The Finest Novel

RALPH CONNOR HAS EVER WRITTEN.

"The finest thing Ralph Connor has done, and when we remember his past achievements that is no mean praise. His style throughout is strong and forceful, he has an intimate knowledge of what he is writing about, and his inspired descriptions of the heroisms of the North-West Mounted Police make one glow with the same feeling of pride as do the accounts of our heroes in the battles that are raging now. Ralph Connor shows us what magnificent men and what brave, noble women, the sons and daughters of the Empire, are. It is a joy to meet some of our old friends again, and in the dangers and anxieties they undergo they more than ever show of what pure gold they are made." CHAPTER XIII.

"Now creep down," said the captain, "and bring me a coil of rope from the large stable. I saw it there yesterday, hung above the corn bin. Here's a key. It fits it, for I tried it. There's a lantern, too, I shall want—a dark one. You'll find one in one of the stables, for I saw the groom trimming it."

Jem, whose spirits seemed to rise at the prospect of congenial employment, was about to start, but paused, and with a little hesitation said:

"But suppose I'm nabbed, captain? Rather awkward to be cooped in muffled boots shuffling round the stables."

The captain thought for a moment, then drew off a ring and handed it to him.

"If any one turns up go down on your hands and knees and say you are looking for my ring which I lost to-day. While they are looking on or helping, pick it up. That will avert all suspicion."

"For my soul, it's wonderful; that's what it is!" said Jem, with ecstatic admiration of the captain's cleverness, and he departed.

After the lapse of half an hour the captain's quick ears caught the dull, muffled sound of the stockinged feet, and he sprang up as Jem entered with the coil of rope and the lantern.

"You alarmed no one?" said the captain.

"Not a soul," said Jem, with great triumph.

"Then you may keep the ring," said the captain, and he stopped Jem's thanks by adding:

"Now for the gymnastics. Next to this room," and he touched the wall with his white forefinger, "there is an empty room which has been closed, screwed up, for years. I want to find a way of getting into that room on the quiet. I want to creep in there one night and out of it like a ghost."

"Why, what in the name of Jupiter is the matter with you?" he broke out to exclaim, for Jem's face had got as white as the supernatural phenomenon he, the captain, wished to imitate, and his eyes were fixed with horror and disquietude. "What's the matter with you, you idiot?"

"Captain, I'd climb the cliff, or walk a hundred miles, or—anything you'd ask me, but I can't go near that room! I've seen—there, never mind, what I have seen! I won't go near it, and that's flat!"

The captain rose and walked to his bureau, from the drawer of which he took a neat little revolver.

Then, as if Jem had offered no objection he continued, in a smooth voice:

"I want you, Jem, to drop from this window onto the ivy beneath and to climb up to the window of the empty room. I will hold the one end of the rope, the other you shall tie round your waist. When you get to the window—which has no shutters—you will throw the light from the lantern all round the room and ascertain in what direction the door lies, what furniture the room contains, and its condition. In fact you shall give me a complete description of it. Do you go?"

"No," said Jem, with an oath. "I know what I've seen, and don't go interfering where a human being shouldn't. I don't go, captain."

The captain took out his watch and chain and dropped them on the floor.

"Very good," he said, raising the

Vigorol

If you want to feel well, bright and cheery, full of ambition; be able to move about quick and smartly—VIGOROL, the Great French Tonic, will brace you up—it cleanses the whole system. If the manufacturers could only impress this upon every one who does not feel as they ought to, the world would owe them a great gratitude; but all we can do is to ask you to try one bottle and see for yourself. The change will be wonderful. You need a spring medicine—then take VIGOROL. Sold at all drug stores.

revolver with calm but suppressed passion, "this is the only thing I have asked you to do in return for all I have done for you. You cur, I saved you from the chain-gang. I have fed you, clothed you, made a man of you, and like an overfed dog you turn, do you? Move a step"—for Jem, stung by the truth in the taunt, had with a scowl advanced a step—"move an inch and I'll shoot you without further parley! I'll shoot you as it is," he continued, taking accurate aim.

"If you dare to disobey me, I'll shoot you and summon the house to hear me tell you attacked me for my watch. The watch lies there, where it fell during our struggle; my ring, which you stole from my finger while I slept, is in your pocket; and you have burglarious instruments in your hands. You see, Jem, you die, shot through the head, and everybody believes I shot you in self-defence."

Jem gradually grew white with mingled awe and fear.

He flung his hand down upon the table with an oath.

"I'll do it," he swore. "You're worse than the ghost, captain; you're worse than the very fiend himself. Sometimes I do believe you are him. I'll do it; I can't stand agin you, it's no use; ghost or no ghost I must cave in. Ring, watch, these 'ere stockings on—s'welp me, you planned it all!"

The captain smiled, but instead of retort uncoiled the rope, and by a gesture bade his tool fasten it round his waist. Then he oiled the window sashes so that the window might go up easily, lit the lantern, and after a long, breathless pause of listening motioned to Jem to let himself down.

With intense interest, which was perfectly hidden under a calm, almost indifferent bearing, the captain watched his accomplice, as Jem, with monkeyish agility, dropped onto the thick boles of the ivy, and clung to the stems as they in turn clung to the old walls.

