The death of Hon. Honore Mercier, ex-premier of Quebec, removes a former prominent figure in the public life of Canada, and recalls the events in his remarkable career. For nearly a quarter of a century he was either a member of the Quebec Legislature or of the House of Commons, and for a brief term he held the position of Premier of his native province. His career, while brilliant in some respects, eventually resulted in disaster to himself and his party, and his death was no doubt hastened by his political downfall. Mercier possessed many estimable qualities, but he lacked the backbone necessary to resist the hoodluming propensities of his followers. Vanity was his greatest fault, and the love of display led him into difficulties from which he found it impossible to extricate himself. A temporary success caused him to lose his head completely; flattered and fawned upon, exalted into a most important personage, he forgot his responsibilities and trusts, and permitted the Quebec treasury to be plundered by a reckless horde of followers who were his friends for the money they could extract. We believe that Mercier was more sinned against than sinning, and that the future historian of Quebec will give him credit for patriotism and a desire to serve his country, while regretting the paths into which he was led by more designing men. He was a sharp, shrewd man, an eloquent speaker, and an untiring worker. He won political victories against great odds, but apparently cared little as to the means employed. He had a craving for authority and position, and made the interests of the country subservient to personal and party ambitions, in this way following the example of an eminent leader in the Conservative party. He fought fire with fire; he met corruption with corruption, and in the game went under. He lost political position, his property and his health in the public arena, and while many may cast reproaches on his record, the great masses of his own people regard him as a martyr who in fighting the battles of his party and his race, sacrificed everything including life itself. In the height of his success Mercier was certainly a picturesque figure, and commanded the admiration of friends and enemies alike for his dash and skill as a political leader. Now that he is no more, his countrymen will remember only his good qualities, and he had many, while forgetting and forgiving his weaknesses.

MR. LAURIER'S RETURN.
The opposition leader reached Montreal Monday from his long and successful trip through Manitoba, the North West and British Columbia, and to his friends expressed himself as more than satisfied with the success of his tour.
Mr. Laurier in speaking of his work said: "During my absence of two months and a half, we covered over ten thousand miles. Needless to say that is the longest journey of my life. I delivered eighty speeches and perhaps more at sixty meetings held largely in the open air from the platform of our cars and from the hustings and in the public places in answer to addresses presented. In some places we had two or three addresses to acknowledge. I am delighted beyond measure with all that I saw and heard. The country we visited is peopled for fertility, and its progress would be very great but for the tariff, which stands in the way. All party lines are now broken in the West, and free trade pervades the atmosphere. The air is full of it, and people are determined that it must prevail. I am convinced that as soon as the change in the tariff occurs there will be a tide of immigration into the North-West as large as that which flowed into the United States in the best years. With wheat at 38 cents and other products relatively as low it is needless to say that the people are far from propros in the North-West. The immigration movement as a matter of fact is practically stopped."
Then Mr. Laurier spoke of his reception: "It was most cordial," he remarked, "and not a single disagreeable incident occurred. The people of all nationalities and political parties joined hands to make us feel at home. This occurred at every spot we visited."

MR. BIRMINGHAM'S MISSION.
Robert Birmingham, secretary of the Orange grand lodge in B. N. A., and Conservative organizer for Ontario, is traveling through the lower provinces with the Minister of Militia, no doubt carefully noting the political prospects in every constituency. At Halifax this week Mr. Birmingham was in close consultation with Mr. Kenny, M. P., and other conservative leaders, and no doubt when the Minister and his friend arrive in Fredericton Monday, they will take sweet counsel with the party leaders here. Of course it is denied that the Orange society is a political body, but it is evident that Mr. Birmingham's visit to the lower provinces is to see what can be done to turn the Orange influence for the government in the approaching Dominion elections. Another sign of the times in the same direction is the prominence certain Conservative M. P.s. are taking in Orange circles. Surely the Orangemen will not be flattered by the attentions they are receiving just now.

