THE WORLD'S HARVEST. BY HORACE B. DURANT. Look out abroad upon

The world, and everywhere, beneath thine eye Behold the fields already ripened for The harvest. See what hosts of priceless and Immortal souls are ready to be saved Or lost eternally! Hark to the cry For help that comes from many a distant land, And from the islands of the sea! Aye, here Is work, a mighty work. Behold it all Around us: in the streets and alleys of The crowded city; in the hamlet and The town; within the quiet dell, and o'er The hill and plain: in every highway of Our land, and at our very side, we see Imploring hands stretched forth for help; w hear The agonizing cry of multitudes Fast sinking down to ruin.

Work, work, work!

To elevate the mind above the gloom Of ignorance and error? Who will work And hierarchy down, that have so long, In their misguided zeal and bigotry, Divided man from man, retarded truth And Christianity, and from the soul Shut out the light of heaven? Who will work To stem the tide of infidelity And trashy, sickly sentimentalism, And fashionable vice and folly, that, From pulpit, press, and stage, is flooding all Our land with mortal death?

Awake! ve who Are slumbering in idleness. The summer of Thy life will soon be ended. Very soon The reaper Death will come, with sickle keen, And cut thee down, and then thy harvest will Thy words, thy deeds, as blessed fruitage, may Be garnered up for heaven.

SCOTT-THE CANADIAN MARTYR.

An effort is being made by Riel and his minions, and their sympathizers, to blacken the character of the murdered Scott, and represent that it was unwillingly that Riel consented to evils. It is alleged that the life of the " President" was in danger. But even if we accept the evidently exaggerated statements of Scott's murderers as true, they have not dared to lay anything to his charge at all worthy of death. They say that he was a strong "partizan" in the late rising of the Portage people. He actually "insulted the President," and "attacked a captain and a soldier." He had the courage and patriotism to express his contempt for the mockery of Government carried on by a band of outlaws, and to maintain his allegiance to his Queen and country, and for this he

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1970. THE NECESSITY OF IMPROVING CONGREGATIONAL SINGING AMONG METHODISTS.

THE early British Methodists were noted or the fervour, vivacity and vigour of their ongregational singing. There was a life and a power embodied in their public service of praise felt by all who stepped within the threshold of the Weslevan sanctuaries. This earnest and hearty singing betokened so much of reality in the service, as it referred to God, and was such a recognition of brotherhood, as it had respect to man, that multitudes were awakened to spiritual life by it, and drawn by its influ ence into communion with the people practising it. This fervid congregational singing among the early Methodists was not in any respect the result of accidental causes. On the contrary, it was the well-defined oined account of this mission and its results is were not religious, he was impressed with his efforts to bring it into existence. In the very nature of things the praises of the Sanctuary ought to be congregational. The Holy Being exalted is the common Father and Benefactor. To adore Him and show forth His praise is alike the duty of all. The capacity to sing is a gift of God very generally bestowed. There On the afternoon of March 29th, Mrs. Mary are but very few persons attending public worship that could not, by cultivating their gift, take a profitable part in congregational singing. Praising God with one's own lips in the Sanctuary would be felt to be very much more of a real thing than praising Him by proxy through other people's lips, however sweet the voices that issue from them. The spectacle of a whole congregation, ranging from the lisping child to the ottering grandsire, lifting up their hearts to the Universal Father in the blended gust of grateful song is touching, subduing, heard it. For the Provincial Wesleyan THE SAILOR'S LIFE.