Then he saw him rise hand over hand toward the window.

He gained the broad window ledge and, summoning all his doglike courage, dashed the cold perspiration from his brow and turned the light of the lantern full into the empty haunted room.

There was, however, nothing supernatural or ghostly to be seen.

It was an ordinary sized room, smaller than most of the modern rooms in the Park, and furnished in the style of a study or library.

There was a large old-fashioned bureau, an iron safe, half a dozen heavy, leather-backed, oak chairs and some shelves loaded with books.

A waste paper basket stood under the table, and on the blotting paper upon the desk were some papers, as if they had been left by some one who intended returning within half an hour.

Upon all, table, desk, chairs, bureau, safe, lay the dust scattered by the hand of time, half an inch thick.

Jem took in all the details and then turned to descend.

In another moment the captain held out his hand and helped him into the room.

In another moment the captain held out his hand and helped him into the room.

Jem, at first sullenly, but presently with some interest, described the room.

"The captain asked question after question, all the while drawing on a piece of paper. At last when he had got all the information which Jem could possibly give he held out the piece of paper.

"Is that like it?" he said, with a smile.

Jem stared.

"It's the very room!" he exclaimed, wonder struck. "The furniture ain't quite like, but every bit on it shows in the proper place, and, s'welp me, captain, you must be Old Nick!"

"Perhaps," said the captain, with a smile. "And now you may go to bed."

Jem, without further parley, slipped off the rope and the stockings, and, still in a maze of fear, cunning, and admiration, departed.

The captain lit another cigar, and sat smiling at his paper until the dawn crept up from the east.

"When rogues lie awake," says an old proverb; "let honest men beware!"

CHAPTER XIV.

"Yes," said Leicester, staring at himself in his shaving-glass the morning after the dinner at Coombe Lodge. "That is the question. Do I love her? If not, why when I am awake do I think over every little trivial word she has spoken, recall every expression of her face that accompanied it; and also when I am asleep do I dream of her, see her face, with its deep, pure eyes, all through the night? If I asked Bertie he would say that I do love her, and yet to myself I distrust myself. I cannot bring myself to acknowledge that I, the selfish, egotistical Leicester, truly and madly love a girl, sweet faced, violet-eyed angel though she be. Madly, I said; and madly it must be. It is not in me to do or feel anything by halves. I must be hot and eager in action, thought and emotion, notwithstanding my seeming frigidity. Now," and his handsome face frowned, candidly, "I hate Captain Howard Murpoint. It's wicked, I know it is, but I hate him in spite of my principles."

Just then came a knock at the door.

"Come in," said Leicester, thinking it was his valet; "you are a nice, active body servant, William. I'm half dressed, and—Hello! it's you, is it?" he broke off as Bertie entered the room.

"Yes; you've cut your face, old fellow."

"Thank you for nothing; my glass told me that," said Leicester. "I never could shave myself, and William hasn't condescended to get up. I couldn't lie in bed such a morning as this, and you couldn't either, evidently."

"No," said Bertie, eagerly. "I say, Les, what a day this would be for the yachting trip."

Leicester smiled.

"Wind's in the right quarter for a good blow," he said.

"I wonder now," said Bertie, hesitatingly, "if Mrs. Mildmay would like a—"

"You mean Lady Ethel," interrupted Leicester, with a smile.

Bertie's frank face flushed.

"Well, both of them," he said. "Suppose you ride over to the lodge and bring Fitz and her over here while I go down to the Park and ask Mrs. Mildmay and the captain, and of course, Violet."

"Suppose you ride over yourself," retorted Leicester.

Bertie shook his head with sad significance.

"That wouldn't do," he said. "Do you think Lady Lackland would trust Ethel—I mean Lady Boisdale to me, even though Fitz was with her? No! You go over and she won't say no; but if I go the sun will be too hot, or the trip too much, or something."

"Yes, have your own way, obstinate," said Leicester, and so after breakfast he mounted his hunter and rode over to Coombe Lodge.

When Bertie got over to the Park he found that the captain had gone out on urgent business.

Mrs. Mildmay, when asked if she would take the trip, looked over to Violet, who gave a quiet affirmative, and Bertie, trusting Leicester had been similarly lucky in his embassy, bore the ladies off to the beach.

Bertie hailed the captain's boat, and before it had rowed from the yacht to the shore Lord Fitz's dogcart came rattling down the rural parade.

"Oh, I am so glad!" said Violet, as Ethel sprang lightly down. "I was afraid you would not come."

When the gentlemen had skillfully assisted the ladies on deck a chorus of delighted admiration rewarded them.

"How beautiful," said Violet. "Why, I thought a ship was always dirty and in disorder. But this is as clean and neat as a lady's workbox."

"Neater, I hope, or I shall have to discharge my sailing master," said Leicester, smiling.

Violet and Ethel went from one end of the little vessel to the other, delighted with the novelty.

"Heave ho! Heave ho!" and up came the oarbox.

Then at a word from Leicester her white, graceful sails fluttered out to the winds, and the birdlike Petrel, with a graceful toss, as if in laughing delight at her freedom, went off before the summer breeze.

