Do Not Want New Company at Grimsby Park.

Think It Would Mean Repetition of Old Trouble.

Hon. J. S. Duff at Lincoln Farmers' Institute To-day.

Grimsby Park, Aug. 11 .- (Special.)-The Times' correspondent was informed yesterday by a prominent cottage-holder the rumors and counter that have been flying about relative to the taking over of the company's pro perty by a Cleveland syndicate is looked upon by the cottagers as a myth, and that nothing has been offered or ac-cepted by the cottagers from any con-cern so far.

At a recent meeting of the propertyowners the question of getting an option on the park property was under consideration, but the majority of owners were quite contented with the present state of affairs, and felt that the formation of another company would only bring about a state of affairs similar to that which existed in former years.

It was anticipated by the officials of the Lincoln Farmers' Institute that the annual picnic at the Experimental Station to-day would eclipse all others, providing the weather is fine. Hon, J. S. Duff, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, has promised to be there, and give an address.

The continued drouth is having an injurious effect on the late tomatoes, and in a number of localities the rot is making an appearance, as it generally does in hot, dry seasons. On sandy lands the crop is in a fair condition.

NOTICE TAKEN

Of Hamilton's Playground Movement In Other Places.

That the supervised playgrounds move ment in Hamilton is receiving attention throughout the country was shown by the receipt this morning of the following letter from the chairman of the Playground Committee of the National Council of Women of Canada.

Editor Hamilton Times:

Sir, — Permit me to acknowledge through your columns the receipt of copies of the Times sent directly from your office and from members of the National Council's Playgrounds Committee, reporting the opening in Hamilton of a large and important public playground. Hamilton is the eighth city in Canada to adopt the playground work, introduced and promoted by the National Council of Women.

It is highly gratifying to note that the attendance in the playground fulfills the expectations of the projectors, who have for years been so patiently insistent and courageous.

To Mrs. (Dr.) Woolverton, member of the National Committee, I tender hearty congratulations, and to the Times my appreciation of its excellent editorial of July 26.—Mabel Peters, Chairman Play-ground Committee of the National Coun-ell of Women of Canada, Echo Hill, Westfield, N. B.

At the present moment the Bible upo which the oath is administered at the Police Court is by no means an exen diffication of the teachings of the word For a long time the book has done duty

For a long time the book has done duty. Immunerable osculations have been pressed on its covers by all sorts and conditions. Its appearance would give a bacteriologist spasms. If the Hamilton Health Association were to see it there would be a hurry-up meeting called. It has been noticed at recent inquests how reductant doctors are to kiss the book on the covers, though being compelled to take their oath on it. They open its pages and hunt for a spot tht looks less unclean than the exterior, thereby minimizing the danger of contagion.

The book does not even get a daily disinfecting; it is left lying around the court room all the time. Witnesses of all nationalities, many of them members of the Anti-Soap League, daily handle it, and press their lips to it. Someone suggests that the Board of Health might investigate.

W. H. Wardrope, K. C., Lectured to the Summer School.

The students of the Hamilton Summe chool of Oratory crowded the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. last night to hear Mr W. H. Wardrope, K. C., give the fourth lecture. His subject was, "The Art of Public Speaking," and was ably handled, and proved most enjoyable to the pupils, who showed their appreciation by giving close attention. Mr. Wardrope im pressed upon the young men the importance of practicing articulation and modulation of the voice. A fault he found with Canadian speakers was that they did not speak clearly enough. Mr. Wardrope believed oratory to be the noblest art, and the true orator should be a man of sterling character. Registrar John M. Peebles reported a steady growth in the membership. A hearty vote of thanks moved by Amos Vipond, seconded by E. R. Bowers, was conveyed to the lecturer, for the profitable lesson. pressed upon the young men the import

Killed in Chair

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 11. Adolph Burtchey, a burglar, who capped his career with murder, was killed in the electric chair at the State Prison last night. When summon ed to the chair the condemned man refused any aid and walked alone with just a trace of swagger from his cell to the death hous and took his place in the chair.

Before he died, Burtchey wrote letters to the widow of his victim, and to many whose house he had robbed, asking that they forgive him for what he had done

A long series of robberies which was broken by only one extended term in jail, led up to the murder. Discovered in the act of robbery Burtchey was distancing his pur suers on the outskirts of Lake wood, when a bartender, just quitting work, stopped him, and the killing followed, Burtchey using a revolver. The man killed Adolph Janoski.

One week from this evening the Grand Opera House will open its doors for the preliminary season. August 18 is early, but there will be several performances before the month is out. "Texas," a comedy drama, will open the attractions. The play is in four acts, all of which are beautifully staged, the production being carried entire. While the play is one of western life, it is void of sensationalism, and has a very pretty love story. It is a play on the order of "The Virginian," and is one that requires a company of merit to interpret, which "Texas" is said to have.

"Following "Texas," "Graustark," a aramatization of George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel, will be seen here on Saturday, the 21st. Opera House will open its doors for the Babies that were weakly and which failed to thrive are showing wonderful improvement. When placed upon this diet increase in weight is generally noted, and a close following of the directions furnished by the commission leads to a gratifying condition of infant health and happiness. An undoubted result of this movement is a great lessening of infantile summer diseases, which will show in the decrease of the usually excessively high summer death rate.

The rush for the milk is a gratifying evidence of the appreciation with which the commission's efforts have been met. Mr. Taylor swore that on July 11 as he was sitting on his steps the dog catchers came along and attempted to catch his dog, which was not on the street at all, but on his own property. He yelled at the dog to get in the barn, which he did. He then saw the constable coming toward him in an angry mood, and he said the officer threatened to pull him over the fence if he did not give him his name. Some hot words were passed, and to get away from the constable Taylor said he went back and entered the street some distance away. Here he said Ince approached him again and gave him a violent shaking. He was corroborated by Mrs. Tew and E. Sones.

Ince swore that Taylor had interfered with the dog catchers in discharge of their duties. He denied having threatened to strike the old man, nor had he shaken him, but tapped him on the shoulder and warned him to stop abusing the police or he would have him arrested. He said Taylor heaped a great deal of abuse on the dig catchers by calling them buns, etc.