The sailor's life is one of great danger and hardship, entitling him to the regard and prayers of those who dwell at home in ease and safety. Now plunging down the ocean's yawning cave, Now rising on the crested wave; Through dreary nights his anxious watch h keeps,

While the snug landsman soundly sleeps, In storms and rain on slippery deck he stands Steering his bark to foreign lands; Or swiftly coming from some distant shore, Looks out for land and home once more. High climbing on the tall and bending mast, Where brawny hands scarce hold him fast, He oft must go, to furl the swelling sail. In howling winds, and showers of hail; Or o'er the the bows upon the high jib-boom, Hanging above the sailors tomb, The soak'd and flaping canvas try to save, 'Midst the wild roar of wind and wave. Then hasting down go chilled with wet and cold To his dark "berth" before the hold, Catch, if he can, the hurried troubled sleep, Peculiar to the stormy deep. Then springing to the mate's imperious call. "Come sailors come, one and all," On deck, aloft, or at the steering wheel, Meet roughs the landsmen never feel. Were dread tornadoes rush with fearful swe On mighty wings across the deep, Or calmly sleeping, gather strength to prey, On the doomed ships that pass that way-Where livid lightnings dart their fire around, His weather beaten form is found. REV. DR. LEES ON BIBLE WINES.

A LECTURE DELLIVERED IN PORTLAND. The first Temperance Bible commentary ever complished friend, the Rev. Dawson Burns. M. A., where the inquirer would find examined in detail 649 texts bearing on the temperance reformatian, of which the original and authoritative versions were given in plain English type. He could honestly affirm that he did not know of one text which connected the sanction of God with the use of intoxicating wine. But to-night he would endeavor to establish his proposition, not by an inquiry into words, but of uch plain facts and records of the Bible as hardly anybody would dispute, and which everybody could understand. He distinguished be tween the Bible and the interpreters of the Bible. These might and did err, but it was im possible that any word of God, truly interpreted, could contradict any of the works of God, truly deciphered. Morally there was another un likelihood in the position of the drinker. All the religions of antiquity and the Orient, where our Bible originated, taught teetotalism, all their sacred books-Vedas and Zendavesta, Hieroglyphs, Philosophies, and Koran-inculcated Were Jewish prophets and Christian apostles ignorant of this, or opposed to it? Did Pa-gan teachers see the truth that drink and sen-the banker. gan teachers see the truth that drink and senuality went together, and did the authors of this book, on the contrary, link their religion fast to the bottle? This was not possible, he hought. Again why did the people wonder at his alleging that the Bible was a temperance book? And at his interpreting its language in a plain and natural sense, just believing what it says, that wine is poison and a mocker? Was not that a common thought in antiquity, perpetually taught and practiced by the wise and going to the nutting party." good in all the countries around Palestine? He could give a hundred examples; but one must suffice. In the Hieratic Papyri, Amen-em-am,

"It has been told me that thou hast forsaken books, and devoted thyself to sensuality; that thou goest from tavern to tavern smelling of beer at eventide. It beer gets into thee, it overcomes thy mind. It thou wieldest the rod of office, men shun the. Thou knowest that wine is an abomination; thou hast taken a pledge concerning strong drink; that thou puzzled thought. For full five minutes she wouldst not put such liquors into thee. Hast thou forgotten thy oath? I, thy superior, forbid thee to go to the taverns. But we see many like them-haters of books, they honor not the teaching of the Bible; and to make the comparison fair, and to commence this argunent really in an intelligent spirit, they must inderstand what teetotalism was.—Drunkeness was an effect—and, as an effect, had its cause; and so long as its causes existed effects nust follow. The proximate cause was drinking, which disturbed the moral by altering the nervous system of man. If there was anything true in science, anything true in experience, i was that alcohol was poison.

The Bible represents intoxicating drinks as a bad article, poisonous, seductive, and corrupting, (1) by using it as symbolical of evil, (2) by plainly declaring it to be poisonous and poluting, and (3) by the history of its bad effects so regally. upon the Church and people. As there was the "pure blood of the grape," and the rock neck and kissed her. from whence the living water streamed, so, contrary to this, there was an element unlike the water of that rock, and a people whose "wine ses." was the poison of dragons, and the cruel vemon of asps." The Almighty uses this very word to Lizzie's satisfaction, fitted perfectly. when He speaks of the "cup of his fury," and Hosea declares (vii.5) of one, that "the prin- how very considerate of you to stop growing cess made him sick with the poison of wine," just as you did." though the translators have disguised the truth made it fit their preconceptions and, instead of tears glistened in Nellie's eyes. reverently drawing the real truth out of it, put Persians or Hiodoos, everybody would under- cast upon the waters. stand it to signify what it says; yet in the Bible