Fitz understood yachting as he did hunting, shooting, and all manly sports, and while Leicester gave the orders and sailed the vessel Fitz explained the different technical terms, taking a great deal of trouble to make the matter clear to Violet.

She was grateful to him, and interested, and as she was not in love with Mr. Leicester Dodson yet, her face was as bright to Fitz as to him, and when the owner of the yacht came with the rugs he found her quite occupied laughing with Fitz.

Bertie had secured Ethel, and at some little distance apart was talking as only he knew how to talk.

Leicester therefore had Mrs. Mildmay left to him, and, like a gallant gentleman, smused her.

He was not of a jealous disposition, and he was satisfied if Violet was happy; but after a little while he came up to Fitz's side.

"Miss Mildmay would you like to see how the yacht is steered. Show her the wheel, Fitz."

"You do the honors," said Fitz, good-naturedly. "You understand them best."

Mr. Leicester took her to the wheel and explained it.

"How I should like to steer!" she said. "I am ambitious, and ought to be encouraged."

"Yes," said Leicester, "it is a laudable ambition. Take hold of the wheel and I will show you."

The instruction being done more by the hand than the voice it followed that Leicester's strong, firm fingers came in contact with Violet's white, soft ones very frequently.

There arose suddenly upon the flash of the sea, the flap of the sails, and the murmur of the conversation the musical notes of the ship's bell.

"Luncheon," said Leicester.

So they all "tumbled down," said Bertie, into the saloon, on entering which the ladies were again transfixed with astonishment.

The Work of the W.P.A. And Its Connection With the National Red Cross Organization.

There seems to be quite a wrong impression current that the Patriotic Association of the Women of Newfoundland have been working either solely for the sick and wounded, or for the soldiers, and in a few isolated cases regret has been expressed that we are not more working altogether for our own five hundred men who have gone to England.

All our work sent forward, has been placed entirely at the disposal of the "National Red Cross Organization of Great Britain" with headquarters in London, who act directly under the orders of the War Office, and send shipments to any point and in any quantities they are able, where they are instructed the greatest need is at the moment.

An Executive Committee, has been formed of representatives from the St. John Ambulance Association, the British Red Cross Society, St. Andrew's Ambulance Association, and Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, and this Committee holds weekly conferences at Buckingham Palace. There is a "Special Committee of Ladies," formed by the Ambulance Department with Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen as President, the Duchess of Bedford as Chairman and Lady Perrot as Honorary Secretary.

From this "Special Committee" the officers of the Patriotic Association of Newfoundland have received the following letter, regarding their first shipment of 18 cases which were shipped from here on November 4th: "I write on behalf of the Committee to thank the Women of the Patriotic Association of Newfoundland for their perfectly splendid consignment of clothing and comforts received. It came just in time to enable me to have the pleasure of announcing this most generous gift to the Queen's Committee of Ladies, and I am desired to express their thanks to the ladies of Newfoundland for their generosity, which will add very largely to the grand total. Their gift has come just at the moment when we were badly needing garments to send off to the wounded at the Front. I cannot tell you how grateful we are for this most generous gift, and I hope you will convey to the ladies of your Association, and to Lady Davidson our most grateful thanks.

"I might say that only a few days ago, a most urgent telegram came from the British Consul at Dunkirk, asking that warm clothing should be immediately dispatched. These were got off in two hours, and two days later a telegram was received saying: 'Most grateful thanks for the generous gift of warm clothing received, which was the means of saving valuable lives.' Such telegrams as this encourage us to go on giving and doing our utmost, and indeed Newfoundland has come forward at the very moment to enable us to keep up our stock and supply the tremendous need. The first consignment will be sent to the troops in the fighting line near Boulogne, as the needs of the Army are more urgent than those of the Navy, since at present there have been no Naval battles, and thus no wounded. When there are, these will be quickly supplied.

Believe me, most truly, (Signed)—ETHEL PERROT."

That this shipment promptly reached the men in the trenches we know, for previous to the receipt of this letter, a post card had been received by a lady in this city from a wounded French Infantry soldier at Dieppe, in one of the British base hospitals.

The thanks of the Patriotic Association of the Women of Newfoundland are given the St. John's Ambulance Association for their kindness in acting as our shipping agents and making such a prompt distribution possible, goods leaving here on the 4th November being actually in use by soldiers at the front on the 4th December (the date of post card received) and also for their courtesy in obtaining so much of the materials needed for our work such as army flannel, grey and khaki, red flannel for bed jackets, etc., etc., at specially low prices, and that at a time when it was almost impossible to procure these materials at all.

Nor have our own men been neglected. On Nov. 24th the Women's Association were informed by a letter from Mr. Bowring to Mr. Munn that the Nfd. Contingent needed woollen comforts, and the following cable was sent the London Warehouse: "Newfoundland Contingent, Pond Farm Camp, Salisbury, needs immediately 550 pairs socks; please rush forward from Nfd. stock. Cable when forwarded." On Nov. 27th the reply came, "550 pairs socks, 100 woollen shirts, 200 body belts sent Wednesday." Finding our men were so badly equipped, and were suffering from camping conditions, the ladies started a "Special Carigan Jacket Fund," which was at once subscribed for, and these went forward as soon as it was possible to manufacture them. With this shipment of Carigans also went all the mufflers, mittens knitted according to army regulations, and woollen helmets that had then been received at Government House, and the cases filled with socks for good measure.

