haven't this or that to give you.' With a broad smile he answers, 'Oh, this is champagne, after, luxury after lying in a stony hole!'

"This is the chery way they look at everything. There's something about it all that is making wonderful men of them—no room for pettiness.

"Did I tell you of the Recreation Hut given us by the Canadian Red Cross, which we have had to use as a bed ward? It has surely been a God-send to us.

"I shall not try to thank you and your friends for all you have done for us—I do not think you need thank us—you understand too well!

Sincerely yours,
ANNIE C. STRONG,

Sentences From a Sermon.

"Tears shed on earth are a capital laid up, for which we receive a compound interest in heaven."

"We are only the poor tenants of an earthy hearthstone, but are heirs of the great heavens."

"Of the loved and lost: 'God keeps them for us and us for them, and both for Himself.'"

"What a price we pay for our little piece of life on this planet, yet the price is the value."

"How much easier life would have been on this earth if men could have got on without religion, and yet it is creative force in our history."

From Ralph Connor's "Glenrally Days": "The worst of that woman is that she persists in trusting you and putting you on your honor."

"My text is a prophecy. Tears do not die. The strain will pass. You who have borne grief and felt the strain to breaking point, keep your heads up. There remaineth a rest for the people of God. . . . An old commentator says 'When God comes to wipe away our tears, we shall thank Him very heartily that He honored us with the privilege of shedding them.'"

The Cost of Ill-Nature.

"Our neighbors furnish us with the main stuff of our conversation, and, if we think a moment, we realize that we do the same kindness for them. That is perfectly natural and justifiable, since it is only by observing and analyzing the life that goes on about us that we arrive at what knowledge we have of human character and motive, which, even so with the most of us, is very little."

Unfortunately, speaking of others too often means speaking unkindly. Being human weaknesses, and in discussing their actions those weaknesses are bound to be discussed. More over, there is a certain sense of superiority in fault-finding, as if our seeing the fault implied that we were without it—an inference as natural as it is quite unfounded. And the follies and mistakes of others frequently furnish us abundant matter for wit and pleantry. Sometimes good-natured, sometimes ill-natured, but rarely of a character to be agreeable to the object of it. Jeering at our friends' and neighbors' expense is so easily devised and so quickly appreciated that it is one of the most popular of all pastimes.

There are some who do abstain from such jeering, who speak seldom of others at all, and when they do, speak kindly; who let their words and speedily repeated words pass into oblivion and emphasize only those acts that we all would gladly have done ourselves. Such people are not necessarily dull or unobtrusive either. Indeed, if the cynical would have an opportunity, there is little good in human nature, it surely takes a finer and more active intelligence than carefully

GIRL AND A BEAR

Brave "Little Sister" Gets Reward for Capturing "A Great Ferocious Monster."

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.
"I should die of fright," declared Netta Forbes. "I am sure I should."

Why, just think of it, Beauty—way off on the very edge of civilization, wild animals, savages and mountaineers outlaws! No, that you will be there, explained Beatrice Merrill, the bride of a week, and she spoke in a simple confident way that indicated her brave bright husband to be a power of valor and strength in her estimation.

"Well, that is a good deal, I will confess," admitted Netta. "But David can't be with you all of the time, can he? If he's going to be the great cat-killer he thinks he is, he must have a lot of work to do. I'm sure you will faint at the first sight of a fierce cowboy, and as to those Indians—think of seeing them creeping—creeping—creeping through the grass, with their hideous tomahawks and scalping knives—ugh!"

Beatrice only smiled sweetly, optimistically. It was true she had been brought up tenderly, the only child of loving parents, shielded from every rude alarm, her girlhood experience a path of ever-blossoming roses.

But it was true also that the rugged earnest figure of David Merrill had come into her life as a hero. His love for the wild west had not dimmed as he came into her life as a hero. His love for the wild west had not dimmed as he came into her life as a hero.

And when the eventual departure came, every stage of the journey accomplished seemed to carry Beatrice into a new realm of delight. Even that last stage drive over the lonely frontier mining town, was full of novelty and excitement. Beatrice clasped her hands ingeniously as some delighted child at the queer antics of the playful prairie dogs. She went wild over the splendid full colored flowers. Then when a cavalo came to accompany them to the rancho, their honest loyal admiration charmed the pretty bride and she felt that she was going among true friends.

"The Indians are poor harmless creatures who come to the door begging only once in a while, and make no account of the goods they give them. There is the clear, clear sky—oh, so infinitely blue all of the time! And such sunset! And the boys—such rough, honest fellows who come around bashful and proud of their 'little sister,' as they call me, and who would die for me, if I asked them. And David—oh, so grand and splendid and would scare you! And me, poor little me—gained ten pounds already, brown as a berry, and oh, so happy in my lovely peaceful spot, so sweet and so clean in the clear morning sunlight, that I reverently call it God's land!"

"As to the mountain outlaws—booh! Once there was a few of them, but they have been driven off the trail. There's a band, they say, with a leader named Buckskin Joe. They say he is a bad, desperate fellow. There's a thousand dollars reward for his capture, so it isn't likely he'll ever dare to venture near a rancho where half a dozen brave, powerful herders would be glad to make a target of him. Bugabo, all the horrid things you predicted! Come out and see me, and see what real men look like!"

In fact Beatrice had become so in love with her new life, that one day when she found the vicinity of the house deserted she was not one bit worried. David the day before had made a famous sale and had gone off to a distance to negotiate for a new herd. Most of the men had accompanied him. The others had been given a holiday and had gone to Last Lint, where a circus had come along.

