The Assembly Election. The general election for the Legislative Assembly of the Province of New Brunswick took place in all the constituencies excepting that of Gloucester last Saturday.

Election Echoes. The ADVANCE would like to find a better temper prevailing among the leading friends of the gentlemen of the opposition ticket and, indeed, two of the latter might well cultivate a spirit in keeping with that of the leaders of the government party.

The editor of the World goes very far in his unfairness to those whom he opposes. He has the right to express any opinion he pleases editorially, but when he is courteously permitted to sit, uninvited, at the reporters' table in a meeting, and friends of a party he opposes, even the crudest sense of decency ought to restrain him from attributing statements not made, to speakers.

It will, therefore, be seen that Premier Tweedie's administration has met with most loyal support and approval throughout the province, and but for the unfortunate tax paid in Charlotte County by an attempt on the part of certain leaders in both of the federal parties to effect an extraordinary compromise for the purpose of avoiding a contest, and the practical buying up of two large parishes in Northumberland, chiefly in the supposed interest of one of Canada's biggest monetary institutions, Mr. Hazen would have had but three supporters to lead in the New House.

The attention of our readers is directed to the significant and suggestive returns from the parishes of Alnwick and Hardwick in this country. In both of these the government side has taken no unusual precautions to guard against fraud, and the opposition forces, having been well organized for the purpose beforehand, practically captured the polls and the most open bribery and persuasion. Take the Tabusintac poll for instance—Mr. Morrison of the opposition who received 101 votes there in 1899, got 227 or Saturday, and his colleagues did equally as well. There was no talking off of the government candidates this time. It is, however, obvious that fully more than 100 of the opposition votes were fraudulent. The conditions were similar at the Barrat Church poll and at that of Hardwick. These are comparatively out of the way places in winter, and favorable ground for the working out of such a scheme as that which the Northumberland opposition party have tried. Alnwick and Alnwick, never polled such a vote in their history, and when it is remembered that the day was a stormy one, with the roads almost impassable, the fraudulent character of the opposition voting in all, in view of the polling returns. It goes without saying that the town of Chatham, where the voters had much better facilities for getting to the polls—for travel was fairly good on the streets and nearby roads—ought to have polled as high a percentage of its votes as such parishes as Hardwick; yet Hardwick polled eighty-two percent of the names on its list, while Chatham polled only fifty-seven percent. Alnwick was a good second to Hardwick in its percentage polled, while the polling was normal in all the other parishes. Three of the government candidates were elected in the other eleven parishes of the county, but the fraudulent votes of Alnwick and Hardwick defeated two of them, and it is a wonder that even the Premier was not sacrificed also on the golden altar set up in behalf of the opposition in those remote but populous parishes.

The defeat of Mr. Mott in Restigouche is a tribute to the sturdy good sense of the electors of that county. Mr. Mott was one of the voters of the members of the late House. He supported the government and, perhaps, had fair claims on the speaker'ship, which he wanted. Another gentleman, however, was preferred by the government supporters for the position. That squire Mr. Mott somewhat, and seemed to inspire him with the notion that he must be compensated by having any other thing he desired done for him. He made it manifest that he wanted a large lumber operation, which he supported him, to be allowed to evade the payment of stumpage on some 5,000,000 feet of logs. Failing in this and realising that if he broke with the government over it he would be judged accordingly, he next demanded that an injustice be done to the Muskoka Land Company by the cancellation of some of their leases, in the interest of one of his clients. When the government refused, he invented the "Muskoka scandal" and went over to Mr. Hazen. The fact that he has barely saved his deposit will teach him and his imitators that they cannot mislead the people by resort to the unjustifiable methods he adopted. If Mr. Mott intends to remain in public life, he must learn to serve the interests of the people, and not prefer to promote his own interests and those of a few of his more influential friends.

Party politics do not enter into the contest—the election is between the provincial government and provincial opposition. The premier and his associates are liberal candidates in some counties and conservative candidates in others. The opposition candidates belong to both parties. Federal issues are not involved as shown by the declarations of the premier and his liberal and conservative will therefore rely solely on the question of retaining office. The premier's declaration is "I am in this contest for the Tweedie administration."—St. John Globe.

They have, doubtless, so voted and administered their customary rebuke to the Globe. The Tweedie government has a majority of 28 members to say in the House of Assembly that they do not have business necessary to get down to the level and meet them on their own ground. This is why we shall, until they learn a better way, be obliged to carry on political discussions, not in their way exactly, but with whatever weapons the interests of truth will justify.