On Dec. 22nd when the second shipment of 30 cases was sent, a letter of instruction was mailed, requesting that 550 socks, shirts and belts be kept on hand, so that in the event of a sudden appeal from our own regiment, such as had been expeditiously answered in November, there might be the wherewithal to respond, near at hand.

For the information of those who are especially interested in the War—so many in Newfoundland—there would say that every sailor on joining is given regulation warm clothing, which includes a Jersey. The naval men are fortunate in carrying their house with them, that they eat, sleep and work at regular hours and under comparatively sheltered conditions; that they have facilities for washing and mending their clothes, all of which it is impossible to have under camp conditions such as our soldiers had at Salisbury Plains, and all soldiers have on the march and in the trenches. We are informed that conditions in the trenches are of necessity so unsatisfactory that much of the clothing has to be burned and this increases the need for a constant fresh supply.

Missing Men Sale.

Two men named Whelan and McGrath, of the West End, who went to the Southside Hill yesterday afternoon to cut a load of firewood, who did not return at the usual hour were reported missing last night. The police were asked to make a search and Constables Whelan and Parn were detailed for the work. After a search of about two hours the officers met the men returning. The unusual delay was caused on the way home. They were crossing a pond with their slide load of wood when they and the slide went through the ice. The men succeeded in reaching the solid ice but had much difficulty in getting out their loaded catamaran.

Evening Telegram W. J. HERDER, Proprietor W. F. LLOYD, Editor WEDNESDAY, January 20, 1915.

Britain Will Seize the Dacia.

Yesterday we made some comments on the case of the Dacia, and set forth the accepted rule of international law in regard to the transfer of a vessel from a belligerent flag to a neutral one. Mercantile vessels flying the flag of a belligerent are liable to be seized by an enemy, but the owner does not lose his title of property in the vessel until it is condemned by a Prize Court. The sale of such a vessel by a subject of a belligerent to a neutral is a violation of international law, and the neutral government does not believe in the genuineness of the sale of the Dacia by the Hamburg-American line. They hold that its transfer to the American flag is a trick to avoid its seizure at sea. Holding these views, after negotiations with the American Government, they have notified that Government that they intend to seize the Dacia. This means that they will seize the vessel at sea, and ask the Prize Court to condemn it as a German vessel. The question of bond fides will be tried. If the sale is proved genuine and the transfer to the American flag proper, the Dacia will be released. If not, she will be condemned. It is believed the transfer was a put-up job, engineered by Germans and German-Americans to embarrass America with England. This object is not likely to be attained, the good sense of America will recognize that a regular trial is the best way of settling the matter.

Serious Accident Averted.

What might have resulted in a serious accident was averted yesterday afternoon. Three lads were "copying" on the ice near Baine Johnson & Co's. wharf. The ice loosened and one of the lads named Abbott was carried off by the tide and the pan he was on began to drift down the harbor. The police, who were notified by Mr. F. Kennedy, of Fearn's premises, put out in a boat, as did J. Malone, who rescued the boy who was badly frightened. Parents should warn their children against indulging in the dangerous practice. Last year a boy lost his life in a similar way in one of our city coves.

Always taking a deep interest in economic question, Ruskin delivered and published numerous lectures on a wide range of subjects, art, pleasure, religion, war work and so forth and he was acknowledged to be one of the greatest thinkers of the time. Often his views were impracticable and even eccentric, but behind them there was always evident a sincere desire to promote the well being of the people.

"Rob Roy"

Scotch Pantomime. There is a matinee to-day at three o'clock. The pictures will run first so that all children can see one of the most wonderful shows ever presented to any audience; the great Rob Roy in Hood and his merry men, Red Riding Hood, the Little Forest Elves and Nymphs; there are all new songs, dances, costumes and every thing changed round until it looks like another big production.

On Monday the Scotch Pantomime, "Rob Roy," with Joe Burkhart, Jack Rossley and Mack, the gentleman who made such a great hit as Santa Claus; and everybody in new tartan kilts. The most gorgeous show ever seen and the Rossleys are the only ones here that can give us the real thing.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END.

The pictures shown in the West End are of such a high class character that people who have never before been to a picture theatre having heard of the splendid selection seen at Rossleys West End Theatre have gone. A very prominent West End gentleman and his wife went out of curiosity to see "Ours" in the West End and for the first time in his life saw the pictures. He was charmed and delighted and took the trouble to come down and tell Mr. Rossley so. Then, again, people who have travelled and seen the best of pictures are also delighted and declare they have never seen any finer anywhere, either at home or abroad.

LATEST From the Front. NOON. RUSSIANS ADVANCING. LONDON, To-day. Some Petrograd newspaper correspondents credit the Russians with crossing the Vistula River to the south and a boundless season will raise to their own frontier, in fear that a winter spent on their present lines of communications, which are declared to be bad, would result in heavy loss of men. Russian troops which crossed the Carpathians are reported to have effected a junction, and when the plans for an advance into Transylvania are complete an attempt will be made it is said to invade Hungary from the North and East. Reports from the Caucasus say the Russians still are busy pursuing the remnants of the Turkish army corps which they have defeated.