But old Jack shook his head stolidly. "Doctor's orders, Mr. Besant," said he. "Master and Miss Lily have got the fever, and it's eatching, you know."

Mr. Besant turned very pale.

He had just heard of the death of two of his grooms as he left the Towers yard; he had passed a cottager's funeral on his way, aid met the undertaker's men coming for preparations for another.

Old Jack saw the parpane rear and smiled grimly.

"You won't go and catch the happy-demic, would ye, Mr. Besant?" said he.

"No, that is, er—Lady Besant," faltered the coward, wondering whether he was in any danger these—the wind was blowing from the house.

"No, just so, Lady Besant may catch it," muttered Jack, sarcastically. "Better go away, Mr. Besant; better go away, sir."

"I—I really think you're right, Jack," failtered Mr. Besant. "It would be foll-hardy to rush into danger. Got the fever, both of them! Heaven bless me!

This is fearful!"

And he turned his horse's head and rode slowly away, leaving Jack, gazing after him with an unutterable expression of contempt and disgust.

The entrance gates could be seen from Lillian's bedroom window, and from that vantage place Dr. Bromwell had witnessed the summons, the refusal and the retreat. A wicked witnessed the summons, the refusal and the retreat. A wicked, sarcastic smile his strange face and he turned ekoned with his hand to Miss

"One idiot out of the way," murmured the other in response, "He always was a coward."
"Ah!" responded the doctor, glancing the bed and lowering his musical voice to a whisper. "Is she asleep, Kate?" Miss Lucas nodded.
"Yes, and has been so all the morning."

The cold, gray eyes had closed with a slight shudder, which, although he stood behind her, the doctor noticed.

"Well?" he said, quickly, almost sternly. "Do you shrink from the work?"

"No," she answered, vehemently. "What is it to me that a hundred paupers go to their graves if your will be done? Shall I shrink now that we are on the brink of success, when through all the weary months of your absence I waited, and waited, and waited patiently?"

"What have I to fear? Not this old man and his daughter; they are as wax in my hands."
"Nor Mr. Besant?" she asked.
"I trust to his cowardice and meanness." he said, with a gesture of contempt. "While the ban of fever hangs over the house he will keep clear of it, never fear."

These he forced between the teeth of the unconscious girl, and then threw the vial upon the fire, where its thin substance soon melted and disappeared. The handkerchief was also consigned to the flames and the bedclothes arranged neatly.

Five minutes passed and he was still enjoying his repast when a bell rang loudly. There followed a rushing of two or three servants—there were only a few in the house now, most of them had taken fright at the fever—and then a cry of distress.

In another minute a servant entered hurriedly.

Read hand, fell upon the village.

Never parted in life, they would not be in death. The lord and master of Rivershall had gone to join his darling at the river's brink.

Sir Ralph Melville was dead. He had died, said Dr. Bromwell, as peacefully as she; died without pain, without consciousness, passed like her from the sleep of life into the sleep of death.

"Doctor, Miss Lucas is calling for you. I'm afraid-

"Doctor, Miss Lucas is calling for you. I'm afraid—"

"For me?" interrupted the doctor, setting down his glass and rising hastily. "Yes, certainly," and he ran up the stairs and entered the sick room.

In a few seconds he came out again with a solemn face and addressed the group of terror-stricken servants in the lobby;

"One of you ride for Mr. Morecroft, and bring him back immediately."

One of the grooms dashed off and soon returned with the old doctor, who, from what he had been able to glean from the man's account, was fully prepared.

Dr. Bromwell met him at the head of the staircase, and without a word took him into the sick room.
"My dear sir," he said, "I regret to say—"

She had drawn a little closer as she spoke and laid one hand pleadingly upon his arm.

Without looking at her he let his own hand fall upon her shoulder in a pitying, almost contemptuous caress, such as he might have given to a favorite hound, and answered:

"And the breath?" asked Melchior, "for use of the rink of success, only these two atand between our purpose, and they are—" He made a gesture with his hand as if moving such slight obstacles

The handkerchief was also consigned to the flames and the bedclothes arranged neatly.

"Kate," said Melchoir, "it is done.

So affecting was the scene that Miss theore, "Wh is to obe read, "I man to obliged. To think that I should like to poor Sir Ralph? My dear, dear girl to poor S

"Good!" he said, with a sinister smile. "Now for our places. Stay here while I go below to the library or dining room. In five minutes ring the bell loudly and cry out for assistance; the first one who comes send to look for me. The rest I can manage."
Waiting only for her word of acquiescence, the grave doctor walked slowly down the stairs, stopping to answer one of the servants's inquiries with a grave shake of the head, and passing into the dining room.

Some luncheon was spread there, and with his usual coolness the doctor helped himself to some raised pie and sipped a glass of choice claret.

Told the sad news to Mrs. Williams, who with tears and lamentations as quickly communicated it to the household.

Before night it was well known that lilian, only daughter of Sir Ralph Mel-ville, baronet of Rivershall, Berkshire, was lying ready for the family vault.

The great bell of the chapel tolled, the many loving hearts who had looked upon the fair girl as one of Heaven's one army the desolated hall; the Towers was in confusion, and its masteria in a frenzy of sorrow and passion, when another blow, stricken by the same dread hand, fell upon the village.

Great was the lamentation, great also was the confusion. The terrifle death-dealing fever was about still; all present were paralyzed.

The nouse was a plague-house, and the doctors would not allow anyone to approach it. The very servants were dismissed, sent away to safety, and the huge place given up to the charge of the doctors and Miss Lucas.

No one was to enter it until it had been thoroughly disinfected, and Mr. Packer, arriving post haste, was denied admittance.

Packer, arriving post haste, was denied admittance.

"But," said he, "the papers, Dr. Bromwell, and the will. They must all be secured. I—I must see that things are perfectly set in order."

"You must enter at your own peril and risk," said the doctor, gravely.

