THE AULD SCOTCH SANG.

Oh! sing me the auld Scotch sang, I'll braid Scotland's tongue, The sang my father loved to hear, The sang my mother sang, When she sat beside my cradle, Or crossed me on her knee, An' sang the sang as sweet The auld Scotch sang to me.

Yes, sing the auld, the gude auld sang, Auld Scotia's humble pride, O' the wimpling burn, and sunny brae, An' the cozy ingle side; Sing of the bonny and bonny, Sing of the tryin' tree, The la'lock's lit, an' the gowan's blink, The auld Scotch sang to me.

Yes, sing on, the auld Scotch sang, The blythe hum and the ad; They mak me smile when I am wae, And greet when I am glad, My heart goes back to auld Scotland, Sing of the bonny and bonny, But the Scotch bairn lads in an' yeins, As ye sing these sangs to me.

Sing on, sing mair o' these auld sangs, For every ane can tell O' joy or sorrow, O' the past, Where men'sy loves to dwell, Though hair's win grey, an' limbs win sild, Until the day I die, I'll braid the Scotch tongue that sings The auld Scotch sang to me.

THE WIFE'S FORETHOUGHT A SKETCH FOR YOUNG MARRIED PEOPLE.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

ANON KIMBALL had been married about a month. His business was at his banking and he had a shop of his own, and his whole stock was paid for, so he felt quite independent, the future looking all clear and bright.

"I must be up early to-morrow morning, Linnie, for my party starts shortly after sunrise, and Anson, as he laid down his paper and leaned back in his chair.

"Then you are going, are you?" remarked Linnie. There was just regret enough in her tone to render her voice less level than usual, but it must have been a very keen observer that could have noticed it.

"Yes, you know, Linnie, and I assure you I shall enjoy myself on this trip exceedingly. You will be happy to say that."

"Certainly," returned the young wife; but the word seemed spoken reluctantly. "Come come, Linnie, don't speak as you feel. Now you don't want me to go," said Anson, with a tinge of disappointment in his tone.

"If you think it would be for your good to go, of course I should want you to go."

"And how can it be otherwise?" "You won't be offended, Anson, if I tell you."

"Toh, what an idea. I be offended at you! Come, tell me your thoughts."

"As the young man spoke he moved his chair to the side of his wife, and put his arm about her neck.

"Well," returned Linnie, in an earnest, yet pleasant tone, "I was thinking of the expense."

"Ha, ha, ha! The expense. Why, it won't be over five dollars at the farthest. You five dollars is considerable."

"But you are young yet, and all we have is the house we live in, and your small shop."

"And is that all? How many of my young friends are there who are not even so well off as that?"

"I know you are fortunate, Anson, but none are beyond the reach of my ambition. For a few years we had better live as economically as possible until we can accumulate a little."

"So intend to, but what is five dollars compared with the amount I shall be able to lay up in a year?"

"Why, it will make that amount some eight or ten dollars about."

ATTORNEY AT LAW.

Office in the Post Office Building, Goderich, July 7th, 1853. v6n19

STRAYED.

FROM the Subscriber about the last of May, a three year old Roan coloured Colt, with black main, tail and legs, stands about fourteen hands high. A suitable reward will be given for such information as will lead to the recovery of the above mentioned Colt. CHRIST SHANNON, Goderich, June 4th, 1853. v6n19

Five dollars.

"O, you can have that, of course, and more too, if you want it."

"That will be enough."

Anson Kimball took out his wallet and handed his wife a five dollar bill, and the conversation then turned upon other and various matters.

Anson Kimball was like thousands of others who are situated in like circumstances. With a free and open heart he marked out his future for a field of enjoyment, without taking care to make such preparations for the sum he might be likely to meet on the way.

And then again like all others, he mistook the character of his real enjoyment. He lost sight of the loss of his health and more noble sources of happiness, and just too much in the satisfaction of his physical appetite.

True, he enjoyed himself and kept clear of all extremes, but yet he failed to see that his enjoyments were all ephemeral—that he was laying up little or nothing for time to come.

A year passed away, and the annual fishing excursion came in course along.

"Well Linnie," said the young man, "to-morrow the boys go down the harbor, and I am going with them. Of course you have no objections."

"No," returned the wife, in her usual pleasant tone. "If you can afford it."

"Oh, there's no trouble about that."

"Don't you remember the conversation we had a year ago on this same subject?" asked Linnie.

"Yes,—I remember then you talked about saving money, but we went any poorer now than we should have been if I had staid at home."

"But tell me, Anson, how you laid up as much during the past year as I have expected to?"

"Why, as for that matter, I haven't laid up much of anything. The fact is, Linnie, you have done rather harder on me than I expected."

"But I haven't spent any more money for trivial affairs and amusements than you have, Anson, and I don't think I have so much."

"I didn't mean to blame you, my dear, I only mentioned the circumstances to explain why I had not laid up anything. But never mind, there's time enough yet, and besides we've enjoyed ourselves. I think at last we've begun to do better."

"I shall begin to think my expense a little, for I must lay up a little something the next year."

"We certainly have every chance to save money," returned Linnie, "for both the house and shop are ours without rent, and we are free from debt."

Anson Kimball started at that last remark, and turned his face towards the window, but his wife did not appear to notice his emotion.

