

"LIMBUROE." On a tree there was a crow. In his bill a clank of cheese. On the ground a fox below. Said, "Bene mio, my pleasure. You are a beautiful of wing. And I let that you can sing. Chased by dropper, the crow sang, and dropped the cheese below. Then the cunning fox did seize To the fallen clank of cheese: And he scolded the crow with scorn. When they pat you on the back, When they say that you're on the track, When they say they're on the track, And have been obliged to run. When their compliments denote You are going for your vote, You can do as you please, But you'd better watch your cheese.

THE PRETTY MARKET GIRL. Dear me! I'm sure I don't know what to do. If ever anybody was in a fix I'm in one now. "What is it, my dear? Can't I help you out of your fix?" "Sakes alive! no, Lottie dear, you can't help me one bit." "Now, don't say that, Lottie. I'm quite certain I can be of service to you if you will only allow me. Why, I've been here a whole week, and I've washed, but I don't wash, and I'm quite as useless as the stuffed owl that is perched above the book case that is in the library, and a great deal more in the way."

"Don't you ever notice those four largest turkeys in Colonel Ormsby's?" her aunt called after her. "Oh, no; but you haven't told me where he lives," said Lottie, drawing rein and waiting for the information. "I declare I don't know where he does live; but you can inquire at the market where you are to deliver the rest. It's somewhere in the north part of the city, not a great way from the market, and they'll be likely to know him there."

"I think I can find it," replied Lottie, and drove off at a brisk pace. "In due time she returned in the city and drew up rein before the market. Explaining the cause of her coming, she delivered the articles intended for the sale, and then inquired for the residence of Colonel Ormsby. "I cannot tell you, Miss," replied the proprietor; but if you'll step into that little restaurant on the corner there, I think you will obtain the desired information."

"I don't know myself, Miss, but if you will wait a few minutes I'll go and ask one of the girls that used to work there. Again Lottie hesitated. She disliked the idea of remaining here even for a few minutes. What if her acquaintances should chance to pass, and looking in, recognize her there?" "Seeing she hesitated, the girl said:— "If you don't like to wait here, you can step into the sitting room."

"What on earth do you mean, child?" she managed to say. "I will go to the market and deliver the turkeys, butter and eggs myself. Now, don't say one word, Lottie, as she continued, as her good aunt elevated her hands, rolled up her eyes and opened her mouth, as if to give vent to emphatic "Oh!" "Don't say one word, the idea just came into my mind, and I am determined to go—if you will allow me," she added demurely.

"What, you! the heiress and daughter of Judge Haines? You, the belle of the city, going to market with turkeys, butter and eggs—of all things! "Yes, Lottie, I am going, and I am just as well as none of you. Now, don't oppose me, will you? that's a dear good girl."

"Where did you get that?" she cried, rising and coming toward her with a look upon her face, which made him appear actually lustrous and repulsive. "What do you see that you look so alarmed? I will not harm you; come here and give me a kiss."

introduced him in the quietest, almost unperceived manner. Dr. Sangster announced in the column that it was his intention to take such steps as would satisfy his fellow-teachers of the authenticity of a document purporting to be a confession of adultery on the part of Dr. Sangster. He also stated addressing the editor of the Globe:—"Ultimately I shall probably afford you an ample opportunity of proving or disproving your base allegations in this matter."

Up to this moment, Dr. Sangster had refused to meet his pledge, and we presume he has no intention of making any further statement of the circumstances attending his divorce and second marriage. We have charged Dr. Sangster with grave offenses not unworthy of his conduct as Chief of the Normal School created scandal, we refused to give any public reference to it. In the hope that the authorities of the establishment would remove him, we committed to the press the story of his second marriage, and we trusted that the matter would be buried in oblivion. It was with the utmost astonishment that we found him a candidate for a seat in the Council of Public Instruction. There are several persons in this city who know all the particulars of his private life, and we determined not to permit his election without making the circumstances known to the public. Several communications were sent to us for publication, and we placed in the position not merely of keeping silent ourselves, but of suppressing the complaints of others, persons of respectable character, who desired to record their protest against Dr. Sangster's admission to the chief education of the Province. It seemed to us a duty, which we could by no means escape, to allow the public to know the details of his private life, and to print charges so serious in nature, without being full cognizant of the evidence in which the statements were made. Dr. Sangster had abandoned the contest and taken refuge in private life. He has now, in all probability, returned to his home in the country, and we are placing the facts before the public in order to prevent the repetition of such a scandalous proceeding. The Government has the privilege of appointing a full half of the Council of Public Instruction, and will undoubtedly control the character of that body. turner of his wife's youth and the mother of his seven children from his house upon the plea that she excited himself against him by complaining of his conduct, drives her in poverty to the States, and, after he had married another and a younger woman, makes charges against her moral character without one single title of evidence to support them. We repeat what we have said before, that we believe Mr. Sangster's statement that she never signed the paper which Dr. Sangster alleges she did. We challenge its production. At a meeting held in Goderich last week, some questions were put to Dr. Sangster, to which he made replies. A report will be found elsewhere. He was asked, "Have you any evidence that the document which 'it is asserted is a forgery is valid'?" and he answered:—"I present you with a letter of the Hon. John Hillyard Cameron, saying that he is the gentleman who was witness of that document."

