CHAPTER XX.
 AN EXTRAORDINARY PROPOSAL.
 "A very proper question—very proper. If you will look over this bond, you will see that the payment of the ten thousand pounds is contingent upon the young lady's becoming possessed of at least twenty thousand a year. Do me the favour of perusing it; it is very short and very simple."
 "And very sweet," said Percy, and he rapidly ran over the paper. "I see you have left a blank where the young lady's name should go."
 "Which I will fill in when you have signed."
 "Ah! How long will you give me to consider this extraordinary proposal of yours?"
 "Exactly five minutes," said Spencer Churchill, blandly; "and excuse me, my dear Percy, if I say that that is four minutes too long! My dear young friend, consider! A young refined, accomplished lady, with a future fortune of at least twenty thousand a year—and you hesitate. Are you so fond of Soho, and this rather—excuse me—squalid life of yours? Think what a vista this opens before you! You are ambitious. I present you with a golden ladder by which you may climb to any height you please. What are your prospects now, save those of a lifelong drudgery with the work-house at the end? You, whose gifts warrant your taking your place among the flowers of the land—"
 "Wait, wait!" interrupted Percy. "I can't think with your drivel buzzing in my ears! I want to think! Man alive, I can scarcely believe that this is sober earnest, and if it were not for the price you exact, I should find it impossible to do so; but now I see your game, or part of it—" He wandered to the piano as he spoke, and dropping into his music-chair, abstractedly let his hands stray over the keys. "I think more easily to music," he murmured, dreamily.
 Spencer Churchill watched him in silence for a few minutes, then he said:

 "Time is up, my dear Percy. Is it to be 'Yes' or 'No'?"
 The young fellow rose from the piano. His face was pale, and his eyes glowing with a strange excitement.
 "I cannot resist it!" he said, in a voice, whose tremour belied his faint smile. "You are right—more right than you guessed—when you said I was ambitious. I am sick and weary of this life of squalid drudgery. I feel as if I would sell my soul—perhaps I am doing it—to get out of it. Give me the paper and I'll sign it."
 Spencer Churchill spread it on the table, and Percy Levant snatched up a pen and wrote his name.
 "There!" he said, pushing it from him, folding his arms, and looking down at Spencer Churchill with an almost defiant light in his dark eyes. "And now what next? I am all attention. Who and where is my future bride, and when shall I see her?"
 "Her name is Doris Marlowe," said Spencer Churchill, softly, writing the name in the blank left for the purpose as he spoke. "She is at present acting as companion to Lady Despard, and you shall see her in a day or two."
 "Doris Marlowe!" repeated Percy Levant. "Doris Marlowe! It sounds pretty; but a rose by any other name, etc.; and she is acting as companion to Lady Despard, is she? And has no suspicion of the wealth that will be hers? Churchill, are you sure that this is not a fiction born of your too fertile imagination?"
 "You will see in a day or two," said Spencer Churchill.
 "It is really genuine? And what is the plan to be adopted? You will, I suppose, introduce me as a prince travelling incog, a millionaire in embryo, a something brilliant enough to dazzle the eyes of the young lady and carrying her fancy captive? Is this to be the line?"
 The philanthropist shook his head with an indulgent smile.
 "No, my dear Percy; I'm free to admit that that is the kind of thing most men would do; but I think that you and I are too wise, not to say too honourable, to adopt such a course of deception."
 Percy Levant laughed sardonically. "Pardon; I forgot that you were a man of high principle, and a light of Exeter Hall. Well, what will you do?"

 "I shall tell the truth," said Spencer Churchill, with a virtuous uplifting of the eyes. "I shall introduce you to Lady Despard as a musical genius—you are a genius, you know, my dear Percy—struggling against the difficulties and obstacles insuperable to poverty and—er—that kind of thing. Lady Despard is never so happy as when she is assisting struggling talent, and she will receive anyone whom I recommend. Dear Lady Despard! The rest I leave to you. If you cannot find a way to Miss Marlowe's heart, then I will confess that I am very much mistaken in you."
 "Thanks for your flattering opinion," said Percy, with a short bow. "I will do my best—or my worst, which is it?"
 "Meanwhile, touching that ten pounds!"
 "You shall have it with pleasure," said Spencer Churchill, and he took a note from his purse and handed it to him with a benevolent smile. "Do not spend it—"
 "In riotous living. No, Father Patriarch, I won't. I will buy myself some decent clothes, and get my hair cut—for I've noticed that your Lady Despard takes a great deal more interest in struggling genius when it is clean and neatly dressed."
 Spencer Churchill nodded.
 "You know the world, I see, my dear Percy. I think that is all we need say. We thoroughly understand each other—"
 "I thoroughly understand you," returned the young fellow. "Whether you understand me is quite another matter."
 "I think I do—I think I do," murmured Spencer Churchill, blandly. "I think that you will do your best to win the game which secures you a charming wife and future independence. Good-bye, my dear Percy. Don't let the new suit of clothes be too resplendent; remember that you are a poor young man of genius."
 "I'm not likely to get the poverty," said Percy, slowly. "Good-bye. Mind how you go down-stairs. There are generally from twenty to thirty children asleep on that at this hour, and the parents, strange to say, have an unreasonable objection to having them smothered."
 "I will take care," said the philanthropist, and, with a murmured benediction, he ambled out.
 CHAPTER XXI.
 AN ART PATRON.
 "Dear me, how interesting!" said Lady Despard.
 It was the third day after Doris's arrival, and they were sitting at breakfast in a small room, beautifully cool and shady, and furnished with an elaborate simplicity which, while it avoided all garish colour, was fresh and bright. A great bowl of roses stood in the centre of the table, from which rose a long fountain of perfumed water. Curtains of the faintest blush-pink threw a warm tint upon her ladyship, who, in her morning-gown of delicate chintz, looked like one of the Dresden shepherdesses which stood on the mantel-shelf. Doris, in her white morning-trock, with its deep black sash, was the only patch of decided colour—it white can be called a colour—in the room, but, beside Lady Despard's rather insipid prettiness, her fresh young loveliness looked like one of the roses in the bowl.
 She looked up from her coffee-cup she was filling from the great silver urn with a faint smile of curiosity. In three days she had learnt all that there was to learn of Lady Despard's character, and had grown to like her. As for her ladyship, she had already taken to the beautiful girl and her quaint, graceful ways and soft, musical voice, and twenty times in each of the days had congratulated herself and blessed Mr. Spencer Churchill on having sent her such a treasure.