Beatrice was about her pleasant home tasks happy as a sprite, singing merrily, planning with delight a famous strawberry pie of gigantic proportions for her formidable bride when they should return, ravenous and delighted, at supper time. She had gathered a great apron full of the rich, luscious fruit in the ravine about a quarter of a mile from the house, when she heard shots and shouts in the distance. There died a gasp, and she started for the house leisurely, attributing the commotion to some burrah exploits of the cowboys on a neighboring ranch.

She suddenly uttered a great sharp cry. There burst from a copse a great shagged bear. Its mouth was foaming, the blood was trickling from its face, and it was lunging along at a fearful rate in the direction of the house.

"I won't faint!" determined Beatrice. "Although I hardly know what to do. Oh, dear!"

She fluttered like a frightened butterfly. Seeking refuge or stabiles, the bear tore through the little house garden, aimed for the open cellar doors, dashed down the steps, and then—Beatrice ran fast as she could, reached the house, slammed down the collar doors and set the heavy chain bars across the heavy planks. Then she ran into the house, locked and bolted the door leading into the cellar and—sat down to cry.

It was only as a relief for her overwrought excitement that the tears came, for Beatrice felt fairly triumphant. She had controlled her fright, she had caged the enemy. What an exploit to write to Netta about! What a grand thing to narrate to her husband! How the gallant hero would praise and make a veritable heroine of her! Beatrice was every proud of her first exploit in capturing "a wild savage denizen of the primal forest."

Beatrice valiantly took down the house rifle from the anlure over the dining room clock and placed it on the table. Next she shot the axe from the yard. Next she added the poker to this warlike equipment.

She listened for some demonstrations from below. The "frenzied growl," the "frightful roar," she had read about as pertaining to bears, did not amuse her as it had once done. She wondered if the infuriated animal had gone to sleep. She hoped he had not discovered the old cupboard in which she kept the butter.

About an hour later Beatrice heard the tramp of hooves and the sound of human voices along the trail. Six mounted men came into view. They were looking for a bear, and Beatrice stood by the door where Beatrice stood.

"We are looking for a bear," they began.

"Oh, yes!" announced Beatrice eagerly. "Not at all—a harmless toothless old animal escaped from the circus in Last Lint, but valuable as a trick bear, and $100 offered for its capture."

"Why, what is this?" inquired David Merrill, as he and his heavy crowd sat down to the smoking supper that evening, and found a little heap of bank notes under his plate.

Then Beatrice told her story, with dancing eyes. And David swung her up in the air and kissed her at its termination, while the enthusiastic cowboys gasped "Huza!" with an admiring echo for their brave "little sister."

BROUGHT WEALTH TO PERU

Guano Beds, Consisting of Most Wonderful of Known Fertilizers, Sold for Immense Sums.

It is said that Humboldt added the greatest wealth to the reports of his discoveries when he called the enormous deposits of guano in the mountains of Peru.

Near midway of the equator and the tropic of capricorn on the Peruvian coast are the Chincha Islands, whose guano deposits have been worth more money than the copper, gold and silver of the world's best mines. For this great fertilizer 11,000,000,000 had been paid up to the time that seagulls were protected by Peru itself.

The islands are small, high and rocky, barren and uninviting to the last degree; yet it is said there is no other spot of equal size on the earth's surface from which so much wealth has been taken.

In some cases the deposits reached a depth of 160 to 180 feet and are calculated to be thousands of years old.

Nowhere else in the world are marine birds found in so great quantities as along this coast. Their presence in immense numbers is due to the quantities of fish found there, upon which the birds feed. Cormorants, pelicans, sea gulls and mastic crows, in clouds numbering hundreds of thousands, may be seen flying low to or from the islands.

But the birds alone could not have produced the Peruvian guano. It was necessary to have the rainless climate of these islands in order to accomplish the result.

"Rain so seldom falls that aged men can count on the fingers of one hand," says one commentator, "the times in their lives when they have seen this marvelous thing—water falling from the skies."

It is on this account that Peruvian guano in its natural state, never having been exposed to rain or dampness, has retained its nitrogen and is of such great value. Some guano contains all three elements of plant life—nitrogen, phosphates and potash—and all of it contains two elements—phosphates and fixed nitrogen—worth as high as $100 a ton.

The Wooden Soldiers.

The drill sergeant had been vainly trying during the whole morning to lick into shape a batch of recruits.

At last he gave it up in despair and, calling them to attention, he unburdened himself as follows:—

"Now look here my lads. When I was a little boy my mother gave me a present of a box of wooden soldiers. They were the delight of my life. All day long I played with them.

"Then, somehow, they got lost, and I was heartbroken. Life, I felt, had no further interest for me. My mother did her best to comfort me, and finally said: Never mind, Harry, one of these days the wooden soldiers will come back to you."

"That, my lad, was years and years ago. But at last—here the sergeant paused to allow his words to sink home—and, worse luck—another impressive pause—her words have come true!"

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA Household Hints.

Lemon juice makes a good substitute for those polishes if few drops are well rubbed into the leather.

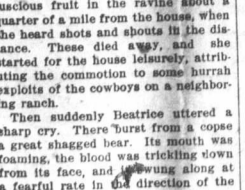

Castor oil is not very careful. If copper pans are a danger that they may poison the food cooked in them. When making mint sauce, add a little brown granulated sugar to the mint and the chopping will be much easier, and accomplished more quickly, too.

The Shirkers

A young teacher whose efforts to inculcate elementary anatomy had been unusually discouraging, at last asked in despair: "Well, I wonder if any boy here can tell me what the spinal cord really is?"

She was met by a row of blank and irresponsible faces, till finally one voice piped up in great excitement: "The spinal cord is what runs through you. Your head sits on one end and you sit on the other."