The editor of the World goes very far in his unfairness to those whom he opposes. He has the right to express any opinion he pleases editorially, but when he is courteously permitted to sit, uninvited, at the reporters' table in a meeting, and friends of a party he opposes, even the crudest sense of decency ought to restrain him from attributing statements not made, to speakers.

"There is nothing gained," said Mr. Tweedie, "by attempting to bulldoze, by trying to choke off opposition or by discrediting, by trying to cut the electorates by the throat."

The editor of the World, ejaculated that he did not know anything about it, or what the Bank did.

"Mr. Stewart: I'll tell you what I know after you are done speaking."

Another of Mr. Stewart's misrepresentations of the words of a speaker is as follows: "Mr. R. A. Lawlor stabbed his friend and leader, Premier Tweedie, under the fifth rib, to the astonishment of everybody, when he told the Montreal audience that the legislation which the Maritime Fibre Co. secured, to enable it to issue bonds, and the subsequent bond issue, were fraudulent."

The hundreds of persons who heard Mr. Lawlor know that what he said was that the Bank of Montreal made the offer of the legislation referred to was fraudulent.

men in a house of forty six who will say Mr. Tweedie's government is just what they want.

The same paper said: "Gloucester will elect three liberals. That is sure—Telegraph. But Mr. Tweedie's Chatham organ is supporting the other three."

The World endeavored, on Saturday, to create the impression that Mr. Tweedie had done something "cowardly" and, he intimated to Mr. W. C. Winslow, who introduced upon the Masonic Hall platform at the government rally on Friday evening, that he was out of place there.

The ADVANCE said on 12th January: "It is hardly within the range of possibility that one half of the opposition candidates can be elected, but even if they were Mr. Hazen would have only twelve followers in a house of forty-six."

"It is the legislature at Fredericton that has been dissolved, and it is the Tweedie-Pugsley government that is on in its stead."—St. John Globe.

Some of the election workers who were in Hardwick and Alnwick are positive that the package of opposition candidates which went from Chatham to those parishes to be used on polling day in brother Loggie's interest, did not contain dry goods.

The editor of the World denies in his paper that he said it. But he did say it, all the same. It was this way: Mr. Tweedie was referring, in Masonic Hall, on Monday evening, 23rd, to pulp mill matters and the Bank of Montreal, concerning which the World had not certain statements, and he gave his version of the facts. When he had done so he asked the manager of the Bank, who was present, to stand up and deny the truth of his statements, if he could. The manager, however, said nothing.

"Everybody knows that Mr. Stewart made no attempt to 'tell what he knew'; in fact, he was nervous and in no condition to speak, as anybody near him could plainly see. It is said that he recovered sufficiently next day and afterwards to repeat in a school a few days ago, some of the things he was instructed to say. No doubt when he meets the premier he will again apologise and say 'he doesn't know.'"

What a pity a photograph of Messrs. W. C. Winslow, P. Desmond, Philip Cox and P. Campbell Johnson, struggling for a perch on the Montreal Trust Company's packing box last Friday night, could not have been taken and preserved as an object lesson in campaign politics for the people of the public schools!

Premier Hazen should salute the country through our eyes with 25 to 30 supporters at his back.

The value of opposition predictions of results of elections, is well illustrated in the following from the Sun's evening edition before the election: "Judging from reports all over the province, we believe that the most blinded partisans can fall to see that never was government so certain of success as the present Tweedie-Pugsley administration tomorrow."

The World endeavored, on Saturday, to create the impression that Mr. Tweedie had done something "cowardly" and, he intimated to Mr. W. C. Winslow, who introduced upon the Masonic Hall platform at the government rally on Friday evening, that he was out of place there.

where there are four running on the government ticket, and one or two in St. John county, and there are 27 or 30 areas which the opposition is confident of carrying.

Let's see: The actual results were as follows:—St. John City, 4, St. John county 2—all for the Government. Carleton, 1; Charlotte, 2; Northumberland 1; Madawaska, 2; Restigouche, 2; Westmorland, 4; Kings, 3; Vanonia, 2; York, 4; Queens, 2; Albert, 2; Gloucester, 3; Kent, 3—all Government, showing that the evening report is as unreliable as the Sun's morning edition.

A leproxy cure is again announced:—Mr. McWade, United States consul at Canton, reports that an "American" physician, Dr. Adolf Raup, has discovered means of curing and exterminating that dread disease, and has put it into practice near Canton. It consists of minute and prolonged sanitations and the use of highly antiseptic drugs.