ONLY TWO FATALITIES.

YARMOUTH, To-day. Careful inquiries, thus far made regarding last night's aerial raid, so to show that public buildings and railways escaped damage, which is almost wholly confined to private houses and shops. So far as is now known only two persons, a man and a woman were killed here. It so happened that most of the inhabitants were indoors when the raid occurred. Fragments of metal supposed to have been thrown by bombs are being sought in all directions. Another aircraft appeared here soon after midnight but dropped no bombs. Chief Constable of Yarmouth told said:—"The home and the town was without lights till morning. The air raider passed along the sea front and dropped the first bomb into Norfolk Square. Garden close by the beach and the Britannia Pier. This did no damage. The raider then proceeded in a Southwesterly direction across the town, and near the centre dropped several bombs in the neighborhood of St. Peter's Road, the main thoroughfare leading to the Parade Ground. It was there that the greatest damage was done, especially in smashing of windows in houses and shops.

ROUNDED UP BY POLICE AND GETS 90 DAYS IN PRISON. IN THE TRENCHES. They're huddled in their narrow pits, 'mid sleet and ice and snow; and now and then a bullet hits and lays a soldier low. Numb'd by the north wind's icy breath, and bent on by the blast, they dodge such messengers o'f death as may be whizzing past. And thus a million use full guys are uselessly employ'd; such works as theirs is most unwise, of common sense devoid. What boots it if the soldiers shoot until they're tired of gore, and put a crimp in some gaol they never saw before? Ah, better far on frosty morn, to hitch a span of mules, and in the field go shucking corn with modern husking tools. I'd rather have a husking peg than have a sword or lance, and rob a stranger of his leg, or wound him in the pants. I'd rather bring home from the field a load of golden ears, than pack around a silly shield, and prod folks up with spears. I'd rather take a monkey wrench and fix a sulky plow, than be a hero in a trench, a helmet on my brow. I do not fear to soldiers brave who suffer in the field, who follow where their banners wave, and warlike weapons wield; I have no cheap insulting flings, the blood stained soldiers for; I merely josh the tin horn kings who sent them forth to war.

GERMANS ARE UTTERLY TIRED OF WAR—MOSTLY FEAR ITALY WILL AID.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs: "Interesting particulars about the conditions of the Germans in Flanders is supplied by a trustworthy eye-witness, who a week ago was allowed to leave Belgium. He said: "Owing to the heavy losses in the German trenches there is a lack of prompt medical attention, and in addition, the sanitary conditions of the improvised hospitals, where filthy straw has been used over and over again until it is completely rotten, are responsible for a large number of Germans dying from exposure. "Typhoid fever now is epidemic, having raged since November. This mainly is due to the Germans acquiring a habit of eating too much raw minced meat spread over bread. "Physicians admit the typhoid epidemic is alarming, but console themselves with the reflection that its spread is rendered difficult by the cold weather. Should it continue until summer, the war soon will be stopped. "The Germans are utterly tired of war, but still are determined to fight to the bitter end. What the Germans fear most is Italy's intervention, which will be followed inevitably by that of the Balkan States."

GERMANS LEAVING ITALY NOW THINK SHE WILL FIGHT.

Rome, Jan. 13.—Germans in Italy believe Italy plans an entrance into the European war in the near future on the side of the Allies. This is shown by the large number who are closing up their business connections here and returning to their native land. They realize that, even though they are incapacitated for military service, should war come they would be interned here. All Germans of military age or capable of bearing arms for the Kaiser went home long ago, with the exception of a few who received special permission to remain. But many Germans in business, and especially German women, are still in Italy. It is stated that the Garibaldi demonstrations greatly displeased the Kaiser. Although the Italian Government had plenty of troops on duty to prevent any untoward anti-German demonstrations, the fact that the public processions were permitted, with diplomatic representatives of the Allies participating, is said to have been regarded in Berlin as in the nature of an affront to Germany.

Rounding Up Tentons.

In the nature of things the Kaiser can do nothing at present to prevent it, but the general exodus of the Germans, especially noticeable during the last few days, is said to echo the feeling at Berlin. The Government is having a complete registration made of every German and Austrian in Italy. The police of all cities are making a house-to-house canvass to locate all of the aliens in order that they can be rounded up immediately if it becomes necessary. The German and Austrian diplomatic and consular representatives are aiding their countrymen and countrywomen to leave for home as rapidly as possible.

Attempt Blow U German Air Yarmouth Da

LONDON, Jan. 13.—German air-craft made last night threatened raid on England last night and attempted to blow up with the King's Royal residence in Sandringham, County Norfolk. This intention was ill-timed, for King George and Queen Mary, with their family who had been staying at Sandringham, had returned to London yesterday morning to resume their residence in Buckingham Palace. The still not definitely known whether the raiders were Zeppelins or aeroplanes were reported to have been shot down after passing over North Sea, in a westerly direction and most of those reporting the incident to the belief that these were the raiders. Yarmouth, King's Sandringham, Sheeringham and other stations were visited, and in all with the exception of the latter age and casualties are reported.