 "Really very interesting!" she repeated, turning over the note she was reading, and regarding it with a pensiv smile. "It is from our friend Mr. Churchill, dear," she said. "One of his charming, little letters. The good that man does in a quiet, unobtrusive way is really astounding!"
 "What has he been doing now?" asked Doris, quietly.
 "Why, he has written asking me to help him in assisting a young friend of his who has had a great deal of trouble and all that. He is a great musician—that is, he ought to be great, you know—but he is poor and friendless, and Mr. Churchill wants me to take him by the hand. He says that I have such immense influence in the arts and musical world that I can do anything. Of course that's nonsense; that is only his nice way of putting it. But there's the note. Just read it out, dear."
 Doris took the letter and read it. It was a charming little composition, as Lady Despard had said, and in the pleasantest way told the story of struggling genius, which only needed Lady Despard's patronage to rise to the heights of success and fame. Might he bring his young friend to see dear Lady Despard? Perhaps, if he might suggest, and her ladyship was disengaged, she would kindly ask them to dinner. He was quite sure she had only to know his dear young friend, Percy Levant, to feel an interest in him for his own sake, and the sake of the art of which dear Lady Despard was so distinguished a patroness.
 Charmingly worded as was the epistle, Doris, as she read it, felt a strange and vaguely indefinite want of faith in it; an incredulity for which she at once took herself to task, as she reminded herself that Mr. Churchill was only doing for the young man that which he had done for her.
 "It is a nice letter," she said, handing it back. "Shall you ask him, Lady Despard?"
 "Well, yes, dear; I think so," said her ladyship. "I don't know that I can do much for the young man. You see, we go to Florence in a week's time. I might give a concert, and so introduce him to the musical people; but I daresay Mr. Churchill has a plan ready—he is always so systematic. I wonder what the young man is like? Percy Levant is the name, isn't it? Sounds Greek, doesn't it? I hope he isn't a foreigner; they generally smell so of tobacco, and it's so dreadfully difficult to understand them; and they are not always presentable. There was a Senor Something-or-other, an artist they got me to patronise, and he used to swear dreadfully in Spanish, which no one understood, fortunately."
 "Then it did not so much matter," said Doris.

Fashion Plates.

2876.—This design is good for rajah silk or shantung, for pongee, poplin, taffeta, satin, linen or gingham. The blouse is separate from the skirt, which may be of lining under the tunic portion.
 The Pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 6 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. Width of skirt at lower edge is about 1 1/2 yards.
 A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A VERY SEASONABLE PLAY COSTUME.

2877.—Here is just the dress and hat for warm summer days. This outfit may be made of khaki, lawn, percale, linen, cotton, corduroy, pique, drill, gingham or chambray. Smocking may replace the gathers at the waistline; the shoulder straps may be of ribbon.
 The Pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 4 will require 5/8 yard of 27 inch material for the hat, and 2 1/2 yards for the dress.
 A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

ITALY'S EFFORT.
ROME, Aug. 8. Francesco Nitti, the Italian Premier, speaking to-day of Italy's efforts in the world war and the evidences of unrest in Italy, said they were not serious enough to warrant alarm. It was in that aim to perpetuate free institutions that Italy threw in her all. No country suffered more from the conflict or the sacrifice with greater loss. Half a million dead testify in silence more strikingly than any other evidence to Italy's sterling spirit. A million disabled, living in pain, constitute another of our offerings in the cause of freedom. Five and a quarter million men went out to battle of a 35,000,000 population. In 1915 every available man in Italy was called to the colors. Had America been called upon to contribute on this proportion she would have summoned 15,000,000 to arms. Italy's army was given willingly and eagerly on the altar of liberty. To bear witness that right is more precious than peace, before the war our annual national debt amounted to £2,000,000,000. Our advent into the war has seen it rise to £16,000,000,000. There was not one atom of endeavor that we withheld in seeking victory. We gave up our homes, our youth, our wealth, our all that small nations might exercise their right of government; that the self-determination of peoples might be perpetuated. The problem of the high cost of living will be brought near solution when the industrial groups have accepted this need for increased output and as long as this feeling permeates the mass of the Italian people,

RATHER COMPLICATED.
PARIS, Aug. 11. The Peace Conference, it became known to-day, is changing entirely its attitude toward the Roumanian army in Budapest. The conference, it is learned, is not disposed to ask Roumanians to leave the Hungarian capital immediately despite the fact that the supreme Inter-Allied Council asked the Roumanians not to enter Budapest.

Declares She Was Almost Helpless

Couldn't Get Up Or Down Without Help—Tanlac Brings Relief. Gained 7 Pounds.

Thousands of people, both men and women, throughout the United States and Canada, are now taking Tanlac with the most astonishing and gratifying results, and many have testified to the benefits they have derived from its use. Among the number is Mrs. Marguerite Wimpee, wife of S. P. Wimpee, residing in the Santelmo apartments, Stewart and Minor avenues, Seattle, Wash. Mr. Wimpee is an expert mechanic, employed by Steckenoy & Montague, in the Crary building. In relating her experience with Tanlac, Mrs. Wimpee said:

"Tanlac is the most wonderful medicine I ever heard of and I want everybody to know what it has done for me. For many years I have suffered from stomach trouble and other complications, and had become almost a nervous and physical wreck. My appetite was very poor and my stomach was so upset and out of order that I couldn't digest anything. I was often so affected by gas pressing against my heart that I could hardly breathe, and the pain was so severe that I could hardly stand it. I was so constipated all the time that I could hardly sleep at all. There was a continual pain in my right side and my back just over my kidneys, that hurt me fearfully. I also had rheumatism in my finger joints and left knee, and got in such a bad condition that I could not get up or down without assistance, and I was almost helpless. In my efforts to get well I have undergone several operations, and goodness only knows how much medicine of different kinds I have taken, but nothing ever gave me more than passing relief, and it just seemed that I was destined to be a sufferer all my days.

"But things have changed right about for me now, thanks to Tanlac. I have taken only two bottles so far and am almost entirely relieved of all my ailments. Why, I have gained seven pounds on these two bottles, actually. I weigh more than I ever did before—and I am still gaining. My appetite is just splendid and I can't eat anything I want without feeling a sign of indigestion. My sleep is now sound and restful, and I am getting back my strength right about. Tanlac certainly is a real medicine, for nothing but a real medicine could do what it has done and is still doing for me. My husband and several friends on these two bottles are now taking it on account of what it has done for me, and I feel that everybody ought to know about a medicine that does so much for suffering people.

"There is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive and assimilative organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the whole body. In other words, Tanlac certainly is a real medicine, for nothing but a real medicine could do what it has done and is still doing for me. My husband and several friends on these two bottles are now taking it on account of what it has done for me, and I feel that everybody ought to know about a medicine that does so much for suffering people.

"Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.

Regatta Meeting.

The final meeting of the Regatta Committee was held last night. Reports were received from the committees looking after the erection of tents, etc., and also from the collectors of factories and unions, who announced $25 from the L.S.P.U. and $10 from the Shoe Workers. Crews entered in the following races:

Several juvenile crews entered and were passed by the examining committee. The number of crews rowing, as entered, total 44, apart from the likely competitors in the champion race, which means that the Victoria Regatta of 1919 will be the biggest in the annals of local sports.

To-Night's Band Concert

Arrangements have been made for a concert to-night in Bannerman Park, when the Royal Marine band which is accompanying the Royal party, will be in attendance. This band is one of the most famous and best bands in the Old Country, and it goes without saying that there will be a large crowd in attendance at the concert to-night in order to hear this first class music which is too good to miss.

Stoned a Policeman.

Last night on Duckworth Street, a number of lads were admonished by a police constable for indulging in unseemly actions, but one of them more unruly than the others resented the advice and gave cause for his arrest. When taking his prisoner down the Court House entrance to the cells a stone was thrown which struck the officer in the neck, knocking him down for the moment but not doing any serious damage otherwise. The thrower of the missile could not be identified at the time, but from information received later, the police have sufficient data upon which to work and an arrest may take place at any time.

Change in Official Programme.

A slight change was made in the official programme for to-day. The Prince abandoned his drive to Topsall; and it is quite possible, despite the very short notice given, His Royal Highness will be able to lay more or less formally or informally the cornerstone of the new Methodist Educational building to be erected in Buckmaster's field. The presentation of medals awarded those who showed conspicuous bravery at the wreck of the Florizel will take place at 3.45 p.m. instead of 4 p.m. as previously announced.