"I will risk it," said the grim lawyer, and he entered, seized the papers, and took charge of the keys.

"Now," said he, "I should like to see poor Sir Ralph and Miss Lilian—"

"Impossible," said Dr. Bromwell. "I would not be answerable for the consequences; they might be fatal."

But the lawyer was as resolute in this as in the other, and the doctor admitted him to the room in which the two bodies

Miss Lucas followed him in and removed the cloth from the faces.

The faithful old lawyer turned away with a great sob.

"Thank you," he said; "I am much obliged. To think that I should live to see them lying there. Poor, dear child!"

Dr. Bromwell awaited him in the dinging room.

Dr. Bromwell awarted him in the duling room.

Sir," he said, "you are running a great risk."

Mr. Packer waved his hand.

When does the funeral take place"
he asked brokenly.

"That is the duestion I was going to ask you," said the doctor. "Or, rather, how soon can it take placee. They must be within the yaults before to-morrow night."

-UNABASHED CELIBACY.

Many, strange, and difficult to avoid are the ways in which a-parson may give offence to his flock. A story is being told now of a certain unmarried vicar who, being established in a slumberous country town, disturbed the minds of its evangelical worth ies by rites and ceremonies which were unmistakably "high." There were even processions on saints' days and one or more of these passes. were even processions on saints days, and one or more of these passed through the street in which dwelt an aged lady who had long been a regular subscribed to church charities. She disapproved of the ecclesiastical innovations, but her mind was confused as to the various terms which described the enormities which she was determined not to countenance. A supporter of the vieur called upon. was determined not to countenance. A supporter of the vicar called upon her and asked her for one of her accustomed contributions. She declined to give it upon doctrinal grounds "I do not like the vicar's practices," she said severely. "He practices celibacy in the open street."

TURNING THE TABLES.

"Then. ething dreadful; the dead."
"Indeed." replied the ecclesiastic, without the smallest surprise or displeasure. Then, seemingly deeply touched, he added: "Monsieur, I have always taken the greatest interest in orphans. Will you accept these two pennies?"

The wit, we are told, retired as gracefully and as quickly as he was able.

THE AVIATOR'S TRIUMPH.

THE AVIATOR'S TRIUMPH.

(Montreal Witness.)

Take a corpse and we make it stand. When it was alive it stood quite easily and without an effort. Surely a very slight application of science would make it stand now. But try it. It falls absolutely limp in every limb, or if it has grown stiff it stands no better than a stick. We have only to think for a moment of such a gruesome experiment to realize that the balancing of a man or a child or an animal on its feet is a miracle in mechanics—governed by some law of life of which we who use the power know absolutely nothing. The more one thinks of it the more is it a marvel that a man can balance himself at all. Supposing we should conclude that after all the man's body was not the right sort of machine to hold an erect position and to balance itself—and certainly when you see it deprived of life it does not seem to be any more fit for the work than a lump of soft dough—then could we make a machine that would stand and walk better? Let us try it and see. And yet we think because a bird can soar we ought to be (Montreal Witness.) dough—then could we make a machine that would stand and walk better? Let us try it and see. And yet we think because a bird can soar we ought to be able to make a machine that can. If a man had knowledge of all the parts of his vital machine by which his centre of gravity is easily maintained in equilibrium whether in motion or at rest, and had to think of every part of it, how busy he would have to be to keep all its parts working truly according as he wished to walk or stand. How many years would he be old before acquiring the necessary skill? The bird without a thought lavs itself on the air and flies or soars just as naturally as a man stands or walks. Kill the bird and set all the Royal Society to work to work to soar any more. The machine is all there, It is no heavier than it was before. Nothing has gone but the life and that with life the mystery of mysteries, the power to balance on the air. It is when we realize the infinite separation between the live bird and the dead that we have some little sense of the problem that faces the aviator, and the majesty of his victory over the air.

Proper Care for the Pet Canary.

Proper Care for the Pet Canary.
The following rules sum up what lovers of the yellow warbler can do to keep a canary in good singing condition practically throughout the year:
It is of the first importance that the water troughs are emptied and cleansed every day and kept filled to the brim with clear, fresh water. They should be deep enough to admit of "Dickje" taking a bath.

Keep a small handful of bird seeds on Acep a small handlin of bird sected of an enameled dish at the bottom of the cage. Never put in an unlimited supply at one time, since the bird's hopping and fluttering over it will render it fetid in a short time. The dish should be washed every morning and a fresh supply put in

It is a good idea to make a pad of tea paper for the bottom of the cage every time it is unscrewed, as it will greatly facilitate cleaning.

Fractured oyster shells or cuttlefish bones to whet their bills on are recommended by all who make a business of raising canaries, and should not be omitted for a longer period than one or two weeks. Crisp bread and cracker crumbs ia small quantities may be given occasionally.

weeks. Crisp bread and cracks, in small quantities may be given occasionally.

That the room in which your canary abides should be kept well lighted and ventilated is essential. Bright weather always has a stimulating effect on his voice! He enjoys a sun bath more than anything else and when the weather permits it is well to provide a hook for his eage on the porch, under a tree, or in the open window.

Most singing canaries when liberated cannot fly far with their unused wings the first time, and there is little danger that he will make his escape to the woods, even when let out in the back yard or orchard. One young woman in sunny California who makes a special business of raising canaries allows them to fly and hop about an hour at a time in an open vineyard, while she keeps watch on them. They cannot fly more than twelve feet at a stretch and seldom mount higher than ten feet, and were easily recaptured with a butterfly net.

One Reason for Forest Fires.

One Reason for Forest Fires.