Arrangements are being made for members of the House of Lords and Commons to visit Canada at the end of August. It is probable that two special steamers will be chartered. The plan is to arrive at Quebec and visit the various parts of the coast and back to Halifax. The project is endorsed and supported by the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Strathcona and Lord Lyndoch, who are arranging for members of both houses to join the party.

Alfred Juley a property owner has been charged at Chatham, England with unlawfully taking a pensioner's certificate as a security for a loan. It transpired that a pensioner named Stone borrowed £3 of the defendant sixteen years ago, on the understanding that he was to pay 10s a year for every pound, and defendant took possession of his pension pass at £21 for the loan of £3. The stipendiary magistrate sentenced Juley to three months' hard labor.

Sir Thomas Shinghessy confirms the statement that fourteen steamers of the Elmer Despatch line have been purchased by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The following is a list of the steamers:—Lake Manitoba, Lake Michigan, Montreal, Lake Champlain, Milwaukee, Lake Erie, Mount Royal, Montfort, Montserrat, Montserrat, Montserrat. The price paid is between seven and eight millions dollars. It is understood that these boats will go into commission under the new management when the St. Lawrence navigators open.

It is understood that Mr. A. Thur Piers, the general superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, will let the contract for the three fast Atlantic liners, which is said on the highest authority to have been decided upon by the Government in the matter of a subsidy to the extent of $750,000.

A Sydney, N. S., despatch of Feb. 25th says:—"William Desnoes, aged 19, a native of Newfoundland, had a terrible death at the blast furnace to-day. He was laying bricks on a platform when some metal was poured, a portion of which fell on him. In attempting to avoid it he leaped some forty feet into the slag pit, which was full of molten slag. When taken out a few seconds later his body was almost burned to a cinder."

APRIL EPIPHANY OR BLINDFOLD ON THE BRINK OF PRECIPICES

CHAPTER XIX. After a while I asked her what happened upon the fatal night that we lost her - how she came to be separated from us. She told me that a rush of people had suddenly impelled her forward and that by the time she could turn her head to look round, she found that she had been carried out of sight of Mrs. Wilson. At that moment a young man, evidently the same who had delivered Montgomery's message to me, touched her upon the shoulder, and said that he was waiting for her in a little way down the street, and that he would look after her, and then run back and fetch Mrs. Wilson. He was hurrying me along all the time, and I was too bewildered by my situation to offer the slightest resistance. Thus, without a word of cab and carriage, the one he pointed out as ours was the last of all, and stood up an untroubled street. He opened the door and pushed me in; at the same moment a strange man jumped in past me, the door was slammed, the windows rained, and the horses were off at full speed, before I could recover my breath. From her description I discovered that this man who accompanied her was Montgomery. "I am such a poor, nervous creature - so wretchedly destitute of all presence of mind - that I could only crouch in a corner and sob with terror."

ways moving my lodgings, to escape questions, and sometimes insults. "And how did you obtain employment?" I asked. "Well, people had always praised my drawings and paintings and needlework very much. When I first came to London I used to be very fond of wandering through the streets and looking at the great shops. Seeing such things exposed for sale suggested the idea of offering some of my own work. I found a ready sale, and so I have gone on ever since. And now you know my history."

"Have you seen your Cousin John since you have been in this house?" I inquired. "Yes," she answered, shuddering. "This evening, as I was sitting at the window watching the sunset, I heard my door open, and there, standing upon the threshold, I turned and saw him and that awful woman. I screamed with terror, and then the room seemed to swim round, and almost in a moment I found myself alone."

"What did you do?" I asked. "Cousin John pretended to be very much in love with me, and proposed that we should marry. He was so earnest, and so full of promises, that I had no time to think of anything else. He had come from my grandfather, who was very angry at my flight, and he was so full of promises, that I had no time to think of anything else. He had come from my grandfather, who was very angry at my flight, and he was so full of promises, that I had no time to think of anything else."

"One question more, dearest - what did you mean by the woman, say to you?" "Not a word," she kept in the background of the whole thing, merely listening to what passed. But what madness it is to stop talking here, she cried nervously, when you have come to take me away! Oh, do not let us lose another moment. Come to take her away. She little thought that I was a double-brothered prisoner in that house. But if an attempt is made to force me out, I will make, there was no time to lose; the nurse below might walk at any moment and discover what was going on. A night-taper and some matches were upon the table. I lit the one, and put the other in my pocket. Then, on tip-toe, she clinging close to me, I advanced to the door, turned the key, opened it, and stepped out. Right in our path, holding a night-cap in her hand, arrayed in a long, loose, black wrapper, she stood before us, her untrammelled masses of red hair, her glittering eyes full upon our faces, stood just before us. (To Be Continued.)