Personal Mention.

Mr. A. Barrett, Editor of the Western Star arrived in the city by yesterday's express and will remain until the end of the week.
Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Rose, of Harbor Breton, are in town on a visit, and during their stay are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Lewis, 64 Hayward Avenue.

Celestial Illuminations.

Possibly the most impressively beautiful northern lights ever known in St. John's, were to be seen in the heavens last night. At about ten minutes past eleven they were at their best, and those who were favored in seeing them could but look in awed silence as they viewed in wonder the marvellous splendours of nature. The Aurora Borealis, last night, took the form of a great centre circle with darts of fiery light radiating out in every direction. These lights, which were changing in hues and color and form, were the most beautiful imaginable and struck the beholder dumb with astonishment. The distinguished party in and off Topsall last night was without doubt favored with the most magnificent sight ever seen by its individual members.

THE PRINCE.
H.R.H. Prince Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, K.G., G.C.M.G., G.B.E., M.C., was created Prince of Wales (in vest ed at Carnarvon Castle, Wales July 12th, 1919) and Earl of Chester on June 13th, 1910, Duke of Saxeony, Prince of Coburg and Gotha, Duke of Cornwall (in peerage of England by patent, 1937.) Duke of Rothesay Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles and Great Steward of Scotland, was born at White Lodge, Sheen, June 23, 1894; was educated at the Royal Naval College, Osborne, Dartmouth and at Magdalen College, Oxford. His Royal Highness is also High Steward of Windsor, a Lieut. in the Royal Navy and a Captain in the famous regiment of Grenadier Guards. Saw active service at the front during the great war and was decorated with the Military Cross.

THE OBJECT OF HIS VISIT.
Following the example set by the late King Edward VII, when Prince of Wales, and of his royal father, when Duke of York, the Prince is making the present tour of the North American portion of the Empire with a view to familiarising himself with the lands over which he will some day be called to rule, and this initial tour is but the forerunner of others to all the portions of the Empire, which make up the greatest aggregation of people and lands under one monarch that exists in the world. The idea to send the Prince around the world via Britain's possessions is not a new one, but the war prevented any steps being taken to this effect. So soon however as peace was concluded, the necessary arrangements were finalised and on August 5th His Royal Highness embarked at Portsmouth, the great naval depot of England, on board H.M.S. Renown, and at six o'clock in the evening (Greenwich time) sailed for Newfoundland, arriving in Conception Bay at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, accompanied by H.M.S. Dragon and Dauntless, the latter having left this port on Sunday to meet the incoming ship.

There was no ceremony attending the sailing of the Prince, who was accompanied on board the Renown by King George and Queen Mary. His Majesty inspecting the guard of honor drawn up on the deck of the huge cruiser. At a farewell luncheon served on the ship, there was no speech making, the King with raised glass wishing his son a prosperous voyage and a safe return. An inspection of the ship by the Royal party followed, and with that punctilious ceremony for which the navy is famous, the Prince accompanying and taking an affectionate leave-taking of his august father and mother in the saloon of the Royal train subsequently boarding the Renown which sailed immediately.

H. M. S. RENOWN.
The Renown, a complete description of which was given in a recent issue of the Telegram, is one of a class of four battle cruisers built during the war, the others being Repulse, Glorious Furious and Courageous. The Renown has a displacement of 26,500 tons, and carries a crew of 1000 officers and men. The ship is 794 feet long with a beam of 90 feet. Her engines develop 40,000 horse power, with oil fuel, and are capable of driving her through the water at a speed of 35 knots or 40 lineal miles per hour.

FORMER ROYAL VISITS.
Apart from the time when King William IV, the sailor Prince was stationed on the North Atlantic naval service in the latter part of the 18th century, and came with his ship to Newfoundland, there have been two royal visits to the ancient and loyal colony by heirs to the throne, the first one being in 1869, when the then Prince of Wales, the late lamented King Edward VII. "The Peacemaker" landed in St. John's on his way to Canada for the express purpose of opening the Royal Victoria Bridge at Montreal. He embarked on H. M. S. Hero, one of the old wooden walls, a square rigged ship of the line with steam auxiliary, on July 9th, and after a passage of eleven days arrived in this port. (Note the difference between the time of the Hero and Renown). The arrival of the Prince was

A WELCOME To the Prince of Wales

This rugged Isle where first the Imperial race
Planted the seedlings of an Empire wide,
Greet us on this happy day with joy and pride
The Heir of Britain's glory. Her embrace
Now girdles all the world; but though he trace
The trails of Empire o'er the boundless tide
Of all the Seven Seas, more firm or tried Britons he ne'er shall meet in any place.

"Ancient and Loyal" is our olden boast;
We are privileged to begin the mighty cheer
Our brethren shall take up from coast to coast
All round the world, where'er our Prince shall sail.
Son of our King, of Britain's throne the heir,
Our hearts are all your own, Sir; hail, all hail!

ROBERT GEAR MacDONALD.

the signal for a general turn out by the populace, who gathered to give him a right royal welcome. Three days were spent in St. John's all of which were taken up in rounds of gaieties, the Prince leaving for Halifax Nova Scotia, having spent a most pleasant and enjoyable stay. After touring the Dominion of Canada, the Prince visited the United States under one of his hereditary titles—Baron Renfrew.

The next visit of the heir apparent to the Imperial throne of Britain took place in September 1901 when their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Cornwall and York, (the present King and Queen) made a world tour including Newfoundland and Canada in their itinerary. The principal object of this royal procession was the inauguration of the new commonwealth of Australia. After making their regular schedules the royal party arrived in the port of St. John's early on the morning of Wednesday, October 24, the approach of the royal yacht Ophir being signalled by the booming of artillery from the ships in the harbor awaiting the dual ship and her consort, the squadron beside the Ophir, consisting of Niobe, Diadem, Crescent, Psyche and Proserpine. The city was quickly bedecked with bunting and as the Ophir—leading—steamed in through the narrows the joy bells of the R. C. Cathedral rang out their silvery welcome. The formal landing took place on Thursday, Oct. 25, and on Friday at 7 o'clock in the morning, the Royal party sailed direct for England. A happy feature of the 1901 visit was the investiture, at Government House, with the order of a Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George of Sir Robert Bond, then Premier of the Colony, the Duke of York conducting the ceremony in the presence of a brilliant company.

THE ROYAL MARINES BAND.
The Band of the Royal Marines, which is accompanying the Prince on his tour, is one of the most popular of British Military Bands. When the present King George first became Prince of Wales, he made an overseas tour on the Ophir, and the Royal Marines' band had the honor of accompanying him. At that time, so many members of the band could play more than one instrument, they were able to perform as an orchestra as well as give military band concerts. Weekly band concerts in the city halls, and during winter in the city parks, by the finest military bands in the world, have taught the people of Great Britain to appreciate the best music. Many returned men in Newfoundland, as well as other citizens who have had the privilege of hearing some of the British military bands, will give a hearty welcome to the Royal Marines.