The question has been asked why there should be so many fires in our American forests when there are so few or none at all in the forests of Europe.' The answer is this: When the trees are cut in the forests of Germany, France or Switzerland, the entire material in the tree is marketed and removed, leaving no inflammable filter on the ground. It our American forests, owing to lack of a market for such material, fully one half of the tree—the limbs, smaller branches, twigs and foliage—are left upon the ground where they soon become dry and furnish material for a forest fire. In the European forests every part of the tree, including the smallest twigs, is sold. The sale of this minor product constitutes over one-half of the revenue. Hence, when the forester is through with his tree-cutting no inflammable material is left upon the ground. Now, if our Adirondack lumbermen could sell the limbs and tops of the trees instead of allowing them to go to waste for lack of a market, they would not be obliged to leave the ground encumbered with the inflammable debris and litter which is such a prolific source of fire, and which when tignited is so difficult to extinguish. A glance at any picture showing the parklike appearance of a German forest, and the mass of limbs and tops remaining in an American forest where lumbering had been done, will explain readily why disastrous fires are so apt to occur in this country.—From "Forest Fires," by James S. Whipple, in the Outing Magazine for August.

LITTLE TOT'S TERRIBLE END.

She Was Burned to Death by Her Playmates.

Danced About Her as Flames Leaped Around Her.

Police Notified But No Action Taken.

Buffalo, Aug. 11.-Mary Snieocki, five years old, of 103 Mills street, was burned to death yesterday afternoon by her playmates, in a lot near her home. It was all part of a game, the police have learned, and although they know the names of the little ones who danced about the Snieocki child, as the flames swept above her, no action will be taken

As the mother of the burning child burst through the circle of dancing children, the tots scampered away, and the woman beat out the flames. Then she woman beat out the flames. Then she carried the terribly burned child to the little Mills street house, and although a physician was summoned immediately, no hope was held out for the baby's recovery. The little girl died shortly after noon to-day.

The Snieocki girl, with half a dozen other little girls and boys went out to play early in the afternoon. They gathered in a lot near Sycamore street, and other little girls and boys well out to play early in the afternoon. They gath-ered in a lot near Sycamore street, and romped and laughed. Finally a five-year-old boy who had possessed himself of a box of matches, ignited one of the sulphurs and applied the tiny, darting flame to the dress of Snieocki child. The flinny fabric caught up the fire and in limsy fabric caught up the fire and in an instant the child's clothing was a ass of flames. It was all fun to the children. They laughed and screamed with delight as the flames mounted higher and higher. Above their cries, however, the pitcous the flames mounted higher and higher. Above their cries, however, the piteous screams of the burning child could be plainly heard, and these caught the ear of Mrs. Snieocki as she sat in the window of her home. Speeding to the vacant lot she swept aside the chidren and caught up her flaming daughter. It was a matter of a minute for the woman to beat out the flames, and with the child in her arms she ran back to her home. Dr. V. B. Beszenski, of 1016 Sycamore street, was called, but he was only able to prolong the life of the child until today. In her efforts to extinguish the flames the mother was badly burned about the face and hands and she also received the attentions of the physician. After the death of the child Medical Examiner Danser was notified, and atter directing that a certificate of accidental death be issued, he permitted the body of the child to be turned over to an undertaker.

The police of the Genesce street station were also notified and they made a thorough investigation. They had no difficulty in obtaining the names of the children who romped about as the Sniecki girl burned, but because of the tender ages of all of them no action could be taken.

Without Waiting For the Car to Come to Stop.

That Was the Cause of the Death of Tanac.

Motorman Hansen Warned Him to Wait For Stop.

The inquest as to the death of Dana Tanac, who died last Saturday, in the City Hospital, was resumed last night, in No. 3 Police Station. It will be remembered that Tanac fell while getting off a street car on Barton street east on Saturday night, July 31. brought in: "That deceased came to his death from injuries received while getting off a car while in motion. No blame is attached to anyone."

James Leeming was the first witness called. He said he was a passenger on the car and saw Tanac getting off from the front where he sat, and in doing so fell backwards on to the ground on his head. The car was at once stopped and the witness with the motorman and conductor carried the man into a nearly drug store. The ambulance was at once sent for and the man was conseved to the City Hospital. The car maited about 15 minutes. Witness said the bell rang for the car to stop and the motorman told Tanac to wait until it had stopped. Thomas Ridley corroborated this evidence.

William Fulton saw the man lying on the ground and saw him place his hand to the back of his head.

John Eden and William Pope saw the man after the accident. Donald Cormack, the motorman, said he had the bell to stop at Sherman avenue. Tanac stepped off the car between Kinrade and Sherman avenue, the motorman at once began to slow up, but before the car had stopped, Tanac stepped off backwards, between Kinrade and Sherman avenues. He called out to deceased not to get off before the car stopped, but just as he called, the man stepped off and fell. The car was at once stopped and witness got off and asked Tanac if he were hurt. He instructed the motorman to look after the injured man while he went for a doctor.

Nama Mesmeca told of seeing Tanac in the drug store after the accident. His evidence was capably interpreted by Budimir Protich, the Crown interpreter.

Coachman Drowned After a Heroic Attempt to Save a Girl.

Nyack, N. Y., Aug. 11-Ben Hendrich-

Nyack, N. Y., Aug. 11—Ben Hendrichsen, a coachman in the employ of Walter D. Davis, whose property is situated near the Hook Mountain, lost his life on Sunday at Upper Nyack while trying to save a young girl from drowning.

Hendrichsen, Hattie Johnson, a waitress in Mr. Davies' home, and Amanda Frome, aged 13 years, niece of Mr. Davies' cook, went in bathing off the shore at about noon. There is a deep hole near the shore where the river was dug ont by a dredger some time ago, and the young girl, who cannot swim, got into this spot and would have drowned but for Hendrichsen, who, although he too was unable to swim, made a plunge to save the little one.

was unable to swim, made a plunge to save the little one.

The child caught hold of the coachman and he sank and did not come to the surface again. Miss Johnson, the waitress, who was the only one of the party able to swim, struck out for the girl and brought her in, and then hastened out to help Hendrichsen, but the latter was out of sight and did not reappear.

The woman called for help and Le Roy Frost, whose home is near, quickly responded. A crowd of men soon gathered and one of them dived down after the coachman, and after a time brought his body to the surface.