There is great joy in Conservative circles over the announcement that Finance Minister Foster has successfully floated a twelve million dollar loan in London. The amount is intended not to retire maturing bonds, but to pay off a floating indebtedness and for public works, thereby adding to amount to the already enormous public debt of Canada. A general election is in sight, and no doubt the proceeds of the loan will figure very largely in the corruption of the constituencies. The Ministers are journeying in all directions promising everything, and preparing to buy the people with the latter's own money.
Lord Rosebery, in a speech at Bradford the other night, made a lively attack on the House of Lords, which he says is a mockery and an invitation to revolution.
Germany has had its sensation. Chancellor von Caprivi, after five years of service, has retired and is succeeded by Prince Hohenlohe.
No opposition has yet developed to Hector Nadeau, the government candidate in Madawaska.

All eyes are turned to Russia now in mourning for the death of the Czar. It is feared that serious complications will arise in Europe as a result. Alexander was a peace loving monarch, and his personal popularity did much to keep the restless spirit of his own country in order. His father died at the hands of the Nihilists, and it is said the late Czar was constantly in dread of his own life. Nicolas II, the successor to the throne is represented as weak kneed, and liable to yield to his councillors who love war.

The executive of the Maritime Liberal Association held a meeting at St. John last night to consult regarding the approaching general election. There was a splendid representation from the three provinces, and the meeting was most harmonious. Arrangements were made for a succession of political meetings between now and the new year.

DEATH OF THE CZAR.

The Ruler of Russia Succumbs after a Long Illness.

Alexander III, emperor of all the Russians, died at Livadia at 2.15 p. m. Thursday, after a serious illness of several months.
The czar died peacefully, surrounded by the members of his family. He was fully conscious up to the time of his death. On Tuesday last the doctors informed the czar that there was no longer room for hope of recovery. His majesty composedly waited for the end, attending to necessary state and family affairs in the short intervals of consciousness and freedom from pain.
Wednesday the czar was still able to be taken to the window of his palace, where he gazed out on the country he loved so well as to earn for himself the appellation of the "peasant czar." The night passed on with an aggravation to all the symptoms and a continuously distressing cough. The doctors and the czar remained in attendance upon him throughout the night, only snatching brief intervals for sleep in the ante-rooms.
Thursday morning brought rain and wind and heavy clouds and weather much colder. As the day advanced the weakness increased so rapidly that the czar himself, still conscious, recognized that he could live only a few hours. He expressed a desire to receive the sacrament, which was administered to him by Court Chaplain Yanishiff and Father Ivan, in the presence of the whole family. The czar then conversed long and earnestly with Father Ivan, concluding by asking his family to again gather round him. He spoke to each member separately, and at the greatest length with the czarina. He blessed all the children present. The scene was one of deep pathos, all being in tears. All this time the czar's majesty was sitting up in an armchair. After taking leave of his family he grew gradually weaker, and his voice became so indistinct that it was scarcely audible.
About noon a convulsive fit of coughing was followed by a slight rally. From that time until the end the czar remained quiet, seemingly free from pain. At 2.15 o'clock he heaved a deep sigh and breathed his last in the arms of the empress, who then broke down with the weight of her grief, and the doctors fear the results reaction upon her already exhausted system.
Alexanderovitch, emperor of all the Russias, was the second son of Alexander II, and the Princess Maria of Hesse-Darmstadt. He was born February 26th, 1845, received the regular university education and was trained in military affairs. At the death of his elder brother, Nicholas, at Nice, in 1865, Alexander became tsar-arevitch, and November 9th, 1868, he married his brother's fiancée, Maria Sophia Frederica Dagmar, daughter of King Christian of Denmark, and a younger sister of the Princess of Wales. During the Russo-Turkish war, the tsar-arevitch was in subordinate command, and operated against the Turkish positions at Rastchuk, Bagrad and Shumla.
Alexander II was assassinated on the 13th of March, 1881, and on the following day, his eldest son was proclaimed emperor of all the Russias. He was then thirty-six years of age.
At St. Petersburg, yesterday, imperial heralds clad in brilliant uniforms accompanied by trumpeters, announced the death of Alexander III, and the accession to the throne of Nicholas II.