THE PRINCE AT TOPSAIL.
The honor of being the first place to receive the royal visitor on his tour throughout the Empire, went to Topsail yesterday, when the Prince of Wales landed, and ascending Topsail Hill, viewed the countryside for miles around. When the neat little launch was seen coming inshore from the great ship, Renown, it was divined that it held the Prince, and everyone in the place crowded down to the waterside and wharf to greet and see him. In response to cheers the Prince bowed his hat politely and bowed. He was attired in a light grey suit and brown felt hat. The visitor returned to his ship at five o'clock, having come off at 2.30. That he was enraptured with the local Brighton view without saying, for Topsail has seldom looked so beautiful, the waters of the Bay being as placid and still as has ever been the case. The surrounding country was bathed in a soft radiance of sunshine at daytime, and moonlight at evening. Without doubt the visiting party struck Topsail at a most opportune time. In addition to the Prince, many from the ships were also ashore and thoroughly enjoyed the scenery, the equal of which, it is safe to say, is rarely witnessed.

THE ARRIVAL.
At 11.15 o'clock the cruiser Dragon, followed by the Dauntless, entered the Narrows and steamed to anchorage in the Eastern waters of the Harbor. Both ships were dressed in flags and the sides and gangways were manned by the bluejackets. The cannon and whistles of the shipping in port blazed and blew in welcome, and the crews of the numerous small craft cheered to the echo.

THE LANDING.
Punctually at 11.40 the first gun of the royal salute thundered forth from the starboard battery of H.M.S. Dragon, and was followed by those of the Dauntless, an announcement that His Royal Highness was ready to come on shore. The deafening reports of the cannon were multiplied a thousandfold by the echoes from the surrounding hills, and for a while the air was filled with an uninterrupted reverberation as the full salute was given. Preceded by a single steam pinnace from H.M.S. Dauntless and embarking on another from the Dragon the landing of the distinguished guest was made on the tick of noon. Previously His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by his Private Secretary and equerry, had arrived at the King's Wharf and was received with the salute, the C.L.B. Band playing the National Anthem. Taking up his position at the head of the landing steps, which had been covered with crimson carpet, stretching to the reception point, His Excellency received the Prince, who, dressed in the uniform of a naval Lieutenant, and wearing no orders or other adornments, stepped from the pinnace, escorted only by a single naval aide. As the Prince landed, the sailors and soldiers of the guard came to the royal salute, while the C.L.B. Band played the National Anthem and the heads of the multitude were bared as the strains were heard. Then came mighty cheers for His Royal Highness who looked quite unassuming and boyish as he cordially greeted the Governor, and was thoroughly unaffected in manner. After the formal welcome to Newfoundland, the Prince inspected the detachments of bluejackets from the Briton and soldiers of the Regiment, drawn up on the West side of the wharf, afterwards shaking hands and conversing for a while with the officers in charge, complimenting them on the appearance and excellence of the men. Following the inspection came

THE PRESENTATIONS.
The Judges of the Supreme Court were the first to be presented to His Royal Highness, next the members of the Executive Government and lastly the Officers of the Regiment, with one of whom, Lt.-Col. Bernard, the Prince had a short chat. The introduction of the Inspector General of Police closed the formalities on the part of the Government, His Royal Highness then receiving the City's welcome from Mayor Gosling and a deputation from the City Council. (The Address of Welcome from the Corporation and the reply of the Prince is published in another column.) The Mayor, Deputy Mayor, the Secretary and Councillor Ayre were then formally presented, and the ceremony of reception concluded, when mighty cheers were again called and given with a will.

THE PROCESSION.
To the sound of the bells of the city churches pealing forth their iron tongues but melodious welcome, the Prince entered the open barouche of His Excellency and headed the procession up Water Street cheering throngs on the sidewalks demonstrating the warmth of their greeting, while faces at all the windows of the houses and shops smiled brightly at the youthful scion of royalty as he gallantly responded to the plaudits of the multitudes gathered to do him honor. There was no disorder or confusion. The arrangements made were as perfect as could be and the vast throngs following the line of march were in the very best of humour. No untoward conduct of any kind occurred to mar the general harmony, and Tuesday, August 12th, will be a red letter day henceforth in the Calendar of Newfoundland.

handsome sight. Eight pillars, supporting a roof, mounted by a large illuminated crown, were pure white, and outlined with colored electric lights. The second was that built by Bowring Brothers, crossing the street from the office of that firm to the other side. This one, as distinguished from the first, is designed after old architecture, and is covered with green boughs. It is very handsome, too, and the sweet smelling fragrance of the Newfoundland bough should long remain in the nostrils of the visiting prince. The third arch met is probably the most elaborate and handsome of the entire route. Built by Sir John Crosbie, and fashioned after old English architecture, it presents a most impressive sight. Like the one immediately preceding it, it is covered in with boughs, with the inscriptions, "Welcome," and "God Save the King," beautifully scrolled on the columns. It was erected under the constant presence of Sir John, and without doubt a splendid tribute to his generosity and ingenuity. Sir John Crosbie's arch extends across Water Street from his office to the General Post Office. The next one was that of the Board of Trade, built on Queen Street. It is chiefly remarkable in that it represents local interests. Consisting largely of cod drums, barrels, anchors, dried fish, and a large fishing net, draped overhead as the party drove under, it made an unusual scene. The fifth arch was that of the Government, stretching across Duckworth Street by the Maritime Theatre. Built by Spratt Brothers, it was made of boughs, and was entirely outlined with colored lights. "Welcome" and other inscriptions faced it, while beautiful-sounding chimes were played in the bough-towers. The Municipal arch came next, crossing Duckworth Street at the foot of Bell Street. It, also, is a pretty sight, bearing the sign, "God bless the Prince of Wales," and the royal coat of arms. Mr. H. D. Reid's beautiful and artistic arch came next, being situated on Church Hill, between Lower Street Methodist Church and the Cathedral Rectory. There were many features of interest about it. This arch, the number of lights and flags being conspicuous among them. The Great War Veterans Arch, although not passed under, was also pretty and conspicuous signs, being situated on the Beach overlooking the harbor. On either side was a platform, on which was situated a light captured by the Regiment from the Germans. On the top was the sign, "The Great War Veterans welcome their Prince."

facades of Water Street's massive structures, and the large front windows of the shops bore their display of elaborate and artistic drapery. The arches were resplendent in their sylvan grandeur and topped and hung with vari-colored banners and standards gave mute but eloquent welcome to our royal guest. The shipping in port were decked out in all the colors of the rainbow, the variety of the flags of the International Signal Code, lending a brilliant effect to the beautiful marine picture thus made. Flying above everything the colors of the Empire blew bravely to the breeze, and thousands of hearts thrilled at the sight of the glorious old "red duster" as it gallantly showed its meteoric color against the blue of the heavens, and remembered the heroic deeds of the men of the merchant marine, the sailors who kept the Allied world fed during the war.

The Public Buildings contributed their quota of color to an unusually vivid scheme, and altogether the decorations of the day surpassed anything ever witnessed in the Capital of Newfoundland. That such had to be the case goes without saying. In the name of the people of Newfoundland, St. John's was welcoming the son of the King, the heir-apparent to the Imperial throne, and their enthusiasm in the reception and their hearty and whole-souled greeting will surely strike a responsive chord in the breast of every loyal subject of this dominion—those who had the pleasure and privilege of seeing their future Sovereign and those who did not.

CITY COUNCIL'S ADDRESS TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS.

To His Royal Highness Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom; Duke of Cornwall, in the Peerage of England, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick and Baron of Renfrew in the Peerage of Scotland; Lord of the Isles, and Great Steward of Scotland; K.G., G.C.M.G., M.C., etc., etc.