The charge that Mrs. Eddy is exerting "malicious animal magnetism against him in order "to end his life," is not only silly, but such a state of things would be quite impossible, and at variance with all of Mrs. Eddy's life and teachings. WHY DOGS GO MAD WHEN CHILDREN DON'T

These dreadful summer days make all nature yearn for water. As doctors will tell you, "The greatest thing in the world is water!"

Human beings, children especially, who exist in the bake-oven streets of the cities, get quickest relief from the heat and burning dust through copious draughts of refreshing water. In the torrid season it is their salvation.

But not a bit less do animals crave water at such periods. And of all animals, dogs are the most susceptible to evil effects from thirst. They go raving mad!

quarter of a million dollars, and the efforts of years on the part of the management to build up a really up-to-date summer resort seem to be lost. This alone is regrettable, but one of the saddest features is the terrible fate which attended the fire in the death of one, of the employees, Miss Clara Andrews, the young lady cashier of the "Figure Eight."

Everybody at the Island yesterday—and there were thousands—deplored the fact that the popular park, and been destroyed. The management was popular, and so was the place itself. Torontonians had been traveling across the bay for years, and they hated to be deprived of the pleasure the place afforded, but, looking over the acres of ruins where they had spent so many pleasant evenings, and mourning the fact that they were no more, everyone turned to the place where they used to buy tickets for the "Figure Eight," and seemed to offer their silent sympathy for the one who had lost her life, for everyone knew that there had been a fatality. Until late in the evening nobody seemed to know who the unfortunate ticket aller was, and many people who had filends or relatives working at the Island were more than anxious in their enquiries for them. One by one the missing ones were located, however, and the remains of the unfortunate victim were taken to the Morgue as soon as the flames absted so as to allow the firemen to approach the place where the "Figure Eight" stood.

WHERE FIRE ORIGINATED.

WHERE FIRE ORIGINATED.

It was 3.30 when the first blaze was noticed. It started in the "Gem Theatre," at the rear, where a sulphur preparation was being mixed for the make-up of those who were to take part in Campbell Bros," Wild West" performance. All of a sudden, the preparation took fire, and in an instant it was spreading to the front part of the theatre. James R. Heard, the "spieler" at the theatre, was one of the first to notice it. He ran to the pavilion and gave the alarm, and the city firemen were notified to come in all haste. Heard ran back to the theatre from the pavilion, and just as he arrived found Mies English, the ticket-seller of the "Gem," in a faint. It ran to her asistance, and carried her outrjust in time.

There were about forty people in the hearter when the fire were a like fire was a sulphur proposed.

WHERE FIRE ORIGINATED.

There were about forty people in the theatre when the fire was discovered and it is more than marvelous how they all escaped unhurt. The alarm had no more than been given when the whole theatre was enveloped in flames. Miss Andrews, the cashier in the "Figure Eight," ran out to see what was the matter, and, discovering the fire, ran back to get the money she had left in the till. Constable Lundy was near by and saw her go in. He called to her to come back, but she plunged forward to the ticket booth. The constable followed her, jumping over two come back, but she plunged forward to the ticket booth. The constable followed her, jumping over two fences which guard the walk to the booth. The young lady had apparently no more than reached the place when she either succumbed to the shock or became choked by the smoke, which was becoming very dense. Lundy pulled the wire netting from the booth and tried to grab her, could not get hold of her. He made another attempt and just then the building of the "Gem Theatre" collapsed, falling over on the "Figure Eight." He then had to run for his life and was somewhat singed before he got out into the open.

CROWD WORKED HARD.

The thing had no more than happened when everybody knew that there had already been a fatality. Crowds were coming from all directions, and willing crowds they were. With buckets in hand they rushed from the Bay to the burning buildings, doing the best they could tocheck the flames. The wind, however, combined with the poor fire-fighting applicance was also destroyed, but fortunately the shells were rescued before the flames reached it. Eddie Durnan's big boathouse, facing ing on the bay, just east of the ferry look, was in danger more than one, but his many friends turned out with buckets and after a hard fight it was standing, practically undamaged, when the fire had died out.

"The Big Scream" or "Mirrored Room," immediately east of the ferry shed, and the photo and shooting gallery were all considerably damaged, and at no time were the docks really in danger. Despite their great loss the Ferry Company is more than thankful that the docks were saved, for, had they been destroyed, not only would the damage have been many thousands of dollars greater, but the time it would take to replace them would have been the severe handicap.

All that remains now of the many amusements at Hanlan's Point are the merry-go-round, the Ferris wheel and the Rainbow Dips. Everything else is with buckets in hand they rushed from the Bay to the burning buildings, doing the best they could to check the flames. The wind, however, combined with the poor fire-fighting appliances, rendered the task almost impossible, but the volunteers labored on till they were forcibly driven back by the extreme heat. The fire raged on and building after building was destroyed, till practically the whole Point was laid flat.

From the "Gem Theatre" the fire spread to the "Figure Eight," and many were the narrow escapes from that place. The cars were running on the elevated tracks, most of them laden with passengers, and it was a miracle that there was not a fatality. As soon as the alarm was given practically the whole system was stopped. Some of the cars were at the highest point on the elevated tracks and there they were stopped while their occupants looked with terror at the flames gradually creeping towards them from the "Gem Theatre." With the greatest coolness, however; the man in charge, with the aid of brakes, slowly let the cars down to the lowest point and there cars down to the lowest point and there have a more accounted by the cars down to the lowest point and there have a more accounted by the control of the cars down to the lowest point and there have the fire the fire worked its way in under them, and they did not discover their perilous position until al most every arenue of escape was cut the fire the fire worked its way in under them, and they did not discover their perilous position until al most every arenue of escape was cut the fire the fire worked its way in under them, and they did not discover their perilous position until al most every arenue of escape was cut the fire them and the fire worked its way in under them, and they did not discover their perilous position until al most every arenue of escape was cut the fire the fire worked its way in under them, and they did not discover their perilous position until al most every arenue of escape was cut the fire the fire worked its way in under th men had to jump into the lagoon to escape the flames.