LATEST FROM YARMOUTH, via London, Jan. 13.—At half-past eight last night a German air-craft passed over Yarmouth and dropped several bombs, causing considerable damage to property and loss of life. One man is reported to have had his head blown off. One fell in Norfolk Square close to the sea front; and another at South Street, near the York Road. Fragments of a shell fell through the glass roof of a lard room at the headquarters of the National Reserve. The four fell near Trinity Depot. Co. resulting from exploding broke windows in a number of houses. It was dark at the time and it was impossible to see the aircraft. To its engine, however, could be heard. It was evident the aircraft carried a searchlight of light occasionally could be seen coming from it. The visit lasted ten minutes. The excitement prevailed in the special constables, police and military were called out and people who remained at home. When the explosion place the electric supply was cut off and the lights immediately plunged into darkness. The whirling of the propeller craft first attracted attention after came explosions and breaking glass. The ground and others near Hall. In all five bombs were seen to fall. One was seen to fall between the civilians and soldiers on Monday night, in which three civilians were killed and a soldier wounded. According to a refugee who crossed the border into Holland this morning, the Germans demanded that the residents of the village should produce the Burgomaster. They replied that the Burgomaster had been murdered and was thought to be dead. Maintaining that the village could not be held, the Germans arrested five elderly men of the town. The Germans also looted the co-operative store.

GERMANS KILL CIVILIANS IN BELGIAN TOWN.

Amsterdam, Jan. 13.—Failure of residents of Magnant, in the province of Hainaut, to meet a military requisition for food and fodder for a cavalry troop resulted in an encounter between the civilians and soldiers on Monday night, in which three civilians were killed and a soldier wounded. According to a refugee who crossed the border into Holland this morning, the Germans demanded that the residents of the village should produce the Burgomaster. They replied that the Burgomaster had been murdered and was thought to be dead. Maintaining that the village could not be held, the Germans arrested five elderly men of the town. The Germans also looted the co-operative store.

Attempt to Blow Up Palace.

German Airmen Fly Over Yarmouth and Cause Damage.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—German air-craft made their long-threatened raid on England last night, and attempted to blow up with bombs the King's Royal residence in Sandringham, County Norfolk. This intention was ill-timed, for King George and Queen Mary, with their family, who had been staying at Sandringham, had returned to London yesterday morning, to resume their residence in Buckingham Palace. It is still not definitely known whether the raiders were Zeppelins or aeroplanes, but Zeppelins were reported yesterday afternoon as passing over the North Sea, in a westerly direction, and most of those reporting the event incline to the belief that these were the raiders. Yarmouth, King's Lynn, Sandringham, Sheeringham and Beeston were visited, and in all places with the exception of the latter, damage and casualties are reported.

LATEST FROM YARMOUTH.

YARMOUTH, via London, Jan. 20.—At half-past eight last night hostile air-craft passed over Yarmouth and dropped several bombs. Considerable damage to property resulted, and it is feared there was some loss of life. One man is reported to have been killed. One bomb fell in Norfolk Square close to the sea front and another at South Quay; the third struck York Road Drill House. Fragments of a shell crashed through the glass roof of the billiard room at the headquarters of the National Reserve. The fourth missile fell near Trinity Depot. Concussions resulting from exploding bombs broke windows in a number of shops and houses. It was dark at the time of attack and it was impossible therefore to see the aircraft. The noise of its engine, however, could plainly be heard. It was evident that the machine carried a searchlight as flashes of light occasionally could be seen coming from it. The visit of the aircraft lasted ten minutes. Great excitement prevailed in the town and special constables, police and the military were called out to calm the people who streamed out of their homes. When the explosions took place the electric supply was immediately cut off and the town was immediately plunged into darkness. The whirring of the propellers of the aircraft first attracted attention, soon after came explosions and the sound of breaking glass. The first bomb was dropped near the recruiting ground and others near the Drill Hall. In all five bombs were thrown by aviator or aviators. After the attack the air-craft sailed away in a southwesterly direction. One man was found outside his home in St. Peter's Plain, his head being crushed. He was identified as Samuel Smith, shoemaker. A woman who has not yet been identified, was also found dead, while a soldier was discovered in Norfolk Square with a wound in his chest.

A despatch to the Press Association from King's Lynn, says definite news has been received there that a Zeppelin dropped a bomb not far from Sandringham Palace, but no damage was done the Royal residence. According to accounts the raiders dropped bombs at Yarmouth, Sheeringham, Cromer and Beeston. At Sheeringham a bomb dropped in Wyndham Street went through a house but did not explode, apparently because the fuse became crossed in the descent. A bomb was dropped at Beeston but did no damage. The bombs measured nearly four inches in diameter. It is supposed the Zeppelins started from the vicinity of Cuxhaven, in which case they would have to fly 300 miles across the North Sea to reach England. A Zeppelin has been brought down at Hunstanton, a few miles north of Sandringham, according to a despatch from King's Lynn to the Central News.

'The Optimists Corner.'