May it please Your Royal Highness: On behalf of the people of St. John's, we, the Municipal Council, desire to extend to Your Royal Highness a very hearty welcome, and to express our high appreciation of the honour you have conferred upon this Metropolis and Loyal Colony by your presence at this important and historic occasion of the Coronation of the Crown to be visited by you.

Newfoundland is justly proud of her claim to the title of "Most Ancient Colony." Here the Great British Empire Overseas had its beginning. This was the first land outside of Europe to be claimed by the British Crown, possession being taken of it with quaint and impressive ceremonies in the year 1583, probably not one hundred yards from this spot, which has been known from time immemorial as the "King's Beach." And it is still with greater satisfaction that we call ourselves "Loyal"—Loyal to His Gracious Majesty the King and to your illustrious House, and loyal to the traditions of our race. It is a happy augury for the future stability of our great Empire, that the heir to the Crown, who has shared with the Armies of the King's world wide Dominions the hardships and glory of a triumphant campaign, is now, in the first dawn of peace, centering the attention of the loyal citizens of these Western British Communities on the Throne, as the cornerstone of that Empire which has been knit together more closely than ever by a common danger and a common sacrifice.

And in the great future which lies before the British Empire, we trust that we may play a worthy part, and under the leadership and guidance of His Majesty the King, may successfully fight that nobler fight which has for its aim the happiness and welfare of our people.

We beg that Your Royal Highness will convey to His Majesty the King, an assurance of the love and loyalty of the people of St. John's and of Newfoundland.

We trust that your visit to this City, though brief, may prove interesting and pleasurable.

We have the honour to be, Sir, Your Royal Highness' Most Obedient Servants,

W. G. GOSLING, Mayor.

THE PRINCE'S REPLY.

Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen of the Municipal Council of the City of St. John's:

I thank you for the cordial welcome conveyed in your address.

It is a pleasure to meet you here on the threshold of the Capital City of a Colony for which you rightly claim the high distinction of being most ancient and loyal.

While I regret that it should be impossible for me in the short time at my disposal to visit more than the capital of Newfoundland, still I cannot doubt that in those kindly sentiments which are expressed in your address, the City of St. John's is representative of the whole Colony, which made so splendid a response to the appeal of the Empire in 1914.

I will ask you, Mr. Mayor, to convey to the citizens under your administration an expression of my deep pleasure at having this opportunity of making their acquaintance and seeing their Capital. Will you also assure them of my interest and sympathy in the part which they have to play in facing the great problems which now confront Newfoundland in common with the rest of the British Commonwealth.

THE ADDRESS FROM THE GOVERNMENT

To His Royal Highness, Edward, Albert, Christian, George, Andrew, Patrick, David, Prince of Wales, and Earl of Chester, Prince of Great Britain and Ireland, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, and Great Steward of Scotland; K.G., G.C.M.G., G.M.B.E. M.C., etc., etc., etc.

May it please Your Royal Highness: Representing the Executive Council, the Legislative Council, and the House of Assembly of this most ancient of all the British Dominions beyond the Seas, we offer to your Royal Highness our loyal devotion and whole-souled welcome to our shores.

We recall with pleasant memories the visit of your august Father and his beloved Consort, now our gracious King and Queen, to this Island in 1901. The lapse of time and the grave dangers through which the Empire has passed since that date have but served to strengthen the bonds of loyalty and affection which unite this land of the New World with the Motherland of the Old World. Their Majesties the King and Queen, throughout the whole period of the Great War, ever placed themselves side by side with their people both at home and in the Dominions, and the community of spirit has engendered a deeper affection for and a larger loyalty to the Throne and Persons of our Noble King and Queen.

We have followed with great interest the record of the services of Your Royal Highness in the various theatres of War, and we have rejoiced that the Empire has a Prince who is brave and fearless, fitted to command, and yet whose aim is to fulfill the motto borne on his badge, "Ich Dien." In this most important period in the history of our Empire, with the dark and difficult experiences behind us, and the many pressing problems confronting us, we desire to stand shoulder to shoulder with the component entities of this Great British Empire, careful to take up and carry forward our own share of the responsibilities, but anxious, by loyal co-operation and fervent attachment, to make our glorious Empire a benefit and a blessing to the World.

We pray that the King of Kings may grant to your illustrious Father, the King, and to our beloved Queen long life and the highest happiness, and to your Royal Highness, His gracious protection during your journeying, and His richest gifts of Wisdom and Grace.

We have the honor to be, Sir, Your Royal Highness' most obedient servants,

MICHAEL P. CASHIN, Prime Minister.
JOHN R. BENNETT, Colonial Secretary.

"Renown" Off Narrows.

H.M.S. Renown which brought H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to Conception Bay, but which was too large to enter this harbor in safety, steamed up and down off the narrows this morning, in order to give the people of the city a chance to see her. As she is one of the latest type of warships that have been built, and many hundreds of people took advantage of this opportunity to view the very latest type of naval architecture and construction.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, Aug. 12, 1919.

One thought is in all our hearts today, to offer the Prince of Wales, who comes to us in the name and with the greetings of our beloved King, a welcome such as shall befit this great and felicitous occasion. For the mighty pyramid of our free and democratic Empire culminates in a crown, and we who live far from the Home Land are no less truly loyal to the throne than to the great principles of our freedom, realizing as we do that it is the golden link of the crown, the personal loyalty to a sovereign who represents a thousand years of kingship, and who is yet truly one of ourselves, one who has during these five years past borne the burden as truly as any subject in his vast dominions that binds us all together. And as to the Prince himself, we love and admire him as one who, since he has grown up, has borne his full share of the danger of these fateful years. May God prosper him on his journey!

FOR SPECIAL DUTY.—Constables Quinlan, Dooley, Lynch, Devine, Forsey and March, arrived by train yesterday and will be attached to the special duty squad for the next few days.

This straight, double-edged sword, bearing the letters "I. H. S.," was taken to the Crusades by an English knight, when our King John was on his throne; and, after disappearing for three or four centuries, somehow came into the hands of Sijaji, the freebooter, who with it hewed his way to the Maratta throne. In a neighbouring case we see a scabbard, ablaze with rubies, emeralds, and diamonds, which sheathes a sabre worn for many a generation by the Rajahs of Mandi.

Near to it are a gold-hilted sword, with the inscription in Persian, "There is no saint but All, no sword but Zulfiqar," which, five centuries ago, was held in superstitious awe as the deadliest weapon in the East, against which no warrior, however brave and skillful, could hope to live; and a murderous weapon—sword and pistol combined—said to have been invented by the infamous Tippoo Sahib.

Another sword is the very weapon with which Mir Nureef struck off the right hand of the treacherous brother who had stolen his wife from him during his absence from the Court of Akbar; and this blade, with its hilt of rock-crystal and diamond-studded gold, saw centuries of fighting in India after it had received its baptism of blood in the Crusades.

To this wonderful collection the Japanese sword comes as the first emblem of peace—Answers.

The Guest of the Nation.

(From the New York Times.)