The fire in the Pavilion was fought inch by inch, and a couple of firemen had very narrow escapes. One of the ladies in charge of the cash, who, when she first saw the fire, had put everything into the safe, had to be practically driven away from the place, as she began to fear that the safe would not withstand the fire, and that everything would be lost.

WATER PRESSURE BAD.

The city firemen had arrived, and were ready for work when the flames spread from the Pavilion to the Hotel Hanlan. They mounted to the roof, taking a line of hose with them, and thought that they would be able to extinguish the incipient blaze which had started in one of the corners. The water was turned on, but the pressure was not high enough, and the water was not high enough, and the water was turned on, but the pressure was not high enough, and the water would not even run out of the mozzle, so they had to come down and watch the building burn before their eyes, without being able to do anything.

The wind right along seemed to change just at the inopportune time, and had it not been for this the damage would no doubt have been much less than it is. When the hotel had been practically destroyed it turned, and the band stand caught. This, with all the benches on the lawn nearby, was eaten up in no time, and then the fire struck the ladies' dressing room at the south of the Amusement Hall. The wind at that time was blowing a little from the north, and it was thought that part of the building could be saved. Some of the firemen directed their attention to the south end of the building, while others kept the other part of the building wet. All at once, however, the wind changed, and with a roar the flames spread practically the whole length of the Amusement Hall in five minutes' time, and it, with the School of Fun, was destroyed.

The people in the cottages along the walk began to get very anxious, and many families started to move their belongings.

WIND DROPPED OPPORTUNELY.

WIND DROPPED OPPORTUNELY.

The sparks were flying in all directions, and at one time it really looked as if the whole island colony was in danger. Just at the right time, however, the wind abated, and the fire started to die down. Some sparks set fire to the ice house of the old Lake Shore House, the property of Messrs, Bond & Stewart. They had asked saud secured permission to store their effects at the Island. All their costumes were destroyed, the loss being estimated at about $5,000. They did not carry any insurance.

HANLAN HOMESTEAD GONE

HANLAN HOMESTEAD GONE.

One of the notable landmarks that was wiped out in the conflagration was the old Hanlan homestead, where Ned Hanlan, the world's greatest sculler, first saw the light of day. This quaint building was situated just back of the "School of Fun," and the "Penny Exhibit," and was a point of interest to visitors at the Island. The Hanlan bomestead was practically the first house erected on the Point, and had been preserved, with great care because of its associations.

ONE WOMAN DIED.

ONE WOMAN DIED.

The only fatality in the great fire at Hanlan's Point was the burning to death of Miss Clara Andrews, cashier of the Figure 8, who, after the fire had started, went back into the already burning office of the amusement for the money in the cash box. After the fire had abated, the burnt body of Miss Andrews was found lying beside the ticket booth. Clutched in the bones of her hand was a mass of molten silver, what remained of the money which she tried to save for her employers.

Miss Andrews came from Cobourg, Ont. She was young, under 25, and dark haired. She boarded with Mr. Geo. H. Day at 213 Jarris street. She came to Toronto but two months ago and had been working at Hanilan's Point since her arrival. When she did not come home after the conflagration, Mr. Day started on a tour of investigation. He first made enquiries at Hanlan's Point, but no one had seen her. He then visited all the hospitals in the city, but would not find a trace of her. Even the Lakeside Home was visited. At 10.30 o'clock, when no trace had been found of her, Mr. Day wired the police officials at Cobourg and had the young woman's family notified. At the Morgue the charred remains of her body he. All that is left is the burnt part of her trunk. The head is entirally burned off, as are the limbs, and nosievely or any metal substance by which she could be identified were found. As she was not heard from up until midnight it is assumed that she was the girl who perished in the flames. THE LOSSES.

IS ICE CREAM FOOD?

Question to be Argued in Higher Courts.

Toronto, Aug. -"For my own part I Toronto, Aug. — For my own part I don't see why people shouldn't eat on Sunday," remarked Colonel Denison, yesterday, in adjourning five cases of restaurant-keepers who are charged with selling ice cream on Sunday.

Well, some people think it is very wicked to eat ice cream on Sunday," protested Mr. Corley, who in pursuance of his duty was pressing for convictions.

"Well, ice cream is not a very fes-tive food," replied the Colonel.

The point in dispute is as to whether ice cream can be sold by it-self.

self.

Under the police interpretation of the Lord's Dady act it is held to be an offence to sell ice cream without ham and eggs, beef-steak pie or some other food.

The restaurant-keepers, on the other hand, claim that they have a right to supply the needs of citizens who feel a desire for the frozen delicacy, without desiring to eat heavy food with it.

The late Judge Many of the restaurant was a right to supply the needs of citizens who feel a desire for the frozen delicacy, without desiring to eat heavy food with it.

The late Judge McDougall decided the question in favor of the restaurant-keepers interpretation, but since then Mr. Kingsford has convicted several restaurant-keepers in the Toronto Police Court during Colonel Denison's absence in England. These convictions are now being appealed. "Til adjourn all of these cases until the higher court decides on the appeals," said Colonel Denison in delivering himself of his own opinion on the matter.

shot in the dock strike was fired early this morning, when about 3.30 Sergeant Taylor and two constables began a search of men hanging around McTavish street for weapons. The first two or three submitted with good grace, but when from a knot of men the sergeant grabbed one the hubbub began. While a bunch of them attempted to aid their comrade, others ran down the street shouting for their countrymen, knocking at doors, and from every corner men began to rush. The police, hanging on to the man they had- and fighting and dragging him, had proceeded but a short distance when bullets began to fly. Five shots were fired straight at the knot of struggling men, but the police succeeded in holding their prisoner.

This afternoon the striking freight-handlers, to the number of 300, marched to the City Hall and demanded the pelease of the man who had been imprisoned for carrying concealed weapons. The Mayor met them in the auditorium of the City Hall, and, after hearing the statement of their grievance, offered his services, together with a man to be appointed by themselves, to endeavor to arrange a meeting with the C. P. R. officials to discuss terms. The men were willing to accept his offer, but still demanded the release of the prisoner. The Mayor told them he could not interfere, but if the man was wrongfully arrested he should be released, otherwise he must be punished. He asked them, however, to leave it in his hands, and to this also they finally agreed.