"You know, Anson," continued Mrs. Kimball, "that you promised me I should have five dollars when you went on your excursion, and I shall certainly hold you to that promise."

"Of course—that's fair," returned the young man, "but do you need it now?"

REMARKABLE TIGER HUNT.

The following is an extract of a letter from Java, of the 19th of December 1832.

The letter was written by a "true son of the ocean," and is addressed to his brother "At seven A. M., on the 2nd of October last, I set out with my two sons, a Berzoeke man in my service, and about fifty natives, armed with pikes and bog spears; I was armed with a gun and a spear. The tiger for which we were on the look-out was in a valley about two miles and a-half distant from our port. The moment we arrived near him we commenced operations. About nine A. M. we effectually drove him out of his den underwood, and while he was doubling the brow of a hill, I had a rap at him, which took effect about six inches from his forehead, and he fell on his back. I am confident it would have disabled his tiger-spirit, and he would have been forced to retire, and we should have had some sport with him while in that situation. He now made over to the west side of the valley, and into a thorny bush. In half an hour he started him again; he then ran along the western side of the valley into another bush; several spears were now thrown at him, but without effect. We followed, and soon rounded him again; he now made a start for his old station on the valley; he seemed to be very much fagged on account of the heat and a want of water, and it became difficult to arouse him; several spears flew at him, but they fell short. All this time, although pretty close, I could not get a shot at him, sometimes on account of my people, and not wishing to throw a shot away, not knowing how soon I might require it in self-defence. Closer to his heels we followed him across the valley. He now saw that he was in danger, he made a start from that bush to another just at my feet, and lay for at least ten minutes, not ten yards from where I was with one of my sons, who was making an opening into the thorny bush. In half an hour he made a spring with an intention to clear the heads of three men who were to my right at about a fathom distance; but they received and put three pikes and a bog-spear into him; the former cut a deep gash in his belly, the latter entered his shoulder; this he took with him, but the pike staked him broke. This shock to his delicate frame brought him down on one of the men, who fell into his arms, and he was carried off; but he got into a bush before I could turn round to have a rap at him. This was his last move. It was now just twelve at noon. We gathered up our broken pieces, and bound up the wounds of our man, and sent him off to the mill, to wait our arrival; but determined not to give up our prize, we remained quiet for about an hour, rested ourselves. During this time he grew cold, but faintly; he was at that time drawing the bog spear out of his shoulder. This gave him much pain, and made him groan. We now saw the bush shake very much, so again we began operations, by cutting down the small bushes to get a sight of him, this was soon done, and I put a hot shot in his head. Our work was now done, so we went up to him, but he thought he was closing his hand; more from the pikes than from the shot. I had him carried home. His weight was 333 lbs., stood three feet three inches high; length of his six feet, tail two feet four inches. I dressed the wounded hunter. He was fourteen days under my hands. He had ten wounds on his body, left arm, and head. This you will say, is no children's play."

PROOFS THAT AMERICA WAS DISCOVERED BY THE SCANDINAVIANS.

The New London Advertiser says that Dr. N. S. Perkins, of that city, has discovered a spoon, about the size of a rather small table spoon, that was lately dug up near the head of the Cove near Trunag's brook, from a depth of fifteen feet; the original being buried, he says, in that depth by successive washings from the surrounding hills. With the spoon were thrown up some pieces of charcoal and a quantity of clam shells, the latter crumbled away on exposure to air. It is supposed that they were left there by a crew of a ship of some of the "Northmen," who visited and described the shores of Long Island Sound, eight hundred years ago. By them the country was called "Vinland," and there are maps and descriptions of it in the Royal Library at Copenhagen, at this time. The spoon has been sent to the Connecticut Antiquarian Society, and they have pronounced it of Danish manufacture, a composition of bell metal and gold. A heart and an Arrow-head that are very perfect, and which are also three other smaller figures that are scarcely distinguishable. The doctor intends to take it shortly to the Antiquarian Society of Massachusetts.

THE VIRTUES OF VANITY.

In the whole multitude of different and in different characters who compose the "great public," there is not one that occupies so much space, or affords so much amusement, as the vain man. The reader must be careful not to confound this favorite with the proud man, for we agree with Addison that no two things differ from each other more than pride and vanity. The proud man is an unmitigated calamity—a plague to himself and a bane to his neighbor. He is so completely wrapped up in himself, that he leaves no respect for other people; he is in a short, an intolerable bore, and the man who would desire to renew him in an essay, deserves to be upon the treadmill. But our favorite here is not a proud man. He is the veritable article of amusement that leaves no article of amusement to a neighbor or a neighbor might stick in an atom of admiration or even of common respect. In proper phrases, "the virtuous man is now speaking of quietude, in Ohio, on their way Eastward."

JUDSON'S

CHEMICAL EXTRACT OF CHERRY AND LUNGWORT, for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Spitting of Blood, Night Sweats, Asthma, Liver Complaints, and CONSUMPTION.

DEATH can be and has been prevented in thousands of cases by this nature's own remedy, Judson's Chemical Extract of Cherry and Lungwort.

THE GREAT POPULARITY which Messrs. Life Pills and Pile Pills have obtained, is a consequence of the extraordinary cures effected by them, and is necessary for the proprietor to cause him to publish an analysis of their medicinal virtues, in order that the public may be enabled to judge for themselves.