The Prince of Wales, after a visit to Canada in August, will be the guest of the American Government at Washington upon Mr. Wilson's invitation, and will afterward stay in this city for a short time. Here, doubtless to the disappointment of many amiable Mrs. Leo Hunters, he will live on a British naval vessel. Fifty-nine years ago his grandfather, the then Prince of Wales, travelled in the United States under the guardianship of the Duke of Newcastle, and the name of "Lord Renfrew." The then rather unformed youth of nineteen was to develop into the accomplished man of the world, the mirror of tact, the able and quietly influential statesman whom the world learned to know and admire as Edward VII. Vastly different are the relations between the United States and Great Britain, wonderfully transformed is the general American feeling toward Great Britain, since then. The cardinal work of the British Navy through the war, the unflinching heroism and dogged resolution of the British Army through all discouragements and disasters, the fact that American and British soldiers have fought together side by side and in the same great cause, have removed the ancient prejudices

Cycle Accident.

Early last night, a young man named Phillips, while riding his motor cycle along Topsail Road, met with a serious accident through the gasoline in the feed tank exploding. The rider was burnt severely about the legs and arms and had to be brought to town by a motor car which luckily happened to be passing shortly after the accident. On arrival the burns were immediately attended to and to-day the sufferer is doing finely.

C. C. C. Parade.

The Parade at the C.C.C. Armoury last night drew the largest attendance for some time. Having gone through ceremonial drill, final announcements were made regarding camp, and the pioneer parties took off. A guard of honor was selected, commanded by Captain L. Murphy and Lieut. Lang and McGrath which to-day took part in the reception accorded to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

DANCE TO-MORROW NIGHT.—The C.C.C. will hold a dance in the Armoury to-morrow night in aid of the brigade funds. The band will be in attendance and an enjoyable time is expected.

King George's Sword of Peace.

AN INTERESTING PEEP AT THE TREASURES OF THE ROYAL ARMOURY.

The "sword of peace" recently presented to King George by a Japanese editor is the latest addition to a collection which is said to be without a rival in the world.

In this Royal collection, of which the King is very properly proud, you will see swords of every conceivable type and form. In one case you will see an old Crusader's blade which laid many a Saracen low in Palestine seven centuries ago; and by its side, sheathed in a scabbard of purple and gold, inlaid with diamonds, rubies, and emeralds, the sword which Banadur Siraj slew himself rather than yield to his enemies on the plains of Indore, in Stuart days.

There is a Persian blade, once worn by the Rao of Cutch, with a hilt of solid gold, encrusted with diamonds, and bearing the inscription, "I was born to slay, but in me is mercy." and it has for near neighbour a scimitar with which the Maharajahs of Indore did doughty deeds in half a hundred battles centuries before Clive set foot on Indian soil.

UNNECESSARY MIGHT-HAVE-BEENS.

When you hear of a pleasure, a bargain or an opportunity of any sort which someone has missed, what do you do? Do you rush and tell him about it? Here's what a woman told me yesterday. I had been waiting for some time to buy a certain kind of a table for my summer cottage. It cost more than I wanted to pay but finally, in a moment of extravagance, I ordered it. It was to be finished in white, and to get it that way I had to wait three weeks, so I had the double dissatisfaction of having spent more money than I should have and of having no fascinating new possession to comfort me for my extravagance.

She Saw What I wanted At A Third The Price.

While I was in this state of mind a woman took pains to give me this cheerful information. "What do you suppose I saw just that kind of a table you wanted yesterday at a second-hand furniture shop, and what do you think they wanted for it?" (she named a price just a third of the one I was guilty of paying.) "Isn't it too bad you've bought yours. It would have been exactly what you wanted."

"Of course, it wasn't white," I put in hopefully, "and it would have been an awful nuisance to paint it." (I wouldn't really have minded, but I tried to comfort myself by pretending I would have.)

"Oh yes," she went on airily, "didn't I tell you it was white—that was how I happened to notice it because I knew you had been looking for a white one and had just bought yours. And when I priced it, I could hardly wait to see you to tell you about it."

Sweet of Her, Wasn't It!

Sweet of her, wasn't it? And characteristic, too. Not of her, but of the average person who falls upon such an interesting tidbit.

Once when I was a small child there was a wonderful procession that I wanted very much to see. But as we had no invitation from those with windows on the line of parade, and as there was such a violent prejudice to crowds to our family (the adult part of it) that the idea that we might see it from the street with some tens of thousands of other people was not entertained, I had to give it up. The next day we were in town and met our milliner. She spoke of the parade and then asked us if we had seen it. "What a pity!" she exclaimed at our negative reply. "Why you might just as well have seen it from our windows. We had a lovely view—we're right on the corner and we had room for half a dozen more people. What a shame I didn't know."

A Perfectly Good Parade Needlessly Lost.

That was, well, I won't tell you just how many years ago—but I can still feel the frantic regret for a perfectly good parade needlessly lost that swept over my small self that day. I suppose it was inevitable that the woman should think of us after the parade instead of before it, but it was inevitable that she must tell us about it afterwards?

Not unless the habit of not putting yourself in the other fellow's place is inevitable.

Birds Need No Compass.

Experiments recently made go to show that the so-called "sixth sense" of certain animals is a magnetic one enabling them to know instinctively the points of the compass, or at any rate the direction in which to go.

In one experiment a labyrinth of passages was constructed in metal, and so arranged that the whole business worked on a pivot, and could be turned in any desired direction.

Rats were trained to traverse this labyrinth until they could go through in a few seconds.

The contrivance was then moved through an angle of ninety-degrees, yet the rats went through in the same direction as formerly, but not, of course, through the same passages to which they were accustomed.

A blind bat was turned loose in a room across which had been stretched a number of fine threads. The bat flew in and out among these threads with as much apparent ease as if it had been in full possession of its sight.

Small birds, as we know, cross great stretches of sea, frequently flying by night. They can have no possible landmarks by which to fly, and therefore must have a wonderful sense of direction.

Necessary Evils.

"Husbands are a necessary evil—they're pretty convenient around the house sometimes."

"There is one woman who never worries about her husband. She knows perfectly well where he is and that he is out of mischief. He is dead."

"Men are what women marry. They drink, smoke, vote and swear, but never go to church. They are more logical than women and more zoological."

"Both men and women sprang from monkeys, but the women sprang farther than the men."

"Benjamin Franklin was right when he said: While lovers differ, husbands are all alike."

These are a few of the "knocks" directed at husbands by members of the Philadelphia Mothers' Club at their annual luncheon recently. While husbands seemed to be the general football, the women, nevertheless, were generous enough to throw the head of the house a compliment or two.

Buy Now!

(From the Buffalo Express.)

This is the latest advice to salaried folks and those of fixed incomes:—No matter what you need, buy now, for prices will go up before they come down. They will go higher as Europe gets into its buying power of money as shown by the lessening value of the British pound, for instance, is growing less and less. The world's credit paper currency has been increased $250,000,000 by the war. The more money there is in the world, whether credit money or money based on gold (if it circulates), the less money buy. And when you get abnormal demand in addition, prices advance. That's the theory of the warning.

THIS GOOD WORLD.

This world is good in which we dwell; I like the things that might well, and I have lived here long; as down my long life path I go I find eight joys for every woe, nine rights for every wrong. Oh, now and then there comes a day when everything seems grim and gray, and badly out of plumb; but calm reflection brings me bliss—for every rotten day like this, six happy days will come. The optimist is one who knows that joys outnumber human woes, when balances are struck; and so, with sunshine in his heart, he labors in the busy mart, and nails the busy tuc. He does not worry o'er the grief that comes to him as a relief when happiness grows stale; no man could stand unchanging bliss; a slice of grief were none for sale. The pessimist is one who'll mark a record of each day that's dark, its minutes and its hours; and he'll forget the cheerful days, when all the landscape is ablaze with sunshine and with flowers. He thinks that there are nineteen woes for every joy a mortal knows, in which he's sadly wrong; I know the good outweighs the ill, and knowledge should my counsels fill, for I have lived here long.