Androcches, such was the man's name, was subsequently tried and fined $50 for carrying concealed weapons.

In a later interview with C. P. R. officials, Mayor Peltier prevailed upon them to meet the men's representatives. The men claim they have not been properly treated in the sheds, having been kicked and abusive and insulting language used to them. Besides an advance in wages, they asked for better treatment and the recognition of the branch of the longshoremen's union which they are organizing.

Most of the time was spent in showing up the methods of handling contracts practised by the Modern Paving Company. This company had a number of contracts from the city at high prices, which they sub-let to other contractors. They did a thriving business as middlemen. For certain kinds of stone they received $1.29. a yard, and paid their contractors $1.29.

For Danforth stone they received $2.54 from the city, while the companies who did the work only got $1.50. For artificial stone, the prices were $2.11 per yard to the Modern Paving Company, while $1.20 was all the others received for the work. It was also shown that Montreal paid $1.30 a yard more for certain asphalt than the price charged in Toronto. the roads department. Most of the tim

Mr. Belanger, of the Modern Paving Company, admitted that although his company represented three different paving companies in tendering for contracts, yet they only kept one set of books for the three. City Surveyor Barlow gave evidence to show that his recommendations were searcely ever taken notice of, but that the Roads Committee ran things to suit themselves. Recently the Roads Committee has teen in ill favor in the city owing to their efforts to force the highest tenders for paving upon the city.

Persels is specifically charged with the larceny of $40,000, a profit obtained by the sale of 15,500 shares of Ohio Copper common and 4,600 shares of Ohio Copper common and 4,600 shares of Davis-Daly Copper common, which an agent for Heinze placed with the Windsot Trust Company, of this city, as security for a loan of $50,000.

In some manner as yet unexplained, the stock was not held by the bank, but was turned over to a clerk acting for Persel and at the latter's orders thrown on the curb market and sold for approximately $90,000. How Persels obtained the capital to carry through the deal and why the stock was relinquished by the trust company are points yet to be cleared up.

After his arrest this afternoon Perselrintimated that there were men "higher up" in the transaction, but he refused to say more upon the advice of counsel.

Persels, according to the police, has been arrested twice before, once on a forgery charge made at the request of his father, and another time in connection with collecting subscriptions for an ice fund. Both elsarges were dropped.

in the hand of his brother, a young mechanic named. William John Davidson is lying in Grace Hospital at the point of death, while his brother, Charles, is now under arrest in a cell at No. 3 Police Station on a charge of wounding.

The tragedy occurred in the men's home, at 135 Niagara street, shortly before 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. According to the statements told the police by boarders in the house, the men had been at work during the morning and returned home to dinner. Over the meal a quarrel ener. morning and returned home to dinher. Over the meal a quarrel ensued, and the men came to blows. In a moment of passion Charles is said to have drawn a razor and plunged it in his brother's body, the blade entering just above the heart. Dr. Hawkins and the police were at once called in, the former to attend to the wounded man and the latter to take his assailant to the police station.

The father and mother of the two young men deny that there was a deliberate assault. They say that Charles was in poor health, and wanted to leave for England to-night, and wanted the razor from his brother. They say that the wound was caused accidentally in a struggle for its possession:

When the police entered the house they found it in great confusion, the dinner dishes and food having been upset in the men's struggle. The prisoner is only twenty years of age, and his brother is two years ofder. They, together with their father, were in the employ of the Massey-Harris Company.

When the policeman reached her side she pointed to the man at her feet and nod ded her head to indicate that he should be taken care of first. At the hospital it was found that she had been shot twice, and that the bullets had shattered her jawbone and possibly had penetrated the brain cavity. Kavanagh had shot himself through the eye socket. The chances for his recovery were very small, the surgeons said, but the wife might get well.

Between the pages of a magazine which Mrs. Kavanagh carried the policemen who investigated the case found two missives which threw light on the cause of the shooting. One was a telegram dated August 6 and signed with the name "P. Gilleran. 242 Broadway, Newburgh." It was addressed to Mrs. Kavanagh, Pine View Farm, Belmar, and read, "Come at once. Just after the boat-had pulled under the railway bridge and within 500 yards of the station wharf Smith and his captor were on the lower deck discussing the scenery.

The prisoner edged his way a little nearer to the gangway to get a better glimpse of the shore line, when suddenly he mounted the edge of the boat and leaped into the water. He reached shore in safety and the last the disconcerted officer and passengers saw of Joe he was gliding into the surrounding forest.

POETRY THE INCHCAPE ROCK. (Printed by Request.) stir in the air, no stir in the sea-The ship was still as she might be; Her sails from heaven received no mo tion; Her keel was steady in the ocean. Without either sign or sound of their shock, The waves flowed over the Incheape rock, So little they rose, so little they fell, They did not move the Inchape bell. The holy abbot of Aberbrothok rock; On the waves of the storm it floated and swung, And louder and louder its warning rung. When the rock was hid by the tempest's swell,

The mariners heard the warning bell;
And then they knew the perilous rock,
And blessed the priest of Aberbrothok.

The sun in heaven shone so gay— All things were joyful on that day;

He felt the cheering power of spring— It made him whistle, it made him sin His heart was mirthful to excess; But the rover's mirth was wickedness.

His eye was on the bell and float; Quoth he, "My men, pull out the boat; And row me to the Inchcape rock, And I'll plague the priest of Aberbro-thok."

The boat is lowered, the boatmen row, And to the Incheape rock they go; Sir Ralph bent over from the boat, And cut the warning bell from the float. Down sank the bell with a gurgling Down sank the bell with a gurging sound;
The bubbles rose and burst around.
Quoth Sir Ralph, "The next who comes to the rock Won't biess the priest of Aberbrothok."

Sir Raiph the rover sailed away— He scoured the seas for many a day, And now grown rich with plunder and store, He steers his course for Scotland's shore.