"Optimism," they say, "knocks once at every man's door," sooner or later. Some quickly open the door, others are too busy doing nothing to heed it, while still another class is too sound asleep to hear the knock consequently a very few comparatively speaking, ever attain the success which is written in capital letters. The meaning of the words opportunity and luck should not be confused, for their difference is as the difference between day and night. Luck doesn't mind dropping in without an invitation—but he's a mighty luke-warm friend to rest your entire weight against. But when opportunity knocks its generally because you've given her reasons to believe that her attentions will be appreciated. In other words we make our own opportunities by paying strict attention as to what Lintiment you supply your customers with.

THE NEW FRANCE.

London Chronicle.—If Germany has lost her soul in this war, France has found hers. Nowhere, least of all in Germany, was it thought that France had such inexhaustible reserves of moral strength as she is now proved to possess. The war has revealed to the world a new France, regenerated, purified of dress, virile, enduring, capable of any sacrifice. To Germany that revelation has come as a terribly disagreeable surprise.

The Bill That Waits.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"That bill can wait." I doubt if there is any bill in our budget of which that is said more often than of the doctor's bill, and I think it is a sin and a shame.

Were we willing to wait when we sent in a call for the doctor's services? Scarcely.

We wanted them far more impatiently than any of the merchandise which we have bought and managed to pay for since that doctor's bill was due. Why then do we feel so free to take our time about paying what we bought in such a hurry?

What the Doctor's Granddaughter Said.

I was walking down the street one day with a doctor's granddaughter. She is a hard-working stenographer with an undeveloped talent for music leaning at her heart and the support of her widow mother weighing on her slender shoulders. As we walked along, an expensive motor passed us in which sat two young women richly gowned and wearing expensive furs. The doctor's granddaughter looked at them bitterly. "Do you see those women?" she said. "Their father owed my grandfather hundreds of dollars. That was one of the many bills we could never collect. If we had even half the money that was owed him I could have studied music."

Instruments and never ending expense of keeping up with the latest methods, to say nothing of the time and strength which he sells them.

There is one way, however, in which, in my opinion, at least, doctors themselves could help alleviate this state of affairs. And that is instead of charging a higher rate to cover their losses they might charge a lower rate and have fewer of them. I have heard it said that the average physician loses fifty per cent of his bills. I know a doctor who, without any difficulty, collects ninety-five per cent. This is because he tries to adapt the size of his bill to the patient's ability to pay. The patient usually appreciates this consideration and does his best to deserve it.

Why Not a Discount for Cash?

There is another scheme which has always seemed good to me, though I fancy the etiquette of the profession would forbid it. And that is for the doctor to charge a certain price with a big discount for prompt payment. This would not only give the man who always tries to be prompt the benefit of his promptness, but it might also catch the slow payer and the man who would otherwise drift into letting the bill slide altogether.

You say this might work hardship to the man who could not pay promptly. It might if too strictly applied, but from all I know of the medical profession and the splendid charity work most of them do, I think we could trust the average doctor to see that the man who couldn't pay didn't suffer.

Fads and Fashions.

Coats intended for country wear are apt to have their basques open in front.

Silver Venetian lace and white chiffon appeared in the newest wedding gowns.

Charming are velvetene blouses worn over a separate lining of soft satin or silk.

Little puffed sleeves of the old Empire type appear on lots of the new evening gowns.

A spring evening robe, from Calver has a lace train mounted on lavender blue chiffon.

Turkey feathers are being mounted with gold and pearl and posing as aristocratic fans.

Many of the new high stocks have a narrow band of color just beneath a wide fluffy frill.

Noticeable in the winter fabrics is the decreased popularity of the transparent blouse.

The square-cut neck, with standing lace ruff at the back, is seen on gowns of crepe.

Circular skirts for young girls have bias bands of plain color, the foundation being plaid.

With the fur-trimmed suit you should carry a tiny muff and a wee hat should adorn your head.

Now a woman may have practically two gowns in one by means of the detachable train which is used.

Garlands of orange blossoms and myrtle are likely to be revived for trimming simple wedding gowns.

There must be fur on the daytime or evening dress; it may be at the top, at the bottom or in the middle.

Fashionable skirts are now so short that an extra high boot has been designed particularly for this fashion.

One of the most charming wedding gowns was made recently in pure Merovingian style, low girde, long close sleeves and all.

Party dresses have skirts that are one billowy ruffle after another. These ruffles are mounted on a foundation of crinoline or stiff scrim.

BULLET DEADLIER THAN THE DUM-DUM.

London, Jan. 12.—Dr. J. Hartnell Davis, late director of the British Field Hospital for Belgium, and H. S. Soutair, F.R.C.S., assistant surgeon of the West London Hospital, contribute to "The British Medical Journal" an article relating to their experience in the treatment of the wounded, in the course of which they say:

"The destruction of tissue in bullet wounds is so great that each side has repeatedly accused the other of using dum-dum bullets. This is based on an entirely mistaken reading of the evidence. Our opponents do not use such bullets, for the very good reason that they have discovered something far more deadly at a long range. Their pointed bullet is carefully constructed so that its centre of mass is far back. On striking any tissue, soft or hard, it turns over and passes through backwards, the uncovered base mushrooming as it advances. The point of the bullet is, under these circumstances, unaltered.