Revival of Novel Stations

(From the Toronto Globe.)

One result of the destruction of the German navy will be the revival of the ports of the British naval stations around the world. The Victoria Colonist hails with delight the restoration of the North Pacific Squadron, with headquarters at Esquimaux, Halifax, Bermuda, and other stations which suffered by the forced concentration of fleets in the home waters of Britain, will come to life again. The United States navy will also add its contribution to the gaiety and prosperity of many of these places. Exactly one-half of its power has been assigned to guard the Western coast, and the Vanguard has already started for the Pacific by way of Panama. The main base of this Pacific fleet will be in Puget Sound, Washington, and no doubt many opportunities will be found for an interchange of courtesies with the British Squadron at Esquimaux.

calls a ball on one that the pitcher opened was good, the pitcher thrusts out his gloved hand and impacts it against the ball with a thump that can be heard all over the field.

Curious Clubs.

The recent announcement that an English "Bald-Headed Men's Club" had just met—the first time since 1916, owing to the war—serves to recall one or two odd clubs. "The Fat Man's Club" for instance, was known to exist in Paris in 1897.

On the Right Track.

(Ladie's Home Journal.) Dr. J. M. Buckley, the Methodist divine, was asked one day to conduct an "experience meeting" at a colored church in the South.

A colored woman arose and bore witness to the preciousness of her religion as light-bringer and comfort-giver. "That's good, sister," commented Dr. Buckley. "But how about the practical side. Does your religion make you strive to prepare your husband a good dinner? Does it make you look after him in every way?"

Nfld. the Land of Enchantment.

(By Mrs. W. M. Dooley.)
 At this time of the year hundreds of Americans are making their way to that wonderful of the north, Newfoundland. The gorgeous scenery and bracing atmosphere of this favored country has cast a spell upon many globe trotters who have failed to find in other lands enjoyment of the real kind.
 It is only of late years that Newfoundland has become a resort for tourists. Its beauties for centuries have been known only to those frequenters of unbeat paths and out of the way edens, who dare any sort of danger to get away from the prosaic and the commonplace. Newfoundland is easily reached to-day by distant steam and rail and is about a week distant from Charleston. If one makes good rail connections, one can leave Charleston on Monday and arrive in St. John's on Friday. The trip by sea is most interesting. The Red Cross steamer leaves New York and stops at quaint old Halifax before proceeding to St. John's. Here one finds many things of historical interest that will take up the few hours of the tourist.
 The arrival at St. John's will prove more than interesting. The beautiful capital of Newfoundland, set as it is between hills of romantic grandeur with a wonderfully picturesque landlocked harbor, compels the admiration of all who love natural beauty. The city itself will prove a revelation. If one imagines he is going to find a mere fishing hamlet composed of shabby cottages he will be disappointed. St. John's is an up-to-date city in every respect with a business section which would do credit to a

GENUINE ASPIRIN HAS "BAYER CROSS"

Tablets without "Bayer Cross" are not Aspirin at all

Get genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in a "Bayer" package, plainly marked with the safety "Bayer Cross."
 Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" are now made in America by an American Company. No German interest whatever, all rights being purchased from the United States Government.
 During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. The "Bayer Cross" is your only way of knowing that you are getting genuine Aspirin, proved safe by millions for Headache, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for Pain generally.
 Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger sized "Bayer" packages can be had at drug stores.
 Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monocacetic Acid, of Salicylic Acid.
 The Bayer Co., Inc., U.S.A.

city of twice the size. It has imposing public buildings and two cathedrals which are architectural gems.
 The visitor will find St. John's a highly cultured community with its schools and colleges—and think of it—six daily newspapers. The people are so hospitable that no visitor is ever a stranger more than a few hours. The warm-hearted inhabitants try to make the sojourn of the tourist as pleasant as possible and succeed admirably.
 There is much to be seen in St. John's. The scenery is beautiful beyond words and the climate so bracing and life-giving that it quickly takes away every jaded feeling and replenishes one's lost energy. What a tourist who has ever rambled over picturesque Signal Hill or quaint Quidi Vidi can help recalling the pleasure of those moments. To the southerner who wants to spend a few weeks in a land where all nature runs riot, Newfoundland will especially appeal. He may go by train direct to North Sydney, N.S., where a steamer will be waiting to take him to the Newfoundland west coast, and thence over the Reid railway through wonderfully picturesque scenery, or he may go by way of New York on the Red Cross line. But whichever way is chosen he will find that trip to Newfoundland is the nearest thing to paradise which this world affords.—Charleston American.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

Of all the varieties of Scotch style herring being offered in the market at present, Newfoundland herring, although admittedly the most desirable as to size, is probably in the least demand. Whereas the consumption of this grade of herring was large during the summer months for several years and up to the fall of 1917, there has been a steady falling off in its popularity among the Jewish population of New York's East Side, and other sections of the country have had little call for it. The lack of demand for this grade of herring in New York is explainable; the price is too high. But elsewhere dealers are able to ascertain no special reason for the lack of demand. The price of Newfoundland herring this season has probably averaged lower in New York than in the past two years, in spite of the fact that fall Newfoundland herring brought very high prices at packing points last winter than in the past. New York merchants who Black suede ties are worn with afternoon dresses.

 made the pilgrimage to Newfoundland, declined in many cases to purchase at all, because of the high prices being asked by the packers. When the prices finally came down, as was predicted in the Fishing Gazette at the time packers were holding together on firm and high prices, it was found that there was no demand. Newfoundland Scotch cured herring has proven to be a poor purchase because of its quality, and the trade appears not to care whether it handled it or not. Only the good quality herring sold, the poorly packed fish bringing the market down. As the season advanced and there was no evidence of an improvement, merchants and importers simply stayed out of the market and importations from Newfoundland became fewer. As there is an established trade in Newfoundland Scotch cured herring in New York, and many will purchase it regardless, some merchants continued to hope that the depression was only temporary. But it later proved that the poor quality has materially interfered with the marketing of this variety here as well as elsewhere. Within the past few weeks reports from New-vidence that there are some 25,000 barrels yet to be shipped. This quantity, while not especially heavy, is more than sufficient to meet the requirements of New York and its environs at the present rate of consumption, while in ordinary times, with the retail price at something like a reasonable figure, it would be considered as light. There is a problem to be solved in the herring trade this year, especially in the Newfoundland herring trade, and the solution rests very largely with the packers of the Ancient Colony. Quotations in New York continue to range from $14 to $18 for good quality, while sales have been reported as low as $12, and in at least one instance a fancy lot of Newfoundland herring brought $20 per barrel.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Aug. 2.

Why It Is.

The decline in foreign exchange, Henry Claws writes, is due to the abnormal condition of foreign trade. The tremendous pressure of exports and the slow increase of imports show few symptoms of abating. "There is still much discussion about financing export trade during the present emergency, but no satisfactory plan of adjustment has yet been reached. Europe must have our food products and crude materials, or reconstruction will stop and disorder revive. For our own good as well as that of war-torn Europe, we will be obliged to send considerable of our surplus abroad on credit. No attempt at supporting sterling seems to be forthcoming; British bankers, as is their custom, preferring natural law to artificial regulation. In London banking circles there is a disposition to allow sterling exchange to fall in order to discourage imports, and thus place British export trade on a better basis. The drop in France was also due to heavy offerings of export bills."
 (From the Ontario Post.)