Not many years ago a clergyman of one of the streets of a neighboring city—a man eminent for his piety and learning—had a daughter, a girl of unusual beauty and charm of manner. Much of the story tells itself in those facts. The child was no doubt carefully taught, and tenderly loved. Father and mother gave her the love, mother and mother, too, as the wisest of fathers and mothers will do, were scarcely glad of her beauty, and prophesied a fairer future for her from it. Why should they not? The world has no future fairer than that before a woman, young and good and beautiful. There is no scepter with rule so absolute and and sure as rose-tinted cheek and brilliant eye—no royalty that gives so prompt and keen a pleasure to its possessor. When it belongs to a woman, a boy, the nephew of the Count, is loved, and from daily work for him, a young man, Father and Mother, it matters little whether the home be poor or rich. Her happiness is founded on a rock. The girl went into a home, where she was, we have every reason to believe, loved and guarded from temptation. How temptation came first, or how she fell is not worth the telling now even if any know. It is enough to say that, with the teaching of her youth and her father's prayers before her, she came to a brilliant life of proficiency and crime, married and was divorced once or twice, dragged into the courts the men whom she alleged had wronged her, was known in this city and many others as a woman of exceptional charm and reputation in Europe, and finally, having obtained a divorce from her husband, she fled to Paris with the jewels he had stolen, and is there now. The whole story of the fair woman makes a romance as brilliant and dramatic as ever fell from the pen of a French novelist; her beauty has made herself felt in every country; she has grasped at different times power and position.

We have no wish to dull the dramatic story into a tedious sermon. But what is the end of it after all? What are the wages which today she finds she has been paid for her services? No matter all the world of a thief and a Magdalen, and the stolen jewels in her hand, we have no intention to join in the hue and cry. God knows what claims she has for mercy. We only wish to say, there are the wages, and none better are ever paid for such service. No matter how low the promise of sin, the score at the last foot up the same.—N. Y. Tribune.

A WOMAN WALKS ACROSS THE CONTINENT. From the Toronto Republican. A woman passed through Truette at 5 o'clock yesterday morning who has walked the entire distance from Kansas City. She has followed the railroad track closely and has been some fifty days making the trip. Nearly every conductor who accompanied her on the road, and Truette has observed her as she passed on their respective trains. She was very reticent in conversation, but claimed to have a recent husband somewhere in California, whom she was seeking. Numerous offers were made to her to accompany her on the trip, but she peremptorily refused. She declined trusting herself to the dangers and uncertainties of railway travel, and walked every step of the way.

A Gallant Reporter Kills His Assassin. LOCAL.—HE KILLS ONE RUPIAN AND WOUNDS ANOTHER. About one o'clock this morning, as Mr. Joseph S. Barnhart, local reporter of the Visburg Times, was returning home he was accosted near the corner of Washington and Crawford streets, by a large muscular looking individual who said in a gruff and determined tone, "Young man, I want you." As he said this, he aimed a blow at Mr. Barnhart with a large edged, which the assailed gentleman dodged just in time to save his life, at the same time striking the assassin a blow between the eyes with his fist and knocked him down. Mr. Barnhart then took the stick, and raising it above his head, he held it over the assassin's head, and he was struck on the forehead and fell to the ground. He was not so unconscious, however, though the severe blow on the forehead, which was inflicted by the assassin, and fired, the ball passing through the villain's left eye and killing him instantly. As he fell the man said, "I'm a dead man, finish him Jack." The party addressed had meantime risen to his feet, and was rushing upon Mr. Barnhart with the stick, which he had again secured, when a bullet from Mr. Barnhart's pistol caused him to fall, exclaiming, "I'm killed. Captain Edwards and Sergeant Hoffman came running down the street at that moment, and secured the wounded assassin whom they took to the workhouse. Several citizens were attracted by the shooting, and some of them assisted Barnhart into Charlie Wheeler's carriage, and took him to his room in the Times' building, while others removed the body of the dead man to Mr. Arnold's undertaking establishment. The wounded man gave himself as Jack Allen, who will be remembered as the notorious Chicago and St. Louis highway robber. He said the dead man's name was Raggio, a Spaniard, who had a very bad reputation in New Orleans. Mr. Barnhart is seriously though not dangerously wounded, having an ugly gash on the right side of the back of the head. He is now lying in his room in the Times' building, and is able to converse with his friends.