At 1 o'clock Monday morning burglars entered the Grand Trunk station at Miramichi, Ontario, by smashing in the door. They drilled a hole in the safe and blew it into pieces with dynamite. For their trouble they secured only 16 cents. The dynamite charges were about five times stronger than was needed. As a result the station was badly shattered. The stove and furniture of the office were smashed to atoms and all the windows of building broken. The report aroused many of the villagers from their beds.
At Kingston, Ontario, Tuesday evening, the room at the lower G. T. R. depot which contained ten or twelve bags full of postal matter, was robbed, and about $2,000 filched from the registered letters. Wednesday morning the bags were found out, and the postal matter scattered about the cellar of the building, which contained the bags. The thieves investigated the bags in the cellar, and escaped without detection. Nine men have been arrested on suspicion, and it is said the crime will be brought home to one of them.

MERCIER IS DEAD.

A Familiar Figure in Canadian Political Life Passes Away.

Sketch of His Career.
Hon. Honore Mercier, ex-Premier of Quebec, died at his home in Montreal, Tuesday morning, after an illness extending over several months. His last words were: "I am prepared to die, but it is a sad thing to leave my dear wife and my poor children. Tell my friends that my last thoughts were for them; tell my opponents that I have forgotten all; tell all that I worked for my country."
Mr. Mercier was the son of a farmer and was born on the 15th of October, 1840. It was at the St. Mary's College, conducted by the Jesuits, that he made his course of studies and at its completion adopted the legal profession. He settled at St. Hyacinthe and remained there until 1881, when he moved into Montreal. On his arrival in St. Hyacinthe he became the editor of Le Courrier de Hyacinthe, a strong Conservative sheet. In 1864 when Confederation was first discussed, he condemned the project and left the Courier. In 1866 Confederation being an accepted fact, he returned to the editorial chair but left it soon after, being opposed to the views of the owners of the paper on the New Brunswick school question. From that moment he was ranked with the Liberal party, and in 1872 he was elected to the Commons for Rouville county. He delivered his first notable speech in the house on the school question. In the second session the Macdonald Government fell and Mr. Mercier was asked to seek reelection, but as Mr. Cheval was also out on the Liberal side, he retired rather than split the vote. He continued, nevertheless, campaigning and soon became the strongest hustling speaker among the French Liberals. In 1878 he was chosen as Liberal candidate for the Commons, but was defeated by six votes by the present Judge Teller. In the autumn of 1879 Hon. Pierre Bouchard, M. P. P. for St. Hyacinthe, and treasurer in the July administration, died. Mr. Mercier was called to the ministry and appointed Solicitor General. He carried the country by 304 majority and saved the administration which needed his vote to remain in office. During his first session he took a leading position and became virtually the leader. The Government fell shortly after and in 1883 Mr. July retired from the leadership, and Mr. Mercier was selected to succeed. He was one of the strongest leaders of Opposition seen at Quebec and he waged war unceasingly against the Conservative administration until the session of 1886, when he brought up the Northwest troubles in the house and started the agitation which enabled him to reach power in January, 1887, with a majority of six. By a combination with the Castors or Ultramontane party he swept the province on the 15th of July in spite of the fact that Mr. July and the English Liberals refused to follow him. Before reaching power he had been charged with seeking a coalition with the party in power, but the project fell through. He remained in office until December, 1891, when he was dismissed by Lieutenant Governor Angers as a result of an investigation held by a Royal Commission on what became known as the Baie des Chaleurs Scandal. On March 8, 1892, at the general election, though he himself was returned for Bonaventure, which he represented since the general elections of June, 1890, his party was annihilated, and since that moment he ceased to be a factor in provincial politics. He had undergone trial before the Court of Queen's Bench on the charge of misappropriation of funds, but he was acquitted. At the general elections of June, 1890,