 "You are an hour late this morning, Sam," said a captain to his orderly.
 "Yes, sah, I know it, sah; I was kicked by a mule on my way, sah."
 "That ought not to make you late an hour, Sam."
 "Well, you see, cap'n, it wouldn't have if he'd only have kicked me in this direction, but he kicked me de other way."

Mutt and Jeff.
 (From the London Express.)
 Tomorrow the Express will introduce to England a humorist whose work is the delight of millions of his fellow-countrymen in America. The learned, the busy, the young, the old, even the illiterate, delight in Mutt and Jeff, for the pictures of these two inseparables make an irresistible appeal, even apart from the accompanying stories. What is it in Capt. "Bud" Fisher's art that gives it so wide a hold? The answer is not far to seek. He has the human touch.

Some Lucky Finds.

A few years ago a man bought for $10 from a second-hand shop in a Paris slum an old dust-begrimed picture. On being cleaned it turned out to be one of Raphael's lost masterpieces, "La Belle Jardiniere," and the lucky purchaser found no difficulty in disposing of it for $20,000.

Many wonderful bargains are recorded in connection with old books. The priceless Coverdale Bible in the British Museum Library, for instance, was bought by an amateur book collector from a butcher who was delighted and astonished on being offered ten shillings for it. He was about to use its valuable leaves to wrap up his meat.

Humor of the Country.

(From Farm and Home.)

The worthy couple sat side by side on the broad doorstep, looking as miserable as sheep in a hailstorm. A neighbor asked why they were so sad, in view of the fact that the sun shone brightly, and all the world seemed gay.

"Alas!" they answered, "we have been gardening. Both of us are somewhat absent-minded and after thinking it over we fear that Matilda has planted the liver pills and Henry has taken the sweet peas. However, we are not absolutely sure about it, and it's the uncertainty that hurts."

Gigantic Raft.

NOVEL FREIGHTING METHOD. 2,000,000 feet of Lumber to be towed Across Atlantic From Bonne Bay.

North Sydney, Aug. 5.—The large ocean going tug Humber arrived in port for bunkers a few days ago. The Humber, built expressly for heavy ocean towing, is a craft of 15,000 horse power, owned by a firm of world-wide towing reputation in Rotterdam, Holland. In company with a sister tug the Zulder Zee the Humber a few years ago brought over the great floating dock from England to Montreal, which floating marvel laid in this port for a few days at the time of its transit. The Humber proceeded to Bonne Bay, Newfoundland last night and will tow from there the great trans-Atlantic timber raft or shipless cargo invented by Mr. Ivan A. Bayley of this town. Supervised by the Montreal, Mr. Bayley, this shipless cargo or Bayley raft was built with very simple appliances at Bonne Bay. It consists of a huge cargo of pit timber neatly docked, a new method invented by Mr. Bayley during the war, for the purpose of rendering such cargo torpedo-proof, and indestructible, it is built with mild steel rods for binding and is welded at its many joints, so that it is impossible to disintegrate or break apart with such a venture has been undertaken. The construction and transportation of lumber and timber in this way marks a new era in trans-Atlantic freight which will immediately go far towards cheapening the high freights of to-day. Four hundred years ago the first ship, with Columbus, sailed across the Atlantic; one hundred years ago the first steamer, the "Savannah" made her epoch making voyage from Savannah to Liverpool; a month ago man flew across the Atlantic and now the first huge freight cargo is to cross without ship.

The raft contains some two million feet board measure and is 250 feet long, 44 feet beam and 25 feet deep. It is built in a regular vessel shape with tapering stern, and the bow is smoothly planked, to render towing easy.

Landed safely across the Atlantic the raft is worth approximately a quarter of a million dollars. It is expected that the time for towing this big raft across the Atlantic will occupy about 20 days, and it is the first time that such a venture has been undertaken. The construction and transportation of lumber and timber in this way marks a new era in trans-Atlantic freight which will immediately go far towards cheapening the high freights of to-day. Four hundred years ago the first ship, with Columbus, sailed across the Atlantic; one hundred years ago the first steamer, the "Savannah" made her epoch making voyage from Savannah to Liverpool; a month ago man flew across the Atlantic and now the first huge freight cargo is to cross without ship.

(The raft to which the above article refers, has been under course of construction by the St. Lawrence Lumber and Pulp Company, Stanleyville, Bonne Bay, for two years, and was taken in tow by the tug Humber last week for this long trip. Now comes the unfortunate news that disaster has overtaken it, the following message having been received by the Marine and Fisheries Department yesterday: "North Sydney, via Cape Ray—Following report from Dutch tug Humber, Aug. 10th, 4 a.m. Seventh part of raft props broke adrift at 49 N. lat., 48.50 W. long; mast and light standing in it; it was breaking up when last sighted.

(Sgd.) VERSCHOOR, Master."

Thus has another great enterprise met with misfortune at the outset. Such a prodigious undertaking was never before attempted and it is too bad that ill luck has brought to grief one of the greatest of marine projects. Rafts of timber have been towed distances on the North Atlantic and Pacific coasts, but the feat of taking one across the Western Ocean was never before contemplated, until the St. Lawrence Company undertook it. Many will remember the great Juggins Raft which went adrift from its tow and was broken up some years ago.)

Some Astounding Figures.

In the course of a review of the work of the British Ministry of Munitions during the war Mr. Kellaway gave some astounding figures which have never been given before. For example, he revealed the British losses in material during the German offensive of the spring of 1913. They were:

- 1,000 guns.
- 70,000 tons of ammunition.
- 4,000 machine guns.
- 200,000 rifles.
- 700 trench mortars.
- 200 tanks.

Yet within a fortnight all had been replaced, and often with superior weapons. On the day that the Hindenburg line was broken through British guns fired 943,000 shells more than had been fired during the whole of the South African war. Other figures given were hardly less stupendous. Fifteen thousand tons of poison gas were supplied in 1918 alone, and Mr. Kellaway claimed that the offensive powers of British poison gas were quite equal to those of the German gas, and that our anti-gas apparatus was far ahead of any other.

THE GENTLER SPEECH.

Talk in the language of friendship and walk through the world as a friend.

Don't set yourself up as too big to be kind, with nothing whatever to lend.

The soft spoken word is the surest, the speech that is gentle is best. And the arrogant voice of displeasure and pride is nothing but hatred confessed.

Don't snarl at the stranger who greets you, he may be a friend in disguise.

The boy that comes into your office to-morrow to greatness may rise. And he shall remember your manner the day that he called upon you, and know from the tone of your greeting your worth and your character too.

Talk in the language of friendship, the greatest of men can be kind. Be patient with youth that is trying. Complaint is so easy to find. That men of the big vision scorn it, and set men that have come to their best.

Give never an arrogant order, but gently and softly request.

Talk in the language of friendship and walk in the way of a friend. We shall all look for kindness and mercy when the struggle called living shall end.

And it's easy to win men to service, and easy their friendship to reach.

If only you're kindly of manner and gentle and thoughtful in speech.

DISEASED GUMS AND TEETH.

Of all the poisons taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by the diseased gums and teeth are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and it allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.