"Why then," it is asked. "when I looked for grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?" The answer is given again and again-because the people, the princes, and the priests loved wine! From Amos ii. 6, in conjunction with Micah ii. 11, the tour sins of the Jews were summed up in this one sin. For the judges passed unjust judgment to get wine to drink in sacred places; the people told the true prophets to be silent because they would not prophesy of drink; they tempted the Nazarites to break their pledge; and they drank with bowls to dissipate their minds and cast off all care concerning religion and country. Finally, so bad did the Jews become through drink, so little power had religion to prevent the effects of a physical agent like alcohol from besotting a nation that the religious teachers themselves were swallowed up of wine-they stumble in prophesy: they stagger in judgment." (Is. xxviii. .) As a last resource, it is said, "Therefore shall my people go into captivity." And it is a emarkably suggestive fact, that in that captivity hey were first brought in intimate contact, and friendly relationship with the Persian teetotalers in the train and court of Cyrus the Great. Thus, the Bible every where connects evil with intoxicating wine: and every tree may be known by its fruit. Lastly, the Bible represents God as the inspier of that teetotal doctrine and movement which purified Judea from intemperance, and prepared for the Christian dispensation. In the days of Isaiah "men rose up early in the morning to follow strong drink;" in the days of Peter and Paul it was a thing unknown that any should be drunk at even the third or sixth hour. "They that are drunken, are drunken published was prepared by himself, and his ac- in the night." It is abundantly evident from history that the pre-christian ages saw a ectotalism flourished in Judea. Entire Jewish ects, here and in Egypt were abstainers; and this influence, beginning in the captivity, strengthened by the philosophy of Pythagoras little loss to trace its origin, as providentially, o comprehend its missiou-"I raised up your ons prophets, and your young men for Naza-

A. T. STEWART'S PRINCIPLES OF

I have said that the problem of Mr. Stewart's career was already solved. The reason why is was there solved lies in the fact that in the little Broadway store-the very cradle of his fortunes-he adopted those rules and principles of trade and of life from which he has never swerved; and to which, in connection with his mental and physical capacities for labor, his unflagging industry, his native shrewdness and sagacity, his thorough good sense and profound mercantile judgment, and his absolute genius for trade, his stupendous success is due.

1. His first rule was honesty between selle and buyer. His career is a perfect exemplifigreat preparation for Christianity-and that cation of poor Richrad's maxim, " Honesty is the best policy, "and of the poet's declaration, "Nothing can need a lie." His interest consorted with his inclination, his policy with his where a court fashion had influence, had been principles, and the business with the man, when he determined that the truth should be told and Epicurus. But, biblically, we can be at over his counter, and that no misrepresentations of his goods should be made. #### FARM LABOUR.

It is much to be regretted that that the old country system of employing labour on the farm all the year round, is not more generally and Europe. adopted here. It would be better for both the farmer and the labourer he employs, if instead of our plan of hiring by the month, and then only during the season of actual tillage operations, and boarding at the house, men were his ed by the year, and provided with a small cottage and garden. In this way not only would labour be cheaper, as a man will hire by the $5 per annum, strict y in advance year at a much lower rate, with a certainty of employment, than if paid by the month for a short time, but it would bring a better and steadier class of labourers into the country.

What is needed is that farmers should give acouragement to married men to settle in the ountry. As things are now, the generality of arm labourers are either young men, sons o farmers, who would be in a better position if married and settled on farms of their own in the back country, or of that shiftless class of half mechanic, half labourer, commonly found nanging about the skirts of towns and villages, always on the look-out for a job, that they often ire of and abandon when half done.

The right class are agricultural labourers nen that understand ditching, threshing, &c.; and such men can be got if they are given encouragement to come to the country.

A man of that kind, even with a family, can live and thrive on $120 a year, and board himself, as a garden patch of half an acre, with