A Peoria man across the morning after a storm, and found his dog kennel buried under a drift as high as a church. He worked half an hour to dig his dog out, and then went down to his dog's den, and after he had done so, added, "A merciful man is merciful to his beast." But after he left home the neighbors saw his wife and daughter shoveling out paths through the snow and carrying in coal.

At the Edinburgh Police Court on Friday last, a man named George Pentland, Upper Grey street, was charged with having on several occasions since the beginning of last month kept poultry, to the annoyance of Dr. Thomson Lorne, Minto street. The Doctor deposed that Mr. Pentland had for some time kept a number of cocks, the crowing of which had become a nuisance to the neighborhood. In defence, a gentleman living next door to the defendant stated that he had never been disturbed by any noise the bird had made. The Sheriff held that the fact of the defendant having complained of sufficient proof, and ordered Mr. Pentland to find caution to the extent of £1, or go to jail for one day.

A Constabulary despatch of the 20th instant says that the Kars, a Turkish vessel bound for Salonica, was run into on Friday in the Sea of Marmora, by the Baha, an Egyptian vessel, and was sunk. Of the 340 souls on board the Kars, 220 are reported to have been drowned.

The Indiana farmers can tell a demagogic speech as quickly as a pig-weld from a pumpkin vine. And at their reform meeting they resolved to pull the former and cultivate the latter a little more than previously. It is no wonder the political jockeys and adventurers don't take sides in the farmers' organizations. They don't complain to be heard if they can have the reward of it, but have a deep-dated repugnance to being turned out to grass.

SMALL-POX DISARMED. SIR.—Some 18 months ago I called your attention to the discovery of a distinguished German doctor in reference to the use of common vinegar as a prophylactic in treatment of small-pox. His report of its successful use in Austria, Sillesia, where the disease was epidemic in its worst form, among a rude and improvident peasantry, was wonderful. Relying on the well-authenticated report of Dr. Roth, I resolved to put his instructions into practice as soon as an opportunity presented. I also urged others among the faculty to give it a trial, but I regret to say without effect. In private practice I have only had two opportunities to test its efficacy, and the results were excellent. In the case of a patient with small-pox, eight adults were exposed to the contagion constantly. None took the disease, and the patient recovered. In another family of six, the vinegar was used with similar good results, and a satisfactory result was the degree of fright and horror among the exposed that was well calculated to insure attack, and even fatality. The dose advised by Dr. Roth was two table-spoonfuls of common vinegar for an adult, and a half that quantity for a child of a feeble person, repeated every morning and evening for fourteen days after exposure. I substituted raspberry vinegar, as being more palatable and equally efficient, provided it was made of good pure vinegar.

In the last report of proceedings of the Medical Society of Maryland (1874) I observed that a paper read before that body on the subject of small-pox, and highly commended as able and exhaustive, closes with the remark that "of all the various methods of treatment of this most loathsome disease, none have given such satisfactory results as the so-called vinegar cure." If so simple a means of prevention is effective, as I and others have found it, I trust the faculty and the public will give it a fair trial.

On Sunday, the 31st May, as the steamer Dakota was passing through Goose Rapids on her way to Winnipeg, a little girl, daughter of Mr. George Waite, of this city, on her way to that place with her family, fell from the aft part of the cabin deck into the river. On the hurricane deck were some eight or nine prisoners in irons going to stand their trial at the U. S. District Court at Pembina. One of these named Geo. Waite, on seeing the child fall, sprang overboard, hand-dive as he was, and succeeded in reaching the struggling child and sustaining it against fearful odds, more than once the seething waters closing over both man and child. The engines were promptly stopped, a boat lowered, and succeeded in saving both of them. The scene on board was enough to unnerve the stoutest heart, both the mother of the child and the wife of the prisoner being on board, and the providential saving of the noble rescuer and the child called forth feelings which were manifested in many an eye. The iron that bound the prisoner's wrists were immediately removed by order of the U. S. Marshal, and a change of clothing provided for him. Subsequently a purse of over $60, taken up by Mr. G. Douglas, of Coonawago, was presented to him, accompanied by a testimonial signed by upwards of 50 of the officers and passengers on board, expressing their admiration at his heroic conduct in the rescuing the child from certain death at the imminent risk of his own life.

A THOBT FIT.—A short time since, two young ladies, well known, were holding high converse over the virtues of a certain new dress. "And does it fit well?" asked one. "Fit? As if I'd been melted and poured in."