"In the course of operations we have repeatedly met with specimens demonstrating the correctness of this view—a minute wound of entrance and great internal destruction. The position of the bullet and its mushroomed base admit of no other explanation."

Following the removal of Princess Patricia's Light Infantry to the battlefield, the work of transporting the other Canadian units to France was hurried, to meet new and violent German attack.

TAKEN AT BIG COST.

LONDON, Jan. 19. A despatch from the Belgian frontier, says the temporary advantage to the Germans on the Aisne, to the northwest of Soissons, was gained at heavy cost. Many trains of wounded who were victims of the deadly shrapnel fire of the French, have arrived at Louvain en route to Cologne, while the local hospitals in these towns behind the centre of Germans, are filled with wounded, whose condition is too serious to permit their removal to Germany.

Wedding Bells.

ARCHBALD—GRANT.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Grant, Monkstown Road, yesterday afternoon when their daughter, Miss Ruth Grant was united in matrimony to Mr. Charles B. Archibald, of the Nova Scotia Steel Co., Bell Island.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. S. Sutherland, pastor of the Kirk, in the presence of a large number of friends of the contracting parties.

The bride was beautifully gowned and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Hazel Marston of the Methodist College Staff, and the groom was supported by his brother, Mr. James Archibald, of the Bank of Commerce, Halifax.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and after receiving the congratulations of their many friends, the happy couple drove to Waterford Bridge where they were entertained by Kellgrews, en route to Bell Island, their future home.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of valuable and useful presents. To the happy couple the Telegram extends heartfelt congratulations, and best wishes for a pleasant voyage over the matrimonial sea.

TAYLOR—DAWE.

At George St. Methodist Church the wedding of Miss Laura G. Taylor, daughter of Mr. L. Taylor, of Job's Southside premises, and Mr. Louis B. Dawe, of Bay Roberts, was solemnized on the 7th inst., the Rev. N. M. Guy, M.A., B.D., officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Cornick, while Mr. F. J. Cornick acted as groomsmen. After the ceremony they left by train for Bay Roberts where they will make their future home. The Telegram extends congratulations.

TRAVERS—VATERS.

The marriage of Miss Catherine Travers, of Bruley, parish of Bar Haven, was beautifully solemnized on Thursday, July 7th, when she was united in holy wedlock to Mr. John Vaters, of Rushoon, parish of Odein. The ceremony took place in the Church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Bruley, Rev. Francis Cacciola officiating. Miss May Vaters, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, while Mr. Thomas Travers, brother of the bride, was best man. The bride's gown was of white crepe de chine and point lace. She wore a white pan-velvet hat trimmed with ostrich plumes. The bridesmaid wore a gown made of cream satin cloth. The ushers were James Travers, Bernard Emlerley and Ambrose Ryan. A reception was held at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Vaters will reside at Rushoon.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The slob ice which filled out outer harbor has moved off with the S.W. wind. The ice in the inner harbor is said to be rather softly frozen, and will probably soon form a bridge for our Southside friends.

Mr. Arch Yetman, while in the woods a few days ago met with an accident and cut his foot badly. He was assisted home by his brother and his injuries attended to by a doctor.

Several cases of diphtheria are being treated at Island Cove by Dr. Cron. The doctor is hopeful that he will keep the disease from spreading further in that settlement.

As a result of the "What's Next" troupe to Carbonear last week, several young men of this town have developed "heart trouble," for which four young ladies of Carbonear are responsible.

Hr. Grace, Jan. 19, 1915.

A HERO'S WARNING.

Nothing could exceed the bravery of artillery subalterns, who, in many instances, have taken up dangerous positions well in advance of the front line of infantry, and telephone in hand, have given the range to the gunners with perfect calmness. Recently a young lieutenant posted himself in a tower a few hundred yards from the German trenches. He had telephoned his orders regularly for half an hour. Then he said, without any trace of excitement, to the operator on the other side, "I hear the Germans coming up the stairs. I have my revolver. Don't believe anything more you hear." With these words he dropped the receiver, and he has not been heard of since.

The first six platoons were put through extension order drill on the Parade Grounds yesterday afternoon after which return was made to the Armoury where the fortnightly wages were paid. Street patrols were organized yesterday, and were on duty about the streets last night, but it is very gratifying to note that their services were not needed.

The results of the recent non-coms exams will be made known within a few days. In the meantime the members of 5, 6 and 7 platoons are preparing for similar tests.

MR. CUSTOMER—

Probably you've economised by doing without your usual suit and overcoat during Fall of 1914. Are you going to have that down-and-out look in Spring 1915? The Allies have millions of men on the firing line, each requiring thirteen pounds of wool every six or eight weeks. The British Government are keeping British Mills turning out army contracts.

Spring quotations for woollens are sky high. We have on hand a particularly fine range of Serges, Tweed Suits and Overcoatings. Order now as you will have to pay considerably higher in the Spring.

The new French Field Service Uniform now making its appearance at the front is of a light blue-grey color, though less light and less grey than that of the Germans, from which it is easily distinguishable, except at greater distances.

It will blend well with the winter landscape. Some red-and-white threads are woven into the blue to salve patriotic regrets over the historic blue tunic and red trousers.