THAT OLD PAIN AGAIN. Gnauling, Piercing Pains that Almost Make You Scream. It is your old enemy, rheumatism, come again with the winter to torture you. These pains, remember, are caused by bad blood and not by any other cause. Rubbing with liniments and outward lotions, but cannot get rid of them. Your ailments are scattered over the meadows now. Vegetables were raised and patches of snow lay on the ground. Lake George in those days that the herders really had a feeling of security. The water was so warm, and the large forms of animal life, just as fish and water fowl were at later seasons.

THE PASSING OF THE BEARD. Nothing is presently plainer in a world that loves little mysteries, and likes to keep the observer in a state of ruminating suspense, than the fact that it is beginning to shave again. It has always been so, and it will be so, ever since beards came in some fifty years ago, after a banishment of nearly two centuries from at least the Anglo-Saxon face. During all the time since the early eighteenth century, the beard has been the common rather than the rule. The razor has not been suffered to rest in disuse; most physiologists in obedience to the prevalent fashion, or the social caprice of the wagers of hair upon the face, where nature has put it for reasons still of her own. For one man who let nature have her way unquestioned by the steel, there have been ninety-nine who have modified her design. Some have shaved all but a little spot on the upper lip; others have continued the imperial growth there into the point of goat's beard; some have worn the chin-beard, square cut from the corners of the lips, which has become the alien designation distinctive of the American beard; others have shaved the chin, and let the moustache branch across the cheeks to meet the flowing fringe of the side-whiskers shaped to the likeness of a antelope's horns, the most of all have shaved the whole face except the upper lip, and worn the moustache alone. All these fragmentary forms of beard caricatured the human countenance, and reduced it more or less to a ridiculous blank. I went back to my own shaving, and the honest visages of various sorts of animals. They robbed it of the dignity which is the privilege of the clean-shaven face, and of the dignity which the full beard imparted to the face of a man.

There are three brothers in Great Britain who brew a million barrels of beer a year, and I have known a million and a half between half a million and a million. FREE ALKALI. There are few women in Canada who have not heard of "free alkali," but there are many who do not understand the term. The term is always used in connection with soap, and any think it is meant to convey that it is a cheap given free with the soap, but it does not mean that. A soap containing free alkali is a soap in the making of which such a quantity of the alkali is used that it is not properly incorporated with the fatty acids used in the making of soap. Such a soap is most injurious to the clothing, rendering them liable to excrement, make the fabric brittle and crisp off. Such a soap does not possess through cleaning properties. The difference between a soap containing free alkali and a neutral soap is easily tested. Sunlight Soap is a neutral soap, and no woman who uses it should be troubled for any time with satisfaction going back to any of the common laundry soaps on the market. Compliments about the hands and the clothes are unknown where Sunlight Soap is used.

THE CROCUS. On mountains the crocus Ere hollows he clear In the bed of the snowdrift Brightly he appears Aloft the pure crocus, Born under the snow In the get a true trampling. All bare to his glow - Like the heart of the woman who listens - To love in the forests below. -Harper's Weekly.

LAKE GEORGE IS MISSING LARGEST IN NEW SOUTH WALES HAS DISAPPEARED. Succumbs to the Great Drought and Its Entire Bed is in View. The latest news about the great drought in New South Wales, is that the lake entirely dry since 1849, 50 years ago. The total drying up of water from the Pacific Ocean, though not so terribly parched as those of New South Wales, Victoria and Queensland, is nevertheless a serious matter. Lake George is often affected by variations in the rainfall. The lake has always been a source of water for a series of years the brooks that empty into the lake, and the water level of the lake may steadily contribute to it a larger quantity of water than is evaporated from its surface. Then the lake steadily rises. The water pushes north and south, and the level of the lake is raised a mile or more in length, with a width of seven or eight miles. The water is then carried to the sea by the brooks that are scattered over the meadows now. Vegetables were raised and patches of snow lay on the ground. Lake George in those days that the herders really had a feeling of security. The water was so warm, and the large forms of animal life, just as fish and water fowl were at later seasons.