A LITTLE SIX-YEAR OLD daughter of a Rutland gentleman watched Bartram's street parade with great interest and finally said to her papa, "If I wa'n't a minister's little girl I could go to the circus; but I suppose I must act as an example to the whole church now."

A FRIGHTENED "PUDDING."—Last week while a policeman in one of our coast towns was unsuccessfully endeavoring to arouse a somewhat uncooperative votary of Bacchus, a well-known undertaker passed with a straightening-board. He stopped, and remarked to the policeman, "I'm afraid I'm rather soon, but he's no right dead." The inebriate bearing the remark, and seeing the straightening-board before him, immediately sprang on his feet, and ran off at full speed.

A SINGULAR WILL.—In June, 1828, the London papers recorded the singular case of an English testator, named Garland, who bequeathed the following clause:—"I bequeath to my wife, my dear and amiable Jacky" the sum of £10 sterling per annum, to be employed for his sole and exclusive use and benefit; to my faithful dog Shock, and my well beloved cat Tib, a pension of £5 sterling, and I desire that, in case of the death of either of them, the lapsid pension shall pass to the other two, between whom it is to be equally divided. On the death of the whole three the sum appropriated to this purpose should become the property of my daughter Gertrude, to whom I give this preference among my children, because of the large family she has, and the difficulty she finds in bringing them up.

RECIPROCITY. CONTENTS OF THE PROPOSED RECIPROCAL TREATY BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, AS PRESENTED TO THE U. S. SENATE, WASHINGTON, June 22.—The official title of the treaty is as follows:—"The treaty for the reciprocal regulation of commerce and trade between the United States and Canada, with provisions for the enlargement of the Canadian canals, and for their use by United States vessels on terms of equality with British vessels." The President, in transmitting the draft of the treaty to the Senate, sent the following MESSAGE: "To the Senate of the United States:—The plenipotentiaries of Her Britannic Majesty at Washington have submitted to the Secretary of State for my consideration, a draft of a treaty for the reciprocal regulation of commerce and trade between the United States and Canada, with provisions for the enlargement of the Canadian canals, and for their use by United States vessels on terms of equality with British vessels. The President, in transmitting the draft of the treaty to the Senate, sent the following MESSAGE: "To the Senate of the United States:—The plenipotentiaries of Her Britannic Majesty at Washington have submitted to the Secretary of State for my consideration, a draft of a treaty for the reciprocal regulation of commerce and trade between the United States and Canada, with provisions for the enlargement of the Canadian canals, and for their use by United States vessels on terms of equality with British vessels. The President, in transmitting the draft of the treaty to the Senate, sent the following MESSAGE: "To the Senate of the United States:—The plenipotentiaries of Her Britannic Majesty at Washington have submitted to the Secretary of State for my consideration, a draft of a treaty for the reciprocal regulation of commerce and trade between the United States and Canada, with provisions for the enlargement of the Canadian canals, and for their use by United States vessels on terms of equality with British vessels."

"Among its provisions are articles proposing to dispense with the arbitration respecting the fisheries, which was proposed for by the Treaty of Washington. In the event of the conclusion and the ratification of a treaty, and the passage of the necessary legislation to enforce it, these provisions, as well as other considerations, make it desirable that the subject should receive attention before the proposed treaty is passed. I therefore, express an earnest wish that the Senate may be able to consider and determine before the adjournment of Congress, whether it will give its constitutional concurrence to the conclusion of a treaty with Great Britain, for the purposes of Great Britain, with provisions for the enlargement of the Canadian canals, and for their use by United States vessels, which the British plenipotentiaries, or in such other more acceptable form as the Senate may prefer." (Signed.) "U. S. GRANT."

"Washington, June 18, 1874." REPLY OF U. S. SECRETARY OF STATE. The following is the report of the Secretary of State:—"DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, 17 June, 1874. "I have the honor to enclose a copy of the draft of a treaty for the reciprocal regulation of commerce and trade between the United States and Canada, with provisions for the enlargement of the Canadian canals, and for their use by United States vessels, which the British plenipotentiaries have proposed to the Government." (Signed.) "HAMILTON FISH."

"The following is a COMPLETE COPY OF THE TREATY:— Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain, and the United States of America, being desirous of improving the commerce and navigation between their respective territories and people, and more especially between Her Majesty's possessions in North America and the United States, in such manner as to render the same reciprocally beneficial, have respectively named plenipotentiaries to confer and agree upon a treaty to that effect:—That is to say:— "The Queen, Her Majesty Victoria, who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:— Article 1.—It is agreed by the high contracting parties that in addition to the liberty secured to the United States fishermen by the convention between the United States and Great Britain, signed at London on the 20th day of October, 1818, of taking, curing, and drying fish on certain coasts of British