So thick a haze o'erspreads the sky They could not see the sun on high; The wind had blown a gale all day; At evening it hath died away.

On the deek it is they see no land.

Quoth Sir Ralph, "It will be lighter soon,

For there is the dawn of the rising

"Canst hear," said one, "the breakers roar?
For yonder, methinks, should be the Now where we are I cannot tell,

But I wish we could hear the Incheape bell."

They hear no sound; the swell is strong; Though the wind had fallen, they drift along; Till the vessel strikes with a shivering shock— Alas! it is the Inchcape rock!

Sir Ralph, the rover, tore his hair; He beat himself in wild despair. The waves rush in on every side; The ship is sinking beneath the tide.

But ever in his dying fear One dreadful sound he seemed to hear—
A sound as if the Incheape bell
The evil spirit was ringing his knell.

THE CAROLINE.

"History as She is Wrote" by Grace Carew Sheldon.

(Buffalo Times.) Capt. Wells put the "Caroline" at ferrying people back and forth from considered a good money-making venture. The captain started honest, but he gave in to the inducements offered him, so history says, by the belligerents, who were disgruntled men from both Canada and the States, and in 1837 it was rumored that the island held 7,000

All things were joyful on that day:
The seabirds screamed as they sported round,
And there was pleasure in their sound.
The float of the Inchcape bell was seen, A darker speck on the ocean green:
Sir Ralph, the rover, walked his deck, And he fixed his eye on the darker speck.

He felt the cheering power of spring—
He felt the search as the stand the stand that the island held 7,000 of the stand the was taking them supplies.

The United States, along the borders of Lake Erie was not idle, as it had fine companies of militain in training, commanded by General David Burt. The loyal British also built a gunboat, the loyal British also built a gunboat,

At this time the commander of Canada's militia forces was Col. Alan Mac. Approaching the peaceful "Caroline," they answered "Friends" to the watchman who called out, "Who goes there?" Springing like wild cats upon the "Caroline's" deeks, they murdered the sleeping men, only two of whom escaped, being great heroes, but who were fearfully wounded. They were were Capt. Gilman Appelby and Capt. Charles Harding, who carried a cutless wound on his temple to the grave. But for these two alert men, not a soul would have survived to describe the dastardly fatality, of which the war cry of the perpetrators was, "No quarter. Kill the deed.—d Yankees."

Americans are the cream of the credulous, declares a writer in Pearson's Magazine. We sometimes harbor the idea

One of the farm papers reports a few recent sales. One place of less than 200 acres in Chenango County has just been sold for $10,000, one of $2 acres in Monroe County for the same round sum, and one of 240 acres, same county, for $70 an acre. Another paper reports three recent sales in Illinois—one at $125 an acre, one at $200 and one at $250. The $200 an acre place hadn't a building on it, the price was for land alone.

The fact that Gans is dying with consumption brings to mind the other fact that many of the great athletes and puglists and sporting men die with the same malady. Why do these men who pride themselves upon their physique during their laurel days, die of such a body-wrecking disease?

Take, for instance, the passing away of Frank G. Selec, the greatest baseball manager that ever lived. He also played the game when in his prime. He fell a victim and all is gone but his record and memory. Hermann Long, another of the bright stars in baseball, is on the verge of the hrink that separates the living and dead. Long is in Denver right now and his friends are momentarily awaiting the news of his death.

There are numerous other athletes and sporting men who might be mentioned who have died and are about to pass away with this dread disease.

Right off the reel the locals put a damper on the game by scoring three runs in the opening inning, as a result of two passes, a single and a double. Pitcher Pfeffer, who had been twirling gift-edged ball up to to-day, was derricked in the second innings, but Lee, who succeeded him, was just as easy a target. The Tigers continued to gather runs in clusters, and the finishing fouches were applied to the affair when Jack Kelly pumped the pellet over the left field fence for a home run with two men on the pillows in the seventh round. Toronto scraped up two runs in the second on Mahling's single, Weidensaul's two-bagger and a safety by Pfeffer. As a result of that assault Pitcher Frill was yanked out of the box, and Mueller, who was chased to the research, held the Leafs well in check thereafter. Kelley's men scored their final tally in the fourth when Weidensaul' uncorked another double and Frick did the rest with a safe drive to centre. Score:

Sergeant. Walsh laid a charge against P. C. Cheesman for neglecting his duties in visiting vacant houses. One house in particular, 518 Wilson street, it was alleged, he had neglected. The sergeant said he had watched the house for two nights, between 1.30 and 3 o'clock, and had not seen Cheeseman call. In the morning he found by the constable's book that he reported having been at the house at 2 o'clock. This happened two nights in succession, and on another occasion he had tried to find Cheeseman on his beat, but could not. This assured him that the officer was shirking.

The constable said he had visited the house on the nights in question, but had made a mistake in entering the time in his book. He said he saw the sergeant several times the night he was looking for him.

The Commissioners decided that Cheeseman had been neglecting his duty but left the matters in the servers.

Some weeks ago the representatives of the Hydro Commission began upon him. The power line survey is through his fine farm, and the agents offered him $300 for the right to erect and maintain towers and go upon his lands whenever found desirable, regardless of bis crops or convenience. He laughed at the offer, and then the agents began their newal methods. After $650 had been offered the "arbitration" bluff was tried. Mr. Lovett refused to be bluffed, and firmly ordered them off his lands, on which they, without having come to any understanding with him, had gone and begun operations. He told them pretty plainly that something unpleasant would happen if they did not get off. They got. That was early last week. On Monday they returned and began operations again, Mr. Lovett a little more emphatically warned them off again. They got off. Yesterday two things happened. Mr. Hydro Agent hied him to Toronto to consult with his superiors, and Mr. Lovett came to Hamilton, and again talked the matter over with his solicitor.

The words "telephone directory" may be burnt or painted on this, and if the cover is made like a book or magazine holder each new directory may be encased in it.

Never attempt to shine the instrument further than rubbing it with a soft cloth or flannel.
